The day following I tried to preach at New Hope from the text: "He preached unto him, Jesus." Acts viii, 35. I represented Jesus as our Prophet, Priest and King. It was my first sermon as an itinerant. I have never tried to preach from that text since.

My circuit included thirteen preaching places. The first was New Hope and the last was Good Hope. New Hope was in Perry County. My next appointment was Pine Forest, in Marion County. Here, a local Methodist preacher by the name of Hartfield lived and held his membership. From Pine Forest I went to Hickory Grove, near where Baxterville now stands.

Here I met the "Widow Harvy," whose husband was killed by the "Copeland Clan" of robbers. Copeland, the leader of the clan, was hung for killing Harvy, in Augusta, in Berry County, the year I served Black Creek Mission. Mrs. Harvy afterwards married a Mr. Bird, who joined the Church during my pastorate there.

Hickory Grove was one of my best appointments. Good people lived there—Baxters, Birds, Rouses, Stanfords, and others. It was here that I met for the first time my presiding elder, Barnabas Pipkin. On Saturday of my first Quarterly Conference, he preached on the subject of Temptation, using as his text James i, the first verses. I remember well one point he made. It may help others, as it helped me; so I give it here: "As long as we stay on our own premises, we are in but little danger of being overcome by temptation. But when we leave our own premises and go on the devil's ground and tempt the devil to tempt us, we may expect to be overcome by temptation." Go not in the way of temptation, nor go in the way of evil men.

Presiding elders were very helpful to young preachers in those days. I was young, and, I think, teachable. I availed myself of every opportunity possible of hearing my presiding elder preach. Knowing the route Brother Pipkin had to go to reach his next appointment, I arranged to have him at five of my preaching places, and then I followed him to his next appointment.

I met each of my thirteen appointments in due time. Found good people everywhere I went—fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, etc.—and have found them all along the way these fifty-two years.

During the year I heard Brother Joseph Nicholson, who served Handsboro circuit adjoining mine, sing a song that I like and have often used when preaching on the Resurrection. I will close this chapter by giving it as I remember it. Let the young preachers take notice and profit by it:

"Behold, behold the Lamb of God
On the cross, on the cross.
For you He shed His precious blood,
On the cross, on the cross.
O, hear the all important cry:
'Eloi, lama, sabachthani?'
Draw near and see your Savior die,
On the cross, on the cross."

"Behold his arms extended wide,
On the cross, on the cross.
Behold his bleeding hands and side;

On the cross, on the cross;
The sun with all his rays of light,
With heaven are clothed in shades of night,
While Jesus doth with devils fight,
On the cross, on the cross."

Come sinner, see him lifted up,
On the cross, on the cross;
For you He drinks the bitter cup,
On the cross, on the cross.
The rocks do rend, the mountains shake,
While Jesus doth atonement make,
While Jesus suffers for your sake,
On the cross, on the cross."

"And now the mighty deed is done—
On the cross, on the cross.
The battle's fought, the victory won,
On the cross, on the cross.
To heaven he turns his languid eyes—
'Tis finished, now the conqueror cries,
Then bows his sacred head and dies,
On the cross, on the cross."

"Where'er I go, I'll tell the story
Of the cross, of the cross;
In nothing else my soul shall glory,
Save the cross, save the cross.
Yes, this my constant theme shall be
Through time and through eternity,
That Jesus tasted death for me,
On the cross, on the cross."

"Now, let each mourner come and cling
To the cross, to the cross;
And let each Christian come and sing
Round the cross, round the cross.
Then let the preacher take his stand,
And with the Bible in his hand,
Proclaim the triumph through the land,
Of the cross, of the cross."

Note—Brother Joseph Nicholson was the only member of our Conference I met all the year, except my presiding elder. Brother Nicholson was quite helpful to me in many ways. He was one of our best men. He died in peace on the 30th of December, 1886.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Board of Church Extension of the Mississippi Conference feels very keenly the loss by death of its chairman, Rev. W. B. Lewis. During this quadrennium he had met with the Board in all of its meetings save the one on the 8th of this month. He went to the city of New Orleans for treatment that day, from which place he passed to his reward.

After consulting with the treasurer of the Board we decided that it would not be necessary to call the Board together to elect a new chairman until the meeting of the next Annual Conference.

I would especially call the attention of the pastors to the Galloway Memorial Loan Fund Day, the second Sunday in April. That plea for an increase of our loan fund was the last call that went out from the pen of our much-loved chairman. Let us honor his memory by putting forth a special effort on that day.

Let all communications relative to the work of the Board for this Conference be addressed to me, at Long Beach, Miss. Yours fraternally,

L. E. ALFORD.

God keeps the stars burning all night when there is no one to look at them.—Selected.

Phone Main.

ROOMS and BOARD

634 and 638 SOUTH STREET

(Lafayette Square)

Corner St. Charles St. NEW ORLEANS, LA.
Unlimited Meals. Alvin Porter, Mgr.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that
Lasts a LIFETIME

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

Secular News and Comment

The celebrated painting (by his own hand) of Franz Hals, the famous Dutch painter, and his family, recently sold in New York city for $500,000. The purchaser was Otto Hahn, the well-known banker. Mr. Pierpont Morgan bid between $350,000 and $400,000 for the picture.

The National Convention of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine will be held in New Orleans, April 10-14. The Secretary of the Navy at Washington has ordered the battleship Wisconsin to New Orleans for the occasion, where doubtless she will attract much attention. An up-to-date, modern war vessel, the construction of which has cost millions, is a sight well worth seeing.

The friends and admirers of the late Mr. Richard Watson Gilder will raise a fund of $100,000, which will bear his name and be used for the promotion of good citizenship. It is expected to support several fellowships for the pursuit of knowledge of the social and political sciences and of practical civic work. The management and administration of the fund will be entrusted to Columbia University.

All the late dispatches indicate that the Nicaraguan revolutionists are about at their row's end. Estrada's army seems to have been whipped and pretty well demoralized. What remains of it is said to be hiding in the fastnesses of the mountains. It is to be hoped that desolating war will soon become a thing of the past in the little republic, and that the people will have an opportunity to pursue their peaceful avocations unmolested.

Mount Aetna, Sicily, is again in violent eruption. Its summit is said to be wreathed in black smoke, shot through with occasional flashes of fire, and ashes and cinders are falling for miles around. Deep roaring and detonations like the sound of artillery are heard now and then, while the earth frequently trembles under foot. And on the 24th inst., it was reported that streams of burning lava, moving at the rate of three to four feet a minute, had flowed down the mountain side a distance of eight miles, causing much destruction.

The Merwin-Clayton Sales Company of New York will, on April 5 and 6, offer for sale many rare books and papers from the private library of Henry Clay, the famous Kentucky Senator. We dare say this auction will attract widespread attention. In many respects Mr. Clay ranks as America's foremost statesman. Though not as profound as either Mr. Webster or Mr. Calhoun, he accomplished more and influenced legislation to a far greater extent than either of them. It was his persuasive eloquence that stayed off for decades the gathering storm of civil war.

The Lower House of Congress has passed a bill appropriating a large sum of money to raise the battleship Maine, which was blown up and sunk in the Havana harbor, Feb. 15, 1898. It is claimed that the wreck is a menace to navigation, though that is not the only reason Americans have for desiring that the historic man-of-war shall be floated again. To see it sailing the high seas would be a tremendous appeal to public patriotism, and, moreover, there would be not a little satisfaction in having the heroes who went down in that fateful catastrophe to sleep on our own shores and beneath the flag which they were accustomed to follow.

After a desperate struggle, the Democrats and insurgent Republicans succeeded a few days since in displacing Speaker Cannon from membership of the committee on rules, which for a long time he has absolutely dominated. This is generally spoken of as a great triumph for good government. John Sharp Williams, in commenting upon the achievement, expressed his gratification, but said, not until the House is presided over by an impartial, rather than a partisan officer, will it be in the best and highest sense a representative body. This impresses us as a wise and well-founded observation.

For several days, United States Senator John W. Daniel, of Va., has been lying desperately ill at Daytona, Fla., with one side badly paralyzed. Much of the time the distinguished patient has been in a condition of coma, and the attending physicians have been afraid to hold out any hope. He is in the 68th year of his age. He was a gallant Confederate soldier, and is a speaker of golden eloquence. A stainless gentleman, an incorruptible patriot, and a loyal son of the Old South, his position in public life is unique, and, should he pass to the sphere invisible, he will be sadly missed and sincerely mourned.

A judge in California has hit upon a new way of determining the value of legal services, a thing which troubles most of our courts not a little. An attorney had won a case against a railroad, and he and his client had disagreed as to the fee. It was, therefore, brought before Judge James Coffey, of San Francisco, for a judicial determination. After hearing the arguments, his honor picked up the legal documents prepared by the counselor, and said: "Baliff, take the papers of this wise man of the law outside and have them weighed. We shall allow him an even hundred dollars a pound for his legal learning." The baliff reported that the papers weighed two and a-half pounds. "So be it," said the judge. "The learned counselor is entitled to $250." Call the next case. The decision, it is reported, will be appealed.

The political situation in Great Britain is extremely chaotic. Premier Asquith as yet, has been able to put through no legislation of consequence. Not even a budget bill has yet been vigorously pushed, hard pressed as the government is for funds. It has been withheld probably because of the fear of defeat, which would necessitate the disbanding of the cabinet. Lord Rosebery has introduced in the House of Lords a measure looking to the reform or reconstruction of that great body. He would make its membership elective after a fashion, but not in the usual popular sense. He thinks the abolition of the chamber and an attempt to govern with only one legislative assembly would be calamitous. And so far as the latter part of his contention is concerned, doubtless he is right. The wisdom of centuries is on the side of a double legislature, with each house holding a check on the other. But both bodies ought to be elected by the people. Hereditary rule is out of place in the twentieth century.

A MESSAGE FROM A SUPERANNUATE

Mr. Editor: Thinking that many of my numerous friends in Louisiana would like to know something of the evening of my life, I will say that I am building a home here in Rayville, La., upon a six-acre lot, which my good wife and I saved from what the Annual Conference has given us as superannuates. All of our allowances during our itinerant ministry were spent in educating our children and building churches within the State. I have borrowed $750, and it will cost me about $800 more to complete, paint and furnish our home. One good man from Shreveport, Brother F. T. Whithead, has given me $25, which has greatly encouraged me to begin this long-desired and hoped-for object—the attainment of a home in which to leave my loved ones. God has always been good to me and given me much more than I have deserved. And I feel sure he will give me this home, from which I expect to go to the one "not made with hands." I ask my friends to remember me in their prayers.

Yours truly,

SAMUEL H. WHATLEY

Rayville, La.

TO OUR MERCHANT SUBSCRIBERS.

Dear Sirs—We want to enlist your interest and co-operation in a commercial movement of mutual advantage. You appreciate the relation which exists between advertising and the sale of merchandise. You know that a well advertised line sells readily,

ROAST COFFEE IN A FRYING PAN

If you want to disinfect or deodorize your premises, but if it's coffee for your table that you want,—perfectly blended, exquisitely flavored, and scientifically roasted so that every grain is even and perfect, then do as your neighbor is doing, avoid worry, waste and labor and buy

LUZIANNE COFFEE

When you roast at home you have only a limited choice of green coffee kept by your dealers. We have millions of pounds to select from for you. Where your kitchen facilities permit you only to toast, parch or scorch the grains, our gigantic, scientific, modern battery of roasters, going all the time, roast evenly and uniformly so that the full strength of every particle is thoroughly developed. Then it goes, hot and crisp, into air-tight cans and reaches you fresh and satisfying wherever you may be,—the best article of the kind that money can buy.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

THE REILY-TAYLOR CO.
New Orleans, U. S. A.

that your money, invested in such goods is turned over rapidly, and that there is no waste in dead stock on advertised goods. You also know that the Religious Magazines such as the New Orleans Christian Advocate reach the homes of the very best people in every community. Since the very birth of advertising in America the religious papers have been recognized as the standard advertising media for high grade articles.

The matter in which we ask your co-operation is this—We have made arrangements with Messrs. Jacobs & Co., of the Religious Press Advertising Syndicate, Home Office, Clinton, S. C., by which the New Orleans Christian Advocate will carry a heavy line of advertising (500 column inches per year) for each of several manufacturers of high grade goods, who contract to spend $22,000 per year each in the religious papers of all denominations (48 papers in all) to popularize their products with the people. Thirteen different denominations will read this advertising each week in the year in their church papers. This means that about 90 per cent. of your own substantial customers will receive the advertising through their church papers each week.

Messrs. Jacobs & Co. have put fourteen drummers on the road to introduce the goods of the manufacturers. One of these drummers will call on you soon, and ask you to stock lightly such goods in your line as are backed by these big advertising campaigns. May we not count on your assistance and co-operation? In order to secure this advertising for the religious papers, Messrs. Jacobs & Co. have to guarantee to stock the goods of the manufacturer with a certain number of new retail merchants who have not previously handled them. Your co-operation will, therefore, assist this your own church paper by assisting our agents, Messrs. Jacobs & Co., and will benefit you by giving you the well advertised lines of goods that are backed by the heaviest advertising campaigns ever attempted in this section.

We ask you to stock these goods. The advertising will move them from your shelves. The plan which Messrs. Jacobs & Co. are successfully working out will not only benefit the Religious Weekly Magazines but is even more beneficial to the retail merchants, the jobbers, drummers and the manufacturers who are involved in the matter. As a merchant, you get goods of the very best quality with a good margin of profit. You get a big amount of the best advertising distributed in your own trade area to the most substantial people. You are protected against loss from dead stock, and if you stock before your competitors do, you get the lead on the line, and, therefore, the greatest benefit from the $22,000 advertising campaign.

May we depend upon your co-operation? If so, kindly write our agents, Messrs. Jacobs & Co., Home Office, Clinton, S. C., and they will give you full information and have their drummer call on you.

Church News

The North Indiana Conference lecture will be delivered on April 5th by Bishop E. E. Hoss. His subject will be "The New Age." It needs not to be said that the brethren of the Hoosier State will hear a vigorous and wholesome message.

The Methodists of Houston, Texas, will raise $15,000 to erect a building for Dr. T. H. Yim's school at Songdo, Korea, to be named in honor of the late Bishop Seth Ward. This is a beautiful and fitting tribute from the Bishop's home city.

At the recent session of the General Board of Education at Nashville, Bishop Atkins was elected president in place of the lamented Bishop Galloway. Dr. W. B. Murrain, the distinguished president of Millsaps College, was elected to the vice-presidency, the position formerly held by Bishop Atkins.

Regretting Mr. Clifton's resignation of the presidency of Grenada College, many of the business men and other citizens of Grenada met a few days since, and by formal action requested him to reconsider his announced purpose to leave, and consent to remain. What his final decision will be, is not yet known.

As a grand round-up for the seventy-five missionary conventions which will have been held in the leading cities of America, a great Missionary Congress will assemble in Chicago, May 3-6. This is expected to be one of the largest and most enthusiastic religious gatherings ever brought together in the Western Hemisphere.

The seventeenth annual commencement of the Scarritt Bible and Training School, Kansas City, Mo., will be held May 9, 1910. Twenty students will graduate, seventeen of whom have already offered themselves as candidates for home or foreign mission work. The Commencement Sermon will be preached by Rev. Hoyt M. Dobbs. The Annual Address will be delivered by Rev. Louis Albert Banks, D.D., of Kansas City.

The presidency of Dr. Felix R. Hill at Centenary College is giving the utmost satisfaction. Dr. Weber is loved by all and greatly missed, but the unanimous verdict is that no more capable substitute than the present incumbent could have been found if the whole country had been searched over. The future of Louisiana Methodism is largely linked with that of this noble institution. It deserves, and should have, the sympathy, prayers and loyal support of every Methodist in the State.

Bishop Henry Spellmeyer, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died suddenly of heart failure in the Hotel Dennis, at Atlantic City, March 12. His door was unlocked and a chambermaid at 9 a. m., opening it, discovered him to be dead. He was partly undressed, and was evidently sitting about midway of the bed when the fatal stroke came. At the time of his decease, he was holding the New Jersey Conference, and was not known to have been ill, though after his death it was learned that he had had a physician with him at two o'clock in the night. He was born in New York City, Nov. 27, 1847. He was graduated from the New York University in 1866, and from Union Theological Seminary in 1869. Though not extraordinarily brilliant, nor a gifted orator, he was a safe, sane, and lovable man, and a capable administrator. This is the third chief pastor our sister Church has lately lost. The other two were Bishop Goodsell and Bishop Foss.

On March 24, Fanny J. Crosby, the blind, sacred poetess, whose sweet hymns have been sung around the world, celebrated her 90th birthday at Bridgeport, Conn. She was born in Putnam County, New York, but when she was nine years old the family moved to Connecticut, which State has since been her home. Her real name is Frances Van Alstyne. In 1853, she married Alexander Van Alstyne, a blind teacher in a school in which she herself taught. She was a warm friend of Grover Cleveland, who when a boy in his teens used to copy her poems for her. When Henry Clay's son was killed in the battle of Buena Vista in 1847, she composed and sent him some verses which touched and won the heart of the great pacificator. Blind, Fanny Crosby will not be much longer blind. Soon her sightless eyes will open on the fadeless glories of the City Celestial, where perhaps she may hear her own precious songs sung by heavenly choirs. May God richly bless her, and may the divine radiance make luminous her eventide!

Things continue to jump here in Oklahoma City. Last Sunday we took an offering for missions and asked the people for $4,750. In ten minutes we had subscribed $1,740, which will be made $5,000 this week. This will take care of St. Luke's Memorial Home, to be built of stone, in Wonsan, Korea. The Epworth League and Sunday school of St. Luke's Church will support a married missionary in addition to the above subscription. This is certainly an age of marvels. Hon. C. B. Ames, who is in the habit of giving $100 on the conference collections, raised his offering to $800, and many of the laymen raised proportionately. We continue to ride the crest of the wave, out here, all over the city. Linebaugh is breaking dirt for five of the buildings of the Woman's College, four dormitories and the main Administration building. Nowhere under the sun except in Oklahoma City could such things be done, and I doubt if another man could have accomplished as much as Linebaugh has done. The City Board of Church Extension has taken over St. James' property under its jurisdiction and will undoubtedly be able to do some things over there very soon. Oklahoma City is growing as much in a month as many cities do in a year, and it doth not yet appear what it shall be, but thank God, the churches and best of all, Southern Methodism are in the van of the city's progress. All the brethren are doing well, from the presiding elder down to the pastor of St. Luke's. P. R. Knickerbocker, in Western Methodist.

SIGNS OF PROGRESS.

The Winona District has made commendable progress during the past quarter. Improvements on church property and increased assessments for the support of the ministry and the order of the day. The spirit of advance has reached every quarter of the district, and almost every charge has some special undertaking on hand.

At Winona, a concrete walk has been built in front of the church; the parsonage and the wood work of the church at Greenwood have been painted; at Indianola the church has been moved to a better location and is now being thoroughly renovated at a cost of $1,000. At Redville the parsonage has been greatly improved and made more comfortable. Rev. W. M. Campbell is building a chapel at Quiver, five miles west of Schlater, where there is a thickly populated community. The church at Smiley Side is to have a new roof.

Our people at Fairview are laying plans to build a new church right away, and the same thing is being done at Longview, on the North Carrollton charge. At Inverness money is being raised to build a parsonage, to be located either there or at Isola. The Slate Springs parsonage is undergoing repairs through the kindness of the Conference Home Mission Society. At almost every point something has been done to increase the efficiency of our Church work.

As to salaries, there has been a very general feeling that the pastors were underpaid, and accordingly, sixteen charges in the district, out of twenty-one, have arranged to pay a larger salary. The increase amounts to $1,700, which is a ten per cent advance.

The pastors are reporting a goodly number of additions to the church.

Arrangements are being made for revival services, and the work is being pushed with all possible diligence.

When this note appears Rev. H. S. Spragins will be engaged in a meeting at Greenwood, assisted by Rev. J. T. Myers, of Memphis. Gracious results are expected.

Rev. J. A. Hall, our popular pastor at Winona, has been invited to preach the annual sermon before the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, the second Sunday in June, at Turpelo. Being the president of the Board of Missions of our Conference, the selection is eminently appropriate.

The preachers and laymen of the district and the good women—even those who favor the memorial—wish you and the Advocate the greatest success.

RAMBLER.

FROM REV. S. D. HOWARD.

Dear Brother Aleck: We are in great sorrow on account of the loss of our precious son, a young man of 22 years, 2 months and 25 days. He was sick for forty-three days with pneumonia and malarial complications. Wife and I stood by his side day and night. Kind and tender hands assisted in every way. We had two of the best physicians with him day and night. We turned our entire attention to him. He bid us farewell last Monday night at 9:45 p. m., and went home to live with Jesus and the angels beyond the twinkling stars. Our hearts are heavy, our home lonely, we look for him, but he comes not; we listen for his footsteps, but hear them not. His room is ready, but he comes not to occupy it. His chair is vacant; he is not here to fill it. We miss him on every hand. He died in the triumphs of a living faith. We shall meet him by and by. Prae for us in this hour of sadness. We can but say the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh. Blessed be the name of the Lord. His work on earth is ended. He has laid aside his weapons of Christian warfare. He was a good boy.

Rev. J. E. Denson, presiding elder, and Rev. W. H. Denson performed the burial service. Being a Woodman, he was buried with honors of the Order, amid a very large concourse of people. Fraternally,
S. D. HOWARD.

TREASURER'S REPORT

Board of Missions, North Mississippi Conference.

Treasurer of the Board of Missions of North Mississippi Conference acknowledges receipt of foreign and domestic mission money for the quarter ended March 15, as follows:

—Missions—
	Foreign.	Domestic.
Abbeville District—
Amory and Nettleton	$ 68.75	$
Shannon		1.00
Tupelo	215.00	135.00
Total	$ 283.75	$ 136.00
Columbus District—
Clarks Bluff	$ 5.00	$
Columbus First Church		83.35
Shannon		5.00
Total	$ 5.00	$ 88.35
Corinth District—
Duncan District—
Sidon and Tipton		$ 6.00
Total	$	$ 6.00
Greenville District—
Clarksdale	$ 93.00	71.00
Shaw		39.00
Total	$ 93.00	$ 110.00
Oxford District—
Lynch's Movement	$ 7.50	$
Total	$ 7.50	$
Sardis District—
Greater	$	$ 60.00
Gomo		77.00
Spartanburg		77.00
Total	$	$ 214.00
Winona District—
Slate Springs	$	$ 10.00
Winona	37.20	85.00
Laymen's movement	15.00
Total	$ 52.20	$ 95.00

Recapitulation by Districts.

Abbeville	$ 283.75	$ 136.00
Columbus	5.00	88.35
Durant		6.00
Greenville	93.00	110.00
Oxford	7.50
Sardis		214.00
Winona	52.20	95.00

Total rec'ts to Mar. 15 $ 441.45 $ 649.35
Last year, same date 379.30 1,468.32

S. J. HIGH, Treasurer.

REV. WALTER G. HARBIN'S BOOK.

"Modes of the Heavenly Life." Rev. Walter J. Harbin's book of sermons, is now finished and ready for delivery. Orders are being filled as fast as practicable. We have on hand a few more copies of the autograph edition, which will be sent out on orders as long as they last. The price of the book, which contains about 90 pages, bound in cloth, is 75 cents. Address New Orleans Christian Advocate, 512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

CAMPGROUND COTTAGE FOR SALE.

No. 111 on Tabernacle Square, 5 rooms and bath, furnished throughout, including enameled bath tub and an electric fan. Sanitary connection. Write H. R. Singleton, Box 57, Alexandria, La.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location, price, including furniture, only $400. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1032-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg. or R. G. Pies, Seashore Campground.

HOUSE ON CAMPGROUNDS FOR SALE.

A desirable two-story cottage, with four rooms and bath, bathroom with latest sanitary improvements, completely furnished, facing open square in front of Keller Lodge, with a small shady park in the rear. Address, Christian Advocate, 512 Camp, New Orleans.

W. F. M. S.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The thirty-second annual session of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be held in Clarksville, Tenn., April 20-26, 1910. As this session closes this quadrennium, it is important that conference societies, wherever practicable, shall be represented by their secretaries. Delegates will send notice of their coming to the chairman of the entertainment committee, Mrs. W. E. Beach, Franklin St., Clarksville, Tenn.

Let prayer be made daily at noon for the session.
MISS M. L. GIBSON, President.
MRS. F. S. PARKER, Recording Secretary.
Kansas City, Mo., March 19, 1910.

W. H. M. S.

A DELIGHTFUL SESSION.

The seventeenth annual meeting of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Conference, which was for so long the subject of much bright anticipation and prayerful consideration, has passed into joyous realization.

It was held in Gulfport, which, with its extensive coast line, will in time be the great gateway of the South for the tide of immigration which will sweep through her portals after the completion of the Panama Canal. Already many ships ride at anchor at her pier, some loading, others discharging their cargoes, while still others are seen in the offing. Many fishing craft, with their sails swung loose at the sport of the wind, dot the blue waters. A trolley ride to Biloxi, with stop-over privileges at the various points of interest (the Camp Ground, and Beauvoir), was one of the courtesies extended to the visitors in attendance on this Conference. Only ninety-five were present, including those in immediate vicinity, so that reduced rates could be obtained only over the Gulf and Ship Island road.

The Treasurer's report showed an increase in collections over last year of $1,079.43. This was not the sum total, however, as some societies failed to get in their reports before the Treasurer closed her books. The report of the Conference Secretary showed many new auxiliaries.

The Conference officers made the usual complaint of failure to secure reports. Many auxiliaries fail to elect second and third vice-presidents, which is a great oversight, as the branches of work over which these officers have supervision are of great importance to the cause.

The annual election resulted in the return of all the officers to their former places—some few changes in the smaller offices.

A fine arrangement of papers on "Tithing" was given by the second vice-president. Much information was afforded to all who are interested in tithing and to many who have not a proper understanding of the subject.

A splendid address on "City Missions" was made by the Secretary of Newton District.

The woman's memorial to the General Conference received very scant consideration at the hands of this body, many of whom had heard very little about it. Miss Bennett made it the subject of her address on Sunday evening and explained it thoroughly to the edification of many—though some, "convinced against their will, held to the same opinion still." Miss Bennett's address at the morning hour surveyed the general work, giving touching incidents in connection with some of the departments, which moved all hearts to sympathy and many eyes to tears.

Miss Drago, the deaconess at the Wesley House in Biloxi, spoke on her work and the needs of her home. The suggestion was made that a subscription be raised on the Conference floor; this was responded to, and in a few minutes over one hundred dollars was secured in cash and subscriptions. This will have to go into the general treasury and be distributed from there.

The Sailors' Rest, conducted by Rev. W. T. Griffin, was visited by Miss Bennett and other workers. This is an important feature of the Gulf Coast work.

These men who go down to the sea in ships" deserve our prayers and Christian efforts.

If memory's crown of memory is remembering happy things, many brows will bear the imprint of this crown pressed down upon them, as a result of the delightful hospitality received from all who were concerned in our entertainment. If space permitted, individual mention would not be amiss.

Five invitations were received for next year. Brookhaven was chosen. Every heart received an impetus for the next year and the work will go bravely on, for "information is inspiration."

MRS. A. YEAGER.

Natchez, Miss.

WORDS OF THANKS AND EXHORTATION.

I am sure that we all agree with one accord that the session of our Conference, which has just closed at Gulfport, Miss., was the very best in the history of the Society, and may be recorded as the "golden conference." Doubtless each one who attended returned with renewed determination and energy to do the very best year's work she has ever done. Sisters, let's do well the work that has already been given us to do; then, when the time is ripe for our sphere to be enlarged, the doors will swing wide open, just as in the past.

We were glad to have with us quite a number of our pastors; we appreciate having them in attendance at our district and annual meetings. We need their counsel and advice, even if they cannot cast their votes.

Many of you already know that I am again in the position of Second Vice President, and to all who are in the "tithing department" (which should be every member of the Society), I desire to say that I need your prayers and co-operation more than ever before, for the work is larger and broader, which means more work. Please help me!

There were several present during the Conference who requested me to send to them literature; also a paper I have in mind. Some gave me their names and addresses, but in going to and fro on the Gulfport cars, they were misplaced, or perhaps lost. I am at your service. You command, and I will obey.

I do thank such of you who have in any way helped me during the year that has just closed; especially for words of cheer and encouragement from—oh, so many at the annual meeting.

Now, the New Orleans Christian Advocate is the only means of communication we have, other than personal letters. The editor has given us a column; we should show our appreciation of this by using it more. I always look at the W. F. M. S. and W. H. M. S. news first, when the paper comes, although it is brimful of fine reading. Our church organ should be a weekly visitor in every Methodist home, and every member of the W. H. M. S. should take Our Homes, and read it and the Advocate. An informed people are a willing people. Yours to serve,

MRS. J. R. ELLIS.

Conference Second Vice President.
Mount Olive, Miss.

ANENT THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. Rob't B. Downer.

The perfection of our church machinery is a necessary and commendable object, yet perfect machinery, minus adequate driving power, may make a charming picture, but is a failure in hastening the millennium.

Might it not be well to inquire: Does our Twentieth Century Southern Methodism, in all its ramifications, meet the full approbation of God? Will the Holy Ghost be enthroned in the heart and action of every delegate of the approaching General Conference? Would our Bishops err, if at an early date, when they get together in council, entering into special investigation of their four years' administration, agonizingly invoking the Holy Spirit to reverse the angelic phonograph record of their individual lives as to use of the Lord's time—their official acts, their self-denials, their sufferings for Christ's sake, their zeal, and personal consecration—also give them a panoramic view of the home and church life of ministers and laymen; let them learn the exact status of the Church record of which they, as chief shepherds, are held responsible? Has the Lord anything against said Church, in its methods of work, in doctrines promulgated or suppressed, along missionary lines, educational lines, lines of benevolence, discipline and evangelization?

Would the Bishops emerge from that special council singing the long-meter doxology, praising God that Christ is not "wounded in the house of his friends?" Would they say, "All is well? Methodism is without spot or blemish?" God grant that it might be within their power to so declare; but if faithfulness should compel them to declare, "Brethren, while comparatively we are making a creditable showing in style, and cost of our church structures; are having more college graduates entering our Annual Conferences than ever before; more laymen unusually concerned about creating a missionary spirit, and raising large sums of money for mission expenses; our women seeking greater authority in order to render more efficient service; while in many ways we are unusually active in church matters, and there is no doubt of great seeming zeal for the Lord, yet, while in our Conference ministrations, the reports have been good along material lines, we very much fear that a large majority of our membership are more attached to the world than to the Lord Jesus Christ. We fear that prayer closets, family altars, love feasts and prayer meetings are not features of Christian life deemed essential for the cultivation of the divine likeness.

"Many of our ministers seem to have lost the revival power of olden times and depend upon the professional evangelist to a large extent for any success along that line. We fear that our membership is not fully conversant with the doctrines that differentiate Methodism from all other denominations. We are not satisfied with the increase in membership attained in the past four years. If it is still true that divine endowment can enable one to chase a thousand and two, put ten thousand to flight, there is leakage—friction, causing loss of power somewhere—that it behooves us to ascertain and remedy; for Moses thunders in our ears the declaration: 'Thou shalt be perfect with the Lord thy God.' Jeremiah: 'Cursed be he that doeth the work of the Lord deceitfully,' i. e., negligently; while St. James has an anathema for him 'that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not.' 'Brethren, we must seek until we know 'the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.' 'Daubing with untempered mortar' is not wise. Will it not be wise to request of all lovers of our Lord Jesus Christ, within our pales, to enter into covenant compact with us, to daily make special prayer unto God, to specially endue us as chief shepherds, with wisdom, knowledge, faith, zeal and entire consecration adequate to possession of a clear comprehension of the needs of Zion, so that in our quadrennial address at Asheville next May we may be able to stimulate the Church to attain to a closer walk with God, and make it possible in due time to present the Church, the Lamb's bride, without spot or blemish? Also to agonize in prayer for every delegate, that he may come to that convocation of our Southern Methodism filled with the Spirit of Christ, and all 'the fullness of God'—making it possible for the Holy Ghost to direct every song, prayer, address, report and vote, thus making memorable the record of the said General Conference as one of wisdom, making no mistakes, sending forth wholesome influences upon the Church membership; infusing a zeal, a faith, a service, a consecration, that will sweep away from the land all agencies that now hinder the early coming of Christ's kingdom, by making our Southern Methodism a provocative medium, stimulating all denominations that claim loyalty to Christ to exert their utmost ability in the destruction of the kingdom of Satan, and early coronation of Jesus as Lord over all.

"The sons of Anak are not all dead; yet, we are able, if the Lord go with and abide upon us, to hasten the day when every knee shall bow and tongue confess that Christ alone is God."

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS FOR
ALASKA AND BOHN SYPHON REFRIGERATORS,
Garland and New Process Gas Stoves.
THE UNITED HARDWARE CO., LTD.,
1005-1007 Canal Street, New Orleans.

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.
OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulton, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

MR. ROCKEFELLER'S FOUNDATION.

Mr. John D. Rockefeller, who is the richest man in America, if not in the world, has announced that he will devote a large share of his colossal fortune to the promotion of charitable and humanitarian causes. Following the example of Mr. Carnegie, he will establish a "Foundation," which is to bear his name, and the income of which will be administered by trustees selected for that purpose. By special request Mr. Gallinger, of New Hampshire, has introduced in the United States Senate a bill of incorporation, which states the object of the "Foundation" as being "to promote the well-being and advance the civilization of the peoples of the United States and its Territories and possessions, and of foreign lands, in the acquisition and dissemination of knowledge, in the prevention of suffering, and in the promotion of any and all the elements of human progress."

The incorporators are John D. Rockefeller, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Fred T. Gates, Starr J. Murphy, and Charles O. Heydt. It has been given out that young Mr. Rockefeller will retire from the head of many large financial institutions to become the chief-executor of this great trust fund, which action upon his part some have affirmed will involve more real sacrifice than the princely donation to be made by his father. It is designed to locate the main office of the "Foundation" in the District of Columbia, and the Government has been asked to grant "the usual broad powers in relation to the holding and management of property and the exemption from taxation generally accorded to great benevolent enterprises."

No indication has yet been given as to the amount of money which is to be invested in this "Foundation;" but the supposition is that it will be the largest philanthropic fund in existence, and, indeed, the largest that has ever existed in the history of the world. For many years Mr. Rockefeller has been a strikingly generous giver. His contributions to various benevolent and humanitarian causes during the past two decades are estimated to have reached the enormous sum of $150,000,000. He has given to the General Education Board alone $53,000,000. But it is expected that this last movement will be his crowning act of philanthropy and place him far in advance of all rivals as a moneyed benefactor of humanity.

But it is yet too early to estimate intelligently the influence of Mr. Rockefeller's "Foundation." Whether it is a blessing, and the extent to which it is so, will depend largely upon the scheme of management, not yet disclosed, and the way it is administered in the years to come. Certain it is, however, that such a colossal trust fund will exert a tremendous power of some kind, and let us hope that it will be uniformly for good. As we stated recently in our editorial on "Justice Better Than Charity," we think it would be wiser for these great captains of industry to share their immense earnings annually with the laborers to whom in a large measure they are indebted for them, and thus make their money do good along through life instead of hoarding it while the people are in need; but if the contrary course has been pursued, and a huge fortune has been amassed, we think one who resolves to devote it to the promotion of knowledge and benevolence and the prevention of human suffering deserves to be heartily commended. So, unless something should occur in the administration of his "Foundation" to cause us to change our opinion, we shall attribute to Mr. Rockefeller only worthy motives in making this disposition of his wealth, and accord him the meed of praise which is due the true philanthropist.

IS IT RIGHT?

A correspondent in this issue of the Advocate states that Miss Belle Bennett, on the occasion of her recent visit to Gulfport, took the evening hour of the Sabbath to discuss the "Woman's Memorial" to the General Conference. We may be old-fashioned in our view, but we confess that this information somewhat startled us. As we see it, the Lord's holy day is scarcely a fitting time for the discussion of General Conference legislation. What, for instance, would be thought of Chancellor Kirkland, or Bishop Hoss, if either of them should take the evening hour in a church in Nashville next Sunday to discuss the Vanderbilt question in its relation to our approaching general assembly? Would not a wave of protest sweep over the Church from the Potomac to the Rio Grande? If the machinery of the Woman's Home Mission Society must be diverted from the purposes for which it was instituted to wage a campaign (after the manner of politicians) for this memorial, it seems to us that at least the sanctity of the Christian Sabbath should be respected. We have not the honor of a personal acquaintance with Miss Bennett, but we have long regarded her as one of the most gifted and consecrated women in the Church; nor have we yet changed our opinion. But we fear that in her excessive zeal for this movement upon which her heart seems so set, she is allowing herself and her associates to adopt methods which will prove hurtful both to them and the noble work which they represent.

AN INTERESTING MEETING.

The Woman's City Mission Board of New Orleans held its meeting at St. Mark's Hall on Wednesday, the 23d inst. The session was presided over by Mrs. W. W. Carre, the president, who dispatched business with the ease and grace of a veteran. The reports of the various officers and employees of the Board clearly showed that the several enterprises which it is fostering have prospered to a gratifying extent during the past year. Particularly is this true of the work carried on at St. Mark's Hall, which has steadily grown and gives every indication of larger results in the near future.

We counted it a privilege to look in on the council of these noble toilers, whose hearts have been stirred to do something for the unchurched and unshepherded masses of this great city. In seeking to throw out a life-line to those immersed in poverty and sin about us, they are doing a Christlike and urgently needed work, and should have the sympathy, prayers, and active co-operation of all. We heartily applaud them for their zeal and enterprise. The General Boards of the Church and the men of means in this city should speedily rally to their assistance, and give them the enlarged equipment which the white and widening field demands.

ARE YOU GETTING READY?

The second Sunday in April, the day set apart for presenting "The Galloway Memorial Loan Fund," is near at hand. The movement has the endorsement, not only of Dr. McMurtry and the General Church Extension Board, but also of the two Conference Boards in Mississippi. A statement requesting that the cause be represented and a collection taken in every church, has recently been issued by Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Columbus, and Rev. W. B. Lewis, who has lately gone from us. We urge the brethren to heed the call of these leaders and co-operate in carrying this enterprise forward to success. It will succeed if every pastor will explain the meaning of the movement and give his people a chance to assist on April 10. Let us unite in its promotion, and show the Church what Mississippi can do.

FAILED TO CARRY.

We learn that at the recent session of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Conference at Gulfport, the Woman's Memorial for the "full rights of the laity" failed to carry. This pleases, but does not greatly surprise us. We have never had any doubt as to where the conservative womanhood of the Church would stand on this question, if the issues involved were fairly presented for their consideration. Many of our most consecrated and gifted women already see the inexpediency of the movement.

1. They see it is not best for the men, who must be enlisted and kept at work if they are to be saved. Too many of them are already disposed to substitute the club for the house of worship. They need to be held on to, not relieved of responsibility and allowed to go free.

2. They see it is not best for the Church. The problem of the evangelization of the world is largely a money problem. We have the workers ready, but not the funds to send them. Being stronger physically, men are the wealth-producers, and hold in their hands the purse of Christendom. Without their interest and co-operation the coming of the kingdom of Christ must be long delayed. Hence, just at this time, when the Laymen's Movement is beginning to awaken them and they are commencing to knock at the doors of our Conferences, a scheme which would reduce rather than increase their numbers in the councils of the Church surely cannot be wise. Leaving out of consideration everything else, the woman's movement is at the present most inexpedient. It would hinder rather than help the work of human redemption. Thousands of the noble women of Southern Methodism clearly see this, and not for the mere sake of sitting in high legislative assemblies are they willing to imperil the sacred cause for which the Master died, and upon the progress of which the destiny of millions is contingent.

DR. H. R. SINGLETON, DEAD.

We regret more than we have words to express to chronicle the death of Rev. H. R. Singleton, an honored superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, which occurred at El Paso, Texas, March 25th, at 1 p.m. He was operated on for gall stones some three weeks ago, an extremely hazardous undertaking for one of his age, and for fifteen days his life seemed trembling in the balance, with the chances all against him. But on the 19th inst. he took a decided turn for the better and strong hopes of his recovery were entertained. A letter from his bedside to the Advocate last week represented him as being "cheerful, reading his old Bible, and happy in the faith." Messages from old friends were also said to be giving him much comfort and pleasure.

But the improvement was only apparent and temporary, and Dr. Singleton soon commenced to grow weaker under the tremendous strain, and, though he had the best of medical skill and all that loving and tender hands could do, was done, he gradually faded away from earth to become a citizen of the skies. His beloved wife and sons were with him, and no effort was spared to make comfortable and serene his closing hours.

Dr. Singleton was for thirty-six years a member of the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences, and bore himself worthily in all the work of the ministry. He was a man of liberal education and uncommon gifts as a preacher. He had a rich and varied vocabulary, and possessed in an unusual degree the power of persuasive speech. His intellect was vigorous and comprehensive, and he was exceedingly happy as an expositor of the Holy Scriptures. He filled a number of responsible and difficult appointments, and would have graced any pulpit in the connection. Of the private life and personal characteristics of the deceased we knew but little. But we have heard him spoken of by his Conference comrades in terms of the highest esteem and affection. They represented him as a genial, faithful, lovable man, who had much of the mind of the Master and who ever walked worthy of his high vocation. There is something inexpressibly beautiful in the way God's servants front the unknown future and pass into the sphere invisible. Death seems to cower in their presence, and they are more than conquerors in the resurrection power of Christ. Having wrought efficiently in many fields and done much to extend the divine kingdom, our brother has finished his course in triumph and ascended to the Father's House to dwell with his glorious Lord evermore.

His body was brought to Covington, La., and there laid peacefully away to await the trumpet blast and the resurrection morn. And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth. Yea, saith the Spirit that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them.

PERSONAL.

Doctor and Mrs. W. B. Murrah, of Jackson, Miss., were in the city on Friday, the 25th inst. Dr. Murrah will spend the first Sunday in April at Carrollton, Miss., as the guest of Mr. J. R. Bingham.

Rev. J. E. Denson, presiding elder of the Lafayette District, preached a forceful sermon to a large audience at Estherwood, La., on Sunday evening last. This was his final discourse at that place for the current Conference year.

The press dispatches state that Rev. C. F. Emery has been transferred from Brandon, to Canton, Miss., where he will become the successor of the lamented W. B. Lewis. Who will succeed Brother Emery at Brandon, we have not yet been informed.

We make mention of the following brethren who lately have done appreciated work for their Conference organ: Rev. C. A. Northington, Ripley, Miss.; Rev. W. L. Broom, Oxford, Miss.; Rev. E. C. Sullivan, Belmont, Miss.; and Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.

Mr. W. Y. Webb, of Gloster, Miss., in renewing his subscription, writes of the Advocate in words highly commendatory, for which we thank him. He has been a subscriber for over forty years. We have an especial appreciation of these long-time friends of our paper.

Writing from Gillsland, La., on March 23, Rev. C. F. Staples sends an additional list of five subscribers. Referring to the status of things in his charge, he says: "God is very gracious to us on this work. We realize that his hand is directing, and the outlook is hopeful."

Rev. J. H. Holder, of Booneville, Miss., continues to have extraordinary success in his work. He says: "Our Sunday school is great. We are near the 300 mark in attendance, the enrollment going far beyond that. 135 adults, besides officers and teachers, were present last Sunday."

Rev. F. L. Applewhite, of Monticello, Miss., is having gratifying success in his present field of labor. He is sowing seed and reaping fruit therefrom. The Advocate makes grateful acknowledgment of its indebtedness to him for extending its circulation among his worthy parishioners.

A hard and capable worker is Rev. J. W. Campbell, of Fayette, Miss. He is well informed and observant of all the interests of connectional Methodism. But in looking abroad he does not forget things at home. We make grateful acknowledgment of six subscribers whose names he recently forwarded.

The Knight Templars of New Orleans, held their annual Easter service at the First Methodist Church last Sunday evening. The sermon, which was a notable utterance, was delivered by Dr. F. N. Parker, of this city. Dr. Parker also occupied the pulpit of Parker Memorial Church at 111 and the same day, and delighted the large audience which assembled to hear him.

From Pelahatchie, Miss., Rev. W. E. Dickens continues to sound out an optimistic note. In enclosing a check and the names of more subscribers to the business manager, he closes his letter with the following cheerful words: "We are still marching onward and feel sure of success this year. The Lord is with us."

From the well-named town of Prentiss, Miss., Rev. M. L. White has forwarded a number of names to join our subscription files. He is pleased with the strong Methodist note of the Advocate, and says we need to keep our doctrines before the people. In this we heartily agree with our good brother. Methodist theology is the soundest and most consistent in all the world.

Rev. T. J. Hopper has a large and laborious field at Sturgis, Miss., the membership of his charge numbering several hundred. He is wide awake and aggressive, and is seeking to lead his flock onward and upward. Among other things, he writes: "I will look after the Advocate to the best of my ability. I do not see how any Methodist can afford to be without his church paper."

The New Orleans District Conference will convene at the Parker Memorial Church in this city on Thursday of this week and continue through Saturday. Let the Methodists of New Orleans look in on the sessions and lend a hand in making the occasion a memorable one. Dr. F. N. Parker, the accomplished presiding elder, will preside. All visitors will be cordially welcomed.

The First Methodist Church at Columbus, Miss., has 921 members. These, together with the 105 non-affiliated Methodists under his supervision, are quite enough to keep Brother Lewis busy, though he has the happy faculty of turning off work with remarkable dispatch. Columbus is now also quite a convention city. Seven large gatherings from over the State are expected to assemble there this year.

In this issue is contained a highly interesting communication from that peerless orator and prince of gentlemen, Dr. S. A. Stock. He wields a facile pen, and as a letter writer has no equal in the Church. In the name of the Advocate's thousands of readers, we thank him for favoring us with this brilliant piece of correspondence, and we sincerely hope that he will remember us again at no distant day.

Dr. F. S. Parker, the accomplished assistant editor of the Epworth Era, has recently been confined to his room with an attack of rheumatism. He has a host of friends in New Orleans and the Louisiana Conference who will be grieved to learn of his illness, from which we hope he may promptly recover. If he has not already done so, he is held in universal esteem by the Methodists and people generally of this section.

Rev. L. C. Wilson, of Franklinton, La., was an appreciated caller at the Advocate office Tuesday of this week. He came to the city with Mrs. Wilson, who was seeking medical treatment, and who, we are pleased to state, is doing well. We congratulate Brother Wilson on the addition of a fine baby-girl to his family. He could not say too much about the kindness of the people of Franklinton to himself and wife in their troubles.

Rev. W. N. Duncan, of Batesville, Miss., favored us with a fine list of subscribers a few days since. It is Brother Duncan's invariable habit to look faithfully after all the work of the Church in his charge. There is no more gifted or promising young preacher in Mississippi, and in the person of Sister Duncan he has a help-meet who apparently was "predestined" for the itinerancy, so admirably does she meet every duty devolving upon her as the mistress of the manse.

The many friends of Dr. W. C. Black, of the Mississippi Conference, will greatly regret to hear that the state of his health is such that at his request he has been relieved of his charge at Edwards, Miss. His physician insisted that he should have complete and immediate rest from pastoral work while recuperating. The Doctor will make his home at Hattiesburg. We sincerely trust that he may speedily regain his accustomed vigor and soon be able to resume his loved employ.

To Rev. Osmond S. Lewis, of Hattiesburg, we are indebted for the following appreciated news items: "The new Main Street Church of this city is nearing completion, and the congregation will worship there on Easter Sunday. We all rejoice with Dr. Watkins and his people in their success in being able to occupy their beautiful and commodious building. Brother G. H. Thompson, of the Court Street Church, has been seriously indisposed with la grippe for some time, but is now improving."

We acknowledge the reception of an appreciated invitation to attend the opening of the Wesley Memorial Church, Atlanta, Ga., April 6 to May 1st. An elaborate and extended program has been prepared for the occasion. Among those who will take part in the exercises are Bishop W. A. Candler, Rev. Lincoln McConnell, Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Hamill, and Rev. J. M. Simon, D. D., of Manchester, England. We congratulate those having the movement in charge upon the completion of this great institutional structure.

We thank Rev. C. C. Wier, of Franklin, La., for a neatly printed program of his Easter service. The musical feature was made prominent, as is usually done on that occasion. We note especially that a solo was rendered by Miss Willia Foster, who, if we mistake not, is a daughter of United States Senator Foster, whose home is at Franklin. We were also pleased to see that Rev. W. W. Holmes, of this city, who lately has been quite ill, but who has been spending some days with Brother Wier, was able to take part in the exercises.

Rev. H. C. Edmondson, in making a remittance to cover the cost of subscriptions secured, heartily endorses the editor's position on the woman's memorial and other questions. We appreciate our brother's kind words. We have had many like them from all over the Church, and from Bishops and men eminent in the connection, as well as from those serving in obscure fields. Not a few have come from elect women. But we have refrained from publishing them, because we have always thought it most unbecoming in an editor to fill his columns with communications in praise of himself.

Under date of the 22d inst., Rev. J. E. Denson, of Lafayette, La., writes: "The many friends of Rev. S. D. Howard, our pastor at Eunice, La., will regret to hear of the death of his son, George, who was stricken with pneumonia some six weeks ago, and grew steadily worse unto the end, which came at 9 p. m. Monday, the 21st." We profoundly sympathize with our bereaved brother and his sorrowing family, and pray that the loving arms of the Heavenly Father may encircle and uphold them. At such a time, how unspeakably precious are the glorious truths of the gospel!

Brother C. H. Ellis, of Sharon, Miss., has recently been at work for the Advocate in his community. We thank him for what he has done, and shall endeavor to make our paper a worthy beneficiary of his kindness. May the Lord bless and prosper him!

If we mistake not, Rev. O. L. Savage stands next to Brother Lagrone in the number of subscribers secured to the Advocate. Already he has sent over fifty, and still they come. We wish the sovereign State of Mississippi were full of Savages of his kind.

It was our very great pleasure to spend Easter Sunday at De Ridder, La., where we discoursed to two large audiences and assisted in the dedication of our new church at that place. To Rev. J. W. Booth and his estimable congregation we are indebted for every possible courtesy and kindness. We hope to write a more extended account of the trip and the exercises of the occasion for our next issue.

Rev. J. T. Murrah, of Sardis, Miss., remembered us with a fine club of subscribers on the 24th inst. It is needless to say that he has things well in hand in his delightful charge. His salary has been increased $150, and his people are painstaking to show their appreciation. Brother Murrah erected at this place last year one of the handsomest churches in North Mississippi. We are pleased to note that he speaks in terms of the highest appreciation of his faithful presiding elder, the Rev. W. M. Young.

We were deeply grieved to learn of the death of Mrs. Cordella Strong Weissinger, of Hernando, Miss., which occurred a few days since at the ripe old age of 83 years. She was a Methodist of the old type, of whom the world is not worthy—true, faithful and devoted to the work of the Master. She was the mother of our dear friends, Dr. W. S. Weissinger, of Hernando, and Mr. J. R. Weissinger, of Shelby, Miss., to whom our heart goes out in tenderest, deepest sympathy in this hour of sore bereavement. A memoir of our translated sister is in hand, and will appear in the near future.

We were much pleased to have Mr. H. L. Baker, in company with Brother Atkinson, call at the office a few days since. He is with the Baker-Wakefield-Cypress Company, at Plattenville, La., a concern which does a very large business. He is superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school at that place, which has an adult Bible class of 26 and is up-to-date in every respect. It makes us happy to see them, these busy men who take time to do something for the Master. Brother Baker has lately had Mr. and Mrs. T. V. Elzey, of New Orleans, as his appreciated guests for a few days.

As he goes over the territory under his supervision, looking after the other interests of the Church, Rev. T. J. O'Neil, of the Newton District, is also painstaking to present strongly the claims of the Advocate. Nor does he find his work in behalf of the Conference organ in vain. We are highly appreciative of the substantial assistance which, from time to time, he has given us in the way of new subscribers, and we pray that God may vouchsafe to bless every effort he may put forth to extend the divine kingdom. In the religious, as well as in other realms, it is the man of initiative and industry who achieves results that are worth while.

From Monday's Times-Democrat we take the following: "Large crowds attended the services yesterday at the Felicly Street Methodist Church. The music was under the direction of the organist, Mrs. Perry Roehm. At night Mr. T. O. Adams sang an illustrated solo, The Holy City. In the morning, the pastor, Rev. Albert S. Lutz, preached on 'The Resurrection,' and at night presented beautiful stereopticon views of the death, burial, resurrection and ascension of Christ. These services, in which the stereopticon is used, have proven their power to draw, and will be used every Sunday night. The subject for next Sunday will be 'The Early Ministry of Christ.'"

From a Covington, La., dispatch to the Picayune of the 28th, we appropriate the following: "Rev. J. T. Sawyer, D.D., a well-known Methodist minister, who for the past twenty-five years has been prominent in the affairs of his Church in this State, and on several occasions has been its chosen representative in the General Conference, filled the pulpit of the Gibson Street Church twice to-day, preaching to large congregations. He announced his acceptance of the local pastorate, and spent some time with the officials planning for an advance movement among the membership of the church. The plan of grouping the churches in this parish will be changed. Dr. Sawyer will have charge of the churches at Covington, Mandeville and Madisonville. Rev. T. V. Peters, who at present serves the Mandeville congregation, will preach at Slidell and Pearl River, and a new minister will be selected to preside over a new charge to be known as the St. Tammany Circuit, composed of the churches at German settlement, Fitzgerald, Tallers, Bush and Talisheek, with the possibility of several additional preaching places."

IMPORTANT!

Write this very day for your copy of the Van Antwerp Seed Catalog—Free.

You can not afford to miss it this season.

Everything in seeds. Van Antwerp's seeds never disappoint you.

Clip and mail this "ad" with 25 cents and we will mail you TEN 6c papers of our selection of choice seeds

Seed Department
Van Antwerp's
Dept. B, MOBILE, ALA.

Plants and Trees for the South!

Hardy and Decorative! Nursery stock to meet every requirement of the Southern planter and householder. All kinds of Fruit and Economic trees and plants adapted to the South and the Tropics.

Bamboos and Grasses, Palms, Ferns, Water Lilies, Shade Trees, Shrubs, Vines, Bulbs and hosts of odd plants from all over the world—in fact, the greatest collection in the South, gathered together in the past few years.

Our handsome illustrated catalog of 17 Depts., tells all about them, and when to transplant, etc. Write now and we will send a copy FREE!

If you have any special needs to meet in laying out your grounds, send us details and we will cheerfully furnish information.

Our naturally-grown Palms and Decorative plants for indoor decoration cannot be equalled for beautiful, thrifty growth.

Packing a specialty; we send by MAIL, EXPRESS, or FREIGHT SAFELY to the most distant points. Write TODAY!

REASER BROS., Ocala, Florida.

FREE A POSTAL FROM YOU

And We Will Send Free, to Prove That it is the Most Effective External Cure for Rheumatic Pains and Aches, a Special BOTTLE OF

Confident that it will do for you what it has done for others, and that to use it is to praise it, as does the writer of the following grateful letter:—

"With muscular rheumatism I suffered to the extent that even to control the pen held in my right hand was impossible at times. On one such day I first used Minard's Liniment. No indorsement could come from a worse sufferer or more grateful heart than mine. G. W. D'Vys, Cambridge, Mass." Send a postal to Minard's Liniment Co., So. Framingham, Mass.

Marriages.

March 9, 1910, at the home of the bride's father, Rev. H. B. Gilmore, Hattiesburg, Miss., by Rev. O. S. Lewis, Mr. LESLIE McNAIR and Miss GEORGIA GILMORE, both of Hattiesburg, Miss.

March 20, 1910, at the home of Mr. M. S. Dennis, Hattiesburg, Miss., by Rev. O. S. Lewis, Mr. A. B. DENNIS and Miss BESSIE FAIRLY, both of Hattiesburg, Miss.

Jan. 2, 1910, at the home of the bride's parents, Hermanville, Miss., by Rev. W. L. Blackwell, Mr. W. M. ASHLEY, of Rodney, Miss., to Miss LIZZIE LORD, of Hermanville, Miss.

On March 19, 1910, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Segrest, Hervey, Miss., by Rev. W. L. Blackwell, Hermanville, Miss., Mr. MARSHALL G. MACKAY, of Hervey, Miss., to Miss NORMA E. GILLEYLEN, of Ruth, Miss.

March 20, 1910, at the home of the bride's parents, Barland, Miss., by Rev. W. L. Blackwell, of Hermanville, Miss., to Mr. J. LAWRENCE, of Carlsle, Miss., to Miss SUSIE HOUSTON.

DON'T BE WITHOUT WATER.

There is no need of the property holders of this city being any longer without water and sewer connections. This has been the one great distress of our city, not being able to have modern improvements in our homes. But now there is no need of any more complaints along this line, as the city is perfectly willing to connect free any property with the water main, carrying the pipes to the property holders line, without any cost whatever to them.

The popular firm of C. C. Hartwell & Co., on Baronne Street, are making a liberal proposition to connect the sewer pipes free of charge. They also go farther, and agree to do all plumbing and laying of pipes necessary to connect the house with the sewer and water on monthly payments. This enables the property holders to not only put the property occupied by him but any property he has for rent in modern shape, with practically no outlay of ready cash. People interested in this proposition should consult C. C. Hartwell & Co., for a detailed explanation.

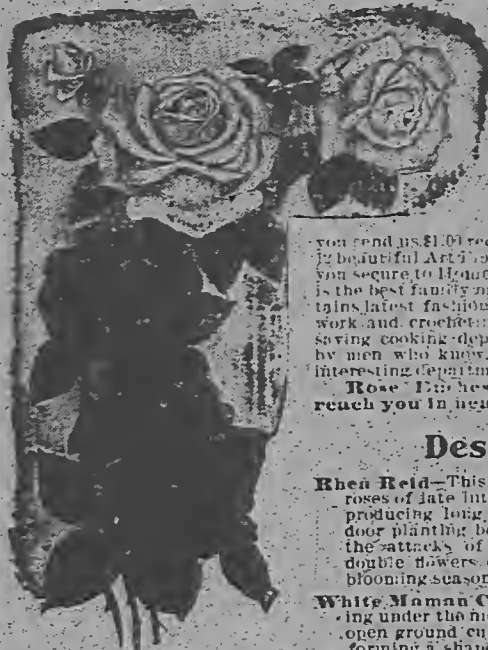

We often do more good by our sympathy than by our labors, and render to the world a more lasting service by absence of jealousy and recognition of merit than we could ever render by the straining efforts of personal ambition.—Dean Farrar.

Grace M. Gallaher, Arthur E. McFarlane, Frank Lillie Pollock, Franklin Welles Caikins and Alice Louise Lee are all contributors of stories to the March issues of The Youth's Companion. Alice Louise Lee's is an Easter story, "In the Pew of the Usher," and appears in The Companion's Easter Number, which pictorially and in the matter of contents will be noteworthy.

A Doctor in the Family.

Royaline Oil, made by the Royaline Medicine Co., of New Orleans, La., answers so many useful purposes in the like a doctor in the family. Its timely use saves, not only much suffering and time, but also physicians' bills. Cuts, aches, inflammations, swellings or any other soreness can be quickly alleviated by the application of Royaline Oil, the great antiseptic. Price 25c. a bottle. At your druggist.

5—Everblooming Roses Free—5

Five Choice Hardy Everblooming Rose Bushes. Each of these roses are of a different color and variety and with ordinary care will bloom the first season planted. They are the kind which bloom every month of the growing season, producing great masses of large beautiful flowers, exquisite in form and delicious perfume. Don't miss this grand opportunity to have five of the finest roses grow in your garden this summer.

We will send these Five Choice Hardy Everblooming Rose Bushes to you absolutely free, delivery charges all paid when you send us $1.00 received from giving away FREE 4 packages of 12 beautiful Art Floral post cards with each one year subscription you secure to Home Life magazine at 25 cents a year. Home Life is the best family magazine published for 25 cents a year and contains latest fashions, popular music, instructions in fancy needle work and crocheting, interesting short and serial stories, money-saving cooking department and editorials of unusual importance by men who know, together with many other instructive and interesting departments.

Rose Bushes ready for planting. Guaranteed to reach you in healthy condition.

Description of Roses.

Rhea Reid—This new rose is considered one of the finest of all roses of late introduction, growing vigorously and rapidly and producing long graceful branches. It has no equal for out door planting being perfectly hardy and almost impervious to the attacks of disease or insects. Great masses of large, double flowers of rich velvety red are produced the whole blooming season.

White Maman Cochet—This is a rose for everybody, succeeding under the most unfavorable conditions. It is excellent for open ground culture, growing rapidly and vigorously, quickly forming a shapely bush covered with beautiful, clean cut foliage of a dark green. The blooms of pure snow white are beautiful in form from bud to open flower and unsurpassed in size or quality by any other variety.

Miss Franchese Kruger—A peerless rose in every respect. It is distinct in habit of growth, thriving under very adverse conditions. A fine grower of compact bushy habit, having a wealth of beautiful dark foliage. The flowers when in full bloom are of immense size and perfectly double, unequalled in beauty by any other rose of a deep rich coppery yellow.

Pink Maman Cochet—A rose to excite the envy of everyone. For out door planting this rose stands first as a strong vigorous grower, rapidly producing a large shapely bush, densely covered with deep green foliage. It is extremely hardy and produces such great masses of beautiful flowers as to almost hide the bush. The large superb flowers are perfectly formed, delicately tinted a silvery rose, touched at the center with a golden yellow.

Blumenachmidt—A winning rose, capturing the first prizes wherever exhibited. For general planting, it has no superior, growing vigorously and rapidly, soon forming a healthy compact bush, which blooms steadily through the season. The flowers when in full bloom are of immense size and perfectly double, unequalled in beauty by any other rose.

Extra Special Offer to You.

In addition to the Five Choice Hardy Everblooming Rose Bushes offered above we will also send free Four Hardy Shrubs and Vines: Hydrangea Alba Grandiflora; Spiraea Van Houttei; Albrea; Honeyuckle Haili's Japan, when you send us your club of 4 one year subscriptions to Home Life with 25 cents for each subscription.

A Garden of Roses for You Hardy flowering shrubs—beautiful climbing vines—all ready for planting and delivered free in a healthy growing condition. Have beautiful flowers blooming in your garden all summer with exquisite healthy vines climbing your porch or over the fence. Don't fail to take advantage of this offer. We want everyone who reads Home Life, together with their friends to have these beautiful plants. This is not a seed offer, but gives you free, hardy growing plants ready to put into the ground. Don't delay. Plant early. Get the best results. Most perfect bloom. Sweetest flowers.

Just Send us your name and address and we will mail you four packages of 12 beautiful Art Floral post cards to distribute free to four persons giving you their subscriptions to Home Life at 25 cents a year. Send us $1.00 collected and 5 Choice Hardy Everblooming Rose Bushes and 4 Ready-to-plant Hardy Flowering Shrubs and Beautiful Climbing Vines are yours free, all delivery charges paid.

HOME LIFE, 169 Sawyer Building, CHICAGO, ILL.

INCREASE YOUR CROPS Cultivate Shallow—Twice as Often

All experts agree that the best way to combat destructive boll weevil, etc., is by cultivating shallow and often. This improved Circle-Brace Diverse Cultivator cultivates both sides of row at once or entire distance between rows. Enables you to cultivate twice as often—in same time—with same help. Thoroughly turns and pulverizes earth—tears out weeds—leaves ground mellow and smooth—in perfect condition to retain moisture, preventing ground from baking and cracking.

The Improved Circle-Brace Diverse Cultivator

—by means of circle-brace—adjusts to 5 positions. Simply remove thumb-screw to change to right or left harrow, "A" or "V" shape cultivator or rake. Oil-tempered spring-steel teeth spring over rocks, etc. Adjustable to throw towards row or away. Horse always between rows. At dealers or direct, $5.00; double fender, 75c extra; reversible diamond-point shovels, 65c extra. Prompt delivery; freight prepaid; satisfaction absolutely guaranteed. Interesting Book Free.

THE SOUTHERN PLOW COMPANY
80 Camp Street, Dallas, Texas

At dealers or direct from us $5.00

Freight Prepaid

Prompt ship ment. Write for interesting Free Book of facts anyway. Show what farmers and experiment stations say.

COMBINATION LATH & SHINGLE MACHINE

"It Turns Your Waste Material Into Dollars."

THREE MACHINES IN ONE.

SHORT Log Saw Mill, Lath and Shingle Machine. Does all kinds of sawing. Just the machine for small Saw Mills and Farmers' use.

It's a Big Money Maker.

Write for circulars and particulars.

Manufactured only by COLUMBIAN IRON WORKS, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Methodist Benevolent Association

Ministers and Laymen of Southern Methodist Church. Benefits at Death or Old Age, or Disability. Over $8,000 paid to Widows, Orphans, Disabled. Insurance at cost. If in good health, write for rates and other information.

CARE METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

JAMES A. WILLIAMS was born in Alabama, but he was reared and spent most of his life in Scott County, Miss., in which county he died Nov. 24, 1909, in his 64th year. He joined the Methodist Church in September, 1867. He was twice married. Several children were born to him, one of whom, Rev. J. E. Williams, is a useful member of the Mississippi Conference. During his life he passed through many deep sorrows. He was left an orphan at the age of four years, father and mother both dying the same week; also a brother and sister. He lived to bury both of his wives. He bore his sorrows with Christian fortitude, submitting meekly to the divine will. He was foremost in every movement for the upbuilding of his community. Almost without education himself, he stood for better schools and longer terms. He loved truth and hated falsehood; impure and profane language he could not tolerate. He never forgot that he was a church member and a Christian man. His life commanded the respect and esteem of all who knew him. When the end came his faith in Christ was unshaken. He died as he had lived, a Christian.

W. J. DAWSON.

FRANKLIN NAPOLEON WHITTINGTON was born Dec. 18, 1880, and died Feb. 22, 1910, being thirty years, four months and two days old. He was the son of John and Victoria A. Whittington, who live at Woodland Church, near Gloster. He was married Dec. 23, 1902, to Miss Nina Sullivan, the youngest sister of our brother, Rev. W. M. Sullivan. He died at his home at Dayton on the Y and M. V. railroad. Brother Frank, as we called him, was a consistent member of our church. The last Quarterly Conference of his circuit had made him a steward. I was in his home on my official visit to Dayton last year, and found him loyal to his church and hospitable to the preacher. His home was the stopping place for the preachers who preached in the little school house on the hill at Dayton. Those who knew him best say that he was always good—a good boy—a good young man, a successful man in his business and true to his God, kind and loving in his family. One who nursed him through his last illness, though not a relative, nor even an old acquaintance, told me that he had learned to love Frank like a brother. He was ready to go, and went fearlessly into that beyond, leaning on the Christ. We buried him in the little graveyard at Woodland, a pretty spot, near his parental home. His father and mother, wife and three children survive him. To these our hearts go out, and for them we pray the comforting from above.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

At the home of his son, Mr. J. E. Meek, Rolling Fork, Miss., on Oct. 22, 1909, just as the sun reached its zenith, the spirit of WM. THOMAS MEEK went home to God. He was born in Marshall County, Miss., Apr. 17, 1838, but in early life moved to Tate County, where he lived till a few months before his death. On Aug. 25, 1869, he was married to Miss Mary E. Moore. To this union, which lasted nearly forty years, four children were born, two of which, Mr. J. E. Meek and Mr. T. S. Meek, survive him. His faithful companion was taken May 3, 1909. He then left his home in Coldwater to be under the loving care of his devoted children, but in less than six months, his spirit went to join his wife, and his body was laid beside hers in Brook's Chapel Cemetery, near Coldwater. A good man has gone. His Christian integrity and sterling honesty commended him to all who knew him. In 1856, he professed faith and joined the Methodist Church. While he was not demonstrative, he had deep religious convictions and maintained a high standard of Christian living. He loved his church and enjoyed discussing the doctrines peculiar to its faith. He delighted in the services of the sanctuary and as long as his health would permit, was a regular attendant upon Sunday school and the preaching of the Word. We look forward to a happy meeting beyond the river.

V. C. CURTIS.

MRS. ELIZABETH DEAN McKNIGHT was born June 26, 1843, died February 25, 1910, age 66 years, 7 months and 29 days. She was married to Howard McKnight in 1860. Of this union were born twelve children, six sons and six daughters. One daughter died in childhood, the others survive her. Her husband died in 1886, leaving her with this large family to rear. Nobly did she perform this duty—modest and unassuming, but intense in her labors. Neither did she try to perform her arduous duties without taking her Lord as her counsellor. Sister McKnight professed religion early in life and became a member of the M. E. Church, South. She was in the organization of our Church at Colfax in 1881. She was more than loyal. She felt a deep interest in her Church up to the end of life, and gave liberally of her means to its support. As to her Christian state she was confident. She had the full confidence of her friends and neighbors. Her six sons are manly men. Some of them are Christians, and in answer to their mother's prayers we expect each of them to become valiant soldiers of the cross. Her daughters are lovely Christian women. The influence from this saintly life, alone through her children, bids fair to be immeasurable. Sister McKnight was confined to her bed the last few months of her life. Her every need was supplied. Her children gave her the closest personal attention. But now that she is gone, what have we left? The heritage of a stainless and noble life well spent, and the assurance that she is with her Lord and the loved ones gone before, there to await the dear ones left behind. Yes, she has made it possible for her Savior to say: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; as thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

H. W. LEDBETTER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE BROTHERHOOD.

Brother C. W. Crisler has resigned as secretary of the Brotherhood and I have appointed Brother J. L. Nell, of Lennan, to act until an election can be had.

J. M. WEEMS,

Laurel, Miss., March 15, 1910.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE—APRIL 27-29.

I will thank the pastors of the Columbus District if they will kindly send me the names of delegates to the District Conference at Mayhew who intend to come. Hospitality abounds for this occasion, but meaningless names will trouble our committee. Give us the real people—they are wanted. Sincerely,

A. H. WILLIAMS

Mayhew, Miss., March 15.

FARM SEEDS.

Write Vineyard Farm, Griffin, Ga., for description etc., of Cook's Improved cotton seed, Marlboro corn and Apple oats. These are well known, and recommended by the different state expt. farms, as the best on the market. We plant no other and give no other and have our own machinery to keep them pure. The Government has bought large quantities from us for distribution, which proves the character of our product. Cotton seed $1; oats $1; and corn $2 per bu. f. o. b. Griffin, Ga. Orders filled promptly.

STOPS FALLING HAIR

Ayer's Hair Vigor is composed of sulphur, glycerin, quinin, sodium chlorid, capsicum, sage, alcohol, water, perfume. Ask your doctor about this. Follow his advice. Promptly checks falling hair. Completely destroys dandruff. An elegant dressing.

Does not Color the Hair

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

I. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Riehl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd.,
JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. NEW ORLEANS
D. C. Godfrey Optician.

W. M. BYRNE, Pres. JOHN T. GIBBONS, Vice-Pres. P. E. BURKH, Sec'y.

Capital $200,000.00
Assets 479,860.90

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

No. 303 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.
LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

Grenada College.

Secure our catalogue before deciding where to place your daughter. Superior Home Comforts; Only Two Girls in a Room; Marvelous Health Record; Excellent Fine Arts Department; Strong Lyceum Course; Well-Adapted Library; Personal Attention to Individual Pupils; Superior Student Body as Associates; Carefully Selected Faculty; Strong Course of Study; Rates Reasonable; Constant Christian Influence; Permeating and Dominating College Life.
Apply for rooms at once and thus secure choice of location.

W. L. CLIFTON, A.B., Ph.D., President, Grenada, Miss.

Little Tobacco Plants Say:

"Mr. Farmer:—

Give us a plenty of

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers

They will make us grow big and healthy, and thus increase our yields per acre. These fertilizers are plant food for us, which means bread and meat for you. They will put more money-profits into your pocket.

(Signed) YOUR LITTLE TOBACCO PLANTS."

Ask your fertilizer dealer for a copy of our free 1910 Farmers' Year Book or Almanac, or send us the coupon

SALES OFFICES:

Richmond, Va. Atlanta, Ga.
Norfolk, Va. Savannah, Ga.

Mail us this Coupon

VIRGINIA CAROLINA CHEMICAL COMPANY.
Please send me a copy of your 1910 Farmers' Year Book free of cost.
Name.....
Town.....
State.....

Columbia, S. C.
Durham, N. C.
Winston-Salem, N. C.
Charleston, S. C.
Baltimore, Md.
Columbus, Ga.
Montgomery, Ala.
Memphis, Tenn.
Shreveport, La.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Oxford Dist.—Second Round.

Water Valley, First Ch.	Mar. 27, 28
Holly Springs	Mar. 30
Paris, Ct., at Pine Valley	Apr. 2, 3
Abbeville, at Union Hill	Apr. 9, 10
Oxford	Apr. 10, 11
Red Banks, at Mahon	Apr. 16, 17
Potts Camp, at Winborn	Apr. 23, 24
Grenada Ct., at D'k Hill	Apr. 30, May 1
Coffeeville, at C.	May 7, 8
Holly Spgs. Ct., at Sylvestria	May 14, 15
Waterford, at Asbury	May 21, 22
Charleston, at C.	May 28, 29
Grenada	June 5, 6
Ashland, at Salem	June 11, 12
Lafayette, at Old Liberty	June 17
Toccapola, at Salem	June 18, 19
Randolph, at Spg. Hill	June 21
Dist. Conf. at Abbeville	May 11, 13

J. E. CUNNINGHAM, P. E.

Sardis Dist.—Second Round.

Sardis	Mar. 26, 27
Byhalia, at Emory	Apr. 1
Wall Hill, at Grubb Hill	Apr. 2, 3
Como	Apr. 9, 10
Tyro, at Tyro	Apr. 16, 17
Cockrum, at Ind.	Apr. 23, 24
Coldwater, at Love	April 30, May 1
Hernando, at Horn Lake	May 1, 2
Mt. Pleasant, at Marshall Institute	May 7, 8
Long Town, at McGees Chapel	May 14, 15
Eureka, at Love Joy	May 21, 22
Olive Branch, at Cen. Hill	May 27
Pleasant Hill, at Lewisb'g	May 28, 29
Senatobia	June 4, 5
Arkabutla	June 8
Crenshaw	June 9
Batesville	June 11, 12
Enid	June 17
Courtland	June 18, 19

W. M. YOUNG, P. E.

Winona Dist.—Second Round.

Greenwood	Mar. 27
Belzoni, Friday	Apr. 1
Itta Bena	Apr. 3
Moorehead, 7:30 p. m.	Apr. 3
Kilmichael, at Lodi	Apr. 9, 10
Tom Nolen, at Walthall	Apr. 16, 17
Carrollton, at S. Chpl.	Apr. 23, 24
Winona Ct., at B. Spr.	Apr. 30
Mars Hill, at Mars Hill	May 1, 2
Schlater, Friday	May 6
Webb, at Watson	May 8, 9
Ruleville, at Drew	May 15
Lambert, at Porchman	May 21, 22
Tutwiler, at Glendora	May 28, 29
Minter City, 7:30 p. m.	May 29
Enora, at Maben	June 5
Slate Springs, Tuesday	June 7
North Carrollton, Friday	June 10
Inverness	June 11
Indianola	June 12

E. S. LEWIS, P. E.

Aberdeen Dist.—Second Round.

Okolona ct., at Thompson's Memorial	Mar. 26, 27
Aberdeen	Mar. 27, 28
Palestine, at Ebenezer	Apr. 2, 3
Pontotoc, at P.	Apr. 3, 4
Verona, at Palmetto	Apr. 9, 10
Tupelo	Apr. 10, 11
Montpelier, at Palestine	Apr. 16, 17
Houston	Apr. 17, 18
Okolona ct., No. 2, at Union	Apr. 23, 24
Okolona	Apr. 24, 25
Pittsboro, at Pine Ridge	Apr. 30, May 1
Vardaman and Calhoun City, at C. C.	May 1, 2
Nettleton ct., at Shiloh	May 7, 8
Amory and Nettleton, at A.	May 8, 9
Smithville, at Greenbriar	May 7, 8
Greenwood Springs	May 11
Fulton, at Friendship	May 14, 15
Tremont	June 4, 5
Houlka	June 10
Derma	June 11, 12
Buena Vista	June 18, 19
Pralrie	June 19, 20
Dist. Conf. at Pontotoc	June 21, 24

JAS. H. FELTS, P. E.

Corinth Dist.—Second Round.

Corinth Ct., at Box Chapel	Mch. 26, 27
Kossuth Ct., at K.	Mch. 27, 28
E. Booneville Ct., at Siloam	Mch. 31
Wheeler's Ct., at Lebanon	Apr. 2, 3
Rienzi Ct., at Thrasher	Apr. 9
Guntown, at Saltillo	Apr. 10, 11
Rainey Mis., at Bethel	Apr. 15
Myrtle Ct., at Friendship	Apr. 16
Belden Ct., at Chesterville	Apr. 17, 18

N. Albany Ct., at Ingomar	Apr. 23, 24
N. Albany Sta., at N. A.	Apr. 24, 25
Hatchie Miss., at Paines Ch.	Apr. 30
Jonesboro Ct., at Brownfield	May 4, 2
Dumas Ct., at Jacobs Ch.	May 7, 8
Ripley and B. M., at Ripley	May 8, 9
Dry Run	May 14, 15
Tishomingo Ct.	May 20
Mooreville Ct.	May 21, 22
Marietta Ct.	May 26
Mantachie Ct.	May 28, 29

BEN P. JACO, P. E.

Durant Dist.—Second Round.

Lexington	Apr. 4
Sidon	Apr. 5
Vaiden	Apr. 9, 10
West	Apr. 16, 17
Durant	Apr. 24
Pickens	Apr. 25
Ebenezer	Apr. 30, May 1
Kosciusko Ct.	May 7, 8
Kosciusko Station	May 8, 9
Rural Hill	May 14, 15
Louisville	May 21, 22
Chester	May 28, 29
Ackerman	May 29, 30
Poplar Creek	June 4, 5
Sallis	June 11, 12
McCool	June 18, 19
Black Hawk	June 25, 26

N. G. AUGUSTUS

Greenville Dist.—Second Round.

Greenville	Mar. 13, 14
Arcola & Hollandale, at H.	Mar. 20, 21
Glen Allan, at G. A.	Mar. 27, 28
Lula and Lyon, at Lyon	Apr. 2, 3
Cleveland ct., at Skene	Apr. 9, 10
Cleveland	Apr. 10, 11
Boyle, at Dockery	Apr. 12
Coahoma, at Dubbs	Apr. 16, 17
Jonestown, at J.	Apr. 19
Lake Cormorant, at L. C.	Apr. 21
Clarksdale	Apr. 24, 25
Leland	Apr. 26
Tunica, at Robinsonville	May 1, 2
Rosedale	May 8, 9
Hillhouse, at Hillhouse	May 15, 16
Shaw, at Merigold	May 22, 23
Gunnison, at Kuhn	May 28, 29
Friar's Point	June 5, 6

W. W. WOOLLARD, P. E.

Columbus Dist.—Second Round.

Macon	Mar. 13, 14
West Point	Mar. 20, 21
Crawford, at Soule's Chap.	Mar. 26, 27
Brooksville, at New Bethel	Apr. 3, 4
Shuqualak, at Cooksville	Apr. 10, 11
Sturgis, at Bethel	Apr. 16, 17
Cedar Bluff, at Phoebe	Apr. 22
Mathiston, at Providence	Apr. 23, 24
Mayhew	Apr. 29
Winstonville, at Macedonja	Apr. 30, May 1
Columbus, First Church	May 8
Columbus, Second Church	May 8
Starkville ct., at Steel's C.	May 14, 15
Hebron, at Cochran, Ala.	May 22, 23
Columbus ct.	May 28, 29

The District Conference will be held in Mayhew April 27th.

J. E. THOMAS, P. E.

"I tell you I won't have this room," protested the old lady to the boy in buttons who was conducting her. "I ain't a-goin' to pay my good money for a pigsty with a measly little fold-in' bed in it. If you think that jest because I'm from the country"—Profoundly disgusted, the boy cut her short. "Get in, mum. Get in," he ordered. "This ain't yer room. This is the elevator."—Selected.

Fish Bite like hungry wolves, any time, if you use MAGIC FISH LURE. Best fish bait ever discovered. Write to-day and get a box to help introduce it. Agents wanted. J. F. Gregory, Dept. 4, St. Louis, Mo.

$525 in Prizes For Bible Readers Open to Old and Young

IN ORDER to encourage Bible study, Loffer 1st $25 for best answers to questions on baptism. Send for list (furnished free), get all the help you wish from any source, and if you will enclose 16 cts. in stamps, I will mail you a copy of The Bible Mode of Baptism from which you can learn the answer to every question. 2nd, I offer $500 for the references where guntio appears in the Greek New Testament 16 times; tkko, 152 times, and hno, 139 times, as claimed by Baptist scholars and writers. Consult any Greek scholar, lexicon, or concordance and let me hear when ready. Rev. J. E. Mahaffey, Box 315, Clinton, S. C.

Four Years to Pay for This Piano

UNDER the Werlein Club Plan one hundred people buy one hundred pianos, each agreeing to pay for one piano only. The piano is shipped upon payment of $10. The monthly payment is $6. This is for a $400 piano. Write for particulars—how to save $108 on your purchase.

Sixty-seven years in business

Philip Werlein, Ltd., 605-7-9 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

Weber, Chickering, Mathushek, Behr, Pease, Wegman, Ivers & Bond, Steck, Werlein Pianos and Pianolas, Sheet Music, Victor Talking Machines.

THE BEST MADE Angell's Cough and Whooping Cough Syrup

For Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and Throat Trouble.

Contains no Opium or Morphine.

All Druggists, Price 25 and 50 cents.

DRAUGHON'S PRACTICAL BUSINESS COLLEGE

Endorsed by Bankers and Leading Business Men. POSITIONS GUARANTEED.

Teaches Bookkeeping, Banking, Shorthand, Typewriting, Borroughs' Adding Machine Course, Multigraphing, Penmanship, and all Literary Branches necessary for a thorough business training. Modern equipment and trained teachers, also taught by mail—Catalog FREE. Address, J. E. Richardson, Mgr., Shreveport, La., or Texarkana, Tex.

USE THE L. & A. RAILWAY

EVER ON TIME

Double Daily Passenger Service

Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

To California---$32.00 from New Orleans

One Way Colonist Tickets on Sale

March 1 to April 15, 1910, inclusive, via

Southern Pacific

Through Train Daily. Oil Burning Locomotives. Pullman Tourist Sleepers; Chair Cars and Coaches; Liberal Stopovers.

RATE PER BERTH IN TOURIST SLEEPER, NEW ORLEANS TO SAN FRANCISCO, $5.75.

Ask Your Agent for Information and Literature, or Write

J. H. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt.

NEW ORLEANS.

CONVENIENT WAY

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA, SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL

General Passenger Agent.

Difficult Breathing

"I could not lie on either side, my heart fluttered, and I was so weak I could scarcely walk. Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy did wonders for me. I can sleep, eat, and do more work than I have in ten years."

AGNES LEWIS, Lawrence, Kans.

Short, quick breath—when going up stairs, singing, or when you are angry or excited means that your heart action is weak.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is a safe, sure remedy for these symptoms. It strengthens and builds up the weakened nerves and muscles.

The first bottle will benefit; if not, your druggist will return your money.

ESTABLISHED 1868
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

PLYMYER
CHURCH
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Bowlden
CHURCH & SCHOOL BELLS
Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

WE SHIP ON APPROVAL
without a cent deposit, prepay the freight and allow 10 DAYS FREE TRIAL.
IT ONLY COSTS 1 cent to learn our unheard of prices and marvelous offers on highest grade 1910 model bicycles.
Do not buy a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you write for our large Catalog and learn our wonderful offers on first sample bicycle sent to your town.
RIDERS AGENTS everywhere are making big money exhibiting and selling our bicycles. We are cheaper than any other factory.
TIRES, Coaster-Grubs rear wheels, lamps, repairs and all sundries at half price. Do not wait, write to-day for our special offer. Mead Cycle Co., Dept. M. 74, Chicago.

FITS CURED NO CURE NO PAY—in other words you do not pay our small professional fee until cured and satisfied. German. American Institute, 984 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

TO YOUNG WOMEN

You may be laying up for yourselves much future suffering, by not treating your ailments promptly, (before they have a chance to become chronic), with that well-known female remedy, Wine of Cardui,—about which you have so often heard.

Look ahead, and plan for a healthy, happy life, by preventing female trouble from getting a foothold.

Try if that famous medicine, Cardui, which has helped so many others, will help you.

For young girls just entering into womanhood and young ladies whose life duties have not long begun, Cardui is often of vital importance, giving them strength for daily tasks.

Read what Mrs. Mary Hudson, of Eastman, Miss., says about her young sister: "While staying with me, and going to school, my young sister was in terrible misery. I got her to take a few doses of Cardui and it helped her at once."

"I have taken Cardui myself and believe I would have been under the clay, if it had not been for that wonderful medicine."

"Now I am in better health than in three years."

Try Cardui.

Sunday School

By W. B. Campbell.

LESSON FOR APRIL 3, 1910.

THE POWER OF FAITH.

Matt. ix:18-34.

Golden Text: "All things are possible to him that believeth."—Mark ix, 23.

Jesus was still at the feast at Matthew's house, when some of John the Baptist's disciples came to him, asking why his disciples did not fast, as did John's disciples and also the Pharisees. John being in prison was sufficient reason for his disciples fasting. The Pharisees fasted because it was a part of their outward and formal manner of expressing their piety. The answer made by the Master was applicable to both, that as he was with them there was no cause to fast, but when the time came when he should be taken away then his disciples would fast. Jesus may have alluded to himself as the bridegroom because John had also referred to him as such—John iii:29. The figure of mending an old garment with a piece of new cloth, and the putting of new wine into old bottles, teaches that he who becomes a disciple of Christ will not cling to his old way of living, but so live that their "whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless."

While Jesus was still speaking to John's disciples, there came to him a ruler, bowing down and worshipping Jesus, saying, "My daughter is even now dead, but come and lay thy hand upon her, and she shall live." This was faith, and it came to the ruler just as it may come to anyone; the ruler knew how Jesus had healed the Centurion's servant, there at Capernaum, only a short while before; and also how Simon's mother-in-law was cured of a fever; and of the many other wonderful miracles Jesus did among the sick, lame and blind. We can read of all this and believe too, for "faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." The Spirit will quicken our hearing into a living faith. Jesus saw the ruler's faith and at once arose from the table and followed him. The whole multitude also followed; Mark relates that so many followed that they thronged him, crowding closely behind him in the road. As they were hurrying along there was a woman who joined in the crowd and began to press her way through so as to get near the Master. As she struggled along she was saying to herself: "If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole." This was great faith. She was incurably afflicted, having spent all her living for doctors and medicine. She was also a social outcast in the eye of the Mosaic law; and she must approach "The Great Physician" secretly, hiding herself in the crowd. At last she was close to Jesus; she reached out and touched his coat, and she was well that instant. She intended to get away as secretly as she came, but before she could turn to go she heard Jesus call out, "Who touched my clothes?" The woman stood fearing and trembling, hoping still to elude detection. The disciples answered, "Thou seest how the multitude throng thee, and sayest thou, 'who touched me?'" Jesus was still looking around him to find the one he knew had been blessed. In the meantime, the woman resolved to make confession; so she came and fell at Jesus' feet and told him all the truth. Jesus said to her, "Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole," meaning that it was not the act of touching his clothes, but the faith, the same faith that first urged her to go out from her lonely home, out among the curious, unfeeling crowd, and in secret believing that as Jesus had done so many works of love and kindness, only a touch of his clothes would be enough for one who hardly dared to go abroad, much less ask his mercy in public. What she did was the outcome or fruits of faith. A Christian life with all its duties, attending divine services, actively in church work, liberal contribution to pastor's salary and conference claims, does not add one iota to salvation. Such a life is only the fruit of the tree that was started in growth when the heart said, "I believe, O help thou my unbelief?"

As Jesus and the following multitude resumed their way to the ruler's house, they were met by one coming with a message to the ruler, saying, "Thy daughter is dead, why troublest thou the Master any further?" Jesus heard the message and said to the ruler: "Be not afraid; only believe." Then, by his wonderful power, the multitude was caused to stop, and only Peter and James and John went with him to the ruler's house. As they entered they heard the funeral music and the wailing of the mourners. Jesus said: "Why make ye this ado and weep? The damsel is not dead, but sleepeth." And they all laughed him to scorn.

Where Jesus is there is no death. There was no death as he stood beside the widow's son of Naim. There was no death as he stood at the sepulchre with Mary and Martha and called to Lazarus to "Come forth." The laughing scorners had this yet to learn. Then Jesus, taking the father and mother of the little girl, went into the room where she lay, and going to the side of the bed, he took her by the hand; just as he had taken the hand of Peter's mother-in-law, and she arose and walked about. This was a notable miracle, the prominence of the child's father making it tend to increase his already wide-spread fame. This was answering a father's prayer for his child. A father or a mother's prayer is sure of an answer sometime, in God's time. Loving parents may have long passed away from earth before their prayer's for their children were answered, but they knew of the answer in heaven, their eternal home.

Jesus and his three disciples left the ruler's home and going on their way they were followed by two blind men who called on his mercy in words that were a confession of faith in Jesus as the Messiah. "Thou son of David," they said, "have mercy on us." He had never been so addressed before; so he went to a nearby house and the blind men followed. "Believe ye that I am able to do this," said Jesus. "Yea, Lord," was their ready reply; then in response to their faith was their sight given them, for Jesus touched their eyes, saying, "According to your faith be it unto you." They had faith; their sight was given them, and as they were going away Jesus charged them to tell of it to no man—why? It may have been because his wonderful miracles and his more wonderful teachings were enough to incline this simple-minded people to think more of him than of the love of the Father who sent him.

Jesus' miracles were a union of mercy and power, to show mankind his mission on earth. There was no disease that could not be driven away by his word; yet he taught, that unless the afflicted believed on him, he could do nothing for them. And now, there are none so deep in the mire of sin that, if they come to him in faith, but he will make them spotless and pure, giving them his own righteousness.

One more work of love and mercy for this busy day: As they went out of the house, some brought to him a dumb man, possessed with a devil; the necessary faith in this case was in the kind friends who brought the man. Jesus did not question them, but by the power of his word cast out the devil, and the man spake. Again were the multitude filled with wonder, saying: "It was never so seen in Israel;" but the Pharisees said—well, let us not add what they said; but rather close this lesson with praise to God for giving us such a loving Savior, in whom, if we believe, we have eternal life.

CAPUDINE CURES HEADACHE

There isn't any headache remedy that does the work like Hick's Capudine. For sick or nervous headache, headaches from heat, cold, grip or stomach troubles—it gives immediate relief. Liquid, easy to take. Sold by druggists.

Darsam Bros. Coal Co.

COAL, COKE AND ANTHRACITE,
2217 Calliope Street, New Orleans.
Phone Main 1552, P. O. Box 1406.

VISIT

MINERAL WELLS

For

HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND

WEST TEXAS

For

FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE
DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,
General Passenger Agent.

DALLAS TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a. m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville
THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati
Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Car.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p.m.

FOR

NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Car.
SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW
ON SALE.

ILLINOIS
CENTRAL

WILL SELL TICKETS AT RATE
$32.00

To San Francisco, Los Angeles and other California Points

March 1st - April 15th

To Portland, Seattle, Spokane,
$45.95,

And Other Points in Oregon, Washington, Utah, and Wyoming.
LIBERAL STOPOVERS.

Full Particulars.

Ticket Office, 141 St. Charles
PHONE MAIN 3618

Stop LaGrippe!

Before it Stops You.

Take
JOHNSON'S

Chill and Fever Tonic

Knocks it up every time.

Your money back if it fails.

Get it to-day!

50c at Druggists.

When it Comes, be Prepared!

The SAFE and SAVING WAY of Insuring Church and Pastor's property is with

THE NAT'L MUTUAL CHURCH INSURANCE CO. OF CHICAGO, ILL.
THE METHODIST MUTUAL

Now in successful operation for years. Business at highest point ever attained, and constantly increasing. Protects against FIRE, LIGHTNING and TORNADO. No assessments. For particulars address

HENRY P. MAGILL, Sec'y & Mgr.
184 La Salle St., Chicago.
Mrs. Alice Hargrove Barclay, Agent M.
E. Church, South, South Brook 1116
Louisville, Kentucky.

How to Raise The Money is often the real problem in getting a new organ for Church or Sunday School. Write for an Estey Suggestion.

Address Estey Brattleboro, Vt.

750 BIBLE AND GOSPEL STUDIES

Brief Complete Outlines of Sermons, Talks, Addresses, for Students, Teachers, Preachers. Covering Old and New Testaments. Ready Help for Leading all Meetings. Many Important and Puzzling Questions Answered. All Subjects Covered. Vest Pocket size, 128 pages. Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. Agents Wanted.
Geo. W. Noble, Lakeside Building, Chicago, Ill.

LADIES, If you have superfluous HAIR ON THE FACE

and for new information how to remove it easily and effectively without chemicals or instruments. (only safe way). Correspondence confidential in plain sealed envelope.
Mrs. M. A. Perry, 22 Box 612, Long Beach, Cal.

WE OFFER YOU A POSITION

Want 250 men right away. Most have them and will pay good money - $3.00 to $5.00 a day guaranteed according to class of work. You need no money. Everything done up our capital. You deliver our goods and collect. A big opportunity. Write today for free plans, sample outlines, etc. All free. C. H. CROUNDS, Manager 1427 W. Adams Street, Dept. 688, Chicago, Ill.

Epworth League

LESSON FOR APRIL 3, 1910.

Topic: "The Sabbath Rest and the Weekly Toil."

Scripture References: Luke xlii: 56; Mark ii: 23-28; Luke vi: 6.

The thing about the Sabbath day which gives it its most endearing attraction is what the Scribes and Pharisees had forgot, that it was intended along with so many other gracious things to be a blessing to man. If indeed it did commemorate God's resting at the end of the days of creation, it anticipated one of the greatest needs of life—rest. No institution of God was made for itself, but all with the same beneficent design—the good of human life. The ten commandments, the Bible, the sacraments, in their origin, had in view the highest good of God's creation. If, indeed, God has been jealous of the sanctity of this day, it has not been for the day itself, but for the good things through all time it has brought his children. Therefore, the fact that the Jews had made a burden of the day by holding in with a thousand traditional regulations which made its coming a cross, in place of a blessing, found no sympathy in our Lord's mind.

There have been two extreme views of the Sabbath which seem to me both to have broken its sacredness. The one is the view we have just spoken of, which made it a burden, which would seem to have placed one on such a strain for fear he should in some manner violate its sanctity, as to make him miserable instead of happy. The other is one of extreme looseness, which by throwing the gates wide open and admitting it right to do anything one pleases to do, if allowed to have its way, would totally destroy its sacredness for themselves and everyone else. As Epworth Leaguers, we shall doubtless find that in our own day the tendency is to forget and violate its sacredness, and that we shall have small difficulty with the former extreme. Let us notice some phases of value to us.

In the first place, as a day of rest of body and mind from the wearing labor of six days. If humanity had not needed it God would not have given it. It seems to me that its enjoyment as a day of rest will depend very largely on the fidelity with which we have done our six days' work. The great need, doubtless, to many who rise early to violate its sacred hours, is the need of six days of real work to make them know the delights of a returning Sabbath morning. A proper consideration for their own bodies would take away many unnecessary trips, deliberately planned and begun on the Sabbath day, often because the fare is cheap. Many a man and woman has sold its sanctity for the paltry sum of one dollar. The Galilean women who gathered their spices to anoint his body and then reverently waited the passing of their Sabbath, after the strain and sorrow of those preceding days, needed every moment of those holy hours, to refresh their weary bodies and anxious hearts, with which they had so faithfully followed their Lord.

In the second place, as a day of refreshment to the religious nature—the soul needs rest as well as the body. There is something in the very atmosphere of one of our Sabbaths, where people are in some large measure regarding it, that tends to make men better and holier. I have imagined in the soft, sacred light of one of these days, with a message and influence all its own, that I could by its very air and sunshine tell it from all other days. Whatever destroys this sense of its sacredness to me, violates the day. This is not done by things that must be done, nor by a walk in the fields, alone or with my friends, nor by things of that character, but it is done by dragging into it unnecessary things suggested by selfishness and do-as-you-please-ism.

In the third place, as a day of worship. Read Luke vi: 1-6, to see the habits of our Lord on this day. Nothing will so soon rob the day of its sacred air as taking away or neglecting the church services. Stop the ringing of that bell, and let the throng who usually pass to its service stop, and soon Sunday will be like all other days, one in seven to mark the passage of time to eternity.

In the last place, the Sabbath as a chance to do good. If anything can add to the sacredness of this day it is the seeking out of some object of kindness and doing some good that day. It may be to the widow and children huddled by the dying coals on a winter's Sabbath. It may be some unsaved boy or girl you meant to talk to. It may be a sick one you meant to visit. Do some good and the Sabbath sun going down will leave you with a hallowed joy in your heart that you had not known.

H. B. WATKINS.

FOR FEVERISHNESS AND AGING.

Whether from Malarious conditions, Colds or over-heating, try Hicks' CAPUDINE. It reduces the fever and relieves the aching. It's Liquid—10, 25 and 50 cents at Drug Stores.

It's not so much what a man has that makes him happy as what he doesn't want."

Our aspiration should be not to rise above others, but to raise ourselves above ourselves.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form for grown people and children. 50c.

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also.

COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.

1300-1302

DRYADES STREET.

PHONES—Jackson 1080—1081.

AGENTS

Drop everything else and write to me. G. F. Bible made $10.00 a day. Commence work in your own town. No capital required. I furnish you with a complete working outfit. Build an independent business of your own. No experience necessary. I give you successful methods and selling plans. After establishing a business in your own town additional territory will be assigned. Work suitable and profitable to men and women. Position permanent. In this business you will not earn big money in two hours and then nothing more for a week but will have a profitable regular income of $5.00 to $10.00 a day, every day. Hostlers always make the most money. I want hustlers. Be your own boss backed by a high class long established legitimate business concern. Only one representative wanted in each district. Write to-day. Secure your territory and start at once. Money made the first day.
EDWIN F. BALCH, 16 W. Kinzie St., Chicago, Ill.

GALL STONES or LIVER

Have you Pain or Distress in Pit of Stomach. Pains 1 hour after meals. Right-side pains or Backache? Spelling Indigestion. Sick Headache. Biliousness. Colic. Jaundice. Bile. Constipation. Piles. Sourness. Fullness or pressure over Liver or Stomach? If you have any of these symptoms you need the "SECHO-SOLV-A-STONE" treatment. Write for FREE Booklet—CALL STONE MEDICAL CO., Sole U. S. Agts, Dept. 44 235 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

"Daddy says Crystal Gelatine is great for kids!"

Makes a perfect dessert for the children. At parties and lawn fetes Crystal jellies are a great favorite with the little folks. They could eat nothing purer or more healthful.

Crystal Gelatine is very economical, one package making two full quarts. Tasteless and odorless—assimilates perfectly with milk or cream. You don't know how tender a jelly can be until you try Crystal Gelatine.

Ask your grocer. If he does not keep it, send us his name and we will send you a free sample package.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.

121A Beverly St.
BOSTON, MASS.

HOME BAKED FOOD,
fresh, good, wholesome, economical. Readily made with

Royal

Baking Powder

No Alum
No Lime

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Natchez Dist.—Second Round.

Woodville Ct., at Dawson's	Apr. 2, 3
Woodville Station	p. m. Apr. 3
Natchez, Pearl St.	Apr. 8, 10
Natchez, Jefferson St.	Apr. 10, 11
Washington, at W.	Apr. 9
Meadville, at M.	Apr. 16
Fayette	Apr. 17, 18
Hamburg, at McNair	Apr. 23, 24
Gloster, at Woodland	Apr. 30, 1
Liberty, at Gladding	May 7, 8
Adams, at A.	May 14, 15
Wilkinson, at	May 21, 22
Centerville	May 28, 29
Nebo, at Oak Grove	June 4, 5
Barlow, at	June 11, 12
Bayou Pierre, at	June 13
Scotland, at	June 18, 19
Homochitto, at Rosetta	June 25, 26
The District Conference will begin at Meadville, Tuesday, April 12, 4 p. m.
H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, P. E. Gloster, Miss.

Jackson Dist.—Second Round.

Jackson Ct., at Flag Ch.	Apr. 2, 3
Jackson, Rankin Ct., 7:30 p. m.	Apr. 3, 4
Thomasville, at Mt. Carmel	Apr. 9, 10
Brandon, 7:30 p. m.	Apr. 10, 11
Madison, at Pocahontas	Apr. 16, 17
Camden, at Soule Chapel	Apr. 23, 24
Florence, at Ritchland	Apr. 30, May 1
Sharon, at Lone Pine	May 7, 8
Canton, 7:30 p. m.	May 8
Jackson, First Ch.	May 15
Jackson, Capitol St.	May 22
Mendenhall, at Braxton	May 28, 29
Eden, at Thornton	June 1
Lintonia, at Crymes Ch.	June 4, 5
Yazoo City, at 8 p. m.	June 5
Flora, at Bentonia	June 11, 12
Deasonville, at Fletcher's Chapel	June 17
Benton, at Zeiglerville	June 18, 19
Fannin, at Goshen Spgs.	June 22
Harrisville, at Rexford	June 25, 26
The District Conference will begin with a sermon, at Canton, on Tuesday, April 25, at 7:30 p. m.
J. R. JONES, P. E.

Seashore Dist.—Second Round.

Ocean Spgs., at Oak Street	Apr. 2, 3
McHenry-Wiggins, at W.	Apr. 6
Brooklyn and Bond, at Bond	Apr. 9, 10
Mississippi City	Apr. 13
Bay St. Louis	Apr. 16, 17
Gulfport, 29th Street	Apr. 20
Logtown	Apr. 23, 24
Mentorum, at Alexander Memorial, 11 a. m.	Apr. 27
Columbia	Apr. 30, May 1
Oakvale, at Hathorn	May 2
Hub, at Paine's Chapel	May 3
Long Beach	May 7, 8

Coalville, at Cedar Lake	May 25
Wolf River Mission, at Beau- lah, 10 a. m.	May 27
Biloxi	May 28, 29
Gulfport, 25th Avenue	June 1
Lumberton	June 4, 5
Poplarville	June 6
Carriere and McNeill, at Mc- Neill	June 7
Americus, 11 a. m.	June 10
Escatawpa, 11 a. m.	June 11
Moss Point	June 11, 12
Pascagoula	June 12, 13
Vancleave	June 15
W. B. JONES, P. E.

Brookhaven Dist.—Second Round.

Summit, at Summit	Mar. 30
Magnolia	Apr. 2, 3
McComb, Centenary	Apr. 3, 4
McComb and Fernwood, at F.	Apr. 9, 10
North Wesson, at Matthews	Apr. 16, 17
Wesson	Apr. 17, 18
Osyka, at Johnson Station	Apr. 23, 24
Topisaw, at Sartins	Apr. 30, May 1
Brookhaven	May 8
Gallman, at Mt. Pleasant	May 14, 15
Crystal Springs	May 15, 16
Silver Creek, at N. Hebron	May 21, 22
Hazlehurst	May 29, 30
Monticello	June 4, 5
Prentiss	June 11
Boguechitto and Norfield, at Norfield	June 12, 13
Pearlhaven, Hawkin Chap.	June 18, 19
Tylertown, at China Gr.	June 25
Buford	June 26
J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

Meridian Dist.—Second Round.

Daleville, at Linwood	Apr. 2, 3
Matherville, at Hiwannee	Apr. 9, 10
Scooba, at Blair's Chap.	Apr. 16, 17
East Clark, at Salem	Apr. 23, 24
Waynesboro	Apr. 27
Shubuta and Quitman, at Quitman	May 1, 2
Wayne Mission, at Big R.	May 7, 8
Buckatunna, at State Line	May 15, 16
North Kemper, at Hope H.	May 21, 22
Meridian, East End	May 25
Meridian, South Side and Poplar Springs, at Pop- lar Springs	May 26
Enterprise and Stonewall, at Stonewall	May 28, 29
Porterville, at Union	June 4, 5
Meridian, Central	June 7
Meridian, 5th Street	June 8
DeKalb, at Pleasant Ridge	June 11, 12
Meridian, 7th Avenue	June 15
Vimville, at Why Not	June 18, 19
W. H. LEWIS, P. E.
District Conference, at Fifth Street, Meridian, May 30 to June 3.
W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

Newton Dist.—Second Round.

Raleigh, at Trinity	Mar. 26, 27
Staffo, at	Apr. 2, 3
Bay Springs, at Stringers	Apr. 9, 10
Laurel, First Church	Apr. 16, 17
Laurel, Sixth Street	Apr. 16, 17
Laurel, Kingston	Apr. 16, 17
Morton, at Zion Grove	Apr. 21
Hillsboro, at Prairie Hill	Apr. 22
Forest, at Lena	Apr. 23, 24
Indian Mission, at Phillips	Apr. 29
Edinburg, at	Apr. 30, 1
Carthage, at Singleton	May 7, 8
Montrose	May 11
Rose Hill, at Pleas Grove	May 14, 15
Newton, Wed	May 18
Hickory, at Garlandville	May 21, 22
Trenton, at New Prospect	May 27
Shiloh, at Johns	May 28, 29
Chunky, at Mehan, Wed	June 1
Homewood, at High Hill	June 4, 5
Decatur, at Decatur	June 10
Neshoba, at Mars Hill	June 11, 12
Philadelphia, at P.	June 12, 13
T. J. O'NEIL, P. E.
Newton, Miss.

Vicksburg Dist.—Second Round.

Port Gibson, at P. G.	Mar. 28
Utica, at Bear Cr.	Apr. 9, 10
Washington St., at V'burg	Apr. 15
Belton, at Raymond	Apr. 16, 17
Mayersville, at M.	Apr. 23, 24
Rolling Fork, at Grace	Apr. 29
Angulla, at Bethel	May 1
Rocky Spgs., at Cayuga	May 7, 8
Silver City, at Holly Bluff	May 12, 13
Satartia, at Wesley Chpl	May 14, 15
Harriston, at Martin	May 21, 22
Oak Ridge, at Red Bone	May 28, 29
Hermanville, at Pisgah	May 31
Edwards, at Clinton	June 3
Crawford St.	June 5
District Conference at Marysville June 7, 11. Opens on 7th, at 11 a. m.
G. H. GALLOWAY, P. E.

We must pray to God to comfort all the sick and sorrowful, and then he will teach us how we may comfort them also

DR. KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER

Cures Disease by Removing the Cause.

If you want a stomach remedy, it shows its good effects from the first dose.

It gives relish for food and enables you to perfectly digest all the appetite calls for.

If you are suffering from low vitality and need a tonic to build up and improve your health, the Germetuer is an ideal remedy. It makes an agreeable and refreshing drink and you become fond of its use. It is popular with women and children and soon becomes a great favorite in the home where it is used.

Its remedial effects are immediate and permanent, and it may be given with good results in any case and should be kept in every home.

Price $1.00; 6 bottles for $5.00

Sold by all Druggists, or sent prepaid by LYLLEBECK DRUG CO., of Memphis, Tenn.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT'S OWN ACCOUNT OF HIS AFRICAN TRIP

NOW APPEARING IN SCRIBNER'S

Most popular magazine contribution for years, and of great interest to a large number of new readers. 100,000 subscription orders already placed. HERE IS A GREAT OPPORTUNITY FOR SUBSCRIPTION AGENTS. Liberal cash commissions and many extra prizes are offered those who can devote even a little time to soliciting subscriptions. REPRESENTATIVES WANTED IN EVERY TOWN IN AMERICA. For particulars, address at once

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE,

Desk 24-155 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

PARALYSIS

Locomotor Ataxia Conquered at Last Chase's Blood & Nerve Tablets does it. Write for Free Advice Free. Dr. CHASE, 224 North 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE JACKSON SANATORIUM
OPPOSITE WEST SIDE OF GOVERNOR'S MANSION

Chris Herbert, M. D.,

General Practice and Obstetrics.

O. M. Turner, M. D.,

Surgery and General Practice.

N. J. Milstead, M. D.,

General Practice and Obstetrics.

E. G. Galloway, M. D.,

Physician and General Surgery.

W. W. Smithson, M. D.,

General Practice and Consultation.

MISS ROSE KEATING, Graduate Nurse

MISS FANNY FERGUSON, Graduate Nurse

JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI.

Julius Crisler, M. D.,

Surgery and Gynecology.

H. G. Harrison, M. D.,

General Practice and Consultation.

W. E. Britt, M. D.,

Genito-Urinary and Rectal Diseases.

N. Stewart, M. D.,

Mental and Nervous Diseases.

Superintendent.

Asst. Superintendent.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, APRIL 7, 1910.

C. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

VOL. 57—No. 14.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2826.

Editorial.

"Live not without God! however low or high.
Every house should have a window to the sky!"

Encourage your pastor. If you enjoy his sermon, tell him so. If you know of any good that is being accomplished, inform him of it. There is a mighty power in sincere praise, and no one is so strong that he does not need expressions of sympathy and appreciation.

One must be in order to do. Only he who knows is fit to impart knowledge. Only a true man can lead others into the way of truth. None but incarnated goodness can influence others to become good. He who would uplift his fellowmen must himself first climb above the base and low.

A man infatuated with himself presents a sorry spectacle. Egotism is out of place anywhere, but it is especially so in the ministry. The pulpit is not a stage for self-exhibition; not a theater for the display and parade of peacock feathers. A profound humility should ever characterize the ambassador of Him who inspired his foremost apostle to write to the Church at Philippi. In lowliness of mind, let each esteem others better than themselves.

Some churches are little else than social clubs. They stand for nothing, and are utterly destitute of spiritual power. The preaching in them is naught but pitiable moralizing. It is needless to say that they have no real hold upon the people. The true drawing power of Christianity must ever be the uplifted Christ. His divinest ministry is not to supply the present needs of the perishable body, but the deep needs of the deathless soul. It is well to do a humanitarian work, but it is a far loftier achievement to be instrumental in bringing the Holy Ghost into the hearts of men. Let us not in this day of multiplied activities forget that the true mission of the Church is to reach, save, and build up the spiritual man. No matter what else we do, if we stop short of this, we fail in the task appointed for us by the Master.

It is a great mistake for us to imagine that we have no opportunity for noble service. Our age is not more commonplace than the ages of the past. The people about our doors are not inferior to those among whom Jesus moved and wrought. The counter-parts of the Samaritan woman and blind Bartimeus may be found in almost any village. The possibilities of depraved human nature under the transforming influence of divine grace are transcendently sublime. In the development of a degraded sinner into a perfected saint, evolution does its noblest work and finds its lofty culmination. We need to-day not only faith in God, but also faith in man. It is not opportunities for the display of heroism that we lack, but the spirit of heroes. Never were the doors to splendid usefulness wider open than now. What we want is Spirit-opened eyes to see them, and consecrated hearts to enter them.

DRIFTING FROM THE LANDMARKS.

That there is a tendency on the part of many of our ministers to abandon the time-honored standards of Methodism, is painfully apparent. Instead of being held in high esteem, as in the years ago, Fletcher's Appeal is now charged with containing much that is untrue. His claim that physical evil is a result of moral evil, is openly assailed, and his great argument for depravity, formerly considered conclusive, is pronounced weak and at many points erroneous. Nor have Wesley, Clarke, and Watson fared much better. Their plain teaching that more or less carnality remains after regeneration, is by many vigorously repudiated, due no doubt to the notion that such a view is necessary to get rid of the "second-blessing" doctrine. And one of the latest fads, which seems to be getting popular in some sections of the Church, is that infants are born not only in a justified, but also in a regenerate state. This teaching conflicts irreconcilably with the most eminent authorities of Methodism. It clashes with the Seventh Article of our Faith, in that it affirms that no one is in his moral being affected by depravity until, following the example of Adam, he personally transgresses the divine law; whereas that Article declares that every man's nature is corrupt by inheritance, so that naturally he is inclined to evil.

It is not now our purpose to undertake a discussion of these controverted doctrines. We merely wish to sound a note of warning against this unfortunate drift from the proclaimed standards of the Church. We think Methodist preachers should be cautious in forsaking the teachings of the fathers, which have been so signally blessed of God. We do not advocate a slavish adherence to the past, but we do believe that the illustrious founder of Methodism and his learned coadjutors knew a thing or two about theology. We have among us swaggering politicians who talk as if it would be an easy task to write a better Constitution for the nation than that of Washington and Jefferson, but we have never been gullible enough to believe that they could do it. Nor do we think that the connection abounds in men capable of giving us a better statement of the Christian faith than that which has come from the masterful hand of Wesley. It strikes us that a little more modesty might not be unbecoming to some of the theological reformers and would-be creed-makers of our time. What the giants of Christendom have built, piling stone upon stone through the long lapse of centuries, let not novices and pygmies presume to tear down and reconstruct in a day.

There are but few original thinkers in science or philosophy. Nor are they more plentiful in the realm of theology. Calvin and Wesley dead are pointed upon and demolished by many in the arena of disputation, but were they living, we doubt not that one flash of the keen sword of their logic would put most of their critics to ignominious flight.

We urge our young ministers to cultivate respect and reverence for men of eminence and learning. In most cases we are wise to become their followers. Scarcely one in ten thousand is qualified to become an explorer in the tangled wilderness of religious speculation. The vast majority of us would do well to keep in the beaten paths marked out by the masters.

THE RIGHT USE OF TIME.

Very few properly appreciate the value of time. It is more precious than gold or diamonds. Swiftly the fleeting hours pass, and they never come back. No entreaty, nor all the wealth of the world, can make them pause in their flight, or return when once they are gone. Time is opportunity. The use that we make of it will determine what we are to be, both in the present and future life. Hence the importance of making the most of each successive day. Not one single moment should be misapplied. The youth who has learned the preciousness of the passing hours has already surmounted the chief obstacle to an education. With mere fragments of time, one who is in earnest can accomplish wonders in the way of furnishing his intellect. And an hour a day devoted to meditation, prayer, and the reading of God's Word, would marvelously enrich the spiritual life of the average Christian.

Time misused inflicts a clinging, irremediable curse. Nothing can undo the ill effects of a misspent youth. Not even the forgiving love of Christ can obliterate the far-reaching influence of a wasted life. And not only for our own sake, but also for the sake of others, we need to use our time wisely and faithfully. People all about us are going down beneath the black waves of sin. Some who might be saved to-day may be beyond reach to-morrow. The brother whose burden we might at present help to lighten may, far sooner than we think, gaze upon us with reproachful face from the narrow coffin. The world never saw a more indefatigable toiler than the Man of Galilee. And as his disciples we should systematize our work, and never be unemployed, and never triflingly employed. We should, to be sure, have our diversions, but only that they may refresh us and better qualify us for the performance of duty. When one seeks pleasure other than as a means to this higher end, he defeats his mission and degrades himself. To wear one's self out for God and humanity, is the noblest thing that any human being can do.

The American navy, which is now said to rank next to that of Great Britain, is reported to have only twenty-four chaplains in the service. This number is painfully inadequate, and ought to be increased at the earliest day possible. Some of the Church papers are suggesting that the General Conference should speak out strongly on this subject.

Dr. Alexander McLaren, the distinguished Baptist preacher of Manchester, England, celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday on February 11. His sermons have been published and widely read on both sides of the ocean, and as a forceful and impressive expositor of the Scriptures he has had few equals in the modern Christian Church. He is not infrequently spoken of as the Shakespeare of the pulpit.

Christian Advocate.

Published for the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DIRECTIONS.

Correspondents will please direct all communications intended for the Editor to 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Communications intended for the Business Department should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Write with ink, and only on one side of the paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after two weeks, notify us, and we will make it right. Papers will be continued unless subscribers order otherwise.

THE MASTER'S PRESENCE.

By Rev. Walter G. Harbin.

The light of heav'n is in my soul,
There's glory all around;
The blood has cleansed and made me whole,
For I the Lord have found.

When in the jeweled morn I wake,
He's there, just at my side,
My feeble hand in His to take,
My wandering steps to guide.

When sultry noon comes 'round again,
He's near me in the throng;
I feel Him midst the strife of men—
My heart breaks into song.

When purple evening climbs the East,
And all the West is gold,
Ah! then it is I know Him best—
That joy can not be told.

In grief or pleasure, gain or loss,
He's with me all the way;
For me He lifts the crushing cross,
Makes bright my brightest day.

And when, all trembling on the strand,
I hear death's breakers' roar,
I know His tender, mighty hand
Will bring me safely o'er.

PROMOTERS OF CIVILIZATION IN THE UNITED STATES.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman.

The above caption was suggested as a result of some recent reading these winter nights. The story is told of two travelers into the new State of Oklahoma, which, from its marvelous growth and development, might have been well named Minerva.

One observed, "What great developers and civilizers are railroads!"

A man with high cheek bones, raven hair and glistening black eyes—one of the tamed children of the forest—hearing the remark, added, "And the missionary."

This was laconic, but Caesar's "Veni, vidi, vici," or Captain Perry's "We have met the enemy and they are ours," told not of greater conquests.

In the Saturday Evening Post there has just been concluded one of those stories so full of truth and so real in its descriptions, that every Methodist preacher who has read it doubtless fancied himself as having been under review; and in part, at least, the subject of the serial. We are glad to know that "A Circuit Rider's Wife" is to assume book form, that it may be preserved for the coming generations. While the Rev. William Thompson is an idealized circuit rider, there is such close approach to the real, every-day life of the pastor that one is ready to say all along: "Surely, this is the preacher himself."

After many graphic descriptions and pictures, recognized by the most casual, the author concludes as follows: "Now I have finished this poor drawing of the circuit rider's character. I have often wondered why the monument builders have never thought to raise a statue to the Methodist circuit rider. The D. A. R.'s and the other daughters of this and that raise monuments to men who were only brave, but no one has thought yet to erect a statue to the memory of the Methodist circuit riders, who are not less brave, but who have doubtless broken some heaven records in simple goodness and self-sacrifice."

At my right hand lies a book written by one of our own, telling of the labors of the early itinerant in the life of the greatest leader of his day on the American continent: how in his annual circuit from New England to Georgia and far over into the frontiers in the Kentucky country he led the band of faithful co-laborers as they advanced with the restless tide of migration and preached the gospel to those in the "regions beyond." In his little volume, "Francis Asbury, a Biographical Study," Dr. DuBose has made a contribution to the literature of the day of greatest value, and which should be, at least, in the library of every Methodist minister. At twice its price, it would be cheap in its place on the preacher's shelf.

But it is neither my province nor my purpose to review this production, yet, as it is germane to my purpose, I shall close with an extract from its concluding paragraph: "The circuit of his (Asbury's) power and influence is to the ends of our history—and the days that shall witness to him are yet many in the centuries to be."

Now, in these last and latest days comes the statement from Mr. Rockefeller that he would expend many of his accumulated millions "To promote the well-being and advance the civilization of the peoples of the United States and its territories," etc. We could but wonder if this great financier, this man who would now turn aside from his money-making to money-spending, "in the interest of the civilization of these United States and her territories," has ever taken time to read of these self-sacrificing men of God to whom has been ascribed the first place in the work of the past, and from whose successors of like spirit must yet come the only civilization that is worthy of the name. At a great Baptist convention, on one occasion, this writer heard a member from the Empire State of Texas, while trying to stir up his brethren to nobler things, say, "Why, if we don't wake up the Methodists will take the land. Not an engine makes its first trip over a newly-completed road but that has a Methodist preacher on the cow catcher." Truly, might it be a source of wonder that none of the D. A. R.'s or other daughters have thought to erect a monument to these, our nation's greatest heroes. We read of "foundation" funds for various and sundry purposes, pensions for men from Federal and State governments, and from great corporations, and yet who has thought, out of his vast accumulations, to endow somehow, and provide in some way, for these men (not only Methodist, but others equally faithful and true), that they might spend the evening-time of their lives in comfort? Verily, it yet remains for some one to leave his name to posterity in this noblest of "foundations."

THE REIGN OF LAW.

By Rev. W. S. Harrison.

Far back in the days of youthful vigor, I read a book with the above title by the Duke of Argyll. The book made a profound impression on thinking people. Simultaneously the investigations of Darwin, Agassiz, Herbert Spencer, and others of like or less caliber, well-nigh revolutionized the world's thinking. I confess to the influence on my own mind.

The great concern with me was the conflict between the reasonable conclusions of the thinkers and what I understood to be the definitions of the miracles recorded in the Bible. Now, what are the facts? The miracles of the Bible were performed by some divinely-inspired person as an attestation of his authority or the proof of his messages. These miracles could not be accounted for by the action of any laws of nature; but were in seeming conflict with these laws. This is from the human viewpoint; from God's view-point, as I believe, there can be no miracle. Thus, the miracle depends on the point of view.

But we must conclude that every miracle was performed by law, because it is inconceivable that God should work without law, or method. The miracle does not depend on the violation or the suspension of any of the laws of nature; but on the action of the supreme force doing things in spite of their continued action. The book lying here on the desk is held there by the law of gravitation. I pick up the book. The law which held it down continues the same. If the book were taken up by supernatural power, that would be a miracle. In either case, no law of nature is violated.

In all the miracles recorded in the Bible we see the action of the supreme power doing things which could not be done by ordinary process. Not by suspending these ordinary processes, but by doing things against the continued exertion of them. Whatever we accomplish in this life is done in this very way. From some point of view all our actions might be considered miracles. The greatest miracle any of us have to perform is to overcome the law of inertia, sometimes called laziness. A good many have never yet quite completed that miracle.

One of the most noted miracles recorded in the Book was that of holding back the waters of the Jordan at floodtide, while the Israelites, a nation in transit, passed over the drained bed of the river. While the flow of the river was held back by the invisible dam, the action of the water was precisely what it would have been had the dam been of stone or concrete. The water rose rapidly above the dam, backed far up the river, and overflowed all the contiguous lowlands. The law of gravitation which would have caused the waters to flow on to the sea was no more interfered with than would have been the case in any stream where obstructions are thrown in the way. By what law the water was held back, we are unable to understand. Therein is the miracle. From God's viewpoint there was no miracle.

By what laws of growth the meager leaves and fishes were made to feed the great multitudes, we are not able to see; therefore, for the present this must be to us a miracle. Perhaps in the great hereafter we may gain a vantage ground from which we can see the regularity of that which now seems irregular.

So, of all the miracles, there is no evidence that the laws of nature were anywhere broken, suspended, or their force in any way abrogated. These laws are inherent. They are the attributes or inherence of things. To eliminate them would be the destruction of matter itself.

The sons of God, who shouted for joy when they saw the world in the process of making, may or may not, have seen a miracle. But I am firm in the belief that the Supreme Intelligence saw none then or at any time. But instead, that Intelligence beholds the harmonious and universal reign of law embracing all things, material and spiritual, in all time and all space, and accomplishing all developments, all creations, all decay. These laws, the inherences in all things, are the perfect implements by which his sovereign will is wrought and his eternal purposes are brought to pass.

What then becomes of the freedom of the will? Never get uneasy about that. The first law of mind is its own freedom.

Thou First great Cause least understood,
Who all my sense confined,
To know but this, that Thou art good,
And that myself am blind.

Yet gave me in this dark estate,
To see the good from ill,
And binding nature fast in fate,
Left free the human will."

If nature is thus bound fast in fate, why should Elijah, or why should we, pray for rain? The constancy of the laws of nature is no discouragement to prayer. The rain that came in answer to Elijah's prayer was as natural, was as much controlled by the forces of nature, as any rain that ever came up from the sea to bless the land. These forces acted in obedience to another law—the law of prayer, the law of faith. These laws, material and spiritual, are not in conflict, but in harmony. All alike have vital connection with the great Source of Power.

If we lived in a world of chance we might, indeed, fear that prayer might fail. But it is as much a law of our nature to pray as it is of our planet to attract. The one will no more fail than the other. Of course, the prayer to be effectual must be real. It is also a law of God to give his praying children what is best for them, not always that for which they pray.

But there is clearly this difference between the man and the planet. The planet, dull matter that it is, always obeys the inherent law. The man has the fearful right of choice. The first law of mind is its freedom. All other laws must be in accord with this. Therefore, the man may be in rebellion. He may assume to be a law unto himself. 'Tis his right, and God so far respects this right as to mete to him the exact consequences. This also is law. Thus, no man escapes the all-pervading domain of law. In the providence of the one universal God, the universal weight of law, alike in the material and in the spiritual realms, is harmonious and altogether complete.

Starkville, Miss.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By H. P. Lewis, Sr.

VII.

The year 1858 was one of great interest and spiritual help and comfort to me. My father's home was called "The Preachers' Den." Preachers of all denominations known in our county, found a welcome shelter under my father's roof. I learned to love ministers of the gospel when I was a boy. I knew how it was in the home where I was brought up; but how would it be with me, an unlettered youth, away from home and among strangers? Well, the matter did not give me much unnecessary concern. I was a preacher, in a sense, and I felt pretty sure he, in whom I put my trust, would be with and take care of me.

I made at times the same mistake so many young preachers have made. At times, I gave unnecessary offense. One young man (poor fellow, he was afterwards lost in the war), got very angry because of some, perhaps, unguarded expression I made, and threatened to "knock the devil" out of me. Really, I did not know the devil was in me. I did not want him there. Yet, I often felt that he was near me. The threat, however, was never executed. I reported this threat to a fellow-preacher. His reply was: "There is a man in my neighborhood who swore he would eat the devil. Now, if we can get the two together, may be we can get rid of the devil; by getting one to knock him out, and the other to eat him." But it was never done. The devil is still here. We see and hear of his dirty work on every side. He is in the halls of congress; in the legislative halls; often in the house of God, and sometimes in the pulpit, I fear. St. James says: "Resist the devil and he will flee from you." Then he adds: "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you."

No, no! The devil is not dead. A superannuated member of our Conference said to me some years ago: "Brother Lewis, the devil is not dead. He may be sulking, but he is not dead. You give his old tail a twist, and yon will hear him howl." He then said: "Sister A. and Sister B. did not educate their daughters in music just to see them sit back, while some one else presided at the organ." The devil and my old self have given me more trouble during the 52 years of my ministry than all the world besides.

Among the many good people I found, and with whom I spent many pleasant hours, were Rev. W. G. Evans, a local elder, and Rev. A. Scarborough, a local preacher. We three held a meeting at Coleville, which resulted in over sixty conversions; one of the converts is now a local preacher. Judge Tom Evans, of Gulfport, is a son of W. G. Evans. Local preachers were helpful to young preachers in those days.

I could not preach much. I knew that. But I had a good voice, which some people said was clear, sweet and musical, and I could sing. I knew many songs that were new to the people of my charge.

There were but few places where a preacher could have a room to himself for study, etc. Consequently, I did most of my reading and meditation while riding along, going from one appointment to another. On one occasion, while on one of my long rides, I grew tired of reading, put my book away and began to pray and meditate. So far as I know, I was eight or ten miles from any human habitation. I thought of the goodness of God in the gift of his Son for the redemption of man. I thought of the many, many people that were without God, on their way to ruin. I thought of myself as one of Christ's messengers, whose duty it was to call sinners to repentance and point them to Christ. There I was, with all of Harrison County, save a few coast towns, and a large part of Perry and a part of Marion county as my parish. I began to pray for help and strength, that I might do the work of a faithful preacher, and come out right in the end. While I was thus occupied, it seemed to me that the heavens were opened, and I received such a baptism of the Holy Ghost as I had never experienced before. How O how my heart yearned over dying men! How I wanted to tell everybody about Jesus and his love! What was it? A reassurance of God's promise to be with me always? A new commission? Well, it matters not. God was with me and I was happy, oh, so happy for many days. After that, I could preach better.

Let me urge my young brethren to get the baptism of the Holy Ghost, yea, of fire. Get everything impure and unclean burnt out of you. Live for God and his cause.

Well, I moved joyfully along, and sang with sometimes telling effect around my entire circuit the following hymn:

Joyfully, joyfully, onward I move,
Bound for the land of bright spirits above.
Angelic choristers sing as I come,
Joyfully, joyfully haste to thy home.

Soon with my pilgrimage ended below,
Home to that land of delight will I go.
Pilgrim and stranger no more shall I roam—
Joyfully, joyfully resting at home.

Friends, fondly cherished, have passed on before,
Waiting, they watch me approaching that shore.
Singing to cheer me through earth's chilling gloom,
Joyfully, joyfully haste to thy home.

Sounds of sweet melody fell on my ear—
Harps of the blessed, your voices I hear—
Brings with the harmony, heaven's high dame,
Joyfully, joyfully, will I go home.

Death, with thy weapons of war lay me low,
Strike, king of terrors, I fear not thy blow.
Jesus has broken the bars of the tomb,
Joyfully, joyfully, safely at home.

Glory to God! Hallelujah to the Lamb!

AMERICA'S ANSWER TO HER WORLD-OPPORTUNITY.

By J. Campbell White, General Secretary, Laymen's Missionary Movement.

The most important thing in American history this year is the changing conviction of the nation concerning its religious obligations to mankind. In this process, the very character of American Christianity is being radically changed. When a man or a nation becomes conscious of world-relationships and responsibilities, a new life has begun.

From Maine to California, at seventy-five main conventions and thousands of related secondary meetings, American Christian men of all churches have been rising up to endorse a comprehensive and adequate plan for making Christ known to the whole world in our generation. The men of every State in the union have expressed themselves on this issue with a unanimity and depth of conviction that could never be called forth apart from a tremendous cause, and the mighty working of the Spirit of God. There has not been a note of failure in the entire National Missionary Campaign. With scarcely a single exception, the seventy-five main conventions have brought together the largest and strongest assemblies of Christian men ever gathered for any purpose in these cities. The addition of some millions of dollars annually to the missionary treasures of the churches will not be the only or chief result. This is but one evidence of altered life-purposes on the part of multitudes of men.

The National Congress, May 3-6.

With only another month intervening until the National Missionary Congress meets in Chicago (May 3-6), it is most important that a great volume of prayer be poured out continuously for overwhelming blessing upon that gathering. Without doubt it will be the most representative and potential convention ever assembled on this continent. The forty-five hundred available seats in the Auditorium have been allotted to the evangelical churches of the United States in proportion to their membership and missionary contributions, thus guaranteeing a proportionate representation from every church and from every part of the nation. It will be the privilege of a lifetime to be a member of this Congress. All desiring to attend should apply first to the Secretary of their own Foreign Missionary Board. In case the seats allotted to that church have all been taken, application may be made to F. J. Michel, Executive Secretary of the Congress, at 108 LaSalle St., Chicago, in case any church fails to use all the seats allotted to it. Applications should be sent in at the earliest possible moment. Tickets of admission will be transferable, in case delegates are unavoidably hindered from attending.

Special railway rates of one fare and one-half have been granted from all parts of the country.

A National Missionary Policy.

Not only will the leading missionary speakers of North America be heard at the Congress, but more important than that, in many respects, will be the framing up and adoption of a worthy National Missionary Policy. It is already clear that the churches of North America are responsible for reaching about sixty per cent. of the non-Christian world. The National Missionary Policy adopted at this Congress should mark a new era in the history of Christianity.

The Association Quartet, which sang with such acceptance at the Canadian National Missionary Congress, and at the Student-Volunteer Convention, will sing at each session of the Congress. The concluding feature of the Congress program will be the "Hallelujah Chorus" rendered by the Apollo Club of Chicago.

Prayer for the Congress.

In view of the vast issues involved, will not pastors and Christian people everywhere make this Congress an object of habitual prayer during the next few weeks, that the will of God for the Church of our day may be both clearly understood and completely obeyed? A conquering Christianity abroad, will be the surest guarantee of a dominant and regnant Christianity at home.

LET ME SHOP FOR YOU.

No matter what you want—millinery, gloves, parasols, furs, handkerchiefs, dress materials and trimmings, street dresses, wedding trousseaus, reception or evening gowns— inexpensive or handsome and costly—send for my samples and estimates before placing your order, which will be sent you free. With my years of experience, my knowledge of styles—being in touch with the leading fashion centers—my conscientious handling of each and every order, whether large or small—I know I can please you.

MRS. HARTWELL HARRIS COOK,
1016 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

Phone Main.

ROOMS and BOARD

634 and 638 SOUTH STREET

(Lafayette Square)

Corner St. Charles St. NEW ORLEANS, LA.
Unlimited Meals. Alvin Porter, Mgr.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that

—Lasts a LIFETIME—

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

Secular News and Comment

Marie Corelli, the famous authoress, is reported to be seriously ill with pneumonia at her home, Mason Croft, Stratford-on-Avon. On March 31 her condition was considered grave, and her friends were not a little alarmed.

Upon the invitation of a number of the leading citizens of Hammond, La., Dr. H. E. Gilchrist, of New Orleans, recently visited that municipality and organized a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. This commendable organization is doing great good in many sections of the country.

Petitions containing 40,000 names have been filed with the Secretary of State in Missouri, asking for the submission of a prohibition constitutional amendment at the time of the general election next November. Only 24,000 names are necessary, so it seems to be assured that the amendment will be submitted as requested.

Shreveport, La., is rejoicing over the prospect of the speedy construction of the $200,000 postoffice building which Congress has voted to erect in that progressive city. The site upon which it is to stand is being cleared and made ready, and it is announced that active work upon the structure will soon be commenced.

The Hon. James J. Bailey, of St. Landry, has announced his candidacy for a seat in Congress from the Seventh Louisiana District, to succeed Hon. A. P. Fujo, who is serving his fourth consecutive term, and who doubtless will be a candidate for re-election. It is said that Mr. Bailey will make a vigorous and comprehensive canvass, beginning at an early day.

Hugo Lillenthal, a California horticulturist, has announced the discovery of an edible fruit from the climbing rose, which is said to have been obtained by cross-grafting. It is reported to be quite nutritious with a flavor like a pineapple, and may be eaten either raw or cooked. Mr. Lillenthal predicts that it will take the place of the Logan berry, to which it is allied.

The Hon. George W. Donaghey, was on March 30th re-elected governor of Arkansas by a large majority. His opponent, Judge C. C. Kavanaugh, made a vigorous and aggressive canvass, but without avail. Gov. Donaghey evidently has the confidence and loyal support of the people whom he serves. He is a stalwart Methodist, and is reputed to be a man of clean life and exemplary character.

A dispatch to the secular papers from Galveston, Tex., announces that a very superior quality of lubricating oil has been discovered in large quantities in McMullen County, in the southwestern part of that State. As is usually the case where such discoveries are made, the price of land has mounted up like magic. Eastern capitalists have lately purchased 7,000 acres at a cost of $3,000,000. The opinion is expressed that this may prove to be the largest and most valuable oil field in the South.

The United States Census has formerly been taken in June, but this time it will be taken on April 15; 75,000 enumerators will be in the field, and the work in the cities will be completed in fifteen days and in the rural sections in thirty. It will take four months to cover the manufacturing interests and three years to tabulate and reach accurate conclusions from the information gained. Superintendent Durand has given it out that he expects the population of the nation to be between 88,000,000 and 91,000,000.

The press dispatches state that Mr. Roosevelt will return from Africa enthusiastic on the subject of missions. This information pleases, but does not surprise us. Teddy is generally aggressive in his advocacy of any cause that he espouses. Moreover, seeing the work of missionaries never fails to evoke commendation from all who have an open mind. Most of the opposition to foreign missions which does not spring from a hatred of the divine kingdom is due to pure, unadulterated ignorance. Many who know much about other things are as ignorant as Hottentots as to what missionaries are doing and accomplishing in their various far-away fields.

And now it develops that Teddy will not call on the Pope. Negotiations looking to the arrangement of an interview were pending, but when His Highness intimated that Mr. Roosevelt must guard against any act of impropriety similar to that of Mr. Fairbanks, the distinguished ex-president promptly announced that under no circumstances would he visit the Vatican. His self-respect and independence would not allow him to consent to have restrictions imposed upon his conduct while in the Imperial City. He is too virile and representative an American for that. The manner in which our leading citizens bear themselves abroad is highly creditable to the nation.

Unable to find a place for it, the State authorities at Baton Rouge have donated the heavy bronze figurehead of the battleship Louisiana to the State University, which also is perplexed as to what to do with it. President Boyd, according to report, has had it stored away, hoping that some use may be found for it in the future. It has been suggested that a good plan would be to build a handsome archway over the entrance to the university grounds and place it upon that where it would be conspicuous and tend to awaken the spirit of patriotism. But it is said that such an arch would cost $4,000 or $5,000, and could not be built without a special appropriation by the General Assembly.

Justice David Josiah Brewer, of the United States Supreme Court, died suddenly of apoplexy in Washington on March 28. He was born in Smyrna, Asia Minor, June 20, 1837, where his father, who was a minister, was serving as a missionary. His mother was a Miss Field, a sister of David Dudley, Cyrus W., Henry M., and Justice Stephen J. Field, all of whom were men of national reputation, forming perhaps the most remarkable group of celebrities in a single family in American history.

Justice Brewer was graduated from Yale College in 1856, and from the Albany Law School in 1858. He located at Leavenworth, Kansas, for the practice of his profession, where he attained great distinction and continued to reside until his appointment to the Supreme Bench in 1889. He was a patriotic and progressive citizen, and in many ways contributed to the promotion of the public good. He was probably the most popular member of the United States Supreme Court, and was by many considered the most intellectual. He was widely known as an author, having issued the following volumes: "The Pew to the Pulpit," 1897; "The Twentieth Century from Another Viewpoint," 1899, and "American Citizenship," 1902. The remains of the distinguished jurist were carried to his old home in Leavenworth for interment.

ANOTHER PART OF THE PHILIPPINES.

On the eighteenth day of December an order came from the general commanding the Philippines Division directing me to proceed at once to this place for temporary duty, and upon being relieved, to return to my proper station—Fort McKinley. The cause of this order was the resignation of the surgeon stationed here, and the fact that there was no other man available. Several were expected on the 2d of January, when the transport arrived, at which time a regular appointment would be made. Leaving Manila at dark on the evening of the 20th, we ran along for four days before reaching this place. The trip was rough, as the little boat measured less than two hundred tons, and the edge of the China sea is not famous for smooth water.

The most interesting place at which the boat stopped was the Leper Colony, at Cullion. The Insular government seems to take good care of these unfortunate people, and does everything possible to keep them happy and content. They have a doctor, a nice hospital, a church (Catholic), two priests, and six Sisters of Charity. Of course, the whites do not live in the village with the lepers; their houses are in a cove between two high hills—really small mountains—and they form a society of their own. The steward of the colony told me that once each month, in addition to their rations, each leper was given one silver peso (about fifty cents in gold). As several of the lepers who are not sick much have little stores where they sell cakes, candy, bottled soft drinks, etc., the lepers are thus provided a certain amount of spending money. At present there are 2,000 on the island. They have their little farms, fruit patches, pigs, carabao cows, and the usual litter found around a Filipino home. They trade among themselves, and appear to be reasonably content.

Another interesting stop was at the Island of Cuyo. This is an island containing twenty-one square miles of territory. Roughly speaking, it is six miles long, and three and one-half miles wide. There are over 9,000 people on this island, and there is an excellent school with three native American teachers. Two of the men are married, each has a little girl four years old, and both children have the same name—Dorothy. This is the prettiest island I have yet seen, and a very rich one. The oranges are particularly fine, and there are groves of coconut palms, all loaded with fruit. There are many other fruits that would be strange to the readers of the Advocate, so they will be nameless. Chickens thrive well, and eggs are cheap and plentiful. There is a nice stone church, and two Catholic priests to minister to the wants (spiritual) of the people.

Just a word about the old church. It was built to protect the natives from the piratical Moos who from their island (Mindanao) in the olden days were in the habit of overrunning these small islands, and putting the peaceful natives to the sword. The old wall of the church forms part of the wall of a fort, and walking along the top of the ramparts I noticed the old cannon still in place. Evidently these old missionaries believed in fighting as well as praying. On one of the towers is the date "1824," but that is not the original date of the erection of the fort.

GET ALL THAT'S COMING TO YOU.

You don't get it when you buy loose or bulk coffee, or coffee by the pound wrapped up in a paper bag. The least exposure to the air lets strength, aroma and flavor escape—all that makes coffee worth while. You get what is left and you get badly left if you think you are getting all you pay for. BUY the coffee of double strength, crisp and fresh in its air-tight can, a little higher in price, perhaps, than the loose article but really cheaper and infinitely more satisfying. Every good grocer sells it.

LUZIANNE COFFEE

THE REILY-TAYLOR CO.

New Orleans.

There is no opening to the church, except from the inside of the fort.

One thing struck me, and that was the lack of medical attention. The nearest available doctor is here, and that is 135 or more miles. The doctor at the Leper Colony is a little nearer, but not available. It would seem as if some of the numberless "M. D.'s" all over the States, who are not making half a living, would offer themselves to some Church for "medical missionary relief work," and surely if the Church realized the urgent need of many of these "out-posts of civilization," they would send the men. What a blessing a good physician would be to these people! The cost of living is not high, and after the people became educated to understand the benefits of medical attendance, they could pay something to help out the salary paid by the Church. Also, there is no doubt that the Insular government would be willing to pay a small salary to have him act as local health officer (not over $25 per month) and to oversee the sanitary conditions of the town and school.

This place is four days out of Manila, and is the capital of the Province. It is situated on the Island of Palawan, and is the site of an old Spanish naval post. The Island is nearly three hundred miles long, and from ten to thirty miles wide, containing over 4,000 square miles of territory. It is largely unexplored. A chain of mountains forms the backbone of the island and gives it a varied and beautiful scenery. Vast forests of great trees cover the larger part of the country, and it is very thinly settled. The forests abound with birds of many kinds, parrots, monkeys and wild pigs in great numbers.

But, enough of this letter. As I shall probably go back to Manila on the same boat that takes this letter, I must ask my friends to continue to address me at "Manila, P. I., U. S. Army." If so addressed, it reaches me promptly, no matter upon what duty I may be engaged. Fraternally,

J. C. BALLARD.

Puerto Princess, Palawan, P. I.

DR. W. B. MURRAH AT CARROLLTON, MISS.

The sermon preached in the Methodist Church here last Sunday by Dr. W. B. Murrah, of Millsaps College, was regarded by the overflowing congregation that heard it as one of the best ever delivered in Carrollton. Our people are accustomed to hear good preaching. Our pastors have been able ministers, and not infrequently Dr. William Hayne Leavell, the ablest Presbyterian preacher in the State, speaks from the pulpits of our town to the great delight of all. Bishop Galloway, Bishop Green, Bishop Hendrix, Bishop Thompson, Bishop Candler, Bishop Bratton, and like leading men of other churches have been heard here. Thus our people have had rather an unusual opportunity to know what real preaching is. For strength of thought, depth of insight, grasp of fundamental principles, beauty of diction, charm of rhetoric, and impressiveness of delivery, Dr. Murrah's sermon ranked among the best. It is sometimes said that no man can preach two great sermons in one day; but Dr. Murrah did. The evening discourse was a worthy companion-piece for the one in the morning. The opinion is widespread that if the General Conference, which is to meet in Asheville in May, desires for Bishop a man who, for poise of character, for administrative ability, for attractive personality, and for preaching power, would measure up to the best traditions of that high office, they will elect Dr. Murrah.—Carrollton Conserva-

Church News

Dr. C. M. Bishop, of Mexico, Mo., will preach the baccalaureate sermon of Sullins College the latter part of May. Dr. Bishop was reared in the Holston country and is an alumnus of Emory and Henry.

The Episcopal address to the General Conference will this time be written and read by Bishop E. R. Hendrix, though it will be subject to amendment, and is supposed to express the views of a majority of the Episcopal college.

The Southern Christian Advocate thinks that the controversy now on in South Carolina concerning the woman's rights memorial indicates that a large majority of the women of that State are against it. They are by no means a unit in its advocacy anywhere.

Superstition yet has a powerful hold on the adherents of Roman Catholicism. Evidence of this is seen in the fact that some of the authorities of that Church have recently given it out that Pope Plus the IX, who died twenty-five or thirty years ago, wrought some twenty-eight or more miracles. In view of this alleged power, it is claimed that he is entitled to beatification.

The Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South, has purchased the church and parsonage of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in Nashville, situated on South Spruce Street, and will use the property for headquarters. This was the only M. E. Church in Nashville, and has been served by Rev. E. C. Atkins, who goes to Elm Street as pastor to succeed Rev. W. H. Johnston, appointed to the Fayetteville District—Midland Methodist.

The Pope, it appears, has reason to be irritated over some things which have resulted from the operation of American Protestant forces in Rome. The Baptists have a theological school there, with men of scholarship in the faculty. The Vatican offered a prize of 1,000 lire for the best essay on a certain archaeological subject. The essays were submitted anonymously, and the judges awarded the prize to a competitor who turned out to be Professor Paschetto of the Baptist theological school.—New York Advocate.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College, will not be present at Whitworth's Commencement May 8-9. He will leave his report in charge of the Secretary of Board of Trustees, Rev. H. M. Ellis. The report will show that every obligation has been met, and that the college is in a most prosperous condition. Revs. J. T. Leggett and H. M. Ellis, and Prof. H. P. Todd, president of Stanton College, (vice president for Whitworth 1910-1911), will assist Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, lady principal, in making the Commencement one of the most delightful occasions in the history of the college.

At the recent session of the Baltimore conference there was a lively discussion of the question of the relation the Randolph Macon system of colleges to the Church. The Board of Trustees had placed the several schools of the system in the "undominational list," in order to obtain the benefits of the Carnegie Foundation. Dr. Collins Denny introduced a resolution requiring the names of the trustees to be submitted to the conference for approval or rejection. To this Dr. Smith, the president of the system, is said to be violently opposed. It is scarcely probable that the contest will be settled without recourse to the civil courts.

Dr. Zehner, director of the Statistical Bureau in Stuttgart, Germany, has recently been giving out some religious statistics. He calculates that there are 1,544,000,000 people in the world. Of these, he says, 534,000,000 are Greek, Roman and Protestant Christians, 175,000,000 are Mohammedans, 10,800,000 are Jews, and 823,000,000 are heathen. Of the pagan population 300,000,000 are Confucians, 214,000,000 are Brahmans, and 121,000,000 are Buddhists, with many belonging to smaller bodies. This means that out of every 1,000 inhabitants of the planet, 346 are nominal Christians, 114 are Mohammedans, 7 are Israelites and 533 are of the various pagan faiths.

Youngtown, Ohio, has recently had a great revival, which was conducted by the Rev. William A. Sunday, and which lasted for six weeks. The services were chiefly held in a temporary tabernacle with a seating capacity of 8,000, which generally was filled. It is estimated that there were 5,900 conversions, and on the two Sundays immediately following the meeting 1,300 joined the five Methodist Churches of the city. Mr. Sunday is being spoken of by some "as the greatest evangelistic force in America." A writer in the Pittsburg Christian Advocate, after giving an interesting account of the great awakening, in referring to the evangelist, thus concludes: "To criticize the idiosyncrasies of this flaming messenger of Jesus Christ is like finding fault with the splash and roar of Niagara, and not being moved by its sublimity."

W. F. M. S.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Fourth quarterly report of Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer:

Number Auxiliaries	49
Number new Auxiliaries	3
Number members	1,197
Life members	26
Subscribers to Missionary Advocate	298
Subscribers to Young Christian Worker	267
Scholarships supported	16
Bible women supported	7
Missionaries supported	2

(Mrs.) S. A. MONTGOMERY, Cor. Secy.

Receipts.

Dues	$ 295.45
Pledges	737.70
Scholarships	225.00
Bible Women	240.00
Retirement Fund	14.80
Young J. Allen Memorial	3.60
Trueheart Lectureship	3.05
Contingent Fund	21.10
Conference Expense Fund	13.70
Total	$1,554.40

(Mrs.) J. J. HOLMES, Treasurer.

THE WORLD'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

New York, February 15, 1910.

The steamship "Kronland" is the official or Special World Missionary Conference steamer. It leaves New York May 31, 9 a. m., arriving at Southampton June 9, where special trains will be in readiness to take passengers either direct to Edinburgh or by a personally conducted route through England and Scotland. The Kronland is a large modern 12,000 ton boat, and the best of its class.

The minimum rate from New York to Southampton is $82.50. At that time of year it is difficult to obtain minimum rate rooms for passage on the fastest boats, as there are very few minimum rate rooms on any of the fast boats. A ten per cent discount will be allowed on the outward passage to delegates and representatives and their families going to the Edinburgh Conference (not interfering with the minimum rule of $82.50 per passage).

In order to secure accommodations you will please write to the Bureau of University Travel, 3 Trinity Place, Boston, Massachusetts, as the Transportation Committee does not itself secure accommodation either going or returning, but refers all applications to the bureau. It is advisable to apply as early as possible, and if you can not go by the Kronland, the Bureau of University Travel will be glad to arrange your passage by some other steamer. It will also secure railway tickets to Edinburgh, and conduct a special tour across England, and provide hotel accommodations where and when necessary. It is almost equally important to secure accommodations for the return trip. There will be no special discount on the return trip.

The official delegates meet in the Assembly Hall. The Synod Hall representatives meet in the Synod Hall. If you are not an official delegate, in order to obtain a season ticket for a reserved seat in the Synod Hall (twelve shillings, six pence), you must write to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Church of Scotland, with which you are connected and be appointed a Synod Hall Representative.

If you are an official delegate and wish a ticket for your wife, you must write to the secretaries of the World Missionary Conference, 100 Princes Street, Edinburgh, Scotland, for a gallery ticket, which will cost you twelve shillings, six pence, or $3.12.

For information regarding entertainment or the securing of rooms at hotels in Edinburgh, please address Secretaries, World Missionary Conference, 100 Princes Street, Edinburgh, Scotland, marked (tickets or delegates). State whether you are a delegate or representative, and of what Board.

An information letter will be sent within a few weeks to every delegate or representative whose name is on record at this office as sent in by the boards entitled to send delegates.

Sincerely,

155 Fifth Avenue.

W. HENRY GRANT

A CORRECTION.

In the "Call" published a few weeks ago, it was stated that reduced rates would be granted to New Orleans during the W. H. M. S. Conference. Later information says no reduced rates can be given.

(Mrs.) E. R. KENNEDY.

Pres. La. Conf. W. H. M. S.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference will convene in Tupelo, Miss., June 11. The annual sermon will be preached Sunday, June 12, by Rev. J. A. Hall, of Winona. The program will be published later.

(Mrs.) S. M. THAMES, Conf. Pres.

W. H. M. S.

REPORT OF THE RECENT MEETING IN GULFPORT.

The annual meeting of the missionary conference of the Woman's Home Mission Society convened at 25th Avenue Church, Gulfport, Wednesday, March 16 and continued through the 20th. We had the largest attendance in the history of the conference, there being eighty-three delegates present, and including visitors, ninety-three.

Mrs. T. B. Holloman, the president of the body, conducted the business of the conference with her usual ease and skill, her address was helpful and inspiring. The three leading points which she emphasized were: First, five hundred new members for the coming year; second, taking the entire support of the Biloxi Mission and giving this as our thank-offering; third, an organized effort to reach and to uplift the negroes. Quoting from Bishop Galloway, she said: "We canonize a man who goes to Africa to preach to the Negroes while we ostracize one who attempts the same thing in America."

We missed very much the inspiring presence of our faithful corresponding secretary, Mrs. B. F. Lewis, who was prevented from attending the conference by the death of her father-in-law, Rev. W. B. Lewis. She writes in her report: "The work has gone steadily forward, our appropriations have been promptly met, our financial report is the best in our history. Twenty-two new auxiliaries have been formed, and we have every reason to feel encouraged." The amount sent to the conference treasurer for the year was $3,009, and the amount expended in local work was $11,119, making a grand total of $14,128.

Mrs. H. M. Ellis, our first vice-president, gave the best report by far which she has ever handed in. She reported in local work a grand total of $15,213.29.

One hour, Thursday p. m., was devoted to the subject of tithing. Mrs. J. R. Ellis, the president of that department reported that a good, healthy sentiment is being created all over the conference on this most important and much-neglected subject. She reported 431 pledged to tithing, which is an increase of 295 over last year.

Thursday evening Brother Morse preached to the ladies of the conference the annual sermon, while Friday evening was given over to Brother Griffin and to Miss Drago, the former having charge of the Seamen's Bethel in Gulfport and the latter being our deaconess at Biloxi. They both impressed their hearers that they were doing a grand and much-needed work. At the close of the service a strong plea was made by Brother Morse for help in furnishing the Wesley House at Biloxi, which was readily and generously responded to by a collection of over $100.

The guest of honor at the conference was our general president, Miss Belle Bennett, of Nashville. Her Bible reading Saturday noon, her sermon Sunday morning on Home Missions, and her Sunday evening plea for the Memorial to the General Conference were all clear, forceful and inspiring.

The ministers of the conference who encouraged us by their presence were Brothers Griffin, Morse, Alford, Williams and Holloman. When the news of Brother Lewis' death reached us, Brother Holloman conducted an impressive memorial service.

A delightful car ride to Biloxi was given to the delegates by the ladies of Gulfport in order to visit the Wesley House. After stopping at Beauvoir and other points of interest along the route, we reached Point Cadet, where we were met by Miss Drago and conducted to her home. There we saw something of her life and work and again were impressed with the good work which she is doing.

All the old officers were re-elected with the exception of Mrs. J. L. Neill, the press superintendent. Mrs. M. W. Swartz, of Jackson, being elected in her place. Conference adjourned Sunday night to reconvene at Brookhaven next year. The delegates left Gulfport Monday morning feeling that they had had the best conference in their history, and with their hearts full of gratitude to the people of Gulfport and vicinity for the royal hospitality they had received at their hands.

MRS. M. W. SWARTZ, Press Supt.

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH
LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 585.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd.
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

THE WOMEN'S MEMORIAL AND SOME CHURCH HISTORY.

By Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

With Joel's prophecy of the divine endorsement of women preaching revoiced by Peter on Pentecost fresh in their minds, with the fact that Philip's daughter and other women did preach with apostolic sanction, and with Paul's endorsement of it in 1 Cor. xi. 2-16 (notwithstanding his misconstrued statement in xiv. 34), it seems strange that the Church so soon forgot it all and lapsed back into the pagan custom of female suppression.

Dr. Arthur S. Peake, one of the authors of the Century Commentary, in his introduction to the New Testament, a volume fresh from the presses of the Scribners, defending Harnack's theory, that Priscilla wrote the Epistle to the Hebrews, says: "As the earlier freedom with which the gospel had emancipated women and set them at liberty to use their special talents for the edification of the Church gave way to a stiffer and narrower ecclesiasticism which defrauded them of their rights, there was every temptation to suppress the unwelcome reminder that a woman had so far ventured out of her sphere as to write such an epistle, so quickly did the Church forget that in Jesus Christ there can be neither male nor female." Whether or not this learned writer and his great German confrere are correct in supposing that Priscilla wrote the Epistle to the Hebrews, I can not say; but he is absolutely correct in this statement that the post-apostolic Church receded greatly from the position on the woman question held by the apostles and indicated in the practice of the New Testament Church.

But we should not be surprised at this, as we remember that the apostles were barely dead, when their successors, the Post-Apostolic Fathers, were teaching baptismal regeneration, a purely pagan corruption, even Irenaeus, born possibly before John was dead, speaking of baptism as regeneration; and when we recall that Augustine, the greatest of all the Fathers, taught the awful dogma of Predestination and Reprobation, which grew bodily out of a purely pagan concept of God. It must be remembered also that Cyprian, born barely a century after John's death, contended earnestly for the absurd dogma of prelatical succession, laying down as a maxim, "Ecclesia in Episcopo" (the Church is in the bishop), a dogma born of the pagan concept of government.

In all the centuries of her history we find the Church pulled backward by a persistent tendency paganward. It was this that brought on the Dark Ages. It was this that left consubstantiation as an alternative for transubstantiation lurking in the Lutheran and Anglican Churches. The suppression of womanhood is one of these. The statement may not be palatable, but it is, nevertheless, true.

Mr. Wesley's attitude to this question is very instructive. In 1761 he wrote to Mrs. Sarah Crosby: "Methodists do not allow of women preachers;" but tells her that in her public speaking, exhorting and conducting meetings: "I do not see that you have broken any law." Still he urges her not to take a text, and indicates that she is but doing "as other women have done long ago." He, who could not at first brook "field-preaching" and lay preachers, but came at length to use both, changed his mind on this matter. Ten years later he wrote to this same Mrs. Crosby: "I think the strength of the cause rests there on your having an extraordinary call. So I am persuaded has every one of our lay preachers; otherwise I could not countenance his preaching at all. It is plain to me that the whole work of God termed Methodism is an extraordinary dispensation of his providence." So Methodism's Father at last puts woman-preaching on the same basis he places Methodism. Sarah Crosby continued to preach.

Rev. Henry Moore, in his Life of Mrs. Fletcher, says that Mr. Wesley said about the same thing to this great woman, and she, too, preached on till her going away.

George Eliot's beautiful picture of Dinah Morris in "Adam Bede" is not a fiction. She lived and preached and stood an angel of mercy on Hetty's gallows, and brought many to Christ just as the novelist tell us. Her name, after marriage, was Dinah Evans, a kinswoman of Marian Evans, who wrote of her; and she was a Methodist preacher.

Hester Ann Rogers, the queenliest saint of primitive Methodism, did not preach, but did about everything else a Methodist evangelist of that time ever did; and Wesley said of her: "Never was any woman so owned of God in Dublin."

But what has all of this to do with the Women's Memorial to our coming General Conference? That Memorial does not ask that women be licensed to preach. No; but if the larger grant to preach is not shown in the New Testament and in Church History to be amiss, surely this thing, which the Memorial does ask, can not be wrong.

"But," say the opponents, "they will ask next to be made preachers, if this memorial be granted." Well, suppose they do, will the asking be a mortal offense? This objection has a very pagan odor about it. It harks back millenniums ago to our semi-savage ancestors.

It is urged by those who oppose the Memorial that its tendency will be to make our women less womanly. Now is there any real ground for this fear? Suppose it be granted that women who do men's work in the store, the shop, the field and office grow less womanly—this, however, has never been proved—does it follow that to place our women on the level with our men in Church life will tend to render them less womanly? To say that it will may sound very reasonable to some; but have we any proof of it? Theory may seem very logical, but facts are irresistible evidences. What are the facts in this case? What does history say?

Let us appeal first to our own personal observations—they are a part of history. We have seen some mannish woman, maybe, in reform work or the higher ranks of Church activity; have we not seen some effeminate men there also? Did the place make the one mannish or the other effeminate? Are not these characteristics or tendencies temperamental rather than the results of one's sphere of activity? What evidence have we in this matter? What are the facts? Theories will not do here. I demand proof that prominence in Church work ever made any woman unwomanly. The life of Frances Willard, a womanlier woman than whom never lived, can not give evidence to prove the ground of the fear; and nobody was ever more prominent in Christian work than she. Frances Willard was but the leader of an army, such as she generally, both within and without the ranks of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and the various missionary and other charitable organizations. These are the very womanliest women we have. I challenge denial of this statement. Their Christian prominence rather ministers to their womanliness. For quite two and one-half centuries the Quakeresses of England and America have been esteemed as paragons of womanliness; and yet, they have, and have ever had, every right granted to the men of their Church. In the Baptist Churches of America the women have about the same privileges asked for by the Memorial. Are they less womanly than their Methodist sisters?

One more question: "Why does God sometimes call women to these higher Church activities, even to the pulpit, if her heeding the call renders her unwomanly? That God does sometimes thus call women is proved from the New Testament and church history. Is it not true that the fear our brethren have is utterly baseless?"

AGAINST EQUAL RIGHTS.

(From Southern Christian Advocate.)

Dear Brother Nettles: Judging from some of the things one reads in the papers, it would seem that the time has come when the women of the Church are clamoring for the rights of the laity, and that, unless the General Conference grants their request, it will make a grave mistake.

With all due respect for those who are advocating it, I wish to put myself (and I think I am one of a very large number of our women) on record as being satisfied with our present status in the Church. Speaking as from the ranks, and not as one who has time to take part in any public agitation, I do not believe that it is the will of the women of the Church at large that there be any legislation as to our place in the Church and its work. We, the great silent class of women, are so busy as wives, mothers, sisters, teachers, etc., in trying to exercise the rights we already have, that we have time for no more.

Personally, I believe that the strength of woman is her womanliness, and that she makes a mistake when she seeks to fill the place or do the work of a man. I can not say how I honor the woman who, because of necessity, assumes burdens heavy enough for men's shoulders, and carries them well. Neither would I say aught against woman's capability to fill any place or to do any work. She is capable. I only beg that a few women be not allowed to speak as for the whole Church, and that we of "the silent sisterhood" be heard likewise.

I have not written hoping that, by anything I might say, I could influence the men we have chosen to represent us in the General Conference. They are wise and good men, else we had not chosen them. Into their hands I am willing to submit our cause. With good wishes for the Advocate.

A WOMAN FROM THE RANKS.

March 14, 1910.

AGAINST LAITY RIGHTS FOR WOMEN.

(From Southern Christian Advocate.)

A memorial to the General Conference, 1910, praying that body "to grant to the women of the Church the rights and privileges of the laity," has just been presented to me for signature. I can not sign that paper for the reason I do not think it wisest and best to do so. I am sure nothing but harm would come to our Church by passing such a memorial.

Mrs. Luke Johnson, of Georgia, is carrying on a vigorous campaign in favor of the memorial, and is asking for signatures. No doubt these signatures will appear in General Conference as mute appeals from the women of our Church, and will be considered as representing its womanhood. But who will represent the thousands of women who do not desire laity rights? We feel we can safely leave the subject in the hands of our members to the General Conference—our brothers—who have so long and so well guided the affairs of our Zion. Perhaps the right result might be surer if those who are of my mind should unite in sending to the General Conference a contrary request to the memorial. About sixty per cent of that body is new, and where so grave a question is involved, nothing ought to be left undone. I can not, in this article, produce all the arguments against the memorial; they have already been well stated by stronger pens than mine.

This much I will say: I do not think we are ready for even the discussion of this subject yet, much less the realization of it. The rank and file of our women, and I may say our men, too, have not given this subject sufficient thought. The question was sprung by an allusion to it in the address of the president of the General Board of Home Missions in Savannah, Ga., last fall. No doubt she, and it may be a few other of the officers of the board, had thought seriously and prayerfully over this change, but I can not believe a half dozen of the delegates had given it any consideration whatever. Many of them had not heard of such a thing before. Hence, I argue, considering the magnitude of all that is involved, the action is too hasty and too little understood. It will be well for the women of South Carolina Methodism to act with their proverbial conservatism, and in this, as in all Church changes, to go slowly. Let our fathers and brethren decide this momentous question for us; at least, let them see that both sides are represented at the approaching General Conference.

(Mrs.) W. L. WAIT.

President South Carolina Conference Home Mission Society.

A LIVE ISSUE.

Dear Brother Meek: The sisters have stirred up a lively issue. Many things said in favor of their movement are not arguments. Some things said against it ought not to have been said.

One objection raised is an argument. For years a reproach has been flung at the Church that it is for women and children only. Of course, that is not true. And yet conditions lend color to the charge.

The Men's Movement promises great things. Every one knows that it is difficult to secure the interest of men in the work of the Church.

When it comes to electing delegates to the District Conference, the question is not, "Whom shall we send?" but, "Who can be induced to go?" And they do not go in a majority of instances. And this is characteristic of the work in general.

Now, if we make it legal for the women to fill these places, will we not make it still more difficult to secure the interest and activities of the men?

We should do everything to encourage "us" and nothing to hinder "us." J. R. BINGHAM.
Carrollton, Miss.

ANONYMOUS COMMUNICATIONS.

Dear Doctor Meek: I am enjoying some of the correspondence going on in the Advocate. The article from Mrs. McKinney in last week's issue was fine in spirit—and sense. But why don't all the correspondents sign their names, as some do? Are they ashamed of what they write? I think we are much more careful, in signed communications, to stay close to the truth, and to be fair, and just, and charitable, and courteous, than when we are shooting out of the dark. Probably very few notice anonymous articles, except when they oppose something we favor, and then they raise a spirit of resentment—a feeling that our antagonist is unfair (as anonymous writers are apt to be). If an article is not worth signing, it is usually not worth writing or publishing.

Ask your correspondents to step out from behind the trees and let us all see them. There will be much more pleasure in reading what they have to say.

Yours truly,

H. R. SINGLETON.

Alexandria, La., March 24, 1910.

Nothing but the Infinite Pity is sufficient for the infinite pathos of human life.—Exchange.

IMPROVEMENTS IN GULFPORT.

make real estate investments more secure than ever. Live Oak Lots are ideal investments. Write for prices, terms, etc., to

GEO. L. CARLEY,
Gulfport, Miss.

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS FOR

ALASKA AND BOHN SYPHON REFRIGERATORS,
Garland and New Process Gas Stoves.

THE UNITED HARDWARE CO., LTD.,

1005-1007 Canal Street, New Orleans.

The Home Circle.

JUDGED BY THAT MARK.

The boy in search of a job turned up at supper time at his sister's home looking rather disconsolate. "I didn't get nothing to do," he said, shortly, as soon as he was seated.

"I don't wonder, if you used that kind of grammar," said his sister.

"That wasn't it. I had my company grammar on all right; 'twas something else, and I'll tell Jim about it after supper. You'd spring the 'I-told-you-so' game on me, and make me tired."

Jim was his brother-in-law and had been a job-hunting boy himself not many years before. He was beckoned into the sitting room immediately after rising from the table, and once there, the door was shut by his wife's youthful brother, who turned and said: "I went to fourteen places to-day, Jim, and was turned down at every shot."

"What was the matter?" asked the sister's husband.

The boy held up the forefinger of his left hand, along the inner side of which was a yellow stain showing as far as the second knuckle. "That," he said, simply.

"H'm," said his brother-in-law, "the boss in our shops won't allow cigarette smoking, either; but I didn't know things had gone as far as this. Why don't you quit?"

"I have. I quit last night. One of the guys that said, 'Git,' called me back just as I got to the elevator, and says: 'What makes you smoke cigarettes?' 'I don't,' I says. 'There's some things worse than cigarette smokin' he says. 'I quit last night, I told him. Then he grinned a little and said I might not be such a liar as he thought after all, but it was a fact that Chicago men had quit hiring cigarette kids. Then he said if I had quit I might come back next week.'—Selected.

FULTON'S FIRST FARE.

There is one little incident in Robert Fulton's life which Fulton never forgot. It took place shortly before the return trip of his famous boat's voyage by steam up the Hudson river. At that time all the citizens of Albany flocked to the wharf to see the strange craft, but so timorous were they that few cared to board her. One gentleman, however, not only boarded her, but sought out Fulton, whom he found in the cabin, and the following conversation took place:

"This is Mr. Fulton, I presume?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you return to New York with this boat?"

"We shall try to get back."

"Have you any objection to my returning with you?"

"If you wish to take your chances with us, sir, I have no objection."

"What is the fare?"

After a moment's hesitation Fulton replied: "Six dollars." And when that amount was laid in his hand, he gazed at it for some time; then, turning to the passenger with tears in his eyes, he said: "Excuse me, sir, but this is the first pecuniary reward I have received for all my exertions in adapting steam to navigation. I would gladly commemorate the occasion with a little dinner, but I am too poor now even for that. If we meet again, I trust it will not be the case then."

As history relates, the voyage terminated successfully. Four years later Fulton was sitting in the cabin of the "Clermont," then called the "North River," when a gentleman entered. Fulton glanced at him, and then sprang up and gladly shook his hand. It was his first passenger, and over a pleasant little dinner Fulton entertained his guest with the history of his success, and ended with saying that the first recognition of his usefulness to his fellow men was the six dollars paid to him by his first passenger.—Pittsburg Advocate.

THE FINDING OF SUZETTE.

Gilbert was on his way home from Sunday school one beautiful Easter day when he saw a little black and white kitten standing forlornly in the middle of the sidewalk just ahead of him.

As he came near her, the kitten looked up into his face and meowed pitifully, as much as to say, "I'm lost. Please take me home." And Gilbert's tender heart could not resist the appeal.

Ralph saw the kitten, too. He was just behind Gilbert, but he ran past him and began stroking the kitten's soft fur.

"I am going to take the kitty home with me," Ralph declared. "I know my mother will let me keep her."

"See, the kitty has on a nice collar with a new blue ribbon fastened to it, and she acts as if she had been somebody's pet," Gilbert replied. "Somebody may be feeling bad because she is lost. You know our Sunday school teacher said that Easter was such a glad day that everybody ought to be happy, and it was our place to do what we could to make them so. Let's try to find kitty's home. We may be able to make her happy at least."

Ralph looked unwilling for a moment. Then his face cleared, and he said, bravely: "All right; but, remember, if we can't find her home, kitty belongs to me."

"If we can't find her own home, you can have her," agreed Gilbert.

So Ralph picked up the kitten, and the two small boys started to find her home.

They took the kitten to one house after another, until they had visited every house on the long street where they had found it, but at each place they received the same discouraging answer—the lost little kitten did not belong there, and the people did not know to whom it did belong.

When they at last reached the very end of the long street, Ralph said: "Now, Gilbert, I hope you are satisfied, and will let me take kitty home with me. I am sure she must be hungry. Perhaps she didn't have any breakfast."

But Gilbert only shook his head. "I am going to try just one more house before I give up," he said, firmly. "Let's go to that white house around the corner."

Ralph followed Gilbert around the corner and up the broad walk leading to the house, rather reluctantly.

"I suppose I ought to want to find kitty's home, and I guess I do, really," he thought. "Still, she is such a pretty kitty that I should like to keep her for my very own."

Gilbert rang the front door bell, and a little girl, with eyes red from crying and a very sober face, opened the door.

But the minute she saw the kitten her face became all smiles, and she exclaimed, joyfully, "O, you have found my dear little kitty! I have cried myself most sick because I was afraid I should never see her again. Her name is Suzette. Thank you so much," and she took Suzette from Ralph's arms and cuddled her in her own neck lovingly.

After Gilbert had told about the finding of Suzette, and the little girl's mother had come to the door and thanked them for their kind and thoughtful act, the two small boys set out for home with glad hearts, for they had helped to make a little girl, as well as a little cat, very happy on Easter Day.

"I'm glad we found where the kitty lived," Ralph said as they trudged homeward, and he meant it with all his heart.—Effe Stevens, in Northwestern Christian Advocate.

SOME MAXIMS OF JOHN WESLEY.

I have no time to be in a hurry.
God begins his work in children.
The best of all is, God is with us.
I look upon the world as my parish.
I dare no more fret than curse or swear.
God buries his workmen, but continues his work.
I save all I can and give all I can; that is, all I have.
Loyalty (to rulers) is with me an essential branch of religion.

It is a happy thing if we can learn obedience by the things which we suffer.

It is plain God sees it best for you frequently to walk in a thorny path.

When I devoted to God my ease, my time, my fortune, my life, I did not except my reputation.

Be punctual. Whenever I am to go to a place the first thing I do is to get ready; then, what time remains is my own.—Selected.

God is good and holy and all powerful. What a grievous sin to profane his name!—Exchange.

CAMPGROUND COTTAGE FOR SALE.

No. 141 on Tabernacle Square, 5 rooms and hall, furnished throughout, including enameled bath tub and an electric fan. Sanitary connection. Write H. R. Singleton, Box 57, Alexandria, La.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location; price, including furniture, only $400. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

HOUSE ON CAMPGROUNDS FOR SALE.

A desirable two-story cottage, with four rooms and hall, bathroom with latest sanitary improvements; completely furnished facing open square in front of Keller Lodge, with a small, shady park in the rear. Address, Christian Advocate, 512-Camp, New Orleans.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER.

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co

INCORPORATED.

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

For all the Ills and Accidents which come to the Hunter or Fisherman—invaluable!
Cuts, Burns, Bruises, Sprains, Insect Bites and Prickly Heat—Internally for Colic and Cramps. Always have a bottle in your kit.
AT ALL DRUGSTORES
25c and 50c

THE SPORTSMAN'S SAFEGUARD

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulner, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

DENIES SAYING IT.

Since writing the editorial in which we touched upon Mr. Watson's attitude toward the work of foreign missions, we learn that he denies having said that "there are cases similar to that of Elsie Siegel among the women missionaries in the Orient," and "that more white women are led astray in China than there are Chinese converts." We make this statement in justice to the noted Georgia journalist, whom we had not the slightest intention to misrepresent. The statements which we quoted were taken from the press dispatches, and we assumed them to be true because, though several days had elapsed since their publication, they had remained uncontradicted. In our discussion, however, we wrote hypothetically, saying, "if he has been correctly quoted."

But in calling attention to Mr. Watson's denial, we do not desire to be understood as having changed our opinion in the slightest as to the ridiculousness of the position which he has assumed toward the cause of foreign missions. His fulminations are so manifestly unfair and misleading that they carry little weight except with the uninformed or prejudiced. Most of his so-called missionary facts are the fictions of his own unbridled imagination. The most charitable view to take of Mr. Watson's perfervid and erroneous utterances as to what is being done in mission fields is that they are attributable to his lamentable ignorance of what is really going on.

But this by no means justifies the demagogic and ad captandum manner in which he is given to discussing the subject. He has pitched his warfare upon the lowest possible plane, appealing to passion and prejudice, and hesitating not to assail motives or resort to any kind of artifice to discredit his opponents. Thus his effort to belittle Mr. Ellis because his name does not appear in "Who's Who," and to sneer at him because he hails from the North, can scarcely be considered a fair and manly way to conduct a serious disputation. Nor is it at all creditable to insinuate that Bryan, Taft, Roosevelt, and other eminent public men are not sincere in their endorsement of missionary work, but are only seeking thereby to gain increased popularity. We submit that the realm of motive is too mysterious and sacred for even Mr. Watson to essay to explore it. God alone can read the secrets of men's hearts and discover their inmost purposes.

Of Mr. Watson, the politician, we have nothing to say. He may be a man of exalted patriotism, hating for the people's rights. His public services, we shall in these columns neither praise nor depreciate. That does not come within our sphere as the editor of a church periodical. But when Mr. Watson intrudes himself into religious matters, arraigns mission boards, belabors church authorities, and undertakes to wield promiscuously the "big stick," he has no right to claim exemption from legitimate criticism. Those who are so free to strike blows should not complain if blows are given in return.

To the Methodist people in our territory who may chance to read Mr. Watson's strictures on this subject, we desire to say that our missionary work is in the hands of the truest, noblest and most faithful men and women. Not a single dollar is wasted. Our representatives in the foreign field live frugally and toil heroically. Nor is it true that the heathen generally are fed and clothed and given free medical treatment. This is done only in exceptional cases, just as it is in the home land. If we can not trust our bishops, our missionary secretaries, and the preachers and laymen, who constitute our mission boards, whom can we trust? There are many evils abroad in the land, but honest and upright men have not yet become so scarce that Mr. Watson is the only one beneath the American flag.

DEDICATION OF THE DE RIDDER CHURCH.

Some two months ago we promised Rev. J. W. Booth, the popular pastor at De Ridder, La., to spend with him the fourth Sunday in March and assist in the dedication of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at that place. Inasmuch as meeting this engagement, we boarded the "Sunset Express" on the Southern Pacific at noon Saturday, the 26th, were soon across the Mississippi river, and speeding westward at a rate of 35 or 40 miles an hour. Though we had never been on this road before, the country wore to us a strangely familiar aspect. The wide stretches of perfectly level land, the numerous marshes and brakes of willows and cypress trees, draped in moss, and the negroes crowding the depots along the way, made us feel as if we had suddenly plunged into the heart of the great Mississippi Delta.

It soon became evident to us, however, that the industries of Louisiana are very much more diversified than those of her sister State to the north. Traveling at first through a section considerably devoted to truck farming, we soon reached the sugar belt, where the cane was just springing up through the soil; then we began to observe rice mills here and there, showing that we had entered the home of that great industry; and further on we came to the oil fields, which contribute not a little to the wealth of the Creole State.

It was past dark when we arrived at Lake Charles, where we had supper and waited a couple of hours for a train on the Kansas City Southern to take us to our destination, some fifty miles away. It was 2 a. m. when we reached De Ridder, where the hotel clerk and Brother Booth met us and soon had us stored away to get a little sleep during what remained of the night.

Sunday dawned smoky and dusty. At first it looked as if there might be rain, but as the hours passed the sun came out brightly and it was a beautiful day. At 11 o'clock a crowd which taxed the capacity of the church assembled for the dedicatory exercises. It being Easter Sunday, a beautiful array of flowers decorated the chapel, and everything reflected the glory of the opening spring. The music for the occasion was appropriate and of exceptional merit. Particularly impressive were the solos of Mrs. M. Thompson and Mrs. Heins, of Ludington; Mrs. J. W. Booth presided at the organ.

After the sermon the officials rose in a body, and the house was presented for dedication by Mr. J. D. Robertson, secretary of the Board of Stewards.

It was our pleasure to preach again in the evening to a congregation almost, if not quite, as large as the one at the morning hour.

The church dedicated is a modern structure, with a pastor's study and Sunday school room, and which, when thrown together, probably has a seating capacity of 450 or 500. It was built five years ago during the pastorate of Rev. S. L. Riggs, and is valued at $4,000. The delay in its dedication was due to the debt incurred in its erection. Rev. B. T. Crews, who followed Brother Riggs, enterprised plans to remove this incumbrance, and with characteristic energy Brother Booth and his worthy coadjutors have carried them forward to success, having raised $1,500 during the past few months.

Our Church in De Ridder apparently has a bright future. Six years ago it assessed for the pastor $450 and paid $283; last year it paid $300, and this year the assessment is $900.

The following, a solid, progressive body of men, are the stewards: C. A. Paxson, Robert Jones, J. D. Robertson, F. A. Clapp, W. A. Wiggins, A. E. Stewart, and Joshua Cain. The pastor's praise was heard on every side, and he manifestly has a strong grip on the people.

The town is situated in the heart of the sheep and lumber district of Louisiana; is entered by four railroads, and is the home of the Hudson River Lumber Company, one of the largest concerns of that kind in the State. It is perceptibly growing; new residences are going up and brick stores are being constructed. If prohibition has hurt Calcasieu Parish, we heard not a word of it. On the contrary, all the talk was of prosperity and the wide-open doors which are challenging the evangelical enterprise of the Church in that section.

But we must not forget to express our high appreciation of the gracious hospitality of Brother and Sister Clapp, who took us to their cozy cottage home and showed us every attention and courtesy. We shall long remember their abounding kindness. May God bless Brother Booth and his noble flock, and establish the work of their hands.

OPENING OF THE HATTIESBURG CHURCH.

The fourth Sunday in March was a red-letter day with the Main Street congregation at Hattiesburg, Miss., being the occasion of the first occupancy of their beautiful new church. The Sunday school assembled in the old building where appropriate valedictory exercises were held, Dr. A. F. Watkins making an eloquent address in which he referred to the many tender memories of baptisms, marriages, and funerals which had taken place in the old tabernacle. The services over, the superintendent, Mr. W. A. Johnson; the assistant superintendent, Mr. R. L. Bennett, and the secretary, Mr. H. Ogden, marshalled the entire school into line, a marching hymn was played, and the body proceeded to their comfortable and spacious new home in the church edifice just completed, where the lesson was discussed in the presence of all by that choice Methodist layman, Mr. H. S. Stevens. This school is one of the largest in Mississippi, numbering in all of its departments about six hundred.

At 11 a. m. Dr. Watkins preached the first sermon in the new structure, from 1st Corinthians, iv. 20, "Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept." It was a forceful and impressive Easter sermon, which was much enjoyed by all present. From the Hattiesburg News, we take the following description of the new religious edifice:

The new church is a substantial brick building, costing between fifty and sixty thousand dollars, handsomely finished on the outside in marble and on the interior in golden oak. Its seating capacity is from one thousand to twelve hundred and the acoustics are fine. The building is almost completed, there remaining only the brass railings to put around the choir and the Sunday school rooms in the gallery, with a few finishing touches. There are beautiful art glass windows which cost $2,000; of this each of the sixteen classes has pledged itself to raise $50. The pulpit chairs are unusually handsome and massive. The choir is just to the right as the visitor enters the edifice, which is brilliantly lighted by chandeliers of brushed brass. There are fourteen Sunday school rooms, and altogether the arrangement is admirable.

The Lydian Circle (young ladies) have charge of the church and the putting of flowers on the pulpit each week. There were appropriate decorations, on this occasion, of dogwood and Easter lilies. This circle gave the fine piano, which will be used awaiting the arrival of the organ.

In the Sunday school room, the organ used is a gift from Mr. F. W. Foote, in memory of his little son, Elliott, a bright little fellow, who went to his home above some months ago.

The handsomely bound, large pulpit Bible used, is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Holloman, and the pulpit hymn book, was given by Miss Lorraine McInnis. Class No. 12, taught by Miss Bettie Conder, presented the six handsomely-carved contribution plates. The Home Mission Society will carpet the church, and the study has not yet been furnished.

In February, 1907, ground was broken for the building of the new church and the work went rapidly on. The cornerstone was laid, Dr. T. B. Holloman, then pastor, presiding. The building committee is composed of Messrs. W. S. F. Tatum, J. S. Turner, Sr., G. L. Hawkins, J. J. Stevens, F. W. Foote, J. S. Conner and J. C. Carley, who did good work, but the panic coming on, work was stopped until recently, when a campaign committee was organized to raise $6,000 to complete the building. The pastor, Dr. A. F. Watkins, was made chairman of that committee, the others being Messrs. E. L. Robins, J. S. Turner, Sr., F. W. Foote, H. S. Stevens and T. M. Ferguson.

We congratulate Dr. Watkins and the choice people whom he serves upon this notable achievement in the history of Mississippi Methodism, and pray that with their increased facilities for work they may be able to accomplish great things for the Master in the coming years.

NEXT SUNDAY THE DAY.

Next Sunday is "Loan Fund Day" in Mississippi, and it is earnestly hoped that no congregation in the State will fail to observe it. The fund raised is to be turned over to Bishop C. B. Galloway, who shed luster upon his native commonwealth all around the globe, and who was the most knightly leader that Southern Methodism has ever produced. It is most urgently needed, and will be a perpetual source of blessing in the future. The struggling churches in the State in which it is raised will have the first claim upon it. Let every Methodist from the Tennessee line to the Gulf contribute generously to this cause.

"MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE."

Orders for this neat little volume from the gift-pens of the Rev. W. G. Harlin are now being received at this office. The five sermons which compose it are a practical discussion of the work of the Holy Spirit, a theme of perennial interest. They have been signally blessed of God when spoken from the pulpit, and are calculated to stimulate and nourish the spiritual life. The volume deserves a wide circulation. Persons desiring a copy should write to Mr. C. O. Chalmers, publisher of the Christian Advocate. The price is 75 cents.

PERSONAL.

Rev. Thomas E. Yancy and his family find Nettleton, Miss., a pleasant place of residence. He is in love with his people, who are kind and attentive. All is harmonious and promising in the charge.

Mr. P. M. Franklin, of Delray, Miss., places us under obligation for substantial work done for the Advocate. Especially do we appreciate his fraternal words and good wishes. May the Lord bless and prosper him!

Rev. J. V. Bennett, writing from Auburn, Miss., sends six subscribers, and adds: "This is my third year on the Adams charge. Everything is moving along nicely. We are collecting money for the new church building at Adams."

The Algiers Senior Epworth League, which has been dormant for a season, has reorganized, and taken up its work with considerable enthusiasm. We are pleased to note a revival of interest in this arm of service at many places in our territory.

In a kind note, Brother C. B. Powell, of Campti, La., makes a remittance to the office, and promises to endeavor to increase the Advocate's circulation in his community in the near future. We are grateful both for his encouraging words and pledge of assistance.

At this writing the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference is in session at Alexandria, with Mrs. W. W. Carré presiding. Dr. S. H. Werlein, of this city, preached the annual sermon last Sunday at 11 a.m., delivering an appropriate and eloquent message.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson will begin a series of revival services in the new Parker Memorial Church, this city, on Sunday, April 17, with Rev. W. W. Drake, of Lake Charles, to do the preaching. The singing will be conducted by Mr. L. N. Niebergal, and Rev. R. H. Harrell will operate the stereopticon.

Rev. W. E. Dickens desires to call attention to the fact that his post office is Pelahatchie, Miss. Much of his mail has been going to Shiloh, which has caused him some inconvenience. Let those having occasion to correspond with our brother take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

Rev. M. R. Jones, De Soto, Miss.; Rev. J. H. Smith, Vaiden, Miss.; and Rev. Robert Randle, Vernon, La., have our thanks for work lately done for the Advocate and good wishes extended to us. We appreciate more than we have language to express the assistance and sympathy of our brethren.

Prof. W. A. Betts, of the Montrose Training School, has lately obliged us with a list of fourteen subscribers, for which we heartily thank him. His school is closing a prosperous session, and his Commencement will be held April 15-18. A program of the exercises arranged for the occasion appears elsewhere.

From Arkabutla, Miss., in the good county of Tate, Rev. A. M. Moore, has forwarded us a club of five names to be placed upon our subscription files. We formerly wrought not far from that village, and know some of the citizens of that community. May God guide Brother Moore in his work and make his ministry a blessing to them!

We regret to learn that Mrs. Henry Ueber, of this city, died Monday night last of pneumonia. She was the mother-in-law of Rev. A. I. Townsley, pastor of the Second Methodist Church, and a woman of most estimable Christian character. The Advocate extends profound sympathy to the sorrowing friends and relatives.

In forwarding his second round of appointments, Rev. T. J. Warlick, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, writes encouragingly of the work under his supervision. We thank him for an invitation to attend his District Conference, which will meet at Zwolle, June 6th. We hope Providence permitting, to be on hand.

Rev. George D. Purcell, pastor at Jena and Harrisonburg, is entering hopefully upon his work in his present field. He has lately had sickness in his home, but we trust that all are well ere this. He is another Mississippian who has strayed from his native heath to do service for the Master upon the fruitful soil of Louisiana.

Rev. J. S. Purcell, of Florence, Miss., writes: "Everything is progressing favorably with us. Our congregations are large, and the people are kind to the pastor and his family. A good League was recently organized with thirty-five members." We are grateful to this successful pastor for taking care of the interests of the Advocate in his rounds.

Rev. G. H. Galloway, the presiding elder of the Natchez District, is pleased with the prospect in his diocese. Writing under date of the 27th ult., he says: "The district so far promises much more than last year's accomplishment. Our preachers, all of them, are steady, assiduous workers." Happy the leader who is re-enforced by such a faithful band of co-laborers!

Though attending school in Oxford, Miss., and unable to be among his flock except on Saturdays and Sundays, Rev. W. L. Broom is gratified at the progress of his work. He has, from time to time, been sending us subscribers to the Advocate, of which service we are appreciative. We count strongly on the young men in our territory, of whom there are many of much promise to the Church.

Rev. Paul M. Brown, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, requests us to state that his address is now Tloga, La., instead of Alexandria. He keeps busy in carrying forward the interests of the Church, which are prospering under his aggressive leadership. The plan of work, mapped out at his recent preachers' meeting shows that the spirit of evangelical enterprise is yet abroad in the land.

Dr. J. A. Rice, the accomplished pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, will preach the Commencement sermon at Wofford College, S. C., June 5th, and of the Texas State University the Sunday succeeding. He has many calls for service outside of the city and State, and has a long series of engagements which will keep him going at a rapid pace for several weeks in the early summer.

Rev. Walter G. Harbin has lately closed a successful meeting at Starkville, Miss. On the 29th ult., while the services were yet in progress, there had been 35 applications for church membership. Brother Brogan, who was unwell and not able to be active in the revival work, is succeeding splendidly in that responsible field. He is fortunate in having such capable assistants as Rev. W. S. Harrison and Dr. T. C. Wier.

We acknowledge the reception of an interesting communication from Prof. J. Magruder Sullivan, of Millsaps College. He is kept quite busy meeting his round of classes, but notwithstanding takes a deep interest in all the work of the Church. He reports the present session at the college as progressing satisfactorily, and is hopeful that our representative will bear off the prize at the approaching oratorical contest at Greenville. If the future is to be judged by the past, it is not at all unlikely that he will do so.

The Carrollton Avenue Church is enjoying prosperity under the leadership of Rev. H. T. Carley, who is one of the strongest preachers of his age in his Conference. This congregation is maintaining a flourishing mission on Apple street, where the Sunday school has an enrollment of 80. It has been announced that a chapel will be built in the near future in order to take better care of this fast developing work. Brother Carley already has his missionary assessment in hand for the current year.

Information has reached us that Mr. J. Van Carter, of Crowley, La., a son of Dr. C. W. Carter, and a brother of Rev. Briscoe Carter and Prof. Thomas Carter of Vanderbilt University, has been elected General Secretary of the International Sunday School Association of North Carolina, with headquarters at Raleigh. Mr. Carter is said to be admirably fitted for the new position to which he has been called, and we congratulate the "tarheelers" upon having secured the services of so capable and faithful a worker.

The press dispatches have recently announced that Dr. Felix R. Hill has been chosen the permanent president of Centenary College, in place of Dr. W. L. Weber, whose failing health forced him to give up the position and leave Shreveport. The choice is an admirable one, and will commend itself to the general Methodist public of the State. We have no late news as to Dr. Weber's present physical condition, but this action on the part of the College trustees would seem to indicate there is little prospect of his speedy recovery.

Mrs. M. E. Pope, of Senatobia, Miss., writes: "Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Lois, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Taylor, of Senatobia, Miss., to Mr. Wistar Heald, of Lynchburg, Va., April 14th. The ladies of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of Senatobia are to entertain Miss Lois at a 'shower' on April 7th. Miss Taylor is a popular leader of her set, and has added much to the music of her church with her beautiful voice for some years. Rev. J. T. Murrah, of Sardis, will officiate at the marriage."

In the absence of Dr. S. H. Werlein last Sunday, the editor occupied the pulpit of the First Methodist Church of this city at both the morning and evening hours. With a spacious house of worship, splendidly located, this congregation is doing a great work, and has a bright outlook for the future. Mr. I. N. Niebergal has recently been elected superintendent of the Sunday school, which the enterprising pastor has announced they intend to build up and make second to none in this section. Dr. Werlein's incumbency in this important pastorate is giving the utmost satisfaction.

Rev. E. C. Sullivan is most anxious to take care of the interests of the Southern Methodist Church at Belmont, a developing town on the new I. C. Railroad running from Corinth, Miss., to Haleyville, Ala. He feels that a house of worship is an imperative and immediate necessity in order to hold that promising field, and has issued an appeal to the brethren for assistance, the Methodists there not being numerous and strong enough to build themselves. We trust that the people of North Mississippi will lend a hand to Brother Sullivan in meeting the pressing exigency with which he is confronted. A dollar sent to him would be well invested.

From the Carrollton Conservative of the 26th ult. we take the following: "The Methodist prayer meeting this week had the pleasure of hearing Rev. G. W. Bachman, who read and commented on the 14th chapter of St. John. Mr. Bachman directed attention to the fact that it was the birthday of Fannie J. Crosby, the blind hymn writer, and paid to her a glowing tribute. The hymns used during the service were her compositions. Mr. Bachman is a native of Carroll County, and is this year completing his fiftieth year in the ministry. Mississippi has had no more faithful minister than G. W. Bachman. For the past twenty-five years his special work has been distributing good literature—books and periodicals. The good thus done by him can be revealed by eternity alone."

THE NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

On the last day of March the New Orleans District Conference assembled in Parker Memorial Church in New Orleans, with Rev. F. N. Parker, the presiding elder, in the chair.

It is written that there was no sound of a hammer in the building of Solomon's Temple, but all bear witness that the hammer plays its part in this beautiful church. The building is now all covered, but none of the inside finishing has yet been placed in the main auditorium, where the conference held its sessions. The carpenters were still at work, and several speeches were severely "hammered."

The reports of the charges showed over two hundred additions to the Church since Conference, and a large part of these on profession of faith. It was also evident that all lines of Church service were being pressed.

The following local elders were called by name, and their characters passed: J. M. Beard, J. T. Sawyer, W. G. Evans, F. Mathis and H. H. Ahrens.

Two local preachers had their licenses renewed—R. F. Harrell and R. L. Schroeder.

Carrollton Avenue was selected as the place for the next meeting of the District Conference.

The following licensing committee was elected: J. A. Rice, A. S. Lutz, S. H. Werlein, W. W. Holmes, I. F. Foster and H. T. Carley.

The district authorized the campground trustees to mortgage the property to the extent of $20,000 for the purpose of making necessary improvements, and to erect such buildings as will be absolutely essential to an opening of the Training School, which the new charter morally, if not legally, binds us to conduct.

Among the most radical actions taken were the adoption of a resolution approving the memorial of the women, asking for full rights of the laity for the women, and the memorializing of the General Conference to remove the "time limit." There may be cause for thought in the fact that the strongest speech made against removing the time limit was by a layman.

The following delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: A. S. Daniels, W. B. Thomson, W. W. Carré and Dr. E. L. McGehee. A. F. Godat and Chas. O. Chalmers were elected as alternate delegates.

H. L. Baker was elected a trustee of the Seashore Camp-ground School, in place of R. J. Anderson, resigned. Dr. E. L. McGehee and J. A. Pharr, whose terms had expired, were re-elected for three years.

The conference ordered a committee to act with the presiding elder in planning an aggressive evangelistic campaign, and A. F. Lutz, S. H. Werlein and N. E. Joyner were appointed. If possible, a great central revival will be held this coming fall or winter.

A. I. Townsley, W. W. Holmes and H. T. Carley were constituted a commission to make a careful study of the mission fields of the city and prepare data on which a future district conference might plan more wisely for new fields than we have been able to do in the past.

Early in the conference, a resolution of appreciation of the heroic struggle made by the pastor and people of Parker Memorial Church in their effort to build was adopted.

At the close of the session the conference voiced its appreciation of the delightful entertainment provided by the ladies of the church, and of the courtesies received at the hands of the press.

And so ended one of the most harmonious sessions of the New Orleans District Conference.

H. WHITEHEAD, Secretary.

There is no greater weekly in the United States than The Outlook. Both in the matter which it carries and its mechanical make-up, it is deserving of the highest praise. The discussion of current events is fair and discriminating, and the editorials and contributed articles are of unusual merit. Those desiring to keep abreast of the times would do well to read this admirable periodical.

THADDEUS P. BELL, M. D.

EYE, EAR, NOSE and THROAT.

818 AUDUBON BUILDING

(Next to Maison Blanche.)

NEW ORLEANS

INQUIRY IS PROMPTLY ANSWERED

Sunday School

By W. B. Campbell.

LESSON II. FOR APRIL 10, 1910.

THE MISSION OF THE TWELVE.

Matt. ix, 35; x, 1-15, 40 and 42.

Golden Text: "Freely ye have received, freely give."—Matt. x, 8.

"The spirit of God will not always strive with man," is a prophecy written in the days of Noah, the preacher of righteousness, and in many other ways did God reveal himself by other prophets, as urging obedience from the sons of men; yet, they would not. Then came the fearful warning, sounding down the annals of time, by the voice of the Prophet Amos: "I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord—they shall run to and fro to seek the Word of the Lord and shall not find it." It was even so in the day of the Son of God, come down from heaven. Men would not hearken. Jesus bore this burden on his sorrowful soul, as he turned away from Capernaum, where he had shown many of his mighty works, and taught and preached the gospel of the kingdom in the surrounding cities and villages. Jesus, alone, could see the needs of the listening people, and moved with compassion he saw them as "sheep having no shepherd." He was trying to make his disciples see what he saw when he said to them: "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few," and taught them to pray for themselves, for they were the laborers about to be sent into the harvest.

The twelve apostles had been chosen and having returned with the Lord from this preaching tour, it being their first lesson in the work they were to do, the Lord called them around him to receive his parting charge.

These twelve men are not strangers to us. The Scriptures have shown us their life and their work so plainly that we know each one by character, and can almost trace their growth in grace and in the knowledge of the Master. John has written of how the first half of the twelve first knew and became followers of Jesus. Andrew and John had gone across the Jordan, to Bethabara, to hear John the Baptist preach; and, having heard him, they became disciples. The loving Andrew, and John the beloved, we knew them, and the Baptist knew their tender hearts when, on hearing of Jesus' approach, he said to them: "Behold the Lamb of God." Then, as soon as they heard Jesus speak, their discipleship became changed from John the Baptist to Jesus the Messiah. In the line of the twelve, Peter is named first and then Andrew. The order of their selection by twos was the work of him that knew them best. The impetuous impulsive Peter was guarded by the gentle, unselfish Andrew. James, the plodding stickler for duty, was under the influence of John, the beloved disciple. Thomas, who hardly learned the lesson of faith, was with Matthew, who believed and obeyed at once when Jesus spoke. Philip, whose faith urged him to go and find his yoke-fellow, Nathaniel, "The Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile." James, the less, and Lebbaeus, which is Jude, two brothers, the comfort and stay of each other. The last two being Simon Zelotes, or zealous, with Judas Iscariot, whose zeal was so weak that he afterwards betrayed his Lord and Master.

These twelve, Jesus called around him to equip them for the work that was henceforth to be their life mission. He prepared them to do as he had done, to preach the Kingdom of God and to heal the sick and to cast out evil spirits. They were to preach first to the Jews. Their rejection was not then established. The Jews were to hear the Word of Life before it was offered to the Gentiles. So Jesus told them to go not in the way of the Gentiles, or to any city of the Samaritans, but rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel—those of the flock that had become bewildered by the teaching of the Pharisees and were looking vainly to them as their shepherd. The gospel preacher, to-day, is sent not to those who are contented and happy, but to him who is sin-sick, and to him that must flee from the wrath to come, and the modern preacher needs not so much eloquence as he needs "the demonstration of the spirit and of power." He needs to work out the unsolved problem of how the Church is to reach the masses. The masses are ready to be reached, and they will be reached in no other way than the way that Jesus reached them. He went among them. John Wesley went among them. The calling of conventions and appointing of committees are guns of too long range. It takes nothing less than personal work, and the preachers of to-day must preach and practice fellowship with the godless and the outcast. Not doing as they do, but living among them until he is known by his not doing as they do. To abstain is to condemn.

These twelve were to preach salvation, minister to bodily ills, and remove the cause of sorrow. They were not to make too great preparations in providing themselves with money or clothes; as they were to go among the poor, they must not appear rich. Surely the modern preacher should carefully guard against being classed with the well-to-do, as the line of demarcation between the rich and poor is drawn on every subject, and must distinctly be in religious matters. The Church is on the side of the poor, hoping to make the rich "rich toward God." Into whatsoever city or town ye enter, inquire who in it is worthy, is what every Methodist preacher must do after every new conference appointment. And whosoever will not receive you, nor hear your word, shake off the dust of your feet, but do not until they have heard. There are so many around us, even at our doors, that have never heard a gospel sermon—and they never will—but they may be able to see "living epistles, known and read of all men," in the lives of the true disciples of the Lord Jesus.

These twelve, and every follower of Christ, has freely received full salvation, and they must carry the gospel message along to the next and freely give the good news to every one that asketh the reason of the hope that is within, for Jesus died for all.

Sick's CAPUDINE Cures Sick Headache. Also Nervous Headache, Traveler's Headache and aches from Grip, Stomach Troubles or Female troubles. Try Capudine—it's liquid—effects immediately. Sold by druggists.

DON'T BE WITHOUT WATER.

There is no need of the property holders of this city being any longer without water and sewer connections. This has been the one great distress of our city, not being able to have modern improvements in our homes. But now there is no need of any more complaints along this line, as the city is perfectly willing to connect free any property with the water main, carrying the pipes to the property holders line, without any cost what ever to them.

The popular firm of C. C. Hartwell & Co., on Baronne Street, are making a liberal proposition to connect the sewer pipes free of charge. They also go farther, and agree to do all plumbing and laying of pipes necessary to connect the house with the sewer and water on monthly payments. This enables the property holders to not only put the property occupied by him but any property he has for rent in modern shape, with practically no outlay of ready cash. People interested in this proposition should consult C. C. Hartwell & Co., for a detailed explanation.

Rheumatic Pains

and stiffness in joints or muscles; neuralgia; backache; tired, painful, aching feet; sore hands; sprains and bruises; sore throat and chest, due to colds or grippe; in fact, all the common aches and pains that occur in any family from day to day, yield almost instantly to a good rubbing with

Minard's Liniment.

It does not stain, it is neither sticky nor oily—it is just a delightfully smooth, aromatic cream that feels good on the skin and rubs right in and stops inflammation like magic. Minard's Liniment ought to be on every family medicine shelf, because it is so useful in emergencies, and so prompt in giving relief.

We guarantee it to be just as we represent—should you find it otherwise, we will refund your money on request. Sold by all druggists in three sizes, price 25c., 50c. and $1.00.

FREE: If you have never tried it, and wish to test its merit, write us to-day for a free trial bottle.

MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO.,
South Framingham, Mass.

Royaline Oil

The Great Antiseptic

Every farmer ought to have a bottle handy in case of accident to his family or live stock. A wonderful pain killer. A capital remedy for

Bites, Stings, Swellings, Wounds,

Sore Feet or any kind of inflammation.

One-third stronger than other antiseptics. If you want it weak like the others, you can add water and save money. 25c., 50c. Druggists.

Royaline Medicine Co., Ltd., New Orleans, La.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM

"In the Land of the Sky."

Devoted to the cure of chronic diseases by natural methods. No drugs, no surgery. If you are afflicted with Paralysis, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Neurasthenia or some other disease that medicines have failed to cure, write for our free illustrated book which tells all about this new and better way.

Ideal climate, beautiful mountain scenery, pure water, home-like conditions, hygienic food, personal care and attention to each case, complete new sanitarium equipment, low charges and liberal guarantee of satisfaction are features here.

Patients unable to come to the sanitarium may be successfully treated in their own homes at slight cost.

Write to-day for the book and diagnosis blank—Both free.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM,

ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

After an illness of six months WILLIAM T. RIALS died at his home at Lothe, La., April 22, 1909. Brother Rials was born at Troy, Ala., February 25, 1850; was converted and joined the Baptist Church in 1881. After living a consistent life in the Baptist Church for four years he moved to Caldwell Parish, Louisiana, and united with the M. E. Church. In 1873 he was married to Miss Charity Shaws, who with her six surviving children, W. P., J. M., E. T., C. C. and S. S. Rials and Mrs. Sallie Hendrix are left to mourn their loss. The writer was but little acquainted with Brother Rials, having met him when he was on his death bed, but then he gave us the witness that he was ready to go. His testimony to the last was that all was well. Weep not, then, loved ones, he has gone to God's home. In the glad home of the blest we shall meet him and sing around the throne of God. If we be ready when Jesus calls us, we will meet him in the house not made with hands. The funeral was held in Cottonwood Church, by Pastor White and the remains laid away in the cemetery near the church, to await the general resurrection in the last day. His friend and neighbor, J. W. FAULK.

Little ROBT. JEFFERSON, infant son of E. H. and Anna Walker, was born August 3, 1909, died December 27, of the same year. This was a bright, beautiful baby boy and his fair to make a strong man in the future, but alas! how soon are the fond hopes of loving parents blighted by the cold hand of death. His stay in the world was of short duration, but was by no means devoid of good. He left the impress of his sweet little life on the fond hearts of his parents, grandmother and little sisters, and they will never forget those tender little cheeks and sweet little smiles. The baby comes to cheer the home for a while, but often it is like the flower of the morning—it is soon cut down and withereth. It is not the longest life that always does the most good, but sometimes God blesses a generation through the short life of a little child, and often, if we could only know how many sighs and heartaches were saved, and how much good was done by the early death of the young child, we would rejoice instead of mourn. May the God of all grace bless Brother and Sister Walker and help them to get to heaven with all their children.

J. H. BASS, Pastor.

Mrs. JAS. S. THOMPSON died Feb. 18, 1910, aged 65 years, 1 month, and 2 days. While the whole face of the earth was glorified with a gleaming diamond-like net-work of snow and ice and sleet, brilliantly illumined by the radiant sunbeams into a mass of loveliness, a gentle, manly spirit was passing from the beautiful sunlit scene to the heaven, whose glories it but dimly reflected and symbolized. Mr. Thompson succumbed to pneumonia after a bravely endured illness of seven days' duration, and will be sadly missed from our church and community. For twenty years he was a member of the church and held a stewardship for eighteen years. He was possessed of those modest virtues that made Isaac so great a father in Israel. His peaceful nature rejoiced in its own crystal purity. Kind-hearted, honest and true, with a pleasant word for all, our dear steward was warmly welcomed as a friendly visitor as he went his quarterly rounds in the interest of the church he loved and served so loyally during the eighteen years of his stewardship. Last year, during our protracted services, at the close of one day's worship, he was approached with the earnest plea, "Pray for us." He seemed greatly surprised, so great was his innate modesty. O yes! he was assured, you whose five boys were former playmates and now are professed followers of our Lord, know the secret of acceptable prayer, and you must help us who have not so great a serenity of heart. What this quiet, home-loving, God-serving man was to his devoted wife and ten children, was evidenced in their loving care of him during his last illness, and their poignant grief in giving him up. Our prayers and sympathy go out to those here and loving hearts. May the angels keep watch over them for all time!

M. Z. W. L.

THADDEUS ALEXANDER LEE was born near Edwards, Hinds County, Miss., Oct. 22, 1855. On the morning of the 29th day of Jan., 1910, he peacefully closed his eyes to earthly scenes and his spirit went away to be with God. March 22, 1882, Brother Lee was married to Miss J. Ella Roberts who, with seven children, survive him. In the year 1884, this happy couple left their former home at Edwards and moved to Wesson, Miss., which has since been their home, he having for several years been one of the leading merchants of the town. Brother Lee united with the Wesson Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Feb. 21, 1886, under the ministry of Rev. B. F. Jones. From the first, he was actively identified with the work of the church, holding various official positions and recognized by all as a prince and leader in our Zion. At the time of his death he was chairman of our board of stewards, district steward, and trustee of church property. The church never called him to any place of responsibility which he did not fill with credit to himself and honor to the cause. He was an acknowledged leader in every good movement, both in the church and in the community, and by his characteristic optimism, he inspired confidence and courage in the hearts of those around him. There was nothing small about T. A. Lee—he was a broad-minded, great-hearted, large-visioned, noble man. Truly, he was one of nature's noblemen—yes, more, he was God's own redeemed and regenerated son. Religion was with him a matter of conscious experience, rich and full, and this inner state was evidenced by the fruits of righteousness as they were displayed so beautifully in his life. He was a friend to the poor and distressed; with a free, but unostentatious hand, he dispensed a liberal charity. In the community he was always found on the right side of all moral questions, ready to champion with all his might the cause of truth and righteousness. He loved the church and gave liberally of his time and means to its support. He believed that the church and pastor were entitled to the best that could be obtained. He was a well-rounded church member, interested in every department of the work and a regular attendant upon all of its services. He was the pastor's friend and trusted counsellor. In these lines I record my own love for this good man and the deep sorrow and sense of personal loss which fills my heart since he went away. Next to his once happy, now darkened home, he will be missed nowhere as he will in the church. From the prayer meeting on Wednesday night, he went home to take his bed from which, after two days' illness, he ascended to the Father's house.

"Our friend serenely to his final rest has passed,
While the memory of his virtues lingers yet,
Like twilight hues when the bright sun has set."

PAUL D. HARDIN.

Wesson, Miss.

For HEADACHE—Hicks' CAPUDINE. Whether from Colds, Heat, Stomach or Nervous Troubles, Capudine will relieve you. It's liquid—pleasant to take acts immediately. Try it 10c., 25c. and 50c. at drug stores.

STOPS FALLING HAIR

Ayer's Hair Vigor is composed of sulphur, glycerin, quinin, sodium chlorid, capsicum, sage, alcohol, water, perfume. Ask your doctor about this. Follow his advice. Promptly checks falling hair. Completely destroys dandruff. An elegant dressing.

Does not Color the Hair

J. C. AYER COMPANY, Lowell, Mass.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

W. M. BYRNE, Pres. JOHN T. GIBBONS, Vice-Pres. P. E. BURKE, Sec'y.

Capital.....$200,000.00

Assets.....479,860.90

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

Grenada College.

Secure our catalogue before deciding where to place your daughter. Superior Home Comforts. Only Two Girls in a Room. Marvellous Health Record. Excellent Fine Arts Department. Strong Lyceum Course. Well-Adapted Library. Personal Attention to Individual Pupils. Superior Student Body as Associates. Carefully Selected Faculty. Strong Course of Study. Rates Reasonable. Constant Christian Influence. Permeating and Dominating College Life.

Apply for rooms at once and thus secure choice of location.

W. L. CLEPTON, A.B., Ph.D., President, Grenada, Miss.

Furniture for School Rooms, made in the South, of Southern wood, by Southern people, with Southern capital. New factory—one of the best equipped in America, employing skilled labor only.

Lowest Prices—Advantageous Freight Rates

We make Desks, Seats, Teachers' Desks, Book Cases, Library Tables, Magazine Racks, etc. Write for illustrated catalog and price list. Address

W. A. PRICE & SON, West Jackson, Miss.

If 9,896 Farmers and planters told you that their yields per acre of cotton, corn, tobacco, wheat, fruits, peanuts, rice, sugar cane and truck crops were greatly increased and even doubled

By Using

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers

and which they thought the best and biggest crop producers on earth—wouldn't you feel that you should, in justice to yourself, try these fertilizers and get the same increased yields on your own farm? We have many thousands of un-asked-for letters from farmers blessing the day they bought Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers. Many of these letters are in our 1910 Farmers' Year Book, which can be had free of your dealer, or by mailing us the coupon

SALES OFFICES:

Mail us this Coupon

Richmond, Va.
Norfolk, Va.

Atlanta, Ga.
Savannah, Ga.

VIRGINIA-CAROLINA CHEMICAL COMPANY.

Please send me a copy of your 1910 Farmers' Year Book free of cost.

Name.....

Town.....

State.....

Columbia, S. C.
Durham, N. C.
Winston-Salem, N. C.
Charleston, S. C.
Baltimore, Md.
Columbus, Ga.
Montgomery, Ala.
Memphis, Tenn.
Spartanburg, S. C.

E. C. D. MARSHALL, General Passenger Agent.

Epworth League

By Rev. Wm. H. Coleman.

TOPIC FOR APRIL 10.

THE CHRISTIAN'S SACRIFICE—PRAISE.

(Heb. xlii, 15; Hos. xiv, 1-3.)

I.

The General Idea of Sacrifice.

The idea of sacrifice is common to all religions, polytheistic and monotheistic. The ancient classics make frequent mention of the pagans offering sacrifices to their gods. But the earliest sacrifice mentioned in the history of the human race is that of Cain and Abel, mentioned in the Bible.

Some theologians believe that fallen man, feeling the guilt of sin, conceived the idea himself. Others believe that God commanded it, which is the most reasonable, since there were later laws, in the Mosaic code, providing for it, and since these Jewish sacrifices typified God's promised Messiah who should come to sacrifice himself for man's redemption.

II.

The Old Testament Sacrifices.

The Jews offered five kinds of sacrifices:

1. The Sin-offering, an animal sacrifice, signifying reconciliation.
2. The Burnt-offering, an animal sacrifice, signifying atonement.
3. The Trespass-offering, an animal sacrifice, signifying forgiveness.
4. The Peace offering, signifying communion.
5. The Meal offering, signifying thanksgiving.

III.

Christ's Sacrifice.

Christ, the promised, the long-looked-for, the one typified by these animal sacrifices, came, and the Epistle to the Hebrews, from which our first reference is taken, tells us of His great sacrifice for us. How He was at once the great High Priest—that offered the sacrifice for the people, and the sacrifice that was offered; how He made the offering of Himself once for all time, so that there need not thereafter be either priest or animal sacrifice.

The chief value of the sacrifice of our Lord is not so much its material character as its spiritual character. Not so much in the degree of His suffering as in His intense love for man and perfect obedience to the Father, that actuated His suffering, even unto death. Not so much in His shed blood as in the perfect, complete, devotion of himself to the task of redeeming us, the laying down of His life for us, the final consummation of which culminated in the shedding of His blood.

IV.

The Christian's Sacrifice.

Understanding the nature of Christ's sacrifice will help us to more fully apprehend the true meaning of the Christian's sacrifice, only one phase of which is brought out in the sub-topic, "Praise," for the Christian's real sacrifice involves not only praise, but also substance, service, self—all.

"All to Jesus I surrender,
All to Him I freely give.
I will ever love and trust Him,
In His presence daily live."

Romans gives us a very clear conception of the basis, scope, degree and meaning of the Christian's sacrifice. The inspired author broadly and solidly lays the foundation of it in the great, universally-needed plan of redemption by the atonement of Christ—His sacrifice for us; in our privilege of justification by faith, and the consequent peace with God and abundant life of the Spirit through the infinite riches of His grace.

Therefore (Rom. xii, 1), these being the solid grounds of your sacrifice—your reasonable service is a sacrifice of yourself and all that pertains to your life.

Praise is one feature or part of this. Hebrews xlii, 12, tells us of Jesus sacrifice for us and what it involves for us—our sanctification. Therefore, we are exhorted in verse thirteen to go unto Him, etc.—that is, to avail ourselves of the benefits of His sacrifice. And then (verse 15) to offer to God, by Him, the sacrifice of praise.

1. Our praise, to be a real sacrifice, must be genuine: from a consecrated life and a Spirit-filled heart.

Merely saying the most eloquent prayers is not praise.

It is possible for the singing of the richest and most perfectly trained voice to be a mere mockery of praise.

The one who is wholly consecrated to God will have His love abounding in the soul, and out of the heart will spontaneously flow a greater degree of praise than can be expressed by the lips.

2. Praise must be given thoughtfully.

How easy it is to sing the words of the most devotional and soul-inspiring hymns without thinking of their significance or feeling their sentiment. That is not praise.

How easy it is to go through with certain ritualism without entering into its spirit. That is not praise.

How easy it is to bear testimony in a cold, formal way, using stereotyped expressions, without feeling what we say. That is not praise.

V.

Personal Questions.

1. Do I appreciate the sacrifice of Christ for me?
2. Does my life truly demonstrate the Christian sacrifice: in the home, in school, in society, in the work of the League?
3. Does "the fruit of my lips" always and everywhere reveal a life that is wholly "The Christian Sacrifice?"

CALENDAR.

Woman's Home Mission Society, Annual Meeting for North Mississippi Conference, Columbus, Miss., April 2-6, for Louisiana, New Orleans, La., May 5-8.

Anti-Tuberculosis, Sunday, April 21.
General Conference of Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Asheville, N. C., May 4, 1910.

General Board of Church Extension, Louisville, Ky., April 20.

The World's Missionary Conference, Edinburgh, Scotland, June 14-24.

Annual Meeting of the Woman's Board of Home Missions of the M. E. Church, South, Nashville, Apr. 15-22.

Annual Meeting Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, Clarksville, Tenn., Apr. 20-26.

Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, Annual Meeting, Tupelo, Miss., Tupelo, June 11.

Seashore Divinity School, Seashore Campground, Biloxi, Miss., June 28-July 7.

Epworth League.

North Mississippi League Conference, Kosciusko, Miss., June 14-16.

District Conferences.

Natchez District, Meadville, Miss., April 12-15.

Jackson District, Canton, Miss., April 25-28.

Oxford District, Abbeville, Miss., May 11-13.

Baton Rouge District, Bogalusa, La., May 28-30.

Meridian District, Fifth Street Church, Meridian, Miss., May 30-June 3.

Winona District, Moorhead, Miss., June 2-5.

Shreveport District, Zwolle, La., June 6.

Ruston District, Arcadia, La., July 13.

Columbus District, Mayhew, Miss., April 27.

Aberdeen District, Pontotoc, Miss., June 20-24.

College Commencements.

Montrose Training School, Montrose, Miss., April 15-18.

Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., May 8-10.

Port Gibson Female College, May 12-16.

DUGGAN'S BOLL WEEVIL REMEDY

WILL INSURE A GOOD COTTON CROP

Should be used by every cotton planter in the South. Simple, Cheap, Effective. Fully demonstrated at Natchez, Miss., last season. Write for particulars and references.

One gallon diluted treats 2 acres

J. J. DUGGAN, Mn'fr,

4326 Magazine Street, New Orleans, La.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection of beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

SAWTELL SCHOOL OF MILLINERY

Oldest Millinery School in the South.

Teaches all branches of Millinery successfully. Thoroughly equipped. Competent instructors. Individual instruction. Endorsed by graduates and leading milliners in the South. For fully illustrated catalogue and full information, address Miss Sawtell, 401-2 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga.

The most wonderful sound-reproducing instrument of the cabinet type, combining the highest results of musical genius with a masterpiece of cabinet work—

The Amberola

The newest Edison Phonograph

The Amberola is beautifully simple in outline, exquisitely designed and comes in either mahogany or oak, to harmonize with surroundings in any home. It has drawers in the lower part for holding 100 records.

It plays both
Edison Standard and Amberol Records

Rendering the best of all kinds of music as it is meant to be played, without hurrying or omitting important parts. The price is $200. Other types of Edison Phonographs, $12.50 to $125.

Leo Slezak now sings for the Edison

The greatest living lyric tenor, Leo Slezak, has made ten new Grand Opera Records for the Edison Phonograph. These records include the great arias from Verdi's "Otello," together with arias from other Italian Grand Operas. Slezak sings these Italian Grand Opera arias exclusively for the Edison Phonograph. Hear these new Slezak Records at your dealer's—and be sure to see and hear the Amberola.

Edison Grand Opera Records 75c. and $1.00
Edison Standard Records 35c.
Edison Amberol Records (play twice as long) .. 50c.

National Phonograph Co., 149 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.

Has 2 or 3 Saws.

Our Light Gang Edger
is just the thing
for small mills.

YEARS of experimenting and the best material have made it a Perfect Light Edger. It is as well constructed as our heavier edgers.

The Drive and Feed Pulleys are all on one side so that the saws can be easily and quickly shifted off the other end of the mandrel. The Pressure Rolls swing away from the operator, adjusting the stock readily, and preventing the boards from kicking back.

Many other splendid features are described in our big, new catalog, one copy of which belongs to you. Write for it today.

WHELAND MACHINE WORKS, 2700 Sydney St. Chattanooga, Tenn.

Marriages.

Near Cooperville, Miss., on March 15, 1910, by Rev. D. E. Vickers, T. J. RICHARDSON and Miss VIRGIE TRAXLER.

March 17, 1910, at the Methodist parsonage, Lamar, Miss., by Rev. A. G. Hall, Mr. R. C. McNYNCH to Miss BETTIE HUNT, both of Spring Hill, Miss.

March 27, 1910, at the residence of the bride's parents, near Smithdale, Miss., by Rev. Jas. V. Bennett, Dr. J. H. GERALD and Miss LORENA D. GARNER, both of Amite County.

March 20, in the Methodist Church at Paris, Miss., Mr. GEO. W. SARTOR and Miss INEZ WOOD, both of Paris; Rev. J. E. Cunningham officiating. Miss Wood is the daughter of our pastor at that place.—Rev. W. J. Wood

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

To the Patronizing Conferences of the Seashore Divinity School:

Dear Brethren—The four conferences embraced within the territory of the Seashore Divinity School, at their last sessions, requested the presiding elders to not hold a district or quarterly conference at a time that will interfere with the session of the school—June 28 to July 7.

It may be a matter of interest to those who are recommended for admission on trial by the several district conferences to know that they will have an opportunity to be instructed on the subjects that they will be required to stand an examination upon. The four conferences will be represented on this committee on Admission on Trial, and we are anxious that all who shall apply for admission on trial shall be present and take the course.

The Conference Course will be represented by the other four committees. We are expecting a large attendance of the preachers, and especially the under-graduates.

ROBT. SELBY,
President Board of Directors.
Natchez, Miss., March 31, 1910.

Your Final Opportunity!

Sunday School Teachers! Superintendents! Pastors! Bible Students! You need these Books now as never before! They are now offered N. O. Christian Advocate Readers FOR THE LAST TIME at these prices. Former price $56. Present price represents a discount of 75 per cent., BUT YOU MUST ACT QUICKLY.

ONE-QUARTER OF FORMER PRICE $14

Opportunity of a Life Time Satisfaction Guaranteed

Original Price, $56.00

Now Only

15 Magnificent Volumes
Every One Handsomely Bound in Cloth

Average size of volumes 9 1/2 x 6 1/2 x 1 1/4.

These Books should be in every Christian home.

Thousands of Illustrations, Maps, Etc.
Nearly 12,000 pages.

YOUR LIBRARY IS NOT COMPLETE WITHOUT THESE INDISPENSABLE REFERENCE BOOKS

Gilbert's Three Thousand Selected Quotations.
Bearing words of brilliant writers from the literature of all ages, with complete index of authors and subjects. 681 pages. Former price, $4.50.

Smith's Dictionary of the Bible.
An indispensable aid to Ministers, Teachers, Families, Sunday-school Superintendents and Bible readers generally. 1024 pages. Fully illustrated. Former price, $4.50.

Cruden's Complete Concordance.
Scripture is the best interpreter of Scripture and, next to the Bible, no volume is of greater value to the Bible student than Cruden's Concordance. 754 pages. Former price $1.50.

Conybeare and Howson's Life and Epistles of St. Paul.
There is no work that will compare with this in giving a life-like picture of the great apostle and the work which he did. 1,044 large octavo pages, many fine illustrations, maps, charts, etc. Formerly sold for $4.50.

Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Bible Commentary, 2 Vols.
A complete commentary—critical, explanatory and practical—on the Old and New Testaments. Consists of notes that are concise, learned and easily understood, that elucidate the difficult passages of Scripture. 1320 pages. Former price $9.00.

Kilno's Illustrated History of the Bible.
No modern writer has done more to cloth with a fresh and living interest the main personages and incidents in Bible History than John Kilno in this magnificent work. Over 100,000 copies have been sold. 735 double-column pages. 220 illustrations. Former price, $4.50.

HOW TO ORDER On the Monthly Payment Plan we require an advance of $2.00 with order and promise to pay $1.00 monthly until payment is completed. Books forwarded at once on receipt of cash price, or first installment of $2.00. Customers pay freight or express charges. Those at remote points or in foreign countries desiring us to prepay will send 30 cents per volume to cover cost of postage or express. Safe delivery guaranteed to any station in the country or to any mail point in the world. We will take back books that are not satisfactory in ten days after examination and return money, deducting only the return transportation charges.

As to our reliability we refer you to the publisher of N. O. Christian Advocate or to any commercial agency.

Established 1844.

Greatest Religious Book Offer Ever Made New Orleans Chris. Advocate Readers

EVERY BOOK NEWLY MADE

Every book newly made and unusually well bound

Fausset's Critical and Expository Bible Cyclopaedia.
This great work is the result of seven years of labor by the author, contains three thousand seven hundred articles, and makes a complete and perfect Bible Cyclopaedia. 790 three-column pages. 600 illustrations. Former price $5.00.

Ederheim's Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah, 2 Vols.
Gives a full account of the Society, life and development—intellectual and religious—in Palestine, to serve as a frame and background for the picture of Christ. A life of the Saviour which is critical as well as Biblical. 1,524 pages. Former price, $ 0.

Josephus Complete Works.
In this great work is contained the History and Antiquities of the Jews; Destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans; Dissertations concerning Jesus Christ, John the Baptist, James the Just, and the Sacrifices of Isaac. Nearly 1,000 pages. Former price $4.00.

Thomson's The Land and the Book, 3 Vols.
The modern Holy Land as illuminating the ancient and the Bible. An invaluable and charming classic by a great missionary, forty-five years in Syria. Three volumes averaging 764 pages each, beautifully printed and bound; 6 maps, over 100 fine full-page woodcuts, besides several hundreds in the text. Former price, $12.00.

Sanford's Concise Cyclopaedia of Religious Knowledge.
A storehouse of information regarding Church History, Bible History, Names, Places, Customs, Doctrines, Creeds, Denominations, The Early Church, The Story of the Reformation, the various Young People's Societies, Theologians, Scholars, Cathedrals, Churches, etc. 985 pages, beautifully illustrated. Former price $3.50.

	MONTHLY PAYMENT PRICES		CASH PRICES		Money
Complete Set; 15 Vols.,	$15.00	16 Vols.,	$14.00		cheerfully
Choice of 12 "	13.00	Choice of 12 "	11.00		refunded
Choice of 10 "	12.00	Choice of 10 "	10.00		if books
Choice of 8 "	10.00	Choice of 8 "	8.25		are not
Choice of 6 "	8.00	Choice of 6 "	6.75		entirely
Choice of 4 "	6.00	Choice of 4 "	5.00		satisfactory
Choice of 2 "	4.00	Choice of 2 "	3.00

S. S. SCRANTON CO., Publishers - Hartford, Conn.

Darsam Bros. Coal Co.

COAL, COKE AND ANTHRACITE.

2217 Callope Street, New Orleans.

Phone Main 1552, P. O. Box 1406.

VISIT

MINERAL WELLS

For

HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND

WEST TEXAS

For

FINE AGRICULTURAL LAND
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE
DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,

General Passenger Agent,

DALLAS TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a. m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p. m.

FOR

NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.
SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW ON SALE.

ILLINOIS
CENTRAL

WILL SELL TICKETS AT RATE
$32.00

To San Francisco, Los Angeles and other California Points

March 1st - April 15th

To Portland, Seattle, Spokane,
$45.95,

And Other Points in Oregon, Washington, Utah, and Wyoming.
LIBERAL STOPOVERS.

Full Particulars.

Ticket Office, 141 St. Charles
PHONE MAIN 3618

Stop LaGrippe!

Before it Stops You.

Take

JOHNSON'S

Chill and Fever Tonic

Knocks it up every time.

Your money back if it fails.

Get it to-day!

50c at Druggists.

ESTABLISHED 1858
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

PLYMYER
CHURCH BELLS
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Bowden
CHURCH & SCHOOL BELLS
Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

HOUSE KEEPERS, ATTENTION

Just what is required in any household that does ironing. This sprinker is made from good quality material and has been carefully examined. Will not rust. Hills from corrod handle, holds a pint of water, and can be hung up to drain when not in use. No spilling or wasting water. And dishes are always evenly sprinkled. Sent postpaid on receipt of 30 cents in stamps or silver. Catalogue of household specialties FREE. Beautiful premiums given. Club orders taken. Phila. Novelty Co., 104 E. Garfield St., Germantown, Phila.

A "SQUARE DEAL"

It is often argued that women do not have an equal chance with men, for enjoyment and usefulness, because women suffer so much from pain and weakness. In a general sense, it is true that women bear more physical pain than men. However, the belief that women must suffer regularly, on account of ailments and weakness peculiar to their sex, has been successfully contradicted by the relief so many women have obtained by the use of Cardui, that great remedy for suffering women.

During the past fifty years, many thousands of women have written us, telling of the immediate relief and permanent benefit they have received from Cardui. These letters cover a great many forms of womanly illness. Mrs. M. E. Allred of Hartford, Wash., writes: "Ever since I was 16 years old, I have suffered from female troubles. I had headache, backache and other troubles, every month. Some two years ago, I began to use Cardui, and since then I have had no backache, my other troubles have stopped, I don't need any medicine, and I am well."

What Cardui has done for Mrs. Allred and other women, it surely can do for you. Try it at once. Give yourself a "square deal." You will never regret it. Sold everywhere.

Would-Be Passenger (out of breath from running)—When does the half-past-five train leave? Porter—Five-thirty. Passenger—Well, the church clock is twenty-seven minutes past, the postoffice clock is twenty-five minutes past, and your clock is thirty-two minutes past. Now, which clock am I to go by? Porter—"Ye can go by any clock ye like, but ye can't go by the train, for it's gone."

CHURCH DEDICATION AT BELEN.

The new Methodist Church at Belen, Miss., is completed. It is a handsome and modern structure, valued at $2,000. The building committee consists of Mrs. G. C. Jones, Mr. C. W. Partee, Jr., and Mr. J. B. White. The members of the committee have been untiring in their work, and faithful. Having a small membership, the splendid new church stands as a monument to their efforts and the liberality of the people of the town of Belen.

On the fourth Sunday in April the church will be dedicated. Rev. W. W. Woolfard will preach the sermon for the occasion. All former pastors are invited to be present.

T. M. BRADLEY, P. C.

OXFORD DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Will all the brethren who expect to attend our District Conference at Abbeville, Miss., May 11-13, please notify me at once? Also, I request all of the pastors to send me the names of delegates immediately, in order that homes may be provided for them. I trust that I may have a prompt response from all interested.

B. P. FULLILOVE, P. E.
Abbeville, Miss.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Monroe Dist.—Second Round.

W. Monroe, at Colony, April 9, 10
Marion, at Magnolia, April 15, 16
Gilbert, at Magnolia, April 23, 24
Winnsboro, at Crowville, April 23, 24
Oakridge, May 1
Florence, May 8, 9
Mangham, at L. Creek, May 14, 15
Delhi, May 21, 22
Collinston, May 28, 29
Downsville, June 1
Floyd, June 4, 5
Lake Providence, June 11, 12
St. Joseph, June 18, 19
Brookland, June 22
Cathoun, June 25, 26

S. S. KEENER, P. E.

Ruston Dist.—Second Round.

Haynesville, at New Salem, 11 a. m., April 9
Haynesville Mission, at Woodward Chapel, 11 a. m., April 10
Haynesville, sermon, 8 p. m., April 10
Benton, at Alden Bridge, April 16, 17
Blenville, at Burk Place, April 23, 24
Simsboro, at Vienna, April 30, May 1
Ruston, 11 a. m., May 8
Arcadia, 8 p. m., May 8
Plaindealing, at Emma, May 14, 15
Vernon, at Wesley, May 21, 22
Gibland, at Mt. Moriah, May 28, 29
Ringgold, at Rocky Mt., June 3
Lanesville, at Brashwood, June 4, 5
Bernice, at Bernice, 8 p. m., June 8
Winnfield, June 11, 12
Jonesboro, at Hodge, June 12, 13
Cotton Valley, June 18, 19

Lisbon, June 22
Houghton, at Castor, June 25, 26
Mindell, 8 p. m., June 26
The District Conference will convene at Arcadia July 1 to 3. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. Robert Randle on June 30, at 8 p. m.
R. W. TUCKER, P. E.

Alexandria Dist.—Second Round.

Pollock and Standard, at Standard, Apr. 5
Glenmora, at Fellowship, Apr. 9, 10
Colfax, at Montgomery, Apr. 13
Tioga, at Oak Grove, Apr. 16, 17
Selma, Apr. 20
Opelousas, Apr. 24, 25
Ville Platte, Washington, Apr. 24, 25
Bunkie, at White Chapel, Apr. 27

PAUL M. BROWN, P. E.

Lafayette Dist.—Second Round.

New Iberia, Apr. 9, 10
French Mission, at Lydia, Apr. 10, 11
Morgan City, Apr. 16, 17
Jeanerette, Apr. 17, 18
Franklin, Apr. 23, 24
Lafayette, Apr. 24, 25
Houma, Apr. 30, 1
Patterson, May 1, 2
Prudhomme, at P., May 7, 8
Lake Charles, May 14, 15
Rayne, May 15, 16
Sulphur, at Vinton, May 21, 22
Jennings, May 22, 23
Bell City, May 28, 29
Lake Arthur, May 29, 30

J. E. DENSON, P. E.

New Orleans Dist.—Second Round.

Plaquemine, at P., Apr. 10
Slidell, Apr. 17
Covington, Apr. 24
Algiers, a. m., May 1
Carrollton, p. m., May 1
Felicity, May 29
First Church, a. m., June 5
Second Church, p. m., June 5
Rayne Memorial, June 12

F. N. PARKER.

Hattiesburg Dist.—Second Round.

New Augusta, at Richton, Apr. 10, 11
Eucutta, at Eucutta, Apr. 14, 15
Vosburg, at Philadelphia, Apr. 16, 17
Hattiesburg, Main Street, Apr. 21
McLain, at Pine Grove, Apr. 23
Leakesville, at L., Apr. 23, 24
Pachuta, at Adams, Apr. 30, May 1
Hattiesburg, Broad St., May 4
Lux, at Lux, May 7
Purvis, at Dearmans, May 9
Sumrall, May 14, 15
Maxie, at Epps, May 16
Oloh, at Tracy's, May 21, 22
Eastbutchie, at Pleas. R., May 29, 30
Magee, at Sharon, June 4, 5
Collins, at Collins, June 6
Lucedale, June 11, 12

M. B. SHARBROUGH, P. E.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVES TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle. Showing is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effective form. For grown people and children, 50c.

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also.

COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.

1300-1302

DRYADES STREET.

PHONES—Jackson 1080—1081.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL

We ship on approval without a cash deposit, freight prepaid. DON'T PAY A CENT if you are not satisfied after using the bicycle 10 days.

DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from any place until you receive our latest art catalog illustrating every kind of bicycle, and have learned our unheard of prices and marvelous new offers.

ONE CENT is all it will cost you to write a postal and everything will be sent you free post paid by return mail. You will get much valuable information. Do not wait, write it now. TIREX, Coaster. Brake rear wheels, lamps, sundries at half usual prices. MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. M34, CHICAGO

$525 in Prizes For Bible Readers Open to Old and Young

IN ORDER to encourage Bible study, I offer 1st, $25 for best answers to questions on baptism. Send for list (furnished free), get all the help you wish from any source, and if you will enclose 16 cts. in stamps, I will mail you a copy of The Bible Mode of Baptism from which you can learn the answer to every question. 2nd, I offer $500 for the references where rantizo appears in the Greek New Testament 62 times; ekkeio, 152 times, and lono, 139 times, as claimed by Baptist scholars and writers. Consult any Greek scholar, lexicon, or concordance and let me hear when ready. Rev. J. E. Mahaffey, Box 315, Clinton, S. C.

Fish Bite

Like hungry wolves, any time, if you use MAGIC FISH LURE. Best fish bait ever discovered. Write to-day and get a box to help introduce it. Agents wanted. J. F. Gregory, Dept. 4, St. Louis, Mo.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

"Daddy says Crystal Gelatine is great for kids!"

Makes a perfect dessert for the children. At parties and lawn fetes Crystal jellies are a great favorite with the little folks. They could eat nothing purer or more healthful.

Crystal Gelatine is very economical, one package making two full quarts. Tasteless and odorless—assimilates perfectly with milk or cream. You don't know how tender a jelly can be until you try Crystal Gelatine.

Ask your grocer. If he does not keep it, send us his name and we will send you a free sample package.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.
121A Beverly St.,
BOSTON, MASS.

The only baking powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

Safeguards the food from alum

Tidings from the Field

Oakvale, Miss.:

The Rev. D. C. Farmer, of Wesson, Miss., was with us on the 20th inst., and he preached two able sermons for us.

The good people of Oakvale pounded us with a beautiful line of groceries, on Thursday evening, and to my surprise, among the things that were brought was a nice white shirt for the preacher to wear next Sunday. Much obliged to one and all—come again.

I am delighted with this my second year, and I am as happy as I can be in this land.—Yours faithfully, Hilary Westbrook.

Rainey, Miss.:

At the last session of the Annual Conference I was read out for my first time to Rainey charge by Bishop Hoss. We arrived during the first snow of the winter, and the good women had the parsonage ready to receive their new pastor. We find everything promising and we are moving on fairly well. We have three Sunday schools, and the laymen's movement under way at two places. The pastor's salary was raised by the stewards over what it was last year. These are a loyal people and they know how to take care of a pastor. We have part of a fund in subscription, to build a new church and have money in hand to place an organ in one. We have made one hundred pastoral visits and received eleven subscribers to the Christian Advocate. We also have two prayer meetings. We are praying for a great revival to sweep through our land.—C. A. Northington, P. C.

Booneville, Miss.:

In justice to my constituency and predecessors on this work, I feel that folks ought to know just what is doing here on the Booneville Circuit. I feel, too, that my predecessors by hearing of the good things that are taking place here with us, will be encouraged to know that their efforts and work for the uplifting of these dear people were not in vain, and that it will have a tendency to make them push forward with greater tenacity than ever before. Such things as have taken place in the past are being repeated in this very day and time. We see repetitions of the spiritual and every other sphere of life as they occurred hundreds of years ago.

Just yesterday (the fourth Sunday) we experienced a Pentecostal day. There were certainly the speaking with new tongue and other such rejoicings in our Carolina Church at the 11 o'clock service. When I came here I was told that this Church was about dead and that its funeral would soon have to be preached, but yesterday, which was in commemoration of our risen Lord, old Carolina threw off her grave clothes and came forth shouting and singing praises to the lowly Galilean. Men and women who have been spiritually dead, arose from their graves and reconsecrated their lives and all, to the service of God in words, deeds and actions. Hence, I say we had the speaking with new tongues. Such performances as this have taken place at several of our monthly appointments this year already. Oh, what a glorious time we have had; for the Lord has been with us powerfully!

We have organized two Sunday schools (there were two which were already in existence), all of these are doing very fine work. We have very enthusiastic superintendents and teachers in all of our schools; have also organized two Home Mission Societies, one with a membership of twenty-two women and eight men as honorary members, and this out of a Church, too, with just forty-two members. We are going to put forth great efforts to get the other twelve into it, or some other working society of the Church. We believe that it is best for everybody to work—"father included."

We also have the old-style class meeting organized; it is a great inspiration to the people.

By the help of our zealous brother, J. H. Holder, of Booneville, we organized an Epworth League at Blackland (that is, Brother Holder organized it); and want to say right here that Blackland has furnished the official material and a large part of the membership for the Booneville League. I expect that's why they have been such a live, wide-awake one. We are figuring on having the "Banner" League of the North Mississippi Conference at Blackland.

I find it very easy to organize these various societies in sections where the ground has been well worked. Deep plowing, followed with harrowing over the ground, puts it in a very fine pulverized condition; and it is still better when all this is followed by good seed sowing. It makes the cultivation and harvesting much easier—such has been the case in these parts.

We find that we have been preceded by some of the "Giants" of the conference, hence it is easy to reap the harvest. To say nothing of the worthy brethren that served this work in the past few years, we see vivid footprints of Brothers W. A. Clark, W. R. Williams, D. W. Babb, T. H. Dorsey and W. M. Young. The last two mentioned, we learn, had Pentecostal times at this Carolina Church mentioned above, some many years ago when in their boyhood ministry.

We have a fine co-operative body of stewards who have recently ordered the expenditure of $200 on the parsonage; so you can readily see that the spirit of progress has permeated the heart, head and pocket of old and young. We have added eight members to our Church rolls. Praise the dear Lord for it all.—W. V. Shearer, P. C.

Greenville, Miss.:

It will doubtless be interesting to you, Mr. Editor, who spent the six years, just prior to your removal to New Orleans in the Queen City of the Delta, where you are justly esteemed by all men, both as a minister of Jesus Christ and a broad-minded American citizen, to hear some tidings from that field with which you are still legally united. And I am persuaded that what is here written will arrest the interest of other brethren, beloved, who have labored in this field in times past.

Under the operations of the time limit Greenville received a new pastor for the current conference year in the person of Rev. W. S. Lagrone, and a new presiding elder in the person of Rev. W. W. Woollard, both seasoned and tested workmen, among the very best in the North Mississippi Conference. Both were most cordially received by the good people of Greenville, but we dare not say that they were warmly received, for the first Sunday after Conference, when both were in the pulpit, was one of the most inclement days I remember ever to have seen. But the fires of fraternal regard burned brightly in all hearts and the reception was warm after all.

It is hardly necessary for me to say that Brother Lagrone took a vigorous hold of all the affairs of the Church at once. Anything else would be a violent deviation from the habit of a life-time. He has gently but firmly laid his hand on the forces of the Church and is conducting a forward movement along the whole line of religious effort. The result has been a largely increased attendance upon the services of the Church and a greatly deepened interest in its on-going. Twenty-two additions have thus far been made to the Church. Interest in the Sunday school is growing, the attendance last Sunday morning being one hundred and sixty. Brother Lagrone will begin his meeting on April 20. All of the affairs of the Church bear a hopeful indication. The finances are all in the hands of the official board, and are in a good state of forwardness. Everything has been paid to date and provision has been made for a considerable payment on the Church debt.

I can not forbear to say that in my opinion one deep secret of Bro. Lagrone's success is his evident belief in the gospel he proclaims. He is troubled with no uncertainties concerning its authority, its divinity, its truth. Another secret is his optimism. He knows no such word as fail.

I shall now tell you, Mr. Editor, of an event which will excite envy in your bosom. During the Easter holidays Brother Woollard and I, accompanied by some of our juvenile friends, spent a couple of days on beautiful Lake Washington. Indulging the gentle art of angling. We were the guests of that best of good fellows, Rev. J. H. Ingram, pastor at Glen Allen, who is in highest favor throughout those regions. He proved to be a royal host, leaving nothing undone that might minister to our pleasure, and his good wife promoted our comfort in a manner characteristic of those best of women, Methodist preachers' wives. Now, then, does that not make you envious, sir?

I must not close without telling you that your worthy successor on the Greenville District is planning largely and wisely for the Lord's work in this great country. If the preachers and laymen co-operate with him—and I have not heard a single discordant note—he will do great things for our Methodism in this greatest district in the North Mississippi Conference.

The interests of our Conference organ are receiving due attention in Greenville, Brother Lagrone having already secured more than one hundred new subscribers and more to follow. The preachers in the patronizing territory should experience no difficulty in circulating the most ably edited paper in Southern Methodism, The New Orleans Christian Advocate.—J. D. Barbee.

To pray together, in whatever tongue or ritual, is the most tender brotherhood of hope and sympathy that men can contract in life.—Madam de Stael.

If your cup is small, fill it to the brim. Make the most of your opportunities of honest work and pure pleasure.—Selected.

Weak Hearts

"I was terribly afflicted with my heart. At times it seemed to miss every other beat. I took Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy until my trouble was all gone—it has never returned." R. R. PENN, Springville, Iowa.

One person in every four has a weak heart. Some are born weak, some become weak from disease, others by over-exertion. If you have palpitation, fluttering, irregular pulse, short breath, oppressed feeling in chest, smothering or faint spells, you may know your heart is weak. There is nothing better for a weak heart than

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy. It has brought relief to thousands, it should do you, even in cases of long standing.

The first bottle will benefit; if not your druggist will return your money.

IMPORTANT!

Write this very day
for your copy of the Van Antwerp Seed
Catalog—Free.

You can not afford to miss it this season.

Everything in seeds. Van Antwerp's seeds never disappoint you.

Clip and mail this "ad" with 25 cents and we will mail you TEN 50 papers of our selection of choice seeds

Seed Department

Van Antwerp's

Dept. B, MOBILE, ALA.

DON'T LET THE KNOCKER INSULT YOUR INTELLIGENCE.

Of course you have met the knocker, the chronic hysterical knocker who always greets you with his tales of abuse of people and things. He is the wholesale dealer in scandals, insinuations and falsehoods.

Every self-respecting man and woman owes it as a duty to society to silence the knocker on every possible occasion. Life is too short to be wasted in listening to scandals and falsehoods about our friends and neighbors.

Here is the way to silence one knocker. The next time you hear any one say that Coca-Cola contains "dope," ask him if he ever heard of the Pure Food Law. If he says yes, then give him the laugh. If he says no, explain to him how that it is absolutely impossible for any food, or drink containing dope to be marketed under the law passed by the Federal Congress on June 30, 1906, and effective since January 1, 1907. Coca-Cola has always been the most delicious and refreshing temperance drink, absolutely free from anything that could injure the most delicate child.

If the knocker hasn't sense enough to see the point when you explain the Pure Food Law to him, then tell him to write to the Coca-Cola Company, Atlanta, Ga., for a free copy of "Truth about Coca-Cola." Possibly that will open his eyes and close his mouth.

Hope is like the sun, which, as we journey towards it, casts the shadow of our burden behind us.—Samuel Smiles.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, APRIL 14, 1910.

C. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

VOL. 57—No. 15.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2827.

Editorial.

When wealth is lost, little is lost.
When health is lost, something is lost.
When character is lost, all is lost."

Hyperbole abounds. Even many good people are given to using too many superlatives. Exaggeration, though it be in a good cause, is a vice. Moderation in statement should be cultivated. Happy the individual who has formed the habit of expressing the exact truth!

The University of Virginia has hanging upon one of its walls a magnificent portrait of Thomas Jefferson, its illustrious founder. Underneath the picture is written this utterance of the famous statesman: "The art of government is the art of being honest." Wiser words never fell from human lips. And most appropriate are they in this day of graft and political corruption.

In the lives of one of the old saints a story is told of how the devil found a young Christian at a theatre and took possession of him. The saint, discovering it, remonstrated with his satanic majesty, and said, "Why do you take one of the Lord's children?" And the devil said in reply, "What business has one of the Lord's children on my ground?" There are some to-day who do not wait to be tempted by the evil one, but rather tempt him by going to places which he frequents. They make themselves easy victims for the great destroyer.

There are two kinds of crowns spoken of in the New Testament: the "stephanos" and the "diadema." The former is the crown of reward, the latter the crown of sovereignty. The first will be worn by the saints, when the battles of life have been gallantly fought and heaven has been successfully won. The other will grace the brow of him "whose name is above every name," of him who is "the King of kings and Lord of lords." As Bishop Marvin has said, that will be the day of days even in heaven, when the Lamb shall bring his bride to the Father's house to dwell with him evermore.

The press dispatches from San Francisco announce that the Emmanuel Movement in that city has signally failed and will be abandoned. This does not in the least surprise us. There is doubtless some value in mental therapeutics, but the extent to which diseases may be cured by that method is no doubt greatly exaggerated. Such matters had better be left in the hands of physicians. That and all other experiments which would focus the attention of the Church upon the body rather than the soul are only new forms of materialism. Though not indifferent to the alleviation of physical suffering, the religion of Christ must chiefly concern itself with the real man, the invisible spirit. It is true that in accomplishing the redemption of humanity, it will produce "a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness," but that is incidental. Its real mission is to populate heaven with a race of redeemed, perfected and glorified beings, who shall live forever and honor God in loftier ministries than are here possible.

"ST. LUKE THE PHYSICIAN."

Under this caption, in a recent issue of the New York Medical Journal is published an entertaining and instructive article from the pen of Doctor James J. Walsh, the eminent Dean of the School of Medicine of Fordham University. He opens the discussion by calling attention to the fact that within recent years the higher critics have vigorously assailed the statement of St. Paul in Colossians that Luke was a physician, and had apparently established that view to the complete satisfaction of many speculative theologians. But now he affirms that there has come a reaction and that the traditional view is again in the ascendancy. In illustration of this, he refers to a late publication of Professor Adolph Harnack of the University of Berlin, widely known as one of the ablest of the destructive higher critics, in which he holdly champions the old teaching in preference to the new.

In his book, entitled "Luke the Physician," the distinguished German professor lays down for his scholarly argument the following predicate: "When a physician writes a historical work it does not necessarily follow that his profession shows itself in his writing; yet it is only natural for one to look for traces of the author's medical knowledge in such a work. These traces may be of different kinds: 1. The whole character of the narrative may be determined by points of view, aims, and ideals which are more of less medical (disease and its treatment); 2, marked preference may be shown for stories concerning the healing of diseases, which stories may be given in great number and detail; 3, the language may be colored by the language of physicians (medical terms, metaphors of medical character, etc.)." The learned writer then proceeds to show that all of these characteristics are discoverable in the works credited to St. Luke.

But Doctor Walsh does not stop with citing the authority of Professor Harnack, but in an interesting and striking manner takes up the discussion himself and shows that Luke in describing diseases used terms which are distinctively technical, and some of which are found nowhere else in the New Testament. Such words are hydropikos (Luke 14:2), sphurda (Acts 3:7), and apepon and lepidos (Acts 19:18). He also points out that the critics formerly had much to say of the use of wine to heal the wounds of the good Samaritan, contending that no physician would ever have made such a blunder as that; but that recent researches into the works of Hippocrates and other medical authorities of that remote period have demonstrated that it was recognized at that time as a valuable remedy, due no doubt to the fact that it contained enough alcohol to give it an antiseptic effect. And referring to the contention that the Third Gospel and the Book of Acts were not written by the same person (a view formerly much insisted upon by the higher critics), Dr. Walsh points out that the exhibition of a technical knowledge of medicine in the two books puts that question well-nigh out of the domain of dispute.

So wholesome and impressive are some of his observations bearing on this subject that we cannot refrain from quoting him briefly. "This tendency to deny old-time traditions of authorship with regard to many classical writings was a marked characteristic of the nineteenth century, but the close of the century saw practically all of these denials discredited. The separatists were formerly confident that the Iliad and Odyssey were not by the same person, and that even the Iliad itself was the work of several hands. But now we are just as sure that they were composed by the same hand. To maintain the separatist view it is necessary to find another man of supreme genius living at the time; these poems were written. It is easier to explain certain differences of style than to supply another genius. Most of the old works of literature have gone through a similar trial."

And again the writer says, "Perhaps the most unfortunate characteristic of much nineteenth century criticism in all departments, even those strictly scientific, was the marked tendency to reject all previous opinions for new ones. Somehow men felt themselves so far ahead of old-time writers and thinkers that they concluded they must hold opinions different from their ancestors. In nearly every case the new ideas that they evolved by supposedly newer methods are not standing the test of time and further study."

These striking statements are well worth laying to heart. The vagaries of scientific and skeptical theologians spring up and pass away with startling rapidity. To chase after them is to undertake to follow a veritable will-o-the-wisp. They hold to nothing permanently. Their opinions are in a state of perpetual flux. They are like ocean birds—forever riding the bounding billows of speculation and lighting nowhere. Their kaleidoscope theories tax credulity more than all the miracles of all the religions on earth. To turn away from the certainties of the glorious gospel for such unfounded and fitting fancies is the quintessence of absurdity. And to carry such nonsense into the pulpit would be the monumental farce of the ages, did it not partake too much of the nature of tragedy.

It is frequently said it makes little difference what one believes if only his conduct be moral and proper. There never was a teaching more false and misleading. The essential truths of Christianity are cognizable and men are responsible for their beliefs. Such is the declaration of the divine voice both in nature and revelation. The man who mistakes strychnine for quinine and swallows it must pay the penalty with his life. And so he who turns away from the gospel of Christ, upon which divinity is so palpably stamped and the truth of which is attested by the power of the Holy Spirit, to embrace some other faith, or to grope along through the world with no faith, commits soul suicide. Unbelief is a sin of the blackest hue, and, regardless of what one's outward acts may be, shuts out every hope of heaven. "If ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins." He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not on the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."

Christian Advocate.

Published for the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DIRECTIONS.

Correspondents will please direct all communications intended for the Editor to 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Communications intended for the Business Department should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Write with ink, and only on one side of the paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after two weeks, notify us, and we will make it right. Papers will be continued unless subscribers order otherwise.

THE LAW OF THE HARVEST.

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Gal. vi. 7.

Our first impression of these words is that of warning. And that warning is based on the operation of the law of harvests in the things of the Spirit as in the products of the field. The one set of laws is not surer to the eye than the other to the mind. A law is simply a rule of action which is discovered by observation. Things are seen to occur in some uniform manner and then the law of their action is written. We expect uniform results to occur from the same conditions, or else we are surprised, and begin to speak of exceptions to rules and laws. If a farmer found wheat growing where he had planted corn, he would be baffled and confused; indeed, all his skill and experience would count for nothing, if the laws of nature did not act uniformly. If nature played us false and gave us thistles for figs, or stones for grapes, or was uncertain or treacherous in her results, we could not have the beauty and stability that come from order. So, in matters of morals or spirit, we could have no beauty of life or stability of character without order. The very term, morals, implies that there are ethical laws which govern conduct. And they are upheld by sanctions, rewards of obedience and punishments for violations; just as the negligent farmer is rewarded with short crops and the diligent with large increase.

Paul was not the first to formulate this law of the harvest for matters of human conduct. He is simply making use of it in this practical part of his letter to the Galatian Christians. This law had been discovered in the experiences of men, just like the laws of nature, by observation, or, as the logician would say, by the method of induction, by noticing how uniformly certain results follow certain lines of conduct. You know what to reasonably expect from dishonesty—the final results are sure. It is the law of dishonesty to involve those who practice it in ultimate disaster. Back in the days of Job, Eliphaz said:

* * * "they that plow iniquity
And sow mischief, reap the same."

Hosea must have seen this same law operating, for he says: "They sow the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind." It is confirmed every day in the common judgments of life. We estimate men by it whenever we say of certain conduct that "it was to be expected of him." But what Paul does for us in the text is to state this law in a general way and to show that it has its application in both directions, of good as well as of evil. Whatsoever we sow that shall we also reap, and he puts the emphasis on the word "that."

Let us first look at the warning which is quite naturally impressed upon us at the first reading of the text, for it speaks with a positiveness that should sober one's thoughts on life, if this law be found to hold true. We can readily appreciate the fact that the husbandman can not hope to reap better than he sows. We quite naturally expect a crop of overgrowth or weeds, if land is not tilled or cared for. Indeed, it is only by the diligent application of labor that land is even kept up to normal productiveness. Now, human life is no exception to this very same law. Neglect brings regrets, evil sowing produces remorse. You can easily detect these results sooner or later. In the spendthrift, this law of the harvest is very plain to be seen in the want that speedily overtakes him. Or, it is very evident when profligacy overtakes reckless indulgence. But when a youth, whose early years were careless and wild, turns out well, or when a man prospers on ill-gotten gain and probably dies in the full flush of that tainted prosperity, we hastily conclude that this law of the harvest, which declares that a man must reap what he has sown, is discredited. We are tempted to think that death sometimes cheats justice. But we are of short vision if we think that this law of the harvest ceases to operate at death. Death can not bury a virtue or hide a fault. The great Elizabethan dramatist declared that the evil men do lives after them; the good is oft interred with their bones. But such a judgment is only partial. The good will not stay buried. On the one hand, Pontius Pilate is condemned for his cowardice by each succeeding generation, while on the other hand malice may scourge and crucify a Christ, but the sweetness and power of his life can not be hidden of a tomb, even though a Roman seal may be stamped upon it.

We are constantly busy revising history and reversing its judgments, wherein we feel they are false. The very memories of men are made to expiate the evils of their lives or are summoned to vindicate their goodness. A good man can afford to hide his time, for the future will vindicate him. Even Job reached this conclusion that the evil have not the future. The good alone possess the future. During the war of 1812 General Hull was convicted of cowardice and sentenced to be shot, for surrendering Detroit to the British general, Brock, but President Madison pardoned him on account of his services during the Revolution. Hull's defense was that he had surrendered to save the women and children of Detroit from the scalping knives of the Indians who formed part of the Brock's force. James Freeman Clark, the historian, says: "Public opinion has long since revised this sentence (against Hull), and the best historians disapprove it." The rewriting of history is one of our busiest occupations. What a name was that of Napoleon! In rewriting his fame, all acknowledge his largeness, but some question his greatness. He was a colossus—but of selfishness. Last year we had a notorious New York politician of other years visiting in this country from Ireland, whence he fled until the statute of limitations should put him safe beyond the reach of the law. Some prominent New York people attempted to honor him with a banquet, but in the future that will be written down to their shame, not their glory. Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. We can not escape that law; for we have not only the present but the future also to reckon with.

This law of the harvest is more or less obvious in all these cases, yet it is just as true and persistent, if not so obvious, in the sphere of our private lives. If not a leaf can stir in the great workshop of God about us without its due effect, neither can a single thought pass without its record and effect in our lives. Nature is not more sensitive to the forces that operate within it than our lives are to the spiritual laws which mold and fashion the character of them. Take, for example, the law of consistency, which means that the inward motive of life is the same as outward expression; that there is harmony between conduct and inward desire. Let a Christian violate that principle through insincerity and he will reap the natural fruits of hypocrisy, which will tear down his faith in human virtue and character, and it will ultimately undermine his confidence in God. He may not become an avowed Atheist, yet he will lack the vital spark that genuine piety has, and as a Christian he will be only nominally so. He will have sympathy with all good things, but not power in the possession of them. We may deceive the world, but we mock only ourselves.

But, in the second place, there is this encouraging side of the law of the harvest, we may determine the nature of the harvest. We may sow what we desire to reap. If we give our energies to high thoughts and noble ends, we shall reap of the Spirit, life eternal. Such a promise is precious and at times comforting when we are depressed concerning the outcome of life's striving. It nerves us for effort, when listless or indifferent, to realize that the harvest must come to all honest effort. The reason such a promise is not more attractive to young people is because we make eternal life too much a matter of heaven, too much like life insurance where one must file to win, instead of identifying eternal life with all worthy life, as Jesus did. This is life eternal, to know God and him whom he hath sent. Young people aren't standing on Jordan's stormy banks and casting wistful eyes to Canaan's fair and happy shores, as the poet says. They are full of energy and life, not waiting on the shores of death, and religion must be defined to them in the terms of worthy living. Let us teach them to live worthily that the favor of God and men may rest upon them, and that if they expect such favor they must sow aright.

Every community, every generation, has its abundant illustrations of just this side of the law of harvests. No man can grow into the esteem and respect of his community without laying a foundation in worthy living. The farmer in the spring will determine what crops he desires to raise in the coming season and then in accordance with that plan he will sow his proper grain. And what he sows that will be reap. The only time to determine the nature of the crop, is in the time of sowing. How many would like to change the harvest at the time of reaping, who have neglected this truth in the time of sowing! How many begin to sow late what ought to have been sown earlier! One of the commonest, as well as the saddest facts of human experience is, the lament over loss, because of neglected opportunities. How much of the sacrifice and effort of the present generation is made that its follies may be overcome in the next generation and not repeated. How we try to put old heads on young shoulders, just for this very reason. If they would only sow right, we feel sure of the harvest. And well we may, for there is no law in the universe surer than this; that right results are guaranteed to all who will patiently sow and cultivate for them. We too frequently sap our strength by contemplating the joy of results, instead of centering our attention on the effort needed to produce those results. Harvests are not reaped from day dreaming. There is joy at the harvest time; but there is also the keen March wind that he, who would have the joy, must face, as he goes down the field to sow.

Another truth of the law of the harvest is that we reap more abundantly than we sow. This is a source of sorrow and a source of joy. We sow sparingly, but we reap in abundance. We scatter in handfuls, but we gather in bushels. After the night of weeping there comes the morning of abounding joy. How invigorating and transporting it is to think the good we do goes on increasing according to this law of the harvest. Think of the increasing good of a Paul as the years unfold! And the same holds true of any good life of service. The good men do does not die with them.

But if this be true of the good we do, according to the same law, what must we say of the evil we do? Does it increase with the years? What an appalling thought! Have you ever found yourself overwhelmed by a grief that could be traced to a very little misstep or wrong you did, perhaps thoughtlessly?

Such is the law of the harvest. Do not quarrel with it or fight against the inevitable, but take advantage of it. Sow that which shall make you glad at harvest time.—Rev. A. T. Steele, in the Methodist Recorder.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By H. P. Lewis, Sr.

VIII.

Courtship and Marriage.

In the good Book, we read in Gen. ii. 18, "It is not good that the man should be alone." And in Heb. xiii. 4, "Marriage is honorable in all." The wisest and best men in all ages, with very few exceptions, have demonstrated the above fact. Man, in his sojourn here on earth, whether he be a minister of the gospel or not, needs the advice and counsel of the pure, sweet woman. It takes a good, pure woman, among other things, to make a home what it ought to be.

Just how old, or rather how young I was when, for the first time, I began to think and talk about matrimony, I do not know. Being brought up in a pure, Christian home, where love predominated—the right kind of parental love—where there was peace and happiness with Jesus, the Christ, exalted in the home, it is not at all surprising that I should contemplate a union with some good woman. Some women are not good. Then, not all good, pure women are adapted to the work of an itinerant life.

In my young manhood I was often told to "look before you leap." If all young people, especially preachers, and women contemplating marrying preachers, would move cautiously, thoughtfully, and prayerfully on this subject by taking time to think seriously and to talk often face to face with the good Lord about it, there would be more happiness, less jars, misunderstandings, etc., and fewer divorces.

It is said that a preacher, many years ago, became wonderfully interested in a certain young woman, and thought she was the very woman he needed for a wife. It was in the early days of Methodism when preachers were expected to pray about such matters. So he sought the Lord in prayer, and asked him to let him know in some way or other, if she were the proper one for him to marry. The Lord did not satisfy him fully; so the poor fellow grew impatient about it, became a little desperate, and cried: "O Lord, let me have her, let me have her anyhow."

I have seen some women that grew sore under the duties, trials and hardships they had to endure as wives of itinerants. To have to move every one, two, three or four years; cut loose from well tried friends and loved ones, go away among strangers and to strange places is real hard on some good women. And I say it is hard, too. For a woman to be happy and contented under any and all circumstances with her husband, to "endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ," she ought to be a woman of good common sense, a truly saved woman, one consecrated to God and the work of the ministry. An unconverted or society woman has no business in a Methodist parsonage any more than an unsaved, unregenerated man has in the pulpit. I believe some women are called to the work of the ministry in their sphere, as much so as men are, called to fill the pulpit as expounders of God's Word.

It was in the latter part of 1858 that I heard of the young woman whom I afterwards married. I heard that she was young, sensible, soundly converted, able in prayer, and a good worker in the church. Without telling anybody, I said to myself, "I will marry her if I can, the Lord being willing." Conference, which met in Woodville that year, was near at hand; I made it convenient to go by where she lived, in the home of Rev. C. A. McNeal, her uncle. I met her for the first time on Dec. 3, 1858. But oh! alas! she was engaged to another. Yet, we saw each other, and I guess, loved each other on first the need for such a house as we have indicated is imperative. Of that fact we have never at any time had the least doubt. But the closer investigation that we have recently made has served to deepen and intensify our conviction on the subject. Washington City is the Capital of the nation, and the very center of its political life. More than that, it is a meeting-place for the nations of the earth. Thither come all kinds and classes of people from every quarter of the world. Other churches have not been slow to recognize this fact; and to take advantage of it. The Roman Catholics in particular, who are never lacking in practical sagacity, have long followed the policy of entrenching themselves here

Indorsement by the Bishops.
We, the undersigned Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have attended the meetings of the National Building Committee, having in charge the erection of our representative Church in Washington. We cordially concur in the statement.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

Secular News and Comment

Prof. Alcee Fortier, who has lately been offered a chair in the Cincinnati University at an increased salary, has announced his purpose to remain at Tulane. There will be a rally of the Acadians at Lafayette, La., on April 28, when Prof. Fortier has been invited to deliver an address in French.

Lord Kitchenier, the famous field marshal of the British Army, landed in San Francisco on the 7th instant. He had been inspecting and reorganizing the troops of Great Britain in Australia, and was en route to Canada. He is, perhaps, the world's most eminent living soldier.

Prof. Barnard of the Yerkes Observatory, who was one of the first to photograph Halley's comet and has been a close student of the celestial wanderer, thinks it is dwindling in both substance and luminosity. He affirms that it will not be visible before April 20, and then only at dawn. Mr. Barnard was formerly connected with Vanderbilt University, where he achieved national distinction as an astronomer.

Forty-eight per cent, or 1,942 of the students at Harvard this year are from Massachusetts. California sends 63; Oregon, 19; Washington, 26; Nevada, 2; Utah, 5; Idaho, 5; Arizona, 2. The law school is the most national in its scope. Of its 749 students only 208, or twenty-seven per cent, are from Massachusetts. The foreign element at Harvard has doubled in the last five years and is now four per cent.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

The trans-Andine railway tunnel connecting Chili and the Argentine Republic, has just been completed, the first train passing through on the 5th instant. It is 12,000 feet above the sea level, is five miles long, and the highest subterranean passageway in the world. It affords direct communication between Valparaiso and Buenos Ayres. The finishing of its construction was an occasion of general celebration in the two countries most interested.

The scientific collection received by the Smithsonian Institute, as a result of the African expedition headed by Mr. Roosevelt, is said to be the most complete and valuable in the world, and one which will be of great service to naturalists. The specimens procured are reported as follows: 11,397 vertebrates, consisting of 4,897 mammals, 4,000 birds, 2,000 reptiles and batrachians, and 500 fishes; and a considerable number of invertebrates, including crabs, beetles and millipedes; and in addition to this, many marine and fresh water shells and several thousand plants.

Dr. Simon Flexner, of the Rockefeller Institute, has announced the discovery of a serum which he claims is a certain cure for spinal meningitis, if administered in time. The statement is that in 123 cases where the treatment was applied before the third day, 107 recovered. This gives a mortality of 16.5 per cent, whereas the mortality rate under the usual method of treatment is from 75 to 80 per cent. If Dr. Flexner's remedy stands the test and does what is now claimed for it, he will have done a great service for mankind and have written his name imperishably upon the scroll of fame.

Mrs. Grover Cleveland has lately erected in the Princeton Cemetery, in New Jersey, monuments to her distinguished husband and her daughter, Ruth. The inscription on Mr. Cleveland's tomb is as follows: "Grover Cleveland, born Caldwell, N. J., March 18, 1837; died, Princeton, N. J., June 24, 1908."

No mention is made of the fact that he was once President of the United States.

We do not need to say that we admire the simplicity of this inscription. The truly great are not made more illustrious by titles or official distinction. It is the little fellow who likes to see a long string of letters after his name.

Pellagra is reported to exist in twenty-two States of the Union, and still to be spreading. Its prevalence in the West Indies and South Africa is now well established, and the British government is becoming interested in the study of the malady. The musty corn theory is considered inadequate to explain the existence of the disease in so many countries. Dr. Sambon, who has made extensive researches in the investigation of the subject, thinks that, like malaria and the sleeping sickness, it may be caused by some insect. Some of the States will hold conferences soon to devise ways and means to check the dreadful scourge.

The Baltimore Manufacturers' Record, in its issue of March 10, submits the following figures, which show the phenomenal strides which the South has made in a commercial and industrial way within the past three decades: Since 1880 the population has increased from 16,369,000 to over 28,000,000; the capital invested in manufactures, from $257,000,000 to $2,214,000,000; the products of manufactories, from $457,000,000 to $2,777,000,000; capital invested in cotton mills, from $21,000,000 to $298,000,000; the amount of cotton consumed, from 108,000,000 pounds to 1,200,000,000 pounds; cotton oil mills, from 45 to 850; the capital invested in cotton oil mills, from $3,800,000 to $105,000,000; the value of lumber products, from $39,000,000 to $440,000,000; the value of farm products, from $660,000,000 to $2,550,000,000; the amount of coal mined, from 6,000,000 to 100,000,000 tons; phosphate mined, from 190,000 to 2,592,000 tons; railroad mileage, from 20,612 to 69,400; value of exports, from $264,000,000 to $650,000,000; the assessed value of property, from $2,834,000,000 to $9,565,000,000.

A RINGING APPEAL.

To the pastors and friends of the Anti-Saloon League in the State of Louisiana.

Dear Brethren: I write this letter to inform you that we are expecting to have a great prohibition rally in the city of Baton Rouge during the first week of the Legislature, which meets May 8.

We are arranging a program now, and are in correspondence with some of the national leaders and noted speakers on this question. We are anxious to throw a great body of men and women, preachers and laymen, especially the business men of the State, into Baton Rouge, that the Legislature may know that we are still doing business and are prepared to meet them on any issue that may present itself. It is very important because of the bills that will be proposed that we have as great and as influential a constituency back of these measures, giving them weight, as we possibly can get.

Let every church take the matter up and all Epworth Leagues, Endeavor Societies, W. C. T. U.'s, and temperance societies generally appoint delegates to this convention, or rally. Let the business men of the State organize and also appoint delegates and send a strong body into Baton Rouge to back us in our efforts to free our State from the accursed liquor traffic.

We have great cause for hopefulness. Each day new signs of promise are observed, and we take much courage by the outlook. We have mailed to every pastor in the State, as far as we were able to ascertain their addresses, an appeal and a contribution card, which speak for themselves.

Will not the pastors take this matter up and read the appeal in every one of the churches and give the people a chance to say what they will give for this special work relative to the Baton Rouge Convention?

Our time is short, the needs are great, and the work at a crisis. This means so much to the cause of God and humanity—the salvation of the race and the emancipation of the unfortunates from the curse of liquor.

Brethren, do not disappoint us. This is pre-eminently the work of the Church. There is no cause before the Church or nation to-day that is paramount to this.

We have secured open railroad rates of one and one-third fare round trip, beginning May 7, 8, 9, to bear final return limit to original starting-point prior to midnight of May 16th, tickets to be good commencing date of sale and for continuous passage in each direction.

I am your fraternal servant, J. J. SMYLLIE,
State Superintendent, Louisiana Anti-Saloon League.

AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

Editor New Orleans Advocate: Will you please allow a layman, who loves the Church and her ministry, to call attention to the annual recurring publication of the names of some of our preachers in the list of delinquent tax payers? It is needless to assert that this is a fact which ought not to exist. It does harm. It weakens a preacher's influence over his people. It is a surrender of his rights to assist in choosing suitable men to office. It allows his name, which ought to stand for law and order and all civic righteousness, to appear in public print along with the basest element of the population—those who would sell their own and their country's best interest for a mess of pottage.

As a matter of fact, our ministers, as a rule, to which there are not many exceptions, do stand in the front ranks of men who are battling for all that is good, and fighting against all that is evil. Whatever else may be said of Methodist preachers, it cannot usually be truthfully said of them that they are stingy. It cannot then be true that they place themselves in the attitude of being defaulters to the body politic, just to save the small sum demanded as a poll tax; for that is about all the average Methodist preacher is expected to pay.

I can think of no explanation except that of negligence. And yet they tell us laymen that that sin is sufficient to close against us forever the gates of the eternal city. Will they plead it at the bar of public opinion?

I have been a subscriber to the Advocate for seventeen years; and for several years when the delinquent list has been published, including the names of some of our Methodist preachers I knew and sometimes the name of my own pastor, I have felt that some notice ought to be made through its

THE GROCERY CAT

has been known to sleep in the coffee barrel, or, if the cat's away, that gives the rats and mice a chance. Then there's the dust of the atmosphere and the pickled-pigs-feet-and-mackerel smells that coffee in open barrels take in and so readily absorb. Oh yes, you get a plenty when you buy loose coffee and have the grocer wrap it up for you in a paper bag that leaks strength and flavor all the way to your home; but do you want it all, or simply a clean, crisp, fresh, high-grade article like packed in dust-proof, strength-preserving, germ-free, air-tight cans.

LUZIANNE COFFEE

America's Foremost Brand Sold Everywhere.

THE REILY-TAYLOR CO.,
New Orleans, U. S. A.

columns with the view of getting our pastors to do a little thinking. I have waited for another to do this, but I have waited in vain; and, as I thought it ought to be done, I have decided to do it myself. I would have no objection to letting the readers of the Advocate see who is responsible for this, but prefer to leave each derelict preacher to wonder whether or not I am one of his own members.

LAYMAN.

RATES TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Permit me to say through the columns of your paper for the information of all concerned, that the Southeastern Passenger Association, covering the territory east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio, has authorized a reduced rate to Asheville, on account of the approaching session of the General Conference. Tickets will be on sale May 2-11, good to return, until midnight May 31, 1910, with the privilege, however, of extension to June 15, 1910, by deposit of the ticket with the Special Agent at Asheville, and the payment of a fee of one dollar at the time of deposit.

The reduced rate applies to visitors, as well as to members of the Conference.

B. S. LIPSCOMB,
Sec. Gen'l. Conf. Com. on Entertainment.

GRATEFUL APPRECIATION TO LOUISIANA METHODISTS.

While but few of the preachers responded to our appeal for help on Easter, the donations from the churches, Sunday schools and personal contributions amounted to nearly one thousand dollars. This will enable us to pay off the note and meet many of the other pressing obligations. We take courage and look to God for the help we must have to carry on our work.

ROBT W. VAUGHAN,
Superintendent Louisiana Methodist Orphanage,
Ruston, La., April 8, 1910.

It is a comfortable and cheering thing to have some one praying for you. It heartens you; it acts as a tonic. It gives one the power of courage which comes from a sense of fellowship. Even a man as strong as Paul craved the prayers of others and felt more equal to his apostolic work because of what those prayers secured for him.—Selected.

The entire object of true education is to make people not merely do the right things, but to enjoy the right things—not merely industrious, but to love industry—not merely learned, but to love knowledge—not merely just, but to hunger and thirst after justice.—John Ruskin.

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH
LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE

736 Union Street. Phone, Main 585.

Church News

Dr. Collins Denny will lead the Baltimore Conference delegation in the General Conference. He is a great preacher, and easily one of the foremost men in the connection.

The fifty-fifth session of the Southern Baptist Convention will assemble in Baltimore on May 11th. The opening sermon will be preached by Dr. W. L. Packard of Georgia.

The Epworth Leaguers of the Western North Carolina Conference will meet in Asheville while the General Conference is in session. Among the speakers announced are Bishop Candler, Dr. Palmore, Dr. DuBose, and Prince T. H. Yun.

Mr. Torrey is now conducting a revival campaign at Terakana, which is expected to continue for a month. The services are being held in a tabernacle which will seat 3,000 people. The Protestant Churches of the city are co-operating in the meeting.

Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler's memory has recently been honored by the unveiling of an appropriate tablet at the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church of Brooklyn. The memorial was purchased by $1 contributions from his host of friends and admirers. In the galaxy of great American preachers, Dr. Cuyler has a distinct and secure place.

We note that Rev. R. M. Boone is now in charge of The Baptist Chronicle of Louisiana, succeeding the Rev. J. B. Lawrence, who has become pastor of the First Baptist Church of New Orleans. This is the second time that Mr. Boone has occupied the tripod of The Chronicle. His salutatory, which appeared last week, was appropriate and in good taste. We wish him much success in his work.

Georgia Methodism is bestirring itself to better equip and endow its educational institutions. The movement in behalf of the Wesleyan Female College has been measurably successful, and Emory lacks only $35,000 of reaching the $300,000 mark. The third Sunday in April has been named as "Endowment Day" for the latter institution, when a vigorous effort will be made to secure the balance necessary to round out the desired sum.

The Western Methodist thinks the fact that the Southern Methodist Church is succeeding cannot logically be pleaded against "needed" changes. Certainly not; but it is a telling argument against reckless experimentation. A Church which is outstripping its competitors is in an admirable position to let well enough alone. And by every token it should be slow to surrender methods which have been tested, and found efficient, for untried innovations of doubtful value.

The Southern Christian Advocate is authority for the following statement: "A delegation of prominent Southern philanthropic leaders, including Bishop Hoss, made last week to the New York representatives of Mr. Rockefeller a request that the South be given representation on the Board of Trustees on the new Rockefeller Foundation." Whether their request will be acceded to, remains to be seen. We should not be surprised, however, to hear of its being promptly granted.

The St. Louis Advocate of the 6th inst. was a Home Mission number. It contained many striking illustrations, and much information concerning the various enterprises maintained by the Church beneath our own flag. A portrait of Rev. N. E. Joyner, the superintendent of St. Mark's Hall of this city, appears upon the front page, and one of the leading articles is from the facile pen of Dr. J. A. Rice, who discussed "Intrenching Methodism in the Cities." We congratulate our distinguished contemporary upon this fine issue, which is highly creditable in every respect.

More democracy in the Church is a cry that is having just now some vociferous advocates. Before this comes one is warranted in asking what kind of democracy is wanted, for there have been many brands of democracy, and some of it is evidently of the character no sane man would desire for Southern Methodism. Bishop Wilson is right. The Southern Methodist Church needs neither more democracy—as that term is generally understood—nor more aristocracy. The Episcopal form of government has not been so despotic in the history of the Church as is sometimes intimated by those who would like to do away with it. And we have done very well with bishops from Asbury down to this time, making more rapid progress than those Churches to which we are now and then directed as the Churches having the so much desired democratic form of government. The episcopacy seems to suit the genius of American Methodists very well.—Wesleyan Advocate.

Dr. Borden Parker Bowne, dean of the Graduate School of Boston University, and perhaps the most eminent Methodist scholar in America, died at his home in Brookline, Mass., on April 1 of heart failure. His decease was wholly unexpected, as he met his classes that day until noon, at which time his indisposition forced him to desist from work. Dr. Bowne was born in Leonardville, N. J., January 14, 1847, and was graduated from the University of the City of New York in 1876. He began at once to devote his attention to philosophy and studied abroad at the Universities of Halle, Paris, and Göttingen. One of his instructors was the renowned Prof. Lotze, of whose system of philosophy he became the ablest exponent in the Western Hemisphere. He was a voluminous writer, and invariably commanded a wide circle of readers for the brilliant products of his pen. He has won a well-established place in literature, from which the recurring years will not dislodge him. His passing will be an appreciable loss, not only to his own denomination, but also to universal Methodism and Christianity at large.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Report of the treasurer of the Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference for quarter ending March 31, 1910:

Brookhaven District—	Foreign	Domestic
Magnolia	$ 25.00	$110.00
Crystal Springs	30.00
Brookhaven	75.00	25.00
Osyka	45.00
Prentiss	10.00	5.00
North Wesson	6.50	5.00
Total	$191.50	$145.00
Hattiesburg District—
Broad Street	$ 12.00	$ 10.00
Vossburg	20.00
Taylorville	25.00
Maxie	10.00	10.00
Magee	10.00	15.00
Total	$ 77.00	$ 35.00
Jackson District—
First Church	$100.00	$ 5.00
Harrisville	10.00	3.00
Jackson Circuit	2.00	4.00
Lintonia	4.00	8.00
Camden	8.00	10.00
Benton	10.00	5.00
Madison	5.00	5.00
Rankin Street		5.00
Florence		5.00
Fannin		5.00
Total	$139.00	$ 50.00
Meridian District—
Shubuta	$ 10.00	$ 10.00
Seventh Avenue		6.53
Vimville		10.00
Total	$ 10.00	$ 26.53
Natchez District—
Scotland	$ 12.50	$ 12.50
Meadville	8.00	18.00
Pearl Street	5.00	3.00
Total	$ 25.50	$ 33.50
Newton District—
Rose Hill	$ 10.00	$ 10.00
Forest	25.00	25.00
Newton	39.00	37.00
Morton and Pelahatchie	36.00	36.00
Decatur	8.00	8.50
Walnut Grove		10.00
Sixth Street		15.00
Total	$118.00	$141.50
Sea Shore District—
Coalyville	$ 25.00	$ 4.00
Twenty-ninth Street	4.00
Moss Point	168.00
Saucier	80.00
Total	$277.00	$ 4.00
Vicksburg District—
Port Gibson	$ 52.50	$ 45.00
Hermanville	5.00	10.00
Sartartia		20.00
Edwards		3.00
Lorman		10.00
Total	$ 57.50	$ 88.00
Total 1910	$895.00	$525.53
Total same date 1909	787.10	654.39

W. L. LINFIELD, Treasurer.

Hazlehurst, Miss., March 31, 1910.

PREACHER-WANTED.

I am in need of a preacher for a circuit with five appointments. Will pay about $400 for the remainder of the year. A single man preferred. Plenty of work, but a good opportunity for the right man. Do not reply unless you mean business. Address J. E. Densoir, P. O. Lafayette, La.

W. H. M. S.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

By Mrs. A. C. McKinney, Supt.

We have received a few fine reports. Shreveport, Alexandria, Crowley, and Monroe (possibly others) are doing good work. Owing to the protracted illness and death of my mother, also my own illness and that of several members of my family, I have not been able to write as many letters to delinquents as I have been wont to do. But, sisters, I will appreciate it very much if you will voluntarily write, and tell us what your auxiliary has done. My annual report is due.

The Woman's Home Mission Society at Monroe shows a steady and healthy growth, meeting twice a month and receiving one or two new members at almost every session. The number enrolled is about sixty, and, with the present rate of increase, I think we can safely predict a membership of one hundred by the end of the year.

One of the meetings is devoted to connectional work each month, and the second to local work. The first is held at the church and the second at the homes of the members.

The women are exhibiting great ability in handling the work of the new organization. An active interest is being manifested in the district parsonage, as well as in the local parsonage.

At the last meeting Mrs. Jno. M. Munholland was elected delegate to the Conference in New Orleans, with Mrs. A. A. Gunby as alternate.

Mrs. S. W. Handy is the efficient and popular president, and is sparing no effort to fully equip herself for the office.

FROM CENTENARY COLLEGE.

On the first day of April the students took the faculty on a "trolley ride." Spring is being warmly welcomed at the college.

Dr. W. L. Weher, our recent president, has been for some weeks with his wife and babe, at Elberton, Ga. He writes that his health is improved, but he is still feeble and unable to undertake any work. He will probably go about April 1 to the home of his father at Charleston, S. C.

The college is doing well. Of course, things were in a confused state during the fall and winter, owing to the sickness of the president and his absence part of the time from the institution, but now order and harmony prevail, and the students are in their places and hard at work. Dr. Hill requires all of the professors to make weekly reports as to the progress of their classes, so that he may know how each student is doing.

Ground for a garden has been fenced in and planted, and there is promise of an abundance of vegetables to eat in the future. The Athletic Association has raised the money and enclosed a spacious park, where college athletics of the proper kind may be fostered and encouraged. Thus attention is being given, not only to the mental and moral, but also to the physical culture of the students.

We are looking forward to a great time at the commencement June 5th. The students, generally, are cheerful and hopeful. We are all greatly in love with Dr. and Mrs. Hill.

A STUDENT.

April 1.

GOING TO ASHEVILLE.

Dear Brother Meek: Will you kindly state in the Advocate that any persons desiring to go to Asheville to the General Conference, who are on or near the line of the Southern Railway in Mississippi may if they wish send their names to the assistant passenger agent at Columbus, Miss., and he will take pleasure in giving them any information they desire. If all will go on the 9th of May they will furnish a manager, or conductor, to go with them, and look after their comfort and convenience.

W. S. LAGRONE.

Greenville, Miss.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors of the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: Please send me by first mail the names of your delegates and alternates to the District Conference which convenes at Canton, April 26-29. As far as possible, indicate those who expect to attend.

Visiting brethren representing various Church interests will also please send their names.

The time is short and prompt information is necessary that adequate entertainment may be provided.

C. F. EMERY.

Canton, Miss.

THE WOMEN'S MEMORIAL.

By Prof. W. L. Clifton.

It seems difficult for human beings—even the saints—to discuss a question dispassionately. Especially is this true if the question relates to a proposed change in the status quo. The passion and prejudice is usually more in evidence on the side of the opponents of the suggested change. The discussion of the Women's Memorial furnishes no exception to the rule.

"Woman's Rights" memorial! Why those qualifying words? The originators of the movement did not so describe it. This movement is not at all the same as the so-called Woman's Rights movement; for asking admittance into our Church conferences is not the same as desiring admittance into political conventions. As evidence of this statement, please to recall the fact that our ministers are expected to be present in the conferences of the Church, but for them to take part in political conventions is by many considered really reprehensible. Will the opponents of this memorial admit that our Church conferences are no less objectionable places for women than political conventions? This memorial and the suffragist movement, offensively and unfairly termed "Woman's Rights" movement, are not only not the same, but there is even little or no connection between them. Will any one deny that a very large number, possibly three-fifths, of those favoring this memorial are opposed, or indifferent to the suffragists' activities?

"Suffragette." To supply this term to any one of the women favoring this memorial is unfair and unwise, and the gentleman who does it forgets his better instincts. Even between the suffragist and the "suffragette" there is no more essential relation than between an earnest statesman and a blatant demagogue. Calling all suffragists "suffragettes" is no more becoming than to call preachers "sky-pilots." Please to remember that not all who favor this memorial are even suffragists, a fortiori are they not "suffragettes."

"Astride woman!" Horse-back riding in any manner has absolutely no point of connection with our women having representation in the Conferences of the Methodist Church. If there were any such connection and the user of the above term had been dominated by his better self, he would have said the "woman riding with divided skirts." As a matter of fact, not one in a hundred of the women workers in our Churches ever ride horseback at all. Why bring in all these irrelevant matters? There is no more connection between this memorial and riding with divided skirts than there is between a man's religion and the coat he wears.

"Shoulder rifles!" What even remote connection is there between women sitting in our Conferences and "shouldering rifles?" I always thought Church Conferences were convened in the interest of the cause of the Prince of Peace. Do delegates to The Hague go there walking arsenals? They go there to promote peace, not war. So it should be in our Conferences. Does not the brother who used that phrase know that rifle-bearing is not a qualification required of those sitting in our Conferences? Our State statutes exempt from army service all ministers of the gospel, and yet they sit high in the councils of our Church. May I repeat here a humorous incident that may show how absolutely independent are army service and Conference membership? A chaplain of one of our regiments to be engaged in the little "brush" with Spain had only one objection to his office. He was afraid that, whenever an engagement came he might rush to the firing line. So, when his company was ordered to Havana, being ranked as a commissioned officer and, hence, privileged to resign, and bent upon restraining himself from shedding blood, he gave up his chaplaincy. There is no record that he ceased to sit in the councils of his Church. Why, our ministers are not even required to do jury service, though they vote unrestrainedly. To argue that the assumption of one responsibility would impose all responsibilities is a non sequitur in logic and fails to stand in fact. The foregoing is not a discussion of the Women's Memorial, and refers to points so foreign to that issue that I should not have adverted to them but that some seem to have thought them pertinent.

The opposition to the Women's Memorial have some arguments, and I can not see why they do not parade and repeat these instead of continuously offering ex cathedra opinions interspersed with irrelevances, apparently injected to belound the issue. I confess to seeing much truth in the contention that woman's place is the home. If they will say that the home is woman's first place, I shall agree with them fully. But may I meekly murmur that, in my opinion, home is also the man's first place? I desire to state that all must agree that woman is filling much better her place in the home than the man is filling his. It is my opinion that nearly every home has a mother in it, but a father is a rarity. There are sires and business managers, but very few fathers. Every reader of these lines knows that I speak truth.

But to confine my remarks more strictly to woman and the home, shall say the opposition nearly always violate logic and fact in their discussion. They de-light in statements like this: It is better women be debarred seats in our Conferences than have the children neglected. We are not reduced to that alternative. I reply to that statement, in part, by proposing: It is better to debar men from the Conferences than have them fail to provide for their families. Our proposed reply is every whit as pertinent as the statement replied to.

We know, as a matter of fact, that our men who are most active in the Conferences provide best for their families. Likewise, we know that the women most active in our Home and Foreign Mission Societies, and in the district and annual meetings of those societies, also provide for us the model homes. We most steadfastly believe that the vital thought and spirit with which they come in conscious touch in these meetings—Conferences, may I say?—help them to make their homes centers from which radiate sane, strong, wholesome influences to bless humanity. Have these women found the interest of home or children in conflict with Conference attendance? If so, the reactionaries, I believe, know well which interest has always won and always will win in a court where a wife and mother's heart sits as arbiter.

"Let your women keep silence in the Churches." Why is this looked upon as a command fundamental and eternal in application? If it be so recognized, why has it been allowed to be so flagrantly violated? I have heard women invited and urged to speak out in churches—in experience meetings, for instance. I repeat, why is this order essential and eternal rather than temporarily expedient and specially applicable to the people then addressed by St. Paul and only to them? In my opinion, St. Paul wrote and spoke with the people whom he addressed very definitely in mind. He dealt with their needs as they were. That, in doing this, he uttered many eternal truths, I readily grant; but, as frankly, I shall state I can see no reason for classifying the above quotation as one of those utterances conveying the truth of eternal and universal application.

Again, the opposition say that Jesus selected only men as apostles. That is easily accounted for on a common sense, reasonable basis. First, he desired his apostles to be heard. He knew that the truths they must utter would of themselves meet sufficient opposition without placing them in the mouths of women against whom there was greater prejudice, by far, than now exists. That this prejudice existed, recall the attitude of the Scribes and Pharisees against the woman taken in adultery. That Jesus recognized this prejudice, behold, his pause before answer to their query. That he did not share the prejudice, recall his answer. That the prejudice still exists in the hearts of men, the reader will know by examining his own heart.

Second, Jesus knew the hardships of the apostle's life at that time, and man was physically stronger. The resistance against truth was greater even than now and was often violent.

Third, the work was then more arduous and travel more taxing. He may have had other reasons, but we poor ordinary mortals can discern these and can see that these alone would account for his course. Do these conditions still exist? Certainly not in equal extent and degree.

"Willingness to do and ability to perform" should indeed be the only test made of a person asking work in our Lord's vineyard. Woman's request is proof of willingness; past achievement is proof of ability.

Most of our preachers would resent a questioning of their call, even when they have wandered into other fields of activity. I should feel presumptuous to question woman's.

SOWING DISSENSION.

The General Conference is about to get busy. No doubt the delegates know just what to do; all have taken a correspondence course in General Conference legislation, and we presume are posted. The M. E. Church, South, is sick (we didn't know it until recently), and will soon be placed on the operating table. Will she ever come out from under the influence of chloroform? Her case has been diagnosed. She has a complication of ailments, presiding elderitis and time-limit colic. Both are to be cut off. She has weakness of the episcopacy, and her episcopacy must be overhauled. Her name has weakened her influence, and it is to be changed, districts are to be made smaller, the presiding elder, on condition he is not amputated, is to receive but 10 per cent pro rata; deacons are to administer the Lord's Supper; we are to have organic union; laymen from every charge are going to Annual Conferences and sit in the cabinet; Quarterly Conferences will license preachers. The League will be reorganized, six or eight bishops will be elected, and Church Conferences will elect all Church officers.

This is but a start. The writer is in his third year in the Conference course, and is impressed that the kingdom needs workers and that the great business of the Church is to save souls. What means this sound of unrest? Why do the columns of the General Organ of our Church flash forth words of dissatisfaction? The seeds of dissension are being sown. Level headed, and we trust Christian men, will compose the General Conference. Can not they pilot the old ship? Does the General Organ wish to reflect on the judgment of all our Annual Conferences in selecting men as delegates? Are Rev. Joyner, Rev. Brown and Dr. Parker, of the Louisiana Conference, unable to meet any problem of the Church and solve it? If so, why elected? Many of the suggestions are wise, and many, otherwise; but the whole business has caused many people who were sweetly resting in the fold of Southern Methodism and working for the Master, to take sides and become dissatisfied.

As preachers, we were not called to be "ecclesiastical statesmen," whatever that is, but to "preach the acceptable year of the Lord, win souls and glorify God by good works." "The Lord can work and none can hinder." God is not dependent on Church law for results. Methodism succeeds in places and fails in places. The Baptists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists do likewise. The Spirit leads on to victory those who are led by him, no matter in what country they live, or under what circumstances they labor. Paul went to jail and had results. The future of the M. E. Church, South, is not tied up in General Conference legislation, but depends upon the spirit of prayer and devotion to God among her preachers and members. The strategic point is not in time limits, power of bishops, existence of presiding elders, representation to women, nor anything else within the power of the General Conference. "I am the way," says Christ, and besides him there is no other way.

Gueydon, La.

A. J. GEARHEAD.

OUR MOTHERS.

The strength of a nation lies in its mothers. The Spartans recognized this, and trained their girls to be brave, to endure hardships, to be self-sacrificing and pure, and their sons were sent out into life strong, vigorous, chivalrous and fearless.

Behind every invention, heroic deed, poem or story stands a great soul; and back of this greatness is the mother who formed the character and was the inspiration and power.

The greatest place in the world is not in kings' palaces or in beautiful temples or where the laws of the nation are made, but, as N. McGee Waters beautifully says, "It is in the homes of the people, where, by night and day, women tend little children and train them."

"Unconsciously we uncover our heads when we meet a mother with her little child. She may be young, like Mary; she may be poor, like Nancy Hanks; she may be inexperienced, like Mary Ball; but she has power to work mysteries and perform miracles."

"In sickness and in health, in toil and in ease, at home and abroad, she lives for the life that is grafted upon her own, scornful of pity, conceiving of no higher honor than by and by to lean upon the arm, which has been made strong by her strength and to trust to the heart which has been made pure and true by her own purity and fidelity."

"So she lives her life. 'Drudgery,' silly people call it; but unto her who is wise it is a holy mystery."

"So she lives her life. 'In a prison house,' unknown ones may say; but unto her whose eyes have been opened to see the mysteries, and far unto the future, it is a queen's domain."

"And then one day, when the world may have forgotten her work, because it seems so commonplace, she stands up and puts judges and statesmen, and inventors, and poets, to shame, for she has done what they can not do. She has given a man unto the world, to rule it, or a woman unto the world to mother it in its sorrow. Her work is beyond praise. Her ministry is above ordination. Only Christ's can compare with it."—To-Day's Magazine.

For busy people The Literary Digest performs a distinct and needed service. It gives at a glance the current happenings of the world, and presents all sides of controverted questions. This journal has a unique place among American periodicals, and is deservedly popular.

WANTED.

A place in the Fall to teach Piano and Voice. Graduate under Olga Schanewker, of Oberlin. My summer will be spent in taking Post-graduate Course at some good Conservatory of Music. Reply to (MRS.) OLIVE STEWART.

Fort Adams, Miss.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd.
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of Lumber

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS FOR
ALASKA AND BOHN SYPHON REFRIGERATORS
Garland and New Process Gas Stoves.

THE UNITED HARDWARE CO., LTD.

1005-1007 Canal Street, New Orleans.

The Home Circle.

HELP THE WORLD ALONG.

If every little boy or girl
Some loving word would say:
Or just one kindly deed would do,
The world would be so gay.

No matter where you chanced to go,
You'd never see a tear,
And as for frowns, when people smile,
They always disappear.

Why should not every boy and girl
Pass through life with a song
If each one did his level best,
To help the world along?

The wrong things then would soon be right,
So try to do or say
One kindly deed, one loving word:
Begin this very day. —Selected.

A DOLL THREE THOUSAND YEARS OLD.

The delight which a little girl sometimes experiences in getting hold of a doll that belonged to her mother when she was a little girl—a quaint, china-headed and china-haired little creature, with low neck and short sleeves and very full ruffled skirt—is a tame thing when compared with the feelings that any girl must experience over a doll now in the British Museum. This doll is almost three thousand years old.

When some archaeologists were exploring an ancient Egyptian royal tomb they came upon a sarcophagus containing the mummy of a little princess seven years old. She was dressed and interred in a manner befitting her rank, and in her arms was found a little wooden doll.

The inscription gave the name, rank and age of the little girl and the date of her birth, but it said nothing about the quaint little wooden Egyptian doll. This, however, told its own story. It was so tightly clasped in the arms of the mummy that it was evident that the child had died with her beloved doll in her arms.

The simple pathos of this story has touched many hearts, after thousands of years. The doll occupies a place in a glass case in the British Museum, and there a great many children have gone to look at it—Youth's Companion.

GRANDMA'S BIRD STORY.

"A story! A story!" cried the children, coming in one snowy afternoon from out of doors, where they had been making snow houses and snow men and women. This was their special hour in grandma's own sitting room, and neither Ruth nor Robert ever forgot their privilege. After a little, grandma laid aside her knitting work, sighed contentedly, and queried:

"What kind of a story do you want, dearies?"
"Oh, a really, truly story," answered Robert, laying his dark, curly head on grandma's knee.
"A really, truly temperance story," begged Ruth, but Robert demurred.

"No," said he, decidedly. "I don't want a temperance story every time. I want a bird story once in a while."

"Suppose I tell you a temperance bird story?" questioned grandma, stroking the curly head that lay so lovingly under her hand. In a moment the children were all attention, and grandma began: "Once upon a time—"

"Yes, yes," exclaimed Ruth, "that's the way all the really stories begin," and she clapped her hands in great glee, as she nestled close to grandma's side.

"Once upon a time a dear temperance lady lived just back of a saloon," once more began grandma.

"Oh!" gasped Ruth, but Robert kept very quiet. Boys, of course, should be very brave and not afraid of anything. It was all right for girls to be afraid of saloons, but not men and boys. Men and boys should not shrink away, but go right by them and show that they are not afraid. So, as grandma went on, he looked wise and waited.

"This dear temperance lady was often annoyed and sorrowful to see drunken men come out of the saloon and go staggering down street to where she felt sure their little boys and girls were suffering for the money which they had spent for liquor. And always, as she watched, she prayed the kind Father to save them."

Here Ruth sighed, but Robert remained stoical. "One day," went on grandma, "the saloon-keeper came to his back door and threw out a broken bottle. It was broken only at the top, leaving the bottom like a tumbler, and in the whole part of it was something which looked red like wine. A few moments after it was thrown out a bevy of English sparrows flew down to the ground and surrounded it. Such a chattering! One of the birds would hop back to the bottle and peek in; then he would hop back and forth all the while keeping up a dreadful scolding. Then another bird would hop up and take a peep at its contents. And so, for some time, these wise little birds seemed to keep up a discussion, as to what was in the bottle, and whether or not it was something of which they might take a taste. At last one bird, more venturesome than the others, hopped up to the bottle, and perking his little head, reached over his tiny bill and took a drink. Then what a chattering and scolding! But the bold little bird paid no heed, although his mates kept up a terrible chattering as, though they were afraid the wine would hurt him. But it made no difference. Drink after drink went down his little throat in spite of the remonstrances of his bird comrades.

"In a little while he toppled over—drunk. Then his mates began to chatter and scold harder than ever. But try as they would, it was impossible to waken him. Not another one of the whole flock of birds would take the smallest sip of wine from the broken bottle. After a little," continued grandma, stroking Ruth's hand lovingly, because she was such a tender-hearted little girl, "the birds, seeing they could do nothing for their drunken comrade, flew away and were gone for some time. When they returned, they brought reinforcements."

"What's reinforcements?" questioned Robert, who always wanted to know the meaning of words.

"It means help, dearie, in one way or another. In this case it meant more birds. They had been after more birds to help arouse their drunken brother. You see, the birds knew that something was wrong, and that was why they wanted help."

"Men don't always do that way, do they, grandma?" said Ruth, nodding her head emphatically, as she rocked to and fro in her little rocker before the glowing wood fire.

"Men ought to know better than to drink whiskey and beer, anyway!" stoutly declared Robert, with a sniff that told much.

"But sometimes men are not strong enough to resist temptation, when whiskey is set before them," replied grandma, "and I'm sorry to say that men are not always as kind to help their fallen brother as these much despised little sparrows were to help their tiny mate. But you must listen or supper will be ready before we are through with our story."

"When the birds came back with their reinforcements, they began to pull at the drunken bird's wings in a way that meant business. At last, by dint of pulling and working, they finally reached the gutter at the back of the saloon, where a stream of water was slowly making its way into the sewer. Into this small stream of water they pushed the drunken bird, in such a position, however, that he would not drown. Then they began to chatter and scold as if they were discussing the matter. Great was their delight when he opened his eyes. They chattered as if they knew he was coming to, all right. But their voices took on a different sound when he fell back once more in a stupor. At last, after several attempts, the poor fellow was able to stand up and hop about. After a little, he hopped up on the bank. Then from that he flew to the tree. Still, his companions watched and stayed by him. When finally he was free from the effects of the wine so that he could fly about a bit, their delight was complete. But it was at least two hours from the time he became drunk until he was able to fly away with his mates."

When grandma had finished the story, both chil-den were so quiet that she knew they were thinking of the lesson in the story. "What lesson does the story teach, my dearies?"

"Not to drink the dirty old stuff!" answered Robert decisively.

"I know what it teaches, grandma," whispered Ruth, as she looked up into her grandma's face. Then she raised her voice a wee bit. "It teaches that we mustn't grow discouraged in trying to get our friends to be good. The drunken bird wouldn't have got up so soon if the others hadn't helped him. And just at that moment they heard the call of the supper bell."—Mary P. Sayers, in The Union Signal.

CAMPGROUND COTTAGE FOR SALE.

No. 141 on Tabernacle Square, 5 rooms and hall, furnished throughout, including enameled bath tub and an electric fan. Sanitary connection. Write H. R. Singleton, Box 57, Alexandria, La.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location; price, including furniture, only $400. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

HOUSE ON CAMPGROUNDS FOR SALE.

A desirable two-story cottage, with four rooms and hall, bathroom with latest sanitary improvements; completely furnished facing open square in front of Keller Lodge, with a small, shady park in the rear. Address, Christian Advocate, 512 Camp, New Orleans.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER.

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co

INCORPORATED.

DOCTOR Tichenor's Antiseptic
UNDER A STRAIN

The muscles always become sore and stiff. Delightful and lasting relief is immediately had by applying

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

Its healing effect is truly wonderful. You can't well be without it. Take a bottle home today.

All druggists, 25 and 50 cts.

ASK ANY ONE WHO HAS EVER USED IT.

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulner, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

MR. ROOSEVELT AND THE POPE.

For the second time within the past few weeks the Vatican has brought into world publicity an American citizen. The first was Mr. Fairbanks, formerly a United States Senator and Vice-President; the second is Mr. Roosevelt, the most eminent and widely-known son of the Western Republic. Though both were denied an audience with the Roman Pontiff, the circumstances leading up to the climax in the two cases were quite different. Mr. Fairbanks was already in the Imperial City and had made an engagement to speak to the Methodists (of which Church he is a member), when the demand was made that he should cancel that appointment if he desired to see His Holiness. But Mr. Roosevelt had made no engagement except with the King of Italy, a fact which was well known to the Pope; but the head of the Romish hierarchy saw fit to suggest to the distinguished ex-President that if he received him, it would be with the expectation that he should stay clear of the Methodists. When the Vatican sought to impose this restriction upon him, the great American, with characteristic independence, promptly wired that the proposed interview had been made an impossibility.

That Mr. Roosevelt bore himself properly throughout the episode, is beyond question, and universally admitted. His telegrams were in admirable taste, and his course was thoroughly diplomatic. His statement to the American people, made through the columns of The Outlook, requesting them to treat the incident as personal and to refrain from harsh criticism, was praiseworthy, though many will fancy that they see in it the fine hand of the master politician.

But notwithstanding Mr. Roosevelt's desire, candid and vigorous comment will be made upon the occurrence. And indeed it ought to be made. True, the Pope has a perfect right to receive as his guest whomsoever he pleases, but when he openly states the ground of his action and indulges in severe strictures upon another denomination, the matter becomes legitimately a subject for public discussion. If His Holiness should, in a courteous and dignified manner, decline to receive a person, no matter how distinguished, applying for an audience, he would be justly entitled to immunity from criticism. But when he offers to accord conditional receptions and seeks to dictate what those who would call upon him must do to gain admittance to his presence, and takes advantage of such occasions to strike at other religious organizations which have incurred his displeasure, not even Mr. Roosevelt has a right to ask for his conduct exemption from deserved comment and proper characterization.

The truth is, we have little patience with the view of semi-religious periodicals that the Roman Catholic Church should be accorded the same consideration by Protestant bodies in planning their evangelistic work as they accord one another. From our viewpoint, the Romish Church is heretical in its teaching and corrupt in its practices. Where it has free rein it is the oppressor of the people and the enemy of progress. We would not persecute any man, not even the pagan. But against error and superstition of every phase and form it is our duty to contend by the dissemination of truth and every other fair and upright method. We would not, if we had the power, strike down and destroy the Church of Rome. But we would promote its reformation and make it again a true Church of Jesus Christ without admixture of paganism or idolatry. Such exhibitions of arrogance and intolerance as has lately been made by the Vatican shows that the Rome of to-day is not unlike the Rome of former centuries. Certainly, to insist that if one sees the Pontiff, he must not while in the city, either before or after his visit, call upon any one who is under the ban of the Pope's disapprobation, is a piece of monumental presumption. Nothing could be more unwarranted than the railing of Catholic journals at Mr. Roosevelt for receiving the Masons with ordinary courtesy since his proposed visit to the Vatican was abandoned, one of them even venturing to suggest that by so doing he was endeavoring to wreak vengeance upon Pope Pius. Such unprovoked and indefensible outbursts will do the Church of the Holy See no good.

But what of the charge against the Methodists? The Papal Secretary, Cardinal Merry del Val, thus publicly assails them: "It is not in any sense a question of religion. Mr. Roosevelt might have gone to an Episcopalian, a Presbyterian, or any other Church, except the Methodist, and delivered an address there, and he would have been received by the Pope, even on the same day. But he could not be received when it was suspected that after the audience he intended to go to the Methodist Church in Rome, which is carrying on a most offensive campaign of calumny and detraction against the Pontiff." Is it true that the Methodist Church is pursuing unworthy methods of propagandism in Italy? Not one shred of proof to that effect has ever been adduced. We do not believe a syllable of the accusation. Our diagnosis of the case is that the Methodists are succeeding beyond any other Protestant denomination in that field, and that Rome is feeling the influence of their competition, and that therein lies the secret of her implacable hostility.

Upon this point we quote, in conclusion, the New York Independent, a paper certainly not biased in favor of the followers of Wesley: "We confess that we do not believe that the Methodist Mission is 'carrying on a most offensive campaign of calumny and detraction against the Pontiff.' It is not plausible, because it would be unwise. Doubtless some bitter things have been said there, but bitter things have also been said at the Vatican. It is impossible that the effort of the mission is to seduce faithful members of the Catholic Church. It is rather directed to those multitudes who have left it, the great bulk of the people, those who will have nothing to do with it, rightly or wrongly. Everybody knows that in Italy as in France, the people are divorced from the Church, and it is a free field for any one who wishes to bring back the people to the Christian faith, whether Catholic or Protestant."

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The District Conference season is now at hand. Some have been already held and others will soon be under way. These occasions should be interesting and promotive of progress. The work of the Church will be reviewed and new plans enterprised. Much prominence should be given to the preaching of the Word and the increasing of spirituality. The original design of the District Conference was that it should be a season of evangelistic effort and religious uplift and refreshing. It is regrettable that the humdrum of business is too often allowed to obscure and crowd out the devotional feature. We sincerely wish that the spirit of a wholesome evangelism could be re-awakened in every part of Southern Methodism. We should like to see camp meetings spring up in our various communities from the Potomac to the Rio Grande. Why not? Our holiness brethren yet use them with fine effect, and we know of no reason why we should not do so.

Of course, every preacher should be present at his District Conference. The law so requires, and he should make no engagement to conflict with it. The laymen ought also to attend. The Church needs their counsel and assistance, and they need the influence and inspiration of these gatherings. If the laity could be aroused and constrained to throw themselves fully into the work of the Master, the achievements of Southern Methodism within the next decade would constitute the brightest chapter in our glorious history. Being a delegate to the General Conference, it will be impossible for us to reach any of the District assemblies before the month of June. But we earnestly request the brethren in their deliberations to remember their Conference organ, and to lend a vigorous hand in speeding it forward on a career of larger prosperity.

A VOICE FROM THE PAST.

(Below we publish a clipping kindly sent us by Mrs. L. B. Freeman, of Buntyn, Tenn., which appeared in the St. Louis Advocate of May 2, 1894. The presiding elder therein referred to was her honored father, Rev. W. P. Barton, than whom the North Mississippi Conference never had a truer or nobler; and the author of the communication was her gifted and accomplished mother. We take special pleasure in reproducing it because it deals with an issue being discussed at the present time.)

"Extension of the Pastorate."

"Dr. Chapman: The first thought about the St. Louis resolution concerning a pastorate without limit was, 'How well these preachers must be pleased with their places; the second thought, 'At least it would be modest for the request to come from the people.' Instances have occurred where preachers would gladly have remained longer than the present limit, while the Church was more than willing for a change. It is a rare thing for one man to have every qualification for a minister of Christ, and it is only fair that the lives of such should teach separate churches. A presiding elder of many years' experience said: 'I could wish to go back to the two years' limit, or at most three. I have had some of the most popular preachers in our Conference in my district, and found it would have been better for preacher and people if there had been a change before the end of the fourth year.' If such a memorial is presented, the Church, as well as the preacher, should be considered, and I hear of no desire on the part of the former for even an extension of the pastoral term.

NOT THE ONES PETITIONING.

In the discussion of the Woman's Memorial much has been said about the women who are Epworth League presidents, Sunday school superintendents, and acting stewards who are shut out of the Quarterly Conference. There are some such women; no doubt about that. For four years we were in charge of the Greenville District where there are a number of them. We know them, honor them, and appreciate them. But in our association with them we never heard one of them make the slightest complaint of her existing relations to the Church. Not from among that class did this memorial come. They are not adding voice to the present clamor for unaccustomed rights. Nor has it been shown that those who are so distressed about their lack of recognition hold any authorized brief to speak for them. No, no; this movement began at the top among the leaders; not among the rank and file; not among those whose rights are said to be trampled under foot. We mean no discourtesy by this statement. We entertain for Miss Bennett and her associates the highest regard and respect; not a few of the best women of the Church and some of our warmest friends are on that side. The motives of not a single one, would we impeach. We honestly think they have proposed a measure which would seriously injure the Church; but we claim no infallibility and may be mistaken. If we cannot see alike, let us differ in charity and love. Acrimony is out of place among the followers of Christ.

NOT AN EASY TASK.

There are some who appear to think that editing a paper is an easy task. That is because they have never tried it. Dr. Buckley said in a recent issue of The New York Advocate, "The editing of this paper is a business, and a most consuming one." And if Dr. Buckley with his fullness and the adequate facilities of men and money at his command finds it so, how must it be with those who have to work with little assistance and meager resources? To procure, read, revise, and sometimes re-write matter; to compose much of what is published; to read proofs, to conduct a large correspondence, and to peruse the Church and secular papers to try to know what is going on—these duties are quite enough to keep one completely occupied. We have tried a number of things in our time, but have found nothing that kept us more steadily engaged. And an editor's work is also exacting. There must be no delay. Other things may invite and call, but until the grist is made ready for the hopper all else must be put aside. If the press does not run, confusion will result and the paper will not get out on time. We mention these things because there are those who think the editor can drop everything and go to this or that gathering at will. But this he cannot do. Only when all has been placed in order and readiness at the office is he in position to give attention to other matters. The issuance of the Advocate must have the first claim upon him at all times.

DECEASE OF REV. W. W. MORSE.

Rev. T. H. King and others have informed us of the death of Rev. W. W. Morse, an esteemed member of the Mississippi Conference, which occurred at Tylertown, Miss., on April 5th. He had been in failing health for several months, having been forced by his physical condition to abandon active service and take a superannuated relation last December. In the hope of securing relief from the malady afflicting him, he underwent a surgical operation at Jackson last winter, but the desired improvement did not materialize, and despite all that could be done, he continued to fail and grow feeble until the departed end came.

Brother Morse was born in Kemper County about fifty-eight years ago. His father and mother were people of most exemplary life and character, and the home in which he was reared was permeated by wholesome religious influences. It gave to the Methodist itinerancy two worthy ministers; the other being Rev. J. M. Morse, now stationed at Gulfport, Miss.

The deceased entered the Mississippi Conference in 1885, and has since wrought well in every field to which he was assigned. He was a modest, unassuming man who was free from the spirit of self-seeking and aspired not to conspicuous place; but his ministry was fruitful and he rendered substanservice to the Church. He gripped those among whom he worked and won his way into all hearts. There was about him a manifest genuineness which quickly commanded confidence and co-operation. He was a true shepherd, and the sheep knew his voice and followed where he led. Among the charges that he served were Forrest, Morton, Florence and Tyertown, in all of which places he was honored and held in affectionate esteem.

Of the end of such a man, it is scarcely needful to write. He was ready for the summons. Having toiled faithfully through life's brief day, he was not afraid to meet the gracious Lord of the harvest. Looking the inevitable squarely in the face, he gave to his pastor, Brother King, and his devoted friend, Rev. J. R. Jones, minute instructions concerning his obsequies; and thinking of his comrades in the ministry, he said: "Tell them the gospel that I preached is a comfort to me now." With no stain upon his record, with no dread of the future, with unwavering faith in God, and at peace with all the world, he fell into the last long sleep.

Released from the tumult and strife,
Victorious he hath passed through the door
Into the Temple of Life,
And here we shall see him no more.

But there with the true and the brave,
With the Conqueror of the grave,
There we shall see him."

To the bereaved widow, daughters, son, brother and other sorrowing relatives we extend profound sympathy, and pray that God may comfort them and bind up every bruised, bleeding heart.

PERSONAL.

Have you sent in your renewal to the Advocate? If not, you should do so at once. The law will soon require that the names of those in arrears be dropped.

Rev. T. J. Warlick requests us to announce that the Shreveport District Conference will meet at Zwolle June 14th, instead of June 7th. Let those interested take note of this change.

The Epworth, Era announces that Dr. Fitzgerald Sale Parker has about recovered from his recent attack of rheumatism. This will be pleasing information to his many friends in this section.

The energetic pastor at Silver City, Miss., Rev. J. H. Foreman, has favored us with a list of nine renewals and four new subscribers. Thank you, brother, and may the Advocate prove a blessing to your people.

Rev. J. J. Brooks, of Gunnison, Miss., reports his work to be in excellent condition. Congregations are good, and the prayer meetings well attended. He is highly pleased with the work of his presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Woodard.

Rev. H. T. Carley, of the Carrollton Church of this city, was too unwell to preach last Sunday, but an efficient substitute was found in the person of Rev. N. E. Joyner. We trust that Brother Carley's indisposition will be of brief duration.

We have been pained to learn that the health of Mrs. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., has not lately been robust. A nobler, truer worker for the Master is not to be found in Southern Methodism. We pray that she may speedily recover her accustomed vigor.

Rev. L. T. Sargent, of Greenwood Springs, Miss., has lately been doing some telling work for the Conference organ. He sent us on the 5th inst. a fine array of names and a good check. He says, "We are moving on fairly well, and everything promises a good year."

Rev. L. B. Hankins is meeting with gratifying success on the Starkville Circuit. He has received eleven members, baptized eleven infants, and built one church and matured plans for another. The assessment for ministerial support is considerably larger than last year.

Rev. C. C. Miller, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, is engaged in a meeting at Kentwood. He says Methodism is progressing along the I. C. Railroad. We thank him for a kind invitation to attend his District Conference, which will convene at Bogalusa May 28.

Mr. J. R. Pepper, of Memphis, has recently been looking after business matters in Greenville, Miss. He is associated with Mr. Edmund Taylor, of that city in the management of the Goyer Company, a large wholesale house which enjoys an enviable reputation throughout the Delta.

A busy, painstaking worker is the Rev. H. N. Harrison, of Donaldsonville, and the interests of the Church are prospering under his guiding hand. His report at the recent session of the New Orleans District Conference was a good one, with an optimistic note concerning the future.

Rev. A. F. Moore writes from Arkabutla, Miss.: "We have just closed our first Quarterly Conference. Some of the stewards say it was the best held in years. Some have been discouraged, but are beginning to take hope and heart." We thank our brother for remembering the Conference organ.

Rev. R. O. Wier, of Arcadia, La., attended the Shriners' Convention in the city this week, and while here honored the Advocate office with a call. He was in fine health and spirits, and spoke encouragingly of the outlook for the work in his charge. He was the guest of Rev. J. F. Foster, of Algiers.

Rev. W. R. Goudelock reports as follows from the Columbus Circuit: "Our work is moving on nicely this year. I have nearly all of my missionary assessments in hand. Our slogan for the District is, 'all claims in full.' Brother Thomas is a hustler and is taking well with the preachers and people."

Writing of his work at Rocky Springs, Miss., Rev. J. E. Samply says: "The Lord is blessing us. The people are kind and very thoughtful of their pastor and his needs. We are doing our best, and hoping for a revival all over the charge." We acknowledge the reception of eleven subscribers from our good brother.

In this issue, Rev. B. P. Jaco announces that the Corinth District Conference will assemble at Blue Mountain May 3. If we mistake not, it will be the first time that such a gathering has ever assembled in that goodly town, and no doubt the occasion will be one of much interest. We appreciate the invitation to be present.

Rev. A. G. Hall is vigorously at work at Lamar, Miss. Under date of the 24th ult. he writes: "We are painting and papering the Church at Lamar and repairing the parsonage; have just finished making a new garden. The church at Harris Chapel is also undergoing repairs. Congregations are good, and everything harmonious."

We sympathize with Rev. E. E. Langford in the continued illness of his wife. She has lately found it necessary to undergo another operation, which she did at Yazoo City, where she is at present with her mother. We sincerely hope that the shadow of this affliction may soon be lifted from the heart and home of Brother Langford.

Rev. J. A. McBryde, of Stallo, Miss., writes: "We had our second Quarterly Conference on the second and third. The work made a fine report. We are much pleased with our genial presiding elder, Rev. T. J. O'Neil. Despite the fact that he has had serious illness in his family almost all the year, he remains cheerful and hopeful."

We thank Rev. Robert Selby, of Natchez, for a prospectus of the Seashore Divinity School, which will be in session from June 28 to July 7th. The program now being arranged promises to be one of unusual merit, and no doubt the occasion will be one of great interest. We will have more to say on this subject in the near future.

Brother J. H. Ingram is happy in his work at Glen Allen, Miss. Why shouldn't he be? He has a choice people, and beautiful Lake Washington stretches for miles away from his very door. We thank him for work done for the Advocate, and for an invitation to come up and try our hand at the fine art of angling. But our friend should not tantalize us.

The noblest Roman of them all, Rev. R. M. Davis, of Byhalia, recently favored us with an interesting letter. Viewed from any standpoint, he is a rare man. Great in intellect, he is as simple as a child, and not the least of his attractions is his unfailing gentility. We hold him in the highest esteem, and greatly appreciate his commendatory words.

It was our pleasure to meet on the street last Monday Dr. E. H. Galloway, of Jackson, Miss., who was in the city on professional business. He is the only living son of the lamented Bishop Galloway, and a young physician of the highest character and unusual attainments and promise. He already stands in the forefront of his profession in Jackson.

Rev. R. I. Collins, as usual, is keeping busy on the Cleveland Circuit. Congregations are good; prayer meetings are large, and the outlook promising. The camp meeting this summer will be under the direction of Dr. B. Carradine, of St. Louis, who is well known both in Mississippi and Louisiana. We are grateful to Brother Collins for his activity in behalf of the Advocate.

Rev. M. R. Jones, of DeSoto, Miss., has informed us of the death of Mrs. Lucinda L. O'Neil, the mother of Rev. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder of the Newton District, which occurred at her home in Clark county, Miss., April 5. We extend our deepest sympathy to our bereaved brother and the other sorrowing friends and relatives. A memoir, we trust, will be furnished us soon.

We are pleased to note that the Easter offerings received by Rev. R. W. Vaughan for the Louisiana Orphanage were enough to meet the more pressing needs of that noble institution. But much yet remains to be done, and money will be necessary. Let the claims of this great enterprise be kept before the people in every charge in the State. We have in the Church no more meritorious cause.

We acknowledge ourselves indebted to the following brethren for appreciated work done for the Advocate: Rev. W. J. Wood, Paris, Miss.; Rev. G. A. Guice, Saucier, Miss.; Rev. R. T. Pickett, Wood Market, Miss.; Rev. W. J. Dawson, Morton, Miss.; Rev. C. B. Powell, Campiti, La.; Rev. R. A. Sibley, Jr., Glancy, Miss.; Rev. H. R. Caldwell, Mount Olive, Miss.; and Rev. B. E. Meigs, Oak Ridge, Miss.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Johnson and babe, of Clarksdale, Miss., called at the sanctum one day last week, but unfortunately we were out. Mrs. Johnson was en route to Biloxi, where she will spend a month or more. Brother Johnson is the mainstay of our Church in Clarksdale and one of the foremost laymen of the North Mississippi Conference. We keenly regret having missed seeing these dear friends.

Elsewhere in this issue appears a ringing appeal from Rev. J. J. Smylie for activity among the prohibition workers of Louisiana in behalf of a great mass meeting in Baton Rouge early in May. This is a matter of great importance. Liquor is incomparably the greatest curse of the ages, and there is no nobler warfare than that to strike down the saloon. Let the temperance people of the State hear and heed this urgent call.

From Tishomingo, in Northeast Mississippi, Rev. W. N. Dods sends a nice check and a fine list of names to be added to our subscription files. He writes: "I am mixing things with the brethren up here when it comes to the Advocate. One of the names I am sending is that of a Baptist minister. He asked me if the paper would make a man a Methodist. I told him no, but it would make a man want to be one."

Rev. L. A. Sims is doing a really remarkable work at Epworth Church in this city. His Sunday school is larger than the seating capacity of his house of worship. He has under way plans to construct a $10,000 new building, which he hopes to complete in the near future. He will attend the session of the General Board of Church Extension which will meet in Louisville, Ky., April 20th, and seek to enlist the assistance of that body in carrying forward his enterprise. We hope that they will treat him generously, for his cause well deserves it.

Dr. Richard Wilkinson, of Augusta, Ga., occupied his former pulpit at Rayne Memorial last Sunday, preaching to large congregations who were delighted to see and hear him again. He discoursed in the morning on "The Atonement and the Cross in human history and experience," and in the evening spoke of the present cry for men with clean hands and hearts. Monday night he delivered an eloquent lecture on R. E. Lee. Dr. Wilkinson was a delegate to the Shriners' Convention, and while here was entertained at the residence of Mr. J. T. Ferguson, at 3448 Chestnut street.

The Methodist women of the city held a meeting in the ladies' parlor at the First Methodist Church on Friday, the 8th inst., to make preliminary plans for the entertainment of the Woman's Home Mission Conference of Louisiana, which will meet in this city May 5-8. Mrs. W. W. Carre presided; Mrs. Lewis S. Clark was named chairman of the entertainment committee; Mrs. W. E. Terry of the reception committee; Mrs. D. C. Worrel, decorations, and Mrs. John B. Parker, of press and program. The sessions of the Conference will be held in the First Methodist Church, where luncheon will be served daily.

From the Times-Democrat of the 9th inst., we take the following: "At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Mansfield Female College yesterday, a committee of business men were appointed to raise money to pay off the small debt incurred in building the annex. The Board will put an active solicitor in the field, and is much encouraged at the outlook, and fully expect to raise the amount in a few months and fill the college with girls for the next session. At no time during the past five years has there been so much to encourage the Methodists of Louisiana to work for the college, and with the united assistance of the pastors to co-operate and lend assistance to the committee of business men who are at the head in financing the institution, great things are expected."

We request our contributors to be patient with respect to the publication of their communications. We are doing the best we can to get them in with fairness and justice to all. We have all the papers on the women's memorial that we can handle before the meeting of the General Conference; possibly more. We have denied no person in our territory the right to discuss that subject in our columns. We have tried to divide the space at our command justly and equitably between the two sides. We hope, however, that after the adjournment of our general assembly matters will be in such shape that the discussion may properly be closed.

The Roxie Herald thus writes of the Commencement address recently delivered for the High School at that place by Rev. J. W. Campbell: "Rev. J. W. Campbell, of Fayette, delivered the Commencement address, and we have no hesitancy in saying that we feel sure that all who heard him went away with a higher idea of the importance or the value of an education in the struggle for success in this life. The Rev. Mr. Campbell has a very pleasing, as well as a very logical way of giving his ideas to his audience, and we do not exaggerate when we say that we have listened to lecturers who have a national reputation who do not surpass Mr. Campbell as a lecturer."

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

SECOND QUARTER—LESSON III. APRIL 17, 1910.

THE QUESTION OF JOHN THE BAPTIST.

Parallel Passage—Lk. vii:19-28; Matthew xi:1-19.

MEMORY VERSES, 4, 5.

1. And it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end of commanding his twelve disciples, he departed thence to teach and to preach in their cities.
2. Now when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples.
3. And said unto him, Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?
4. Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see.
5. The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them.
6. And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.
7. And as they departed, Jesus began

Golden Text: "But the witness which I have is greater than that of John: for the works which the Father hath given me to accomplish, the very works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me." (John v. 36, R. V.)

With the editor's permission, we shall insert the lesson text each week for the following reasons:

1. The passage of Scripture selected for study by the International Committee is first in importance, and should be first in attention and thought to every student of the lesson.
2. Not to have the text thus before one renders satisfactory study of it impossible. Better, we believe the lesson without notes, than notes without the lesson.
3. To merely give the Scripture references is not sufficient; as many will not take the trouble to get a Bible and look up the references, and to all the handling of a newspaper and a Bible at the same time is inconvenient. (We invite expressions of opinion to the Advocate on this point.)
4. The very best method of study is to read and re-read the lesson itself, trying to discover its real meaning and message.
5. All study of lessons by the merely reading over of helps and notes is to make of them not "helps," but substitutes for honest thought on our part. The notes truly help only those who try at least to help themselves.
6. It shall be our purpose each week, with the Scripture passage before us, to discover its essential meaning, and to point out its message for us to-day; and shall we not begin each lesson with the ancient prayer: "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law?"

With this, as introductory, let us turn now to the lesson for next Sunday:

I. The Lesson's Meaning.

John the Baptist had been for a year in the prison fortress of Machærus, east of the Dead Sea. The inevitable effect of such confinement upon a nature like John's was a depression of spirit tending toward morbidness and melancholy. Separated, too, as he was from the convincing influence of personal contact with Jesus, he relapsed into conceptions and expectations of the Messiah, more in harmony with current Jewish thought than with inspired prophecy. So, partly from physical causes, and partly because it seemed to him from what he could gather in his loneliness that Jesus was not measuring up fully to his expectations of the Messiah he was constrained to send two of his disciples to Jesus with the question, indicative of misgivings on his part, "Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" Christ's answer, "Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see. The blind receive their sight, etc." (In Luke it is said, "In that same hour he cured many.") Christ's answer was a reminder to John of the real import of Messianic prophecy, and an appeal to his own deeds as its perfect fulfillment.

In this response of Christ we find the first great truth of to-day's lesson, the truth which the golden text emphasizes, that the test and proof of Christ's Messiahship (as of our dis-to say unto the multitudes concerning John, What went ye out in the wilderness to see? A reed shaken with the wind?

8. But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? behold, they that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses.

9. But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? yea, I say unto you, and more than a prophet.

10. For this is he, of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

11. Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he.

cipleship) is in his works. Here Christ applies to himself the test which he laid down so frequently for others, and answers in effect: "By my fruits you should know me, John. Am I not fulfilling in spirit and deeds the ancient prophecies concerning me?"

Then follows the general declaration (verse 6), arising out of a discernment on Christ's part of just where the trouble lay with John: "Blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in me." That is, Blessed is he who does not measure me by his own mistaken standards or ideals, and reject or doubt me because I do not perfectly fulfill them.

The truer spirit for us, as for John, is to withhold judgment, recognizing that we are all imprisoned, in some measure, in our view of others; and if doubts still come, in the light of true Scriptural ideals on our part to express our doubts, if at all, as did John, to the one concerning who we have misgivings, not to others. It was John's conception of the Messiah, which needed revising; not Christ's life and work.

But though there was in these words a delicate reproach, Christ was in no wise inclined to allow the people to think ill of his great Forerunner because of the incident. The words that follow (verses 7-11) are a magnificent vindication of John by Christ himself, and an expression of admiration for his character not paralleled anywhere in the sayings of Jesus concerning other men. It reveals to us the kind of man Christ admires; and the characteristic which elicited Christ's admiration most was plainly his moral courage, his boldness, his freedom from all fear of man, and his perfect loyalty to his mission as "my messenger—which shall prepare thy way before thee." "Among them that are born of women there hath not arisen," he declared, "a greater than John the Baptist."

Lastly, Christ concludes his remarkable eulogy of John with the unexpected words: "Notwithstanding, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he." What does this mean? and whence comes this utterance? It arose out of a knowledge on Christ's part, which none else could then share, of the infinitely greater privileges and possibilities of spiritual attainment which his death, followed by the descent of the Spirit at Pentecost, would provide; and it means that the humblest Christian, apprehending the great truths of redemption and being filled with the Holy Spirit in a measure beyond all that had been possible before ("For the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified"—Jn. 7:39) might live a more holy life and possess greater peace and joy and hope in believing than could John, or any under the Old Testament dispensation, however exalted their aspirations and characters might be. They were as men, struggling up the mountain side nobly and bravely, with but a dim vision of the glory that awaited them. We, with clearer vision, animated by the same purpose, have in larger measure the

(Continued on Page 14)

Every Druggist

Knows

and thousands of users know that

MINARD'S
"KING OF PAIN"
LINIMENT

is the great family Remedy For Bodily Pain

resulting from rheumatism or neuralgia, stiff joints, strained or lame muscles, sprains, tired, aching feet, sore hands, and all sorts of bruises; also for painful chest or tubes, heavy colds, sore throat and hoarseness; as well as for scores of every-day emergencies and accidents that happen in every family. MINARD'S LINIMENT is a safe and reliable standby, and should be on every medicine shelf.

MINARD'S LINIMENT is a smooth, aromatic cream, clean to use, powerful, penetrating and soothing, and absolutely free from anything poisonous or harmful. When rubbed into the skin it stops inflammation, easing the pain and soreness at once.

If you are not one of the thousands who are already familiar with its merits, we want you to

TRY MINARD'S LINIMENT AT OUR RISK

Buy it from your druggist or dealer, use as directed, and if not found exactly as represented, we will refund your money. Prices: Small 5c., Medium 50c., Large $1.00.

MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO. SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS.

Made 41 Bales of Cotton With Only One Mule

Read in our Farmers' Year Book or Almanac for 1910 how a planter in Terrell County, Georgia, made 41 bales of cotton with only one plow, a record breaking yield, and he had a nine weeks' drought—the worst in years. His gross income was $2,098.47 for this crop. You can do it too!

By Using Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers liberally, combined with careful seed selection, thorough cultivation, and a fair season. Ask your fertilizer dealer for a copy of this free book, or write us for one. Be sure you haul home only Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers

SALES OFFICES:

Mail us this Coupon, Richmond, Va. Atlanta, Ga.
Norfolk, Va. Savannah, Ga.

VIRGINIA-CAROLINA CHEMICAL COMPANY.
Please send me a copy of your 1910 Farmers' Year Book free of cost.
Name.....
Town.....
State.....

Columbia, S. C.
Durham, N. C.
Winston-Salem, N. C.
Charleston, S. C.
Baltimore, Md.
Columbus, Ga.
Montgomery, Ala.
Memphis, Tenn.
Shreveport, La.

Methodist Benevolent Association

Ministers and Laymen of Southern Methodist Church. Benefits at Death, or Old Age, or Disability. Over $5,000 paid to Widows, Orphans, Disabled. Insurance at cost. If in good health, write for rates and other information.

CARE METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE

NASHVILLE, TENN.

A TALK ON FARM POWER.

Every hour counts big with the modern farmer. He could not possibly get along with old fashioned methods. For there are so many more things to be done each day than formerly—and certainly the days have not lengthened. So farmers are crowding the hours. They are buying time-saving machinery of every kind. And thousands of farmers have solved many of their problems with a gasoline engine. The practical, time-saving, work-saving and money-saving advantage of a good gasoline engine has been proved to them and by them. It seems strange that every farm is not equipped with such power; and the main reason for this condition seems to be that many farmers are not fully convinced, or do not fully realize the real value of a good gasoline engine.

No matter how small or how large your farm may be—a month's use of the right kind of a gasoline engine will make you wonder how you ever got along without one before. When you think of the work it does—the time and the money it saves—you will bless the day you decided to purchase one. For in running the cream separator, wood saw, feed cutter, churn, grindstone, fanning mill, corn sheller, thrasher, shredder, and the many other farm machines—and for the many special jobs on every farm—a good gasoline engine is the most wonderful helper of the day. It means steady, economical power at a minute's notice—wherever you want it.

The good gasoline engines are remarkably simple in construction, remarkably economical in cost of running and remarkably strong and durable so they last for years. We say "good" gasoline engines because those are the only kind that are paying big dividends to thousands upon thousands of farmers every day. To choose a good one means close investigation on your part. You know you cannot afford to make a mistake. So our advice is to first select a reliable line, like the I. H. C. for example, then find out just what style and size engine meets your needs best. You know just what work you will have for such an engine. You know the conditions surrounding your farm. You may need a 2-horse power, horizontal, water-cooled engine, or you may need a 2-horse power vertical, air-cooled engine. You may want a portable, stationary or semi-portable outfit. To give you an idea of how completely some manufacturers cover the possible needs of farmers, here are the styles and sizes in which I. H. C. engines are made. I. H. C. Vertical engines are made in 2, 3 and 25-horse power; Horizontal engines—portable and stationary—are made in 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 15, 20 and 25-horse power. Famous air-cooled engines are made in 1, 2 and 3-horse power, and the 4 H. C. Hopper-cooled engines are made in 2, 2½, 3, 4, 6 and 8-horse power sizes. And the prize-winning International tractors are made in 12, 15 and 20-horse power. There are also special sawing, spraying and pumping outfits in the I. H. C. line.

While on the subject of the I. H. C. engines, their many features come to mind. The thousands now in use everywhere are certainly giving wonderful satisfaction, and it is due to careful, extensive experimenting, the selection of the right principle first, then the selection of right materials and the most expert workmanship. These points are bound to lead to extreme simplicity, absolute reliability, wonderful economy, utmost durability and abundance of power and strength for whatever work you may have for them. For a clearer understanding of how a good gasoline engine is made, let us go over some of the points of the I. H. C. Victor Horizontal gasoline engines. They are especially designed for general farm work. They can be used anywhere. They are equipped with electric ignition, so that it is never necessary to have an open flame near the engine, which would prevent its being used in insured buildings. This engine is regularly equipped for using gasoline, but with slight alterations, natural gas, alcohol or kerosene may be used as fuel. The cylinder and jacket walls are cast in one piece so that it is easy to clean the jacket walls when necessary. The cylinder is especially designed to insure close compression of the explosive charge, which gives these I. H. C. Victor engines their remarkable efficiency. The hit and miss type of governor is used reducing the fuel consumption to a minimum. The ignition is positive in action, and the ignition points are made of a special material that withstands the heat of the spark as well as the effects of corrosion and oxidation. The plunger type of pump, made mainly of brass, and the valve of right materials shows off in the work that I. H. C. engines are doing.

All the I. H. C. engines are just as carefully made. Which ever one meets your need will serve you well. You should read the I. H. C. book because it tells you much about engines that you ought to know. It is a veritable mine of information on good gasoline engines. We urge you to get the I. H. C. catalog from your local International dealer at once. Let him tell you about the I. H. C. that will do your work best. If you prefer write directly to the International Harvester Company of America, Chicago, U. S. A., and they will be pleased to advise you. But see your local International dealer if you possibly can and have a power talk with him. Take the I. H. C. catalog home with you and study it. Your time will be well invested. Because the purchase of an I. H. C. engine will mean more to you than you now think. You must have one to fully appreciate its value.

DEDICATION OF BETHEL CHURCH.

Dear Brother Meek: At our second quarterly meeting for the Baker circuit on May 1, 1910, Rev. C. C. Miller, P. E., of Baton Rouge District, will dedicate what is known as the Bethel church. This church was first built in 1850 and was burned down by the Yankees during the war; was rebuilt again shortly after the war, and that house stood till 1906, when it was rebuilt again by Brother J. W. Lee. During the recent storm in September, it was blown down, and it looked at first that it would be impossible to rebuild it, but the people rallied again and a building committee was appointed and the church stands to-day completed.

I want to say further that some good men have gone out from this old Church: Rev. James Tucker, now of Mississippi; Rev. H. N. Brown, of the Louisiana Conference, and his brother, who is also studying for the ministry. We have a membership now of 102. All former pastors are invited to attend the dedication.

F. N. SWEENEY, P. C.
Baker, La.

CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference of Corinth District will convene at Blue Mountain, Miss., Tuesday, May 3, 1910, at 9 o'clock a. m., and adjourn Thursday following, at noon. Program and report blanks will be sent out at once. Let each pastor, local preacher and all other members arrange to be present at the opening and remain until close.

BEN P. JACO, P. E.

CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Meek: The Corinth District Conference will convene in Blue Mountain (Mississippi) May 3, at 8:30 a. m., and I would like for all who contemplate attending send me their names at once, so that we can arrange for their entertainment. We want to take care of all who may have business in any way with the Conference, who can attend, and in order to do this, you will please send me your name at once, so that we can properly provide for you. All regular pastors who want to bring their wives, please write me. We hope to have a great time.

J. H. BASS.

THIS WILL INTEREST MANY.

F. W. Parkhurst, the Boston publisher, says that if any one afflicted with rheumatism in any form, neuralgia or kidney trouble, will send their address to him at 704-33 Carney Bldg., Boston, Mass., he will direct them to a perfect cure. He has nothing to sell or give, only tells you how he was cured after years of search for relief. Hundreds have tested it with success.

God may be glorified in small things as well as great. It is the motive which signifies action.

A Doctor in the Family.

Royaline Oil, made by the Royaline Medicine Co., of New Orleans, La., answers so many useful purposes in the like a doctor in the family. Its timely use saves, not only much suffering and time, but also physicians' bills. Cuts, aches, inflammations, swellings of any other soreness can be quickly alleviated by the application of Royaline Oil, the great antiseptic. Price 25c. a bottle. At your druggist.

Nothing can touch the heavenly patrimony. Once within the Father's house, we are there forever.

Don't Buy An Organ

too hastily. That is, don't buy until you have money enough to get a good one. To buy a cheap organ, where a little more would get an Estey, would be almost like throwing money away. You'd have the whole thing to do over again soon.

Address Estey Brattleboro, Vt.

Ingredients of Ayer's Hair Vigor:

Sulphur, Glycerin, Quinin, Sodium Chlorid, Capsicum, Sage, Alcohol, Water, Perfume.

Anything injurious here? Ask your doctor.
Anything of merit here? Ask your doctor.
Will it stop falling hair? Ask your doctor.
Will it destroy dandruff? Ask your doctor.

Does not Color the Hair

J. C. AYER COMPANY, LOWELL, MASS.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

W. M. BYRNE, Pres. JOHN T. GIBBONS, Vice-Pres. P. E. BURKE, Sec'y.

Capital $200,000.00

Assets 479,860.90

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PAID PROMPTLY

WHY YOUR ENGINE IS IN THE I H C LINE

YOU want the simplest, most economical, most reliable and most durable engine made. You want the one that saves the most work, time and money. In short, you want the engine that pays the biggest dividends. That is why your engine is in the I. H. C. line.

After carefully investigating other engines, thousands have chosen from the I. H. C. line. They now know what perfect power-service means, for I. H. C. engines are unequalled for running the many machines on the farm—such as cream separator, wood saw, feed cutter, churn, grindstone, fanning mill, corn sheller, thrasher, shredder, pump, etc.

Wherever you go—I. H. C. engines are giving satisfactory service. Judge by what they are doing for thousands. Judge by comparison—point by point—with other engines. To be absolutely sure of getting the engine that will mean most to you—choose out of the line of

I H C Gasoline Engines

A Size and Style To Suit Every Need

You will get the engine that is best adapted to your work. You will get the engine that will work simplest, cheapest and best. You will get a simple engine that you can depend on. I. H. C. engines are made in many sizes and styles. Whichever one you choose—is best in its class.

I. H. C. Vertical engines are made in 2, 3 and 25-horsepower; I. H. C. Horizontal engines (portable and stationary) are made in 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 15, 20 and 25-horsepower; Famous air-cooled engines are made in 1, 2 and 3-horsepower; Hopper cooled engines are made in 2, 2½, 3, 4, 6 and 8-horsepower; and there are also I. H. C. sawing, spraying and pumping outfits—besides the International tractors—successful in every contest, winning the highest honors at home and abroad—made in 12, 15 and 20-horsepower sizes.

See the local International dealer at once. Let him tell you all about the I. H. C. engine that meets your needs exactly. You will be well repaid for your visit. If you prefer, write direct to us about the engines you are most interested in and we will promptly send you catalogues and any special information you request.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY OF AMERICA

(Incorporated)
CHICAGO U S A

THE I-H-C LINE

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Natchez Dist.—Second Round.

Hamburg, at McNair.....Apr. 23, 24
 Gloster, at Woodland.....Apr. 30, 1
 Liberty, at Gladding.....May 7, 8
 Adams, at A.....May 14, 15
 Wilkinson, atMay 21, 22
 Centerville.....May 28, 29
 Nebo, at Oak Grove.....June 4, 5
 Barlow, atJune 11, 12
 Bayou Pierre, atJune 13
 Scotland, atJune 18, 19
 Homochitto, at Rosetta.....June 25, 26
 The District Conference will begin at Meadville, Tuesday, April 12, 4 p. m.
H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, P. E.
 Gloster, Miss.

Jackson Dist.—Second Round.

Camden, at Soule Chapel.....Apr. 23, 24
 Florence, at Ritchland.....Apr. 30, May 1
 Sharon, at Lone Pine.....May 7, 8
 Canton, 7:30 p. m.....May 8
 Jackson, First Ch.....May 15
 Jackson, Capitol St.....May 22
 Mendenhall, at Braxton.....May 28, 29
 Eden, at Thornton.....June 1
 Lintonia, at Crymes Ch.....June 4, 5
 Yazoo City, at 8 p. m.....June 5
 Flora, at Bentonla.....June 11, 12
 Deasonville, at Fletcher's Chapel.....June 17
 Benton, at Zeiglerville.....June 18, 19
 Fannin, at Goshen Spgs.....June 22
 Harrisville, at Rexford.....June 25, 26
 The District Conference will begin with a sermon, at Canton, on Tuesday, April 26, at 7:30 p. m.
J. R. JONES, P. E.

Seashore Dist.—Second Round.

Gulfport, 29th Street.....Apr. 20,
 Logtown.....Apr. 23, 24
 Mentor, at Alexander Memorial, 11 a. m.....Apr. 27,
 Columbia.....Apr. 30, May 1
 Oakvale, at Hathorn.....May 2,
 Hub, at Paine's Chapel.....May 3,
 Long Beach.....May 7, 8
 Coalville, at Cedar Lake.....May 25,
 Wolf River Mission, at Beulah, 10 a. m.....May 27,
 Biloxi.....May 28, 29
 Gulfport, 25th Avenue.....June 1,
 Lumberton.....June 4, 5
 Poplarville.....June 6,
 Carriere and McNeill, at McNeill.....June 7,
 Americus, 11 a. m.....June 10,
 Escatawpa, 11 a. m.....June 11,
 Moss Point.....June 11, 12
 Pascagoula.....June 12, 13
 Vancleave.....June 15,
W. B. JONES, P. E.

Brookhaven Dist.—Second Round.

Osyka, at Johnson Station.....Apr. 23, 24
 Topisaw, at Sartins.....Apr. 30, May 1
 Brookhaven.....May 8,
 Gallman, at Mt. Pleasant.....May 14, 15
 Crystal Springs.....May 15, 16
 Silver Creek, at N. Hebron.....May 21, 22
 Hazlehurst.....May 29, 30
 Monticello, at Tilton.....June 4, 5
 Prentiss, at Santee.....June 11,
 Boguechitto and Norfield, at Norfield.....June 12, 13
 Pearlhaven, Hawkin Chap.....June 18, 19
 Buford, at Summers Chapel.....June 26,
 District Conference.....June 8, 10
J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

Meridian Dist.—Second Round.

East Clark, at Salem.....Apr. 23, 24
 Waynesboro.....Apr. 27,
 Shubuta and Quitman, at Quitman.....May 1, 2
 Wayne Mission, at Big R.....May 7, 8
 Buckatunna, at State Line.....May 15, 16
 North Kemper, at Hope'll.....May 21, 22
 Meridian, East End.....May 25
 Meridian, South Side and Poplar Springs, at Poplar Springs.....May 26
 Enterprise and Stonewall, at Stonewall.....May 28, 29
 Porterville, at Union.....June 4, 5
 Meridian, Central.....June 7
 Meridian, 5th Street.....June 8
 DeKalb, at Pleasant Ridge.....June 11, 12
 Meridian, 7th Avenue.....June 15
 Vinville, at Why Not.....June 18, 19
W. H. LEWIS, P. E.
 District Conference, at Fifth Street, Meridian, May 30 to June 3.
W. H. LEWIS, P. E.
 Newton Dist.—Second Round.

Morton, at Zion Grove.....Thurs.....Apr. 21
 Hillsboro, at Prairie Hill.....Fri.....Apr. 22
 Forest at Lena.....Apr. 23, 24
 Indian Mission, at Phillips Ch.....Fri.....Apr. 29
 Edinburg, atApr. 30, 1
 Carthage, at Singleton.....May 7, 8
 Monroze.....Wed.....May 11
 Rose HHL, at Pleas. Grove.....May 14, 15
 Newton.....Wed.....May 18
 Hickory, at Garlandville.....May 21, 22
 Trenton, at New Prospect.....Fri.....May 27
 Shiloh, at Johns.....May 28, 29
 Chunkey, at Meehan.....Wed.....June 1,
 Homewood, at High Hill.....June 4, 5
 Decatur, at Decatur.....Fri.....June 10
 Neshoba, at Mars Hill.....June 11, 12
 Philadelphia, at P.....June 12, 13
T. J. O'NEIL, P. E.
 Newton, Miss.

Vicksburg Dist.—Second Round.

Mayersville, at M.....April 23, 24
 Rolling Fork, at Grace.....April 29
 Anguilla, at Bethel.....May 1
 Rocky Spgs., at Cayuga.....May 7, 8
 Silver City, at Holly Bluff.....May 12, 13
 Sartatia, at Wesley Chpl.....May 14, 15
 Harriston, at Martin.....May 21, 22
 Oak Ridge, at Red Bone.....May 28, 29
 Hermanville, at Pisgah.....May 31
 Edwards, at Clinton.....June 3
 Crawford St.....June 5
 District Conference at Marysville June 7, 11. Opens on 7th, at 11 a. m.
G. H. GALLOWAY, P. E.

THE PHILOSOPHERS AND THE FROG.

Dr. Stafford, for many years Professor of Chemistry in the Medical College of the University of Nashville, used to tell his students a fable, the moral of which was plain. The wise men were gathered together to ascertain the explanation of the fact that when two glasses of water of equal weight were balanced on the beams of a balance-scale and a frog is then put in one of the vessels the balance remains the same, thus proving that a frog has no weight when immersed in water. Each wise man had his own explanation, and there was much heated argument and discussion. At length one of the wise men said: "Let us try it." Of course, you know the result.

But the fable has a moral. You sometimes hear wise-acres say that Coca-Cola is injurious. You ask them why. One says one thing and another says another. Why not try? Why not analyze it? If you are not a chemist yourself, then why not accept the verdict of every competent chemist who has ever analyzed it? Eminent College and University Chemists, Commercial Chemists, Government, State and City Chemists, all have analyzed Coca-Cola, and not one has ever been able to find anything injurious in it. If this is true, don't you think it is about time for those who have been scandalizing the National temperance drink to be silenced? The next time you hear anyone say "that Coca-Cola contains 'dope,'" tell him to write to the Coca-Cola Company, Atlanta, Ga., for a free copy of "Truth about Coca-Cola."

The faith that meets difficulties with a determined purpose is the kind of faith that overcomes.

CAPUDINE CURES HEADACHES.

There isn't any headache remedy that does the work like Hick's Capudine. For sick or nervous headache, headaches from heat, cold, grip or stomach troubles—it gives immediate relief. Liquid, easy to take. Sold by druggists.

Cuba 10 ACRES $250. Best Soil. Ideal climate. Abundant Rainfall. Nearest Tropical soil to New York. No Frost. No excessive heat. Manati the finest harbor. Land worth five times as much, but we want settlers. WRITE NOW. SANDERSON, 206 Palace Bldg. Minneapolis, Minn.

Four Years to Pay for This Piano

UNDER the Werlein Club Plan one hundred people buy one hundred pianos, each agreeing to pay for one piano only. The piano is shipped upon payment of $10. The monthly payment is $6. This is for a $400 piano. Write for particulars—how to save $108 on your purchase.

Sixty-seven years in business

Philip Werlein, Ltd., 605-7-9 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

Weber, Chickering, Mathushek, Behr, Pease, Wegman, Ivers & Pond, Steck, Werlein Pianos and Pianolas. Sheet Music—Victor Talking Machines.

THE BEST MADE Angell's Cough and Whooping Cough Syrup

For Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and Throat Trouble.

Contains no Opium or Morphine. All Druggists, Price 25 and 50 cents.

DRAUCHON'S PRACTICAL BUSINESS COLLEGE

Endorsed by Bankers and Leading Business Men. POSITIONS GUARANTEED. Teaches Bookkeeping, Banking, Shorthand, Typewriting, Borroughs' Adding Machine Course, Multigraphing, Penmanship, and all Literary Branches necessary for a thorough business training. Modern equipment and trained teachers, also teach by mail—Catalog FREE. Address, J. E. Richardson, Mgr., Shreveport, La.; Or Texarkana, Tex.

DUGGAN'S BOLL WEEVIL REMEDY WILL INSURE A GOOD COTTON CROP

Should be used by every cotton planter in the South. Simple, Cheap, Effective. Fully demonstrated at Natchez, Miss., last season. Write for particulars and references.

One gallon diluted treats 2 acres

J. J. DUGGAN, Mn'r.

4326 Magazine Street, New Orleans, La.

CONVENIENT WAY,

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA, SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL,

General Passenger Agent.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Shreveport Dist.—Second Round.

Keatchie, at Long St.....Apr. 16, 17
 Noel Memorial.....Apr. 17, 18
 Fullerton, at Fullerton.....Apr. 20, 21
 Oakdale, at Oakdale.....Apr. 23, 24
 Longville, at Cravins.....Apr. 26, 27
 Grand Cané, at Keithville.....May 1,
 Texas Avenue.....May 1, 2
 Coushatta, at Carroll.....May 6, 7
 Campti, at Clarence.....May 8, 9
 Greenwood, at Greenwood.....May 14, 15
 La Chute, at Atkins.....May 21, 22
 Hornbeck, at Prospect.....May 28, 29
 Leesville.....May 29, 30
 Ida.....June 4, 5
 Zwolle.....June 10,
 Many.....June 11, 12
 Pelican.....June 18, 19
 Pleasant Hill.....June 19, 20
 De Ridder.....June 25, 26
 Bon Ami.....June 27, 28
 Mansfield.....July 2, 3
 Mooringsport.....July 3, 4
 Shreveport, 1st Church.....July 6,

Bossier City.....July 7,
 Shreveport District Conference will meet at Zwolle, La., June 14. The opening sermon will be preached Monday night. T. J. WARLICK, P. E.

Baton Rouge Dist.—Second Round.

St. Francisville, at Star Hill.....Apr. 20,
 Zachary, at Zachary.....Apr. 21,
 Ponchatoula, at Springfield.....Apr. 23, 24
 Amite City.....Apr. 24, 25
 Baker, at Bethel.....Apr. 30, May 1
 Denham Springs, at Liveoak.....May 1, 2
 Pt. Vincent, at Maurepas.....May 4,
 Pinegrove, at Pipkin's C.....May 7, 8
 Baton Rouge—
 Second Ch., at Antioch.....May 14, 15
 First Church.....May 15, 16
 Tickfaw, at James Chapel.....May 18,
 E. Feliciana, at Independence.....May 21, 22
 Bogalusa—District Conference.....May 28, 30
 New Roads, at New Roads.....June 4, 5
C. C. MILLER, P. E.

IMPORTANT!

Write this very day
for your copy of the Van Antwerp Seed
Catalog—Free.

You can not afford to miss it this season.

Everything in seeds. Van Antwerp's seeds never disappoint you.

Clip and mail this "ad" with 25 cents and we will mail you TEN 5c papers of our selection of choice seeds.

Seed Department
Van Antwerp's
Dept. B, MOBILE, ALA.

MRS. ABBIE J. TUCKER.

The world can never know the debt it owes to the mothers of Methodism. The Susanna Wesleys, Lady Huntingdons, Barbara Hecks and the thousands of others whose names are not written on history's pages, but are inscribed in letters of gold in "The Book of Life," and are numbered with the most precious jewels in the home of our Father. Such the name, the memory of Mrs. Abbie (DeLoach) Tucker, faithful wife, devoted mother, loyal sister, and obedient, humble child of God.

She was born in Coosa County, Alabama, January 14, 1855, to A. W. and Theodosia (Spence) DeLoach. Her father was a descendant of the French Huguenots, who came over in the early colonial days and settled in the English Carolinas.

She possessed much of the same sturdy, independent, energetic spirit that characterized the colonizers. She died while on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Ollie Williams, at Strong's, Miss., January 29, 1910, and was buried in the Booneville Cemetery, January 31.

When a girl, her family moved to Alcorn County, Mississippi. Here September 18, 1873, she was married to Mr. H. R. Tucker by Rev. D. W. Babb. To them were born four boys and three girls; all but one survive to mourn her departure. Three sons and three daughters, she lived to see to manhood and womanhood, the pride of her life. Truly, her "children were the crown of old age," and, truly, "they rise up to call her blessed."

Two noble sons are in the itinerancy, one in North Mississippi Conference, one in the Memphis Conference. One daughter is a volunteer for missionary work. Each of the others are loyal members of the Methodist Church.

When quite young she gave her life to God, and all through the years nothing she possessed was ever too dear for her Lord. Like Mary of old, she ever sat at the Master's feet to learn of him, and with a devoted love she freely poured out the frankincense of her life, a sweet savor to her Lord. She unreservedly dedicated her children, her worldly goods and herself to him. And in him she found the secret of life's real joy.

Five years after her marriage to Mr. H. R. Tucker he became a traveling preacher in the North Mississippi Conference. For twenty years, side by side, they labored in the itinerancy, filling circuit, station and district charges.

While serving the Corinth District, Brother Tucker went home, after a few days' suffering from pneumonia. Here, near the sacred dust of her loved companion, she made her home, and by his side we laid her body to rest. Her devotion to him was as strong as heart cords can bind, her love as tender as when a girl, her memory of him was always as fresh as if it had been but yesterday that "he left us." No mother ever loved more tenderly the child of her bosom than she did the six children who were, indeed, "her jewels." For them and for her Christ it was her consuming desire "to spend and be spent."

In her Church life, she was a vigorous, active, thorough-going worker—a real leader. Her Christian life was indeed her life; a resolute faith, a strong conviction of duty and a deep consecration made her an effective worker in the Master's kingdom. Her kind consideration, her forgiving disposition, her solicitude for others, her earnestness, always won her a hearing and enabled her to do telling work. Wherever there was suffering and need she could be found with a ministering hand. She was an active leader in the missionary societies, Sunday school and Children's work. If her place in Church and prayer meeting was vacant it meant that she was sick or away from home.

We could not do better than to recount her virtues by the "fruits of the Spirit," for this was her life. Her love for God was supreme and her love for the world was as broad as humanity. Her joy was in knowing she was doing the Master's will, and, indeed, none found more real joy in life than she. Her's was the "peace of God that passeth understanding," a joy inexpressible and full of glory. Thus, under the polishing hand of God a natural life was made to shine with a glorious luster, the flower was made to develop full-blown, shedding its perfumes and giving joy everywhere. To say that she was loved would be commonplace to all who knew her. She was loved and honored in life, deeply mourned in her death, and her memory remains "like ointment poured forth" as a precious benediction to our Church and town. She lives on in the lives she blessed. What made all this? Not money, not social position and prestige, for these she cared but little; no it was none else but the Christ that dwelt continually within her, and whom she delighted to lift up in her life.

How beautiful to grow old in the service of God! The masterpiece of God is not the awe-inspiring scenes of earth or sky, nor the beautiful paintings of the sunset, nor the dainty tints of the flower petal, but a redeemed, sanctified, glorified soul; washed in the blood of the Lamb; and made strong by the Bread of Life.

We are sad at the earthly parting. We could not but weep at the "good-bye" for earth and time, but how glorious the morning dawn to her weary, tired and longing soul; how happy the union at the "gates of pearl." Glorious mother, sister, friend, but more glorious over there!—Her Pastor,
J. H. HOLDER.

Prosperity is not a blessing if your wants increase at a more rapid pace than your possessions.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection: beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Grenada College.

Secure our catalogue before deciding where to place your daughter. Superior Home Comforts; Only Two Girls in a Room; Marvelous Health Record; Excellent Fine Arts Department; Strong Lyceum Course; Well-Adapted Library; Personal Attention to Individual Pupil; Superior Student Body as Associates; Carefully Selected Faculty; Strong Course of Study; Rates Reasonable; Constant Christian Influence; Permeating and Dominating College Life.

Apply for rooms at once and thus secure choice of location.

W. L. CLIFTON, A.B., Ph.D., President, Grenada, Miss.

LET THE EXPERIENCE OF THE MAJORITY OF FARMERS BE YOUR GUIDE IN BUYING TWINE

THE time has come to order your binder twine for the 1910 harvest. Twine dealers are placing orders for their season's stock. The mills are running. Now is the time for you to decide the twine question. It is something that requires careful consideration. The success of your harvest will depend on the uninterrupted work of your binder, for no binder can work well if you use a cheap grade of binder twine.

It is our aim to have every farmer who uses IHC twine go through the 1910 harvest season without a break in the field. We have much more at stake than merely selling twine. Your interests and ours are the same.

We know that the raw materials from which IHC twines are spun have the quantity and quality of fibre that insure greater strength than is found in any other twine. They are evenly spun—smooth running—do not tangle in the twine box—work well in the knoter, insuring perfect binding and perfect tying. They insure your being able to work your binder through the entire harvest season with greatest speed and economy and are therefore practical profit insurance.

Those who buy cheap twine will certainly have trouble—delays due to tangles, knots and breaks will mean the loss of valuable time—and every delay at harvest time will cut down your profits.

There is a sure way to avoid this. Let the experience of the past be your guide in purchasing your twine. The verdict of the majority of the farmers of this country is a safe guide. Their decision should have more weight with you than the statement of any twine manufacturer. These farmers know. They have the same problems confronting them that you have. They have no axe to grind. They do not sell twine. They are only interested in results.

I H C Brand of Sisal—Standard Sisal Manila or Pure Manila

Are the twines used by the majority of the farmers of this country. They have been proved to give the best results. Eighty-five to 90 per cent of the farmers use Sisal. It is smooth running and works at steady tension without kinking or tangling in the twine box—insuring perfect binding and perfect tying. Its only equal is the really high grade Manila twines such as bear the IHC trade-mark.

Your interests and ours are identical on this twine proposition. We have more at stake than selling twine. We are vitally interested in the successful operation of hundreds of thousands of binders. On their successful operation depends our success—and we know they cannot operate successfully with poor twine. No binder made can. For this reason we have given the twine problem careful study. When we say "Stick to Sisal or high grade Manila bearing the IHC trade-mark"—we do so because we know them to be the highest standard of excellence in binder twine.

But we don't ask you to do as we say. We want you to be the judge. But your judgment to be right should be based on facts—not on the statement of any twine man. And the fact is—that the majority of the farmers of this country use IHC twine. Sisal or Standard (which is made from pure Sisal) comes 500 feet to the pound; high grade Manila, 600 feet to the pound; Pure Manila, 650 feet. See your local IHC dealer at once and let him know how much you will need. If you want more facts on binder twine, write direct to

International Harvester Company of America Chicago U S A

(Incorporated)

THE I-H-C LINE

Epilepsy, Fits

"My son was cured of a very bad case of epilepsy with Dr. Miles' Nervine." MRS. D. BAKER, Cleveland, Ohio.

"My little girl who was afflicted with St. Vitus' Dance is now entirely well, after taking Dr. Miles' Nervine only four months." MRS. C. G. BENNETT, Alma, Mich.

These diseases have been cured in so many instances, that we do not think there is any longer any doubt that they are curable diseases. Being nervous diseases they yield to the soothing and strengthening influence of

Dr. Miles' Nervine.

Though stubborn, persistent treatment is almost sure to effect a cure by restoring nervous energy.

The first bottle will benefit; if not, your druggist will return your money.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL

WILL SELL TICKETS AT RATE $32.00

To San Francisco, Los Angeles and other California Points

March 1st - April 15th

To Portland, Seattle, Spokane, $45.95,

And Other Points in Oregon, Washington, Utah, and Wyoming.

LIBERAL STOPOVERS.

Full Particulars.

Ticket Office, 141 St. Charles

PHONE MAIN 3613

It Is a Burning Shame

that so many Churches are without sufficient insurance, and not properly safeguarded against fire.

The National Mutual Church Insurance Co., of Chicago—The Methodist Mutual furnishes protection and assists in prevention. Also writes fire, marine insurance. Take part and you can save money.

Advantageous rates, easy payment, profits to policyholders. And your Church is entitled to share in these benefits.

IT IS UP TO YOU

For applications and particulars address

HENRY P. MAGILL, Sec'y and Manager,

184 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Alice H. Barclay, Agent M. E. Church South

South Brook 1106, Louisville, Ky.

GALL STONES OR LIVER

or Stomach Ailment Cured. AVOID AN OPERATION. Have you Pain or Distress in Pit of Stomach, Pains 2 hours after meals, Right-side pains or Backache? Spells of Indigestion, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Colic, Jaundice, Blues, Constipation, Piles, Soreness, Fullness or Oppression over Liver or Stomach? If you have any of these symptoms you need the "SECRE-SOLVO-TONE" Treatment. Write for FREE Booklet. CALLSTONE REMEDY CO., Sole U. S. Agts, Dept. 44 225 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

PARALYSIS Locomotor Ataxia Conquered at Last. Chase's Blood & Nerve Tablets does it. Write for Proof. Advice Free. Dr. CHASE, 224 North 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Tidings from the Field

Campti, La.:

I write to give you a few items from Campti charge. Things are moving on nicely with us. Since coming on the work I have visited many homes, coming in closer touch with the people, and I feel safe in saying that the question of mingling is of much importance. It brings the preacher and people into a closer relation with each other and with God.

It is just at this point that I wish to say the town of Campti and the surrounding country in connection with our other preaching points is composed of many very excellent people. They know how to make a preacher and his family feel welcome in their midst. This, of course, is much encouraging to the preachers.

The Churches and Sunday school interest are, I believe, moving forward. One thing specially I wish to note is that the people of our town are giving liberally to our Orphans' Home, for which I am more than thankful to him who has said: "I am the way, the truth and the life." I also feel sure that the future prospects are good for other collections.

We are praying and working for some good spiritual meetings this year, and believe that our prayers will not be in vain. So, in conclusion, I will ask you and all others who may read these lines to aid us by your prayers.—C. B. Powell.

Courtland, Miss.:

At the last session of the North Mississippi Conference I was appointed to the Eureka Circuit. On reaching home from Conference I found both of my children sick and was delayed about moving nearly two weeks. I reached Eureka on Friday before the third Sunday in December and found Bro. J. W. Hall had not moved out of the parsonage. After some delay, we got things together, ready to go to work.

I have missed four appointments since I have been on the work. Two on account of rain, and two on account of smallpox. The smallpox has been raging on my work and has kept me in very close. We have also had another epidemic—raging throughout the bounds of my work. It seems to have been very contagious, and a great many of our young people, and some few widowers and widows have been stricken with it. This contagion is matrimony. I have married ten couples in two and one-half months and was called on to marry about seven or eight couples I could not get to.

Our work is in a very good condition and the indications are good for a good year. The people are very attentive to their Church. The services are well attended and a devout spirit pervades the services. After next Sunday we will have a Sunday school in every church on the charge, which will make six.

When Dr. Boswell was put out of the editorship of the Advocate it caused me to feel sad. I had learned to love Dr. Boswell, and it seemed hard to give him up. Let me say here that there is not a better, safer, sounder, or more lovable man in the M. E. Church South, than John W. Boswell. Yet, in this short time, Mr. Editor, I find myself looking forward just as eagerly for your weekly visits, through the medium of the Advocate as I did for his. I enjoy your editorials on "The Woman's Rights Memorial" very much. I think you are right.—C. Wesley Bailey.

Guntown, Miss.:

Doubtless a word from the Guntown and Baldwin charge, and especially so if favorable, would be gladly accorded a place in the columns of your paper. This charge is composed of four appointments of as loyal Methodists as can be found anywhere, as will be attested by all of its previous pastors and presiding elders. This charge has been served by a God-serving Moose; by a God-loving and God-serving Coon; by one of God's wide-awake, gospel preachers, Crow; and by a Buck whose zeal and energy for the cause of Christ, could not be beaten in the chase, and by a Stone whose religious life and his able gospel sermons have left fruits as firm as the rocks of Gibraltar, and by a Young, if he is to be judged by his Christian life, and his eloquent gospel sermons, a thousand years old. Last, but not least, by a whole lot, we now have a Savage, who from his association among men and his able gospel sermons, is convincing to the people that he is the right man in the right place. In his Christian life and his gospel sermons he is equal to his avoirdupois—his weight is about three hundred. His appointments are well attended; the pews are well filled and the whole people are delighted with him. When he came here only two Advocates were taken; now there are about fifty. He has had the parsonage completed. Guntown has a parsonage that is second to none in the district. Though he has and is building the church up to a high plane, his salary has been raised, not commensurate with his worth, but above any former plane, all of which will easily be paid. All in all, Brother Savage is a great man, and big things may be expected of him by the Conference, for he is going to do it.—O. L. Kennedy.

ally so if favorable, would be gladly accorded a place in the columns of your paper. This charge is composed of four appointments of as loyal Methodists as can be found anywhere, as will be attested by all of its previous pastors and presiding elders. This charge has been served by a God-serving Moose; by a God-loving and God-serving Coon; by one of God's wide-awake, gospel preachers, Crow; and by a Buck whose zeal and energy for the cause of Christ, could not be beaten in the chase, and by a Stone whose religious life and his able gospel sermons have left fruits as firm as the rocks of Gibraltar, and by a Young, if he is to be judged by his Christian life, and his eloquent gospel sermons, a thousand years old. Last, but not least, by a whole lot, we now have a Savage, who from his association among men and his able gospel sermons, is convincing to the people that he is the right man in the right place. In his Christian life and his gospel sermons he is equal to his avoirdupois—his weight is about three hundred. His appointments are well attended; the pews are well filled and the whole people are delighted with him. When he came here only two Advocates were taken; now there are about fifty. He has had the parsonage completed. Guntown has a parsonage that is second to none in the district. Though he has and is building the church up to a high plane, his salary has been raised, not commensurate with his worth, but above any former plane, all of which will easily be paid. All in all, Brother Savage is a great man, and big things may be expected of him by the Conference, for he is going to do it.—O. L. Kennedy.

Sunday School

(Continued from Page 11.)

presence and power of Christ to enable us always to triumph through him that loved us.

11. The Lesson's Message for Us To-Day. Points to Impress.

1. Spiritual depression and uncertainty are sometimes due to physical causes and surroundings, not always to sin and neglect of duty on our part. Sometimes a dose of medicine, or a change of environment is just the thing needed to restore to us spiritual vitality and confidence.

2. The test of Christ's Messiahship, as given by himself, was in his works, in harmony with prophecy. So the test of our discipleship is in our works, in harmony with Christ's teaching. By our fruits Christ and we, alike, are known. Can we appeal to our lives and deeds, as Christ did here, as proof that we are Christians?

3. We must be aware of needlessly being "offended" in others, of self-established standards by which we judge and doubt others, condemning all as unworthy who do not exactly fulfill our ideals. A larger charity will cause us to recognize that our standards may be defective; or even where true, that we know others but in part, and understand but little the thoughts and intents of their hearts. As we said above, it was John's ideal of the Messiah, not Christ's life and works, that needed revising.

4. The kind of man Christ admires is the bold, uncompromising preacher of righteousness. Not reeds shaken by the wind—timorous, fearful souls, willing to sacrifice principle or truth to save their skin; not effeminate, self-indulgent creatures who regard their ease and comfort above their duty or the good of men, and shrink from all self-sacrifice. Such are "in king's courts;" certainly not rightly called Christians, whether ministers or laymen or women. If we desire then, Christ's approval, let us cultivate the virtues—to-day too little regarded —of moral courage, backbone, and be loyal to right and duty at all hazards.

5. With the presence of the Holy Spirit in our lives, we may attain and live a life above all doubt, triumph over sin, and rejoicing in hope of the glory of God. In these respects are we greater than John the Baptist? Remember, "Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required."

Indianola, Miss.

Darsam Bros. Coal Co.

COAL, COKE AND ANTHRACITE,

2217 Calliope Street, New Orleans.

Phone Main 1552, P. O. Box 1406.

VISIT

MINERAL WELLS

For

HEALTH AND PLEASURE

AND

WEST TEXAS

For

FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,

General Passenger Agent.

DALLAS

TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a. m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p. m.

FOR

NEW YORK,

CINCINNATI,

ST. LOUIS.

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars. SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW

ON SALE.

LADIES, If you have superfluous HAIR ON THE FACE

send for new information how to remove it easily and effectively without chemicals or instruments. (only safe way). Correspondence confidential in plain sealed envelope.

MRS. M. N. PERRY, B2 Box 412, Long Beach, Cal.

WE OFFER YOU A POSITION

We want 250 men right away. Must have them and will pay good money $3.00 to $5.00 a day guaranteed according to class of work. You need no money. Everything done on our capital. You deliver our goods and collect a big opportunity. Write today for free plans, sample outfits, etc. All free. G. H. GROUNDS, Manager 147 W. Adams Street, Dept. 6588, Chicago, Ill.

You Look Prematurely Old

Because of these ugly, grizzly gray hairs. Use "LA CREOLE" HAIR COLOR RESTORER. Price $1.00, retail.

To the woman who bakes,
Royal is the greatest of time and labor savers.
Makes home baking easy,
a pleasure and a profit.

ROYAL Baking Powder

The only Baking Powder made
from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar

With minimum trouble and cost biscuit, cake and pastry are made fresh, clean and greatly superior to the ready-made, dry, found-in-the-shop variety.

Obituaries.

MRS. FANNIE HALLORAN SILK was born in Ireland on the 15th day of March, 1822, and died in New Orleans Feb. 12, 1910, in her eighty-eighth year. Early in life she was happily married to Mr. William Silk, who died many years ago. She was the mother of nine children—five sons and four daughters. Two daughters survive her, Mrs. Beasley, and Mrs. J. H. Keller, with whom she lived for the last twenty-one years of her life. Sister Silk was a most remarkable woman in every respect. She possessed a beauty of face rarely seen, a divine face full of heavenly light. Notwithstanding her great age, she was strong in mind and body. Ready and willing as were loved ones to minister to her, yet she wanted to do for herself. She was appreciative, even of the smallest favors, and always let her appreciation be known. She was a lover of good books and spent much time with the masters. Her favorite of all books was the Bible, which she read through two or three times every year. She believed in foreign missions with an intense enthusiasm. To give for missions was a real joy to her. Her devotion to Jesus Christ was deep and genuine. She loved to talk about him. She always spoke of him as "our Savior." She thought his second coming could not be far distant. She said to me only a short while before she went away: "However and whenever he comes for me, I am ready." And so she was. Her death was as beautiful as her life. Her going was like the calm and glory of the sunset. Many are the friends who miss her from the walks of life. The church which she loved so well feels keenly the loss; but such a life is not ended; it has left behind it a path of light for the guidance of others. It rises all glorious in the eternity morning of our God. W. W. HOLMES.

CLARE BUCHANAN ROANE, son of J. A. and Clara B. Roane, was born in Grenada, Miss., March 28, 1893, and died in the city of his birth, July 5, 1909, having spent in his earthly home just 16 years, 2 months and 7 days. Thus ended a brief, but happy and successful life. His gentle Christian mother preceded him by many years to their eternal home, having departed this life when he was yet an infant of days; but never was motherless child more fortunate than he, when through his father's marriage to Miss Henrietta Sharp, he was, at the tender age of two and one-half years, committed to her considerate care and thoughtful attention. The strong attachment of foster mother and son was soon marked and as the years went by it was beautiful to behold. I am confident their devotion could not have been truer or tenderer had the relation been that of natural mother and son. This strong mutual attachment made it easy for the wise mother to mold the gentle and affectionate child into the beautiful Christian character which he exhibited in his youth. He was converted and joined the church at 13 years of age, and from the beginning gave convincing evidence that he appreciated, as few of his age do, the obligations it imposed and the importance of observing the solemn vows he assumed at her sacred altar. While he was almost a man in stature and well advanced mentally, his open face, gentle speech and frank manner bespoke the innocence and guilelessness of childhood. Clare was in the truest sense a good boy; obedient to his parents, affectionate in the home, considerate of his friends, patient in suffering, and I am confident he was triumphant in his death. He was not only a good boy, but a bright, manly boy as well, who gave flattering promise of a noble and useful manhood. But he has gone from us, cut down in the roscate days of boyhood youth, and though we are more than six months removed from the day he went away, his voice is little less distinct, his form has not faded from our vision. O, how we miss him! In the home, on the play-ground, from the Sunday school. Will it be ever thus? will we always miss him? Yes, perhaps until you meet him again. My dear friends, the precious memory and example of this noble and generous boy is a priceless legacy to his friends and family. W. W. MITCHELL.

DON'T BE WITHOUT WATER.

There is no need of the property holders of this city being any longer without water and sewer connections. This has been the one great distress of our city, not being able to have modern improvements in our homes. But now there is no need of any more complaints along this line, as the city is perfectly willing to connect free any property with the water main, carrying the pipes to the property holders line, without any cost whatever to them.

The popular firm of C. C. Hartwell & Co., on Baronne Street, are making a liberal proposition to connect the sewer pipes free of charge. They also go farther, and agree to do all plumbing and laying of pipes necessary to connect the house with the sewer and water on monthly payments. This enables the property holders to not only put the property occupied by him but any property he has for rent in modern shape, with practically no outlay of ready cash. People interested in this proposition should consult C. C. Hartwell & Co., for a detailed explanation.

OXFORD DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Will all the brethren who expect to attend our District Conference at Abbeville, Miss., May 11-13, please notify me at once? Also, I request all of the pastors to send me the names of delegates immediately, in order that homes may be provided for them. I trust that I may have a prompt response from all interested.

B. P. FULLER, P. E.
Abbeville, Miss.

All Teachers should use their summer vacation in preparation for better work. The Summer School of the South offers Southern teachers their best opportunity for improvement. Ninth session, University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn., June 21-July 29, 1910. For more than 200 courses. For announcement containing full information, write to P. P. Claxton, Superintendent, Knoxville, Tenn.

THE JACKSON SANATORIUM

OPPOSITE WEST SIDE OF GOVERNOR'S MANSION

Chris Herbert, M. D., General Practice and Obstetrics.	Julius Crisler, M. D., Surgery and Gynecology.
O. M. Turner, M. D., Surgery and General Practice.	H. H. Harrison, M. D., General Practice and Consultation.
N. J. Milstead, M. D., General Practice and Obstetrics.	W. L. Britt, M. D., Genito-Urinary and Rectal Diseases.
E. H. Gallaway, M. D., Physician and General Surgery.	N. Stewart, M. D., Mental and Nervous Diseases.
W. W. Smithson, M. D., General Practice and Consultation.
MISS ROSE KEATING, Graduate Nurse, Superintendent.
MISS FANNY FERGUSON, Graduate Nurse, Asst. Superintendent.
JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI.

PLANT COTTON ONE SEED AT A TIME

EQUALLY SPACED—"THICK" OR "THIN"

With the preparation of the seed, plant a bushel or more, or a peck or less to the acre, one to five inches apart, as you set it. Save half the time, work and expense of chopping, as each plant stands alone, and continues to grow even if chopping is delayed. No hoeing, no digging, no skips. Planter easily and accurately adjusted to any depth. Speed covers adjustable to throw just the amount of dirt you desire over seed. Press wheel follows and packs dirt firmly—aiding germination. The

Ledbetter ONE-SEED Planter

Is the cotton-grower's dream realized. Tested for seed means absolute regularity and accuracy of drop, and positively does not crack or crush seed. Plants Corn with unequalled regularity; also Peas, Sorghum, Millet, Cane, etc.

THE SOUTHERN PLOW CO., 90 Camp St., DALLAS, TEXAS
Write promptly from Dallas, Tex., Little Rock, Ark., Jackson, Miss., Atlanta, Ga., Wilmington, N. C., Birmingham, Ala., and other points.

Write for Book or send it now, to save time. If your dealer does not sell the Ledbetter, we'll prepare the book for you. Absolutely guaranteed to please you in every way or money refunded without question. Write for book, showing this and other styles.

YOUR Boy May Become a Great Merchant

But not unless he has the necessary training. The business of this institution is to fit young men and women for successful business careers. We have the best systems for teaching Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Typewriting, Penmanship, Salesmanship, Telegraphy, Phonography, Radio, and Public Accounting, Banking and Civil Service. Correspondence courses for those who cannot attend. Write for particulars and the book, entitled "Our Presidents," giving a complete history of each, from Washington down to and including Taft. FALL'S BUSINESS COLLEGE, Broadway & 8th Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

"It Turns Your Waste Material Into Dollars."

THREE MACHINES IN ONE. Shingle, Log Saw Mill, Lath and Shingle Machine. Does all kinds of sawing. Just the machine for small saw mills and farmers use. It's a Big Money Maker. Write for circulars and particulars. Manufactured only by COLUMBIAN IRON WORKS, Chattanooga, Tenn.

The Perfect Home Treatment for THE LIQUOR HABIT.

Combined medical and hygienic treatment for home use exclusively. Slight cost. No absence from business. No publicity. Improves the general health. Cure guaranteed. Write for particulars. The Biggs Sanitarium, Home Dept., Asheville, N. C.

BOYS FREE

45 cents for one sample and five for the rest. SPALDING SUIT. Boys, you want to suit FREE. Address: 45 cents. H. G. Waldman & Co., Louisville, Ky.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, APRIL 21, 1910.

C. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

VOL. 57—No. 16.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2828.

Editorial.

Anything worth doing is worth doing well. This applies even to the preparation of matter for a church paper.

The genius which accomplishes most is that of hard work. The toilers have reared the structures which will last longest. This is true not only of things material, but also of things intellectual and spiritual.

Conscience should be educated to look not only with pity, but with horror and detestation upon what is known to be wrong. And the more robust and shrewd the character, the more these generous resentments will flame forth against sin in all its forms.—B. M. Palmer.

It is never safe for a man to run so near the line of right and wrong that if he should lose a wheel he would go over. It is like traveling on a mountain road near a precipice. You should keep so far from the precipice that if your wagon breaks down there is room between you and the cliff. Otherwise you cannot be safe.—Beecher.

There is no more despicable character than the man who abuses and mistreats the weak and helpless for personal gain. Brave men struggle with the brave, and fight when the battle is on. It is the craven coward who draws his lance to do battle when the battle is done, and then to charge only the defenseless. The wordy warriors who have enlisted and kept up the fight since Appomattox have been a curse to both the North and South.

The doctrine of the immortality of the soul only is a heathen doctrine. The Bible doctrine is the immortality of man in his entirety. It allows nothing to be lost in the fierce conflict with sin and Satan, but saves the whole being, brings the complete individual, perfected and glorified—a finished product of redemption—into the divine presence in the City Celestial. Heaven is not a vague, shadowy world, where shapeless and invisible spirits commune by intuition. But there we shall see the faces and hear the voices that we have learned to love. There will be form, and music, and converse, beneath cloudless skies and amid splendors that shall never fade.

To say that a minister is "broad in his views" is a most doubtful compliment. True Christianity has nothing of the spirit of compromise; it flies no flag of truce. On the contrary, it boldly affirms that it is right in its teachings, and insists that all other faiths are necessarily wrong. The men of power and large usefulness in the Church have ever been characterized by strong and definite convictions. Particularly was this true of St. Paul, the most majestic of the apostles. With the "oppositions of science falsely so called," he had scant patience, and when unsound doctrines began to be scattered abroad, he wrote with flaming earnestness to the Corinthians, "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."

"A REVIVAL OF RELIGION."

The Century Magazine for April contains a striking and noteworthy editorial on this subject: an editorial of most unusual character for a secular periodical. It begins by stating that "careful students of social tendencies report a reaction against the prevailing laxity in conduct and opinion." This it affirms to be not merely a "moral renaissance," but something deeper—indeed, "nothing less than a revival of religion." The evidences of its coming are said to be discoverable in the serious utterances heard from many quarters and in the confessed need of a re-vitalizing of the human conscience in social life, business operations, and the administration of public affairs. Attention is called to the fact that a Western daily published some weeks ago a brilliant editorial three columns long on "The Holy Spirit," and that a Wall Street Journal has lately declared "that there is nothing which the country so much needs just now as a revival of old-fashioned religion." This cry of despair over existing conditions and the acknowledged inadequacy of a mere preaching of ethics to remedy the distressing situation, the Century suggests, is a prophecy of a turning to God and the invocation of forces which are able to reach below the surface and touch the inmost springs of motive and character. Particularly striking is the following sentiment expressed by our distinguished contemporary: "Moral rules are not enough; what is needed most is moral motive power—the love of righteousness, the impulse to integrity, the enthusiasm of virtue. And this, as even the common man is beginning to feel, is kindled only by religion—by fellowship and communion with that Power not ourselves which makes for righteousness."

We heartily commend the wholesome views set forth in the able discussion referred to above. Nothing is truer than that morals divorced from religion are not apt to remain long unimpaired. Detached from faith in God and an inward spiritual life, they wither like branches severed from the vine. Virtue to endure needs a stronger support than the feeble human will and a mightier constraining influence than the mere consideration of personal expediency. The vacillating purpose should be re-enforced by the power of the Holy Spirit, and the weakening springs of motive, fortified by a profound and ever-present sense of accountability at the judgment. Then, and then only, is man strong to resist temptation and stand unshaken amid the storms which may assail him. Hence, when a people cease to worship and come into touch with quickening spiritual forces, it is never long until their ideals are lowered and their conduct begins to be characterized by immoralities.

And for this reason, religion is absolutely essential to the welfare of society and the nation. The primary virtues of honesty, truthfulness, and chastity, upon which the government and social order can alone rest secure, are fostered and developed by the proclamation of the gospel of Christ and the regenerating forces that operate through it. The safety of the republic depends more upon the churches than anything else beneath our flag. They are doing more to sustain the national fabric than the army, or the navy, or our public institutions of learning. Nothing is more apparent than the utter inadequacy of secular education to produce and maintain a high order of private and public morality. It touches only the head, and man is vastly more than intellect. None in all our vast domain are doing more to preserve our free institutions and promote the national greatness than the faithful preachers who are appealing to the consciences of the people and influencing them throughout the land to be virtuous and upright. They write no constitutions, enact no laws, and administer no courts of justice, but they mold the sentiment that does these things and which stands for all that is purest and best in our civilization.

But what of the coming revival? That it is needed, all will admit. The churches need it, society needs it, business needs it, the nation needs it. The gospel of Christ, properly interpreted and applied, would solve all of the perplexing problems of our time. It would harmonize the differences between labor and capital, hush the voice that preaches the doctrine of race hatred, destroy the cupidity that builds up predatory wealth, and strike down the saloons which blight and curse so many sections of our fair land. Are the indications of a widespread awakening really discernible? The Century thinks so, and it may be right. Certain it is in the spiritual realm, that the realization of need is the first step toward procurement. The felt insufficiency of other things may lead men to turn in their extremity to the Man of Galilee. Let us earnestly pray that a revival may indeed come which shall reach every stratum of society and every part of the republic, and which shall bring with it more exemplary private conduct, a purer home life, larger activity in the service of the Master, and a government and civilization more distinctively Christian.

The Heavenly Father wants a willing and whole-hearted service. A consecration with any reservations is imperfect. Only a completely surrendered personality and life can hope for God's approval and the fullness of the divine blessing. Nothing must be kept back. As Joseph Parker has strikingly said, "This idea of 'keeping back' is most expressive. Ananias and Sapphira kept back part of the price, and we know their fate; Paul kept back nothing, and we know with what exultancy he looked forward to the crown; the goats kept back the bread and water, and they went away into everlasting punishment; the sheep kept nothing back, and they entered into eternal life."

Clearness of spiritual perception is dependent upon heart purity. Worldliness and immorality blur and cloud the moral vision. The holy man has his ears attuned to the infinite and a capacity to see the invisible. He is conscious of the divine presence, and, like Enoch of old, walks in the ennobling fellowship of the Great Companion. God guides him, and unfolds to him his precious truth.

"The best education is that which gives to the body and to the soul all the beauty and perfection of which they are capable."

Christian Advocate.

Published for the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DIRECTIONS.

Correspondents will please direct all communications intended for the Editor to 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Communications intended for the Business Department should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Write with ink, and only on one side of the paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after two weeks, notify us, and we will make it right. Papers will be continued unless subscribers order otherwise.

AN INSPIRED VISION.

"Yet if any man suffer as a Christian let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf." I. Peter iv:16.

I stood beneath the full orb'd moon
One eve at close of day,
Gazing with rapture on the sunset sky
And the beautiful golden rays.

As I looked a vision came to me
Of the heavenly home so fair—
There all was bliss and joy and song,
Harps and crowns with jewels rare.

The redeemed were hymning a glad, sweet song,
It's burden was "rest and peace"
For those who were weary of worldly strife,
And longing for sweet release.

My bosom heaved, for my heart was sore;
Persecutions I understood not
Had stole into my life, with bitterness rife
Clouding my peaceful cot.

All earthly helps and counsel had failed;
The veil still intervened, my vision was blurred.
The blessed Lord
Could scarcely by me be seen.

I had followed him long, I had served him well,
And my life had been filled with joy.
I loved all others as sisters and brothers,
Bliss was mine with out alloy.

And oh! Why now should this cloud intervene
Between myself and my God?
I had wronged no one, had done the best I could,
Guided by his precious Word.

So I pleaded him there beneath the blue sky,
While the stars were peeping through,
To safely lead and to intercede,
To clearer make my view.

His tender gaze on me was fixed,
He reached forth and clasped my hand;
His "still small voice" spoke sweetly to me:
"Thy Father understands."

Not a teardrop falls but thy Savior knows;
Fear not nor be distressed,
His great heart bleeds for thy smallest needs;
In him ye shall be blest.

Cheer up, my child; "Be strong in the Lord,"
In newness of life now begin;
An account you must give for the way you live,
But not for others' sins.

Take up thy cross and follow on!
Oh, meek and lowly be!
Thy sufferings here cannot compare
To mine in Gethsemane.

Go read, dear child, of the thorny crown,
Of the nail-pierced hands and side;
The precious blood spilt for others' guilt,
Thy Savior crucified.

'Twas borne for thee, yes all for thee
This suffering and shame.
Canst not thou, child, endure for awhile
In thy loving Master's name?

If any soul should be reviled, or persecuted here below,
When the life has been given to thy
Father in heaven,
It is because he loves them so.

Stand thou upon my promises and trust me all the way,
Lay not thine armor down;

"Let no man take thy crown,"
Look up unto perfect day.

The vision past, the dream was o'er;
Suhdued my heart, my spirit free;
In the twilight dim, I whispered to him
"Tis sweet to suffer for thee."

—Mrs. Fount Callaway.

THE CALL TO THE MINISTRY.

By Rev. W. S. Harrison.

What constitutes a call to the ministry? A firm, persistent impression that this is duty, is probably what most men who go into this sacred work regard as a call from God. This impression differs greatly in different men. Many have felt like St. Paul: "Necessity is laid upon me: yea, woe is me if I preach not the gospel." Others have regarded opportunity, coupled with a strong desire to do good, as sufficient indication of a divine call.

In many cases doubtless the call begins with the parents. Yea, the divine purpose may be active even with earlier ancestry. God, who foresees the emergencies, prepares the man largely through heredity and environment for the work which the passing years are getting ready for his coming. Thus the man comes to his life-work as one who comes to his own. In rare instances this preparation may be the product of ages. Long before the man is born movements are shaping the opportunities of his life.

How opportunity of the greatest magnitude was prepared through the ages is seen in "the fulness of time," which marked the Savior's advent into the world. Men, nations, and even races, unconsciously labored long and arduously to prepare the time for his coming. Ages were consumed in the production of an empire suitable for the spread of the gospel; ages also were necessary to prepare a language to be the suitable medium for the proclamation of the final, universal religion. Probably no less time and effort were essential for the development of a woman fit to be the mother of Christ.

The same strain of piety which produced the woman furnished also the material out of which came the apostles and their compeers. The time and the country which produced such characters as Simeon and Anna, Mary, Elizabeth, and Zacharias could well be depended on to furnish the men capable through God of turning the world upside down.

Beneath the widespread hypocrisy of a state religion, there existed at that time in rural Palestine the cleanest and purest type of piety the world had ever known. Here was the hidden spring from which flowed the world-wide stream of cleansing power.

Thus, movements starting in localities far apart, seemingly to run in courses far asunder, as if on invisible railways, came to the great conjunctural period exactly at the same time, and the greatest event of history occurred. So likewise in minor details, Divine Providence brings emergencies and men together for the furtherance of the same great cause.

A divine call to the ministry implies much in the way of special preparation. Mental equipment is a great essential. A call to preach is often a call to get ready to preach. It is presumption of a rank order for a man in this age of culture to go into this great work without reasonable mental equipment. The preacher's mental endowments should at least be equal to the average culture of his hearers.

But more important is spiritual culture. He who would interpret God to the world should have a deep, experimental knowledge of divine things—above all things, a knowledge of his own acceptance by the great Father. He must bear with him a license more sacred than the one he received from the Church court. "No man taketh this honor to himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron."

Next to the divine call, the great essential is the Christly spirit. The absence of this spirit in the minister is lamentable. It marks the man a failure and is painful to the Church. Such a spirit is maintained only by the nurture of true piety, and the presence of an ever-living faith. Without this Christly spirit no man, however learned, is able to interpret Christ to men.

A man so endowed has a deep, a genuine, a never-failing love for mankind. To such a spirit sin is hateful because it brings misery and ruin to men. Such a man must deeply sympathize with human suffering; but these things are tolerated—yea, joyfully accepted because they bring ultimately a larger joy to human souls. All things take their bearing and receive their coloring from the view-point of undying love. A passion for saving souls is the chief characteristic of the true minister of Christ.

Starkville, Miss.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

Chapter IX.

Ransom J. Jones, father of W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Seashore District, was my presiding elder in 1859. A better, more thoughtful and helpful presiding elder I never had. In 1863-4-5 I was his presiding elder. He had located, and was living in Jasper County, Miss. He was re-admitted in 1870, and died March 26, 1872. When I presented his name for re-admission, the Bishop said, "Represent him." Dr. W. H. Watkins said, "He doesn't need any representation." Two of his noble sons, viz. Rev. K. A. Jones, of the North Mississippi Conference, and Rev. R. J. Jones, Jr., of the Mississippi Conference, after spending lives of great usefulness in the Church, went home to rest. His youngest son is doing a good work in our Conference. Thus many preachers come out of homes consecrated to God and his service.

As stated in a former letter, Conference met in Jackson in 1859. B. M. Drake, D.D., was elected president; H. J. Harris, secretary. There were ten admitted on trial; all have passed away. I passed in examination of character, also stood an approval examination on the course of study; was elected to deacon's orders and advanced to the class of the third year.

In 1860 I served the Franklinton Circuit, which took in about all of Washington Parish, La., and nearly all of Marion County west of Pearl river. Waterholes Church, near where I was born and partly reared, was one of my churches. I served the same charge again in the years 1871-2. Rev. Stern A. Ellis, a prominent local preacher who lived at Franklinton, La., was helpful to me. Three of Brother Ellis' daughters married Methodist preachers; one of them, Sister David M. Wiggins, is still living. Brother Wiggins was a most useful man while he lived. He died in 1862.

Franklinton Circuit was in the Brookhaven District that year; Rev. Thomas Price was my presiding elder. There were many good, strong men on my work. Among the number was Robert Babington, late of Franklinton, La. He was a pure, consecrated man of God, who loved and served faithfully the Church. He also married a daughter of Rev. S. A. Ellis. Their sons are fine business men in Franklinton and elsewhere.

Uncle James Warner deserves a passing notice. It was late in life when he was converted. The work was genuine. He was full of zeal in the good cause and at the same time full of fun. He was usually up before day, off some distance from the house, on his knees wrestling with God in prayer. A neighbor of his started to town one morning. As he had twenty miles to go he was in too much of a hurry to take time to pray. When passing near where Brother Warner lived, he saw something white near the road, at the root of a dogwood tree. He thought it was a possum. He heard a voice like that of someone talking to another. It was too dark for him to tell who it was at first. He soon discovered it was Uncle Jimmy Warner wrestling with God in prayer, while the other members of the family were wrapt in slumber. The man rode on leisurely, thinking of his own neglect of duty. He reined his horse to one side, dismounted, fell on his knees, and confessing his neglect of duty, begged pardon. "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord." I learned to love him like a father. In 1869 or 70 I preached his funeral at Pleasant Valley on Pearl River.

Rev. Colter Warner was a useful man. He lived ten miles north of Franklinton. We held some fine revival meetings on the work. My good wife was helpful to me in many ways.

Conference met in Natchez that year; Bishop Early presided. There was much talk about the "trouble" between the "States." Twelve were admitted on trial. Ira B. Roberson, Edwin H. Moulter, traveling, and Dr. C. W. Campbell, local, are yet living. Four of the prominent men of our Conference died during the year, viz.: B. M. Drake, D.D., L. Campbell, Geo. C. Light and Thomas C. Thompson, D.D. I passed in examination of character, also on course of study, and was advanced to the class of the fourth year. At the close of the Conference my name was called in connection with Cayuga Colored Mission. But no such mission existed. I was expected to organize one. Vernon H. Jackson, of precious memory, was on Cayuga Circuit.

Early in January the State "seceded" from the Union. Excitement ran high. War talk was heard everywhere. Slaveholders were afraid to have their negroes preached to. One good man, a Brother Reeves, who lived near Raymond in Hinds County, wanted me to remain on the work and preach to his negroes. But after consulting with my presiding elder and prominent men on the work, it was thought best not to attempt to organize, so I returned to my father's home near Holmesville, Miss., and spent the year on the farm.

In 1861, Conference met in Canton; Bishop Price presided. Of the eight admitted that year, W. L. C. Hunicutt is the only one living. Four of our brethren passed away during the year. G. H. Clinton was sent to Warren Circuit and I to Warren Mission.

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH

LEON IRWIN & CO.

FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 585.

(colored). This—the year '62—was an eventful year with me in many respects. I had often preached to colored people, but now for the first time I was in charge of several congregations of colored people. I soon learned that they had been in good hands. Many of them knew more about "Caper's Catechism" than I did. My, my! how they could sing! I got on well with both masters and slaves.

In June I took fever and came near dying. Dr. Magruder, of Vicksburg, and Dr. W. T. Bell were my physicians. They advised me to get away, which I did, with wife and two children, as quickly as I could. We made our way to Crystal Springs. Night overtook us eight miles west of the Springs. I asked a man to let us stay all night with him. He refused. I then asked him how far it was to Crystal Springs. He replied, "Don't know. I never measured it." We were sick, worn out, hence we struck camp. Spent a wretched night. Our 2-month-old babe caught cold, from which he never fully recovered, yet lived till 1868. He was named for his uncle, William Bryant.

Conference met in Jackson in November, 1862. I was supposed to be at the point of death, in the home of Griffin Claughton in Franklin County. I was read out for Rankin Circuit, but was too feeble to go to my work. A Brother Curtis went as my "substitute." For two years I was not able to do much work in the way of preaching; hence, I taught school in 1863-64. It was in 1864 I paid one dollar a pound for pork, and $100 for a pair of cotton-cards. Times were hard, so we thought. As I was not able to attend Conference for several years, I was not ordained elder till November, 1864. By this time my health was restored, and at the close of Conference I was read out for Mt. Carmel Circuit, with B. B. Whittington for my presiding elder. In 1870, the year B. B. Whittington died, I was his presiding elder.

OUR NEW WORK AT THE CAPITAL.

By Bishop James Atkins.

One of the most enlightened and progressive steps taken by our last General Conference was the determination to build in the City of Washington a church adapted to our needs there and in harmony with our place in the life of the Nation.

It is eminently proper that the building of a truly great Church there should be a connectional movement. The field is in a high sense missionary. But it is a class of missionary work which stands apart from the ordinary in the quality of the population to be served, and the ecclesiastical ends to be advanced. We have already quite a number of congregations there, but no one of these is able alone to build and equip such a church as will fitly serve our purposes in so large and splendid a city as Washington.

But what I wish especially to do is to commend the course of the Board of Church Extension and the special agent, Brother Sexton, in the selection of a committee of great laymen for the management of this fine enterprise. I have studied the names and locations of those chosen for this purpose, and am free to say it would be difficult to improve the company. If I mistake not, there is not a man on the committee who is not capable of taking in the magnitude of the enterprise, and of becoming an enthusiastic promoter of it. Such a body of laymen, capable financially of liberal contributions, and thus of influencing thousands of other laymen to join with them in the great work, will within a short time be able to achieve the purpose to which the Church has appointed them. They will find when they have fully launched their work that there are many among us of ample means who only wait such leadership as they are to furnish it.

While good leadership, such as is assured in this case, is of great importance, it is not enough. There must also be a great following. This is the point at which the Church, in general, will be tested as to the extent of its sympathy with this great work. There ought to be a universal response—that is, every pastoral charge in the connection ought to take pleasure in making a suitable contribution. But when the best has been done in this way, the results will not be very large, because of a failure of the pastors to properly present the cause. I "judge the future by the past of men." It will be necessary, therefore, for people of means to give in large sums. The enterprise is one which from its very nature most powerfully appeals to men of broad intelligence and foresight—men who are able to comprehend both the local and general effect of such a church in such a place.

Thoughtful men, when considering this movement, can not fail to see certain points, such as these: That Washington is one of the greatest of the world centers; that it is our National Capital; that it lies within Southern territory; that our Church is one of the leading religious forces in the nation; that it has original rights in that territory which can not be disputed; that many thousands of our people go to Washington to live, and that our territory furnishes a continuous stream of visitors thither at all seasons of the year; that we are there in constant contact with not only the representative citizens of all the States, but with those of all the nations; that as a Church, we are easily able to build, not one great church only, but many, if we should so desire; that a failure to build this one great edifice, which we have undertaken, may be ascribed to nothing other than an ignoble indifference on the part of our Church to so great an opportunity and obligation.

As I am writing to people outside of Washington, I desire to say that I have had the pleasure oftentimes of worshipping with our people at Mount Vernon Place, and at other points in the city, and I have never seen a nobler, truer or more lovable company than compose our membership there. They have striven nobly, oftentimes against great odds, but by generosity reaching often to self-sacrifice they have triumphed. They are worthy of our help to the utmost in this great new movement. The Mount Vernon Place congregation alone proposes to put seventy-five thousand dollars into the new plant.

A secondary effect of building such a church, as is proposed, would be to stimulate and encourage every other congregation of our people in the city. It will impart tone to our work there, which is a matter of great importance in a society like that which characterizes Washington City.

Waynesville, N. C.

THE AUTHORITIES DEMOLISHED.

Dear Brother Meek: Please allow me to extend to you the right hand of fellowship in regard to your article under the head of "Drifting from the Landmarks." You have spoken the truth in a masterly way. If I know myself, I am a Methodist in toto. I have gone through the whole realm of theology as prescribed by our College of Bishops; many of these books I suppose I have read a dozen times. I have never found a single work that I believed to be out of harmony with God's Word. I believe that Wesley, Watson, Fletcher, Pope and Clarke were as deep thinkers as the world has ever produced. But it is not uncommon to-day to hear young preachers of very limited ability speak of them reproachfully. I had the privilege not long since of hearing a preacher of good standing in my own Conference preach a sermon in which he proposed to overthrow the "second-blessing" idea, a theory in which I have never held the least belief. When this preacher arose in the pulpit I was reminded of what the lamented Bill Arp said about fighting the Yankees: "Lie down, militia! I am going to burst me cap." He first set aside all the Methodist standards; assailed Wesley; ridiculed Watson; he condemned Fletcher; reproved Pope and Clarke; attacked Methodist theology from root to branch.

After he had finished his sermon we walked away from the church together. He said to me: "Brother Williams, I reckon you think it mighty brave in me to slap all the Methodist theologians in the face, but I am one preacher that is not afraid to do it. Wesley, Watson, Fletcher, Pope and Clarke might have been great men in their day, but we are living in a day when people have too much sense to believe in their doctrines." I said, "No, it does not take a brave man to slap dead men in the face; anybody can do that. But suppose Wesley and his co-laborers had been sitting in that church to-day with the privilege of a five minutes' rejoinder; you would have looked like a snowball before an August sun; you would have felt like a mustard seed in an elephant's snout." A gentleman said: "How did you like that sermon?" I said: "Do you want me to tell you the truth? I had as soon have heard a donkey bray. I think the general impression made upon that audience was that." He stood very greatly in need of a first "blessing."

Why will a man jump from one extreme to another? What does a man hope to gain trying to kill error by setting up a greater error? If a preacher cannot meet the issue squarely he had better let it alone. Charles Spurgeon shows a picture where five mules, two plows and two men were all stopped for a considerable time in order to kill a mouse.

I hope Brother Meek will write more along this line, for it is sadly needed. W. R. WILLIAMS. Cockrum, Miss.

REV. W. B. LEWIS—AN APPRECIATION.

It has been said that to know one you must have lived with him, and while after the strictest construction of this adage it has not been mine to have known our honored and lamented brother, yet, if "from their fruits ye shall know them" be the touchstone, the writer may claim to have some acquaintance with Rev. W. B. Lewis.

In the arrangement of appointments it has been my good fortune to follow in his footsteps the fourth time, and at every place heard nothing but words of praise and commendation. A brother of another communion, who had been associated with him for three years, when I told him of the kind expressions concerning his ministry at Moss Point, replied: "No one could speak aught but good of that man." The Sabbath following his death the three congregations at Moss Point joined in a memorial service in his honor, and such were the testimonies concerning his gentle, unselfish, lovable character that it gave double emphasis to the wise man's proverb: "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold." If to be true and faithful, humble and God-fearing, constitutes greatness of the highest type, then may we say that a prince and a great man has fallen in our Israel.

As an organizer, he had but few equals among us. When my name was read one at our last Conference session for Moss Point I said: "Well, I'll find three things: a well-organized church, a congregation without divisions, and the aroma of a good name."

He was a safe man and wise pastor, a healer of breaches and a mollifier of wounds. Such was his wisdom and discretion in dealing with delicate questions that he was sought for those places where friction had appeared among the brethren. Usually a pastorate of four years and a harmonious church crowned his labors.

He has frequently been referred to as the St. John of the Mississippi Conference. In that he lived close to the Master this is befitting, for he was a man of much prayer and the strongest faith, keeping that first commandment: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself." There were two instances in the life of this "disciple of love" which I doubt ever found echo in the heart of W. B. Lewis. On one occasion it is recorded that John would have called down fire from heaven to consume the opposers of our Lord; W. B. Lewis would have used the more effectual method of persuasion. At another, John would have chosen for himself the chiefest seat to the exclusion of others; W. B. Lewis, more like Barnabas, "the son of consolation," would have granted to others the coveted honors, and would have been content in the humbler places to do the greater work.

But it was as an expounder of the gospel—a preacher of the Word—that he excelled. More truly of him than most preachers, it has been said that he always gave the "cream of any text that he touched." One who sat under his ministry for four years has made this comment: "He never startled you with flights of eloquence, but never made a failure." Wise as a counselor, wise as a pastor, and wise as an expounder of the plan of salvation, we honor him.

After such acquaintance as is suggested in the beginning, extending over more than twenty years, the writer doubts not that his crowning as well as his last work was done at Moss Point, where his name is as ointment poured forth. T. B. HOLLOMAN. Moss Point, April 12, 1910.

DEATH OF A GOOD WOMAN.

Mrs. Molly Kelly Johnston, widow of the late Rev. Pinckney A. Johnston, of the Mississippi Conference, passed to her heavenly home on Sunday morning, the 10th, at 10:30 o'clock, from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thos. G. Bennett, of this place. She was in her 79th year.

The funeral services were held at East End Church by the pastor, assisted by Rev. Wm. H. LaPrade, D.D., pastor of Central Church.

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Her end was peace. G. S. HARMON.

LET ME SHOP FOR YOU.

No matter what you want—millinery, gloves, parasols, furs, handkerchiefs, dress materials and trimmings, street dresses, wedding trousseaus, reception or evening gowns—inexpensive, or handsome and costly—send for my samples and estimates before placing your order, which will be sent you free. With my years of experience, my knowledge of styles—being in touch with the leading fashion centers—my conscientious handling of each and every order, whether large or small—I know I can please you.

MRS. HARTWELL HARRIS COOK,
1016 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

Phone Main.

ROOMS and BOARD

634 and 638 SOUTH STREET

(Lafayette Square)

Corner St. Charles St.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Unlimited Meals.

Alvin Porter, Mgr.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that

—Lasts a LIFETIME—

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST,

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

Secular News and Comment

The irrigable area of the arid lands of the United States is estimated by government experts at 45,000,000 acres, or more than four times the amount now irrigated. Herein lies a great field for industrial development.

Mr. Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) returned to New York from Bermuda on the 14th inst. quite ill with heart trouble. He was confined to his berth during the entire trip, and physicians met the steamer and took him in charge. Later, he was carried to his home in Redding, Conn.

It has been given out at Ottawa, Ontario, that for the year ending with March 31, one hundred thousand people from the United States have settled in Canada, bringing in $100,000,000 in money and property. The immigration from Europe is said to have shown a very slight increase within the past twelve months.

The Shriners' National Convention which was held in this city last week was largely attended, the report being that 31,000 members of the order actually registered. They were here from all parts of the United States, some even coming from the Hawaiian Islands. The parades were spectacular in the extreme and excited much attention. The Roman Catholic clergy are said to have exhibited considerable hostility to the order, going even to the extent of forbidding their members to decorate their stores or houses in honor of the occasion, or to witness any of the exercises.

The State Medical Association of Mississippi met in the University Chapel at Oxford on the 12th inst., with a good attendance. One of the most interesting papers presented was by Dr. H. L. Sutherland, of Rosedale, in which he argued effectively against the popular notion that the Mississippi Delta is more unhealthy than other sections. This able discussion appeared in the Commercial Appeal of April 17th. Dr. Sutherland is a man of high character, and as a physician he ranks with the best. He is perhaps doing more to promote the cause of hygiene in Mississippi than any other citizen.

The Fairbanks Mount McKinley expedition has succeeded in scaling the summit of the mountain, but not a trace did they find of a prior ascent by Dr. Cook. On the contrary, the route which he said he traveled was ascertained to be absolutely impassible. Thus additional evidence is furnished that Peary's rival is a complete fraud. Of even men who claim to be explorers, it is true that their "sins will find them out." The Alaskan party discovered a magnificent unnamed peak, 16,000 feet high, and also a new pass through the mountain range, which shortens the distance to the coast seventy-five miles. The pass is flanked by majestic, perpendicular walls.

The Twentieth Annual Reunion of the Confederate Veterans will be held in Mobile, Ala., April 26-28. Extensive preparation is being made for the entertainment of the heroes who wore the gray, and the occasion promises to be one of much interest. The historic city of Mobile is considered an ideal place for the meeting. It was the scene of many stirring events connected with the Civil War and held out against the Union forces until April, 1865. Here also sleep some of the great figures of the memorable struggle, among them Admiral Semmes, General Bragg, and Father Ryan, the poet laureate of the Lost Cause.

The Louisiana Teachers' Association assembled in its Nineteenth Annual Convention at Baton Rouge on April 14th, with Mr. Victor L. Roy, the president, in the chair. The opening invocation was by Rev. J. M. Henry, of the First Methodist Church of that city. The address of the chairman was highly instructive, and showed the educational affairs of the State to be in a flourishing condition. He reported that within the past six years the amount spent upon each pupil by the State has increased from $8.31 to $15.19; that the enrollment of pupils during the same period shows a gain of 22.4, and that the number of white first-grade teachers has advanced from 1,846 to 3,249. He advocated a conditional compulsory education law and a larger appropriation for the public schools.

Hon. A. H. Whitefield, of Jackson, has resigned from the supreme bench of Mississippi to accept one of the commissionerships to that court, a newly-constituted office; and Hon. W. D. Anderson, of Tupelo, has been appointed supreme judge in his stead, though he does not become chief justice as some of the papers have announced. Under the law of the State that distinction goes to the member who has been longest upon the bench, and in this instance it is Judge Robert B. Mayes. We have known Mr. Anderson for a number of years, and hold him in the highest esteem. He is a man of judicial poise, of brilliant legal attainments, and of integrity and exalted character. That he will wear the supreme worthily, we do not in the least doubt. We confidently predict for him a distinguished career upon the bench. Governor Noel could not have made a better appointment.

The Supreme Court of Tennessee on the 13th inst. handed down an opinion in the famous Cooper case, affirming the decision of the lower court as to Col. Duncan B. Cooper, but reversing it as to Robin Cooper. It will be remembered that these men were tried for killing ex-Senator Carnack, more than a year ago, and after a hotly contested legal battle were adjudged guilty of manslaughter by the jury and sentenced by Judge Hart to the penitentiary for twenty years. Scarcely was the decision of the higher court announced before Governor Patterson issued a pardon for Col. Cooper, his personal and political friend. The precipitate haste with which this was done, coupled with the fact that the Governor himself was somewhat mixed up in the altercation which led to Mr. Carnack's death, has created a feeling of indignation among many of the best people of the Volunteer State. Robin Cooper will probably be tried again, his bond has been reduced from $25,000 to $10,000. But the saddest feature of the whole affair is that it looks as if Mr. Patterson will be re-elected governor without much difficulty. The saloon forces, which appear to have the situation well in hand, are reported to be lined up solidly behind him.

FROM THE GREENVILLE DISTRICT.

The Church in the upper Delta country is strengthening its hold, and widening the sphere of its influence. We have now nineteen pastoral charges, and another in progress of formation. A short while since request was made for a pastor in a rapidly-growing community, and immediately a pastor was sent to the field. Arrangements were made for regular services, and in a short time we will have a prosperous church in this, the Sabino community. There are three other points that are being newly occupied and held for our church. Our pastors are all watchful for any new place that may give an opening for our gospel. We intend to take and hold this country for Methodism and her Lord.

In many of the churches there is a perceptible deepening of religious interest and activity. Old properties are being improved, or replaced with new structures. Three new churches, Dubbs, Bel'n and Kuhn, will be dedicated next month. The churches at Friars Point, Jonestown, Austin and Dundee, have either been extensively repaired or newly furnished. Many of the parsonages show substantial evidence of the people's care of the pastors. At New Salem land has been bought and plans laid for a new church. There are only two churches in the District, Greenville and Boyle, that carry a debt. In both instances the debt is for the new edifices, and each has made good payments this year. There is need for new churches at other places and plans are afoot for their erection. The current expenses for the maintenance of the pastorates are being cared for in a most pleasing way. Many are fully up with the support of the pastor, while none are embarrassingly behind. Greenville, Clarksdale, Friars Point and Shelby have relieved their pastors of raising the connectional claims. A few other individual churches have done the same. Lula and Lyon has paid Foreign and Domestic Missions and Church Extension in full. Shaw, Clarksdale, Greenville and Cleveland have paid both mission assessments in full. Arcola and Hollandale has paid the Home Mission assessment in full and the Foreign in part. Jonestown and Leland have paid the Domestic Missions in full. Others of the pastors are at work on these claims and promise to have them in full in a short time. The people are responding nobly to all the calls of the pastors. Thus the finances of the District are in good condition.

In only one pastorate, Clarksdale, has a special revival meeting been held. That cold snow in February fell during the progress of the meeting and hindered the work. The pastor was cheered by the conversion of eight people. These he received into the church at the close of the meeting. Other evidences of the good of the meeting are found in the increased attendance on Sunday school and all the services of the church. Two other churches, Greenville and Tunica, have had accessions on profession of faith, the results of personal work or of the pulpit ministry of their pastors. The monthly statements of the pastors show that they have been fairly diligent in visiting the homes of our people. Three charges in the District have no prayer meeting. The Sunday school work is most encouraging. There are now forty-one schools in the district. We have eight or nine Epworth Leagues. The W. H. M. Society is well organized in the district, there being nineteen. The W. F. M. Society has nine organizations, but the district secretary has been quite active in visiting the churches, and probably has organized new societies since these figures were gathered.

One of the hopeful signs of the Church in the Delta is the awakening among the laymen. In many

ROAST COFFEE IN A FRYING PAN

If you want to disinfect or deodorize your premises; but if it's coffee for your table that you want—perfectly blended, exquisitely flavored, and scientifically roasted so that every grain is even and perfect, then do as your neighbor is doing; avoid worry, waste and labor and buy

LUZIANNE COFFEE

When you roast at home you have only a limited choice of green coffee kept by your dealers. We have millions of pounds to select from for you. Where your kitchen facilities permit you only to toast, parch or scorch the grains, our gigantic, scientific, modern battery of roasters, going all the time, roast evenly and uniformly so that the full strength of every particle is thoroughly developed. Then it goes, hot and crisp, into air-tight cans and reaches you fresh and satisfying wherever you may be—the best article of the kind that money can buy.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

THE REILY-TAYLOR CO.
New Orleans, U. S. A.

Our charges there is a marked increase of interest on the part of the men. They are entering heartily into all the activities of the church. Our laymen are reading our church papers, or perhaps, I should say, our Conference organ. I am sure that one of every three of the families of our churches take the New Orleans Advocate. About two hundred and fifty new subscribers have gone in within the last three months. Our laymen are reading it, and that, and the spirit of the times, are bringing them into their proper place in the Church of God.

Our District Conference will be held at Tunica, June 15-17, when I fully expect a larger representation of laymen than has ever assembled at a District Conference in this district. Mr. Editor, you are a member of this Conference, you know. We will expect you to make your report in person. Our people here are very proud of "our editor." They look forward to your coming to the District Conference with great pleasure. Great success to the Advocate. You are giving us a good paper.

W. W. WOOLLARD.

PRAYER FOR KOREA.

Through the evident guidance of the Holy Spirit the General Council of Evangelical Missions in Korea was led to decide to pray and work for a million souls in Korea this year. Therefore, because the present is without doubt God's opportunity for making Korea a Christian nation, and because Korea is the strategic point of the Far East, and to win Korea now means to help immeasurably in the evangelization of the East, we ask Christian people in all lands to pray for the million movement in the one-time "Hermit Land." Pray that through the gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the missionaries, the Christian Koreans, and those who are still in the darkness of heathenism, the million may be more than realized.

It is especially requested that in the Church services, and at Sunday schools Christians be urged to pray, daily, individually and in groups, that the full harvest may be gathered in by the 9th of October, 1910.

It is said that the prayers of one woman in Texas started the great revival which has been sweeping over South China. Will not Christian people everywhere unite in crying earnestly to God for the million souls in Korea?

The following are some suggestions for prayer:

1. Form little prayer circles, or groups, among your friends, and each day both with others and alone plead with God for a million converts in Korea by October 9, 1910.

2. Pray that the Korean Christians, Church officers and leaders, and the missionaries may be so filled with the Holy Spirit that they may have power to win the heathen to Christ.

3. Pray that the hearts of the heathen may be prepared by the Holy Spirit to receive the truth and be saved.

4. Pray that God's Spirit may be poured out upon the land so mightily that the entire nation may speedily turn to God, and thus the prophecy be fulfilled of a nation "born in a day."

Committee: Dr. James S. Cale, chairman; Mr. Hugh Miller, secretary; Dr. H. G. Underwood, Rev. D. A. Bunker.

Church News

Coker College, a Baptist institution in South Carolina, has lately received a gift of a $26,000 building and $150,000 to its endowment fund from Major J. L. Coker, a capitalist of that State. We are pleased to see such a donation made in the South, especially to a denominational institution. It is our settled conviction that the hope of the nation lies largely in its Christian schools.

The Triennial General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church will convene this year in Cincinnati, where it is thought that the question of opening their pulpits to the preachers of other denominations will be one of the things to be considered. In Massachusetts delegates opposed to such action are being put forward and vigorously supported. It is hardly probable that a policy so liberal will be adopted.

In a recent issue of the Nashville Tennessean, Dr. W. W. Pinson, one of our missionary secretaries, makes a vigorous and crushing reply to Tom Watson's diatribe against foreign missions. We hope that we shall be able to find space for its reproduction in our columns soon. It ought to be extensively circulated throughout the South. The Church has no more wide-awake and faithful servant than Dr. Pinson.

Through the kindness of the author, Dr. T. N. Ivey, we have received a copy of the Methodist Handbook, beautifully bound in red leather. This annual has now become the standard authority in many matters pertaining to Southern Methodism. No up-to-date preacher can afford to be without it. It should also have a wide circulation among the laity. This last volume is decidedly the best yet issued. The price (paper) is 25 cents. Orders may be sent to Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., or Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.

St. Paul's Cathedral, London, is to have a new heating apparatus. Heretofore, it has been heated by eight old-fashioned stoves in the crypt below the floor, with a brass grating over them. Now, hot water pipes are being brought into the cathedral from a generating station outside in the churchyard. The improvement will cost $100,000. This new method of heating, it is thought, will avoid the continuous draughts as well as the danger of fire. Here is another American innovation—Reformed Church Messenger.

The trustees of Whitworth College, held a meeting in Brookhaven on Tuesday, the 12th inst., with Mr. T. B. Lampton, of Magnolia, in the chair. Plans were entertained to construct a central building and make many other needed improvements at a cost of $40,000 or more. This institution has for several years been enjoying great prosperity, and the session soon to close has been a gratifying one in every respect. The Alumni Association is arranging a program for the celebration of its golden anniversary next month.

A Bible in the guest rooms of every hotel in the State of Georgia is a possibility of the future, if the plans of certain traveling men of the State are carried out. At present a Bible is something all but unheard of at the average hotel, and the only reading matter furnished the guests in their rooms is a neatly-bound set of rules and a copy of the Georgia Hotel Law, which informs the guest of his liability of arrest if he leaves without paying his hotel bill. At a meeting of the Missionary Institute at Trinity Church, Mr. Safford and Mr. McCalla, two well-known traveling men, broached the plan and asked the members to take the matter up with their pastors. The plan is to get up a fund for the distribution of Bibles.—Atlanta News.

Bishop Wilson, the grand old man of Southern Methodism, was in good form at the recent session of the Baltimore Conference. His sermon on Sunday at 11 o'clock was characteristic—strong, majestic, overpowering. He preached from Matthew 23:23. His address to the class admitted into full communion was a ringing deliverance. Among other things, he said to the young men before him: "The higher critics are criticising Christ away from the minds of the people. Hold on to the faith taught us by our fathers. The schools can't give you all you need. Don't bring out your text-books and quote great men; preach Christ. Put aside everything else; go often to your closets and commune with God; let nothing sidetrack you; by and by you will get good reward."

We acknowledge the reception of a beautifully printed invitation to the anniversary exercises of the Galloway Literary Society of Millsaps College, which will be held April 22. Mr. Charles R. Rew, of Forest, Miss., whose subject is "The Spirit of Ulysses," is the orator of the occasion, and Mr. Robert H. Ruff of Chester, Miss., who will speak on "The Power of the Individual," is the anniversary. The annual address will be delivered by the Hon. Chas. S. Engle, of Natchez, who is a member of the State Legislature and a speaker of note and eloquence. The young men of Millsaps College have made quite a reputation in oratorical contests in Mississippi, having won more prizes than any other institution in the State. Of these the Galloway Society has had its full share.

The following memorial to the General Conference was adopted at the recent session of the Baltimore Conference:

Resolved, That the Baltimore Conference memorialize the next General Conference of the Church to give careful consideration to the educational policy of the Church, and to set forth that policy with the highest possible clearness; to take such steps as may be needed to secure to our Church all the educational institutions built up by the wisdom, toil and gifts of the Church, or that, because of confidence in the Church, have been by others entrusted to our Church; to secure to the Church beyond all the ownership and control through boards of trustees of the educational institutions, so far as the laws of the States will allow the Church to own and control educational institutions; and to enjoin increased diligence in the work of education under such conditions as may enable the Church most efficiently to meet her obligations to her Lord in developing the character, training the mind and imparting the truth to all students who enter our schools, colleges and universities.

Second—For the protection of our people and to assure those who respond to the appeals of the Church for gifts to the cause of Christian education that their gifts will be controlled and used by the Church, it shall be enacted by the General Conference that none of our Conferences shall levy an assessment or make an appropriation, or make an appeal for the benefit of any educational institution not owned and controlled by the Church so far as the laws of the States will allow the Church to own and control educational institutions.

MRS. MARY ANN GEDDIE.

Dear Brother Meek: Yesterday we buried Mrs. Mary Ann Geddies, mother of Rev. D. M. Geddies of the North Mississippi Conference. She was in her 81st year. Her father was a local Methodist preacher and three of her brothers were preachers. She lived a life of simple faith in Christ, and her end was peace.

Winona, Miss., April 15, 1910.

THE EASTER RABBIT.

For many years the writer has been interested in the myth or superstition of the Easter rabbit. The general idea of Easter was easy to comprehend—the egg, in the grain of wheat and even in the spring costume of the young man or woman, but how and when the rabbit got into the celebration has been the question all these years. So much so that I have made numerous requests to find, if possible, its origin.

In the Christian Endeavor World of March 24, one L. A. Denton, of Grand Rapids, Mich., gives this explanation, which I submit to the readers of the Advocate, with the hope that any other solution, even if by Pyle, Remus, shall be given. The matter is thus explained:

The hare is the ancient symbol of the moon, and the festival of Easter is governed by the moon, as it occurs on the first Sunday after the first full moon that follows the vernal equinox, March 21. The moon was called the opened-eyed watcher of the night; therefore the hare was chosen as its symbol, because it is born with its eyes open, unlike the rabbit. As the hare was the symbol of the moon, it was an easy transition to make it the symbol of the moon-governed festival, Easter.

Rather far-fetched, you will say, but then it is as reasonable as most superstitions.

Granting that this is a superstition of the grossest kind, as long as the custom of observing Easter obtains in every station from the lawn on the White House grounds in our national capital to the most humble home on the frontier, and inasmuch as we are often called upon to explain its significance, this writer deems it worthy of explanation. If Mark Twain, or Pyle, Remus, or Mrs. Eddie, or our returned traveler and huntsman from the jungles of Africa, or any other, has suggested the whence and the why of the rabbit in the Easter celebration, I have no doubt many of your young readers would appreciate information as to the same. SENEX.

A CARD FROM DR. WEBER.

Dear Brother Meek: After spending six weeks in a north Georgia parsonage, I have come to Charleston, S. C., to visit my brother-in-law, with whom my father, a supernumerary member of the South Carolina Conference, resides.

I feel as strong and hearty as I have been since I moved to Louisiana nearly three years ago. From time to time I have had the privilege of occupying our pulpits with great pleasure to myself, whatever the congregations might say. I shall be glad to see my brethren in Asheville. With best wishes for the New Orleans Christian Advocate and its editor, I am fraternally yours,

W. L. WEBER,
No. 12 Franklin St.,
Charleston, S. C.

W. F. M. S.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society held its 31st annual meeting in Alexandria, La., April 1-5, with the president, Mrs. W. W. Carre, in the chair at all its sessions.

The opening session, by Rev. Paul M. Brown, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, was attentively heard by all, his subject being The Parable of the Prodigal Son, dwelling especially on the elder brother's attitude, an evidence of the selfishness of humanity without the missionary spirit taught by the Master. The annual sermon by Rev. S. H. Werlela, from St. John 17:18, was a message forceful and eloquent, and showed that deep spirituality was necessary for the Father's work.

Sunday afternoon Mrs. A. F. Watkins, of Mississippi, claimed the children for an hour's teaching of their duty toward The Great Commission. The hour of evening service was filled by Mrs. I. B. Cobb, assistant secretary of the Woman's Board, when she told of the women of the Orient. Mrs. Cobb, through her enthusiastic devotion to the cause of missions, thoroughly informed through travel and personal experience, was an inspiration throughout the meeting.

The presence of Miss Ada Parker, a missionary to Brazil, supported by the Conference Society, was also helpful, as she told of her work in that distant land, a note of gladness sounding through her message.

In her annual report the Conference Corresponding Secretary tells of the organization of ten new auxiliaries in the State, but through omissions, can report a total of but 49, with a membership of 1197; the conference pledge of $1500 was met, with a balance of $52. The ever-increasing demands of the work, with Mrs. Montgomery's earnest appeal, moved the Conference to increase the pledge to $2000. The attention of the Conference was called to the retirement fund, created for the benefit of worn-out missionaries by the payment of 5 cents per member annually.

A plea from the Industrial School at Sogchow for the patronage of fine needlework, embroideries, etc., was indorsed, thereby aiding this school to be self-supporting. The Conference Treasurer reported total receipts of the year, $4,115.97 including a balance from last year of $149.56; total expense, $2,926.87.

Tuesday afternoon the election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, Mrs. W. W. Carre; First Vice President, Mrs. L. S. Clarke; Second Vice President, Mrs. L. C. Foster; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. S. A. Montgomery; Recording Secretary, Mrs. A. A. Bartels; Treasurer, Mrs. J. J. Holmes; Superintendent of Press Work, Mrs. C. M. Phillips; Superintendent Young People, Mrs. C. B. Carter; District Secretaries—New Orleans District, Mrs. D. C. Worrell; Shreveport District, Mrs. W. L. Millsaps; Ruston District, Mrs. B. F. Dudley; Alexandria District, Mrs. E. G. Sewell; Monroe District, Mrs. S. S. Keener; Baton Rouge District, Mrs. B. E. Eskridge; Lafayette District, Mrs. A. P. Holt; Crowley was selected as the next place of meeting. The meeting closed Tuesday night with an able and earnest address by Mrs. A. F. Watkins, her subject being "The Unfinished Task."

MRS. A. A. BARTELS, Rec. Sec.

W. H. M. S.

LOUISIANA STATE MEETING.

All names of delegates to the State meeting to be held in New Orleans May 5 to 8 must be in the hands of the committee on entertainment by May 1.

MRS. L. S. CLARKE, Chairman.

5013 St. Charles Ave.

SUPPLIES FOR THE WORK READY.

To the Third Vice-Presidents of Auxiliaries, Mississippi Conference:

This notice is to inform each of you that I am prepared to furnish what you may require in your work, and will be glad to mail you what you need. Mite boxes, certificates, and necessary literature—all is ready for you, and I will be so glad to hear from every one interested.

MRS. W. H. HUNTLEY.

Third Vice-President, Mississippi Conference,
Gloster, Miss., April 12, 1910.

THADDEUS P. BELL, M. D.

EYE, EAR, NOSE and THROAT.

818 AUDUBON BUILDING

(Next to Maison Blanche.)

NEW ORLEANS

INQUIRIES PROMPTLY ANSWERED.

WOMEN AS LAYMEN.

By Rev. J. E. Harrison.

Section 3, chapter 11, of our Discipline authorizes the women of the Church to organize and control, with some restrictions, foreign missionary societies. Section 5 of the same chapter authorizes them to organize and control home mission societies.

These are privileges accorded to women only, and they are given to them because they are women. Laymen of our Church have part only in the General Board and its auxiliaries.

The laymen are making a great move for the evangelization of the world, but they cannot organize and control a separate mission board, as the women are permitted to do.

If, therefore, the women demand the rights of laymen, are they not, by that act, inviting the General Conference to rescind their peculiar privileges—such as are not granted to laymen?

It seems to me that in granting the rights of laymen to women, the General Conference must cease to recognize their privileges as women.
San Antonio, Texas.

THE WOMAN QUESTION ONCE MORE.

By Rev. B. F. Jones.

The strong and lucid presentation of this question by my friend, Dr. Featherstun, in the Advocate of March 21 has set me a-thinking and lured me on to submit my meditations to the readers of the Advocate. While I approach the subject with a feeling of timidity, yet I come to it with the boldness of reassurance, believing as I do that the discussion of this momentous question will lead to the encouragement and inspiration of a sex whose usefulness is far-reaching and powerful, whose benevolent enterprises are important and manifold, and around whom lie many fields of usefulness already white unto the harvest.

Thoughtful Christians everywhere feel they have on hand a moral problem most difficult as to its solution and most important as to its results. Its solution taxes to the utmost the wisdom of the wise and the goodness of the good. It is not strange, therefore, that we should look with deepest concern and unabating interest at the unfolding of the problem and watch with intense solicitude its approaching solution. I am devoutly thankful that there is no longer any cause to set up a defense for woman's place in the Church. She is no longer an embarrassment to the machinery of the Church; but her moral powers and Christian influence are essential terms in all the enterprises of the Church. Perhaps no other department of work has been marked by such wonderful progress and more gratifying results within the past decade than that which has been under the direction and influence of the women of our Church. Hence, the Church apprehends no evil; but anticipates greater good and looks with cheering hope and pleasing expectancy to this band of workers who have brought with them at every stage so much spiritual light and power.

The importance of woman as a factor in the councils and work of the Church may be seen by that clear line of difference between the way in which men and women look at any question of common interest. Their thoughts are like the poles of the earth, separate and distinct, yet dependent upon each other. A man may consider a thing impossible, and readily submit himself to the claims of the impossible; while a woman may think the thing not only may be done, but ought and must be done. It does not necessarily follow that the elements in the conviction of woman are better than those in the conviction of man; but they are different, and out of that difference grows the opportunity of profounder consideration and bolder action. And because this radical and pervasive distinction between man and woman asserts itself, we need its presence everywhere in the work of the Church. Everyone who believes in the supplementary forces of the life of men and women believes also that it is not good for either to work alone in matters that concern both. Any work that touches the foundation of the home or the welfare of its inmates ought to come under the criticism of women. Since men and women are complementary each to the other in all the relations of life, it follows they must in all that relates to human welfare work and counsel together if they would attain to a fullness of life and spread the light of life throughout the world.

Doubtless every Bible reader has been impressed with the fact that woman as a factor in Christian work is a part of the divine plan to evangelize the world by human instrumentality. This is seen also in the prominence given to the agency of women in the early history of the Church. The Apostle Paul often alluded in honorable terms to the valuable service rendered him by women. He salutes at Philippi: "Those women who labored with me in the gospel." At Thessalonica, he mentions, "of the chief women, not a few." At Athens, Damaris; at Corinth, Chloe and Phoebe, "the servants of the Church." At Rome, Priscilla, one of his "helpers in Jesus Christ," who after listening to the eloquent Apollos of Alexandria preach, "took him and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly," and "many who bestowed much labor upon us."

The past history and present attainments of the Church show that if the Church continues its growth in the world, and if its purity is maintained, its Christianity nurtured and its final conquest gained, it will be to a considerable extent through the work, prayers, faith and counsel of woman.

The intelligence and consecration that characterize the women engaged in the work of the Church are conditions of progress that grow by progress; and if they will but hold the vantage ground and outposts already gained, many other gains will fall successively into their hands; for the rapid extension that is being given to the evangelical work of woman carries with it the assurance of the recognition of her worth and the inevitable elevation to her rights and privileges.

PRESIDENT CLIFTON'S PAPER—A REVIEW.

By B. J. Dodson.

You must be a man of uncommon forbearance, Mr. Editor, to suffer one to make such an assault as Mr. Clifton indulges on your own utterances in a publication, the columns of which you yourself control. Throughout his paper he furnishes ample evidence of the spirit which he deprecates in others, though, to be sure, it is a cold sort of passion which he displays. Is it some ancient grudge he would fatten that furnishes the inspiration for his pen? Why should he rush in to take up the gauge of battle over matters largely irrelevant which, not you, but others saw fit to bring forward?

Since you have not seen fit to notice this attack in the flank, delivered with the air and tone of authority, not "ex cathedra," but seemingly from the power behind the throne, will you indulge me in some words in review of it?

Mr. Clifton's paper, like all ancient Gaul, may be fairly divided into three parts: First, acriticism, offensive in tone, of the editor's utterances; second, a new commentary on the inspired writings; third, a defense of the "Woman's Rights Memorial."

I.

It seems to me that it would be well in the further discussion of the "Woman's Rights Memorial" to take our bearings and discover whence we have drifted on the waves of debate. Those who would now enter the debate should at least take the trouble to read your editorial in your issue of February 10, in which you open the discussion in a most courteous, fair and unexceptionable manner. The unmannerly assaults with which it has been received cannot be charged to your account. Others must bear the odium of lowering the plane of the discussion.

Mr. Clifton introduces most of his paragraphs with words quoted from the editor's reply to Brother Broyles, and then labors to show their lack of application to the subject under discussion, forgetting or ignoring the fact that the editor was fighting on the defensive, having been taken to task by Brother Broyles with his hermaphroditic Christ and else, and by others with similar irrelevances, the basis of the discussion being thus changed by his assailants. The editor showed himself to be both a good general and a confident one by accepting battle wherever offered.

II.

Mr. Clifton in the next place favors us with a new commentary on the Scriptures. An amazing display of his versatility! Tigert, Summers, Clarke and the lesser lights have all suffered an eclipse! He tells us what St. Paul meant and what the Master meant, but whence he learned it we are not given a hint. Perhaps it was imparted to him from within the veil. For my part, I prefer to believe that Alpheus W. Wilson, Warren A. Candler, E. Embree Hoss and men of that class who read the inspired words in the language in which they were spoken have caught a fairer vision of the apostolic and divine purpose. There is a fellowship of greatness which lends itself to correct interpretation.

Since Mr. Clifton has spun a yarn—he fairly dragged it in by the ears—the only possible effect of which is to discredit the physical courage and moral qualities of ministers of the gospel, their deeds of heroism on every field and exalted characters to the contrary notwithstanding, I, too, will a plain, unvarnished tale relate: I have heard it told that when Bishop Candler was a presiding elder, at a very early age, he preached upon one occasion at a remote country church from a text taken from one of St. Paul's Epistles. Commenting thereupon he delivered some very searching language bearing upon practices current in the community represented by his congregation. After the sermon dissent raised its angry voice, but finally one old steward, who had listened patiently to all that was said, remarked: "Wal, boys, I ain't got nothin' to say agin the elder, he's young yit, but the feller I got it in fer is that Brother Paul what writ that letter." The Bishop's interpretations continue to have weight with those who believe in the Book.

A shorter method than interpretation will be for Mr. Clifton to join the modern critics and cast out of the Holy Scriptures all that does not suit his view, cancel their authority, and then the women will be able to ride through the breach, either astride, or wearing divided skirts, or first upon the heel-tap, then upon the toe.

III.

Mr. Clifton's defense of the "Woman's Rights Memorial" is the least creditable part of his performance. Why does he evade the very words of the memorial itself? "The full rights and privileges of the laity" are what is demanded. This goes far beyond membership in any Conference. It is unnecessary to enumerate these rights: I dare to reaffirm what has been charged over and over again without authoritative denial, that when the women have gained the rights for which they now clamor, they will next demand the full rights and privileges of the ministry. All history supports the assumption. Then we will witness what the lamented and brilliant Lafferty so wittily described, a woman Bishop presiding in an Annual Conference, and in the midst of the proceedings a nurse appearing at the door with a squalling infant in her arms, and business waiting while the occupant of the chair retires to give to the hungry babe its needed nourishment.

But we may be disappointed as to this particular scene, for this does not appear to be a "mother's" movement, despite Mr. Clifton's claim to that effect. This program is their one ewe lamb.

At this point I wish to raise the inquiry: Who is defraying the expenses of the campaign which is being prosecuted by the Woman's Board of Home Missions in support of this memorial? The funds coming into the hands of that Board were certainly not contributed for any such purpose. If they are being so used, I, as one of the horrid men who helped to form them, desire to lodge my protest against their diversion from their true purpose. Perhaps Mr. Clifton can enlighten us, or Brother Broyles, or one of the other sisters.

I wish in this connection to humbly endorse the suggestion of one of your correspondents, who, though he signs himself "Methodist," speaks the truth, in the suggestion that a change of leadership is needed in the Home Mission Society. Let women of normal development lead for a while. Give us Mrs. J. W. Perry for president, who is a wife and presumably a mother.

Some of the sisters write as though they thought that the possession of the ballot by them would cure all our ills. And you are correct in your opinion that woman suffrage in Church and State are twins. Trace them and you will find that they are nourished at the same breast. Never was greater delusion than the claim made for the ballot. I recently conversed with a fine young Georgian, grandson of an honored Confederate soldier, now residing in Colorado where women have the ballot. I asked for his judgment concerning its value in her hands. His reply was: "Woman has not elevated politics in Colorado, but politics has lowered woman." I confronted him with Judge Lindsey's disclosures in Everybody's Magazine. "Oh!" said he, "conditions are not worse in Denver than they are in Memphis, New Orleans or any of our larger Southern cities."

Mr. Clifton closes with the Delphic deliverance that "willingness to do and ability to perform" should indeed be the only test made of a person asking work in our Lord's vineyard. The application of any such rule utterly and specifically ignores the fundamental difference between man and woman, recognized from the beginning as the controlling principle in every sphere of the world's activities. In the very dawn of creation the distinction is plainly recognized and definitely announced: "Male and female made he them."

So it has come on down to modern times and continues to be no less true than in the beginning. All men of observation and experience know that when woman enters man's sphere of activities it usually results in her destruction. Therefore, it is the veriest twaddle to talk of "willingness to do and ability to perform" being a proper standard for determining the fitness of woman for all undertakings. Only within the past few days the press dispatches announce that the great Baltimore and Ohio Railway system has issued orders that no more women will be employed in any of its departments, and that those now employed must not be succeeded by women when they surrender their positions. There is no sentiment about this—it is a plain re-discovery of what God knew in the beginning, namely, that women are different.

Mr. Editor, you have done a noble work for the Church in your able resistance to this memorial. It has afforded an opportunity for you to teach some wholesome truths. Your position is impregnable. You forever closed the discussion for Christians who believe in the teachings of the Bible in the last paragraph of your reply to Brother Broyles. The final sentence in that paragraph, to-wit, "Why did he (Christ) commit the government of his kingdom into the hands of men?" is unanswerable.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd.
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The Home Circle.

WHERE GAMES CAME FROM.

Many of the games played by the boys and girls of to-day are of very ancient origin.

Marbles, for instance, have been found among the ruins of Pompeii.

The more modern marbles, however, came from Holland, and were introduced into England about 1630. They were made of clay, stone and agate.

Handball goes back to the fall of Troy, and the little people of ancient Greece used to see who could hop the longest.

From Greece, also, came skipping the rope.—The Child's Hour.

TWO WAYS OF LOOKING.

Two boys went to gather grapes. One was happy because they found grapes. The other was unhappy because the grapes had seeds in them.

When it rains one man says, "This will make mud;" another, "This will lay the dust."

Two boys examined a hush. One observed that it had a thorn; the other, that it had a rose.

Two children were looking through colored glasses. One said, "The world is blue," and the other said, "It is bright."

Two boys had a bee; one got honey, the other got stung. The first boy called it honey bee; the other, a stinging bee.

"I am glad that I live," says one man. "I am sorry that I must die," says another.

"I am glad," said one, "that it is no worse." "I am sorry," said another, "that it is no better."

One says, "Our good is mixed with evil." Another says, "Our evil is mixed with good."—Selected.

"STRAIGHTENING OUT THE FURROWS."

"Boys," he said, "I've been trying every day of my life for the last two years to straighten out furrows—and I can't do it!"

One boy turned his head in surprise toward the captain's neatly kept place.

"Oh, I don't mean that kind, lad; I don't mean land furrows," continued the captain, so soberly that the boys became breathless as he went on:

"When I was a lad about the age of you boys, I was what they called a 'hard case,' not exactly bad or vicious, but wayward and wild. Well, my dear old mother used to coax, pray and punish—my father was dead, making it all the harder for her—but she never got impatient. How in the world she bore with all my stubborn, vexing ways so patiently will always be to me one of the mysteries of life. I knew it was troubling her, knew it was changing her pretty face, making it look anxious and old. After a while, tiring of all restraint, I ran away, went off to sea—and a rough time I had of it at first. Still, I liked the water, and I liked journeying around from place to place. Then I settled down to business in a foreign land, and soon became prosperous, and now began sending her something besides those empty letters. And such beautiful letters as she always wrote me during those years of absence. At length I noticed how longing they grew—longing for the presence of the son who used to try her so, and it woke a corresponding longing in my own heart to go back to the dear waiting soul.

"So, when I could stand it no longer, I came back, and such a welcome, and such a surprise! My mother is not a very old lady, boys, but the first thing I noticed was the whiteness of her hair and the deep furrows on her brow, and I knew I had helped to blanch that hair to its snowy whiteness and had drawn those lines in that smooth forehead. And those are the furrows I have been trying to straighten out.

"But last night, when mother was sleeping in her chair, I sat thinking it all over, and looked to see what progress I had made.

"Her face was very peaceful and the expression as contented as possible, but the furrows were still there! I hadn't succeeded in straightening them out—and I never shall never!

"When they lay my mother—my fair old sweet heart—in her basket, there will be furrows in her brow; and I think it a wholesome lesson to teach you, that the neglect you offer your parents' counsel now, and the trouble you cause them, will abide, my lads; it will abide."—Selected.

HOW KINDNESS WON.

Dick was a very little donkey to have such a will of his own. You wouldn't have thought, unless you knew donkeys, that this small brown animal with the bright eyes and long ears could be so stubborn. He stood there in the road and refused to go one step farther; neither would he turn his head toward home.

"Oh, dear! What a bad donkey!" exclaimed little Bertie in despair. "How shall we ever be able to make him move?"

Her brother Lloyd, with the confidence of eight years, ran to the side of the road and brought back a short stick, with which he industriously switched the obstinate animal's sides. Alas! the donkey bore it better than he did, and he soon stopped, breathless.

After a moment's thought, Bertie, as a last resort, drew an apple from a basket in the little cart, and held it up in front of Dick's nose. For a single instant he sniffed at the rosy fruit, then moved forward obediently and took it in his mouth.

"All aboard!" cried Lloyd, and he and his sister clambered upon the seat.

And if you will believe it, whether he had forgotten his late ill temper, or because the kindness of his good little mistress had conquered him, Dick set off at a lively pace, still munching the apple, and they had no more trouble with him during the remainder of the drive.—Sunbeam.

GRANDMA'S SLATE.

Just look, grandma," said Doris, "at this picture on the cover of my new tablet! It is a real beauty."

Grandma examined the new tablet and agreed with Doris that the picture on its cover was "a real beauty."

"It seems to me," said grandma, "the boys and girls of to-day should find true pleasure in preparing their lessons. The books, tablets, pencils, and other things they use are so pretty. Why, Doris, when I was a little schoolgirl the only slate I had was a box of sand. Of course, a box of sand was not really a slate, but, some way or other, it came handy to call it a slate."

"Tell me all about your sand slate, please, grandma," pleaded Doris, becoming very much interested.

"Such a wee bit of a schoolhouse was ours," grandma continued. "And it was our church house, too. The greater number of the children that attended that school had neither slates nor the money with which to buy them.

"Our schoolmaster told us to bring to school with us long, narrow boxes, well filled with sand, as he wished to teach us to write and cipher.

"We children were much puzzled to know how our teacher intended to teach us to write with such writing material, as a box of sand; but we obeyed to the letter and brought the sand. Then the schoolmaster with his knife fashioned us neat, sharp-pointed writing sticks. Then he set us 'copy' and we wrote it in the sand with our sticks."

"Wait a minute, grandma!" chimed in Doris. "How did you erase your work?"

"It has been said, my dear, that 'Necessity is the mother of invention.' Soon it was seen that we must have erasers for our sand slates; so we invented little brushes with which to smooth the sand when we so desired.

"When we had advanced far enough to join the words, the schoolmaster again used his knife and made us little rulers with which to make straight lines in the sand for our writing.

"So it was, Doris, that I learned to write. I was almost a young lady before I owned a slate and pencil. I well remember my first slate pencil. It was decorated, about half way its length, with gilt paper, and I thought it very beautiful indeed."

Doris picked up her new tablet and looked at it thoughtfully. Then she slowly turned the leaves of her reader that was full of beautifully colored pictures. She slipped her arm about grandma's neck and said: "I am not going to be fussy about going to school and getting my lessons any more. I am going to be more—more—. Help me say the word I want, please, grandma."

"Appreciative," suggested grandma.

"That's it! I am going to be more appreciative."—D. Virginia Farley, Sherman, Texas.

WANTED.

A place in the Fall to teach Piano and Voice. Graduate under Olga Schanweker, of Oberlin. My summer will be spent in taking Post-graduate Course at some good Conservatory of Music. Reply to (MRS.) OLIVE STEWART.

Fort Adams, Miss.

CAMPGROUND COTTAGE FOR SALE.

No. 141 on Tabernacle Square, 5 rooms and hall, furnished throughout, including enameled bath tub and an electric fan. Sanitary connection. Write H. R. Singleton, Box 57, Alexandria, La.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location; price, including furniture, only $400. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

HOUSE ON CAMPGROUNDS FOR SALE.

A desirable two-story cottage, with four rooms and hall, bathroom with latest sanitary improvements; completely furnished facing open square in front of Keller Lodge, with a small, shady park in the rear. Address, Christian Advocate, 512 Camp, New Orleans.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER,

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co
INCORPORATED.

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.
OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Mounger, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woodhard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

THE NAME OF THE CHURCH ONCE MORE.

The proposal to change the name of the Church continues to be vigorously discussed throughout the connection. The movement seems to have developed considerable strength and a number of our church papers have committed themselves to it. We have read what the advocates of the measure have had to say upon the subject, but have seen no cause to recede from our position that the proposal is ill-timed and unwise. The arguments advanced in its advocacy we consider weak and wholly inconclusive. Certainly no such action should be taken unless there is a strong and manifest necessity for it, and if that exists, we have not yet been able to discern it.

But it is said that with a name of limited geographical significance, the sphere of our operations must necessarily be restricted. That, we by no means admit. As was said in our issue of the New Orleans Advocate of February 10, "The Roman Catholic Church bears in its name the title of a city. The Greek Church is called by the name of a small nation, which is now almost moribund. The Anglican Church bears a name derived from a little country scarcely as large as the State of Louisiana or the State of Mississippi. How is it that geographic titles have not restrained the success of these great churches?" If they, with a local name, have been able to spread themselves all over the planet, wherein lies the logic of saying that we cannot reach beyond the confines of Dixie, unless we drop from the historic and honored name of our Church the suffix, "South?"

But it is urged that our brethren along the border think they are hampered and hindered by that suffix. We do not doubt that they sincerely think so, but they have not proven that that is the cause of their lack of success. The Methodist Episcopal Church has no geographic word in its name, and do not they find it equally difficult to establish themselves in our section? The Alabama Advocate of April 7 shows that the Northern Church, notwithstanding the lavish manner in which they are given to spending money to promote their work in the South, has had in the State of Alabama in eleven years a gain of only 325 members; while our Church, in the same territory and during the same period, has gained more than 30,000. We are firmly convinced that it is not the word "South" that bars the pathway of our progress along the border, but that it is the unfavorable atmosphere, upon which a change of name would have no appreciable effect.

For three reasons especially, we are unalterably opposed to changing the name of our Church:

1. Because we do not want to spend the remainder of our life explaining the cause of such action. Let the impression get abroad that we are trying to cut loose from the traditions of the past and have been to the slightest extent disloyal to the South, and that impression, though erroneous, will become an embarrassment and hindrance to us. Nor need we doubt that that charge would be made. Let us learn a lesson from the late history of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, which unhappily contravened the sentiment of this section and thereby nearly destroyed the churches which it had built up.

2. Because we believe the elimination of the suffix from our name would tend to commit us to an aggressive and unwise policy of Northern invasion. We do not favor spending money for the promotion of impracticable enterprises out of our territory which promise little hope of success. We have already done more than enough of that. We think we should seek to arrive at some understanding with our sister Methodism of the North by which they shall keep out of our section and we out of theirs. We have hope that some such agreement will be reached in the not far future, and we fear that the adoption of another name would delay, if not forever retard, the coming of needed federation.

3. We are opposed to a new name because we do not think a suitable one has been suggested. Nor do we believe it can be. Properly naming a Church is no easy task. If we should call ourselves "The Episcopal Methodist Church," the name would be too much like that of our sister Methodism, and in consequence confusing to the public. If we should adopt the name of "The Methodist Church," or "The Methodist Episcopal Church in America," there would be an exclusiveness in our title which would be offensive and unworthy of us. Shall we, who have long chided the Campbellites for appropriating the broad title of "The Christian Church," which belongs not of right to them alone, repeat the same folly of embodying in our name a claim of vastly more than belongs to us? We are willing to be a party to no such action. Our name is good enough. It stands for a splendid and heroic history, of which we may be justly proud; and we trust that it will continue untarnished and unchanged until time shall be no more.

BISHOP MCTYEIRE AND THE TIME LIMIT.

It is generally admitted that the greatest ecclesiastical statesman that Southern Methodism has ever produced was Holland N. McTyeire. He had a great constructive mind which, to a remarkable degree, discerned both present opportunities and foresaw future needs. It was his wise prescience and leadership that gave us lay representation, and made possible Vanderbilt University, the center of our great educational system. He left a deeper impress upon the Church than any other man who has lived and moved among us since the division in 1844. The mature opinion of such a mind upon any question ought to carry not a little weight. Hence, to-day when so many are airing their views upon the question of removing the time limit, it may not be amiss to recall what our most majestic leader had to say upon this much debated subject.

In his History of Methodism, Dr. J. M. Buckley says: "McTyeire, who at that time (1866) favored the removal of the time limit, became convinced by experience as bishop that the Church escaped a very great evil by repealing the act immediately." And Bishop McTyeire himself, writing in 1884, thus refers to the hasty action of the General Conference in New Orleans immediately following the war: "At one time a motion was favorably entertained to remove the limit altogether, leaving the appointment annual, but to be repeated at the discretion of the appointing power. This, however, was reconsidered, none objecting more to the extension of discretion than the Bishops. If they, for the good of the whole work, must move the preachers, the law must keep them movable."

The logic of this position seems to us to be incontrovertible. So long as they know that they can remain anywhere only for a brief period, the ministers and the people will not seriously object to frequent changes. But let the idea of a permanent arrangement take hold upon them, and the transfer of a popular pastor will become an exceedingly difficult task. The Bishops will not be able to override the opposition which in many places would thereby be aroused. Some men would need to move, but it would require a struggle to open the appointments to which the administrator might think they should be sent and to procure laborers to take their places. The appointing power would thus be restricted, and the efficiency of the itinerancy impaired. The main spring of our present admirable system is the time limit. Take that away, and we entertain little doubt that it would soon go to pieces. A few decades would find us lined up along with the other congregational churches, and our present method of ministerial supply, under which American Methodism has written its brilliant history, would be but a fading memory. Unless we prefer a system of settled pastors to the itinerancy, we had better let the time limit alone.

A PROPOSED INNOVATION.

For some weeks we have been receiving literature requesting us to call attention to the fact that April 24th will be observed as "Tuberculosis Sunday" throughout the nation, but we have designedly refrained from giving out the information through our columns. We think preachers should expound the gospel on Sunday and not sidetrack it for a lecture on hygiene. If this innovation should make headway, how long will it be before we shall have a "Pellagra Sunday," a "Hookworm Sunday," a "Typhoid Sunday," and so on ad infinitum? While thinking of writing an editorial on this subject, Dr. Buckley's able discussion of it in the New York Christian Advocate came under our observation; so we give it a place on our editorial page as setting forth our views far more effectively than we ourselves could express them:

"Announcement of a national tuberculosis Sunday" is made by The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis for April 24. It is planned to establish a permanent tuberculosis Sunday. They ask that on April 24 'tuberculosis sermons' shall be preached in all the churches throughout the country.

All measures for the prevention and cure of tuberculosis are of great interest to me for personal reasons, but if in charge of a church, I should hesitate long before I would consent to devote one of the usual hours and the place of the public worship of God to a sermon on tuberculosis. Not assuming to direct my brethren in the ministry, other than by stating facts and reasons for their consideration, I present the reasons for which I deem it unwise to consent to this proposal.

"1. Many have friends who are in consumption. They will not wish to be singled out in their usual places, or have their absence noted and commented upon.

"2. The advertisement of such a sermon will draw divers consumptives, not of the society, to the service. One of the foremost of the physicians of the country, noted for his effective work in the modern admirable methods of combating tuberculosis, says that many people have a phthisis-phobia—that is, an exaggerated fear of catching the germs of tuberculosis. But if there be one-tenth of the danger taught by many experts, to collect a crowd to hear this subject discussed—which will certainly contain not a few who have contracted this disease or are in a predisposing condition—will be dangerous.

"3. At every service there will be aged and infirm persons and some who have been ill and are out for the first time on that day. There are also others who have lost friends by consumption. These may be forced to stay away or endure a sermon on consumption.

"4. The precedent may be very pernicious. The regular services of the church are invaded more and more each year, and not half the applications are granted. There are other diseases besides consumption that the public should understand. More people in the United States are dying now each year of nervous diseases than from tuberculosis. Such a lecture should be delivered in a hall, which can easily be obtained. Then those who wish to go can go. I do not object to the lecture being delivered on Sunday, but not in a church or in church hours.

"Brethren, the sanctity of the church is one of the pillars of Christianity. When it becomes like a lecture hall, open for any subject not disreputable, its attendance will diminish in an ever-increasing ratio."

QUEER STATEMENTS.

There have been a number of queer arguments advanced by the advocates of the Women's Memorial in the discussion which has gone on in the papers. One is that the measure should pass because we are "all one in Christ Jesus." That there is a sense in which all believers are one is undoubtedly true, but that unity includes all the followers of Christ in all churches and in all lands. To contend that that expression means that every Christian should exercise equal and co-ordinate powers of government in the Church, is to disregard every recognized rule of interpretation and fling logic to the winds.

Even more far-fetched is the claim that the fact that "there will be no sex-lines in heaven" is a reason for adopting the memorial. Certainly there will be no such lines there; but they will disappear not because sex is there ignored, but because it has ceased to exist. So long as humanity remains "male and female," all wise governments must recognize the fundamental difference and legislate and administer accordingly. To ask one to ignore the constitutional differences between man and woman and the variant capacities springing therefrom, is to prescribe a task which only a good Christian Scientist is adequate to perform.

But stranger still is the teaching now going the rounds that the women of Southern Methodism at present are not members of the Church, and that they have fully demonstrated their fitness so to be. Veritably, this doctrine is something new under the sun. Women not members of the Church! Then, into what do we receive them when we read the ritual and give them the right hand of fellowship? And why are their names put upon our church registers? And why do they vote in our Church Conferences, which govern largely the local affairs of the congregation? If only those who are eligible to seats in the Annual and General Conferences are members of the Church, then it takes a layman six long years to attain to membership. And the Bishops are not members, for they can vote in neither body. If one to be a member must exercise all of the functions of church government, we have no members at all, for there are none among us who can do that. Such is the pitiable plight in which this new and brilliant theory leaves us.

A FORWARD MOVEMENT AT SHREVEPORT.

At a largely attended banquet in Shreveport a few days since, a movement was launched by the First Church congregation to construct a new house of worship in that city to cost $100,000. This conclusion followed a discussion of how to provide more ample facilities for the expanding work, and the action in favor of rearing a more spacious and better appointed edifice was heartily concurred in by all present. The following committee of five was appointed to make the necessary preliminary arrangements: S. S. Hunter, Dr. John P. Scott, Captain P. M. Welsh, F. T. Whited and Dr. H. M. Whaling. The first step will be to appoint a building committee, who will be expected to carry the enterprise speedily forward. The new structure will occupy the same site as the present house of worship, and will probably be the handsomest Methodist Church in Louisiana. We congratulate Dr. Whaling and his worthy flock upon this notable forward movement. Shreveport is a growing town, and has a great future. It is an important commercial center, the metropolis of northwest Louisiana, and the seat of Centenary College, and it behooves Methodism to strongly entrench itself in a place from which its influence may be so widely radiated.

"WOMEN AS LAYMEN."

We desire to call attention to the article which appears elsewhere under this caption, written by Dr. J. E. Harrison, the accomplished president of San Antonio Female College, and one of the strong men of Texas Methodism. He clearly shows that instead of being discriminated against, the women are accorded unusual privileges under the government of the Southern Methodist Church. Particularly pertinent is the question he raises as to whether, if women are put upon the same platform as men, their separate and independent organizations will be allowed to continue. It would certainly be an anomalous and queer arrangement for them to participate in the deliberations and management of all the bodies with which men are connected, and yet maintain other governing boards from which the men are excluded. There would be no equal rights in that. Our sisters who are pressing this movement would do well to consider the question as to whether the success of their memorial, would not carry with it the abolition of the women's boards and their work as distinct and largely independent societies. For our part, we want that work to stand. It has been built up by loyal and loving hands through years of patient toil, and God has signally blessed it. It would be a calamity of far-reaching consequences to have it wrecked by this unfortunate and unwarranted struggle for imaginary rights.

RESIGNATION OF PRESIDENT HARRELL.

We are informed that President George L. Harrell, of Mansfield Female College, has tendered his resignation to take effect at the Commencement in June. This action on the part of this well known educator came to us as a distinct surprise, and we regret that he has seen fit to pursue this course. He has wrought faithfully and zealously, and the institution over which he has had superintendence has prospered under his capable administration. We wish him large success in whatever new field he may choose to enter. Who will succeed him at Mansfield has not yet been announced, but we doubt not that the Board of Trustees will provide well for that worthy institution.

A CORRECTION.

In our editorial on "St. Luke the Physician," in the last issue of the Advocate, we did not write "The vagaries of scientific and skeptical theologians spring up and pass away with startling rapidity," but "The vagaries of SCIENTISTS AND skeptical theologians," etc. But, after all, the error was not serious; for there are ministers who preach more science than Scripture, and who perhaps might with admirable propriety be termed "scientific theologians." Possibly the printer made an improvement on what the editor had written.

PERSONAL.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., is preaching to growing congregations at Rayne, La. The Sunday school is in fine condition and the work generally is prospering.

Rev. C. V. Breithaupt has organized a Woman's Home Mission Society at Houma, La., with thirty members. The French Mission work continues to go steadily forward.

Mr. H. S. Gunn, of Como, Miss., was in the city last week and favored the Advocate office with a call. The editor holds him in high esteem and regrets having missed seeing him.

Rev. W. T. Woodward is in the midst of a meeting at Haynesville, La. He has with him Rev. J. P. Lowry, of Little Rock, Ark., who is a strong and forceful preacher and a successful revivalist.

Rev. J. L. Lay, of Bollinger, La., is at work for the Advocate as well as the other interests of the Church, and promises to let us hear from him again in the near future. He is having success in his present field.

Rev. E. J. Coker, of Eucutta, Miss., is in his second year in that charge. The work is going forward satisfactorily, and the promise is for a record of substantial progress. He thinks the Advocate is growing in favor among his flock.

We make acknowledgment of our obligation to Rev. C. C. Gibson, of Beauregard, Miss., for looking after the interests of the Conference organ in the field under his supervision. He keeps busy in the service of the Master, and the Lord is blessing his labors.

We deeply sympathize with Rev. D. M. Geddie, of Winona, Miss., in the loss of his mother, a notice of whose death appears elsewhere. Earth is never the same to one after his mother leaves it. May God comfort and sustain our brother and all of the other sorrowing ones!

Rev. W. L. Broom, of Oxford, Miss., writes that Rev. J. C. Park, our pastor in that city, is engaged in a meeting, with Rev. Joe Ramsey assisting, who is doing some excellent preaching. The singing is being directed by Prof. Smoot, who deservedly ranks high as a chorister.

Rev. W. G. Harbin has recently held a good meeting at Crowley. It began in the church, but later had to be moved to the Opera House to accommodate the crowds. The results of the revival were not able to give at this writing, but we hope that the pastor will favor us with a full account.

Rev. C. Wesley Bailey, of Courtland, Miss., is one of the Advocate's most faithful friends. He has repeatedly sent us lists of subscribers, and yet continues to do so. We like his substantial way of attesting his interest, and assure him of our hearty appreciation. He has a good people, and his work is moving on well.

To Rev. J. F. Waltman, Coushatta, La.; Rev. H. C. Murphy, Pine Grove, La., and Rev. C. F. Staples, Gillsland, La., we are indebted for efficient work done for the Advocate. We assure these brethren of our hearty appreciation. May the Lord bless them and thoroughly furnish them unto every good word and work!

Dr. B. F. Jones, of Shubuta, Miss., writes: "My work is progressing nicely. We have just finished some repairs on our church, which makes it look entirely new on the inside. Brothers G. S. and W. L. Weems presented the church with a handsome pulpit set consisting of two chairs and a pulpit stand. It cost about $100."

We were made happy not long since by the reception of an appreciated and encouraging letter from our long-time friend, Dr. T. L. Wilburn, of Kilmichael, Miss. He is one of the best physicians in the Magnolia State, and a Christian gentleman above reproach. Such men are the glory of Methodism, and she has not a few of them.

Rev. A. C. Searcy, now attending the Meridian Male College, of which Prof. Beeson is the president, would be pleased to secure work as a supply, and would like to correspond with any presiding elder who needs a man. He is a licensed local preacher, and could take charge in June. He may be addressed at Meridian, Miss.

We are pleased to inform our readers that we have in hand a most superior communication from the facile pen of Dr. C. W. Carter, which will soon be forthcoming. We do not know how the years have otherwise dealt with this noble Louisianian, but they have not affected the vigor of his thought or the aptness of his expression.

Writing under date of the 11th inst., Dr. T. C. Wier, of Starkville, Miss., stated that Rev. W. E. M. Brogan, our pastor at that place, after a spell of severe illness was able to be about again, though still not strong. We regret to know that our Brother has been sick, and pray that he may speedily regain his accustomed strength and vigor.

In forwarding a list of subscribers, new and old, Rev. W. A. Bowlin, of Smithville, Miss., commends the Advocate, and among other things says: "I like Brother Lipscomb's arrangement and exposition of the Sunday school lesson." Brother Bowlin has his "work well in hand, with a good Sunday school at each appointment, and is planning for revivals."

We request our friends who have sent in obituaries to be patient with us. They are carefully filed away and published in the order of their reception. Just now we have a large number on hand, but we shall try to devote more space to this department until we catch up. We are doing our best to serve all of our patrons without discrimination or partiality.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson began a series of revival services at Parker Memorial Church, this city, last Sunday. Rev. W. W. Drake arrived from Lake Charles Monday and has since been doing the preaching. He is well known to the congregation now waiting upon his ministry, and is with them a great favorite. We pray that large success may crown the labors of these brethren.

Rev. J. W. Raper has just had his second Quarterly Conference on the Byhalia work. He thinks it the best held since his incumbency in that charge, and is pleased with the prospect ahead. He speaks in the highest terms of the service rendered by his presiding elder, Rev. W. M. Young. We are happy to note that after a three months' stay in a Memphis hospital, Sister Raper is again at home, much improved.

Rev. J. A. Poe, of Montpelier, Miss., is pressing the claims of the Advocate in his rounds, and is meeting with success. He forwarded ten names on the 6th inst., and kindly promises more. He says: "We are doing all we can to get our congregations housed. We have just finished a nice, modern little chapel at Mantee, and will soon have our new church done at Woodland." It pleases us to hear these notes of progress.

We confess to a feeling of uneasiness for Rev. H. T. Gaines, of Minter City, Miss. He wrote a few days since: "Brother J. A. Townes has sent us another supply of groceries and canned goods, and I am living high." Too much high living is sometimes a dangerous thing. Not every man can stand it. Nor are we sure that our Brother is wise to advertise his happiness too much. Some of us may be after his place next fall.

The leading contribution to the New York Advocate of April 14 was from the hand of Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Indianola, Miss., who is now conducting our Sunday School Department. The subject of the paper is "The Church a Hospital or an Army—Which?" and the discussion is an able and thought-provoking one. Brother Lipscomb is a graduate of Drew Theological Seminary, and a young minister of solid acquirements.

Dr. S. A. Steel recently conducted a meeting for Dr. Richard Wilkinson at Augusta, Ga. It is needless to say that he did some strong and stirring preaching. As a brilliant pulpit orator, he has no superior in the nation. We have long had a warm place in our heart for this gifted son of Mississippi, who has converted himself into a veritable cosmopolite. He might not inappropriately be termed the wandering star of Southern Methodism.

Herbert, the little son of Rev. and Mrs. G. D. Purcell, of Jena, La., has been in a sanitarium for three weeks and has lately undergone an operation, which, we are pleased to hear, promises to be successful. Notwithstanding this serious affliction in his home, Brother Purcell has been bringing things to pass in his charge. He has met all of his appointments, has built a parsonage since Conference, and is now engaged in the erection of a $4000 church.

In his sermon at the Second Methodist Church last Sunday, Rev. A. I. Townsley discussed the pardoning of Colonel Cooper, the slayer of ex-Senator E. W. Carmack, by Gov. Patterson of Tennessee. He characterized the Governor's course as pernicious in its influence and as wholly without justification. A native of the Volunteer State, Mr. Townsley feels a deep interest in its affairs, and the humiliation which Mr. Patterson has brought upon the commonwealth weighs heavily upon him.

One of the growing pastors of Southern Methodism is Rev. Theo. Copeland, of St. Paul's Church, St. Louis. Though in his fourth year in that charge, his popularity continues to increase with the passing months. He will attend the General Conference at Asheville, and will spend most of the summer in Europe, his people having given him an extended vacation. He has lately been holding a meeting in Gallatin, Mo., and while in that city was the guest of ex-Gov. A. M. Dockery. Upon his return home he wrote for the St. Louis Advocate a highly interesting account of his trip through the State of Missouri.

The ethics of journalism is a subject which might be discoursed upon with profit. People should not seek to procure free advertisement under the guise of doing good. Such attempts are by no means creditable. Everybody sees through them. Nor is it fair for a private individual to offer for publication matter which at the same time is being tendered other papers, unless that fact is plainly stated. We have been not a little imposed upon in this way. As a rule, we do not desire communications which are not to be exclusively ours. At any rate, we want to know if they are expected to appear simultaneously elsewhere, that we may have the privilege of acceptance or rejection. Of course, we have no reference to official matter sent out by the authorities of the Church.

"MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE."

Orders for this neat little volume from the gifted pen of the Rev. W. G. Harbin are now being received at this office. The five sermons which compose it are a practical discussion of the work of the Holy Spirit—a theme of perennial interest. They have been signally blessed of God when spoken from the pulpit, and are calculated to stimulate and nourish the spiritual life. The volume deserves a wide circulation. Persons desiring a copy should write to Mr. C. O. Chalmers, publisher of the Christian Advocate. The price is 75 cents.

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

SECOND QUARTER—LESSON IV. APRIL 24, 1910.
WARNING AND INVITATION.

Parallel Passage—Lk. x:13-22; Matthew xi:20-30.

MEMORY VERSES, 28-30.

20. Then he began to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not:

21. Woe unto thee, Cho-ra-zin! woe unto thee, Beth-sa-i-da! for if the mighty works which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sack-cloth and ashes.

22. But I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment, than for you.

23. And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day.

24. But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment, than for thee.

25. At that time, Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes.

26. Even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight.

27. All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.

28. Come unto me, all ye that labor, and are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest.

29. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

30. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

Golden Text: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest." (Matt. xi:28.)

I. The Lesson's Meaning.

Dr. Adam Clarke, followed by the Twentieth Century New Testament, suggests that our Lord's rebuke of the cities, with which the lesson for to-day opens, should be translated: "Alas for thee, Chorazin!" "Alas for thee, Bethsaida!" for it appears that the spirit of Christ at this time was rather that of reproach and sorrow than of denunciation and wrath. There seems to be more of kinship between this passage and his lamentation over Jerusalem because she "would not," with desolation foretold, than between these words and his sharp and scathing denunciation of the Scribes and Pharisees. Wesley paraphrases, "Miserable art thou," etc.

The first part of our lesson, then, is an expression of Christ's sorrow over recognized failure, in Capernaum, Chorazin, and Bethsaida; throwing the responsibility, though, where it belonged, upon them, conscious as he was of no fault on his part. Even Christ failed, sometimes: not in doing his duty, or all that as God or man he could do for the salvation of men, but in accomplishing that which he desired and even longed to accomplish. Let us distinguish then carefully these two senses in which the word failure may be used: (1) failure to do our part, (2) failure to accomplish what we aim at and desire. Only in the latter sense did Christ fail, and only in the former sense is there reproach.

This failure to accomplish all that Christ desired in these cities (some success attended his ministry even here—Peter, Andrew, and Philip were of Bethsaida), was not due to the lack of convincing evidence, for here most of his mighty works were done, and Capernaum was Christ's home for some time. It was due rather to the hardness of men's hearts and their pre-occupation with material concerns. The blame and condemnation for failure rested upon them as communities and as individuals, and Christ pronounced upon them the certain doom which follows the rejection of him both collectively and individually in time and in eternity. The expression "shalt be brought down to hell" suggests the former, "probably not meaning here the place of torment, but rather a state of desolation" (Clarke). And certainly this prophecy has been fulfilled, for the ruins even of Capernaum can hardly be identified, and where Bethsaida and Chorazin were—cities probably of some 15,000 inhabitants each—none know to-day. But doom upon the inhabitants as individuals is also pronounced: "It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment than for thee." Degrees of punishment according to spiritual opportunity and privilege is also implied in the words "more tolerable."

The expression, "And thou Capernaum which art exalted unto heaven," permits of two translations, somewhat different in meaning. The Revised Version, the Modern Reader's Bible, and most scholars to-day read it thus: "And thou Capernaum, shalt thou he exalted unto heaven?" "The question," says R. F. Horton, "implies that in the expectation of the inhabitants it was or would be," and the expectation arose out of pride and abounding prosperity. If such be the correct reading, the fate of these cities is a warning to-day against pride, mammon worship, and trusting in material prosperity to the exclusion of higher and spiritual concerns.

But the older interpretation is that in spiritual privilege, Capernaum was "exalted unto heaven," for "as the residence of Jesus it was the most favored spot on earth. There he lived as a man among men, and the whole series of his miracles was unfolded before those fortunate eyes. Even Sodom would have repented at that display of grace." (Horton.)

It is probable that both these interpretations are true. That while the kingdom of heaven came very nigh unto them, they were so puffed up and satisfied with commercial prosperity that they regarded not Christ—his miracles nor his message—beyond a curiosity which the wonder of it all aroused. The words of Christ which follow may have sprung immediately out of a discernment of this spirit in them as the cause of their rejection of him. "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes." Some think that the twelve or seventy returned, at this time, with joy telling of their success and inspiring in Christ this utterance. In either case we have here a glimpse of the sublime fellowship ever existing between Christ and the Father, and a statement which is abidingly true. From those who think themselves wise and prudent, spiritual things are hid; but by babes, the sincere, the simple, the childlike in spirit the unpurged, they are at once perceived. "Yet the wise and prudent may, if they choose, become the babes, and then they will cease to be those from whom the gospel is hid." (Wheldon.)

We come now to a somewhat difficult utterance of Christ, concerning which Calvinists and Arminians have differed in times past. "All things are delivered unto me of my Father; and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him." Christ here affirms a consciousness of universal authority so absolute that, as Bengel says, "The Father reserved nothing to himself." "All things are delivered to me of my Father." Consequently none could know the Son, thus infinitely endowed—men little realized who it was that lived and labored among them—save the Father. On the other hand, the Father is unknown to all save the Son, "and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him." These last words, if they stood alone, as Dr. Horton says, "might fill the soul with apprehension." For it seems to imply that if we know not the Father it is because the Son has not wished to reveal him to us. But here at least all doubt is removed; and stiffness in joints or muscles; neuralgia; backache; tired, painful, aching feet; sore hands; sprains and bruises; sore throat and chest, due to colds or grippe; in fact, all the common aches and pains that occur in any family from day to day, yield almost instantly to a good rubbing with

(Continued on Last Page.)

Rheumatic Pains

Minard's Liniment.

It does not stain, it is neither sticky nor oily—it is just a delightfully smooth, aromatic cream that feels good on the skin and rubs right in and stops inflammation like magic. Minard's Liniment ought to be on every family medicine shelf, because it is so useful in emergencies and so prompt in giving relief.

We guarantee it to be just as we represent—should you find it otherwise, we will refund your money on request. Sold by all druggists in three sizes, price 25c., 50c. and $1.00.

FREE. If you have never tried it, and wish to test its merit, write us to-day for a free trial bottle.

MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO., South Framingham, Mass.

Comfort and Entertainment

When you go out for your entertainment you usually leave your comfort at home. If you knew that you could combine all the comforts of your home with all the entertainment you derive from the opera, concert, theatre or vaudeville, how often would you go out?

the EDISON Phonograph

in your home supplies better and more varied entertainments than you could get if you went to a show or a concert every night in the week. You don't sit on an uncomfortable theatre seat and think how you could enjoy yourself if you were comfortable. You are comfortable, and you do enjoy it—every minute of it. With the Edison Phonograph it's just like having your own theatre, your own opera company, your own orchestra and band right in your home.

Edison Phonograph.....$12.50 to $200
Edison Standard Records.....35c.
Edison Amberol Records.....50c.
Edison Grand Opera Records, 75c and $1.00

There are Edison dealers everywhere. Go to the nearest and hear the Edison Phonograph play both Edison Standard and Amberol Records. Get complete catalogs from your dealer or from us.

National Phonograph Co., 149 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N.J.

BULLETIN ON THE ENDOWMENT FUND.

The American Bible Society is very happy to announce to all its friends that the effort to raise $500,000 to meet the offer of Mrs. Russell Sage of a similar amount, the whole sum to be perpetually invested as an endowment for the society, has been completed. The entire amount of $500,000 has been raised; $275,681.07 has already been paid in. The balance is covered by good and reliable subscriptions payable, most of them, during the year 1910.

The officers and the Board of Managers reverently recognize the divine favor that has rested upon this undertaking and desire most cordially to return thanks to the thousands of interested co-laborers in all parts of this country and in many foreign lands that have helped to bring about this result; to the givers who have given out of their abundance, and to those who have given from their limited store; for this which we believe to be a treasury of God.

The society faces great opportunities and great obligations. Gifts have come from every part of the United States and from the principal mission fields of the world.

It will be possible to enlarge the appropriation, both for home and foreign work, for the year beginning April 1, 1910, and thus to meet more adequately the earnest appeals for help in this great work, which come from all over the world.

JOHN FOX,
WILLIAM I. HAYEN,
Corresponding Secretaries.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVES TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form for grown people and children, 50c.

FROM THE COLPORTER'S DESK.

Of the many timely and useful books in stock, I would remind preachers and laymen of the following, as of special importance at this time, either of which I shall be glad to send post-paid at prices given:

1. "The Southern Methodist Hand Book, 1910." This is an up-to-date compilation of history, biography, literature and statistics of the Church. It contains invaluable information for present day use; more than 200 pages, illustrated; only 25 cents.

2. "A New History of Methodism," in two large volumes, good cloth binding, clear type, $5.00. This work comprehends world-wide Methodism of all branches and sections, from the beginning to the present time, written by competent men of each branch. Bishop Hoss writes up the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and, of course, he has done it well. This valuable work should go into every preacher's library as soon as possible.

3. "A Commentary on Colossians and Ephesians," by Dr. Gross Alexander, 50 cents.

Dr. Collins Denny, in the Methodist Quarterly Review, April, 1910, says of this excellent book: "Dr. Alexander has written a book that inspires thought. He has done his work well, rarely well. The book is little, but it is golden. To read it, is a blessing; to read it closely, is a rare uplift." All of which I can verify after a pretty careful reading. Let orders come for it rapidly.

We are glad to note that there is in many quarters increasing interest in the study of the doctrines and polity of the Church. There is constant demand for such books as "The Methodist Armor," 50 cents; "Bible Tools for Busy People," 50 cents; "Bible View of Baptism," 10 cents; "Baptism in a Nutshell," 30 cents per dozen. These all deserve to be extensively circulated and read.

Revs. J. A. Hall, Winona, and S. A. Brown, Como, pastors, have classes which meet weekly, studying these books and others. The class in Winona is now in "The Why and How of Missions," a most timely and excellent book. Price, 50 cents.

Who will be the next pastor to fall into this line of work to help and encourage his people in the reading of "those books that tend to the knowledge and love of," and devotion to the Church?

Brethren, help us to make this a notable year for the increase of knowledge among the people.

Yours faithfully,
G. W. BACHMAN.
Winona, Miss., April 1, 1910.

Kick's CAPUDINE Cures Sick Headache. Also Nervous Headache, Traveler's Headache and aches from Grip, Stomach Troubles or Female troubles. Capudine—it's liquid—effects immediately. Sold by druggists.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO GO?

To the National Missionary Congress, May 3-6?

The Men's National Missionary Congress, which will be held in Chicago May 3-6, will probably be the greatest gathering of the kind ever held. Arrangements are being made for 5,000 delegates, representing all the principal evangelical denominations of the United States.

The purpose of the Congress will be the adoption of an adequate national missionary policy, such as was adopted last spring by the men of Canada, 4,000 of whom gathered in Toronto for that purpose. It will be the logical culmination of the series of seventy-five laymen's conventions that have been in progress all over the country since last fall, and will be to the nation what these conventions were to their respective communities. It is needless to say that the program provided will be of the highest order and commensurate in strength with the magnitude of the gathering.

The National Congress will be unique, historic, epoch-making. It will be a rare privilege merely to attend it, and a greater yet to take part in its deliberations and have a part in shaping the missionary policy of the nation. Every Church should be represented to the limit of its apportionment.

Would you like to go as one of the representatives of Southern Methodism? If so, send your name at once to W. B. Stubbs, Secretary Laymen's Tenn., together with five dollars registration fee, which will entitle you to a reserved seat in the Congress and the official report of its proceedings, which will be published in book form.

Prompt action is necessary, as the registrations will close shortly.

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS FOR STOOL.

Mr. William Gallagher, 1047 Magazine St., New Orleans, says: "I have been using ROYALINE OIL on my mules for two years, and can recommend it as being superior to anything I have ever tried for Cuts, Sprains, Nails in Feet and Hurts of all kinds. It cures promptly every time." Royaline Oil is the great antiseptic; cures wounds, pains, aches and inflammations of all kinds. Price, 25c. bottle. Sold by druggists or the Royaline Medicine Co., New Orleans, La.

After sixty years of public life, I hold more strongly than ever to the conviction, deepened and strengthened by long experience, of the reality, the nearness, and the personality of God.—Gladstone.

BLOOD POISONING AND ERYSIPELAS.

Both of these diseases are produced by germs. How often you hear of a trivial injury, a mere scratch, causing death. The skin protects us against germs so that every injury ought to be promptly treated. For festering wounds, cuts, bruises, old sores, chronic ulcers, carbuncles, boils, burns, poison oak, and all inflammation "Gray's Ointment" is the quickest, surest remedy. Get a 25c. box and have it ready on your medicine shelf, or if you have never used it before write for a small trial box which we will gladly send free, postpaid to prove its merit. Address Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 809 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn. Mr. B. G. Worth, Wilmington, N. C., writes: "I have been extolling Gray's Ointment for over fifty years. I am now 86 years of age and would not be without your Ointment for anything."

Your Boy

No stimulation. No alcohol habit. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a tonic for the young. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Ask your doctor how often he prescribes an alcoholic stimulant for children. He will probably say, "Very, very rarely." Ask him how often he prescribes a tonic for them. He will probably answer, "Very, very frequently." Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a strong tonic, entirely free from alcohol.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

W. M. BYRNE, Pres. JOHN T. GIBBONS, Vice-Pres. P. E. BURKH, Sec'y.

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,860.90

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

Furniture for School Rooms, made

in the South, of Southern wood, by Southern people, with Southern capital. New factory—one of the best equipped in America, employing skilled labor only.

Lowest Prices—Advantageous Freight Rates

We make Desks, Seats, Teachers' Desks, Book Cases, Library Tables, Magazine Racks, etc. Write for illustrated catalog and price list. Address W. A. PRICE & SON, West Jackson, Miss.

SAWTELL SCHOOL OF MILLINERY

Oldest Millinery School in the South.

Teaches all branches of Millinery successfully. Thoroughly equipped. Competent instructors. Individual instruction. Endorsed by graduates and leading milliners in the South. For fully illustrated catalogue and full information, address Miss Sawtell, 40 1-2 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga.

A Durable PORTABLE Engine

It is easily moved, and being built to resist hard usage, may be conveniently handled in rough, hilly country. The wheels cannot burn from hot ashes or fall to pieces from shrinkage in hot weather, because they are built entirely of steel. This outfit is complete in every detail. The engine and boiler are piped up completely, the exhaust pipe running into the stack.

We have another portable, mounted on skids, and still another with only the boiler on wheels, and the engine resting on a foundation at the side of the boiler. Wouldn't you like to have us mail you our free catalog with full specifications? Write for it TO-DAY.

WHELAND MACHINE WORKS, 2700 Sydney St., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM

"In the Land of the Sky."

Devoted to the cure of chronic diseases by natural methods. No drugs. No surgery. If you are afflicted with Paralysis, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Neurasthenia or some other disease that medicines have failed to cure, write for our free illustrated book which tells all about this new and better way.

Ideal climate, beautiful mountain scenery, pure water, home-like conditions, hygienic food, personal care and attention to each case, complete new sanitarium equipment, low charges and liberal guarantee of satisfaction are features here.

Patients unable to come to the sanitarium may be successfully treated in their own homes at slight cost.

Write to-day for the book and diagnosis blank—Both free.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM,
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Aberdeen Dist.—Second Round.
 Okolona ct., No. 2, at Union. Apr. 23, 24
 Okolona Apr. 24, 25
 Pittshoro, at Pine Ridge. Apr. 30, May 1
 Vardaman and Calhoun City,
 at C. C. May 1, 2
 Nettleton ct., at Shiloh May 7, 8
 Amory and Nettleton, at A. May 8, 9
 Smithville, at Greenbriar May 7, 8
 Greenwood Springs May 11,
 Fulton, at Friendship May 14, 15
 Tremont June 4, 5
 Houka June 10, 11
 Derma June 11, 12
 Buena Vista June 18, 19
 Prairie June 19, 20
 Dist. Conf. at Pontotoc. June 21, 24
 JAS. H. FELTS, P. E.

Corinth Dist.—Second Round.
 N. Albany Ct., at Ingomar. Apr. 23, 24
 N. Albany Sta., at N. A. Apr. 24, 25
 Hatchie Miss., at Paines Ch. Apr. 30,
 Jonesboro Ct., at Brownfield. May 1, 2
 Dumas Ct., at Jacobs Ch. May 7, 8
 Ripley and B. M., at Ripley. May 8, 9
 Dry Run May 14, 15
 Tishomingo Ct. May 20,
 Mooreville Ct. May 21, 22
 Marietta Ct. May 26,
 Mantachie Ct. May 28, 29
 BEN. P. JACO, P. E.

Sardis Dist.—Second Round.
 Cockrum, at Ind. Apr. 23, 24
 Coldwater, at Love. April 30, May 1
 Hernando, at Horn Lake. May 1, 2
 Mt. Pleasant, at Marshall
 Institute May 7, 8
 Long Town, at McGees
 Chapel May 14, 15
 Eureka, at Love Joy May 21, 22
 Olive Branch, at Cen. Hill. May 27
 Pleasant Hill, at Lewish'g. May 28, 29
 Senatobia June 4, 5
 Arkabutla June 8
 Crenshaw June 9
 Batesville June 11, 12
 Enid June 17
 Courtland June 18, 19
 W. M. YOUNG, P. E.

Winona Dist.—Second Round.
 Carrollton, at S. Chpl. Apr. 23, 24
 Winona Ct., at B. Spr. pr. 30
 Mars Hill, at Mars Hill. May 1, 2
 Schlater, Friday May 6
 Webb, at Watson May 8, 9
 Ruleville, at Drew May 15
 Lambert, at Porchman. May 21, 22
 Twifiler, at Glendora. May 28, 29
 Minter City. 7:30 p. m. May 29
 Eupora, at Mahen. June 5
 Slate Springs, Tuesday. June 7
 North Carrollton, Friday. June 10
 Inverness June 11
 Indianola June 12
 E. S. LEWIS, P. E.

Oxford Dist.—Second Round.
 Potts Camp, at Winborn. Apr. 23, 24
 Grenada Ct., at D'k Hill. Apr. 30, May 1
 Coffeeville, at C. May 7, 8
 Holly Spgs. Ct., at Sylvestria May 14, 15
 Waterford, at Asbury May 21, 22
 Charleston, at C. May 23, 29
 Grenada June 5, 6
 Ashland, at Salem. June 11, 12
 Lafayette, at Old Liberty. June 17
 Toccopola, at Salem. June 18, 19
 Randolph, at Spg. Hill. June 21
 Dist. Conf. at Abbeville. May 11, 13
 J. E. CUNN, CHAM, P. E.

Durant Dist.—Second Round.
 Dnrant Apr. 24,
 Pickens Apr. 25,
 Ebenezer 30, May 1
 Kosciusko Ct., May 7, 8
 Kosciusko Stat. May 8, 9
 Rural Hill May 14, 15
 Louisville May 21, 22
 Chester May 28, 29
 Ackerman May 29, 30
 Poplar Creek June 4, 5
 Sallis June 11, 12
 McCool June 18, 19
 Black Hawk June 25, 26
 N. G. AUGUSTUS.

Greenville Dist.—Second Round.
 De Clarksdale Apr. 24, 25
 Leland Apr. 26,
 Bibb Apr. 27,
 Tunica, at Robinsonville. May 1, 2

Rosedale May 8, 9
 Hillhouse, at Hillhouse May 15, 16
 Shaw, at Merigold May 22, 23
 Gunnison, at Kuhn May 28, 29
 Friar's Point June 5, 6
 W. W. WOOLLARD, P. E.

Columbus Dist.—Second Round.
 Cedar Bluff, at Phoebe Apr. 22,
 Mathiston, at Providence. Apr. 23, 24
 Mayhew Apr. 29,
 Winstonville, at Macedonia.
 Apr. 30, May 1
 Columbus, First Church May 8
 Columbus, Second Church May 8,
 Starkville ct., at Steel's C. May 14, 15
 Hebron, at Cochran, Ala. May 22, 23
 Columbus ct. May 28, 29
 The District Conference will be held in Mayhew April 27th.
 J. E. THOMAS, P. E.

Hattiesburg Dist.—Second Round.
 McLain, at Pine Grove Apr. 23,
 Leakesville, at L. Apr. 23, 24
 Pachuta, at Adams Apr. 30, May 1
 Hattiesburg, Broad St. May 4,
 Lux, at Lux May 7,
 Purvis, at Dearmans May 9,
 Sumrall May 14, 15
 Maxie, at Epps May 16,
 Oloh, at Tracy's May 21, 22
 Eastabutchie, at Pleas. R. May 29, 30
 Magee, at Sharon June 4, 5
 Collins, at Collins June 6,
 Lucedale June 11, 12
 M. B. SHARBROUGH, P. E.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Shreveport Dist.—Second Round.
 Oakdale, at Oakdale Apr. 23, 24
 Longville, at Cravins Apr. 26, 27
 Grand Cane, at Keithville. May 1,
 Texas Avenue May 1, 2
 Coushatta, at Carroll May 6, 7
 Campit, at Clarence May 8, 9
 Greenwood, at Greenwood. May 14, 15
 La Chute, at Atkins May 21, 22
 Hornbeck, at Prospect May 28, 29
 Leesville May 29, 30
 Ida June 4, 5
 Zwolle June 10,
 Many June 11, 12
 Pelican June 18, 19
 Pleasant Hill June 19, 20
 De Ridder June 25, 26
 Bon Ami June 27, 28
 Mansfield July 2, 3
 Mooringsport July 3, 4
 Shreveport, 1st Church July 6,
 Bossier City July 7,
 Shreveport District Conference will meet at Zwolle, La. June 14. The opening sermon will be preached Monday night. T. J. WARLICK, P. E.

Baton Rouge Dist.—Second Round.
 Ponchatoula, at Springfield. Apr. 23, 24
 Amite City Apr. 24, 25
 Baker, at Bethel Apr. 30, May 1
 Denham Springs, at Liveoak. May 1, 2
 Pt. Vincent, at Maurepas. May 4,
 Pinegrove, at Pipkin's C. May 7, 8
 Baton Rouge
 Second Ch., at Antioch. May 14, 15
 First Church May 15, 16
 Tickfaw, at James Chapel. May 18,
 E. Feliciana, at Independ'ce. May 21, 22
 Bogalusa—District Conference May 28, 30
 New Roads, at New Roads. June 4, 5
 C. C. MILLER, P. E.

Monroe Dist.—Second Round.
 Gilbert, at Magnolia April 23, 24
 Winnsboro, at Crowville. April 23, 24
 Oakridge May 1
 Florence May 8, 9
 Mangham, at L. Creek. May 14, 15
 Delhi May 21, 22
 Collinston May 28, 29
 Downsview June 1
 Floyd June 4, 5
 Lake Providence June 11, 12
 St. Joseph June 18, 19
 Brookland June 22
 Calhoun June 25, 26
 S. S. KEENER, P. E.

Ruston Dist.—Second Round.
 Bienville, at Burk Place. Apr. 23, 24
 Simsboro, at Vienna. Apr. 30, May 1
 Ruston 11 a. m. May 8,
 Arcadia 8 p. m. May 8,
 Plaindeating, at Emma. May 14, 15
 Vernon, at Wesley May 21, 22

Four Years to Pay for This Piano

UNDER the Werlein Club Plan one hundred people buy one hundred pianos, each agreeing to pay for one piano only. The piano is shipped upon payment of $10. The monthly payment is $6. This is for a $400 piano. Write for particulars—how to save $108 on your purchase.

Sixty-seven years in business

Phillip Werlein, Ltd., 605-7-9 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

Weber, Chickering, Mathushek, Behr, Pease, Wegman,
 Ivers & Pond, Steck, Werlein Pianos and Planolas.
 Sheet Music—Victor Talking Machines.

THE BEST MADE

Angell's Cough and Whooping Cough Syrup

For Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and Throat Trouble.

Contains no Opium or Morphine.
 All Druggists, Price 25 and 50 cents.

DUGGAN'S BOLL WEEVIL REMEDY
WILL INSURE A GOOD COTTON CROP

Should be used by every cotton planter in the South. Simple, Cheap, Effective. Fully demonstrated at Natchez, Miss., last season. Write for particulars and references.

One gallon diluted treats 2 acres

J. J. DUGGAN, Mn'fr.

4326 Magazine Street, New Orleans, La.

DRAUGHON'S PRACTICAL BUSINESS COLLEGE

Endorsed by Bankers and Leading Business Men.
POSITIONS GUARANTEED.
 Teaches Bookkeeping, Banking, Shorthand, Typewriting, Borroughs' Adding Machine Course, Multigraphing, Penmanship, and all Literary Branches necessary for a thorough business training. Modern equipment and trained teachers, also teach by mail—Catalog FREE. Address, J. E. Richardson, Mgr., Shreveport, La.; or Texarkana, Tex.

CONVENIENT WAY,

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA, SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL, General Passenger Agent.

Gibbsland, at Mt. Moriah. May 28, 29
 Ringgold, at Rocky Mt. June 3,
 Lanesville, at Brashwood. June 4, 5
 Bernice, at Bernice, 8 p. m. June 8,
 Winnfield June 11, 12
 Jonesboro, at Hodge June 12, 13
 Cotton Valley June 18, 19
 Lisbon June 22,
 Houghton, at Castor June 25, 26
 Minden 8 p. m. June 26,
 The District Conference will convene at Arcadia July 1 to 3. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. Robert Randle on June 30, at 8 p. m.
 R. W. TUCKER, P. E.

Alexandria Dist.—Second Round.
 Pollock and Standard, at Standard Apr. 5
 Glenmora, at Fellowship. Apr. 9, 10
 Coifax, at Montgomery. Apr. 13
 Tioga, at Oak Grove. Apr. 16, 17
 Selma Apr. 20
 Opelousas Apr. 24, 25
 Ville Platte, Washington. Apr. 24, 25
 Bunkie, at White Chapel. Apr. 27
 PAUL M. BROWN, P. E.

Lafayette Dist.—Second Round.
 Lafayette Apr. 24, 25
 Houma Apr. 30, 1
 Patterson May 1, 2
 Prudehomme, at P May 7, 8
 Lake Charles May 14, 15
 Rayne May 15, 16
 Sulphur, at Vinton May 21, 22
 Jennings May 22, 23
 Bell City May 28, 29
 Lake Arthur May 29, 30
 J. E. DENSON, P. E.

New Orleans Dist.—Second Round.
 Algiers a. m. May 1
 Carrollton p. m. May 1
 Felicite May 29
 First Church a. m. June 5
 Second Church p. m. June 5
 Rayne Memorial June 12
 F. N. PARKER.

For HEADACHE—Hicks' CAPUDINE. Whether from Colds, Heat, Stomach or Nervous Troubles, Capudine will relieve you. It's liquid—pleasant to take—acts immediately. Try it 10c., 25c. and 50c. at drug stores.

WANTS OF THE WORLD.

PATENT ATTORNEYS
 Patent Your Ideas—$100.00 offered for one invention; $25.00 for another. Book "How to Obtain a Patent" and "What to Invent" sent free. Send rough sketch for free report as to patentability. Patents obtained or Fee Refunded. We advertise your patent for sale at our expense. Established 15 years. Chandler & Chandler, Patent Attys. 559 F St., Washington, D. C.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN
 Pretty Kimonos—Factory prices less than material costs. Free Kimono—$1.15, $1.65, $1.95 delivered. Postage paid. Free sample. Ben Herr, Dept. W, 102 W. 101st St., New York, N. Y.

FOR THE HOME
 30 Fine Post Cards only 10 cents—Birthdays, Best Wishes and Landscapes. No Trash. Dept. 12, German American Post Card Company, Burlington, Iowa.
USED ORGANS, $5, $10, $25. Brown Brothers, Peoria, Ill.
 Join the "Car Load Club". Save $15 to $25 on your new machine. No fees. Free trial. Money back if not pleased. Write for free catalogue at once. Religious Press Co-operative Club, Desk 33, Louisville, Ky.

IMPORTANT!

Write this very day for your copy of the Van Antwerp Seed Catalog—Free.

You can not afford to miss it this season. Everything in seeds. Van Antwerp's seeds never disappoint you.

Clip and mail this "ad" with 25 cents and we will mail you TEN 50 papers of our selection of choice seeds

Seed Department

Van Antwerp's
 Dept. B, MOBILE, ALA.

Tidings from the Field

Carthage, Miss.:

We have not seen anything in your columns from Carthage this year, but we want the readers of the Advocate to know that we are not dead yet. We are building a brand new parsonage in our little town which will be well worth a thousand dollars when it is finished. We have the lumber mostly on the ground; also brick, sash and doors, paper, canvas and nails, have been ordered. We have moved out of the old parsonage and are having it removed. We also have nearly completed a new church at Singleton; are taking steps to build a church at Bethel; to finish and paint the church at Rocky Point and paint the churches at Carthage and at Conway. This work has gone down in the way of buildings, and there is quite a lot of work to do in this line. We have four Sunday schools now, I believe; on the work and one prayer meeting. We have one Woman's Home Mission Society which is rendering some valuable help in building and furnishing the parsonage. We feel sure of a prosperous year in every way.—A. B. Barry, P. C.

Leeds, Miss.:

As I am greatly helped by reading the reports of other pastors, I thought that some one would like to know what we are doing on the Nebo Charge. Nebo is a new charge formed by taking from the Meadville, Fayette and Barlow charges. There are six churches on this new charge and seven preaching places; so you see we are kept busy. Nebo, the name given to this charge, was in honor of the church nearest the center of the work, and near where the pastor lives. A kinder, more considerate and congenial people, this pastor has never served, though I have found good people everywhere I have been. We have two good cows; a few chickens have been brought to the parsonage. On our second appointment at Nebo Church, my wife presented the work of the W. H. M. Society to the ladies and organized a W. H. M. Society of ten members. They are now at work and are happy in this field of labor.

We have five organized Sunday schools; two of these schools held Easter exercises. The one at Nebo was conducted by Mrs. Lola Gibson and the music was rendered by Miss Josie Wilkison. The occasion was a grand success. At the close of the exercises, a collection was taken and five dollars received, and sent to the Orphans at Jackson. Rev. C. W. Grafton, of Union Church, preached at 3 p. m. to a large and appreciative audience, while the pastor was away to his farthest appointment, namely at Blue Hill. We have a Senior Epworth League at this point. After preaching at 11 a. m., it was the privilege of the pastor to meet with this band of young Christians in a League meeting at 3 p. m. The meeting was conducted by the young people, after which the Sunday school children had their Easter exercises. It was a happy occasion and a grand success. Dr. C. W. Grafton, having attended the Layman's Missionary Meeting in Jackson, came home enthused with the missionary spirit; called together the pastors of the various denominations and arranged to have four meetings out here in the country, one at Caseville, and Pleasant Hill and Union Churches, and one at Ediston, Miss. Rev. H. M. Ellis and Rev. H. B. Watkins were selected to represent the Methodists; Rev. Spark Anding and Mr. Whitton, a layman, of Jackson, were selected to represent the Baptists. Two of these meetings are now over; a large and appreciative audience met us at each place, and the speakers were all there and did their parts well. Our next meeting will be held at Union Church, the last of this month. Our aim is 1, a more consecrated membership; 2, an increase in contributions to missions; 3, we are praying that it may please the Father to call at least twenty young men to the ministry from the territory embraced in these four meetings.—C. W. Herring, P. C.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS.

Should buy for 1910, "Hymns of Glory" by Hamp Sewell, Atlanta, Ga. It is the best book for Sunday Schools. It's New, Over 100 songs, never before printed. Sunday Schools Superintendents can get a sample copy free by writing to-day. And we have a song book—easy payment plan, giving you all the time you want to pay for song books for Sunday Schools only. Let me tell you about it.

Sunday School Superintendents send for free sample "Hymns of Glory" and ask for song book easy payment plan. Address all orders to HAMP SEWELL, Atlanta, Ga.

ASTHMA

If you have asthma simply send me your name and address and nearest express office and I will at once send you FREE, to try, my regular $1.00 bottle LANE'S CURE FOR ASTHMA. Certain results; wonderful relief. Send no money, but let me prove my great remedy. Write to-day. You have nothing to lose; everything to gain.
 D. J. Lane, 338 Lane Bldg., St. Marys, Kansas.

CALENDAR.

Woman's Home Mission Society, Annual Meeting for North Mississippi Conference, Columbus, Miss., April 2-6, for Louisiana, New Orleans, La., May 5-8.
 General Board of Missions, Nashville, Tenn., April 27.
 General Conference of Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Asheville, N. C., May 4, 1910.
 The World's Missionary Conference, Edinburgh, Scotland, June 14-24.
 Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, Annual Meeting, Tupelo, Miss., June 11.
 Seashore Divinity School, Seashore Campground, Biloxi, Miss., June 28-July 7.
 Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, Seashore Campground, July 21-31.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection; beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
 Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Grenada College.

Secure our catalogue before deciding where to place your daughter. Superior Home Comforts; Only Two Girls in a Room; Marvelous Health Record; Excellent Fine Arts Department; Strong Lyceum Course; Well-Adapted Library; Personal Attention to Individual Pupil; Superior Student Body as Associates; Carefully Selected Faculty; Strong Course of Study; Rates Reasonable; Constant Christian Influence permeating and dominating College Life.

Apply for rooms at once and thus secure choice of location.
 W. L. CLIFTON, A.B., Ph.D., President, Grenada, Miss.

Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Richl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd.,
 JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. NEW ORLEANS
 D. C. Godfrey Optician.

To California---$32.00 from New Orleans

One Way Colonist Tickets on Sale

March 1 to April 15, 1910, inclusive, via

Southern Pacific

Through Train Daily. Oil Burning Locomotives; Pullman Tourist Sleepers; Chair Cars and Coaches; Liberal Stopovers.

RATE PER BERTH IN TOURIST SLEEPER, NEW ORLEANS TO SAN FRANCISCO, $5.75.

Ask Your Agent for Information and Literature, or Write

J. H. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt.

NEW ORLEANS.

USE THE L. & A. RAILWAY

"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service

Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

Spend Your Summer in the

BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAINS

Pure water, no malaria or Mosquitos. Public and private baths. Select Southern guests solicited. Write for booklet.

OAK HALL,

E. BROWNLEE, Prop.

Tryon, N. C.

Columbus District, Mayhew, Miss., Young People's Missionary Movement April 27. Conf., Asheville, N. C., July 1-10.

Epworth League:

Cane, La., June 12, 13. Greenville District, Tunica, Miss., June 15-17.

Shreveport Dist. League Conf., Grand Aberdeen District, Pontotoc, Miss., June 20-24.

North Mississippi League Conference, Kosciusko, Miss., June 14-16.

District Conferences.

Jackson District, Canton, Miss., April 26-28.

Corinth District, Blue Mountain, Miss., May 3.

Oxford District, Abbeville, Miss., May 11-13.

Baton Rouge District, Bogalusa, La., May 28-30.

Meridian District, Fifth Street Church, Meridian, Miss., May 30-June 3.

Winona District, Moorhead, Miss., June 2-5.

Shreveport District, Zwolle, La., June 14.

Ruston District, Arcadia, La., July 1-3.

FITSCURED NO CURE NO PAY—12
 pay our small professional fee until cured and satisfied. Gorman,
 American Institute, 934 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

is a favorite wherever used. Tests show highest quality of any gelatine made. Pure and Healthful. Simplest to prepare, yet makes greatest variety of dishes. Hardens quickly and makes the tenderest of all jellies.

EVERY PACKAGE
MAKES TWO QUARTS

We want you
to try Crystal
Gelatine, now, in your own home.

Ask your grocer. If he does not keep it, send us his name and we will send you a free
sample package.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.
121A Beverly Street
BOSTON, MASS.

When in need of Pews or Pulpit Furniture for your church, write the SOUTHERN SEATING AND CABINET CO., Manufacturers of highgrade Church Furniture, JACKSON, TENN. Largest and oldest manufacturers of Church Furniture in the South.

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND THE SUMMER?

In this age of crowded cities, intense work and nervous strain, it becomes necessary for us to take during the year, a short recess—a play time. In our Southern climate we select the hot summer months to escape heat, dust, and summer diseases. During the months of June, July and August thousands of our Southern people seek "summer resorts." In most cases these resorts do not satisfy all the members of the family, in some cases none are pleased. Some go to the mountains, here may be found pure air, pure water, and inspiring scenery; but in most cases very little is furnished by way of entertainment. Energetic men and women, to say nothing of restless boys and girls, soon tire of scenery and hotel porches. A ramble over the mountains, a horse-back ride or drive, may give variety, but in most cases good horses are scarce and high, and roads are rough. To hang around hotel verandas, read and sleep during the day, dance and play cards most of the night, is not the kind of life that appeals to many of our Southern people, however attractive the scenery and however healthful the climate and water.

The mineral springs, advertising various restorative qualities, constitute the next class of resorts. These resorts are sought by families with a sick member. The family select the resort with reference to the sick member. On arrival at this resort they find themselves in the midst of disease of almost every type, and are afraid to drink from a dipper at the spring. The rooms they occupy they learn have just been vacated by some sick person, or the room of some very ill person joins them on the right or left. The porches are lined with pale faces and invalid chairs; to most sensitive natures this becomes more or less depressing.

As a rule, the guests are dependent upon one hotel and one management, which, during the "crowded season," becomes very independent and careless. Very few resorts furnish what is desired by all classes, young and old, sick and well. Many of the summer resorts have such an undesirable moral atmosphere that many parents hesitate to take their children to them; and many of our church people, young and old, return from the summer outing realizing that they have rather lost than gained in spiritual life. The question arises to thousands every summer: "Cannot a resort be provided that will meet the demands of all the people and come financially within the reach of people of limited finances?"

While I have not felt the necessity of seeking a resort for myself, my life-work furnishing me travel and recreation enough, I have arranged for my family to have a little outing each summer for years. However pleasant and healthful the home may be, the women and children of a home need to leave it for a little while each year for variety and to make it seem all the sweeter on their return. The question arises with us, as with thousands of others: "Where can we go to get what we desire within the price we can afford?" The number of young people seeking summer and winter resorts is increasing annually. Florida and California are thronged with visitors in winter; and lakes, mountains, and mineral springs are thronged in summer. In my travels over the country I have seen most of the resorts. I have breathed the fresh air, drunk from the clear, cool springs, and felt the inspiration of the mountains of North Carolina and Virginia. I have attended for longer or shorter time, most of our health resorts, and have seen the pale faces seeking health, the old folks seeking rest, and the youthful contingent seeking fun. I have been on the Hudson; I have been among the Berkshire hills and the Adirondacks, and have seen the natchals at rest; I have been on the lakes of Minnesota and Wisconsin, and have seen all classes, from the clerk in his cottage to the millionaire in his summer palace. I have been in California and Florida in winter, and have seen the old and infirm running from the winter snow and ice.

Among all the resorts for winter or summer that I have seen, I have found only one that in my judgment has caught the idea which is to characterize most of our summer and winter resorts in years to come. An ideal resort for a family is the one where every member of the family, old and young, sick and well, may find a congenial atmosphere and something to enjoy, and on the whole return to the home refreshed and invigorated in mind and body, with no loss of moral strength.

The resort to which I refer is Winona Lake, Indiana, about two hundred miles north of Louisville, Ky. This resort, having started in a very humble way, has in the hands of cultured, moral people, reached a state that was hardly dreamed of in its origin. The desire to meet the demands of the age led the founders to add one thing after another, until it has surpassed anything in America of its kind. In Chautauqua features it is pronounced by many superior to the Mother Chautauqua in New York, and as a Bible Conference is superior to Northfield, Mass.; and in features of wholesome amusement and entertainment not surpassed by any resort. Approximately two million dollars have been expended in its equipment and more than a hundred thousand people visit the grounds each summer. The place and its development seem providential. A beautiful fresh water lake, of something like ten miles in circumference, surrounded by hills and vales of splendid forest trees, led the Presbyterian Church to select it for an assembly ground. While it is operated by the Presbyterian Church, it is entirely undenominational and all churches are represented on its platform and among its guests. Out of one of the hills near the lake flowed a fine mineral spring, from which Mr. Studebaker, the wealthy wagon manufacturer, of South Bend, Ind., received great benefit; and as a benefit to others, at his own expense, he surmounted it with marble and made it a place of rare beauty, as well as of health. In his honor it is called the "Studebaker Spring," and its water has become famous. The beautiful fresh water lake, the attractive forest, the mineral water, make all who attend the assembly desire to return. A hotel of one hundred and twenty rooms was built and soon filled; cottages by the score were built; some costing thousands of dollars. Cement walks and graded streets followed. Owners of cottages began to sink wells in their cottage yards, and to their astonishment, at a depth of something like a hundred feet, pure, cool mineral water began to flow; they sank pipes into the wells and artesian springs of mineral water flowed at the door of the cottage. This discovery at once attracted the attention of business men and a company was soon formed, hundreds of acres of land purchased, and the work of this marvelous resort began in earnest. Here are the results, similar to which may be worked out in other places.

Men of wealth were interested—such men as Mr. Studebaker, of the South Bend wagon fame; Mr. Heinz, of the "57 Variety" pickle fame, and other wealthy men. Godly men of broad views were put at the head, with request to make suggestions to be carried out. Five big hotels in different parts of the great park were built in rapid succession, as patronage required; then followed boarding houses, restaurants, and other comfortable, though cheap, places of living; buildings were erected where preachers might have free lodging, and arrangements made for preachers of small salaries to have comfortable quarters at nominal cost. Schools of drawing, painting and sculpture; schools of music and elocution; schools of technology and agriculture, were started and supplied with teachers of fame, who desire to do some work while they rest, for the benefit of those who desire to mix a little study with play. The best Sunday school teachers and trainers, the most effective workers in all departments of church, mission and Sunday school, were brought there and houses set apart for all classes of work. A Chautauqua program was arranged for two weeks, to be conducted in a great auditorium to seat five thousand. During the Chautauqua period may be heard great orators, musicians and entertainers of our country. Following the Chautauqua is held each year a great Bible Conference, to which thousands of preachers from America and England come; the best of both continents is put upon the platform, and thousands hear the great messages. Ben Greet, with his Shakespearean plays in the groves; the Indians in the Hiawatha plays on the lake; the Venetian celebration on the lake; and scores of great features are given during the summer. In addition to these great entertainments and educational features, the most ample amusement features are furnished—golf links, tennis courts, croquet grounds, bowling alleys, foot ball, baseball, boating, fishing, bathing; in short, everything moral and wholesome that can entertain, amuse, educate and uplift may be found here at lowest possible cost in the sweetest and best social atmosphere. Hundreds of people from the South visit this great resort. I should like to see one like it in the South. The time has come for Christian people, who are crying stop, stop, along the line of sinful amusement, to furnish the people something wholesome.

Winona Lake Assembly is a financial proposition worth considering, outside of the beneficent work it accomplishes. Why not look into this? Let our Southern people try one summer at Winona Lake and get inspiration for a Southern Assembly. GEO. R. STUART.

ADVANCE IN MEDICAL SCIENCE.

Medical science has taken a great leap forward during the past century. A century ago very little was known of bacteria, bacilli, germs and of the methods now universally recognized for fighting such invasions. They used to let a man die of diseases that are easily curable to-day. In no branch of medicine has greater progress been made than in treating those addicted to the use of morphine and liquor. Such human slaves are now looked upon as diseased rather than naturally vicious; and down in Atlanta, Ga., there is a man who for over thirty years has been treating successfully nearly all who have been brought to him. One may be from the world's standpoint, a human wreck. But Dr. Woolley will put new life in him and make him a man—with a righteous abhorrence for the degrading influence of drugs. If you know of anyone in your neighborhood who needs to be uplifted from the mire of despair, won't you write to Dr. B. M. Woolley, No. 21 C. Victor Sanitarium, Atlanta, Ga., and give him the person's name and address?

Fluttering Hearts

"I have had heart trouble for 40 years; after taking 18 bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I am entirely cured, and to-day I do not feel the slightest effect of heart trouble." DAVID FRAZIER, State Soldiers Home, Erie, Co., Ohio.

Fluttering indicates a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the heart. Like palpitation, shortness of breath, pain in side and shoulder, it is frequently followed by the worst form of heart disease; therefore it should not be neglected.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is a most reliable heart medicine. It strengthens and regulates the heart action; stimulates the digestive organs; and increases the circulation.

The first bottle will benefit; if not, your druggist will return your money.

Darsam Bros. Coal Co.

COAL, COKE AND ANTHRACITE,

2217 Calhoun Street, New Orleans.

Phone Main 1552, P. O. Box 1406.

VISIT

MINERAL WELLS

—For—

HEALTH AND PLEASURE

AND

WEST TEXAS

—For—

FINE AGRICULTURAL LAND REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SUNDAY DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,
General Passenger Agent,

DALLAS - - - - - TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a.m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p.m.

FOR

NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.
SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW ON SALE.

Use MAGIC FISH LURE. Best fish bait ever discovered. Write to-day and get a box to help introduce it. Agents wanted. J. F. Gregory, Dept. 4, St. Louis, Mo.

Stop La Grippe!

Before it Stops You.

Take
JOHNSON'S
Chill and Fever Tonic
Knocks it up every time.
Your money back if it fails.
Get it to-day!

50c at Druggists.

ESTABLISHED 1858
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

PLYMYER
CHURCH BELLS
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWEEETER, MORE DUR-
ABLE, LOWER PRICE.
OUR FREE CATALOGUE
TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Bowlden
CHURCH & SCHOOL BELLS
Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

FREE
Beautiful Organ Book
Shows organs in natural colors of the wood. Tells all about the finest and sweetest toned organs made. Send me your name and address and I will send you this book and write you full particulars.
Send organs anywhere in the United States on free trial and have hundreds of satisfied customers in all parts of the country. I sell.
Direct from Factory
On Easy Terms
Less than ten cents a day will pay for a Purcell organ.
My direct price beats them all—saves you jobbers' and retailers' profits. Don't decide until you get my proposition.
I. S. PURCELL, Factory to Home Piano and Organ Man
No. 6, Western Ave., Chicago, Ill.

WOMAN'S BEAUTY

A woman's beauty is dependent on health. To keep her beauty, she must keep her health. Sickness and suffering leave their trace, pain leaves its marring imprint. Ladies have come to realize that to be beautiful and attractive they must give attention to physical fitness and health.

Unless women suffer from ailments designated generally as "female complaint," thinking it is the natural lot of their sex to suffer.

This is a mistaken belief. Nature invariably has a cure for her children's ills. Thousands of women have found permanent relief for their sufferings by using that natural, herbal medicine, Wine of Cardui. Cardui is a pure, non-intoxicating remedy, specifically for women, which has grown steadily in favor during the past fifty years. Letters pour in every day, extolling the gratitude of the writers, who have been relieved of their misery and restored to health.

When you are nervous or sick, get Cardui from your druggist, and try it. N. B. Upon request, we will send you, free of charge, our valuable, illustrated 64 page book "Home Treatment for Women." In it you will find valuable information regarding the treatment of female troubles.
Address: Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Epworth League

By Rev. Wm. H. Coleman.

TOPIC FOR APRIL 24.

THE TRUE DIGNITY OF HUMAN LIFE: THE NEGRO.

(Woman's Home Mission Topic.)

Amos 9:7; Ps. 87:4.

I.

The true dignity of human life is revealed in the fact that God created man in his own image and breathed into him the breath of life, and man became a living soul. (Gen. 1:26, 27; 2:7.) The thought is further stated by the Psalmist in the 8th Psalm, where we read that man is created a little lower than the angels (Elohim, God), and is crowned with glory and honor. And not only are we thus created, but in 1 John, 3:1, 2, we are taught that, through his tender love for us as a father, he hath bestowed upon us the privilege of being the children of God, and that it doth not yet appear what we shall be.

These thoughts of the true dignity of human life are sublime and soul inspiring and sufficient to lift every human being up into such an appreciation of his divine heritage as to enable him to place and keep his life in harmony with God's great plan for it.

II.

But not only is this true of one individual or the individuals of one race, but of all races.

Our first reference (Amos 9:7) teaches us that God is no respecter of races. He is saying to Israel, the "chosen nation," "Ye are to me as the children of the Ethiopians, or the Philistines, or the Syrians." That is, as a nation, I love one just as well as another; the real difference is in moral qualifications, and not in national relationship.

In the second reference (Ps. 87:4) we are taught that all nations, including Egypt, Babylon, Philistia, Tyre and Ethiopia, shall be reconciled to God and shall come into the same relationship to him that Israel sustains.

In Acts 17:26 we read that he hath made of one blood all nations of men, etc. In Rev. 7:9 we read that the great multitude of the redeemed shall come from ALL NATIONS.

Therefore we need to lay aside all national and racial prejudices and to remember that God hath placed the true dignity of human life upon every race and every individual.

III.

Our lesson for to-day applies this especially to The Negro.

Much has been said and is being said about the "Race Problem," a great deal of which is somewhat circumlocutory. If we are to solve the problem we must get right at the heart of it at once, although it may reveal things that we do not want to see. Their existence is not blotted out by shutting our eyes to them.

First, we need to recognize the possible dignity of the negro race; secondly, we need to get rid of the selfishness and sins of the white race that are helping to keep the negro in degradation; thirdly, we need to then teach the negro both by precept and example.

These three principles state the formula for the solution of the "Race Problem." As to the first, it is a well known and sad fact that to-day the negro race is degraded physically, mentally, and morally. Physically he does not observe the laws of hygiene, and is living in filth, disease, decay and death. I recently heard a physician state that 50 per cent of the race has tuberculosis. Mentally his ideas are crude and flow in low channels of thought. Morally his ideals are low and his practices degrading.

But is there any hope of lifting him out of these conditions? Is he capable of a better life? Yes, to both questions. This affirmative answer is attested not only by the Scriptures to which we have referred, but also by commendable progress that has been already made by some of this race.

In the second place, we must realize that the amelioration of the conditions of the negro race must be largely through and by the white race. We are stronger, more highly developed, more highly favored. And the stronger always owes more to the weaker than the weaker does to the stronger.

What do we owe the negro. (1) To lay aside the selfishness and sin that has caused the white race to impede the upward progress of the negro race. (2) To teach him the nobler principles of life and lead him into loftier ways.

That selfishness that causes us to want the negroes to remain dependent so that we may be served, and that causes us to want him to remain ignorant so that we may get his service for a trifle and then pay that trifle in cast-off garments and last year's hats is SIN.

That selfishness that causes the landholder or the merchant to want the negro to remain ignorant and poor and dependent in order that he may profit by his labor, is sin. It is a species of covetousness that makes a man cruel and dishonest. It not only cheats the negro, but it discourages his honesty and his efforts to place around his family environments conducive to their physical, mental and moral improvement.

Then the viler sins of poor, degraded men unworthy of their race—sins that humiliate the white race and degrade the black race—should be punished by a sentiment that will close every door of decent society and of every respectable home against the guilty—a sentiment that will cause both races to spurn him until he reforms and becomes a true man; for only by such a strong, wholesome sentiment to preserve the innocent and to help to lead the guilty to repentance can such sins be annihilated, and until they are annihilated, neither race, as a whole, can fully know the true dignity of human life.

If we want the negro to be honest we must be honest with him, and then require him to be honest.

If we want him to be moral, we must be moral with him, and then require him to be moral.

If we want him to demonstrate in his life the true dignity of the human life, let him first see it demonstrated in us, and then we can teach him how it may be realized in his life.

If we are to accomplish the great work our Lord has for us to do in lifting up every fallen life, in strengthening every weak life, in encouraging every discouraged life, and in helping whole nations, as well as individuals, to realize and enjoy the true dignity of human life, it is necessary for every Christian soldier, regardless of age or sex, to kindly, yet positively, stand uncompromisingly against every sin and for every principle of honesty, purity, righteousness and godliness.

LAYMEN'S MEETING AT DURANT, MISS.

A meeting of the pastors and lay leaders of the Durant District is called for May 18th, at 11 a. m., at Durant, Miss.

Several outside speakers are expected, in addition to the good material of the district. We wish to plan and carry out a forward movement in the work of the Church in the bounds of the district. Everybody interested in the work of the Church is invited to attend and take part in the discussions. Special assignments of the work will be sent to those who are appointed to open the various topics.

PARHAM WILLIAMS,

District Lay Leader.

N. G. AUGUSTUS, P. E.

Durant, Miss.

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also.

COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.

1300-1302

DRYADES STREET.

PHONES—Jackson 1080—1081.

WE SHIP ON APPROVAL
without a cent deposit, prepay the freight and allow 10 DAYS FREE TRIAL.
IT ONLY COSTS 1 cent to learn our method of prices and marvelous offers on highest grade 1910 model bicycles.
FACTORY PRICES Do not buy a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you write for our large catalog and learn our wonderful proposition on first sample bicycle going to your town.
RIDER AGENTS everywhere are making big money exhibiting and selling our bicycles. We sell cheaper than any other factory.
TIRES, Coaster-Brake rear wheels, lamps, repairs and all sundries at half normal prices. Do not wait write to-day for our special offer. Mead Cycle Co., Dept. M. 774, Chicago.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing by hand—no breakage.
WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOG
LE PAGE
INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS
TORONTO, CANADA

ILLINOIS CENTRAL

WILL SELL TICKETS AT RATE $32.00

To San Francisco, Los Angeles and other California Points

March 1st - April 15th

To Portland, Seattle, Spokane, $45.95,

And Other Points in Oregon, Washington, Utah, and Wyoming.
LIBERAL STOPOVERS.

Full Particulars.

Ticket Office, 141 St. Charles
PHONE MAIN 3618

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

On Saturday morning at 8 o'clock, March 5, 1910, at Oakvale, Miss., Mrs. MADLINE M. BADON departed this life, and went to a better clime where there is no more death, sickness and sorrow, but where all is well. She had the privilege of living longer than her allotted time, having reached the ripe age of 75 years, 10 months and 5 days, when death came. She was born near Darbun, in Pike County, Miss., April 30, 1834, and in this community she lived all of her long life. Sister Badon was the mother of seven children, all boys. She and Brother Wm. G. Ellzey were united in holy matrimony Nov. 11, 1852, and their home was blessed with three children. Brother Ellzey's soul took its flight, and she was left a widow for about five years. She and Mr. Henry B. Badon were joined in holy matrimony, Dec. 6, 1863, and their home, too, was blessed with four children, and then God called Brother Badon from her to a better land. She then was a widow until death. Her maiden name was Madeline May. She joined the M. E. Church, South, early in life, and has been a devoted Christian all the way. Oh, how we hate to see our loved ones put beneath the sod, but God's will and not ours be done. We expect one day to meet her in the land of pure delight, where we will never part again. Her two husbands and four children preceded her to the grave, but she has gone to be with them in heaven. Two brothers and three sons survive her. She leaves a host of grandchildren, friends and relatives to mourn their loss. Her body was laid to rest in the old home graveyard near Darbun, Miss., there to sleep till Jesus comes. The writer officiated at the funeral, which was attended by a great concourse of people to mourn the loss of this good woman.

Her friend and brother in Christ,
HILARY WESTBROOK.
Oakvale, Miss.

Mrs. EDITH OPHELIA, wife of C. M. Davis, aged fifty years, left her earthly house on Feb. 28, 1910, for "a house not made with hands." She joined the Church at fifteen years of age. Sister Davis was a great, but patient sufferer. On Nov. 3, 1904, she walked her last step. It was my privilege to visit her several times during the last fourteen months of her illness. I said to her one day, "I am glad to see you bear your afflictions so patiently and cheerfully," and her reply was, "Well, I take it for my lot; the Lord knows best, and I don't think that I ought to make others miserable because I have to suffer." "Our people die well." She leaves a husband, one son and two daughters, one stepson and two step-daughters, and many other loved ones and friends to mourn their loss. The body of our deceased sister was laid to rest in the old family cemetery near Hopewell Church in Clark County, Miss. Weep not, loved ones, as those who have no hope, but be ready for the re-union by and by.

M. R. JONES.

The subject of this sketch, Brother JOHN T. ELLIS, was born in Callo-way County, Ky., May 24, 1832. Of his early life we know but little. He joined the Methodist Church when quite young, but in early manhood moved to Louisiana, and did not move his membership. He settled near the shores of Lake Bienville in what was frontier country at that time. Being one of the pioneers of this part of the State, his sterling character was as a tower of strength for civic righteousness. He was married in early life to a Miss Wimberly with whom he lived happily for many years. Through her influence and prayers he gave his heart to God and again united with the Methodist Church and to the day of his death lived a consistent member. Brother Ellis was a man who filled his place in God's plan, doing with vigor what came to his hand. He had a talent for making people cheerful. His cheerful face and hopeful outlook were simply irresistible. At the home of his life-long friend, Brother Robertson, he departed this life, Oct. 22, 1909. We laid him beside his companion in the old Andrew's Chapel cemetery, to await the resurrection of the just.

J. B. FULTON.

WILLIAM L. IVY, of Mannassa, Miss., was born Dec. 26, 1871, and departed this life, March 5, 1910. He leaves a wife, one daughter and many other relatives, but they know where to look for him, for he was a very devoted Christian. Brother Will had been afflicted for some time, and his death was no surprise to us. It was my privilege to be his pastor for fourteen months, and he would often tell me that he thought he was going when he would have a severe attack of asthma. When the end came he was in Meridian, Miss., had been carried there for medical treatment, but his disease was so complicated that nothing could be done to save him. He told his brother when he left him in care of the doctors that he could tell the loved ones at home that all was well. His body was brought back to Mannassa Cemetery and laid to rest by the side of his little boy who preceded him to the spirit land. I do not remember having seen a larger congregation at a funeral. We have lost a brother, but he has gone home. Weep not, loved ones.

M. R. JONES.

"ALONE, BUT NOT ALONE."

Amid the lonely hours that come to me, I think of one so dear. I cannot conceal the burden that pains my heart. Though in dust she now lies, she continues to live in the hearts made warm, and in the lives made better. The memory of her kind deeds shall ever live. Sometimes there comes a sudden gloom to me; on days of brightest cheer. But I realize that no life is so bright or full of joy, that it does not have its pain. The knowledge of duty done, lights my soul, and the sunlight of another day inspires me to hattle on. The Lord never permits a temptation to assail us from which there is no way of escape. We are endowed with refined sensibilities. It becomes our duty then, to shun all evil with the strongest determination, realizing that some detrimental foe pervades constantly our fleeting course, with an incentive to obliterate our fondest sense of hope and duty. Strong sensibilities of devotion and the example by action equip us fully for any emergency of life. We how in humble submission and strive to emulate this one who sleeps.

R. R. SEBREN.

Harrisville, Miss.

CATHERINE, wife of J. W. Barlow and daughter of Thomas and Nancy Hilton, died March 7, 1910. The funeral service was conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. W. P. Sandifer.

It was a sad sight to see two corpses in the church at the same time. We would say to Brother and Sister Hilton, weep not for your dear child. She is at rest with God. Sister Barlow was 70 years old and had been a faithful member of the Church for 54 years. She leaves her aged husband and children and grandchildren and many friends to mourn their loss. She is gone from us, but we know where to find her. This is the fourth member of our church on the Harrisville Charge that has died since Conference. The others were Brothers Geo. Prestidge, John Colquhoun and Dr. C. R. Varman. These brethren, like Sister Barlow, were spared to a ripe old age. They were faithful to the church and true to God.

R. T. NOLEN, P. C.

Sunday School

(Continued from Page 10.)

for the statement of Christ's exclusive knowledge is followed at once by his universal invitation, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

This gracious invitation itself is its own best commentary. It is the spontaneous exclamation of the heart of the Son, whose function it is to show men the Father. It should be read and re-read until something of the rest which it offers steals into the soul; and above all things, it should cause us to approach in spirit unto him who says, "come" that we may learn of him that meekness and lowliness of heart, without which none can find or keep rest and peace of heart. It may be of interest to note the parallelism between Christ's words here and the following from the Apocryphal book of Ecclesiasticus, (51:23), in which Wisdom cries:

"Draw near unto me, ye unlearned, And lodge in the house of instruction.

Put your neck under the yoke, And let your soul receive instruction.

Behold with your eyes, How that I labored but a little and found for myself much rest."

II. The Lesson's Message.—Points to Impress.

1. Beware of all success in achievement which is purchased by failure in character. Christ might have "won" these cities and the Jewish world by falling in line with their expectations of a Messiah, but in so doing he would have failed miserably as the Son of God and Savior of men. This temptation he overcame in the wilderness; so must we in the world. "How far high failure transcends the bounds of low success!"

2. Man's free moral agency is ever a thing to be reckoned with, rendering large results sometimes impossible. Our duty is to bring the strongest possible Christian pressure to bear upon those we touch, leaving the results to God.

3. Doom, temporal and eternal, will surely follow the rejection of Christ, the degree of which will be determined by the extent of our opportunity. Hell will be a horrible place then, for us of to-day.

4. Worldly wisdom, selfish prudence, self-satisfaction, or contentment with mere worldly pleasure and prosperity are the deadly sins, blinding us to spiritual truth, and causing the things of God to be hid from us.

5. Openness of heart toward truth, simplicity, sincerity, is the gateway to glorious revelations of the Son and the Father to us.

6. All need "rest for the soul;" something or some one to still the restless longings and quiet the discontent of the heart. We dream that things can, but the possession of all that our hearts crave would still leave us craving as before. Contact with Christ alone can quiet the troubled waters, and teach us the secret of peace, "Thou hast made us for thyself, O God, and our hearts are restless till they rest in thee." Have I found rest in him?

HORSE-HAIR SNAKES.

Has it ever occurred to you how hard it is to kill a falsehood? Let some one start an untrue story, and it seems that the very winds pick it up and carry it along.

An amusing story is told of Prof. Rose, the prominent Southern Educator. Prof. Rose is a profound student of natural history, and while spending a vacation at Monteagle, Tenn., he indulged in his favorite pastime of collecting and studying rare specimens of flowers, insects, etc. In this way he became acquainted with the sage of the community, an old farmer who had a "liking for nature" himself. Thinking to surprise his learned friend, the farmer presented him one day with a curiosity in the form of a long, slender worm. Recognizing the specimen at a glance, Prof. Rose called off the long Latin name of the innocent worm. A heated argument ensued in which the farmer stoutly maintained that the animal in question was only a horse-hair turning into a snake. The learned naturalist brought all of the wisdom of the scientists to bear on his opponent, but to no avail. The farmer knew it, you could not fool him! The Professor who, by the way, is quite as genial as he is learned, was completely vanquished in the argument, or rather in the dispute, to the intense amusement of his onlooking friends.

Some years ago an unscrupulous competitor started the report that Coca-Cola contained dope. There was not a particle of truth in it, but the wind caught it up and wafted it on. Wishing to kill the report, the Coca-Cola Company has published the analysis made by chemists of the leading Colleges and Universities and of the State and City Boards of Health throughout America. In spite of the fact that every chemist who has ever analyzed it clearly states that it contains "no dope" of any kind, you can still hear occasionally the old false rumor. If you would like to know the truth about Coca-Cola, write for a free copy of "Truth about Coca-Cola." Address the Coca-Cola Company, Atlanta, Ga.

DON'T BE WITHOUT WATER.

There is no need of the property holders of this city being any longer without water and sewer connections. This has been the one great distress of our city, not being able to have modern improvements in our homes. But now there is no need of any more complaints along this line, as the city is perfectly willing to connect free any property with the water main, carrying the pipes to the property holders line, without any cost whatever to them.

The popular firm of C. C. Hartwell & Co., on Baronne Street, are making a liberal proposition to connect the sewer pipes free of charge. They also go farther, and agree to do all plumbing and laying of pipes necessary to connect the house with the sewer and water on monthly payments. This enables the property holders to not only put the property occupied by him but any property he has for rent in modern shape, with practically no outlay of ready cash. People interested in this proposition should consult C. C. Hartwell & Co., for a detailed explanation.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, APRIL 28, 1910.

C. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

VOL. 57—No. 17.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2829.

LOUISIANA DELEGATES TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Top Row (left to right): Dr. W. L. Weber, Hon. H. H. White, Rev. Paul M. Brown. Center: The Rev. F. N. Parker, D.D. Bottom Row: Judge R. R. Reed and Rev. N. E. Joyner.

Christian Advocate.

Published for the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DIRECTIONS.

Correspondents will please direct all communications intended for the Editor to 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Communications intended for the Business Department should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Write with ink, and only on one side of the paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after two weeks, notify us, and we will make it right. Papers will be continued unless subscribers order otherwise.

A TRIBUTE.

Lines in Memory of the Late Rev. W. W. Morse.

"I realize the gospel I have preached
Is real, and is no sham," he said; and then,
"What now I feel is more than ecstasy—
A near the heavenly bliss of souls redeemed;
As if when Death had fixed his awful clutch
Upon the earthly tenement of clay,
The Soul, envialed with the spark Divine,
Swung poised within the very verge of Heaven,
And with perception quickened by the dawn
Of perfect day, he looked and almost saw—
He harked and messages of sweetest peace
Were wafted from beyond the jasper walls
To call his spirit to the native land.
How fit this climax to a life so spent
In service to his Master, Lord and God.
By those who knew him best he was best loved,
Yet wakened chords responsive in the hearts
Of all the circle he did touch in life.
He well did sound, said those who heard him preach,

The master of judgment, mercy and truth;
But in his last great fight and victory won,
By patience, and by cheerful, dauntless trust,
More potent preached for Jesus and the right,
Than e'er he did in eloquence and words.

ARTHUR L. WILLIAMS.

Tylertown, Miss.

A LITTLE JOURNEY.

By Rev. C. W. Carter, D.D.

Elbert Hubbard has written some very readable "Little Journeys" and thereby made himself quite a name among a certain sort of people. I do not propose, however, to enter the lists in competition with him. His clearness of style and "felicities of diction" I cannot attain unto, but I am not afraid to match any statement of truth and sincerity of motive with his or anybody's.

The occasion for this writing came about in this way. At our last Conference in December, Brother Nesom exacted a promise of me to come on Easter Sunday to preach and dedicate his new church at Vinton, La. After the work had been done he made me promise to "write up" the affair for publication in the Advocate. Hence these lines. I knew if there was no room in the Advocate for "my piece," I had left a large waste-basket in that office, and there was room in that for all I should send, and more. I felt certain that if it did not appear in the paper, that basket would save me the humiliation of receiving a type-written statement, "declined with thanks," and there was comfort in that prospect. I think readers of newspapers ought to be thankful that there is in every newspaper office a wide-mouth waste-basket, for if there is anything that works pro bono publico, it is that same basket. It is really a public benefactor, and when it is operated by a clear-headed editor, it saves the reading public an immense amount of time and worry. It generally makes writers mad to chuck their correspondence unceremoniously into the waste-basket, is it not wiser to offend a few than to outrage the feelings and tastes of the whole public? So, on my own theory, if this present communication never sees the light, I have the satisfaction of knowing that the readers of the Advocate will not have their tastes outraged nor their feelings "torn to tatters" by what I have written.

When a man gets on a train that is one hour and a half behind time and has to make connection with another train one hundred and twenty miles away, or spend twenty-four hours in a little village where there is no one he knows and no sight to see, he naturally becomes anxious and uneasy. My anxiety was somewhat relieved when my presiding elder got on and took a seat by me. We had hardly passed our greeting when a man approached and said to me: "I like your looks and want to talk to you," and then, turning to the presiding elder, said, "Will you please give me your seat for a little while?" I was at once translated to a state of wonderment, and the first thing he said caused my imagination to unfold her wings and prepare for a flight through the mazes of "frenzied finance." He said: "I represent a large financial institution of Wall Street, and want to put out five hundred thousand dollars in this section of Louisiana." I asked myself, "What is there in my looks to cause this stranger to broach such a subject to me?" I was nonplussed. I saw that he had made a mistake in thinking of me as a man accustomed to dealing in large sums of money, and I felt that I must disabuse his mind of that idea. So I said to him, "I suppose you can put out your money anywhere in Louisiana, but you are talking to the wrong man to help you. I am not a moneyed man, but a Methodist preacher!" The suddenness with which he changed his face had an effect on me like to that which comes to you when the air-brakes are put on a swiftly moving car: you don't know whether you are going forward, or backward, or up, or down, or sideways, or crossways. What he said next increased my wonder. Said he: "It has been the ambition of my life to be a Methodist steward." Think of that, ye half-hearted stewards, groaning under the burdens of stewardship, which you think a "cruel cross!" Here was a man who looked at it as an honor to be earnestly coveted, and I had no reason to doubt his sincerity. He then launched out upon the great sea of Methodism and sailed hither and thither, and here and yonder, showing himself familiar with all her ports. He talked interestingly of McTyeire and Summers, of Winfield and Andrew Hunter, of Marvin and Galloway, and of many others of our great Church. I wondered why it was that this man had never attained the object of his life's ambition, and I found out. He was not a Methodist.

While he was talking in this interesting way, our train was clipping along and slowly gaining time, and I made the connection with my next train with several minutes to spare. After getting settled, I began to ponder this question, "Why was it that this man was thrown in my way to-day?" I believe there is a purpose in all the ways of Providence, and holding that belief, I concluded that my meeting this man was for the purpose of drawing my mind away from the contingency of failing to make connection with the other train, and thus save me from anxiety and useless worry.

My trip was planned so as to avoid night travel, and before the sun went down I arrived at my destination for that day and found two warm friends at the station, who received me with a welcome that made me feel anew that the best thing a man can have, next to the grace of Christ, is the friendship of sincere hearts. I spent the night and half the next day in the elegant home and enjoyed the Christian hospitality of a man and wife as loyal to Christ and his Church as any two people I know. What a desolate world this would be without Christian homes!

The next day's journey ended at the home of Brother Nesom in the little town of Sulphur. He had arranged for us to go on to Vinton the next afternoon, and so I had twenty-four hours with him and his family. I never receive a heartier welcome than at the homes of my brethren of the ministry. One of the first lessons they learn when they go to housekeeping is the Apostle's injunction: "Use hospitality one to another, without grudging." The hospitality of preachers to each other is one of those beautiful things which has come all the way down to us from apostolic times, and nobody yet has had the temerity to question its apostolic origin. The apostolic succession has been somewhat questioned by some hard-headed folks, but he would be an ingenious man who could find a break in the line of preachers' hospitality to one another anywhere from the present back to the time when Paul spent two weeks in Peter's home.

Brother Nesom's wise forethought had planned to give me the greatest sight and the biggest surprise of my life. So the next morning we rode about two miles north, where came in full view what is said to be the largest enterprise of its kind in the world. We were standing in the center of the Louisiana Sulphur Mine, with its huge furnaces and tall derricks and immense piles of sulphur covering the field of vision. The employees have been so strictly schooled that very little information in regard to the mine can be obtained from them. I learned from an outside source. The boring now reaches a depth of 900 feet. The steam from the great furnaces is pumped down into the sulphur to melt it, and then the melted sulphur is pumped to the surface and pours itself out into the open space prepared for its reception. The action of the atmosphere hardens it so that it has to be blasted into pieces before it can be transported. Special cars are made to transport it to market, and a special railroad, very appropriately called "The Brimstone Railway," delivers it to the railroads, and thus it finds its way to the markets of the world. No one on the outside knows how much sulphur is being taken out of this mine. I stood by one pile, which measured 320 feet long, 112 feet wide, and 80 feet high, and saw in different parts of the field five other piles, which looked to be as large, and the melted sulphur pouring out of the pipes in various places. I did not attempt to compute the number of dollars represented on that field. At one time our General Board of Missions had a clear title to one-twentieth of the product of that mine, and when I heard that in some way the Board had been eliminated from its ownership it made me real heart-sick. But I have come to the conclusion that the elimination of our Board was a providential interference. A missionary society with the proceeds of one-twentieth of that mine would be the ruin of the Church. Rich endowments are good for schools, and they are the only things that can make independent newspapers, but an endowed church or missionary society would not only be a failure, but most positive evil. This sulphur mine is not the only big thing in Louisiana.

There is the Avery Salt Mine, one of the largest mines of pure rock salt to be found anywhere. There are the Jennings Oil Fields, still pouring out oil in paying quantities, and the Winfield Marble quarries. As for timber, the Louisiana exhibit at the great fair in St. Louis took the first premium. Lastly, in 1915, we are going to have in New Orleans a Panama Exposition, which will eclipse anything of the kind the world ever saw. And yet there are people to the east of us who regard Louisiana as a series of mudholes, where alligators and snakes and turtles and mosquitoes and malaria and swamp fevers reign supreme. There are some people whose ignorance is too crass to write about!

Brother Nesom and I went on in the afternoon to Vinton and spent the night with Brother Davis and wife, staunch Methodists of the Mississippi brand who came years ago from Wilkinson County. Easter day dawned bright and beautiful. All nature seemed responsive to the great fact of which the day was a commemoration, for there was abundant and joyous new life making itself felt in every direction. At the appointed hour, a large audience assembled in a new, well-appointed and handsomely decorated church. The music was of a high order of merit, and the people listened forty-five minutes to the old, yet ever new, evangel. After the sermon, the president of the Board of Trustees presented the house free of debt, and it was solemnly set apart for the worship of God. I was glad to be in that service, for when I was presiding elder in that region our people had no house in which to worship. Thus it is that the church goes on making history that is the everlasting puzzle of her enemies. On their theory, this history ought to have stopped long ago. In fact, it ought never to have started. They have proved that the virgin-birth of Jesus was a myth—that his miracles were the works of an expert in legerdemain—that his resurrection was a freak-thought of a frenzied imagination, and therefore the history has no right to be. But it is, and "there's the rub." With the supernatural facts in the life of Jesus cut out, the history the Church has made, and is daily making, is unaccountable. Its meaning is more mysterious than the meaning of the Sphinx on the plains of Egypt. With those facts left in, the meaning of church history is not only easily read, but the projection of those facts into the realm of human thought and action necessitated that history.

Brother Nesom and I returned to Sulphur that afternoon to hold an Easter service in the evening. That service was a genuine surprise. Only once before have I seen a house so packed with people; and the preacher said one-third of those who came could not get in. The music, vocal and instrumental, was superb. I really believe that the prospect of hearing that music was the charm that drew that crowd. Still the people listened patiently for three-quarters of an hour while I spoke on Acts 4:33.

Thus ended this very pleasant journey. I met and held converse with several of our young preachers. It made me glad to meet them, for I like young preachers. I was once a young preacher myself, and I have never forgotten that fact. I know something of their difficulties and discouragements—something of their labors and successes—something of their hopes and fears. I rejoice in the fact that we old men in the ministry have no need to be disquieted that we are soon to leave the Ark of God in the hands of the young preachers of the Louisiana Conference. "They are the messengers of the churches and the glory of Christ."

Natchitoches, La.

TOM WATSON IN ERUPTION.

By Rev. W. W. Pinson, D.D., One of the Missionary Secretaries of the M. E. Church, South.

In the March number of Tom Watson's Magazine, the editor devotes fourteen pages to his favorite theme, foreign missions. The title indicates a fine sense of humor. It is ironically called "Some Additional Facts About Foreign Missions." Some of us have been amused at Mr. Watson's antics. But we have been so busy trying to keep up with the onrush of missionary progress and co-operating with the serious men who are trying to lift the world up, that we have had no time to give to a man who is doing his futile best to hinder, like one trying to prevent the world from growing beautiful by shouting inuendoes at oncoming spring. But even the act of being ridiculous can be overdone. Coarse abuse of good men and base insinuations against noble women, and fiction set forth as fact, even though decked out with cap and bells, become intolerable. No one can object to honest criticism.

Every cause needs it as a correction of human error. None is too sacred to welcome and profit by it. The cause of missions is in human hands, and men will blunder. No honest man will object to having his blunders pointed out. But criticism is one thing and abuse and slander are quite another.

Tom Watson is a brilliant writer and lecturer—no doubt of that. He is one of the sort that "bear" starchy stuff about his wings to pollen thee and sting thee fertile. Unfortunately he is dazzled by his own brilliance and confused by his own starchy stuff, which is sometimes only mist. He loves the "garish light," but his chief delight is in his sting. He sits up nights to keep it keen and wakes early in search for victims. He is like death in that he loves a shining mark; it shows off his wings and works his sting to advantage.

Even a bull can make a quick reputation in a china shop. Destruction is a short route to notoriety. A fool with a torch and no conscience can blacken and destroy the laborious achievements of a thousand years of toil.

The man who does things takes risks, makes mistakes, but pushes on seeking the one narrow, right way. The man who would hinder or destroy needs only recklessness, brass and the heart of a vandal. The genius of a Burbank may require years to produce an ideal flower, then the single blunder of an open gate and the snout of a pig can destroy what genius and earth and sky have combined to achieve. In vain we ask, why did God make pigs? and if he must do it, why did he give them snouts? Unless it be for the use that David Harum says fleas are to a dog: they make him forget that he is a dog. The pigs make us remember we are human and that we must be careful to watch the pigs.

History shows us the two classes, viz.: those who build, and those who tear down. Those who build have been bated, betrayed, tortured, crucified, have had to use the trowel in one hand and the sword in the other. Yet the builders win, and the world grows beautiful, because deep hid in human hearts always there is the beauty of high and holy ideals, seeking to express itself amid the ugliness of a dull unseeing world, and refusing to yield to knout or cross or fagot.

"Right forever on the scaffold, wrong forever on the throne!"

Yet that scaffold sways the future, for within the dim unknown
Standeth God, amid the shadows, keeping watch above his own."

It is worthy of note that while Tom Watson has been amusing himself criticising missions, the cause has been going forward with leaps and bounds. If he continues to be as successful in slowing up the movement as he has been up to date, he will soon have to hire an army of critics in order to keep the whole line of the procession in view. He shows signs of working overtime already, and hasn't yet seen a mission field, been on a mission board, nor even found time to engage in a public debate with one who has studied the subject first hand.

He is concerned that "Go-Forward," the clamorous little screamer, costs the M. E. Church, South, twenty-three hundred ($2,300) dollars a year, and that it "wants to see the American contributions to foreign missions speedily advance to the $80,000,000 mark." Well, if it costs the people called Methodists $2,300 to publish a paper to advocate the cause of missions, because they give it to subscribers cheaper than it can be printed, what must it cost the dear people to have the privilege of listening to the howling Dervish of the Jeffersonian wail of his pessimism? Is the war on missions so dear to Mr. Watson's heart that he is willing to publish his magazine at less than cost? We have a lurking suspicion that his fight for the dear, misguided people will end when there is a deficit of $2,300 annually. But when did Go-Forward advocate the giving of $80,000,000 annually by Americans for foreign missions? Perhaps the Wizard of the Wireless will point out this "fact" for us. No one connected with Go-Forward either desires or expects Americans to give $80,000,000 a year for foreign missions any more than we expect Hon. Tom Watson to state facts correctly. Forty millions is as far as we have dared go; but when Mr. Watson only exaggerates his facts a hundred per cent, we feel hopeful that his conscience is getting in working order.

Mr. Watson is greatly concerned over the mercenary conversions to Christianity. He claims to believe that they are all of that sort in the Orient. We should like to give him "some more facts" to digest and interpret.

During the Boxer uprising, 10,000 Christian Chinese suffered martyrdom for their faith. Men and women suffered their tongues cut out rather than use those tongues to deny Jesus Christ. They suffered their hands cut off rather than use them to hold a stick of burning incense before their idol. They suffered inexpressible tortures, and went to death unflinchingly when a single word would have saved them.

There is a Chinese surgeon in Soochow, China, who was educated in one of our much-maligned mission schools, and who is practicing in one of our awfully wicked mission hospitals. He is said to get the munificent salary of $50 a month, Mexican money.

Some time since he was offered $500 a month by the government to teach one of their schools. He did not even consider it. He preferred to be where he could preach to the souls of his people while healing their bodies.

Mr. T. H. Yun, that princely Korean, now in this country, surrendered the emoluments of office and refused a portfolio to teach in a Methodist mission school, and actually insisted on doing it without salary. This, too, when he is the best loved and most honored Korean alive.

These facts could be multiplied. Does it stand to reason that men who cannot be bought away from Christian service by money, office, nor by life itself, can be bought away from heathenism by a bit of rice?

What interesting reading the following would be: "The Hon. Thomas E. Watson, who several times ran for office before his conversion, has become so concerned for the children of the poor who are being neglected by the hypocritical scoundrels for foreign missions, that he has just refused a portfolio in the cabinet of President Taft in order to devote himself to Christian work in the slums of this city. He has also declined an offer of $200 an evening for a series of lectures that he may give his time to assisting the Salvation Army in their street meetings."—Atlanta Constitution.

We would rejoice over such a consummation "more than over ninety and nine just persons who need no repentance." While we are not the possessor of a calf, fat or lean, we should feel like slaughtering every Buff Orpington on the hill, and while dancing is not in our line, being a Methodist, we should, like Weclum McClure, in Bonnie Briar Bush, cut a Highland fling or two, out of sheer delight.

But, alas! Mr. Watson shows such familiarity with the prices at which even Americans and Europeans have been persuaded to change creeds, that we are alarmed lest he himself should follow the example of so many others and be tempted from the straight and narrow way, or that his opinions might be warped by mercenary considerations. May the angels and ministers of grace defend us from such a calamity. If this stronghold of our faith in humanity should give way, if this signal fire of our optimism should die out, there would then be nothing left us but black pessimism and despair.

Here is a sample of his facts: "Missionaries who have spent their lives in China have given up in despair, admitting their inability to comprehend the Oriental mind and character. Griffith John, Hudson Taylor, Moule and many others have admitted that the whole thing is a failure—the Orientals professing Christianity for what they can get out of it." The only truth in this is in the spelling and punctuation. As to the rest, we might quote Mr. Watson's own language concerning a missionary statement: "In my time I have done much reading, and come across some colossal lies; but never have I seen in print a bigger lie than that," self-respect forbids me to use such language. I will say, however, that any one wishing to perform the Munchausen act in an artistic manner will find an excellent model in this modern Don Quixote of the ink bottle.

We should think the father of that numerous family of whom Ananias was a conspicuous member would tremble as he looks over the proof sheets of Tom Watson's Magazine when it is exploiting facts about foreign missions, lest its exaggerations of the household characteristic should make the rest of the family tree look as tame as a Christmas tree in a mission Sunday school, and ordinary commercial and political mendacity to be "stale, flat and unprofitable."

Griffith John has spent more than fifty years in China. There has been no more optimistic and enthusiastic missionary than he. On his first visit home, they offered him inducements to stay. This was his reply:

"So far as personal comforts are concerned, I could have more here than in China. It would be the easiest thing in the world to find among my own people a most comfortable home and a very useful sphere of labor. But to tell you candidly, I should feel that I was descending from a much higher platform. Even the position of a Spurgeon is inferior to ours."

At his jubilee in 1905, after fifty years' experience, this is what he said: "A missionary life is the greatest of all possible lives. If a messenger from God should come and tell me my life was to be spared for another fifty years, China should have them all. I am an optimist because of what I see—the changes that have taken place these fifty years. Sorrow, Loss! I have known the bitterest—wife—children—I have gone through it all. Disappointments—dangers—many! But I am an optimist still in spite of it all."

Does that look like giving up in despair? This was the man whom the London Times honored by sending a representative two or three times a year to interview him. The Wizard of the Wireless does not need to go to that trouble. He can, by absent treatment, find out from Dr. John things the doctor himself was not even aware he had ever thought of.

Hudson Taylor opened the China Inland Mission in 1866, on lines similar to those Mr. Watson pretends to advocate. He was backed up by no board or church, but plunged into the heart of China looking to God for support, and did a monumental work. He ceased the work only with his life, laying down both in 1905. He left the mission with about 800 missionaries, 1,000 native workers and 11,537 converts. The figures are now much larger, 2,541 members being added the year of Dr. Taylor's death. Does that look like failure? Unless Mr. Watson has a private wire on the departed, we are justified in supposing Dr. Hudson Taylor is still of the same mind as he was at his death.

Let Mr. Watson quote a line from any of these men, or cite an act to justify his wholesale contradiction of their lives, labors and words, or let him apologize for his attempt to deceive the public.

This is a type of canards that sometimes get themselves voiced in disreputable yellow journals, but reputable journals do not give them endorsement, much less originate them.

Not content with calling men of the Laymen's Missionary Movement "pharisees, hypocrites, unnatural egotists," because they sat down to a banquet, instead of supping on a nickel's worth of peanuts and a glass of water, as Mr. Watson would do if he were to take an interest in foreign missions, this degenerate of Southern chivalry becomes the purveyor of the foulest slander on as noble women as God ever made. He quotes an American Chinaman, Charlie Goon, as saying: "It is very foolish to send white men and pretty American girls to China. * * * Ah, yes; men like the pretty American girls. If you send only men you would soon see a great change."

Commenting, Mr. Watson says: "Read that statement again and consider it well. Then remember that Dr. Bach (?) declared that there were Elsie Siegel cases in the China field," etc.

To continue to hold up poor Elsie Siegel as a type of Christian missionary is about as logical as to say Joan of Arc never edited a magazine, therefore Tom Watson wrote the Declaration of Independence. It shows either monumental ignorance or a lack of veracity that is abnormal, since she was not a missionary and her unfortunate and sad case has nothing to do with missions one way or another, except to emphasize the need of them. An ordinary sense of decency would suggest that her name be left to charitable oblivion, and its use in this way is nothing short of brutal coarseness. But that is not the worst of it. Here is a Southern man, a Georgian, indulging in a vile and slanderous insinuation against the whole heroic band of missionary women. Such an utterance issuing from a Zenana in Persia or the harem of a Hottentot chief could be tolerated, but when it emanates from an American, a son of the South, it wears indignation and fatigues contempt. There are Southern women, Georgia women, who have won their place among the immortals by a self-sacrificing ministry in mission lands. Are they to be branded with a loathsome suspicion?

Such an insinuation would be unworthy of a div in the tenderloin section, and even there some remains of chivalry would flame up to resent it. Mr. Watson owes it to every Christian woman in America, and certainly to that whole Christian band of missionary women, from Ann Hasselting Judson and Isabella Thoburn to Laura Haygood, June Nicholson and Ruby Kendrick, to cite specific cases. Let him give some instances, one instance, if he knows such, of the unmentionable infamy at which he more than hints. Then let him apologize to the rest, like any decent gentleman should do.

Mr. Watson can believe all Chinese Christians are liars and hypocrites. He can brand men like George Sherwood Eddy as a liar, a man who is giving his fortune and his splendid manhood to India's evangelization for the very joy of it. He can charge mission boards with deception, and the laymen with hypocrisy, but when Dr. Bach, "who quit in despair," and Charlie Goon, a heathen Chinese, combine to slander American womanhood, their untested words are "confirmations strong as proofs of holy writ." A quitter and a heathen are his choice witnesses to bring him "some more facts."

He does quote Dr. C. F. Reid as an advocate of the crying need of San Francisco. Oh, if he had only known that Reid was a foreign missionary to both China and Korea, that he was engaged in going about with those "crazy," "hypocritical" laymen and helping their pernicious movement, whose slogan, being interpreted by the Wizard of the Wireless, is "The World for the Trusts," would he have quoted such a witness? Now, we suggest that, having introduced Mr. Reid as a witness, he be asked to furnish "some additional facts on foreign missions," at the risk of a case of "abdominal trouble," "walking the floor" or even "skirt-dancing," for Mr. Watson—to adopt his own Addisonian verbiage.

As a rule the advocate of foreign missions is the one who stands for the home land. Will Mr. Watson kindly give us the name of one man who opposes foreign missions who is doing anything worth while for those at home over whose wretchedness the howling Dervish of the Jeffersonian sheds so much ink? Let us have a few facts on that line. Until these facts are furnished in sufficient quantity, we prefer the company of the people who are doing things big enough for Tom Watson's rhetoric, good enough and great enough to invite his bitterest opposition, and strong enough to move right on in spite of it.—From the Nashville Tennessean.

Secular News and Comment

The twenty-fifth annual session of the State Teachers' Association of Mississippi will convene in Meridian on April 28. An admirable program has been arranged, and a large attendance is expected. These yearly gatherings have done much to promote the cause of education.

At an art sale in New York City, on April 13, a sword alleged to have belonged to Oliver Cromwell sold for $1,550, the purchaser being Mr. E. H. Litchfield, of Brooklyn. It is dated 1650 and bears the motto, "For the Commonwealth of England." It is stated that it was formerly in a Warwickshire Museum in Great Britain.

A plan has been formulated by the Press Club of Dallas, Texas, for acquiring in that State a farm and ranch where newspaper men in poor health, or who are infirm from age, may find rest and recreation. The newspaper organizations of the United States have been invited to co-operate in purchasing 20,000 acres of land for this purpose, thus making the enterprise national in character. It is proposed to make the property self-sustaining.

The expanding section of the Union is now the South. Neither ravaging pests, nor discriminating legislation seem able to retard her mighty march of progress. It was given out at Washington on the 19th inst., that in the month of March forty-three new banks were capitalized in ten Southern States at $2,257,000, and that existing banks added to their capital $650,000, thus showing within thirty days a gain in banking capital of nearly $3,000,000. And yet the voice of the "calamity howler" is heard in the land.

It is said that the French War Department owns an automobile which may be run either on land or water. Its speed on terra firma is reported to be thirty miles an hour, and on the water about ten miles an hour. The motor which operates it has fourteen horse-power, and the machine is made to carry four persons and can quickly be arranged for running on the sea. With such amphibious vehicles, and the navigation of the air now an assured certainty, naval warfare may be revolutionized within the next few years.

"Preserving the fragments" is now an art practiced by nearly all of the great industries of America. Some one has said that the packers turn everything about the hog to account except the squeal. In like manner, the rice growers of the South are learning to make use of everything. The husks are shipped to Germany to stuff dolls with; the fine particles ground off the grains are made into a valuable polish; the bran is fed to stock, and there is talk of making paper of the straw. It is the habit of saving that enriches and brings prosperity to a people.

Mr. W. J. Bryan returned from his trip to the Southern Hemisphere much impressed with the future of South America. He thinks that within fifty years its population will be increased from 25,000,000 to 50,000,000, and that it will relieve Europe largely of its surplus of people for the next century, as the United States has done for the last century. He speaks of Porto Rico as a beautiful island, staggering under heavy burdens, which the Government at Washington ought to help to carry. It furnishes, in his judgment, a gateway to the countries to the south, with which in the future we should have a vast amount of commerce.

The State Farm Land Congress assembled at Alexandria, La., last week, beginning on Wednesday, the 20th, being the first ever held in the history of the commonwealth. The opening invocation was by Rev. H. R. Singleton, pastor of the Methodist Church of that city; after which addresses were made by the Mayor, Governor, and a number of industrial experts. The weather was all that could be desired, the exhibits were highly creditable, and the attendance was gratifying. It is doubtful if any other Southern State, except perhaps Texas, can compare with Louisiana in the variety of her products. The scheme to have a World's Panama Exposition in New Orleans in 1915 was enthusiastically endorsed.

Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture will as soon as possible have constructed a barbed wire fence along the boundary line between the United States and Mexico, his object being to prevent the Mexican cattle from infecting those of Texas with ticks and the fever which follows when they fasten themselves upon stock. These insects place Southern raised cattle under a ban which greatly lessens their value. When shipped to Northern markets they are not allowed to go in pens with other cattle, and are in demand only for beef, which largely limits the opportunity to sell them at the best prices. The Federal Government is doing valuable service in nearly all of the Southern States by trying to exterminate these pests.

While in Chicago a few days since, Lord Kitchener, of the British Army, highly commended the United States for undertaking the construction of the Panama Canal, which he thinks will not only promote our commercial expansion, but also make for the preservation of the world's peace. It is customary for Mr. Roosevelt's admirers to claim for him the chief credit for that notable enterprise, but it does not properly belong to him. The man who did more than any other to make possible that great project was Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama, who fought for it when others faltered and whose eloquence and learning finally bore down all opposition. And when the work is completed and the two oceans are brought together, the South should see that a statue of her patriotic and far-seeing son is placed at some point along the channel where the ships of the nations can see it as they pass by. He richly earned the distinction which would thus be accorded him.

Samuel Langhorne Clemens (Mark Twain), whose serious illness was noted in our issue of last week, died at his home at Redding, Conn., of angina pectoris on April 21. He was born in Florida, Mo., Nov. 30, 1835, and his boyhood was passed at Hannibal in that State. When he was twelve years old his father died, and his school days ended. He worked in a printing office for a time, and then became a pilot on the Mississippi River. Out of his experience on the Father of Waters was born his pseudonym, "Mark Twain," which is a lineman's cry to the pilot when a boat gets in shallow water. When the outbreak of the Civil War stopped river traffic, he enlisted in the Confederate Army, but rendered scarcely any service. Wandering out into the Far West, he tried his hand at silver mining, journalism, lecturing and other things. The publication which first brought him distinction was "Innocents Abroad," of which 85,000 copies were sold in sixteen months. Mr. Clemens easily ranks as America's foremost humorist; but he was more than that. He was a quaint philosopher, and a writer of extraordinary dramatic power. He hated shams, and delighted to expose them. His fame is world-wide, and the entertaining products of his pen will probably be read until the end of time. It was a strange providence that he who brought so much joy and sunshine into other hearts and homes, should have had so much sorrow and sadness in his own eventide. Such things are inexplicable in the present life; but doubtless all will be made clear in the fuller light of eternity.

NEW ORLEANS NOTES.

(Reported for the Advocate.)

Rev. J. P. Haney, of Ponchatoula, La., is in the city for treatment by the physicians. He is now at the Pickwick Flats at 1016 Canal street, and he would appreciate having the brethren call on him.

Rev. L. A. Sims, the pastor of Epworth Church, attended the annual meeting of the Board of Church Extension in Louisville last week. He is asking for help in erecting a handsome $10,000 church on the corner of Scott and Banks streets (the site of the present building). Before returning to his charge he will spend a few days with his parents at Birmingham, Ala. In a pastorate of three years he has been out of his pulpit only two Sundays (and then from necessity). This is a fine record.

Rev. Albert S. Lutz, is assisting the Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, of Zachary, La., in a revival meeting this week. Lutz and Kleinschmidt are two worthy representatives of New Orleans Methodism. They come from fine German stock and are tireless workers and strong preachers of the Word.

After spending several weeks visiting relatives at Nevada, Mo., Miss Lottie Keithly, the efficient house-mother of St. Mark's Hall, is back at her accustomed duties in that growing institution. We are glad to note that Miss Alberta Keithly, the foster-mother of Miss Lottie, is regaining her health.

It affords us special pleasure to announce that the Woman's Home Mission Board did not remove any of our deaconesses from our city at its recent meeting held in Nashville. Miss Margaret Ragland is still head-resident deaconess, and Miss Daisy Duncan trained-nurse deaconess at St. Mark's Hall; Miss Myrtle Long is pastor's assistant at Rayne Memorial, and Miss Mary Frankland is assistant of Dr. W. W. Butterworth, who holds the Chair of Pediatrics in Tulane University. The special duty of Miss Frankland is to compile and tabulate statistics on "Infant Diseases." Of course, the Board did not disturb the relation of our efficient and consecrated city missionary, Miss Lily Meekin. We have never known a more active and useful worker in the Master's vineyard than this good woman. Her presence doeth good like a medicine. Another worker will be added to the force at St. Mark's Hall. Miss Roberta Baker will have charge of the department of domestic science. She has taught in this department of work in the Wesley House at Louisville for the past three years.

Rev. Leon I. McCain is now at the residence of Mr.

GET ALL THAT'S COMING TO YOU.

You don't get it when you buy loose or bulk coffee, or coffee by the pound wrapped up in a paper bag. The least exposure to the air lets strength, aroma and flavor escape,—all that makes coffee worth while. You get what is left and you get badly left if you think you are getting all you pay for. BUY the coffee of double strength, crisp and fresh in its air-tight can, a little higher in price, perhaps, than the loose article but really cheaper and infinitely more satisfying. Every good grocer sells it.

LUZIANNE COFFEE

THE REILY-TAYLOR CO.
New Orleans.

J. A. Petty, 1128 Amelia street. It will be remembered that on account of failing health he was forced to resign his charge at Covington, La. Let prayer be made for the recovery of Brother McCain. He has held pastorates at Patterson, La.; Purvis, N. M., and at Covington, La., where he is greatly beloved for his zeal for the Master's cause and for his good works. Brother McCain would be glad to see the brethren at any time they can call on him.

Mr. J. G. Cronbach, the Sunday school superintendent of the Second Methodist Church, was surprised on last Sunday and presented with a handsome loving cup. The cup was from the pastor and the Sunday school teachers, and it was given as an appreciation of Mr. Cronbach's splendid work in building up the Sunday school and as a token of the high esteem they hold for him. There is no better organized and graded school in the city than that of Second Church.

Dr. S. Halsey Werlein, of First Church, assisted in the dedicatory services of the home of the King's Daughters at Rest Awhile on last Saturday, and preached the consecration sermon on last Sunday at 4:30 p. m. He used for his theme one of the beautiful mottoes of the Daughters: "Jesus Christ came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." His sermon was replete with common sense, sound logic and profound spiritual thought.

Dr. John A. Rice, the brilliant and versatile pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, is preaching a series of sermons on "Jesus Christ and the Modern Man." He has achieved notable success in delivering his sermons in well-planned and carefully prepared series on some great theme. Last fall his course of sermons on "Epoch-making Characters of the Old Testament" attracted wide attention and vitalized the Old Testament Scriptures to many, even outside his own congregation. Before Easter he delivered a series on "Jesus Christ, as Matthew Saw Him," which was based on a careful, scientific analysis of the gospel according to Matthew. Dr. Rice is one of our ripest scholars and greatest preachers.

The revival meeting at Parker Memorial is growing in interest and in numbers. Rev. W. W. Drake, of Lake Charles, La., is doing the preaching, and Brother I. N. Nelhergal has been leading the singing. May many souls be brought unto the Lord by this revival meeting!

NEW ORLEANS PREACHERS' MEETING.

Present: Rice, Townsley, Holmes, Joyner, Harrel, Atkinson, Sutton, Werlein, Carley.
Absent: Parker, Lutz, Sims, Whitehead, Meek.
W. W. Drake, visitor.
Dr. Rice presided.

On motion reports of the pastors were dispensed with.

Brother Atkinson reported that his meeting was saying men. Best meeting in seven years. Brother Drake's sermons soul-searching and powerful; speaks to street car men at the car barn every day at 10:30 a. m. Cottage prayer meetings being held; more than fifteen applications for church membership.

Brother Holmes reported Brother J. P. Haney in the city for medical treatment and Brother Leon I. McCain improving.

The Board of Church Extension granted a loan of $2,000 for Parker Memorial Church.

Brother Drake reported that none of his people in Lake Charles suffered loss in the recent fire.

Benediction by Dr. Werlein.
A. INMAN TOWNSLEY,
Secretary, pro tem.

Church News

The Mission Boards of the Methodist Episcopal Church are said to be considerably hampered by debt.

Bishop John H. Vincent is publishing an autobiography in the Northwestern Christian Advocate. It needs not to be said that it is good reading.

Dr. H. M. DuBose, the accomplished editor of the Epworth Era, will preach the commencement sermon at the Southwestern University, Georgetown, Tex., June 12.

The New Orleans alumni of Vanderbilt University met at the office of Mr. E. T. Merrick in the Commercial Bank Building, in this city, a few days since, and effected an organization looking to the promotion of the future welfare of the institution whose imprimatur they bear. The following officers were elected: Mr. E. T. Merrick, president; Mr. R. H. Marr, vice-president, and Mr. James P. Cordill, secretary-treasurer. Resolutions were adopted endorsing the present policies of those in charge of the University.

The Methodists of the United States and Canada have erected a monument to Barbara Heck at the place of her burial on the Canadian side of the St. Lawrence River. It was this noble woman who stirred Philip Embury up to preach the first Methodist sermon ever delivered in New York, and to start the work which led to the erection of the famous John Street Church. Her resting-place well deserves to be marked in a manner which will make it impossible to be lost sight of. We honor ourselves in paying merited tribute to the heroes and heroines of the past.

Methodism is making headway in Cuba. Our gain in membership last year was 259, and we now have there, 3,302 members. The enrollment in our day schools for the past year was 628, and in our Sunday schools, 2,202. Bishop Candler is pleading earnestly for the establishment of a great church school at Havana, which he thinks would appreciably influence the whole island. A desirable lot has already been secured and $15,000 offered for the erection of a building on the condition that the Church will raise $15,000. Surely this money will be forthcoming at no distant day.

While the battleship Wisconsin was spending a Sabbath at New Orleans on the occasion of the recent Shriners' Convention in this city, Dr. J. C. Barr, of the Lafayette Presbyterian Church, delivered at 11 o'clock a spiritual and impressive sermon. The secular papers reported that this was the first time that religious services had been conducted on board this man-of-war within twelve months. If this be true, Uncle Sam needs to be pushed up to do more toward the moral welfare of the men in our navy. The efficiency of the service, if nothing else, demands that this be done.

The General Board of Church Extension met in Louisville, K. Y., last week, and transacted the usual business which comes annually before that body. All of the Bishops were reported present except Bishop Fitzgerald, who is on the superannuate list. We are pleased to note that in the distribution of funds, the Board dealt generously with the churches in our territory. A donation of $2,000 was made to Epworth Church in this city, and Parker Memorial received a loan of $2,000. Both of these congregations fully deserved the assistance accorded. No department of our Church work is contributing more to the upbuilding of Southern Methodism than that of Church Extension.

The New Orleans Presbytery has gone on record as favoring the elimination from the Presbyterian Confession of Faith of the word, "elect," as it relates to the salvation of infants. As amended, they would have that section read: "Infants dying in infancy, and all other elect persons who are incapable of being outwardly called by the ministry of the Word, are regenerated and saved by Christ through the Spirit, who worketh when and where and how he pleaseth." Of course, this action will amount to little unless it should also carry before the General Assembly of the Church. But it shows the trend of thought among our Calvinist friends. We entertain no doubt that the objectionable word will in the course of years be stricken out.

We are indebted to Mr. J. L. Kirby, the very diligent and efficient assistant of Dr. Gross Alexander, for advance sheets of the Conference statistics for the year 1909. They show a total membership of 1,822,402, a net increase during the year of 64,051, or a little more than 3 per cent. Our Western Coast Conferences have decreased in membership during the year except the Los Angeles Conference. It reports a gain of 505, which is more than enough to put the balance on the right side of the ledger for the Pacific Coast. Other Conferences that report a not decrease are the Kentucky, Western Virginia, and the Southwest Missouri. In the matter of ministerial support, contributions for missions, and all the values that are measured by money, the reports show a healthy growth.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Dr. J. M. Buckley, editor of the New York Christian Advocate, has issued the following ringing challenge to the Roman Catholics who have been persistently accusing the Methodists of attempting to carry forward their work in Italy by unworthy methods: "We do not believe that Archbishop Ireland can prove that the general plan and process of the Methodists in preaching to the Italians and forming societies throughout Italy is worthy of denunciation. If Roman Catholic priests denounce Protestantism in a fierce manner; if they issue tracts and papers which caricature the Methodists or the Baptists, they will provoke without doubt resentment and counter-attacks. The Methodists have a right, under the laws of the Kingdom of Italy, to undertake to prove their position, a right as sacred as is possessed by the Roman Catholic Church. If the Roman Catholic Church, anywhere where Methodist missions are found, whether in the Republics of South America, or in Mexico, or in France where we have lately established a mission, wish to bring on a comparison between the morals and methods of the Roman Catholic Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, they may do so, but they must be prepared for exposures of a kind and extent and a certainty which will make them wish they had never challenged the comparison; in fact, in the end it will be not a comparison but a contrast!"

AT MONTROSE AGAIN.

At the urgent request of the presiding elder of the Newton District and other brethren in the ministry, together with the Board of Trustees, I have decided to return to Montrose and take charge of our Training School there. It is a very unexpected turn in matters which contribute towards my going back. If I did not regard it as the voice of God and the Church I could not give it a moment's consideration. Brethren, if you put any obstacles in my way I shall not regard them as personal, but I shall feel that you are blocking up God's way. I shall expect you to open the way for me to come into your charge and present your school to your people. I believe you will do it. WALDO W. MOORE.

FROM PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

There has been a rumor that I was going to leave the Port Gibson Female College at the close of the present session. I paid very little attention to this rumor until recently, when I heard statements connected therewith which might result in detriment to the school. These statements were that the attendance in the boarding department had run down to as low as forty, and that this, in connection with the high cost of living, would even make it necessary that the school be closed altogether after the present session.

There is no foundation, whatever, for these statements, as the boarding attendance is as good as it ever has been, notwithstanding the depressed financial condition of the country. The present session has been the most satisfactory one during the five years of my administration here. Our students have been orderly, and the health of the crowd has been exceptional; indeed, there has not been a very serious case of illness in the school during the five years.

Two months ago I was considering a flattering proposition that had come to me looking to taking charge of another college, but that was dropped over a month ago, and we are making our preparations to open the seventy-first session here on September 14, 1910.

The buildings are in good repair, and three painters are now at work upon some of the walls in order to make things look brighter and prettier for our coming Commencement, May 13-16.

H. G. HAWKINS.

Port Gibson, Miss., April 23, 1910.

GRENADE COLLEGE.

After eight years of arduous labor, unremitting toil and great success as president of Grenada College, Mr. W. L. Clifton has resigned, to the keen regret of the trustees.

He took charge eight years ago of a school thoroughly disorganized, completely demoralized, rapidly disintegrating, housed in one building, scantily furnished, poorly equipped. He leaves two buildings well furnished, and the school with good equipment and a reputation for high and thorough work not surpassed in our section.

The trustees and the Methodist people may claim credit for the new building; all else is the work of Mr. Clifton, who has served a whole year without salary so that other interests might be paid in full. His term will close without a dollar of floating debt to any one.

Mr. Clifton excels in teaching capacity, business qualifications and administrative ability. The trustees would have retained him indefinitely if they could have done so.

In all his work, Mrs. Clifton has been a help-meet, indeed, to her husband. Her place in the school will be difficult to fill.

His successor, Rev. Jno. R. Countiss, is too well and too favorably known to need any word of introduction or commendation. The mere fact of his election shows the estimate of the trustees.

We had a multitude of splendid applicants from some half-dozen States, extending from North Carolina to Iowa, by way of Georgia, clear through Oklahoma. The vote for Brother Countiss was unanimous. The Board has done few things with such hearty unanimity.

I want now to organize a club of one hundred preachers who will guarantee to send one boarding pupil each to Grenada College next session. With one hundred such pupils we will at the 1911 commencement make a report that will "astonish the natives," and surprise the "oldest inhabitant."

Who will be the first to join? Notify me on a post-card, brother.

J. R. BINGHAM.

President Board Trustees.

P. S.—I've concluded to be first myself. I hereby guarantee to send one pupil to Grenada College next session. Who will be second?

J. R. BINGHAM.

ATTENTION LEAGUERS!

To the Epworth Leagues of the Mississippi Conference:

Our next Annual Conference will be held in the city of Natchez, beginning Thursday night, June 16th, and continuing through Sunday. Party rates will apply on the railroads, that is where ten or more are in the same party you will get the fare for 2 cents per mile. If your town does not have ten or more delegates, go in with the delegates from some other point and buy your ticket to that point and thence to Natchez. All delegates who expect to pass through Meridian with less than the required number will buy their ticket to Meridian and join the party there. We are expecting a fine meeting. Dr. DuBose will be with us. Pastors will please make the announcement to their congregation even if they have no League, as we would like for every charge to be represented—one delegate for every ten members or fraction. Where there is no League send one or more to represent your church and they will be seated as delegates. Send names to Miss Ethel Shaw, Natchez, Miss. Program will be announced later.

Yours fraternally, F. L. WALTON, M. D., President Mississippi Conference Epworth Leagues, Meridian, Miss.

LOCAL PREACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

Dear Brother Meek: We have in this Oxford District a Local Preachers' Association. Some of us have for a number of years felt the need of just such an organization, and we hope to prove the wisdom of thus uniting local preachers that we may be more useful to the Church in every way possible. Our next meeting will be during the District Conference at Abbeville, in May. We hope every local preacher and exhorter in the district will be present. Brethren, come praying that God may give us a great District Conference. D. M. GEAN.

Oxford, Miss.

W. H. M. S.

LOUISIANA STATE MEETING.

All names of delegates to the State meeting to be held in New Orleans May 5 to 8 must be in the hands of the committee on entertainment by May 1. A rate of fare of one and one-half on the certificate plan has been authorized for this meeting. Tickets to be on sale May 3, 4, 5 inclusive, limited to return, leaving New Orleans up to and including May 10th, 1910. Delegates will please be sure to get certificates when purchasing tickets, otherwise they cannot have the advantage of the reduced rate.

MRS. L. S. CLARKE, Chairman.

5013 St. Charles Ave.

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH

LEON IRWIN & CO.

FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 585.

Phone Main.

ROOMS and BOARD

634 and 636 SOUTH STREET

(Lafayette Square)

Corner St. Charles St.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Unlimited Meals.

Alvin Porter, Mgr.

NO NEED FOR ALARM.

I think some of the brethren are unnecessarily alarmed by the request of the women to be allowed the rights of the laity in the Church. If the women of Methodism, from the days of Susannah Wesley, Mrs. Fletcher, Hester Ann Rogers, and others, to this good day have hindered and hurt the work in their service for God's cause, is it not time to cease calling upon them to furnish most of the teachers in our Sunday schools and a majority at the prayer meetings; or calling on them to sing and pray in public, and allowing them to have Home and Foreign Missionary societies?

Brother T. L. Mellen, so lately ascended to the Father's house, said at first he opposed the organization of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society in 1878, and avoided "the queen of America" in 1882, when the Women's Christian Temperance Union wanted to help suppress the liquor traffic and stop it from blighting our fair land. But in 1885 he was converted, and believed it to be not only the privilege, but the duty of every Christian woman to pray or preach in public, and plead for the Phebes, Deborahs, Huldabs and daughters of Philip to do work at any time or place. Some women have not disgraced the Church, or brought reproach upon any department. Even the finances have grown larger in everything. The foreign and home mission work have grown to wonderful proportions. The deaconesses, lately allowed to work, have proven their usefulness. As Brother Burton so ably wrote in a recent issue of the Advocate, "Let the women have what they want." If it is God's call, there is no use to cry out against it. Let our men bid the women godspeed—not hinder them.

(Mrs.) EMMA SIEBE.

Crystal Springs, Miss.

THE WOMAN QUESTION, AND ELSE.

There is a great deal of discussion of woman's rights and sphere in our Church papers. May I add a few words to the deluge of ideas? Not that what I may say will amount to anything, but I can not refrain from stating a few facts.

Thank God for the few men whose physical, mental and moral being is still too strong to allow them to fear woman as a usurper. Is the present position of men so unstable that it is about to be handed entirely to more capable ones? If so, there must be something wrong with our modern manhood. It might be well for the sterner sex to retrospect. Why prate about Christ's selecting only men for his apostles?

Mr. Clifton, as he does in everything, takes a very sane view of this subject. He might have added a little more in behalf of woman. Who first told of the risen Lord? Not men. Christ unmistakably proves by this act woman's right as a human being and her ability to lead others to him. Why should either sex be jealous of the other? There is enough work, both secular and spiritual, for each to do—more than is being done.

As long as the men perform their duties intelligently and honestly and are the embodiment of integrity and all those other qualities which stand for true manhood, they need never fear that their rights or their opportunities to work will be taken from them. Only the weak fall by the wayside. The saying, "The survival of the fittest," is as true as the sun shines. History unquestionably proves this.

Another question is being discussed now, which is of vital importance to the women of our land—the Church institutions, especially those for women, accepting endowments from business men of questionable integrity, thereby severing themselves from the Church.

Will the Church examine herself to see how much she is doing for her institutions of learning for young women? If in the act she does not find cause to blush she must indeed have become callous. How many of those who are opposing this would in the hour of sore need turn repeatedly to an old, skin-flint miser for aid? Not one. If the Church does not want her beloved institutions for young women to turn to the "unrighteous mammon" for support, she must feed them. Wake up, Church, and make them a credit to you. If the Church can not support her institutions of learning and raise them to the highest standard, she should forfeit her right. Nothing should belong to us that we can not care for.

Do not think that I am advocating or disclaiming "suffragette," or any other of the woman's modern ideas of rights. I only want her to have every opportunity to develop into perfect womanhood as God intended. And I think that man is unwise when he places barriers in her path which prevent her from becoming that perfect being.

Man, I believe, is considered a threefold being. Is woman constructed the same way? If so, why should not each one of those qualities in her be developed to its highest?

MAUDE NEWTON.

Dwiggins, Miss., April 16, 1910.

THAT MEMORIAL.

By Mrs. Ernest E. Robinson.

This article is written to call attention to the unfair manner in which the Home Mission women, who so strongly favor the Memorial adopted last October at the Annual Board Meeting, are presenting the question to the women of our Church. All the articles that have recently appeared in the official organ of the Woman's Home Mission Society, "Our Homes," all the leaflets and pamphlets that are being circulated throughout the Home Mission Society, are strongly in favor of granting the women the "rights of the laity," while the editorials and communications opposing the same, which have appeared from time to time in our different conference organs, have been studiously overlooked and ignored.

Now it has occurred to me if we are sincerely striving to do the thing that will bring the greatest good to the Church and advance the cause we love, the only proper method would be to present both sides of the question, especially since some of the strongest articles that have been written upon the subject have been decidedly opposed to the memorial. I am not in favor of woman's suffrage, nor am I a friend of the so-called "new woman," whether in the State or Church, and firmly believe this to be the sentiment of the majority of our Methodist women throughout the South. I am in favor of real Christian womanhood, because that is right, forever right; but I am opposed to the isms and nonsense of the new-fangled notions of some of our modern women, because, to my mind, they are wrong, forever wrong.

I am opposed to the memorial because I cannot but believe the women who presented the resolution concealed their real purpose in framing the memorial. Power is what they seek; not divine, but human power; power to control all the money raised by the Home Mission women. Not because their funds have at any time in the past been misappropriated by the General Board, but a fear has been engendered on account of the legislation of the General Conference of 1906 with reference to the W. F. M. S. This being the paramount reason for praying the rights and privileges of the laity, I cannot but feel we are making much ado about nothing.

As a member of the Home Mission Society, I have sought in vain for an adequate reason why these godly, consecrated and capable men, who constitute the Parent Board shall not continue to serve the Church in the same capacity in the future as they have in the past. Many of these women who are anxious to control the business affairs of the Church would shrink from taking their husband's or brother's business into their own hands. Are we to infer from this that it requires less executive ability to finance the Church than it does to carry on secular affairs? A woman is a queen when she reigns as such, but when she gets out of her sphere she is not as good as a man. Some of our dear sisters, who are spending so much time in their effort to prove that women are superior financiers, remind me of the old sailor's wife, who interpreted her marriage contract in this way: "My husband and I are one, and I am the one." Believe me, my co-workers, the real issue is not so much that the great majority of Methodist women throughout the connection, who have been weak enough to take upon themselves the responsibility of wifehood and motherhood, have not a voice in the General, Annual, District, and Quarterly Conferences. The powers that be recognize, as do we, the fact that women have not sufficient time now to avail themselves of all the rights and privileges that have been theirs from the foundation of the Methodist Church; therefore, it is not so much an extension of our privileges and opportunities for doing good that is desired, as it is the hope that the step in this direction will lead eventually to woman's suffrage.

And as a minister's wife, who has watched with fear and trembling the approach of the election of officers in our local societies each year, the time when we are privileged to cast a vote, the time when so much excitement prevails, the time from which so many church rackets are dated, if any extra amount of women voting is to insure an extra amount of these unfortunate occurrences, I cannot but fervently pray, from such a calamity "good Lord deliver us."

It is argued that the rights of the laity should be granted to our women because those privileges have been given the women of the M. E. Church. I will not attempt to answer this argument as to its success or failure in the M. E. Church, but I do say, that which may be a success among the women of the North may prove a complete failure among the refined, home-loving, womanly women for which the South has always been famous. It should be remembered that the suffragette and her species of womanhood do not exist to any great extent in the Southland, and it is to be hoped that the number may grow beautifully less each year.

From my viewpoint, there could not have been a more inopportune time to sound the note of dissatisfaction than now, inasmuch as the Laymen's Movement is taking on such large proportions. The manhood of our Church is manifesting greater interest in missions to-day than ever before, and has not this been the burden of our prayer through these years, that God would lay this responsibility upon the hearts of our fathers, husbands and brothers? And now that our petition has been heard, and they are aroused to a sense of their opportunities and privileges and are laying their lives and means upon the altar, it should be a time of rejoicing rather than lamenting. That there has been a very decided danger in recent years of the Church becoming effeminized there can be no doubt; therefore, this advanced movement of such a noble body of men, banded together for such a laudable purpose should be hailed with real joy. They are worthy, my dear sisters, I am sure, of our implicit confidence in the management of the Church legislation and finance.

I do not wish to be misunderstood. It is not my purpose to underrate or underestimate woman's work in the Church. She has a work both in the home and the Church that men can not do. She has always been his superior in those finer traits of character which call forth devotion to duty and loyalty to service, but we must do the work in the sphere God has placed us, if we would do it according to his will. The Woman's Home Mission Society was organized to promote intelligent and loyal piety among the women of our Church, to aid us in religious development and to enlarge our opportunities for extending help to the weak and fallen. Auxiliaries are being organized in every Methodist Church in the South. Such organizations, properly directed, can not fail to be a mighty factor in reforming the world. As a society, we have had every reason to point with pride to our connectional officers. They have proven themselves to be women of superior leadership, but in their effort to interpret the sentiments and convictions of our women, with reference to our Church government, without submitting the question to a vote, they have taken the risk of allowing the wishes of the minority to rule, rather than the majority. When the Crusaders were on their way to Jerusalem to rescue the Sacred Tomb from the Turks, their watch cry was, "It is the will of God." To-day, as a mighty mission band marching on to do our part in rescuing the world from sin and unrighteousness, let us be sure in all that we shall undertake, "It is the will of God."

Weatherford, Texas.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location; price, including furniture, only $400. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

HOUSE ON CAMPGROUNDS FOR SALE.

A desirable two-story cottage, with four rooms and hall, bathroom with latest sanitary improvements; completely furnished facing open square in front of Keller Lodge, with a small, shady park in the rear. Address, Christian Advocate, 512 Camp, New Orleans.

WANTED.

A place in the Fall to teach Piano and Voice. Graduate under Olga Schanweker, of Oberlin. My summer will be spent in taking Post-graduate Course at some good Conservatory of Music. Reply to (Miss) OLIVE STEWART.

Fort Adams, Miss.

HUSTLERS, men or women, can make $'s—"oodles" uv 'em"—canvassing for our brand-new, fast-selling specialties. Write to-day. Riverside Utility Co., Hattiesburg, Miss.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND of FURNITURE that Lasts a LIFETIME

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd.
Manufacturer of Lumber
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The Home Circle.

THE SQUIRRELS.

Papa and Mamma Squirrel, with their three baby squirrels, lived in the hollow of a big tree. They were a happy family, and it was their papa's delight to take the babies all out among the large trees that were so full of nuts. Here he liked to teach them how to use their teeth to crack and get kernels out.

Squirrels eat nuts to make themselves strong and frisky. They have long, strong teeth, and can do much harder work with them than boys can with theirs.

One day, when they were having such a happy time, Jack Frost made them a visit and whispered something to the papa squirrel.

"Mr. Squirrel, Mr. Wind will soon shake off all the nuts from the tree, and I shall bring a great white blanket to cover them and the leaves that have gone to sleep for the winter. If you have not filled your cellar full of nuts, you had better be about it, for you will not be able to find any very soon."

"Thank you, Mr. Jack Frost," said Papa Squirrel. "I will tell the news to mamma and all the little squirrels. We will teach the young ones how to carry nuts, and when our storehouse is full, you may come and make us a visit, and we will show you how we crack nuts."

Papa Squirrel gathered his family close around him that night and told them all that Jack Frost said. "Now, my little ones," he said, "your mamma and I can not gather, before the great blanket comes, enough nuts to last us all winter. You know the people who work are the happiest, and we want you to be as happy as squirrels can be. Will you help us, by gathering all the nuts you can and piling them in our snug little hole, that we may have as many nuts as we may need this winter?"

And each little squirrel said, "Chip, Chip"—meaning, of course, "Yes, yes."

The next morning, bright and early, the whole squirrel family whisked out of their home, and their bushy tails were as fluffy as squirrels' tails can be.

The baby squirrels scampered back and forth, trying to see which could go from the trees to the home quickest and oftenest.

Every day they worked and played in this way, until they had their hole so full there was room left for only the family to eat and sleep.

Mr. Wind kept his promise and shook all the nuts upon the ground. Then Jack Frost kept his promise and brought the great white blanket, which covered all the nuts and leaves and flowers.

So the squirrel family was happy because they had in their warm house plenty to eat, and had worked hard to get it.

The baby squirrels worked and played so hard and ate so many nuts that in the spring they were as large and as strong as their dear papa and mamma, and they left their old home and made homes of their own in other trees.—C. L. S., in Kindergarten Magazine.

HOW HOWARD EARNED HIS MONEY.

Miss Ford, Howard's Sunday school teacher, had given each one of the boys in her class a penny and told them during the next week to see to how large a sum each of them could increase it. For next Sunday a contribution was to be taken up for the Fresh Air Fund, a beautiful charity which sends people away into the country who can't afford to go themselves. And Miss Ford wanted her boys to earn their money themselves, not have it given to them.

"For it will mean more to you, boys, if you work for it," she said.

Howard thought it over carefully and finally he asked mamma if he might go to the store and buy a cent's worth of popcorn.

"What are you going to do with it, dear?" she asked; then he told her his plan and mamma entered into it as heartily as he did.

Together they popped the cent's worth of corn, and put it into a clean, white bag, and then Howard took it over to an old gentleman who lived near them, whom he knew was very fond of popcorn, and asked him if he wanted to buy his bagful.

"How much is it?" asked Mr. Murray.

"Is it worth three cents, do you think?" asked Howard, timidly.

"Just about, I should think. Yes, I'll take it, my boy. And it's very good, too," he added, after his first mouthful.

Howard bought three cents' worth of popcorn this time and sold more bagfuls at three cents apiece, so he had nine cents. Mamma told him that if he'd buy a pound of sugar, which would be six cents, some milk, some chocolate and some vanilla, which she could afford to sell him for three cents, she'd show him how to make some fudge. They had just a pound when it was done; and then Howard printed this sign very carefully:

"Candy Sweet
That can't be beat."

and nailed it up by the fence. Mamma told him that he had better sell two of the squares for a cent, and he arranged it very temptingly on a little table and waited for customers.

They came slowly, but by supper time the fudge was all gone and he had twenty-six cents in his pocket.

The next day was Sunday, and nobody was happier than Howard when he dropped his money into Miss Ford's hand.—The Advance.

SMALL HANDS.

"Oh, I'm so tired of it all. I almost wish I could never see a piano again."

So said Edith, as she went to the morning practicing.

"I am sorry to hear you say that," said her Aunt Emily. "There are so many little girls who would be most thankful for a chance of learning to play."

"I dare say," sighed Edith. "But that is because they don't know what it all means. 'Sit straight. Hold your hands right. Count. Flat your B. Now—mind that sharp. Thumbs under—Oh, dear! I don't believe it pays.'"

"Anything into which we put faithful, persevering effort pays," said her aunt. "I am sure that many times will come in which the work of these dear little fingers will bring delight to their owners as it has to many others."

"Well," said Edith, with a half laugh, "I do mean to do my duty by scales and triplets and arpeggios and all the rest. And I won't lay it up against them that some of them have such dreadful names, for the names don't make the doing any harder. But it does take up so much of my time out of school."

She felt it the more keenly when, some time after her talk with Aunt Emily, the class undertook to raise a sum of money for the purpose of keeping in school a little East Indian girl in whom they had become interested.

"Such a dear little thing, Aunt Emily," said Edith. "They have sent us her picture and she has long dark hair and such big, sad looking eyes. We want to do everything for her, and, dear me!" Edith's face took on a most mournful expression. "I read somewhere that duties never conflict, but that's a mistake, for I know they do. Mother thinks that with my practicing I ought not to do any more sitting-down work out of school, so there 'tis. I have scarcely any time for working for our little girl."

"Well, well, my dearie, you must try to find comfort in feeling sure that a way will be opened for her even without the direct help of our hands."

The practice went on, the patient little fingers growing more skillful than their owner realized as they became more and more trained in the intricate movements.

There came a day when, at the opening of Sabbath-school, the superintendent said:

"Our organist is away. Can anyone here take her place? If not, we shall be obliged to sing without any accompaniment."

There was a little pause, and then some one said: "Edith Emery can."

"Will you?" he asked. Edith shrank back shyly as he came to her. But after a little kind encouragement, she went to the organ, thinking within herself—

"I don't like to say no when they ask me. But I'm sure I never, never can do it."

Her hands trembled as she touched the keyboard.

But even in her confusion the long hours of faithful practice seemed to rise to her help. The keys, because so familiar to the dear little fingers, appeared to be good friends, just waiting to act at her bidding. And oh, what delight in hearing the chorus of voices rising at her touch, and to feel that she was leading them in the sweet worship. Long before the hymn was ended, her fears had all turned to gladness.

She had plenty more of the pleasant experience, for the organist remained away for a month.

All the time Edith's friends had been working for the far-away little girl. Edith had done what she could to help, but it was not much and she was feeling discouraged about it on the Sabbath before the united offerings were to be brought.

On that day there was a reading out of the receipts and expenses of the Sabbath school. Edith had not listened very closely until she heard her name read. Then she was listening all at once. What could it be for?

"Miss Edith Emery, to playing the organ four Sabbaths, six dollars."

She could have jumped from her seat. She had never thought of being paid for the pleasant service.

"But your playing is worth pay, just like that of others," her teacher said to her.

So her gift was larger than that brought by any of the others, and she was now beginning to realize that she was winning for herself an accomplishment which would last through her life.—Sidney Dayre, in Presbyterian Advance.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER,

Gumbrland Telephone & Telegraph Co

INCORPORATED.

DOCTOR Tichenor's Antiseptic

Accidents Will Happen

You cannot prevent that—they "come when least expected." A bottle of

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

kept near at hand is your best safeguard—the cheapest "Accident Insurance" in the world! It affords immediate and permanent relief from Cuts, Bruises, Burns or Sprains. Keep a bottle in the house—always.

All Druggists 25 and 50 cents.

ANY ONE WHO HAS USED IT!

ASK EVERY

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.
OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulter, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

A GREAT MAN'S FAITH.

There are some who appear to think that there is an incompatibility between mental strength and deep spirituality; that men of vigorous intellect are never possessed of a simple and buoyant faith. This notion sometimes influences young fledgelings just out of college to air their doubts and affect to be decidedly skeptical. This erroneous view finds a striking refutation in the life and character of Prof. Borden P. Bowne, of Boston University, who died a few days since. Though second to no man in the nation as a thinker, though a philosopher of world-wide reputation, he yet was a humble, trustful Christian who accepted without reservation the cardinal truths of the gospel.

Chancellor J. R. Day, of Syracuse University, who was a close friend of Professor Bowne, wrote since his decease the following beautiful letter concerning him, which appeared in Zion's Herald of April 13:

"I am overwhelmed with sorrow by the death of my dear and intimate friend, Dr. Borden P. Bowne. I knew his inside life. How beautiful, how pure, how lovely it was! We corresponded; he visited my home. We often discussed questions of State and Church, and I listened with rapt attention to the story of his personal faith. Ah! how little men understood him who did not know his inside life! He was so great as a philosopher that they saw him as we see a vast mountain, failing to see the flora and hear the singing birds that live at its base.

"One evening in the railway station at Indianapolis we were waiting for a train to take us East to our homes. I wanted to know his personal faith in a future life, and I asked him if he ever had any doubts about that life; if he expected to be there in conscious identity, knowing who and where he had been, and recalling what his life was on earth. He replied: 'I have not a doubt.' Then, reflecting a moment, he turned to me and said: 'Day, if it were not for the grief it would bring my dear wife and the sorrow that would come to my friends, if I knew that I were to die to-night, I would go out into the other world as a boy goes bounding away from school for his vacation.' He was silent. I felt the power of his faith and looked through the mist that fell upon my eyes, eager for him to say more. Turning to me, he said with intense expression: 'The people do not know what comfort and what joy I have in my faith in Jesus Christ as my personal Savior and my Lord and Master.'

"The value of that testimony was not only in the greatness of the man, but in its honest simplicity. The words burned into my brain and heart. They are to me like a promise of the New Testament. I cherish them as I do words of the apostle.

"The Church has lost a great philosopher, but a greater Christian. I would like to talk with him an hour this morning, for he knows about the home of those I long to see, 'whom I have lost awhile.' It is not lawful for me to know such things now. But his words spoken that evening will always encourage me and help my faith."

TOM WATSON'S DENUNCIATION.

In a recent issue of The Jeffersonian, this man of the journalistic "big stick" roundly denounces the editor and places him in his list of liars and deceivers, along with the bishops, missionaries, and other occupants of the tripod whom he has assigned to that class. We like the company in which this self-constituted censor of public and private morals has seen fit to leave us, and feel honored to be numbered among those who rest under the ban of his displeasure. Abuse from such a source is no mean certificate of good character, and no weak attestation of the correctness of one's views and conduct. Had we received praise, instead of censure, from that quarter, we should have viewed ourself with suspicion. The commendation of Satan and those who represent him is not accorded to men who stand openly and fearlessly for truth and righteousness.

There is this significant fact about the charge of falsehood which Mr. Watson has lodged against us: Of the 85,000,000 or 90,000,000 people beneath the American flag, he is the only man who has ever questioned our veracity. And that is vastly more than can be said for Tom Watson. He has been named in Congress Thomas "Ananias," and his statements have time and again been shown to be utterly misleading and false. An undeniable illustration of this may be found in the Congressional Record of April 13. In his yellow journal this vaunted champion of honesty and fair dealing made the following statement: "When Mr. Taft was nothing but a mere Secretary of War he sent his automobile all the way to San Francisco and back under his franking privilege. He was 'long root' to the Philippines, and it popped into his mind that he might need his auto in the city of the Golden Gate. Like the woman who bought the grindstone at an auction, on the hypothesis that the occasion to use it was within the range of human possibilities, the genial Taft ordered his auto from Washington to San Francisco. But it so happened that it was not needed, and the government hauled it back to Washington again. Free of charge to Taft, mind you." This explicit accusation against the President was referred to the Honorable J. M. Dickinson, the present Secretary of War, who was born in Mississippi and is a citizen of Tennessee of unblemished reputation, and after careful inquiry he gave out the following statement in reply: "I have made an investigation of the matter and can say that the statement is entirely untrue. Mr. Taft never owned an automobile and never sent an automobile to San Francisco by the franking privilege or otherwise." This is a fair sample of how Tom Watson tells the truth.

One other illustration of the moral perversity of Mr. Watson we will give, and then leave him alone in his shame. He has denied vigorously and emphatically that he said "there are cases similar to that of Elsie Siegel among the women missionaries of the Orient." Very well; let us accept his repudiation of that charge. But he cannot deny that he has taken up the vile statement of a lecherous Chinaman, reflecting upon women missionaries in that country, and given it wide publicity by publishing it in his paper, and endorsing it to the extent of quoting it in support of his contention. And this indisputable action upon his part is scarcely less reprehensible than the utterance which he has so vigorously disclaimed. A man capable of doing such a thing is manifestly lost to all sense of decency and honor. What, for instance, would he thought of us if we should catch up the dirty slander of a negro on the street, heshmirching the womanhood of the South and publish it in the Christian Advocate in support of an argument we were making? Would we not thereby forfeit all claim to respect, and would not our name be pronounced throughout all Dixie with contempt and execration? And yet this would be exactly parallel to, and no worse than, this shining apostle of purity from Georgia has done.

Let not our friends become alarmed. We have not the slightest intention of entering into a controversy with Tom Watson. No gentleman can afford to do that. But we desire to let the Methodist people in our territory who read The Jeffersonian at least have an opportunity to see the methods and learn the utter unreliability of this man who is given to heaping mission boards and denouncing missionaries and ministers. A more brazen and shameless falsifier has never disgraced the tripod.

Elsewhere we publish a communication from Dr. W. W. Pinson, one of our missionary secretaries, who discusses Mr. Watson's doings at considerable length and shows him up in his true colors. We trust that not one of our subscribers will fail to carefully read it. Many good people have been disposed to overlook Mr. Watson's extreme utterances and think well of him because of his boasted championship of the interests of the masses; but he is mistaken if he thinks they will follow him in his reckless and unscrupulous assault upon the churches and the toiling, self-sacrificing men and women who represent them. Such a man is a weakness and a hindrance to any cause which he may espouse, and when the people come to know him, as they will sooner or later, he will find himself a discredited leader without a decent following.

MORE SOPHISTRY.

The latest pronouncement of the leaders of the movement to procure "the full rights of the laity" for the women is that of all the churches, ours is the most unjust to its female membership and accords them the fewest rights. And see how they prove it! It is affirmed that the Presbyterian Church allows its women to vote to call pastors, while ours does not. Will our sisters tell us who vote to call pastors in the M. E. Church, South? Are they so eager in the pursuit of rights and privileges that they would have our polity changed to give them liberties which none now enjoy? The truth is, a woman can not sit in the presbytery, or synod, or any other assembly of the Presbyterian Church. At the recent session of the New Orleans Presbytery a memorial was passed asking the General Assembly for a ruling as to "whether women shall be allowed to speak in public to mixed assemblies in connection with religious work." Yet we see this Church paraded as giving the women large rights and privileges.

Nor is the case any better for our sisters when it comes to the Episcopal Church. That body admits women into none of its legislative assemblies. They are not even allowed to talk in public before a promiscuous audience. But it is said that they may be vestrymen. Possibly so, theoretically. But will some one please kindly furnish us with the names of some of the female vestrymen in Louisiana and Mississippi? We doubt if one can be found in either State.

Neither is the Baptist Church the woman's Paradise that it has been pictured to be. Theoretically, women have many rights, but the sentiment is against their exercising them. We are reliably informed that it is an almost unknown thing among the Baptists of the South for a woman to participate in the discussions of the local congregation. It is not common for them to teach or exhort in any mixed public assembly. An eminent Baptist preacher in writing us, says: "I have never known a woman to be a deacon, though I think there are a few such cases. They attend the State gatherings, but are not allowed seats in the Southern Convention."

But the most amazing statement yet made is that women can not vote in any Conference in the Southern Methodist Church.

We should like to ask if they may not vote in the Church Conference, the body which ought largely to govern all of the local affairs of the congregation?

The truth is, there is no one of the larger denominations which accords women the freedom of speech and action that they enjoy in the M. E. Church, South, except our sister Methodism of the North. And nothing will be gained by resorting to misleading sophistry to make it appear otherwise.

AN ADMIRABLE SELECTION.

The press dispatches report that Rev. John R. Countiss, the pastor of our Church at Aberdeen, Miss., has been chosen to the presidency of Grenada Female College to succeed Prof. W. L. Clifton, who some weeks ago resigned.

In the selection of Mr. Countiss for this responsible place, we think the Board of Trustees have displayed good judgment and made a choice which will command the enthusiastic approval of both the preachers and people of the North Mississippi Conference.

Brother Countiss entered the itinerancy in 1894. After traveling for five or six years he felt the need of a fuller equipment for his work, and matriculated at Millsaps College, where he made an usually high record and was graduated with distinction, receiving the Bachelor of Arts degree.

Returning to active ministerial work, he has since served pastorates at Grenada, Oxford and Greenville, giving a good account of himself at each of these places. At the last session of his Conference he was sent to Aberdeen, where he has made an auspicious beginning, and where, we doubt not, the people will give him up with great reluctance. He is a man of studious habits, of accurate scholarship, well poised, judicious, and free from eccentricities. We predict for him a career of growing usefulness and distinction as an educator. We hope that his induction into office will mark the beginning of an aggressive campaign to free Grenada College from debt, and to provide for the institution ampler facilities and more adequate funds. Let all of the brethren rally to the new president, and give him their unstinted and unwavering co-operation in carrying forward the difficult work committed to his hands.

Mr. Clifton, whom Brother Countiss will succeed, has not yet disclosed his plans for the future. One report is that he will study law. He retires of his own accord, and those in a position to know affirm that he has wrought well for the institution with which for several years he has been connected. We wish him success in whatever field of work he may choose to enter.

OUR FRONT-PAGE PICTURE.

On our front page appears a picture of the Louisiana delegates to the General Conference, which will assemble in Asheville next Wednesday. The leader of the delegation is Dr. F. N. Parker, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, who is a man of breadth, scholarship, and uncommon preaching ability. Rev. N. E. Joyner is the superintendent of St. Mark's Hall, in this city, and is unusually well posted concerning institutional and missionary work. Rev. Paul M. Brown is the popular presiding elder of the Alexandria District, and one of the growing young men of Louisiana Methodism. The lay delegates are all men of high character, who are sincerely devoted to the interests of the Church. The Louisiana Conference will be well represented in our general assembly.

AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

Our publisher will during the first week in May be arranging for advertisements have to make a sworn statement as to the circulation of the Advocate. We are hoping that he will find it possible to fix it at 8,000, as that would enable us to secure better prices for our advertising work. Any brother who can, will greatly assist us by immediately sending in new subscribers. If you have only one or two on hand, you will oblige us by sending them in at once. Help given now will doubly help. Let every pastor in our territory try to add at least one or more names to our roll within the next week. Who will be the first to lend us a lifting hand?

PERSONAL.

Many of the sayings of the Hon. Tom Watson are like the disreputable looking wanderers who drift up and down the land—they have no visible means of support.

We thank Rev. J. C. McElroy, of Slate Springs, Miss., for a list of subscribers lately forwarded to our office. He reports that he is serving a good people, and that all is going well with him.

"The Life of Joshua Soule" is a new book just from the pen of Dr. H. M. DuBose. A more extended notice of it appears elsewhere. Marvelously versatile is our brilliant Epworth League secretary.

The Cole Lectures are being delivered at Vanderbilt University this week by Bishop W. F. McDowell. We thank Dean Tillett of the Theological Department for a beautifully printed invitation to be present.

Mr. Roosevelt's Sorbonne Lecture, which he delivered in Paris on April 23, will be printed in full in this week's issue of The Outlook. His Nobel Address, which he will give at Christiana on May 5, will appear in The Outlook dated May 7.

Rev. S. L. Riggs, of St. Francisville, La., in a letter to this office, says: "We are in good health and prospects are growing brighter in my parish in every way." We appreciate Brother Riggs' kindness in faithfully representing the Advocate among his flock.

Rev. W. H. Lane, of Rose Hill, Miss., thus sums up the situation in his field: "All is going on nicely; the interest in spiritual matters is increasing. I have six preaching places, six Sunday-schools, and four prayer-meetings. Everything points to a fruitful year."

We call attention to the article entitled "Some Defects in Baptist Democracy," which appears upon another page. We commend it to those of our people who are given to viewing Methodist church government with a "jaundiced eye" and harping upon its deficiencies.

Rev. A. J. Davis, of Porterville, Miss., writes hopefully of the outlook in his field. The interest in the work is increasing and he is bending his energies toward the promotion of a spiritual awakening among his people. We thank him for pressing the claims of the Advocate.

Rev. W. G. Harbin has lately favored us with a fine list of subscribers from the enterprising town of Crowley, La. We heartily thank both him and Brother Benton, the pastor, for remembering the Conference organ in the midst of their revival. There is no better time to circulate the Advocate.

The following have done valuable work for the Advocate within the past few days and have our hearty thanks therefor: Mrs. J. F. McCullers, Madison, Miss.; Sister T. S. Randle, Oak Ridge, La.; Rev. T. J. Durrett, Houlika, Miss.; Rev. S. S. Holladay, Pelican, La.; and Rev. J. E. Samplly, Rocky Springs, Miss.

Rev. W. A. Betts, of Montrose, Miss., desires to secure a copy of the New Orleans Christian Advocate of Dec. 17, 1908, and also one of Dec. 24 of the same year. If any of our readers have copies bearing either of these dates, that they are willing to let Prof. Betts have, he would very greatly appreciate their kindness.

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Greenville, Miss., has lately distributed among his flock an attractive calendar, adorned with a picture of the pastor and the church. He is now in the midst of a meeting, in which, by request of the congregation, he is doing the preaching himself. Prof. H. W. Butt has been engaged to lead the singing.

The North Mississippi Conference has no more energetic man in its ranks than Rev. L. W. Cain, of Houston, Miss. Things have to move when his hand is upon the helm. We are pleased to note that among other pressing interests, he is mindful of the Advocate. It needs to be said that his work is in good order and forging forward.

Rev. J. E. Samplly, of Rocky Springs, Miss., is having manifestations of the divine presence in his services. On a recent Sunday, at Cayuga, the altar was nearly full of penitents at the morning hour, and a number asked for prayers at the close of the sermon at night. Happy the man whom God thus honors with seals to his ministry!

Rev. W. L. Graves, of Itabena, Miss., writes: "A series of meetings of most splendid results both to our church and the town has just closed. Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Columbus, was with us five days, and gave us some great and edifying sermons. Nine were added to our church, making 27 since Conference. Our work prospers."

Rev. L. M. Broyles, of Corinth, Miss., is in the midst of a meeting in which he has the capable assistance of Rev. J. B. Mitchell, of Orlando, Fla. Brother Broyles is one of the strong men of the North Mississippi Conference and is in high favor with his flock. We pray that these brethren may have large success in their evangelistic efforts.

We regret to learn that Rev. J. J. Kelley, of Winnsboro, La., is in the city at the residence of Mr. J. A. Petty, 1128 Amelia Street, quite ill. It is reported that an operation may be necessary, in which event he will be moved to the New Orleans Sanitarium. Let prayer be made that the progress of the disease may be arrested, and that our brother may speedily recover.

A welcome caller at our sanctum last week was Mr. B. S. Elliott, of the New Hope Church, on the Winona Circuit. He is a Methodist, loyal and true, whose delight it is to do the will of the Master. He highly commends the work of his pastor, Rev. D. M. Geddie. Brother Elliott brought us tidings of many friends of the days ago. May the Lord bless and continue to use him!

From Buford, Miss., Rev. Jasper L. Smith has forwarded a club of twelve subscribers, for which we are most appreciative. He served his present charge as a local preacher last year, but was admitted on trial last fall and returned to the work. Everything is harmonious, and his congregations are growing. He highly appreciates the many kindly attentions of his people, whom he thinks cannot be surpassed.

We were pleased to have a pleasant call from Rev. W. G. Evans, of Covington, La., a few days since, who at present has affliction in his family, his wife being seriously ill. Brother Evans is an agreeable gentleman, and a Methodist whose every heartbeat is loyal to his Church. We pray that his companion may soon fully recover her health and strength.

Rev. A. J. Gearhead, of Gueydan, La., is having remarkable success in his work. He has just closed a fine meeting at Estherwood, and has received over thirty members since Conference. He has an orchestra and chorus choir at Gueydan of exceptional merit, which adds not a little to the charm and impressiveness of the services. All departments of the church are well organized.

The Sidon charge (North Mississippi Conference) is enjoying prosperity under the efficient administration of Rev. J. A. Goad. More than thirty members have been received during the current Conference year, and the outlook from every viewpoint is gratifying. We acknowledge our indebtedness to Brother Goad for 19 new subscribers, and assure him of our hearty appreciation.

We deeply sympathize with Rev. and Mrs. Jas. V. Bennett, of Auburn, Miss., in the loss of their little son, James Marlin, who died on the 14th inst. of cholera infantum, at the age of 19 months. Three physicians were with him, and all that medical skill could do was done, but nothing could arrest the progress of the dread malady. May God comfort and sustain the bereaved parents in their loneliness and grief!

Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Dunn, of Greenville, Miss., have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Claudine, to Mr. W. E. Elam, which took place in that city on April 18th. We extend congratulations, and wish the contracting parties a long life of usefulness and abounding happiness. Mrs. Elam has for several years been the faithful organist of the Methodist Church in Greenville, and is held in high esteem by a wide circle of friends and admirers.

We acknowledge the reception of a neatly printed invitation to the Commencement exercises of the Scarritt Bible and Training School at Kansas City, which will be held May 6-9. The Commencement sermon will be preached by Rev. Hoyt M. Dobbs, and Dr. Louis Albert Banks will deliver the annual address. The graduating class numbers twenty-one, two of whom are from our territory: Miss Elizabeth Daniel, of Washington, La., and Miss Estelle Wasson, of Kosciusko, Miss.

We regret to chronicle the death of Sister L. Kerley, one of the pioneer citizens of Shreveport, which occurred in that city on the 30th inst., after a long illness. She was a sister of Dr. Charles F. Evans, of Lexington, Ky., who formerly served pastorates in Louisiana and Mississippi, and was a woman of most exemplary life and character. She is survived by two children: Mrs. P. B. Stoner, of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Capt. S. N. Kerley, of Shreveport. The Advocate extends sympathy to the sorrowing friends and relatives.

Bishop Hoss has a newsy and highly interesting letter discussing the affairs of Southern Methodism in general in the last issue of the New York Christian Advocate. This great leader rings true all along the line. His Methodism has in it no trace of alloy. Referring to the Women's Memorial, he says the sisters have not asked him to sign it, and that he supposes they are first waiting to secure the signature of Dr. J. M. Buckley. We have heard it insinuated that none of our chief pastors look upon that movement with approving eye.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, of Brookhaven, was in the city several days last week in the interest of the Seashore Divinity School, which will be held at the Seashore Camp Ground June 28 to July 7. The program arranged for this year is one of unusual attractiveness, and the approaching session promises to be the best yet held. We commend especially the plan of having the undergraduates of the Louisiana and two Mississippi Conferences come together to receive instruction at the hands of their examining committees. All of these young gentlemen who can, should avail themselves of this opportunity to hear lectures upon their prescribed courses of study. We hope to give a more extended notice of this promising institution in our next issue.

In speaking of the fine work done by Rev. J. T. Murrah at Sardis, Miss., a few weeks since, we stated that he erected there a splendid house of worship last year. In making that statement we overlooked the fact that that enterprise was projected by Dr. H. T. Gaines, and was well under way, the walls being up and ready for the roof, before he left the charge. Brother Gaines stood out strongly for a new and commodious structure in the face of vigorous opposition, and in so doing rendered a distinct service to Methodism. Brother Murrah built grandly upon the foundation which he had laid, and the result is highly creditable to all. We entertain the highest regard for Brother Gaines, and it is a pleasure to accord him the credit which is justly his due in this instance.

The recent Commencement exercises of the Mississippi Training School, at Montrose, were up to the usual high standard. Rev. W. W. Graves failing to arrive, the sermon, which was a timely and impressive discourse, was delivered by Rev. W. A. Betts. Mr. J. N. Powers, of Jackson, made the annual address. After nearly two years of splendid service, Professor Betts has severed his connection with this institution, and Rev. W. W. Moore has been elected President and Financial Agent to succeed him. Mr. Moore is said to be admirably fitted for the new work to which he has been summoned. The other teachers for the ensuing year are Prof. B. P. Brooks, principal; Miss Lucy Betts and Mrs. Burton, assistants; Miss Florence Flowers, primary, and Miss Eva Myers, music. The session just closed was highly satisfactory.

CHILDREN'S DAY PROGRAMS.

Superintendents and pastors who wish the Conference Sunday School Board to furnish programs for Children's Day (June 12) will please make application through me. I hope every Sunday school will observe the occasion this year, and I beg the co-operation of every pastor and superintendent in making Children's Day unanimous this year.

H. R. SINGLETON,
Supt. Children's Day, La. Conf. S. S. Board.
Alexandria, April 22, 1910.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors and Sunday School Superintendents of the Louisiana Conference:

Dear Brethren—The General Sunday School Board of our Church is advising you, by means of letters and circulars, of the postponement of Children's Day for this year from the third Sunday in May to June 12, or as near thereto as possible. This postponement of Children's Day was made in order to complete, during the present quadrennium, the endowment of the Chair of Religious Pedagogy and Sunday Schools in Vanderbilt University.

Through the failure of the several Annual Conference Sunday School Boards to carry out the provisions of the Discipline regarding this endowment fund, there has been paid in only about $15,000 during the past three years, leaving $35,000 to be raised this year, if the entire amount is to be secured within the present quadrennium. It would not be the part of wisdom to attempt such a task with hundreds of our leaders absent from their congregations and Sunday schools attending the General Conference. Hence the postponement to June 12.

Let us fall in line with the plans of our General Board, and make June 12 the greatest Children's Day our Church has ever seen.

Children's Day programs will be furnished free of charge. Send your order to Rev. H. R. Singleton, Alexandria, La.

HENRY BEACH CARRE,
Chairman La. Conf. S. S. Board.
Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

SECOND QUARTER—LESSON V.—MAY 1, 1910.

TWO SABBATH INCIDENTS.

Matt. xii, 1-14; Memory Verses, 11, 12. Parallel Passages Mk. ii, 23-Lk. vi, 1-11.

1. At that time Jesus went on the Sabbath day through the corn; and his disciples were ahungered, and began to pluck the ears of corn, and to eat.

2. But when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto him, Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the Sabbath day.

3. But he said unto them, Have ye not read what David did, when he was ahungered, and they that were with him;

4. How he entered into the house of God, and did eat the showbread, which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them which were with him, but only for the priests?

5. Or have ye not read in the law, how that on the Sabbath days the priests in the temple profane the Sabbath, and are blameless?

6. But I say unto you, That in this place is One greater than the temple.

7. But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned

Golden Text: "I will have mercy, and

1. The Lesson's Meaning.

It is difficult for us to realize to-day into what trivial and absurd details the Pharisees of Christ's time extended their rules as to the proper observance of the Sabbath. As an interpretation of the Fourth Commandment, "In it thou shalt not do any work," they held in all seriousness that tying or untying a knot, sewing two stitches, or scattering two seeds, lighting or extinguishing a fire or even a candle, brushing mud off one's clothes or shoes, carrying a pebble or a fig are sinful and in violation of the Sabbath. No surgical operation could be performed; even "to lay on a plaster would be a grievous sin;" bones could not be set, wounds dressed; and false teeth must not be worn on that day, for "they might fall out, and the wearer might then lift and carry them, which would be sinful on the Sabbath." A horse might not be saddled, nor a saddle taken off, though the girth might be unloosed and the saddle allowed to fall off. Eidersheim, who is authority for the above statements (Life of Christ, Vol. II, Appendix XVII, "The Talmudic Sabbath Law"), says that "It was a very serious question, which led to much discussion, what should be done if the tie of a sandal had broken on the Sabbath."

Of a piece with such folly was the accusation of the Pharisees with which our lesson for to-day opens. Christ and his disciples were walking through the grain fields on a Sabbath day—not a very long walk, certainly; for the Jews would have censured as a violation of the law a journey of over a mile and a quarter. The disciples being hungry they began to pluck the ears of corn (rather wheat or barley) and to eat. This was allowable on other days, and an authority on manners and customs in Palestine says: "I have often seen my muleteers, as we passed along the wheat fields, pluck off ears, rub them in their hands, and eat the grain unroasted, just as the apostles are said to have done." But in doing this on Sunday they were guilty, according to the Rabbinic law, of at least two sins, involving two sin-offerings: (1) Plucking the ears of corn, which was in their sight reaping; and (2), rubbing them, which was threshing. Such was the hair-splitting logic of these sticklers for external ordinances.

It is no wonder that Christ repudiated, and permitted and defended in his disciples the disregard of such endless and burdensome regulations. So, when the Pharisees objected, "Behold thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the Sabbath day," he justified their conduct with the incident in David's life and a reference to the work of the priests in the temple on the Sabbath.

The argument—for such it is—paraphrased, runs thus: If it was permissible for David, when he was hungry, to eat the showbread even, how much more is it then harmless for my hungry disciples to eat this common wheat. So he asserted that "The the guiltless.

8. For the Son of man is Lord even of the Sabbath day.

9. And when he was departed thence, he went into their synagogue:

10. And, behold, there was a man which had his hand withered. And they asked him, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath days? that they might accuse him.

11. And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the Sabbath day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out?

12. How much then is a man better than a sheep? Wherefore it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath days.

13. Then saith he to the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it forth; and it was restored whole, like as the other.

14. Then the Pharisees went out, and held a council against him, how they might destroy him.

not sacrifice." (Matt. xii, 7.)

strictest rules of ceremonial law might give way to real necessity." Or, as Mark puts this conclusion, "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." But the argument continues. "With a sublime consciousness that God is dwelling in Him in a higher sense than in the temple" (Meyer) he reasons (though this reason might not be so cogent to the Pharisees, who denied his claim): If the servants of the temple may work on the Sabbath without sin, then surely the servants of the Lord of the temple may perform their necessary tasks also.

The statement following, "I say unto you, in this place is one greater than the temple," is capable of two interpretations: (1) The one already implied, and more specifically stated in verse 8 and in Luke's gospel, "The Son of man is Lord also of the Sabbath day;" or (2) "Something greater, a greater thing (neuter) than the temple—the law of mercy, love, service—is involved here." The former is probably the correct rendering, though the latter is in harmony with Christ's immediate reference to his favorite Old Testament quotation (in what recent lesson have we found it?): "I will have mercy and not sacrifice." The general principle is, as stated later by St. Paul, "The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life." (2 Cor. iii, 6.)

The second incident, the healing of the man with the withered hand, according to Meyer, occurred on the same Sabbath, but according to Eidersheim it was on "another Sabbath"—probably the one following. In either case, it was brought on probably by the Pharisees with intent, as their question concerning healing suggests; and again Christ puts himself squarely against their Talmudic tradition, which "forbade healing on the Sabbath, except in cases where life was involved." Christ rebukes the heartlessness of such a law by reminding them that they would pull a sheep out of a pit on the Sabbath, and then asking the question, which carried with it his overwhelming vindication: "How much then is a man better than a sheep?" In response to faith, the man was healed, and Christ gave utterance to what seems to us the simplest and best of all Sabbath regulations—the Golden Text of the lesson, as we see it—"Wherefore, it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath days."

II. The Lesson's Message—Points to Impress.

1. We are far away to-day from Pharisaic legalism. Our danger—a very grave one—is not that the spiritual significance of the Sabbath should be buried beneath a weight of petty regulations, but that it should be swept away by a flood of secular interests and worldly pleasures, leaving neither spirit nor letter of observance.

2. Christ's words, "The Sabbath was made for man," can not justly be interpreted as meaning: The Sabbath was made for man's pleasures; or for man's self-indulgence, or for man to

(Continued on Page 15.)

Here Is Power You Can Depend On

KEEP ahead of your work and get things done more rapidly, easily and at less cost by using an I-H-C gasoline engine. Until you install one of these engines you are not getting all the profit you deserve from your farming operations. It solves the "help" problem. It is the most economical worker on the farm. At any hour of any day or night it is ready to operate the cream separator, the pump, the grinder, the saw, fanning mill, sheller, huller, grindstone, washing machine, lighting system—any one of many such jobs. Thousands of farmers have come to depend on this most reliable of helpers, an

I H C Gasoline Engine

Made in Different Styles and Sizes to Suit Every Man's Needs

The I H C line of engines is the most popular on the farm because they are so simple in construction. No previous experience is needed to operate them with complete success. Besides, they develop the greatest power possible from every gallon of gasoline.

Equip a power house at low cost. It will be the biggest paying investment you ever made. Or get a portable engine mounted on trucks or skids.

A pumping engine will solve the wind and water problem; a spraying outfit will enable you to protect your fruit from disease, worms and blight; a sawing outfit will lighten your labor, and a plowing outfit will save your time and horses. Get one, and learn its labor-saving qualities.

There are many styles and sizes, from 1 to 25-horse power—an engine for every section and every problem. Vertical and horizontal (both stationary and portable.) Also gasoline tractors—first-prize gold-medal winners—the best all-round farm tractors.

Call and take up the matter with our local agent in your town, or write direct for catalogue and further information.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY OF AMERICA
(INCORPORATED)
CHICAGO U S A

YOUR Boy May Become a Great Merchant

But not unless he has the necessary training. The business of this institution is to fit young men and women for successful business careers. We have the best systems for teaching Bookkeeping, Shortland, Typewriting, Penmanship, Salesmanship, Telegraphy, Proofreading, Railroadings, Public Accounting, Banking and Civil Service. Correspondence courses for those who cannot attend. Write for particulars and free booklet, entitled "Our Presidents," giving a complete history of each, from Washington down to and including Taft.

FALL'S BUSINESS COLLEGE,
Broadway & 8th Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

Fall's Business College, Nashville, Tenn.

Please send me your free booklet, "Our Presidents."

Name.....

Address.....

CUT OUT AND MAIL THIS COUPON

"It Turns Your Waste Material Into Dollars."

THREE MACHINES IN ONE.

SHORT Log Saw Mill, Lath and Shingle Machine. Does all kinds of sawing. Just the machine for small Saw Mills and Farmers' use.

It's a Big Money Maker.

Write for circulars and particulars.

Manufactured only by COLUMBIAN IRON WORKS, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Methodist Benevolent Association

Ministers and Laymen of Southern Methodist Church. Benefits at Death, or Old Age, or Disability. Over $80,000 paid to Widows, Orphans, Disabled. Insurance at cost. If in good health, write for rates and other information.

CARE METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE

NASHVILLE, TENN.

SOME DEFECTS IN BAPTIST DEMOCRACY.

The Baptists lay much stress on Democracy as it has to do with Church polity, just now. Baptist democracy is democratic over much. They take very young people into their membership. They have many faithless and ignorant members. They, too, have many faithful and intelligent members. Probably they are about as other churches in these respects. Now, if I understand Baptist democracy, all these members have an equal right in balloting. The young and inexperienced, of both sexes, the faithless and ignorant, have equal right in balloting with the faithful and intelligent. The young girl has as much voice in the administration of the Church as the experienced deacon. Has such democracy as this any Biblical authority? Did any temporal government of an enlightened nation ever commit its welfare to such weak democracy? In the United States government one must be a male (in most States), twenty-one years of age, and in most States be able to read and write. Paul said let the women keep silent in the churches. He did not so say about the boys and girls. Possibly Paul did not suspect the coming of the day when the administration of the Church would be equally committed to the boys and girls, men and women. Had Paul suspected this, I believe he would have given directly an injunction against it.

The call of a pastor by Baptist democracy is not according to apostolic times. Proof: Then there were no churches to call. They were under the command, "Go!" All missionary churches send preachers to the mission fields. It was once all missionary territory; so all preachers were sent then. Now, when the Baptists succeed under a sent ministry in evangelizing a place and organizing a Church, they at once reverse the apostolic plan (hence Bible plan), and commit this responsibility to the membership. The Church may consist mostly of young and inexperienced members, even unread in the Bible, yet this responsibility is committed to them. Is this good democracy? Will some one give me the "chapter and verse" that authorizes such democracy? The Baptist preacher went to the community by some authority, not by a call. Now, the question is, who changed the authority under which he went from where it was to these new and inexperienced converts? And if such was done in apostolic times, will someone point out one example of such transition of authority and responsibility in that period? So I say Baptist democracy is not sound, is weak, and has no authoritative precedent, either in State or Church. It errs in committing holy things to boys and girls and women, as well as to men. So, in this sense they allow a ministry called by the Holy Ghost to be subject to their approval or disapproval.

"ANTONY."

CAPUDINE CURES HEADACHE.

There isn't any headache remedy that does the work like Hicks' Capudine. For sick or nervous headache, headaches from heat, cold, grip or stomach troubles—it gives immediate relief. Liquid, easy to take. Sold by druggists.

TICKETS TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Important Information to All Persons Contemplating Attending.

The committee of the General Conference having in charge the matter of special rates over the railroads for the session of the Conference to be held in Asheville, N. C., May 4 to 25, 1910, arranged that these special tickets should be on sale only on May 2 to 11, both days inclusive. The local committee in Asheville recognized that this was a very serious mistake, but when they found out just what had been done, it seemed to be too late to make any change in these "on sale" days. Any one wishing to attend the Conference who can not leave home on or before the 11th day of May, can not get the benefit of the regular Conference rate over the railroads unless we are able yet to have the "on sale" dates extended. There will be placed on sale on May 15, however, the regular summer excursion tickets to Asheville. These tickets, while not giving quite as low a rate as the regular Conference schedule, are very low, and the tickets are good until October 31, and have stop-over privileges at all principal points, both coming and going. With the exception of the very small increase in the price, these regular summer excursion tickets are in every way much more desirable than the regular Conference special tickets, and can be bought at any ticket office if notice is given that such a ticket is wanted. These tickets are on sale regularly at all coupon offices, and the notice in advance that such tickets will be wanted will have to be given only at the smaller towns. If you want to attend the General Conference, and do not expect to leave home before the 15th of May, ask at your ticket office for a regular summer excursion ticket to Asheville, and the agent will provide same if he does not sell it regularly.

JOHN P. KERR, Secretary.

THE MONKEY IN MAN.

When you were a boy did you ever sneak off to the back of the lot and smoke corn silks or rabbit-tobacco, and picture yourself a man? Or did you ever chew licorice and splutter like a grown-up?

And has it ever occurred to you that the real pleasure in these innocent pastimes was the idea that you were doing something "naughty?" We laugh at the children for their apish ways, but forget that grown-ups are not free from the same follies.

For example, you go to the soda-fountain on a hot summer day and call for your glass of Coca-Cola. While you are enjoying its refreshing coolness, in comes a swaggering youth with a wisp of down on his handsome face and calls for a "dope." He gets his glass of Coca-Cola just like yours. To you it is as harmless as a glass of ice-tea, of which it is the chemical counterpart. But to the young man's fancy it is "dope." He has not outgrown his boyish ways, and is still laboring under the pleasant delusion that corn-silks, rabbit-tobacco and cross-vine are the real article.

If you find anyone who has been misled by the expression "dope" in connection with Coca-Cola, and who really thinks that the drink is injurious, tell him to write to the Coca-Cola Company, Atlanta, Ga., for free copy of "Government and State Officials' Truth about Coca-Cola," containing analysis of the leading chemicals throughout the U. S.

Happiness may fly away, pleasures pass or cease to be obtained, wealth decay, friends fall or prove unkind; but the power to serve God never fails and the love of him is never rejected.—Froude.

VALUE OF ROYALINE OIL.

Royaline Oil, made by the Royaline Medicine Co., of New Orleans, La., has won all of its trade against competing goods purely on its merits. That is why, when a bottle of Royaline Oil is bought, it always leads to the sale of several more bottles. Royaline Oil is the great antiseptic. It is especially useful for all kinds of aches, pains, swellings and soreness in the head, chest or any other part of the body. Price 25c. bottle. Druggists. Hicks' CAPUDINE Cures Sick Headache Also Nervous Headache, Travellers Headache and aches from Grip, Stomach Troubles or Female troubles. Try Capudine—it's liquid effects immediately. Sold by druggists.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR
Stops Falling Hair
Makes Hair Grow
Stops Falling Hair
Makes Hair Grow

J. C. AYER COMPANY, Lowell, Mass.

Does not Color the Hair
Does not Color the Hair
Does not Color the Hair

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS
RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by U.S.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

Every Druggist Knows

and thousands of users know that

MINARD'S
"KING OF PAIN"
LINIMENT

is the great family Remedy
For Bodily Pain

resulting from rheumatism or neuralgia, stiff joints, strained or lame muscles, sprains, tired, aching feet, sore hands, and all sorts of bruises; also for painful chest or tubes, heavy colds, sore throat and hoarseness; as well as for scores of every-day emergencies and accidents that happen in every family. MINARD'S LINIMENT is a safe and reliable standby, and should be on every medicine shelf.

MINARD'S LINIMENT is a smooth, aromatic cream, clean to use, powerful, penetrating and soothing, and absolutely free from anything poisonous or harmful. When rubbed into the skin it stops inflammation, easing the pain and soreness at once.

If you are not one of the thousands who are already familiar with its merits, we want you to

TRY MINARD'S LINIMENT AT OUR RISK

Buy it from your druggist or dealer, use as directed, and if not found exactly as represented, we will refund your money. Prices: Small 25c., Medium 50c., Large $1.00.

MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO. SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS.

Tidings from the Field

Iuka, Miss.

Will you suffer a few words from Iuka? We are glad to be able to report progress in many ways. Recently a beautiful and modern brick school building has been completed here at a cost of $15,000. The other day the Agricultural High School for Tishomingo County was located here. The Mineral Springs Hotel has been completely overhauled and remodeled inside and out, at a cost of about $10,000. Other buildings are going up. Our Sunday school has nearly doubled in both enrollment and attendance. We have the contract for a new Sunday school room for our Business Men's Class. The entire amount for all the Conference collections has been secured in cash and good subscriptions. Fourteen members have been received into the Church. We are to have Bro. J. H. Holder with us in a meeting early in May. Help us to pray for a great revival.—Joseph B. Randolph.

Hermanville, Miss.

It is quite a task for me to write for the public to look at and criticize; but believing that there are some of the readers of the Advocate that would like to hear from this part of the world, I will undertake to give the following, with your permission, through the Advocate.

Knowing that a move was certain before the meeting of our last Annual Conference, I hardly knew where to look for a landing, or what to expect at the hands of the Bishop and presiding elders, except that I would get a place to work for the Master somewhere.

To my great surprise, and agreeably so, I found myself placed on the Hermanville Charge: a place among as splendid, hospitable a class of people; as good a people as there is in the Mississippi Conference. "Truly the lines have fallen unto us in a very pleasant place."

On our arrival we found everything in readiness for our reception, which we appreciated very much. There are six churches within the bounds of this work; plenty of work to do, and we are hard at it, endeavoring to do the Master's will as best we can.

At the earnest request of the pastor, the board of stewards met Jan. 26th, making the assessment for the pastor and distributing same among the different churches on the charge; also assessing to each church on the charge its proportionate amount to be collected for the benevolences ordered by the Conference. There was some discussion among the board of stewards as to their taking up the work of making all collections and relieving the pastor of that burden; but discussion was all, and they adjourned leaving the matter entirely in the hands of the pastor.

I am glad to say that this matter is pretty well in hand, mostly by subscriptions.

We have five Sunday schools, all doing very good work.

The hardest problem, or one of them at least, is to get the people to see the importance and great need of taking their church papers. The cry heretofore has been, "It's too high in price," but the price by the kindness of the editor and the publishing committee, has been arranged to meet all demands, and still they won't take it. What shall we do?

Our first Quarterly Conference was not held at the time named in the New Orleans Advocate, owing to unavoidable hindrances. But our much-esteemed presiding elder came and preached some very excellent and edifying sermons for which we felt very thankful. Our Quarterly Conference was called to order at 10:30 a. m., Jan. 29th, not all the stewards were present, but we had good reports, paying nearly a fourth of the assessment the first quarter.

We have many reasons to be greatly encouraged, believing that this is going to be a good year with us all. We are planning for good results in the wind up.—W. L. Blackwell, P. C.

NOTICE.

This week every preacher in the Louisiana Conference will receive a prospectus and program of the Seaboard Divinity School. They are worth a careful examination. We want to make ours the greatest summer school in the South. Begin now to make preparations to attend June 23 to July 7.

Will those who subscribed towards the maintenance of the school at the Annual Conference in Alexandria last December, please forward me the amount of their subscription as early as possible.

W. W. HOLMES, Treasurer.
2903 Camp St., New Orleans.

It is the action of an uninstructed person to reproach others for his own misfortunes, of one entering upon instruction to reproach himself, and of one perfectly instructed to reproach neither others nor himself.—Epictetus.

DON'T BE WITHOUT WATER.

There is no need of the property-holders of this city being any longer without water and sewer connections. This has been the one great distress of our city, not being able to have modern improvements in our homes. But now there is no need of any more complaints along this line, as the city is perfectly willing to connect free any property with the water main, carrying the pipes to the property-holders line, without any cost whatever to them.

The popular firm of C. C. Hartwell & Co., on Baronne Street, are making a liberal proposition to connect the sewer pipes free of charge. They also go farther, and agree to do all plumbing and laying of pipes necessary to connect the house with the sewer and water on monthly payments. This enables the property holders to not only put the property occupied by him but any property he has for rent in modern shape, with practically no outlay of ready cash. People interested in this proposition should consult C. C. Hartwell & Co., for a detailed explanation.

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of a crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.—Emerson.

THIS WILL INTEREST MANY.

F. W. Parkhurst, the Boston publisher, says that if any one afflicted with rheumatism in any form, neuralgia, or kidney trouble, will send their address to him at 704-35 Carney Bldg., Boston, Mass., he will direct them to a perfect cure. He has nothing to sell or give, only tells you how he was cured after years of search for relief. Hundreds have tested it with success.

He who drifts through life, letting the years glide empty into the past, is accumulating remorse to darken his future.—Selected.

The Perfect Home Treatment for THE LIQUOR HABIT.

Combined medical and hygienic treatment for home use exclusively. Slight cost. No absence from business. No publicity. Improves the general health. Cure guaranteed. Write for particulars. The Biggs Sanitarium, Home Dept., Asheville, N. C.

Four Years to Pay for This Piano

UNDER the Werlein Club Plan one hundred people buy one hundred pianos, each agreeing to pay for one piano only. The piano is shipped upon payment of $10. The monthly payment is $6. This is for a $400 piano. Write for particulars—how to save $108 on your purchase.

Sixty-seven years in business

Philip Werlein, Ltd., 605-7-9 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

Weber, Chickering, Mathushek, Behr, Pease, Wegman, Ivers & Pond, Steck, Werlein Pianos and Pianolas, Sheet Music—Victor Talking Machines.

THE BEST MADE Angell's Cough and Whooping Cough Syrup

For Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and Throat Trouble.

Contains no Opium or Morphine.
All Druggists, Price 25 and 50 cents.

DUGGAN'S BOLL WEEVIL REMEDY WILL INSURE A GOOD COTTON CROP

Should be used by every cotton planter in the South. Simple, Cheap, Effective. Fully demonstrated at Natchez, Miss., last season. Write for particulars and references.

One gallon diluted treats 2 acres

J. J. DUGGAN, Mn'r,
4326 Magazine Street, New Orleans, La.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection: beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail orders a specialty. All correspondence promptly answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Grenada College.

Secure our catalogue before deciding where to place your daughter. Superior Home Comforts; Only Two Girls in a Room; Marvelous Health Record; Excellent Fine Arts Department; Strong Lyceum Course; Well-Adapted Library; Personal Attention to Individual Pupils; Superior Student Body as Associates; Carefully Selected Faculty; Strong Course of Study; Rates Reasonable; Constant Christian Influence; Permeating and Dominating College Life.

Apply for rooms at once and thus secure choice of location.
W. L. CLIFTON, A.B., Ph.D., President, Grenada, Miss.

L. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Richl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd., JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. NEW ORLEANS
D. C. Godfrey Optician.

Summer Tours

VIA

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

California, Colorado, Utah, Mexico,
AND ALL THE WEST.

NEW YORK

And ALL EASTERN and NORTHERN RESORTS

See Your Local Agent for full Particulars, or Write

J. H. R. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt. C. W. MURPHEY, City Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La. New Orleans, La.

IMPORTANT!

Write this very day for your copy of the Van Antwerp Seed Catalog—Free.

You can not afford to miss it this season. Everything in seeds. Van Antwerp's seeds never disappoint you.

Clip and mail this "ad" with 25 cents and we will mail you TEN 50 papers of our selection of choice seeds.

Seed Department

Van Antwerp's

Dept. B, MOBILE, ALA.

Destroyed by Lightning, Saved by Insurance

That is the story of many churches, and yet many are damaged or destroyed—and no insurance whatever. This latter number is decreasing and has been since our began to impress upon church officials the importance of insurance and sufficient insurance, and to furnish it on such terms that none could afford to put it off. Just think of it! Protection for a few cents or less a day on easy payments, and no assessments. Write for particulars.

Methodist Mutual, The National Mutual Church Insurance Co., of Chicago

Henry P. Magill, Sec. & Mgr., 184 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Agent M. E. Church South
South Brook 1116, Louisville.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS

Should buy for 1910, "Hymns of Glory" by Hamp Sewell, Atlanta, Ga. It is the best book for Sunday Schools. It's New, Over 100 songs, never before printed. Sunday Schools Superintendents can get a sample copy free by writing to-day. And we have a song book—easy payment plan, giving you all the time you want to pay for song books for Sunday Schools only. Let me tell you about it.

Sunday School Superintendents send for free sample "Hymns of Glory" and ask for song book easy payment plan. Address all orders to HAMP SEWELL, Atlanta, Ga.

ASTHMA

If you have asthma simply send me your name, and address and nearest express office and I will at once send you FREE, to try, my regular $1.00 bottle LANE'S CURE FOR ASTHMA. Certain results; wonderful relief. Send no money, but let me prove my great remedy. Write to-day. You have nothing to lose; everything to gain.

D. J. Lane, 338 Lane Bldg., St. Marys, Kansas.

FITS CURED

NO CURE NO PAY—If either words you do not pay our small professional fee until cured and satisfied. German American Institute, 934 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Natchez Dist.—Second Round.
Liberty, at Gladding May 7, 8
Adams, at A. May 14, 15
Wilkinson, at May 21, 22
Centerville, at May 28, 29
Nebo, at Oak Grove June 4, 5
Barlow, at June 11, 12
Bayou Pierre, at June 13
Scotland, at June 18, 19
Homochitto, at Rosetta June 25, 26
The District Conference will begin at Meadville, Tuesday, April 12, 4 p. m.
H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, P. E.
Gloster, Miss.

Jackson Dist.—Second Round.

Florence, at Ritchland.. Apr. 30, May 1
Sharon, at Lone Pine May 7, 8
Canton, 7:30 p. m. May 8
Jackson, First Ch. May 15
Jackson, Capitol St. May 22
Mendenhall, at Braxton May 28, 29
Eden, at Thornton June 1
Lintonia, at Crymes Ch. June 4, 5
Yazoo City, at 8 p. m. June 5
Flora, at Benton June 11, 12
Deasonville, at Fletcher's Chapel June 17
Benton, at Zelglerville June 18, 19
Fannin, at Goshen Spgs. June 22
Harrisville, at Rexford June 25, 26
The District Conference will begin with a sermon, at Canton, on Tuesday, April 26, at 7:30 p. m.

J. R. JONES, P. E.

Seashore Dist.—Second Round.

Oakvale, at Hathorn May 2
Hub, at Paine's Chapel May 3
Long Beach May 7, 8
Coalville, at Cedar Lake May 25
Wolf River Mission, at Beulah, 10 a. m. May 27
Bllox, May 28, 29
Gulfport, 25th Avenue June 1
Lumberton June 4, 5
Poplarville June 6
Carriere and McNeill, at McNeill June 7
Americus, 11 a. m. June 10
Escatawpa, 11 a. m. June 11
Moss Point June 11, 12
Pascagoula June 12, 13
Vanderve June 15

W. B. JONES, P. E.

Brookhaven Dist.—Second Round.

Brookhaven May 3
Gallman, at Mt. Pleasant May 14, 15
Crystal Springs May 15, 16
Silver Creek, at N. Hebron May 21, 22
Hazelhurst May 29, 30
Monticello, at Tilton June 4, 5
Prentiss, at Santee June 11
Boguechitto and Norfield, at Norfield June 12, 13
Pearlhaven, Hawkin Chap June 18, 19
Buford, at Summers Chapel June 26
District Conference June 8, 10

J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

Meridian Dist.—Second Round.

Shuluta and Quitman, at Quitman May 1, 2
Wayne Mission, at Big R. May 7, 8
Buckatunna, at State Line May 15, 16
North Kemper, at Hope Hill May 21, 22
Meridian, East End May 25
Meridian, South Side and Poplar Springs, at Poplar Springs May 26
Enterprise and Stonewall, at Stonewall May 28, 29
Porterville, at Union June 4, 5
Meridian, Central June 7
Meridian, 5th Street June 8
DeKalb, at Pleasant Ridge June 11, 12
Meridian, 7th Avenue June 15
Vimville, at Why Not June 18, 19

W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

District Conference, at Fifth Street, Meridian, May 30 to June 3.

W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

Newton Dist.—Second Round.

Carthage, at Singleton May 7, 8
Montrose Wed May 11
Rose Hill, at Pleas. Grove May 14, 15
Newton Wed May 18
Hickory, at Garlandville May 21, 22
Trenton, at New Prospect Fri May 27
Shiloh, at Johns May 28, 29
Chumkey, at Meehan Wed June 1
Homewood, at High Hill June 4, 5
Decatur, at Decatur Fri June 10
Neshoba, at Mars Hill June 11, 12
Philadelphia, at P. June 12, 13

T. J. O'NEIL, P. E.

Newton, Miss.

Vicksburg Dist.—Second Round.

Anguilla, at Bethel May 1
Rocky Spgs., at Cayuga May 7, 8
Silver City, at Holly Bluff May 12, 13
Sartartia, at Wesley Chpl May 14, 15
Harriston, at Martin May 21, 22
Oak Ridge, at Red Bone May 28, 29
Hermaville, at Pisgah May 31
Edwards, at Clinton June 3
Crawford St. June 5
District Conference at Marysville June 7, 11. Opens on 7th, at 11 a. m.
G. H. GALLOWAY, P. E.

THE JACKSON SANATORIUM

OPPOSITE WEST SIDE OF GOVERNOR'S MANSION

Chris Herbert, M. D.

General Practice and Obstetrics

O. M. Turner, M. D.

Surgery and General Practice

N. J. Milstead, M. D.

General Practice and Obstetrics

L. H. Galloway, M. D.

Physician and General Surgery

Julius Crisler, M. D.

Surgery and Gynecology

H. H. Harrison, M. D.

General Practice and Consultation

W. L. Britt, M. D.

Genito-Urinary and Rectal Diseases

N. Stewart, M. D.

Mental and Nervous Diseases

W. M. Smithson, M. D.

General Practice and Consultation

MISS ROSE KEATING, Graduate Nurse

Superintendent

MISS FANNY FERGUSON, Graduate Nurse

Asst. Superintendent

JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI

THE BIBLE MODE OF BAPTISM

(Published Mar. 1, 1910. Sample copy for 15 cts. in stamps.)

THE LATEST AND MOST CONVINCING BOOK OUT.

Immersion Delusions Completely Exploded by Facts Taken from the Only Bible in Existence During the Days of John and the Apostles. Presented in a Way that all Can Understand. Terse, Clear and Concise.

QUESTION SETTLED—For all of those who have any regard for Ancient Divine Authority, even that which John had when he baptized, the question of the mode of Baptism is forever settled. Those who are fond of divisions need not have many things on which to differ with others. But there is now no further excuse for differences as to the mode by which Baptism was performed in the days of Christ and the Apostles.

AN UNUSUAL DEMAND—Never before has there been such a demand for this exact information as there is today. Methodists and others who have all the while practiced The Bible Mode of Baptism have seriously neglected to inform the people on this subject. Immersionists, including Mormons, Adventists and Campbellites, make it no test day nor night. Many of the present generation know little except from that side, and much of it is based on the grossest of falsehood.

$525.00 IN PRIZES For Bible Readers, Old and Young

First—In order to encourage Bible study, I offer $25.00 in prizes for the best answers to a list of questions on the subject of Baptism. I will send the questions free to any address. Get all the help you want from any source, and if you will enclose 15 cents in stamps, I will mail you a copy of The Bible Mode of Baptism from which all of the answers may easily be learned. Send for book and questions at once.

Second—I offer a prize of $50.00 to any one who will furnish the references where the following words occur in the Greek New Testament: the number of times which it is claimed that twenty Baptist Standard works say they occur, namely, rantizo, 62 times; ekho 152 times, and lovo, 139 times. Get all the help you wish from any Greek scholar, lexicon, or concordance, and let me hear from you.

A MOST LIBERAL PROPOSITION—At the request of hundreds of people I have just published a revised and enlarged edition of The Bible Mode of Baptism, 3,000 copies of which are mailed out this week, and letters from the Atlantic to the Pacific, including Cuba and Mexico, indicate that at least a million copies are needed right now. I am taking steps to furnish them, and with the co-operation of preachers and people it can be done within the next few months. Let every pastor, S. S. Supr., teacher or other Christian worker, please let me know at once, how many he can use at $1 per dozen; $3 per 100. You send no money until books are sold. Retail price, 15 cents a copy. AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY COMMUNITY.

REMEMBER: It is not a cheap little tract that I am offering. Send 15 cents for sample and see what it is. It consists of three parts: (1) The Bible Mode of Baptism; (2) The Church and Children; (3) Immersion Delusions Exploded. If you are not satisfied, return it and get your stamps back.

Send Stamps or P. O. Money Order. Address Rev. J. E. Mahaffey, Clinton, S. C.

USE THE L. & A. RAILWAY

"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service
Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden
and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

is a favorite wherever used. Tests show highest quality of any gelatine made. Pure and Healthful. Simplest to prepare, yet makes greatest variety of dishes. Hardens quickly and makes the tenderest of all jellies.

EVERY PACKAGE
MAKES TWO QUARTS

We want you
to try Crystal
Gelatine, now, in your own home.

Ask your grocer. If he does not keep it, send us his name and we will send you a free
sample package.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.
121A Beverly Street
BOSTON, MASS.

We are not to live with others, but for them. Any one who lives to himself alone, can hardly expect to be very popular. The one who is least selfish makes for himself the wisest place in the world.—Selected.

What is the faith which saves men? It is that which makes a little child hold tight, in the dark, to his father's hand.

LAFAYETTE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Lafayette District Conference will convene in Eunice Wednesday, June 8 at 9 a. m., and continue in session until business of same is finished. I trust that every preacher in the district will not only come himself, but bring a full delegation, and come prepared to stay through Sunday. Let's have an old-time, wide-awake meeting.

Eunice is the best railroad town in the State, perhaps, to its size. You can come over the Southern Pacific Railroad, the Frisco Railroad, Rock Island and Texas and Pacific railroads. We expect to have a great time.

Brethren come! And, Mr. Editor, you and the publisher of the Advocate are respectfully invited.

S. D. HOWARD, P. C.

WINONA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Winona District Conference will be held at Moorhead, Miss., June 2-5, 1910.

I hereby announce the following committees: License to Preach—John Ritchey, H. T. Gaines, W. C. Lester. Orders and Admissions—J. A. Hall, H. S. Spragins, T. H. Lipscomb.

Let me urge every pastor to see to it that his Sunday school superintendents, recording stewards, local preachers and delegates are in attendance. We need them and they need us. To make the Conference far-reaching in its results there must be a good attendance from every part of the district.

I shall not urge all the pastors to stay over Sunday, leaving their pulpits vacant, but if they can do so without any loss to their work, all well and good. We will close the business by 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and three-fourths of the preachers can leave Moorhead at 6:15 Saturday afternoon and be in their places Sunday morning.

Let us have a full attendance. Keep your eye on Moorhead for June 2-5.

Rev. W. C. Lester will preach the opening sermon Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, June 2. That will be the first service. E. S. LEWIS, P. C.

NOTICE.

The Oxford District Conference will be held at Abbeville May 11-13. Rev. O. W. Bradley will preach the opening sermon Tuesday night. The Women's Missionary Societies will hold their conferences on Thursday. Friday will be Laymen's Day.

Committees: On License and Recommendation—W. G. Burks, J. W. Bell, W. L. Brown. On Orders—W. W. Mitchell, O. W. Bradley, D. C. Foust. J. E. CUNNINGHAM, P. C.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Ellisville, Miss., April 19, 1910. We, the undersigned committee appointed by the Hattiesburg District Missionary Institute to formulate plans and arrange a program for a Preachers' Institute to embrace all the territory adjacent to Hattiesburg, make the following announcement:

We will meet in Hattiesburg May 5, with the following program:

11 a. m.—Sermon, by George D. Anderson.

3:30 p. m.—"The Call to Service," Dr. J. M. Weems.

4:30 p. m.—An open hour.

8 p. m.—"The Book of Romans," Rev. M. S. Sbarbrough.

We wish to emphasize that the Institute is not confined to the Hattiesburg District, but is for all the brethren who desire to come. We wish to make it a season of refreshing for us all.

GEO. H. THOMPSON,
JOHN A. MOORE,
J. C. CHAMBERS,
Committee.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

LIFE OF BISHOP SOULE.

The Publishing Agents announce the forthcoming second volume in the "Founders' Series" of biographies—namely "The Life of Joshua Soule," by Rev. H. M. Du Bose, D. D. A biography of Bishop Soule has long been a desideratum. Twenty-five years ago Bishop McTyeire undertook the task, but gave it up because of a paucity of material bearing on the Bishop's early life and his ministry prior to his elevation to the episcopacy. But a new age has come, bringing to the types many new books of reminiscence and biography. From these and also from many hitherto unpublished documents, as the result of great labor, Dr. Du Bose has winnowed out a world of fact, record, and incident, which, now being put together in historical order, make a biography of such inherent value and inspirational suggestion as will, we believe, make it appeal to our people as few biographies have. The story of Southern Methodism in its ideal claims and appeal is one with the character and faith of Joshua Soule, and to make this appeal has been the motif of the author throughout. This number will appear in June.

Send your orders now. Uniform with the "Life of Bishop Asbury." Pages (estimated), 260. Price, $1, postpaid. Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., or G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.

"UNCLE DAN" IS FIRST.

Everyone understands that is Rev. D. L. Cogdell. He sends from Lulu and Lyon $4 for church extension.

J. R. BINGHAM, Treasurer.
Carrollton, Miss.

Rev. J. N. WARE.

Whereas, An all-wise God has seen fit to remove from this earthly home our lamented brother and former pastor, Rev. J. N. WARE. Therefore, be it Resolved, By the Parsonage Aid Society of Rocky Springs, Claiborne County, Mississippi, where the deceased served four years as pastor, that we, as well as others, have sustained an irreparable loss of a loyal, earnest Christian worker. In all his dealings with his fellow creatures, he was ever prone to look on the better side of nature. He was a kind and affectionate husband and father, devoted to his God, home and friends.

Resolved, That we do as a body extend to the bereaved wife and children our heartfelt sympathy, and that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes, and copy of the same be sent to the Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy sent to Mrs. J. N. Ware, Montrose, Miss.

(Mrs. MOLLIE E. REGAN,
(Mrs.) NELLIE R. McCAY,
(Mrs.) CORNELIA F. DREXLER,
Committee.

Rocky Springs, Miss., Feb. 22, 1910.

Sleepless Nights

"My wife is of a nervous temperament, and has suffered much from sleeplessness. Since using Dr. Miles' Nerve she has greatly improved and now sleeps well."

W. W. FISHBACK, Redkey, Ind.

When the nerves become weak, worn-out, excitable from overwork, worry, grief or mental exhaustion, their turbulent condition prevents that total relaxation that induces sleep.

Dr. Miles' Nerve

by its soothing and quieting influence and by strengthening and replenishing the exhausted nerve force brings profound and restful sleep.

The first bottle will benefit; if not, the druggist will return your money.

Darsam Bros. Coal Co.

COAL, COKE AND ANTHRACITE,

2217 Calhoun Street, New Orleans.

Phone Main 1552; P. O. Box 1406.

VISIT

MINERAL WELLS

FOR HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND

WEST TEXAS

FOR
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE
DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,
General Passenger Agent.

DALLAS TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a. m.
Instead of at 9:20 a. m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville
THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MON-DAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati
Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Car.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p. m.

FOR

NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Car.
SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW
ON SALE.

You Look Prematurely Old

Because of those ugly, grizzly gray hairs. Use "LA CREOLE" HAIR COLOR RESTORER. Price $1.00, retail.

Stop LaGrippe!

Before it Stops You.

Take
JOHNSON'S
Chill and Fever Tonic
Knocks it up every time.
Your money back if it fails.
Get it to-day!

50c at Druggists.

ESTABLISHED 1858
BELLS
CHURCH AND SCHOOL
With the SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

PLYMYER
CHURCH
BELLS
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWAYING, MORE DUR-
ABLE, LOWER PRICE.
SEE FREE CATALOGUE
TELLS WHY.
Write to Plymyer Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Bowden
CHURCH AND SCHOOL
BELLS
Catalog Free.
NEW BELL-FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

GALL STONES or LIVER
or Stomach Ailments Cured.
AVOID AN OPERATION.

Have you Pain or Distress in the Stomach? Pains after meals? Right-side pains or Bilebacks? Spasms of indigestion? Sick Headache? Biliousness? Colic? Jaundice? Bile? Constipation? Piles? Sourness? Flatulence? Oppression over Liver or Stomach? If you have any of these symptoms you need the GALL-STONE treatment. Write for FREE BOOK. CALLSTONE MEDICINE CO., Sole U. S. Agents, 1424-44-46 Northern Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

WE OFFER YOU A POSITION
We want 50 men right away. Must have them and will pay good money—$100 to $150 a day guaranteed ahead of you to class of work. You need no money. Everything done on our capital. You deliver only goods and collect. A big opportunity. Write today for free plans, sample letters, etc. All free. G. H. GROUNDS, Manager 1027 W. Adams Street, Dept. 5548, Chicago, Ill.

PARALYSIS
Locomotor Ataxia
Conquered at Last
Chase's Blood &
Nerve Tablets does it. Write for Free Advice. Phone
Dr. CHASE, 224 North 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

HOME REMEDY

Mrs. Temple Clark suffered for years, before she found relief in that popular, successful woman's medicine, Wine of Cardui.

Mrs. Clark, who lives in Timberville, Minn., writes: "Cardui has been worth more to me than a carload of silver. If it had not been for Cardui, I would have been dead. I love a dollar, but I have never seen one that I do not think as much of, as I do of a bottle of Cardui. I now keep it in my house, as regularly as I do coal oil or coffee, and have done so for years."

"Some years ago I jumped off a horse and had a mishap, and for about four years after that I suffered in tense agony. At last I was induced to try Cardui, which cured me, and now I am well and happy."

"I am sure Cardui will cure other sick ladies as it has me."

Cardui is for women. It acts specifically and in a natural manner on the womanly system and has been found to relieve pain and to restore woman's health.

If you are nervous, miserable, or suffering from any form of female trouble, try Cardui. What it has done for other sick ladies it surely can do for you. Sold by all first class druggists, with full directions for use.

Epworth League

Rev. H. B. Watkins.

TOPIC FOR MAY 1, 1910.

Our Motto: The Upward Look and the Lift.

Reference: Phil. iii, 7, 8; I. Cor. vi, 19, 20; Heb. xii, 12.

The mottoes of Epworth Leaguers in American Methodism are "All for Christ" and "Look Up, Lift Up," the latter used by the Leaguers of Northern Methodism and the former among our own young people. Since both are very well comprehended, in either, I shall speak especially in this article of the upward look and lift.

In the first place, I call attention to the fact that the passion for the lifting up comes from the looking up. This is no where more clearly illustrated than in Isaiah's startlingly beautiful temple vision where the prophet, telling the very year it occurred, the year that King Uzziah died, declared he "saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up." He heard the sweet, sacred song of the seraphim and felt the trembling of the temple. Out of that vision, the upward looking, came two impressions. The first was to his conscience, for he said, "Woe is me, for I am undone, because I am a man of unclean lips and dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips." Then came the Seraph with the coal of fire and touched his lips and said, "Thine iniquity is taken away."

The second impression came as if in this new consciousness of sins forgiven the Lord was calling him to duty, saying, "Whom shall I send and who will go for us?" He found himself willing now and exclaimed, "Here am I, send me!" I have an idea that the Lord had been saying that all the while, but Isaiah with his consciousness of sin had been deaf to such a call, but now the atmosphere was clear, conscience was satisfied, and God's voice reached a responsive soul.

As men look up to-day they see the Lord, but on a cross instead of on a throne, "high and lifted up." They hear no angel song, but the Master saying, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Then in penitence they say, "Woe is me, for I am a man of unclean life and I have crucified the Lord of hosts." Then his face is turned and in his own agony the Lord is moved with compassion and says, "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee." Then as of old the Lord is saying again, "Who will go for us and whom shall we send?" And he answers in gratitude, "Here am I, send me." Who that has an upward look can fail to have born in his heart a great desire to lift up—to lift up, even though that means to stoop to lift. Men have never done much lifting who have not stooped down to reach the fallen and to get a good hold. Jesus stooped from heaven to earth, from divine to human, from Master to servant, from life to death. How he stooped, that he might lift.

I say again the power to lift up comes from looking up. The burden is too heavy for merely human hands to lift up. The knees are too feeble for our unaided weakness to give strength. The sheep are too far away across the Valley and in the desert for our unassisted voice to reach. Because it is hard, because we are weak, we despair. We say, "Master, we have toiled all the night long and have taken nothing!" Can we not now say, "Nevertheless, at thy word, trusting in that power of thine, I will let down the net?"

It was to look up that Jesus bade his disciples tarry in Jerusalem. To look for power "from on high."

O, you say it isn't the desire to help I need; it's power to help."

Friend, "look up, that you may lift up."

I say, in the last place, that the reward for lifting up comes from looking up. Or not all the reward, there is joy enough in the consciousness of having helped to abundantly repay for the effort. The most joyous compensation you ever gave your pastor was when you said, "You have helped me." To bring in the sheaves is enough to make one "Come rejoicing." I have heard an aged servant of God say over and over, "If I knew there were no heaven, I should feel abundantly repaid for all I have ever done." Jesus forgot his hunger in Samaria in the joy of rescuing a perishing woman. "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me and to finish his work." But that isn't all the reward. Look up! Look up, as Paul did while he said, "I am ready to be offered." Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, and not for me only, but to all them love his appearing!" Look up and hear the Master say, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life!"

We must not look for our reward in people's gratitude. They often, though grateful, forget to say so. We mustn't look for reward even in results. We are poor judges of the results. Many of them we never see. Many that we see disappoint us. No, not in these. Look up! Look up to where he says, "Well done, good and faithful servant! Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!"
Magnolia, Miss.

FOR FEVERISHNESS AND ACHING
Whether from malarious conditions, colds or overheating, try HICK'S CAPSICINE. It reduces the fever and relieves the aching. It's Liquid—10, 25 and 50 cents at Drug Stores.

Sunday School

(Continued from Page 10.)

treat as he pleases. It rather means: The Sabbath was made for man's good, so that only what makes for man's true good, spiritual, mental, physical, is lawful on that day. "It is lawful only to do well on the Sabbath days."

3. The test of conduct to apply as to Sunday activities is then, (1) Is it good for my soul? Is it good for my mind? Is it good for my body? and precedence must be given in the order named. It is a law of ethics that a lower good can not be chosen to the neglect or injury of a higher, without sin.

4. But (2) is it for the good of others? We must also ask, and beware of either leaving undone or doing anything the influence of which might be harmful to others, if they follow our example. Remember Kant's Imperative: "Act so that the principle of thy action may be one of universal application." This applied would send many to Church who otherwise might think they could spend the time as profitably at home. The example won't do.

Lastly, is it for the good of others in service that I may render to their souls or bodies? Here sacrifice, if need be, must be made of lesser physical good to us for the higher spiritual good of blessing to other lives, in which we too shall share.

5. Clear and convincing evidence only serves to irritate one who is self-satisfied and does not wish to see. Do I become irritated when another shows me clearly I am wrong? If so, I love not the truth—a most serious charge.

"Let It Go At That"

No Estey Organ workman ever finishes a task with the words, "let it go at that." Everything is done well in the making of Estey Organs. When you put an Estey Organ in your Church or Sabbath School the job is done for twenty years or more.

Address Estey Brattleboro, Vt.

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why a trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also.

COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.

1300-1302

DRYADES STREET.

PHONES—Jackson 1080—1081.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL

We ship on approval without a cent deposit, freight prepaid. DON'T PAY A CENT if you are not satisfied after using the bicycle 10 days.

DONOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires until you receive our latest catalog illustrating every kind of bicycle, and have learned our unheard of prices and marvelous new offers.

ONE CENT is all it will cost you to write a postal and everything will be sent you free post paid by return mail. You will get much valuable information. Don't wait, write it now. TIRES, Coaster. Brake rear wheels, lamps, sundries at half usual prices. MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. 226, CHICAGO

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing by hand—no breakage.

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE

LE PAGE
INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO
TORONTO - CANADA

ILLINOIS CENTRAL

WILL SELL TICKETS AT RATE $32.00

To San Francisco, Los Angeles and other California Points.

March 1st - April 15th

To Portland, Seattle, Spokane, $45.95,

And Other Points in Oregon, Washington, Utah, and Wyoming.

LIBERAL STOPOVERS.

Full Particulars.

Ticket Office, 141 St. Charles
PHONE MAIN 3619

Absolutely Pure...

Royal Baking Powder
Improves the flavor and adds to the healthfulness of the food

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

THOMAS JEFFERSON VARDEN was born, June 14, 1841 in Cheatem County, Tenn., and died Jan. 25, 1910. He was married to Miss Eleanor White in 1870. Of this union three children were born; two daughters and one son. One daughter preceded him to the better world. He gave up his wife about thirteen years ago, when the Lord said, "It is enough, come up higher." Since her death, he has lived with his daughter, Mrs. Neasom. Brother Varden joined the M. E. Church, South in 1870. He was a true man as a citizen; as a church member he was faithful. He was sick, but a few days. The writer visited him in his last hours and found him all right. He was a man that everyone who knew called a good man. We buried him in Pine Grove Cemetery in the presence of a host of relatives and friends. Oh, how we miss him! May the Lord bless and console the bereaved ones, and may they live to meet him in that country where we will never say good-by!

His pastor, H. C. MURPHY.

The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McNeal and took LETTIE MAL home to dwell with Jesus and the holy angels. She was born April, 1900, and departed this life Feb. 24, 1910. She leaves two brothers and one sister; three half-brothers and three half-sisters and father and mother to mourn their loss. Little Lettie was a sweet girl and all her schoolmates and friends loved her. She was a good little Christian Sunday school worker; but Jesus still loves little children, so he has taken her. We cannot call her back to us, but shall all meet her if we obey our blessed Lord's command. And a blessed thought it is to know that we shall know each other when we meet to part no more. Weep not loved ones "as those who have no hope," but look through your tears to Jesus who is able and willing to help you. To the home she brought joy, and in passing over to Jesus, heaven has become more attractive. May the memory of this pure, sweet life and the grace of God cheer and comfort the hearts of the loved ones who have our deepest sympathy.

(MRS.) EVIL JONES.

Mrs. CORDELIA STRONG WEISSINGER finished a long pilgrimage of nearly 83 years, March 14, 1910. She was born in Perry County, Ala., May 27, 1827. She was converted in childhood and joined the Methodist Church at Marion, Ala. She was happily married at 16 years of age to A. J. Weissinger, a native of the same county. After nearly four years faithful service in the Confederate Army, her noble husband died in 1865. Sister Weissinger was the mother of ten children, eight of whom are still living; seven sons and one daughter. The father and three sons fought in the Confederate ranks side by side during the four years of awful strife and all of them survived the terrible conflict. The three sons are still alive and are proud of the fact that they were Confederate Soldiers. Sister Weissinger also leaves behind her twenty-five grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren. She lived to a good old age and died with Christian faith and courage. We laid her body away in the grave, but her sweet spirit has gone to heaven. She spent the closing years of her life in the home of her son, Dr. W. S. Weissinger, of Hernando, Miss. No mother ever received better attention and care. By the skillful ministrations of the affectionate physician son, her life was prolonged for many years. The love which the doctor and the single son, Alex, manifested toward their aged and feeble mother was beautiful to behold. She left behind her the aroma of an unostentatious, but beautiful Christian life. She was patient in all of her sufferings. She has gone where suffering and sorrow are unknown. Heaven is enriched by her presence. There she awaits the laughter and sons, and the large company of grandchildren and great-grandchildren. God grant that not one of them may fail to meet in that better world.

W. D. WENDELL.

On January 20, 1910, the Lord saw fit to take from our midst Aunt CATHERINE PIERCE. All that was possible was done to revive her, but the Lord knew best, and our loss is her eternal gain. It is so lonely here without her. She told us before she went that we would find her in heaven. May God help all of her children and loved ones to bear bravely this great sorrow, and to meet her on the other shore, to part no more!

LAURA MCKINNON.

MRS. MARY ELIZABETH WILLIAMS, daughter of W. M. and Louisa Campbell, was born June 22, 1845, in Catahoula Parish and moved to Bienville Parish, La., when six years of age, and there continued to reside until her death, February 24, 1910. Sister Williams was happily married to George W. Williams, a brave Confederate soldier, on December 16, 1865, in whose faithful companionship she walked and lived and toiled for nearly half a century, and God blessed the union with nine children—three sons and six daughters—all of whom survive her, except one daughter, who preceded her mother to her reward. She was also the grandmother of 25 children. Early in life she gave her heart to God and united with the M. E. Church, South, in which communion she lived a loyal member, being at the time of her death a member of Old Castor Church and a constant reader of the Advocate, whose weekly visits to her home she highly prized. Her Bible was her daily companion and her religious character is stamped upon her children, in that they, too, are all members of mother's Church, except one. In the evening time of her life, when her toils and cares were at an end and she had been made ready for the Bridegroom, and surrounded by all her loved ones, she closed her eyes upon earthly scenes and sweetly fell on sleep, and her body was laid to rest in the Old Castor Cemetery to await the trumpet call on the morning of the resurrection. May our heavenly Father, who never suffers a sparrow to fall unnoticed, minister to the comfort and consolation of the bereaved and help them to make preparation for a happy family reunion in our Father's house on high. Her pastor,

JOHN G. SLOANE.

Dr. H. T. T. DUPREE was born in Virginia on the 11th day of March, 1822, and was called to his reward on February 24, 1910. He was the seventh of nine children born to Henry and Rebecca Dupree, of Greenville County, Virginia. He was married to Miss Lizzie Fairchilds, of Hinds County, in 1859, to whom were born two children—Mrs. E. V. O'Neal, of Mineral Wells, Tex., and J. H. Dupree, of Hinds County, Miss. In 1864 he was married to Miss Margaret Herring, of Hinds County, Miss., who bore him three sons; only one of whom is still living—S. F. Dupree, of Yazoo City, Miss. On March 8, 1881, he was married to Miss Pattie Yellowley, of Madison County, Mississippi, who still survives him. The two daughters born to them died in infancy. Dr. Dupree moved to Raymond when he was a young man and immediately began the practice of medicine. He soon built up a splendid practice and became a prominent citizen of Hinds County. He was a man of broad mind and high ideals. He took a prominent part in the affairs of the State, and rendered invaluable service to his section of the country during the days of "Reconstruction." He was a strong advocate of peace, and when others would incite the people to do rash things during those dark days, he always pleaded for the sane and more quiet procedure. He finally gave up the practice of medicine and bought him a large plantation and moved out on it. At one time it was said to be the best improved place in the county. Dr. Dupree was a Mason and a member of the Methodist Church at Raymond. I never met him until I came on the Bolton charge, and I feel that I am the loser for not having known him sooner. It was with great pleasure that I spent several nights out there with him and his family previous to his death. He seemed always so glad to see me, and talked quite often about his spiritual life, and his preparation for eternity. He told me just before our last Annual Conference that if I came back I would have to conduct his funeral, and said he was living in daily communion with God. His most excellent wife said of him "Not a shadow clouded his spiritual horizon, but his voice continually uttered his Savior's praise." "He regarded this life of mortal breath but a suburb of that life elysian, whose portal we call death." As pastor, I feel that one of my best friends has gone. We weep with his loved ones, but not as those who have no hope.

W. A. TERRY, P. C.

Brother J. MADISON WILLIAMS was born in Green County, Alabama, March, 27, 1850, and died at his home in Yalobusha County, Mississippi, January 26, 1910. December 7, 1871, he was married to Miss E. J. Fisher and moved to Yalobusha County, where he lived out his life and died beloved by all who knew him and, himself loving all. He was converted to Christ when but a boy, and until his death stood fast in the faith. He joined the M. E. Church, South, and for many years past served most faithfully and efficiently as a steward of Bethlehem. The father of five daughters and two sons, he is survived by his good wife and six children, the oldest son having been taken from their midst eight years ago. Bro. Williams was a kind husband and loving father, fulfilling all his Christian duties to a degree beyond human reproach. He followed the golden rule and reaped a golden harvest. He sought first "the kingdom of God and his righteousness" and found love, peace and plenty.

He treated experiences as mere incidents leading to one grand entirety. Standing above experiences, his ponderous character made itself felt on every occasion, in whatever company or dealings. His good, pure Christian manhood was much in evidence and no man could mention his name but in eulogy. Men went out of their way to sing his praises and none harbored ill-will against him. None knew him but in love; none called his name but in praise. May his surviving son emulate his noble example, keep the character of his father ever fresh in his memory, and live secure in Jesus Christ. Bro. Williams won a silent and complete victory. Living ever in Christ, he closed his eyes in eternal sleep with the conviction deep set and secure in his heart: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day."

E. NASH BROYLES.

Mrs. L. CARY SADLER, formerly of Pearl River, La., passed quietly and peacefully away from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ida Fraser, of Slidell, La., to the "home of many mansions," of which he said, "I go to prepare a place for you." Mother became ill on Christmas Eve, and from that time on, till 3 a. m., March 12, her life hung by a slender thread; then "the silver cord was loosed" and the Master said come up higher. Rev. J. V. Peters, of Slidell, conducted the funeral services, and at her request, "Crossing the Bar," and "Lead Kindly Light," were sung. Born in Cincinnati, Ohio, May 9, 1831, she lived nearly seventy-nine years a beautiful life, and died a triumphant death. Having buried her husband and four children, herself the last of a large family, she was "acquainted with grief," yet always cheerful and kind. She lived her profession; was chaste in conversation. I never heard a coarse expression fall from her lips. "Thou God seest me," was one of the first lessons she taught us; second, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain." O that all were so taught! When Brother Downer requested through the Advocate her friends and former pastors to correspond with her, Rev. H. R. Singleton, Sr., was the first to respond. He, too, has passed away. Kind friends, of whom mother always had many, ministered to her and able physicians attended her; but, like a tired child, she fell on sleep. We, her three remaining children, miss her sorely. She was a wise counsellor; we always carried our troubles and perplexities to her. She wrote and planned and talked of our work during the first weeks of her illness, and wanted to be busy. The tired hands have found the rest which remaineth unto the people of God, and we must close up the ranks and march on to victory. "Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." We'll meet again.

(Mrs.) ALICE CARY MCKINNEY.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MAY 5, 1910.

C. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

VOL. 57—No. 18.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2330.

Editorial.

There is not a flower in all this down that owes to the sun what I owe to Christ.—Tennyson.

Only by serving humanity can we serve God. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me." The lowliest ministry performed for a fellow-man is a task fit for angels.

The path of obedience is the path of progress. It leads onward and upward toward the spiritual altitudes and the heavenly home, growing brighter and brighter all the way. He who treads it is climbing ever toward the skies.

A change of character is not a change of nature. Sin may deface the image of God; it can never efface it. The divine spark exists in every soul. Dormant it may be, concealed deeply beneath an accumulation of earthiness and sensuality, it often is. Nevertheless it is not extinguished; nor can it be. And that spark of divine life is infinitely precious. To bring it to light and to rekindle it into a growing flame will repay all the labor and sacrifice of men or angels.—George Henry Hubbard.

There will be no miscarriages of justice under the moral government of the universe. Virtue will have its sure reward, and vice its certain punishment. God is the administrator, and exact justice will be meted out to each and all. The wrong decisions of earthly tribunals will be reversed, and retribution will at last overtake the guilty who escaped on earth. The harvest may for a time be delayed, but nothing is truer than the words of the Apostle, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Agnosticism has been a much used word in these latter times. It has commonly been defined as "ignorance of God and things supernatural." But as Dr. Thomas Jay Hudson strikingly observes in his "Divine Pedigree of Man," as exemplified by skeptical scientists, this is scarcely an adequate definition. As they illustrate it, it is not merely "ignorance" but "aggressive ignorance." They do not stop with saying "we do not know God," but they go further and affirm that he is "unknowable." They undertake to erect a barrier between the known and the unknown, and to prescribe the limits beyond which man in his search after truth can never go. Thus they become extreme dogmatists, and would stifle the very spirit of investigation and enquiry of which they have been the boasted champions. This is one of the glaring inconsistencies of intellectual infidelity.

Chiseled upon the tombstone of Daniel Webster at Marshfield, Massachusetts, are the following words uttered in his lifetime by this foremost master of English speech: "Philosophic argument, especially that drawn from the vastness of the universe in comparison with the apparent insignificance of this globe, has sometimes shaken my reason for the faith that is within me; but my heart has always assured me, and reassured me, that the gospel of Jesus Christ must be a divine reality. The sermon on the mount cannot be a merely human production. This belief enters into the very depths of my conscience. The whole history of man proves it." And Napoleon, speaking of Christ, is reported to have said, "Everything in him astonishes me. His spirit overawes me and his will confounds me. Between him and any other man there is no possible term of comparison." Thus does the Savior look as lofty to those standing upon the highest pinnacles of human greatness as to those of us who stand on the common level below.

"UNITY OF METHODISM."

Under this caption in the Central Christian Advocate of the 13th ultimo, Rev. Jesse W. Jennings, D.D., LL.D., a member of the North Nebraska Conference and manager of the Kansas City Depository of the Methodist Episcopal Church, discusses the question of uniting all the Methodisms of the United States in one great body, and outlines the course of procedure which he considers most feasible for accomplishing this result.

The spirit of his communication is in every respect admirable, and we do not hesitate to say that we think the plan which he proposes is "far and away" the best that has yet been suggested. Indeed, Dr. Jennings seems to have a comprehensive grasp of the difficulties involved, and evinces a genuine desire to meet them fairly and honestly and to overcome them by making as well as asking concessions.

His plan, briefly stated, is as follows: He would have all the Methodist bodies of the United States to appoint commissioners for a conference. And having come together, he would have them organize into one great communion, to be called the United Methodist Episcopal Church, thus eliminating all sectional names as to territory. This great body he would then have to divide into two sections—one to be known as the United Methodist Episcopal Church, and the other as the United Methodist Episcopal Church, Colored. These two great churches, he would have entirely independent, each managing its own affairs from the local class organization, through all of its various organizations up to and including the General Conference. But he would have a General Commission with advisory powers, appointed quadrennially by the General Conferences of the two bodies, for the purpose of studying the needs of the colored people and suggesting such means and measures as may be deemed best to promote their moral and religious development.

Dr. Jennings is entirely correct in his conclusion that the chief obstacle to any organic relations between the two Episcopal Methodisms in America lies not in any question of origin, or doctrine, or polity (though there are some governmental differences which are not unimportant), but in the attitude which the two churches sustain to our brother in black. But, as he strikingly says, this difference of view concerning the negro exists more in theory than in actual practice.

We quote a few lines from him on this point: "Now let us be fair in dealing with the color problem. For the sake of peace we must make mutual concessions, or fall of union. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is not the enemy of the negro; it seeks to befriend the negro as a negro. It obstructs him only when he would pose as a white man. The Methodist Episcopal Church declares in substance, as a theory, the equality of the negro with the white man, but in practice she is in accord with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. She segregates the colored race into schools for colored, and also churches and conferences for colored. Bishops for languages and races would doubtless never have been entertained by the General Conference of 1904 had it not been for giving a limited episcopacy to the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church."

But what of the outlook for the scheme proposed by Dr. Jennings? Is it feasible, and could it be put into operation? We have no hesitancy in saying that at the present time it is utterly impracticable and impossible. Organic union is a thing which can not be hastened. If it ever comes at all, it must come when the people are one in spirit and sentiment—must come naturally, and not as a result of any artificial effort to promote it. It would be suicidal for the Southern Church to undertake to enter into such an arrangement now. It would precipitate an era of dissatisfaction and wrangling compared to which the recent strife among the Cumberland Presbyterians would be tame and trifling.

Let us not be misunderstood. We have no bitterness of feeling toward the North or the Methodist Episcopal Church. We are not discussing the desirability, but the present feasibility of organic union. We think an attempt to effect it now would prove abortive, or, if successful, disastrous. We are firmly convinced that our immediate course of action should be projected along lines of fraternity and federation. And when we have learned to bear ourselves toward each other as brethren of a common faith should, closer relations may in the providence of God follow. But until that day dawns, it is idle to talk of union.

THE HEROES OF ETERNITY.

Eternity has its heroes; no less than time. The world hangs its laurels upon the brows of those whom men call great, and heaven will place starry crowns upon the heads of those whom God adjudges to be worthy. But the heroes of earth will not be the heroes of the sky. The angelic orchestra will not play to celebrate the victories of Alexander, Hannibal, Caesar or Napoleon. The busts in the niches of the great heavenly temple will not be those of warriors who waded through blood to a royal throne, nor of kings who wasted their money to maintain the splendors of a regal court, nor of poets who soiled the wings of their genius in the cesspools of lust; but of heroic martyrs who sleep in unknown graves, of preachers who toiled in poverty and obscurity and died "unwept, unhonored and unsung," and of humble mothers who, like flowers far out on the desert, shed their fragrance unappreciated and almost unseen. The great ministers in eternity will not necessarily be bishops and archbishops and deans and canons, but those who wore Christ in their hearts and sacrificed their all to win souls for the Master. The most distinguished Christians will not necessarily be those who are here most applauded for their philanthropy, whose names are blazoned abroad, and who occupy conspicuous places in the Church, but they will be those whose motives are purest, whose hearts are holiest, and whose lives are most completely under the sway of the scepter of the Son of God.

"When God shall call the muster-roll,
As heroes, he'll mark off
Some who ne'er charged at Waterloo,
Or stormed at Malakoff.

"Stars, garters, crosses, ribbons, fade;
New orders here unfold:
The widow's mite, St. Martin's cloak,
The cup of water cold.

"Imperial names of history,
Omitted from the list:
In Paradise, preferment proves
A hidden satirist.

"Some humble folk we knew quite well,
But passed with scarce a nod,
Now rank as heaven's nobility—
The chivalry of God."

No man has wealth enough to discharge his whole obligation to God by the mere payment of money. Giving is an essential part of religion, but by no means all of it. Greater than his fortune is the individual who has amassed it. One deathless soul is of more value than all the material world. Christ wants the recognition of his lordship, the love and adoration of the heart, and a life of active, unselfish service, and for these there is no substitute.

Christian Advocate.

Published for the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DIRECTIONS.

Correspondents will please direct all communications intended for the Editor to 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Communications intended for the Business Department should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Write with ink, and only on one side of the paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after two weeks, notify us, and we will make it right. Papers will be continued unless subscribers order otherwise.

THE PREACHER—HIS ONE SUPREME PURPOSE.

By Rev. W. S. Lagrone.

This subject will not go before the General Conference for discussion, but it is of far more importance to the success of the preacher and the salvation of men than the change of name, the time-limit, the presiding eldership or anything else. Purpose expresses the idea of intelligent design—something set before us as an end or aim to be attained. All true greatness and success has its beginning and end in a right purpose. A man without a purpose is like a ship at sea without chart or compass. Many who sleep in nameless graves, or wander through the tortuous course of a wasted life with faculties as great as McCauley's, failed because they lacked steadiness of purpose. One has said, "Keep your eye on the mark and don't flinch when you pull the trigger." James says, "He that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed." A man's purpose in life should be like a great river born of a thousand rills in the mountains, whose mighty current flows changeless, to the sea, never losing its way or changing its course for the thousand streams that fall into it on the right and on the left, but only using them to increase its force in the channel.

Of all men in the world the man called of God to preach the gospel should be a man of one supreme purpose. A supreme purpose is the highest, greatest aim for which one strives. There is no higher or more sacred place than the call of God to publish the glad tidings of peace.

No study is too severe, no culture too high, no sweep of knowledge too broad, for him who is to stand as God's spokesman. But all this does not constitute a qualification for the work. The great apostle said: "This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." His life throbs with this mighty pulsation. It sways him in purpose, commands him in action, and dominates him in sacrifice. He resolutely and steadily refused to be diverted from it by any consideration that men or devils might offer. To my mind, one of the best evidences of the need of a supreme purpose is the widespread disposition for change in the secular and secondary things of the Church. What we need is a change of purpose. The age in which we live demands, as never before, a ministry like this. There were never so many claims upon his time and mind as to-day. The temptations are from every quarter. Science and art, and literature, the worldly pleasure-loving spirit, a people with itching ears for some new thing, these all get in the way of him whose mind and heart are not stayed on God.

Anything short of a burning desire for the glory of God and the salvation of the lost is unworthy of this high calling of God in Christ.

His eternal relation to Jesus Christ and his responsibility to a lost world demand that he "know nothing save Jesus Christ and him crucified." He said, "As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you."

We are to lift him up in our lives in love and sympathy and service, so that he again lives over in us before the world. The sacredness of our relation and high calling is given by Paul in his letter to the Corinthians: "Now are we ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us, we pray you in Christ's stead be ye reconciled to God."

Back of a supreme purpose must be faith in God; faith in Jesus Christ, as a divine but now risen and ascended Lord; faith that can hear above the blatantry of modern criticism the tramp of the innumerable hosts who have been redeemed and saved by his divine power, saying: "The risen and triumphant Christ did rise, and for twenty centuries has been marching the road of history and comes even to us in these last days as the only real and ever living force for lifting up and saving poor, lost and helpless humanity." The least doubt that flits across the mind or sky of one's soul as to the divinity of Christ and his God-given relation to men will so darken his spiritual vision that he will only see men as trees walking. Faith in his blessed word as the only weapon, together with a supreme purpose, will enable him to pour his life like a stream into the mighty current of God's eternal truth to dying men. Only to those who believe with all their heart that this is the power of God to save men does it yield its wonderful secret. From first to last the career of Moses was a romance, but the secret of his life was in "that he esteemed the reproaches of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt." Joshua was a great soldier, but the victory which crowned his arms was his unshaken and single-hearted faith in the God of Israel. "Enoch walked with God and was not, for God took him; for before his translation he had this testimony that he pleased God."

The preacher with one supreme purpose has no time to waste with Darwin or Huxley, nor even with the so-called higher criticisms of the day. He dare not depend upon the sensations of the day for a message. The ground of his truth must be deeper than the principles of human knowledge, and his faith reach beyond what eye can see or ear can hear. Any less than this belittles his calling and disgusts his auditors, if he has any. We take our latitude and longitude from Greenwich, and travel over land or sea. The preacher, with one supreme purpose, takes his spiritual latitude and longitude from the cross, and goes out with the assurance of final victory, knowing nothing save "Jesus Christ and him crucified." His preaching is set to the key of the gospel saying, "Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people, sayeth the Lord." "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

Coming thus into his pulpit on Sunday morning he sees tired and hungry souls, weary with six days of struggle with the devil, the world and the flesh. They are longing for help. They need inspiration and sympathy, and hope for a vision through the gates into the city of gold to refresh and stir their immortal spirits toward God and eternal things. Only of such a one could it have been said: "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace and bring tidings of good things." This man goes not in his own name, but in the name of the Lord of hosts.

It was this one supreme purpose that made a Stephen, a Paul, a Wesley, a Knox, and a Baxter.

My brethren of the ministry, let us tarry at a throne of grace until we "know nothing save Jesus and him crucified."

SOME OBSERVATIONS.

By Rev. Robert Randle.

I have read with great interest the discussion in the Advocate upon proposed legislation by the coming General Conference.

I suggest non-concurrence to all except that the authority to license preachers be given back to the Quarterly Conference, as it is much more convenient while there is nothing to be lost; as the license may be rescinded or expire at the end of the year, or renewed at the pleasure of all parties concerned.

I suggest also that the presiding elder's district be reduced to from twelve to fifteen—twelve is best. And if necessary increase his assessment to fifteen per cent of collections for ministerial support, though this ought not to be necessary, as his increased stay at each appointment should increase the receipts so as to meet all demands. We need the presiding elder not only as an overseer, but also as a leading help on all lines of the work. This would enable him to spend more time with the churches and pastors and to become better acquainted with the work, and thus bring him into greater sympathy with the work and make him more efficient in the office.

The memorial relating to woman's equal rights with laymen should not be passed, as there can be no good obtained by it that may not be reached without it. And in spite of all that has been said to the contrary as to its not being associated with "the woman's rights movement," beyond question it has strong tendency that way, and I am constrained to believe that the same spirit that prompted one suggested the other and they lead in the same direction. It is true that the Church will throw more restraint around it; but that very fact will make it the more damaging, as it will make it a harbor for suffragettes. The better appearance that can be given an error, the more dangerous it is, and the more disposed we are to bend the law in its support and use the Scriptures in its defence. I note that one contends that Paul intended his prohibition to apply only to that period and locality. But as has been proven by others contending for the prohibitions, the customs and laws both of State and Church sustain the contention that it is perpetual. It does not bear upon public prayer, singing, experience, or labor among themselves, but upon assuming authority or legislating. As stated in 1 Tim ii:12, "But I suffer not a woman to teach nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence."

That other churches have turned aside from this rule is no authority for us, even should it have been apparently successful; nor does it even justify us in doing so. Such arguments have been pushed too far, on other lines, to constrain churches and pastors to a course that is questionable and often evil. I think that the prohibition is "an eternal rule," and that there are good reasons for it, many of which have been well sustained by its advocates. I call attention to two that I have not noticed advanced. The first is that it contributes to the preservation of a pure fountain for moral character and piety. It has been contended that woman is innately purer in moral character than man. This is a mistake. Naturally, she is not purer, nor superior in morals. She is his equal—made to match him—to be a companion for him, and under the same circumstances will present the same character. God knows this. Paul saw this and by the authority of God made the statement or rule as from God.

One had to meet the demand of public service in State and Church; man's seignior and physical condition called him to these duties and responsibilities. One could do it as representative of both and thus throw around the other the protection necessary to conserving the needs of both in perpetuating the social, civil and commercial life of the race. Hence the prohibition, and woman's moral excellence arising from her retired attitude toward public service.

Again, it has been claimed that woman is more predisposed to piety than man. Again I answer we are equal. Woman has some constitutional differences that adapt her to her position in all of the relationships of life. But these very differences, while they make her more susceptible to the good influences, also make her more easily influenced by the evil, as was demonstrated in the fall and thousands of instances since that. But the protection guaranteed her by the prohibition has conserved the religious element in her for the preservation of both and the elevation of the race. And where this law has been disregarded, damage has resulted to both parties—the home has been disturbed and the social life corrupted.

In the South this law has been more nearly followed than elsewhere, and our women have been noted for modesty, gentleness and queenly bearing. Until late years, very little of the "loud mouth," challenging spirit was seen. This has been imported and is bearing its fruit. Our protection has been the prohibition, "the eternal rule," and if we turn from it, as instituted by God, we will fall into line with the rest and decline will be the sequence. We will cease to be the reserve force of God for the resistance of irreverence and effrontery and other degrading influences.

The churches that have passed by this law are not noted for deep piety and holy living (not that there are not pious and holy people in them); nor have they the moral and spiritual influence with the world that they should have and doubtless would have had, had they adhered to this law.

The request on the part of these good women, even should the whole body of women of Southern Methodism make it, would not be sufficient to constrain us to accept it as the call of God. Says one, "We would not like to have our call to the ministry called in question." Why, that is the case with every preacher licensed to preach. Is he qualified morally, mentally, spiritually, etc., and do the circumstances and conditions justify the license? and this is especially the case in the reception into the Conference, and should he be needed elsewhere he would be assigned to that field. Our dear women are passing their examination. They pass morally, mentally, spiritually. But the circumstances and conditions do not justify the granting of their request.

No! The request is not a guarantee that God has called for a revision of his "Eternal Rule."

The use that other churches have made of the reversion and the visible results do not justify the presumption that he has rescinded that law.

Vernon, La.

THE WOMEN'S MEMORIAL.

By Prof. W. L. Clifton.

One of the strongest evidences of the force and righteousness of the cause advocated in the Women's Memorial is unconsciously furnished by some of the opposition.

An attorney for the prosecution in a criminal action in the courts said to his associate who was about to address the jury, "No case; abuse the attorney for the defense." Juries, chosen as they necessarily are under our sadly imperfect system, can often be bewildered and misled by such weak and indefensible tirades; but not so with an intelligent public such as constitute the readers of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Furthermore, the dlatribes do not at all disturb those attacked. I care to make no more extensive or specific reply to personal references to me in connection with my attitude toward the Women's Memorial.

As to the Memorial itself, I wish to speak briefly of its bearing, fundamentally, upon the welfare of the race and of its bearing upon woman exclusively—so far as such is possible.

First: God created the human race in his own image. "God is a Spirit." We hardly, I suppose, think of a spirit having form. It must have been the spiritual nature of the race—not the physical—wherein mankind was made in the image of God. This spiritual nature, this nature in which we are in the image of God, was created dual—male and female. This duality, which in its parts is imperfect, approaches more nearly to perfection as it approaches unity in the race. The Christ understood man and woman perfectly because he embodied these dual spirits in his personality and in his spiritual nature. This duality became unity. Until man, mere man, becomes as perfect as our Lord, he needs, as constantly as may be, the spirit of woman as helpmeet. Neither man nor woman is complete without the mental and spiritual companionship of the other. Separation means hurt to each and to the race. The voice of woman uttering the mind and heart of woman should be heard along with man's where policies are shaped and the destinies of the race are determined.

Second: Frankly, I wish to speak of the rights of woman, but not of "Woman's Rights." We all know there is a difference here. Will we admit that woman has the right to develop all her mental and spiritual powers? We reply, "Yes," with our lips, but not by our acts. For ground to lay a premise, however, we shall assume that our lips declare our real attitude toward the matter. Right here I shall "drag in" a tale, for it is illustrative. The negro Bishop Turner once in the course of an address, urging the transportation of his race from this country, said in substance: "In my boyhood days I heard Bishop Pierce preach and decided that he was the greatest man on earth. Later, as a young and ambitious young man, I heard him say that the negro should not be educated. My love and admiration almost froze into hatred. But long since have I forgiven him and my love for him has returned; for truly the negro should be kept in darkness, if he is to be allowed to realize no hope for a larger field of activity." Are we "low pressure" on the education of woman because "her sphere" is narrow and she does not need enlightenment, or do we want to keep "her sphere" circumscribed because she is deficient in mentality and cultivation?

But woman is becoming educated. The Renaissance made possible and forced the Reformation. The inevitable may be checked, but it cannot be stopped; it may be postponed, but it cannot be avoided. Power is going to do work. Is not the Church the place where wisdom would dictate that this energy be expended and utilized?

THE SEXES NOT HOSTILE TO EACH OTHER. NOR DIVERGENT IN INTEREST.

By a Husband, Father, Son and Brother.

The assumption that the men and women of the Church are so hostile to each other, or that their interests are so divergent, that the women are unrepresented in the conferences of the Church, as now composed of men only, is an unsound and dangerous assumption. The Church can not afford to give any sort of endorsement to such an assumption. On the contrary, the Church should assert with all emphasis the very opposite view. It is not opposition between the sexes that needs to be emphasized, but concord and agreement between them.

And the men need to be encouraged to take more part in the work of the Church, rather than less. Already some tendencies have so far developed that not a few men are coming to look upon the work of the Church as fit for women only. That drift has proceeded too far already; it should not be set forward further.

Moreover, in conferences, where women, if admitted, would claim both masculine rights and feminine privileges, men would not be willing to go very long. The discussions in such conferences would be almost worthless for any of the ends for which deliberative bodies are supposed to sit.

The agitation for the admittance of women into the conferences of the Church has itself shown the unwisdom of the proposal. Some of the few sisters who are urging on that unwise movement, have shown impatience with any and all who oppose their folly. They have not hesitated to use the machinery of the Home Mission Society for the unlawful and unauthorized purpose of carrying on this agitation, which is utterly foreign to its legitimate aims and which meets the opposition of many of its best members. These misguided sisters divide and distract the society, which proposes to do work that women can do well, in order to get entrance into fields to which women have little adaptation, and in which, to say the least, women are not specially needed. It is even said that some of them have taken the house of God and the Sabbath day for the advocacy of their ill-conceived scheme. If this be their way now, what would they not do in quarterly conferences, district conferences, annual conferences, and general conferences?

The great John Bright said when there was before the British Parliament a proposition in favor of Woman's Suffrage: "The bill seems to me based upon a proposition which is untenable, and which, I think, is contradicted by universal experience. It is a bill based upon the assumed hostility between the sexes. . . . Nothing can be more monstrous and absurd than to place women—who are our mothers, our sisters, or our daughters, whose whole existence is wrapped up in our own, who are near and dear to our hearts—as a separate class, and it is a scandalous and odious libel to say that they are a separate class and that they are, therefore, excluded from our sympathies, and that Parliament can not and will not do justice to them." These words of that great and good man apply to the present agitation for woman's suffrage in our Church. That agitation proceeds on the false assumption that the consecrated men who compose the conferences of the Church have not and will not truly represent their wives and mothers and sisters, but will do them injustice. It assumes that the women of the Church are a separate and distinct class, having divergent, if not hostile, interests to the men of the Church, and that their interests can only be safeguarded by the introduction into the conferences of the few women who are ambitious to have place and position in these conferences. It should not be approved.—From Central Methodist Advocate.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

John M. Moore, D. D.

The Board of Church Extension held April 20-21 one of the most delightful sessions in its history. It was the last of a most successful quadrennium and was held in its offices in Louisville. Harmony and good will prevailed throughout, and the members went away feeling that the work which had been committed to them by the Church had prospered and that they had been able to do for the needy churches at this session more than at any previous time. However, there was common regret that the funds at their disposal were not several times as great, that every request might be granted. The applications for donations amounted to $201,882 and for loans, $221,000. The Board appropriated $145,650 as loans, and $115,859 as donations.

It is true that the Loan Fund now amounts to $339,614.65, but it must be remembered that of this amount $222,445.40 is now outstanding in unpaid loans, and that the Treasurer has on hand only $17,169.25. The amount due is about $5,000. So the Board went to its limit in granting requests to the amount of $145,650, for its ability to pay these loans will depend upon the faithfulness of the churches that have been helped in meeting their obligations to the Board. Every Church that is slow in meeting its Church Extension notes is affecting some other Church that is in distress. This is a mutual aid society, and every Church can best show its gratification at receiving a loan by meeting it promptly when it falls due.

Dr. W. F. McMurtry, the Corresponding Secretary, has prepared and caused to be printed a "Loan Fund Thermometer," which tells an interesting story of the rising of the Loan Fund. The Board of Church Extension was organized in 1882. The Centenary Committee, having in charge the centenary celebration of 1884, adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the cause of Church Extension be strongly urged upon the attention of our people as a leading object for the contributions in 1884, and that we seek to raise a Loan Fund of Five Hundred Thousand Dollars."

How greatly that amount is needed to-day! At the end of the first quadrennium the total amount was $31,342.00. The next quadrennium showed an increase of $18,473.48, and that from 1890 to 1894 an increase of $57,499.36, which made the total $108,315.44. In 1898 the amount was $158,792.50. Dr. David Morton at his death left this goodly sum, as the result of his sixteen years in collecting loan funds—a most worthy testimony to his wonderful efficiency as a pioneer in Church Extension work. Rev. P. H. Whisner, D.D., became the secretary in 1893. The increase in his first quadrennium was $43,089.97, and in his second quadrennium $28,420.12. The present secretary saw at the opening of his quadrennium the importance of increasing the loan fund, and as soon as he mastered the details of his work, he began to give attention to securing gifts. The increase for 1907 was $13,340.84; for 1908, $25,616.58; for 1909, $20,633.27; for 1910, $50,021.37—or the quadrennium's $109,612.06. While this amount included the interest on existing loans at 4 per cent, yet it represents superior service in this most important feature of our Church Extension work. We have a right to entertain the hope that another quadrennium will bring the Loan Fund to $500,000, while we may well wish that that may be accomplished in a single year. When we realize that seventeen new loan funds were established during the year just closed, we may easily see that such a hope as this last may be reasonably cherished.

At its last session the Board decided to set aside $15,000 from the amount received on the assessment and which has always been distributed in donations as an increment to the loan fund. When the Board at this meeting saw the numerous requests for donations from so many needy churches it rescinded its action and appropriated the $15,000 in donations. It is to be hoped that the action of last year can be carried out in the future years, as the solution of our church building problems must lie very largely with the loan funds.

The assessment for Church Extension is now $200,

000, but the receipts of the last year have been from an assessment of $175,000, and amounted to $155,754.12, while that of the year before was $149,599.05. The assessment at the opening of the quadrennium was $125,000 and the percentage of collection eighty-two and three-fourths. The percentage last year was eighty-nine. Thirty-one Conferences show an increase in their payments on Church Extension over the preceding year. The cause is having increased consideration from the Church at large.

A year ago the Board recommended that the Church be asked for a voluntary contribution of $17,000 to the Church Extension Fund of the Colonial Methodist Episcopal Church. The amount was apportioned to the several Annual Conferences, but only $265.35 has been received. Seventeen Conferences accepted the apportionment, but nineteen took no action, one declined, and one requested the pastors to take collections. Unless the pastors act, the colored people will find their hopes of help are in vain.

The Washington City Church was given unanimous endorsement by the Board, and on Thursday evening a meeting in the interest of this enterprise was held in Fourth Avenue Church, at which addresses were made by Bishops Wilson, Candler and Hoss. This special work is in the hands of Rev. Geo. S. Sexton, who has given twelve months of diligent labor to enlisting many of our leading laymen in this great church at the capital. A national building committee composed of eighteen prominent businessmen from as many States has been organized. Its first meeting was held March 18th in Washington City, and its next meeting will be in Asheville during the General Conference. The Church is becoming more and more acquainted with this great $200,000 enterprise for the national capital, and after the large amount of judicious seed sowing during the last year and the quadrennium, the desired harvest seems almost certain.

The Board adopted nine memorials to the General Conference which look to the perfection of its organization. The first asks for an equal number of laymen and clergymen in the Conference Board, and that the Conference Boards be granted the right to loan any part of its funds when the end can be accomplished as well by a loan as by a donation. This last looks to the creation of Conference loan funds. It is further asked that any Conference be allowed to increase its assessment with the privilege of retaining for its own use all receipts above fifty per cent of the amount assessed by the General Board. The second asks that trustees of a church, parsonage, or property held for the benefit of the church, be allowed to borrow money from the Board of Church Extension, the Woman's Home Mission Society, or elsewhere, and secure repayment by mortgage upon any property which they may hold in trust. The third would require all applications for aid from Boards of Church Extension to have the approval of the Quarterly Conference of the charge from which they come. The fourth asks power for the Board to prepare forms of deeds for each State and to distribute them without charge. The fifth asks that Conference, City, and District Boards of Church Extension be given the right to employ secretaries to give all or part of their time to the Church Extension work in their respective territories. This looks to the establishment of local loan funds. The sixth asks the General Conference to give due consideration to the plan of church insurance proposed by Mr. Stanley D. Pearce, of St. Louis. The seventh requests the establishment of a system of refunding bonds for Conference Boards as a protection of Church Extension Funds. The eighth asks that the fiscal year of the Board be allowed to close March 31st instead of December 31st. The ninth requests that the Board be enlarged from thirteen to twenty members.

This last meeting of the quadrennium had its features of sadness and joy. For twenty-three years Bishop Chas. B. Galloway eloquently pleaded the cause of Church Extension. At the session last year in Memphis his voice was raised time and again in advocacy of some pressing claim. But in ten days after the adjournment he was called from his labors in this sphere. Bishop Seth Ward was also present last year, and his friends had no intimation that his strong physique was so soon to surrender its powers. The chairs of these two honored and greatly beloved members were this year vacant. Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald was not able to come. Bishop Key was detained in Georgia. Dr. W. R. Lambuth, Mr. Thos. B. Morton, and Rev. J. E. Godbey, D.D., were absent. Those present were: Bishops Wilson, Hendrix, Candler, Morrison, Hoss, Atkins, Rev. W. J. Young, D.D., Danville, Va.; Rev. M. J. Cofer, D.D., Atlanta, Ga.; Rev. W. J. Johnson, Galveston, Tex.; Rev. J. M. Henry, Baton Rouge, La.; Rev. Henry Trawick, Montgomery, Ala.; Rev. N. L. Linebaugh, D.D., Oklahoma City, Okla.; Rev. T. W. Lewis, Columbus, Miss.; Rev. N. B. Henry, D.D., Kennett, Mo.; Mr. T. S. Garrison, Timpson, Texas; Mr. T. L. Jefferson, Mr. P. H. Tapp, Mr. Jno. L. Wheat, Mr. Jno. C. Strother, and Dr. R. B. Gilbert, of Louisville.

HUSTLERS, men or women, can make $'s—"oodles uv 'em"—canvassing for our brand-new, fast-selling specialties. Write to-day. Riverside Utility Co., Hattiesburg, Miss.

Episcopal Address

The sixteenth General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in the city of Asheville, N. C., Wednesday morning, May 4, at 9 o'clock. After the usual routine of organization, the Episcopal Address was read by Bishop Hendrix. The Address is a strong and comprehensive document, well worthy to take its place with those that have preceded it. It is too lengthy for full insertion here, but we note its salient features.

The past quadrennium has been the most peaceful and prosperous in the history of the Church. In that time there has been a net increase in membership of 207,754; there are 7,618 traveling preachers, and 4,952 local preachers. There has been a gain of 331 traveling preachers, and 297 local preachers.

There has been a large increase in the material resources of the Church, and all the departments of the Church's work have been correspondingly strengthened. Special mention is made of the good work done by the women of the Church, but disapproval is expressed of the memorial for the full rights of the laity. The Address says: "Such a step would not make for the greater efficiency of our Church as a whole in any of the regions occupied by it."

The three Publishing Houses, at Nashville, Dallas, and Shanghai, China, have had a successful business. Several hospital enterprises are doing important service in extending the Kingdom of God.

The Church is commended for its fidelity to the doctrinal standards of Methodism, and mention is made of the fact that there has never been a doctrinal schism in Methodism.

The obligation of the Church to the negro race is insisted upon, and a plea is made for an extension of the work in that direction.

The plea for the removal of the time limit is not looked on with favor. The statement is made that, as provision has already been made for the needs of exceptional situations, "it may be doubted if any further modification of the time limit is desirable."

Reference is made to the large part our Methodism has had in bringing about the organization of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and emphasis is laid upon the importance of this movement.

The plea for a change of the name of our Church is disapproved. The Address says: "Sympathizing with our Northwestern brethren, whose fathers welcomed us because of our name, and because we preached Christ and him only, we see no sufficient reason for any change."

Ours was the first Church to inaugurate on a large scale an Endowment Fund for Superannuates, and the present assets of the Fund are estimated at $251,873. This work is strongly commended.

The statement is made that our Church is behind other Methodisms in the number of Sunday school scholars, compared with the Church membership, and the suggestion is made that we need to do intensive work in this field in order to accomplish the best results. The Epworth League is commended as "a veritable training-school for Christian workers."

The "Vanderbilt question" is treated, and the statement is made that the University belongs to the Church in law and in morals. The action of the Commission appointed at the last General Conference to deal with this matter is reviewed, and this statement is made: "The report itself will doubtless be furnished to you for your full inspection and review. With this information in your possession, you will be able to determine what further action, if any, it is necessary for you to take. We urge the importance of such a complete and final settlement of the whole matter as will leave not the slightest room for any further questioning of any sort. The peace of the Church and the highest welfare of the University itself both demand that the disturbing issues be thoroughly adjudicated for all time."

The work of theological education is strongly commended, and a plea is made for the evangelistic spirit. "Unless our young preachers follow safe and reverent guides, they may follow blind leaders into the ditch of confusion and doubt. The great need of all our centers of learning is the evangelistic spirit and the testifying to the things we know; proclaiming our beliefs, not our doubts. Genuine revivals of religion, which clarify the brain and warm the heart as well, should be sought and expected annually in each of our institutions of learning, under the leadership of our wisest preachers who are especially adapted to such evangelistic work. The demand of the laity for better equipped and more efficient preachers must be met in part by themselves in providing greater facilities for ministerial education. The educated man has the ear of the educated; and no loss can be more damaging, next to losing the ear of the poor, to whom the gospel must be preached if the credentials of our Lord be claimed, than to have no longer the ear of the educated and influential in a community." A strong plea is made for loyalty to the educational institutions under the auspices of the Church.

The erection of a representative church at Washington, D. C., is strongly commended, and its value to the whole Church pointed out.

Affectionate reference is made to the eminent men of the Church whose death has claimed during the quadrennium—Paul Whitehead, Young J. Allen, James M. Mason, and John W. Heidt; and tribute is paid to the memory of the Bishops who have died in that time. Never in the same length of time have we been called upon to bury so many of our general superintendents. These were Bishops Tigert, Smith, Granbery, Duncan, Galloway and Ward. Because of the peculiarly intimate relation of Bishop Galloway and Bishop Ward to our patronizing Conferences, we quote in full the tributes to their memory:

"Chosen to his high office at the same time and on the same ballot with Bishop Duncan was the Chrysostom of the Church, Charles Betts Galloway. With native oratorical gifts of a high order, he consecrated to the pulpit what would have won lasting fame in the Senate or at the bar; for he had known in early manhood the meaning of a surrendered life. With capacity for leadership that made him the foremost citizen, because the most useful, in his native State, progressive but not radical, committed to all that made for civic righteousness and wise in knowing just what was fitted to the hour, the eloquent advocate of temperance, because the friend of humanity, beloved of the negro as of the white, and ever addressing the largest congregations of both, sensitive to criticism but heroic in action, whether in the black belt or in the university or the capital, he commanded the eager ears of all good men and led them to victory. Incapable of envy, his genial soul rejoiced as much in the success of his brethren as they did in his; knightly and true as Jonathan, he prized a friend more than a throne; wise in planning and faithful and tireless in execution, he had all the elements of a great bishop. Charles B. Galloway was chosen to preach the opening sermon at the last Ecumenical Methodist Conference, as Matthew Simpson and William Arthur had been chosen for like service at the other two Pan-Methodist gatherings; and he ranks with these and other great masters of assemblies. No man among us so fully responded to the demands of a great occasion, and none was more worthy of the epitaph of John the Baptist: 'A burning and a shining light.' Alas! he shone because he burned, and in twenty years of episcopal service he gave the Church forty years of his strength. He made our name known to all Methodism and to the saints of all the churches. Stricken in the midst of the battle, he died, like Paul, still planning great things for his Lord. What a meeting between apostle and bishop in the presence of their Lord, as each bore on his person the marks of the Lord Jesus!"

"When lonely Eve, bereft of her children, welcomed to her arms a third son, she called his name Seth; for she said: 'God hath sent me another son in place of Abel.' He was to be the setting that should produce a forest of noble trees for the garden of the Lord. Once our Church had an Enoch who walked with God and was not, for God took him; but his going made heaven nearer. A generation later many who knew Enoch Mather Marvin were reminded of him in Seth Ward, a true itinerant of native, homely strength, simple in tastes, waxing stronger in intellect and in grasp of truth, presenting the great doctrines with clearness and unction, sympathetic and unselfish, wise and just in counsel and tireless in service. He became a revelation to the whole Church as, wisely selected by the Board of Missions as Assistant Missionary Secretary—not being sufficiently known to be the choice of the General Conference—he went abroad from his native Texas to preach a gospel mighty enough to save a world. The qualities that made him great as a pastor in Houston and Galveston in time of disaster, were even more fruitful of good in the foreign fields, where he wrought as Secretary and Bishop. The Church was fast learning to appraise him at his true worth as a Bishop when he went abroad to die in Asia, for which he had so often pleaded at the bar of the Christian conscience. Domestic love claimed his body to rest in American soil; but his great soul goes marching on to find its truest and satisfying rest in the glorious vision of a saved world."

The matter of the election of new Bishops is referred to in the following terms: "In view of the depletion of our ranks, we recommend the election of at least five additional bishops, praying that God may make good his promise given to his Church through Jeremiah: 'I will give you pastors according to mine heart, which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding.' They will not be perfect men, else they would be the only perfect men in a Church full of imperfect men. If ever perfect, they will be made perfect through suffering, as there shall come upon them daily the care of all the churches, as upon those who are the servants of all."

The Address concludes with the acknowledgment of our shortcomings as a Church, notwithstanding our great success, and a plea for greater faithfulness in gathering the harvest which has come from the sowing of our fathers as they sought to serve their generation by the will of God.

The General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada will meet in the city of Victoria, B. C., in August of this year. This is farther west than it has ever before been held.

Church News

William J. Bryan was installed an elder in the Westminster Presbyterian Church, midway between Lincoln and Fairview, Neb., on the 24th ult. He has also been elected a delegate-at-large to the Presbyterian Ecumenical Council which is to be held at Edinburgh, Scotland, in June.

The National Congress of the Laymen's Missionary Movement is now in session in Chicago. The session has opened with great enthusiasm, and 5,000 delegates are expected to be present. This will bring to a close, so far as large public gatherings are concerned, the memorable campaign of 1910.

On the evening of April 27th, at the Methodist Orphans' Home in Jackson, Miss., a most enjoyable public recital was given, marking the close of the school for the present year. This worthy institution continues to grow steadily under the efficient management of Rev. W. M. Williams, the manager and agent.

The suggestion has been made that the name of the Western Virginia Conference should be changed to the West Virginia Conference. When it was given the present name that territory was a part of the Old Dominion, a separate State not having been at that time formed. The Central Christian Advocate, of Kentucky, thinks this alteration is desirable.

The Handbook of the English Baptists reports 3,062 churches, of which 909 are in Wales, and 1,965 in England. The total membership is 422,455, a loss of 1,553 as compared with the previous year. The Sabbath schools are prosperous, having 579,242 scholars. Over $300,000 has been given during the year to new churches, chapels, and mission buildings.

Mrs. Adelaide Shackford Hill Buckley, the wife of Dr. J. M. Buckley, the veteran editor of the New York Christian Advocate, passed away at Morris-town, N. J., Saturday evening, April 23. She was a woman of unusual intellectuality, and a devoted Christian who abounded in good works. Dr. Buckley has the sympathy and prayers of a large host of friends and admirers throughout the South in his great loss.

On Wednesday evening of this week the delegates to the General Conference were formally welcomed in the auditorium at Asheville. Bishop Atkins presided, and addresses of welcome were delivered by Dr. G. H. Detwiler, one of the resident pastors, Governor T. J. Jarvis, and Dr. T. N. Ivey, editor of the Raleigh Christian Advocate. The response in behalf of the visitors was made by Bishop Warren Candler, of Atlanta.

The Methodist Laymen's Herald is the name of a new paper just launched in the Western Virginia Conference. The home of the paper is Parkersburg, and it will be issued under the direction of the Conference lay leader, Mr. Levin Smith. We do not like to discourage any worthy enterprise, but we seriously doubt the wisdom of the multiplication of papers in any part of our Southern Methodist territory. We do not see why the Laymen's Movement cannot secure all the space needed for furthering its interests in our various Conference organs.

THE GROCERY CAT

has been known to sleep in the coffee barrel, or, if the cat's away, that gives the rats and mice a chance. Then there's the dust of the atmosphere and the pickled-pigs-feet and mackerel smells that coffee in open barrels take in and so readily absorb. Oh yes, you get a plenty when you buy loose coffee and have the grocer wrap it up for you in a paper bag that leaks strength and flavor all the way to your home; but do you want it all, or simply a clean, crisp, fresh, high-grade article like packed in dust-proof, strength-preserving, germ-free, air-tight cans.

LUZIANNE COFFEE

America's Foremost Brand Sold Everywhere.

THE REILY-TAYLOR CO.,
New Orleans, U. S. A.

Secular News and Comment

While riding in Potomac Park on the 27th ult., General Nelson A. Miles was thrown from his horse and sustained serious injuries. He is seventy years of age and on the retired list of army officers.

The interest-bearing debt of the United States is said to be $897,253,090; the bonded indebtedness of New York City is reported at $905,260,115. Thus it will be seen that the national metropolis owes $8,006,125 more than the nation.

It has been announced that President Roosevelt will present the University of California with a fine elephant—one of the trophies of his African tour. Its skin is carefully mounted, and its tusks and skull are reported to be in perfect condition. Our vigorous and versatile ex-President has always had a marked fondness for the West.

The death rate in New Orleans for 1909 has been reported as follows: "Of white population, 15.52 per thousand; of colored population, 25.24; of total population, 18.15." Excluding non-residents brought to the city for medical treatment, the following are the figures: "Of whites, 14.01; of negroes, 22.03; of total population, 16.13." This is a decidedly better showing than that of last year, and compares most favorably with the mortality rate of the other large cities of the country.

The Confederate Reunion which was held in Mobile last week was from every point of view a marked success. The attendance was large, the weather was ideal, and the exercises appropriate and impressive. The old soldiers were given the right of way everywhere, and hospitality and goodwill abounded. General Clement A. Evans, of Georgia, refused to allow himself to be re-elected Commander-in-Chief, and Gen. George W. Gordon, of Tennessee, was chosen to succeed him. Memorial services were conducted in honor of Admiral Semmes and Father Ryan, who are buried in Mobile. The next Reunion will be held in Little Rock.

Mr. Richard C. Kerens, of St. Louis, who has been given the ambassadorship to Austria and Hungary, is a self-made man. He is said to have come from Ireland without a dollar in his pocket, and at one time to have been the stable boy of Senator Rice, of Arkansas. He sympathized with the Federal side in the war between the States, and was a faithful teamster in the Union Army. Later he went West, and in the mining and railroad business amassed a large fortune. He has always been an ardent Republican, and his influence is thought to have had much to do with carrying Missouri for Taft in the last presidential contest. His friends are confident that he will bear himself well in the difficult field of diplomacy.

Accord is a thing little known among scientists. Scarcely any two of them hold to the same theory about things which have not been conclusively demonstrated. Of late years we have had much talk about the inhabitants of Mars and the canals which they are supposed to have constructed. But before the National Academy of Sciences in Washington a few days since, Professor George E. Hale, of the Mount Wilson Solar Observatory of the Carnegie Institution, strongly combated this view, contending that there is little to sustain it. A few years ago Alfred Russell Wallace, the great English scientist, published in the New York Independent a series of brilliant essays in which he undertook to show that, so far as the suggestions of science go, the earth is probably the only inhabited planet. Thus do the teachings of the scholars clash.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson, the famous Norwegian poet, novelist, and dramatist, died in Paris, France, on April 26. He had been ill nearly a year, and had been under treatment at the French Capital since last November. The cause of his death was arteriosclerosis. His able advocacy of republican principles at one time brought him under the ban of the Norwegian Government, and during that period he sojourned for awhile in the United States. He was educated at the Universities of Christiania and Copenhagen, and first won distinction as a contributor to newspapers. He was a voluminous writer, and a conspicuous advocate of peace. Many of his works have been translated into other tongues, and have been accorded high praise both by critics and the public. He was a great admirer of our government, and it is said that "the American flag was always kept flying along side that of Norway above his summer home at Aulestad."

Mr. Aldrich, of Rhode Island, and Mr. Hale, of Maine, have announced that they will not stand for re-election to the United States Senate. There is also talk of Mr. Cannon's voluntary retirement from the Lower House of Congress. Some have been unkind enough to say that these gentlemen do not like the uncertain political outlook and that this is the motive by which they are being actuated in announcing their purpose to retire to the shades of private life. But certain it is that the passing of these strong men from the stage of action will leave somewhat of a vacancy at the national capital. The South has a fine opportunity to regain her lost prestige in the Government if she would only avail herself of it by electing to Congress men of education and real strength. She has plenty of them, but as a rule they are not aspirants to office. They need to be sought out and pressed into service.

President Taft has appointed Governor Charles E. Hughes, of New York, to the supreme bench of the United States to succeed the late Justice David J. Brewer. Governor Hughes is one of the ablest men in American public life, and this selection has been highly commended in all sections of the country. He was born at Glen Falls, New York, April 11, 1862, attended Colgate University from 1876 to 1878, and was graduated from Brown University with A.B. degree in 1881. He studied law at Columbia University; was professor of law at Cornell University from 1891 to 1895, and has received the degree of LL.D. from several institutions. He is the son of a Baptist minister, and not the least of his many splendid qualifications for the high position to which he has been called is his stainless moral character. The whole nation is to be congratulated upon the elevation of this Christian gentleman and able lawyer to the Supreme Bench.

The filing of documents for record, transferring a half interest in the 40,000-acre ranch and 25,000 cattle and all buildings of the Valvedere ranch in Jeff Davis County, Texas, from Sam Jennings, the cattle king, to Francis R. Strome, comes as a reward to the latter for saving the life of little May Jennings. The property is said to be worth anywhere from $700,000 to $1,000,000.

Strome is fifty years of age, a machinist, and was for many years a resident of a small town in Illinois. He met with reverses, and after the death of his wife took to drink. He was beating his way westward, trying to make California, and was banging around Alpine trying to catch a train when the girl was crossing the railroad track just as a train approached. The child became bewildered and would have been killed had Strome not jumped on the track and snatched her clear of the rails just in time. He disappeared, but the father of the girl had him located about fifty miles away and brought him back to the ranch and kept him at the place for several days, learning something of his history before telling him what he was going to do for him. Strome agreed to settle down and care for his property.—World.

THE SEASHORE ASSEMBLY.

The Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers is a summer school for training Sunday school, Mission Society and Epworth League workers of the Methodist Church in Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana.

The forenoons are given over entirely to class work. The day's work begins with a thirty-minute devotional service. The first hour is then devoted to class work in Bible study, there being classes in both Old and New Testament work; the second hour, systematic Mission Study class work, using the text books for both foreign and home fields, so as to finish the books in the ten days. The purpose is to train the members of these classes to be teachers in their home churches. Third hour is in classes in methods of work for the three departments of church work above named, with practical demonstrations, Institute work, Round-Table discussions, etc.

We cannot announce at this time our faculty in full, but give only a partial list of those who have accepted places on the program: Rev. W. N. Ainsworth, D.D., President Wesleyan Female College; Rev. F. S. Parker, D.D., Assistant Editor Epworth Era; Rev. Ed. E. Cook, D.D., Educational Secretary, Board of Missions; Rev. R. A. Meek, Editor New Orleans Christian Advocate; E. P. Peabody, seven years president South Georgia Conference, Epworth League; J. B. Green, Superintendent First Church Sunday School, Opelika; Miss Mabel Head, Associate Secretary Woman's Home Mission Society; Miss Mary De Bardeleben, of class 1910 Methodist Training School; Mrs. Sue Stuart Brame, Jackson, Miss.; Mrs. A. F. Watkins, Hattiesburg, Miss.

The afternoons are given over entirely to recreation; ample time is afforded to thoroughly enjoy the many forms of pleasure offered.

Bathing in the bay without extra cost to the Assembly visitors.

Sailing parties in the afternoons and evenings, boat excursions to old Fort Massachusetts, the government quarantine station and lighthouse on Ship Island, arranged for the visitors by the Assembly management.

One of the most delightful electric car rides in the South is the twelve miles from Biloxi to Gulfport, along the water front fanned by the strong gulf breezes.

Trips to Beauvoir, the former home of Jefferson Davis, now the home for the Confederate Veterans of Mississippi, three miles away on the electric car line.

On the grounds, tennis courts, croquet grounds, etc., are free for the use of the Assembly visitors. Indoor games and reading tables supplied with the latest magazines and papers are provided free in Epworth Lodge.

The Assembly was established in the reports of the Epworth League Boards at the last session of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences.

Remember the time, July 21-23, and the place, the Seashore Camp Grounds, near Biloxi, Miss.

For rates and further information address J. Bruce Airey, President, Fort Deposit, Ala.

CONFERENCE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The following is the report of the treasurer of the Board of Missions of the Louisiana Annual Conference for Jan. 1 to May 1, 1910:

Received from—	Foreign.
Patterson, Rev. John Sholars	$35.75
Rayne, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr.	44.00
Franklinton, Rev. L. C. Wilson	30.00
Morgan City, Rev. H. N. Brown	70.00
Second Church, Rev. A. I. Townsley	20.00
Carrollton Avenue, Rev. H. T. Catley	75.00
First Church, Rev. S. H. Werlein, D.D.	182.00
Louisiana Avenue, Rev. W. W. Holmes	104.00
Homer, Rev. W. H. Coleman	50.00
Eden, Rev. Wilson Moore	25.00
Pine Grove, Rev. H. C. Murphy	8.00
Total	$643.75

Domestic.
Homer, Rev. W. H. Coleman $50.00

W. B. THOMSON, Treasurer,
231 S. Rampart.

New Orleans, May 2, 1910.

AN APPEAL.

To Pastors and Friends of Temperance in the State of Louisiana:

Dear Brethren—The Legislature will soon be in session in Baton Rouge. The Anti-Saloon League, acting for the churches, has formulated bills, which we hope to get through and put upon the statute books that will give us a fighting chance and bring relief to an oppressed people.

We need the sympathy, co-operation and help of the religious people throughout the State.

Our time is short. I will have time to touch in person but a few communities.

I can not explain my plans in this letter, but as the State Superintendent of the League, and leader of the forces, we have plans by which we expect to bring pressure to bear at the point where needed, and encouragement to our friends in the Legislature when these measures are up.

I will establish sub-headquarters at Baton Rouge during the session, and expect to have associated with me some of the most experienced men in the State in this line of work.

Will the preachers of all the churches in all the parishes have a conference together with some of the strongest temperance advocates and appoint a committee with chairman, through whom we can work, by wire or mail? Send names of this committee immediately to our office in New Orleans, 617 Audubon Bldg.

Brethren, this is extremely important. Do not treat this request lightly—so much is at stake.

Let me hear from you at once.

Your fellow servant,

J. J. SMYLLIE,
State Supt. La. Anti-Saloon League.

A STATEMENT.

Owing to the fact that I will want to serve a charge through vacation, I take this way of stating to the ministers who read this paper that I will appreciate anything along this line that you may do for me. I am a student of Millsaps College and have done a good deal of preaching.

I am yours in the work.

RUTHERFORD B. BURKS.

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH

LEON IRWIN & CO.

FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 585.

Phone Main.

ROOMS and BOARD

634 and 638 SOUTH STREET

(Lafayette Square)

Corner St. Charles St.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Unlimited Meals.

Alvin Porter, Mgr.

W. F. M. S.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The State Convention of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was held in Alexandria, April 1-5. Thirty delegates were expected, nearly all of whom materialized, and a few noble women from other States were with us, too, and helped to make the Convention a great success in every way.

Every minute of every session was interesting, and those who were fortunate enough to be able to attend went home with new zeal and enthusiasm, and a new resolve—or rather the same old feeling made doubly strong—to push the work of Foreign Missions this coming year as it has never been pushed before in our beautiful Creole State.

The presence of our "own missionary," Miss Ada Parker, and her talks of her work and that of Miss Helen Johnston—another of our Louisiana missionaries—seemed to bring the work nearer to our hearts, and made us feel a personal interest in the work in Brazil first, and as a natural sequence the work in all foreign fields.

Mrs. Watkins, from our sister state, Mississippi, was a most interesting visitor, and in her addresses gave much valuable information as to how to work successfully and accomplish great results.

Mrs. Cobb addressed the Convention two evenings and those who heard her can never forget her. The missionary sermons preached by Rev. Paul M. Brown and Dr. Werlein and the addresses of Mrs. Watkins and Mrs. Cobb should have converted to the "foreign faith" all those disgruntled Christians who profess to believe that "charity begins at home." To a real Christian, the whole universe is home, and all mankind his brothers.

Our Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Montgomery, is now in Clarksville, at the Board meeting, and is pledging for the State $500 more than we gave last year on our "pledge fund." Louisiana has always heretofore stood way down in the list—every other State pledging more than ours for the support of foreign missionaries, but at this convention Mrs. Montgomery was instructed to pledge $2,000, instead of the $1,500 we have pledged before.

This past year we raised $50 more than our pledge, and why, through this Convention, can't we raise $500 more as easily? We can, we know we can, and every member of every Foreign Missionary Society must catch the wave of enthusiasm sent out from this State Convention.

Let our aim be always higher,
Something greater yet attain.
Let not progress find us idle,
And content to so remain.
He who never seeks advancement—
He who never strives to win
Any race can ne'er triumphant
With the victors enter in.
Rouse ye now, each good ambition;
Let us, not content remain
With our talents safely hidden,
Caring not to others gain.
Hitch your wagon to a star, then,
Or endeavor so to do.
If you fail in bravely trying
Then no fault can lie with you.
He who promised, "Lo! I'm with you,"
By our side will ever stand,
Helping us, while we help others,
Bear his name to every land.

The State officers elected for the coming year are: Mrs. W. W. Carre, president; Mrs. L. S. Clarke, vice-president; Mrs. A. A. Bartels, recording secretary; Mrs. S. A. Montgomery, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. J. Holmes, treasurer; Mrs. C. M. Pulliam, press superintendent.

The names of the District Secretaries will be given in our next week's issue.

MRS. C. M. PULLIAM,
Press Superintendent.

ABOUT PARSONAGES.

Dear Brother Meek: I have seen many letters in the Advocate from preachers' wives, but none concerning the care of the parsonage. Some may say that my experience is limited, and it is. But notwithstanding, we have had various kinds of experience. I am afraid sometimes that some of us do not take time to think first what the word "home" means.

When Miss Lucinda B. Helm saw the necessity of a home for the preacher and his family, and inspired the hearts of thousands of other women to consider that need, she knew what the home meant or should mean to the keepers of that home; and since that time our home builders have grown in number and in the love of God, the Church and the home. And yet, when these hard-working, home-loving women have done the very best they could, some of the parsonage home-keepers have little feeling or thought for themselves or for others.

We have gone to some places and found neat, clean parsonages, made so by our predecessors, but some, we are sorry to say, were in a deplorable condition. I have had some preachers' wives to complain to me that the parsonage was poor, the furniture poor, and the general surroundings were complained of, and when the opportunity presented itself (if ever) to view the situation for myself, I have been made to blush for my sex, to say nothing of the fact that she, like myself, is the wife of one of God's ministering servants, and her home, like her heart, is supposed to lead all others in the community in which she lives and works. In such cases I have heard the negro women remark, "Dey sho prayed a lot," and I have been made to think that if some people would work more while praying, it might be that the Lord would send a greater blessing on their labors.

When we are leaving the old parsonage in the hands of others, it should be no less dear to us than while we are there. As nothing around is strange or new to us, how easy it is for us to get the parsonage in readiness for the incoming, tired preacher and his wife (who is frequently sick, sick from the work in moving and trip, with possibly several children to care for). It is not right that we should leave the work of arranging the parsonage for the ladies to do after we are gone. They have enough to do to put the parsonage and its furniture there for us to occupy.

Then let me say to my dear sisters in parsonage homes, let us try to show our appreciation of what they are doing for us by doing that much in return. In some places it has cost us nearly as much to have the parsonage cleaned up as the move itself. Then I am not surprised to find that under these circumstances the ladies' societies (if they ever had any) have disbanded, and that they are losing interest altogether. I have serious doubts about one's spiritual standing in the last case mentioned, for I cannot believe that the pure Spirit of my Lord will abide in a heart where the surroundings are so unclean. In some of these homes young ladies dwell. What a gathering it will be when we meet face to face, with each other and with our God to give an account of the work we have done! Oh, let us not impose on the people. If we can make the matter no better, let us strive to make it no worse, and try by the help of God to be the kind of home-makers that he intended we should be.

MRS. H. E. CARTER,
Decatur, Miss.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

X.

In October, 1864, Rev. B. F. Whittington, presiding elder of the Paulding District, said to me, "Brother Lewis, if I guarantee you a good house to live in, together with a good salary, would you move to my district?"

We had spent the year in a humble home near Tylertown, Miss. Five months of the year I spent in teaching school. At the same time, I served as junior preacher on Franklin Circuit. Brother John A. Vance was preacher-in-charge. Rev. N. B. Raiford, of China Grove, one of the best local preachers I ever knew, passed peacefully away that year.

The year had been one of great hardships. Many times during the year I had gone to bed at night hungry. The war between the States was getting to be a serious matter. The question of meat and bread with us was also a serious matter. We had seven mouths to feed, including a negro woman and her child. The precious woman I had the honor of calling my wife never complained of hard times. The dry goods the merchants had on hand when war was declared were soon all gone. Wearing apparel could not be had for love or money. We had no money, but such as we had we were willing to give to feed and clothe those depending on us, as ourselves. What did we have? Nothing but health, strength and willingness to work.

A Mrs. Conerly, precious woman, who gave us milk occasionally to partly satisfy our hunger, said one day: "Brother and Sister Lewis' work like Turks." Yes, my good wife, especially, worked hard all day and often way into the night, carding, spinning, reeling, warping and weaving that we might have clothes to put on. It put me to my wife's end to look after the meat and bread question. My wife soon learned to work the treadles, throw the shuttle, handle the batten, beam the cloth, cut and make garments.

Now, some of her children and grandchildren would not know a loom if they were to meet one in the road. Yet their mother sat for hours at a time, during those dark days, making cloth to warm their bodies. How children ought to appreciate the memory of such a faithful mother, who worked so hard to feed and clothe her children! And I believe all her children do. Yes, times were hard. Yet, as stated above, that precious, now sainted mother never complained. It mattered not how common the house or cottage we lived in, how hard the bed we slept on, how poor or scanty the fare we subsisted upon, it was all right with her. Precious woman! how I wish we had more such consecrated women in the ministry.

So many children of preachers complain because they can't have things like other folks all the time, and vow they will never be preachers or preachers wives. But this precious mother enjoyed the pleasure of hearing five of her six boys and one of her two sons-in-law preach the glorious gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ before she went to her home in the skies. Why, in the midst of such hard times, did they take to the ministry? Well, they had a mother-right, and God called them to the work of the ministry and they obeyed the call.

Well, when Brother Whittington offered me work in his district with a good home and salary, I told him, "All right, I will go." So, at the close of Conference in November, 1864, my name was called out in connection with Mt. Carmel Circuit. We never moved to a work more cheerfully. We were soon comfortably located on White Sand Creek in Covington County, near Mt. Carmel. Here I had four preaching places among as good people as I ever served.

We soon found a warm place in the hearts and homes of the good people. The war was soon over. People in this section raised plenty of corn, meat, potatoes, flour and other necessities, and were ready and willing to divide with their preacher. By May or June, most of the men who survived the war were home. There were so many sad homes all over the country. Husbands, fathers, sons and brothers went from home never to return. They were killed in battle, and the bones of many of them were left to bleach on the battleground. Horrible, horrible! May the like never be experienced again in our land. I saw a woman in Smith County whose husband was lost in the war. She loved him devotedly; her life was so wrapped up in his that she lost her mind and became almost a raving maniac.

We were soon settled and at work. The people took good care of us. My congregations were good and got better every month. In July and August we held a ten days' meeting near Mt. Carmel, which resulted in the conversion of over sixty people, most of whom were young people. Brother Hurst and a Brother John Williams, a local preacher, helped in the meeting. It was a grand, old-fashioned Methodist revival. My! How the people did sing and shout! My heart grows tender and my eyes moisten with tears as I think and write about those good old times. Will we ever experience such times again? I hope and pray so.

The year following, 1866, we held the grandest meeting ever held at old Santee Camp Ground. Ninety-one professed faith in Christ and joined the church in that meeting. Among them was one John P. Laughlin, who had joined the church in early life, was licensed to preach, but afterwards fell by the way, and for ten years or more he never went to church. On Sunday, the third day of the meeting, to the great joy of many friends and loved ones, he came out to church, took a seat in the left hand "amen" corner. He sat quietly, listened attentively till preaching was over, then left the church. He kept this up for four days. On the afternoon of the sixth day of the meeting I had a class of twenty-five to baptize and receive. Before beginning the service, as is always my custom, I went to the grove for prayer. On my return Mr. Laughlin met me a few paces from the church and said: "I know you understand your business; you are managing the meeting well. But I want to suggest that you invite all Christians to come and shake hands with the young converts when you receive them." I replied that I would, and "I would gladly give him the hand of church fellowship." His head fell on my shoulder as he said: "You can have my hand now if you want it." We were happy and rejoiced together for some time. He proved faithful till death, and was one of the best members we had after that. He said to me one day: "You know nothing of the miseries of a backslider." Then said: "You are the best hand to work with penitents and backsliders I ever knew."

I will close this chapter with a verse of a song I often sang with much effect in those days:

O how will parents tremble then
Who raise their children without prayer!
Methinks I'll hear some children say,
"I never heard my parents pray!"

THE
Grant Furniture Co.
THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that
Lasts a LIFETIME

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd.
Manufacturer of Lumber
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The Home Circle.

HOW SCOTLAND WAS SAVED.

Little Minnie, in her eagerness after flowers, had wounded her hand on the sharp, prickly thistle. This made her cry with pain at first, and pout with vexation afterwards.

"I do wish there were no such thing as a thistle in the world," she said pettishly.

"And yet the Scotch nation thinks so much of it that they engrave it on the national arms," said her mother.

"It is the last flower that I should pick out," said Minnie. "I am sure they could have found a great many nicer ones, even among the weeds."

"But this thistle did them such good service once," said her mother. "That they learned to esteem it very highly. One time the Danes invaded Scotland, and they prepared to make an attack on a sleeping garrison. So they crept along barefooted and as still as possible, until they were on the spot. Just at that moment a barefooted soldier stepped on a great thistle, and the hurt made him utter a sharp, shrill cry of pain. The sound woke the sleepers, and each man sprang to his arms. They fought with great bravery, and the invaders were driven back with much loss. So, you see, the thistle saved Scotland, and ever since it has been placed on their seals as the national flower."

"Well, I never could suspect that so small a thing could save a nation," said Minnie, thoughtfully.—The Young Churchman.

RUTH'S NOVEMBER APRIL-FOOL.

"This is your third guess, Aunt Helen; you can't guess why I'm so happy," and Ruth nestled farther down into her little white bed. No one needed to guess that she was happy—her dancing eyes told that; but why—that was what Aunt Helen had made two wrong guesses on already.

She had guessed that it was because she was staying a week with her grandmother and aunt, but Ruth had shaken her curly head vigorously.

"Partly that, of course," she said; "but that's not it."

The next thing Aunt Helen guessed was the new ring with three tiny pearls in it which Uncle Jack had given her.

Ruth told her that guess was more wrong even than the first one. There was one more chance, but Aunt Helen knew so many things which might make such a merry little girl as Ruth happy that she gave up trying to guess any particular one.

"I give it up," she said.

"Well," Ruth began, "you never could have guessed if you tried all night, so I'll tell you. It's because I played an April-Fool on somebody to-day."

"April-Fool!" Aunt Helen certainly was surprised. "Why, my dear, this is November."

"I know it," Ruth giggled softly. "You know Mr. Dobbs."

Yes, Aunt Helen knew, and she looked very grave. She had known Mr. Dobbs when he was a very tall, strong man, before the accident which had crippled him for life. She did not think that Ruth could have been doing anything that might bother him.

"You know he goes past here every day, making his wheel-chair go with that handle he works back and forth."

Yes, Aunt Helen knew. "Well, when I see him coming I hide behind the little tree in the corner of the yard. Just as soon as he is past I slip out behind him and begin to push, and I push till he's clear up that little hill."

Aunt Helen put her arms around Ruth. "I think that is a splendid April-Fool," she said.

"But wait, let me tell you the rest," Ruth went on, squirming from her aunt's embrace.

"The funniest part is to hear him wonder why his chair goes so easy. He talks to himself, and I almost laugh out loud to hear him."

"What ails my chair?" he'll say. "It acts as if it had feet instead of wheels, and pretty soon he'll say, 'Dear me, am I going crazy? It looks to me as if this was up-hill, but from the way I'm going it must be down-hill.' Oh! It's more fun than anything I ever did, and when I go home Harold Tompkins is going to keep on fooling him. Wouldn't he be the most surprised man in the world if he ever did find it out?"

Aunt Helen tucked the covers around the happy little girl.

"I wish all April-Fools could be as splendid as that, dear," she said softly.—Annie Louise Berry, in Sunday-School Times.

PRECEPT UPON PRECEPT.

"Why did you repeat the same thing to that child twenty times?" was the question once asked of famous Susanna Wesley by a friend, who was impressed with the mother's patience in the teaching of a little son. "Because nineteen times was not enough," was Mrs. Wesley's answer, and it deserves to be considered and adopted by many a twentieth-century mother. In the training of little children there must be line upon line, precept upon precept, the same thing said over and over, the same lesson enforced, until gradually good habits are formed. Modes of speech and gentle manners are never learned in a day. Long before an infant has arrived at the end of its first twelvemonth the beginnings of its habits have taken faint shape, and later those habits will be fixed. Mothers should be willing to remind thoughtless little people again and again that they are not to throw their toys and clothes about, but that each article is to be put into a place of its own, where it may readily be found when wanted. Usually it is much easier to pick up after a child, to set the house in order without calling upon little hands and little feet, than to guide them into the ways of neatness and responsibility. Yet for the good of the child there should be line upon line. The girl of sixteen who goes to a friend's house to make a visit, and who proves herself persona non grata to her friend's mother because she is careless, heedless and inconsiderate, probably has not had the advantage of vigilant training in early childhood. The children of a certain brother and sister residing in the same town were conspicuously different in their deportment, those of the one family being gentle mannered, unselfish and charming, while those of the other were forward, aggressive and disagreeable. "Mr. Blank," said a life-long friend, "was fortunate in his marriage. His wife has the traditions of good breeding behind her, and she has been more than assiduous in the early training of her sons and daughters. Mr. Blank's sister married out of her own sphere, and in her case Tennyson's axiom has been verified: 'As the husband is, the wife is.' Her children have been permitted to do as they pleased, to grow up in ignorance of common civility, and to select their companions with the widest liberty."

Line upon line must be the rule if we would in our own persons, as well as in those whom we teach and train, have courtesy so practiced that it is automatic and seems the natural result of kind thought and good feeling. Somebody, speaking the other day of a man in middle life who was honorable, useful and worthy of respect, remarked, "What a pity it is that Mr. W. makes so many breaks!" It is attention to the little nice things that makes one man a gentleman while another is a boor. The French call the little nice things "les petit soins," and the phrase means a trifle more than its English equivalent of the little cares. The boy who never allows his mother to stand while he sits, who opens the door for her to pass through and removes his hat when he meets her on the street has been trained line upon line in the practice of the little acts of politeness that take off the rough edges from daily intercourse.

"Little acts of kindness, little words of love, make our earth an Eden like the heaven above."

—Christian Herald.

THE MACHINE WITHOUT THREAD.

"I like to sew when there is no thread in the machine, it runs so easily," said a little girl.

A good many people, I think, are pretty fond of running their machines without thread.

When I hear a boy talking very largely of the grand things he would do, if he only could; and if things and circumstances were only different, and then neglecting every daily duty, and avoiding work and lessons, I think he is running his machine without any thread.

When I see a girl very sweet and pleasant abroad, ready to do anything for a stranger, and cross and disagreeable in her home; she, too, is running her machine without any thread.

Ah! This sewing without a thread is very easy indeed, and the life machine will make a great buzzing, but labor, time and force will in the end be far worse than lost.—The Friend for Boys and Girls.

WANTED.

A place in the Fall to teach Piano and Voice. Graduate under Olga Schanweker, of Oberlin. My summer will be spent in taking Post-graduate Course at some good Conservatory of Music. Reply to Fort Adams, Miss.

(Miss) OLIVE STUART.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location; price, including furniture, only $400. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Malson Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

HOUSE ON CAMPGROUNDS FOR SALE.

A desirable two-story cottage, with four rooms and bath, bathroom with latest sanitary improvements; completely furnished facing open square in front of Keller Lodge, with a small, shady park in the rear. Address, Christian Advocate, 512 Camp, New Orleans.

Gentleness of speech has made the most willful to be as the heart of a little child and filled many a troubled life with the peace of Jehovah.—Selected.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER,

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co
INCORPORATED

Doctor Tichenor's Antiseptic

No MORE TIRED FEET

After using

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

It promptly and effectively relieves Sore, Chafed, Tired, Aching feet.

The soothing coolness felt immediately upon application is indeed grateful—it is not greasy and "feels good on the feet."

Use it tonight—you will be delighted.

All Drugists 25 and 50 cts.

ASK ANY ONE WHO HAS EVER USED IT!

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulton, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragina.

Editorial.

GENERAL CONFERENCE IN SESSION.

The sixteenth General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is now in session at Asheville, North Carolina, having assembled there at 9 o'clock a. m., last Wednesday. It is composed of 308 delegates, half lay and half clerical, which is sixteen more than constituted the membership of the the General Conference which met in Birmingham four years ago. This is the first time that the great law-making body of Southern Methodism has ever convened on the soil of the Old North State, and an enthusiastic welcome has been accorded the representatives of the forty-six Annual Conferences into which the Church is at present divided. The session will probably last approximately three weeks.

The quadrennium through which the Church has just passed has been one of gratifying progress along all lines. The net gain in membership for the four years aggregates 207,754, an annual increase of about 50,000. During this period the amount contributed to missions shows an increase of about $607,306; that contributed to church extension of about $165,384, and that paid for ministerial support of over $1,000,000. These eloquent figures show that our branch of Methodism is yet alive and vigorous, and that there is little justification for the radical and revolutionary measures which have been proposed by those who have a passion for change, and who think no progress is being made unless something new is continually being attempted. It is safe to predict that most of their suggested enactments will die in the rooms of the committees to which they will be referred, and the monotonous report of "non-concurrence" will proclaim that they have been put to sleep for at least another quadrennium. The South is happily the conservative section of the Union, and our people do not take readily to innovations and experiments.

Within the past four years we have lost six bishops and have only eight left. Of these, one is superannuated, one is more than eighty years of age, and another seventy-six. And some of the others are not in vigorous health. Manifestly, therefore, the episcopal college will need to be considerably strengthened. In our opinion, not less than five, and not more than six, additional chief-pastors will be elected.

As to probable changes in our laws and polity, we prefer to make no specific predictions. The time is too near at hand, and we might find ourselves speedily discredited as a prophet. It may do to hazard prognostications as to what will transpire in the far-off years, but not in the immediate future.

In view of the grave issues which the General Conference will have to settle and the far-reaching influence which its conclusions may exert, the Church at large should pray earnestly that the body may be overshadowed and guided by the presence of the Holy Spirit, and that only those things may be done which shall make for the glory of God and the establishment of his kingdom on earth. If the leadership of the risen and regnant Christ is properly sought, there is little danger of things going very far wrong.

LAYMEN IN THE ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

A number of our church papers have hurriedly committed themselves to the scheme of having an equal number of laymen and preachers in the Annual Conferences. We do not declare opposition to the proposal, but we think it should be seriously considered in all of its possible consequences before being adopted. We have observed that many of our laymen seem little disposed to exercise the rights which they already have. They are all members of the Church Conference of the congregation to which they belong, but many of them are never present. Every station or circuit elects delegates to the District Conferences, but the attendance at these meetings is seldom large. Even of those now privileged to sit in the Annual Conference, not a few are conspicuous by their absence. Might it not be well to address ourselves to the task of getting the laymen to measure up to their present opportunities before laying out other duties for them to perform? Besides, if the size of our Annual Conferences should be doubled, would they not become unwieldy, and would it not be difficult to find places where they could be entertained? If their number should be multiplied the work of episcopal supervision would be enlarged and more Bishops would be necessary. Moreover, for some time we have feared that the breaking up of the Church into Annual Conferences, in which each is disposed to develop its own distinct enterprises, does not contribute to the largest success. For instance, we sometimes see several Conferences with each trying to maintain a school of its own, when if they would unite they could build and equip a great institution of learning. As yet, we have not reached a conclusion against increasing the lay representation at our annual gatherings. Whether it would be wise to do so, we do not know. These are simply some reflections on the subject.

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

As was stated in our issue of last week, this school will hold its second session at the Seashore Camp Ground, June 28 to July 7. The one held last year was highly satisfactory and elicited praise from all in attendance. It was at that time only a Preachers' Institute, which had been arranged for the ministers of the Alabama, Louisiana and the two Mississippi Conferences; but with a view to permanency and more thorough and systematic work, it was given its present name, and steps were taken to procure a more complete and effective organization and management. It is now chartered and under the control of capable trustees, who are bent upon making it one of the most helpful theological summer schools to be found anywhere in the country. Nor is there any reason why they should not succeed. With four strong conferences behind the movement, with an ideal location, affording superior opportunities, not only for study, but also for rest and recreation, and with no similar institution anywhere near to compete with it, this enterprise ought speedily to win its way into public favor and prove a great blessing to the Methodism of the States co-operating in its maintenance.

The program arranged for this summer offers a feast of good things. The study courses have been arranged, not only for young preachers, but also for those who have been for years in the service. Church History, Old Testament History, Homiletics, Biblical Theology and Psychology will be taught by competent instructors, such as Dr. W. E. Martin of Alabama, Dr. F. N. Parker of New Orleans, Dr. A. F. Watkins of Hattiesburg, and Dr. W. B. Murrah of Jackson. Lectures will also be delivered by Bishop Hoss, Dr. Gross, Alexander and Prof. Shailer Matthews of Chicago. Undergraduates of the Conferences will be given special instruction in their prescribed courses of study, which they will find particularly advantageous.

The expenses of attending the Seashore Divinity School are comparatively small. The railroads will give reduced rates, good board can be had at a dollar a day, and there will be no charge for the instruction given, except a small fee of $2.50. It is earnestly hoped that a large number of our preachers will now begin to lay their plans to be present. Presiding elders are especially urged to bring the superior advantages offered to the attention of the young ministers in their districts.

Let all lend a hand in building up this needed enterprise, which promises to do much in the way of furnishing a better equipped ministry to our territory.

Those contemplating attending the approaching session of the Divinity School would do well to write the Rev. H. M. Ellis, Brookhaven, Miss., who will take pleasure in furnishing all desired information.

AN OPPORTUNITY TO DO GOOD.

Our bookkeeper has informed us that the "Advocate Help Fund" is not only exhausted, but behind. This fund is used to send the paper to needy widows, superannuates, and others, who would count the cessation of its visits a great privation, but who are unable to pay the cost of subscription.

There are a number of such cases, and it is unfair and unjust to the publisher to ask him to bear all the burden of this expense. He is glad to carry his share of it, and in all such instances, when others lend assistance, he is pleased to furnish the paper at actual cost.

Here is an opportunity for anyone who may wish to do so, to accomplish good. By contributing fifty cents or a dollar to this cause, you may help to brighten some home into which but little sunshine enters. Many of the letters we receive from the poor who have read the Advocate, who love it, and who dislike to give it up, are most touching.

Last week, a good woman in sore financial straits wrote to the office asking that her paper be discontinued—and telling of the struggle it cost her to part with it. She was informed that her paper would still be sent, and wrote in reply a feeling letter, in which she said: "When I received the paper Friday morning tears came into my eyes, and gladness into my heart, to know that I was still to have the privilege of reading the dear old Advocate."

Who will be the first to help us in this good work? The names of those sending in contributions will be published, unless instructions to the contrary are given.

A WORD PERSONAL.

For the next fifteen or twenty days the editor will be at Asheville, N. C., in attendance upon the General Conference. Mail received at the office, addressed to him, will be opened by other hands, and the work will be allowed to be interfered with by his absence as little as possible. For some time we have been endeavoring to put things in readiness for our protracted stay away from home, and we doubt not that all will move on smoothly and with dispatch.

We shall regret to miss the near-by District Conferences which are scheduled to meet within the next three weeks, but under the circumstances it is unavoidable. We trust, however, that the brethren will remember the Conference organ in their deliberations, and sound out a distinct note in favor of "a greater Advocate." Let us build it up, and put it in all our homes, and make it speak in clarion tones for a victorious and growing Methodism.

Persons desiring to communicate with the editor in his absence may address him at Asheville, in care of the Battery Park Hotel.

DELEGATES TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The following are the delegates from our territory to the General Conference:

Louisiana Conference—Dr. F. N. Parker, Rev. N. E. Joyner, and Rev. Paul M. Brown, clerical; Hon. H. H. White, Judge R. R. Reed, and Dr. W. L. Weber, lay.

Mississippi Conference—Dr. H. M. Du Bose, Dr. I. W. Cooper, Dr. H. Walter Featherston, and Dr. A. F. Watkins, clerical; Major R. W. Millsaps, Mr. L. P. Brown, Judge A. G. Norrell, and Mr. W. W. Ellis, lay.

North Mississippi Conference—Dr. W. B. Murrah, Rev. T. W. Lewis, Rev. R. A. Meek, and Dr. John W. Boswell, clerical; Mr. J. R. Bingham, Rev. J. A. Lowe, Mr. J. D. Barbee, and Hon. G. L. Jones, lay.

PERSONAL.

Rev. W. L. Duren is in a meeting at Tupelo, doing the preaching himself.

Rev. J. C. Chambers requests us to state that the Hattiesburg District Missionary Institute has been called in.

Rev. Walter G. Harbin has arranged to use Tillman's Revival No. 6 in his meetings. He will have a special edition containing his cut and imprint.

Rev. J. P. Haney, who has been in the city for medical treatment, expected to return to his home in Ponchatoula this week. We rejoice at his recovery.

In a number of different letters received this week we have found high commendations of the work that Rev. J. H. Felts is doing on the Aberdeen District.

Rev. Joe Ramsey is with Rev. J. C. Park at Oxford and more than fifty have signified their intention to unite with our Church, besides those joining other churches during the revival.

Rev. J. W. Price of Wilkinson charge, made an appreciated call at this office on Thursday of last week. When we saw him he was returning from the Confederate reunion at Mobile.

On last Monday work was begun on the new church at Arcadia, under the able pastorate of Rev. R. O. Welr. We congratulate both pastor and people upon the forward movement.

Dr. J. W. Boswell is proving that he not only understands thoroughly the editing of a Church paper, but that he can also go into the field and hustle for subscriptions. He sends us in a club this week, with many kindly words.

Rev. W. A. Betts, our pastor at Montrose, and until recently in charge of the Training School at that point, passed through the city last week. He has a month's vacation, and expects to spend it in visiting some of our Western fields.

Rev. H. L. Norton of Collins, Miss., has ordered and raised the money to pay for pews, choir chairs, pulpit and chairs, and chancel rail for the church there. The Collins church will be one of the best furnished in the Hattiesburg District.

Rev. L. C. Wilson of Franklinton, La., in passing through the city, did not forget this office. We are glad to have our friends remember us, and trust that all our preachers will make the Advocate office their headquarters while in the city.

Rev. J. D. Borders, who was until recently a member of the North Mississippi Conference, preached the opening sermon of the Los Angeles District Conference at Pomona, Cal., April 19. We glean this from a communication of Rev. J. W. Shoaff.

Rev. J. J. Kelley, of Winsboro, La., is in the New Orleans Sanitarium. It is probable that he will have undergone a very serious operation before this paper reaches its readers. We pray that the healing touch of the Great Physician may be upon him.

Mr. Monroe Kling, of Sattartia, Miss., honored our office last Tuesday with a call. Brother and Sister Kling are spending a few days with Rev. and Mrs. H. T. Carley at the parsonage of the Carrollton Avenue Church, Mrs. Carley being their daughter.

We have just received an invitation to the commencement of the Meridian College, which will be from the 21st to 25th, inclusive, of this month. We are thankful for the invitation, but the present indications are that we will not be able to attend.

We understand that the vexed question of Sunday school attendance has been well solved at Crowley, La. It is said that nearly all the church members attend the Sunday school, and as a result that practically the whole Sunday school attends the church services.

Rev. C. V. Briethaupt informs us that we made a mistake when we credited him with a Woman's Home Mission Society with thirty members at Houma. The Home Mission Society has thirteen members and their adult Bible class has 31, probably the largest in the Crowley District.

"Get the brethren to drop you a line about their respective works," writes Rev. C. C. Welr. So say we, most heartily. Every letter that comes to this office is gleaned for the items of interest. The news items that can be told on a postal card form the best read portions of the paper.

We appreciate a pleasant note from one of our superannuates, Rev. H. C. Morehead of Sidon, Miss., not alone for its words of approval, but for its kindly dissent. While men think they will differ, and we expect dissent, but dissent that is still kindly is like the spiced breezes from "Arabia the blest."

We clip the following from a letter written by Rev. E. C. Cargill of Clarendon, Ark. about Brother Harbin's book, "The Modes of the Heavenly Life": "I shall take great pleasure in giving my ideas of the book in the Presbyterian Advance of Nashville. Your book is indeed helpful to me, and I can heartily endorse it."

Rev. E. E. Langford of Brooksville, Miss., writes: "My work is doing well. Sixty per cent of my conference collections has been subscribed, and part of that paid. I have not canvassed over fifty per cent of my membership in the interest of these claims. Fully half of my men are increasing, and many doubling their assessments."

Rev. W. W. Drake of Lake Charles, La., has been helping Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor of Parker Memorial, of this city, in a revival. There have been twenty accessions to the Church to this date, and marked deepening of the spirituality of the congregation. Services were held daily at the street car barns, and at least twenty-five men expressed the intention of living a Christian life.

We acknowledge our indebtedness to Rev. W. C. Carlisle, the hustling pastor of the Vardaman and Calhoun charge, for a handsome club of subscribers. Since Conference he has raised about $400 on the Calhoun City church, and placed nice pews in the Vardaman church at a cost of $440. Twenty members have been received into the Church. The people have given Brother Carlisle a hearty reception.

Rev. J. O. Ware, who succeeds Rev. Waldo W. Moore as pastor at Fifth Avenue Church in Laurel, writes: "I find Bro. Moore was held in high esteem as a Christian gentleman, and loved by all denominations. Bro. Moore visited and administered first to his own people and then the others. I count myself happy to follow a man so loved by his people. I am well pleased with the outlook and am being well received by the people."

A line from Rev. Theo. Copeland, now pastor of St. Paul's Church in St. Louis and one-time pastor of Rayne Memorial Church in this city, informs us of the death of his father in Birmingham, Ala., on the morning of April 23. We sympathize with our brother as he passes through the deep waters, and pray that in this hour of grief he may realize the fullness of that consolation that so often he has been called upon to minister to others.

We take the following lines from a letter written by that efficient itinerant, Rev. R. A. Clark, of Okolona, Miss.: "My charge moves smoothly. I have just closed a successful revival. Rev. T. H. Dorsey did the preaching, and did it well. We received 21 into the church last Sunday, 18 of whom were on profession of faith. My congregations are larger than at any time during my pastorate here, and the people are more loyal than ever before. I go Monday after the second Sunday to assist Rev. E. B. Ramsey in Memphis in a meeting."

We received a few days since a copy of the Directory of the First Methodist Church of Lake Charles, La. The printing is first-class, the arrangement is excellent, and the publication merits praise in every respect. Particularly interesting is the brief history of the congregation, which covers a period of fifty years. One unusual feature is a number of admirable rules bearing on church etiquette. The enterprising pastor, Rev. W. W. Drake, is to be congratulated on the issuance of this helpful year-book. Evidently, his charge is in a flourishing condition.

We are under obligations to the following brethren who have in the last few days sent in subscribers to the Advocate: Rev. J. F. Waltman of Coshhatta, La.; Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.; Rev. R. A. Davis, Blenville, La.; Rev. J. E. Samply, Rocky Springs, Miss.; Rev. B. P. Fullilove, Abbeville, Miss.; Rev. J. R. Countiss, Aberdeen, Miss.; Rev. J. W. Price, Hillhouse, Miss.; Rev. M. L. Ward, Mantachie, Miss.; Rev. F. M. Freeman, Bunkle, La.; Rev. T. M. Bradley, Jonestown, Miss.; Rev. E. Nash Broyles, Coffeeville, Miss.; Rev. W. M. Simon, Tangipahoa, La.; Rev. R. A. Ellis, Yazoo City, Miss.; and Rev. J. D. Harper, Winfield, La.

There has come to us a belated account of an April Fool joke, which will bear repeating. We give the account in the words of one of the victims, Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Washington Street Church of Vicksburg: "On April the first while I was sitting at the supper table alone, my wife and the children being at her mother's in Clinton, the ladies and a few of the brethren broke in on me with their arms full of good things for the pantry, and when Mrs. Saunders returned she had a pleasing April fool. We express many, many thanks. Well, we are moving on fairly well with our work, and I can boast of having a brave, consecrated set of good women in our Church at South Washington Street. They are faithful and true."

We glean from a letter written from Crowley, La., by Mrs. Benton, as follows: "The Church is greatly revived. There were seventy-six accessions and sixty-three family altars erected. We held cottage prayer meetings during the meeting, at which there were daily gathered more than a hundred women. The men also had prayer services, though not so largely attended. As a result of these daily meetings we have established a weekly cottage prayer meeting. At the first, held yesterday, there were fifty-three women present, and a great work was undertaken, viz: To try to break up Sabbath desecration in our little city, especially the Sunday races at the Fair Grounds. Brother Harbin's sermons were a feast to the hearts and minds of his hearers. A result of the meeting is a greater brotherly love between the churches, all the Protestant churches being represented in the union prayer meetings established."

GRENADA COLLEGE.

Commencement exercises of Grenada College will be held on May 29-30.

Baccalaureate Sermon: "Esau and His Mess of Pottage: the Uneducated Man's Choice," Dr. G. B. Winton.

Sermon before Y. W. C. A.: "The Influence of Ideals on Character," the Rev. Jno. R. Countiss. Literary Address: "College Training and the Development of Personality," the Rev. W. L. Duren. W. L. CLIFTON.

THE RIGHT MAN.

Dear Brother Meek: I want to congratulate the trustees of Grenada Female College upon their selection of a president for our college. I had heard no one suggested, but had thought of Brother Countiss as the best man who could be secured. He is intelligent, dignified, prudent, and a man of common sense. He is the right man in the right place, and Sister Countiss will be as kind and careful with the girls as if they were their own mother. There is no safer place to which young ladies can go for an education. It was a wise choice. J. W. HONNOLL, Tunica, Miss.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT PLEASED.

Dear Brother Meek: The election of Rev. J. R. Countiss to the presidency of Grenada College is another trophy for the Greenville District. He has spent most of his ministry within its bounds, the last four years as the popular pastor at Greenville. It is needless to say that Brother Countiss' election gives sincere pleasure in this region, as I dare say it does throughout the North Mississippi Conference. And I think the Greenville District should attest its satisfaction by sending fifty girls, at the very least, to Grenada College next year. J. D. BARBEE.

NOTICE.

Brethren, please let me know at once if you expect to attend the Oxford District Conference at Abbeville, May 11-13. Will the pastors please send in names of delegates at once? I have no response from the following: Redbanks, Holly Springs, Oxford, Water Valley (both churches), Grenada Station and Circuit, Toccapola, Randolph, Ashland, Potts Camp and Charleston. I trust these brethren will attend to this matter at once. I want the names of those who expect to attend. Trains arrive as follows: From South, 3:40 p. m., and 4:39 a. m., from North, 10:16 a. m., and 9:00 p. m.

Brethren, pray that we may have a great Conference—one in which souls may be saved. B. P. FULLILOVE.

Abbeville, Miss., April 26.

"MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE."

Orders for this neat little volume from the gifted pen of the Rev. W. G. Harbin are now being received at this office. The five sermons which compose it are a practical discussion of the work of the Holy Spirit—a theme of perennial interest. They have been signally blessed of God when spoken from the pulpit, and are calculated to stimulate and nourish the spiritual life. The volume deserves a wide circulation. Persons desiring a copy should write to Mr. C. O. Chalmers, publisher of the Christian Advocate. The price is 75 cents.

The habit of being happy may seem to be a strange expression, but it is a duty enjoined and a blessing to be attained.—Selected.

THADDEUS P. BELL, M. D.

EYE, EAR, NOSE and THROAT.

818 ALIEN BUILDING

(Next to Maison Blanche.)

NEW ORLEANS

Inquiries Promptly Answered.

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

SECOND QUARTER.—LESSON VI. MAY 8, 1910.

MISSIONARY LESSON.

Genesis xii:1-3.

1. Now the Lord had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee:
2. And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great: and thou shalt be a blessing.

3. And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.

Golden Text.—"Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins." (1 John iv:10.)

INTRODUCTORY.

In our lesson for to-day, we Southern Methodists turn aside, for a moment, from the study of Christ's life as recorded by Matthew, in which we have been engaged; that we may have again impressed upon our minds and hearts what Dr. Ed. Cook calls "the Missionary Program of the Father." The International Committee provides a Temperance Lesson—the familiar passage from Proverbs, "Who hath woe? who hath sorrow?" etc.—but for this our Church has substituted a Missionary Lesson, with a Scripture basis in the call of Abraham.

I. The Lesson's Meaning.

There is perhaps no finer illustration of faith in all the Bible than the response of Abraham to the call to go forth from his country and from his kindred and from his father's house into a land which God would show him. Twice in the New Testament it is specifically referred to. First by Stephen in his address to the Jewish council just before his martyrdom (Acts vii:2-5). Here we find evidence that there were two calls and two migrations: first from his native land of Ur of the Chaldees in Southern Babylonia, in response to which he moved northwest several hundred miles to Haran in Mesopotamia. But to him, there, after the death of his father a second call came to move on yet further, southwest to Canaan. The second New Testament allusion is the well known passage in the Book of Hebrews, (xi:8) where the fact that he obeyed is held up as proof of his faith. "By faith Abraham, when called—obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went."

But in this illustration of faith on Abraham's part, we have not only an illustration, but an explanation of the lives and conduct of multitudes throughout the centuries and to-day: Abraham's conduct shows us indeed what faith will do, but it also explains why people do things which we, not knowing this motive, otherwise might not understand. People who really believe that there is a God; when they feel sure that God wants them to do a certain thing, or devote their lives to certain ends, do so, even at personal self-sacrifice, to the astonishment often of people who know nothing of faith and how it impels to action. People wonder why a young lady leaves her home and gives her life to foreign mission work, or why a young man sacrifices worldly prospects for the ministry, and they say it is a mistake. The explanation is simple—they believe there is a good God, they hear his call, and they obey trustingly; as would any other sensible person with religious convictions and a conscience. Nothing is more reasonable, granting God and a call from him, than obedience; disobedience is mad folly or unbelief.

And the outcome was the same then and now—(1) "I will bless thee," and (2) "thou shalt be a blessing." Whoever trustingly obeys divine impulses finds blessing in the very act of obedience, and blessings all along the unknown pathway. How abundantly did God fulfill his promises to Abraham; and how richly did it pay him even in his life on earth, though he "looked for a city which hath foundations, whose maker and builder is God."

So with us to-day—we are surely blessed as we obey, and go forth in the path of duty.

But (2) "Thou shalt be a blessing." How richly has Abraham blessed the world (1) through his example, which has been an inspiration to multitudes; and (2) through his posterity, culminating in "Jesus Christ, the Son of David, the son of Abraham." (Mat. i:1.) Truly in him have all the nations of the earth been blessed.

But with equal truth we also may be of blessing to the world. God calls us all to this: to be blessed through obedience, and to be a blessing through example and service.

II. The Lesson's Message.

1. God surely calls us to-day, as truly as he did Abraham, through his Holy Spirit acting upon conscience and impressing a sense of duty. It may have been thus that he called Abraham, impressing upon him the need of separation from ungodly surroundings and the blessings that would come through the different life, though the text implies that Abraham's call was supernatural and more specific. However, our calls to-day are as certain and convincing. Concerning what have you felt thus?

2. Obedience is the one course of safety and happiness for us then; and obedience is the test and proof of our faith. Whoever refuses to obey distrusts God.

"What duty whispers to be done,
Or warns me not to do;
This teach me more than hell to shun,
That more than heaven pursue."

3. We should obey God to the utmost. Often a first call is but in preparation for a second or a third; but unless we heed the first, the second is impossible. The reason why many have not received the later and higher call is because they have not obeyed the earlier and lower. Have you obeyed, been blessed, and are you blessing others?

4. It is God's prerogative to call, not ours. We may and should rear properly our children and bring all holy influences to bear upon others, but God only should call them to preach, become missionaries, etc. Our true message is, as I well remember an aged Presbyterian minister said to me years ago: "My young brother, if God ever calls you to preach, don't resist the call."

5. We commend heartily the following object-lesson proposed by Mr. E. E. French in the Sunday School Magazine, as striking, instructive, and interesting.

To emphasize how little we give to missions, prepare beforehand strips of ribbon as follows, and call four boys and four girls to the platform to hold one end of each strip while the superintendent holds the other and tells what each represents:

Yellow: 1 inch; foreign missions, $5,000,000.

White: 24 inches; home missions, $120,000,000.

Blue: 25 inches; Church expenses, $125,000,000.

Green: 60 inches; war with Spain until March, 1899, $300,000,000.

Red: 50 inches; dress, $250,000,000.

Orange: 2 yards 8 inches; jewelry, $450,000,000.

Brown: 3 yards 12 inches; tobacco, $600,000,000.

Black: 6 yards 27 inches; liquor, $1,200,000,000.

Have the school repeat John iii:16.

An Edison Phonograph will surprise you

The first time you hear it you will be surprised at its goodness. Everybody is—particularly the first time you hear the Edison Phonograph play an Amberol Record.

People who have heard Phonographs talked about, or who have heard them at a distance on the street, or who have heard some other make of sound-reproducing machine, do not realize the remarkable goodness of the Edison Phonograph.

This is partly due to the wonderful sapphire point which does not scratch or make any sound, and partly due to the wonderful Amberol Records, which are so smooth and clear that they can reproduce the finest violin melody with all its natural sweetness.

This is the same instrument which plays and sings those musical comedy songs which everybody whistles.

The Edison Phonograph does everything and does it well.

Is there any reason why you should not have one.

Edison Phonographs - $12.50 to $30 Edison Amberol Records (play twice as long) 75c.
Edison Standard Records - 75c. Edison Grand Opera Records - 75c. and $1.
There are Edison dealers everywhere. Go to the nearest and hear the Edison Phonograph play both Edison Standard and Amberol Records. Get complete catalogs from your dealer or from us.

National Phonograph Co. 149 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.
The Edison Business Phonograph saves the time of high-salaried men and increases their letter-writing capacity.

We are Headquarters for Edison's Phonographs, Records and Supplies

—CASH OR INSTALLMENT—

We pay transportation charges on purchase of one dozen records or more.

NATIONAL AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM CO., OF LA.
614 GRAVIER STREET . . . NEW ORLEANS.

Memorize this package
and ask your grocer for it.

With Crystal Gelatine in the house dessert troubles disappear. Crystal makes the tenderest jellies as well as the greatest variety of dishes.

BOSTON

CRYSTAL GELATINE

is very simple to prepare, "jells" quickly, and each package makes two full quarts. Being nutritious and easy to digest, it is taking the place of heavier desserts. Invaluable for children and invalids. Don't fail to try it on your table.

Ask your grocer.
If he does not carry it, send us his name and we will send you a free sample package.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.,
121A Beverly St., BOSTON, MASS.

A STATEMENT AND APPEAL.

By Rev. W. A. Betts.

Having entered into negotiations with the trustees of the Mississippi Conference Training School, upon recommendation of the Teacher's Bureau of our General Board of Education at Nashville; I began the duties of the presidency sixteen months ago. The foremost task, outside the scholastic, incumbent on me, I felt to be securing an adequate supply of suitable furnishings to take the place of the rude, home-made, uncomfortable outfit then existing. With the help of our clerical students, friends, voluminous correspondence and personal appeals, an elegant and full supply of modern single desks and recitation seats with tablet arms, costing nearly a thousand dollars, has been installed and paid for—excepting a balance of less than one hundred dollars now due.

The following items are from the president's report rendered on the 18th inst. during commencement: "During the scholastic year now ending, forty-five students have been enrolled in the Training School, thirty of whom are boarders, and six are ministerial students. Twelve of the boarders have been present only one term. Including the public school students, the enrollment has reached two hundred and forty-three—eleven less than last year. A wholesome discipline has been maintained and it is gratifying to report a good degree of success on the part of our students in the prosecution of their studies. Daily religious exercises have been conducted in the presence of the assembled student-body. The principles of right conduct and conversation have been steadfastly inculcated and enforced with due fidelity, in hope of forming character of genuine worth—and we believe our labors herein have not been fruitless."

Through co-operation of friends and personal solicitation, the library has been almost doubled in the number and value of its books. Freight is gladly paid on all donations sent in. The Waldo W. Moore Literary Society has contributed a nice collection of new books. Boarding students are required to spend two hours each Saturday in the library under direction of an officer for the purpose of literary research.

The financial remuneration for sixteen months of arduous and unremitting effort has amounted to less than a thousand dollars, owing in part to a cut in rates ordered by the trustees a year ago. The crop failure in much of the territory from which patronage has hitherto been drawn, and the exercise of a more rigid discipline than had hitherto obtained, account for the financial shortage and necessitate, in part, the surrender of the presidency to another.

Two urgent appeals are appended: 1. Let us speedily wipe out this balance due on furnishings by remitting such sums as become those who love struggling boys and girls in their brave fight for obtaining here an education. Send all amounts to Rev. W. W. Moore, financial agent and president, at Montrose, Miss.

2. Rally to the support of the new president and make his administration the success the institution in every way deserves to receive. The outlook is greatly encouraging from several viewpoints and the Methodism of Mississippi ought to expect her Training School to prosper only through faithful support in patronage and in prayers for divine guidance. Montrose, Miss.

For HEADACHE—HICKS' CAPUDINE. Whether from Colds, Heat, Stomach or Nervous Troubles, Capudine will relieve you. It's liquid—pleasant to take and immediately. Try it 10c., 25c. and 50c. at drug stores.

JOINT BOARD OF FINANCE OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Since Bro. W. L. Hightower's transfer from the Mississippi Conference, Brother S. A. Tomlinson, of Gulfport, has been elected treasurer of the Joint Board of Finance, and the funds raised for our conference claimants should be sent to him.

Brethren, the fact that several calls for help have come from some of these worthy claimants in the last few days, moves me to urge you to look after these collections, and send the money to Bro. Tomlinson, so he may be able to help these worthy men and women.

Some of these calls have come from the wives of those brethren who have died since Conference, and these calls are urgent.

W. H. SAUNDERS, Sec'y J. B. F.

"CARD OF THANKS."

Having resigned my position as matron of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, of Ruston, and given up charge on the 6th inst. I wish to express my sincere appreciation to all of the societies and many friends who have aided me in caring for the many little ones under my charge. I cannot say too much in praise of the people of Ruston, and the board under whom I served for two years and eight months. Trusting that each and every one of you will continue to be as liberal in your support to the Orphans in the future as you have in the past. I am sincerely,

MRS. S. E. SAVANT.
Evergreen, La., April 24, 1910.

Marriages.

Dec. 23, 1909, at the Methodist parsonage, Glancy, Miss., by Rev. R. A. Sibley, Jr., Mr. HENRY WEEKS and Miss FLOYD HENNINGTON.

Dec. 25, 1909, at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Bell Simmons, of Hunter Postoffice, Miss., by Rev. R. A. Sibley, Jr., Mr. LEE MORRIS and Miss SALLIE SIMMONS.

Feb. 6, 1910, at the home of the bride's father, Mr. M. M. West, of Hunter Postoffice, Miss., by Rev. R. A. Sibley, Jr., Mr. ROBERT E. WEST and Miss ELVIA A. WEST.

March 20, 1910, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Ed. Glancy, of Glancy, Miss., by Rev. R. A. Sibley, Jr., Dr. L. T. FERRELL and Miss MOLLIE GLANCY.

April 3, 1910, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. C. R. Stegall, of Hunter Postoffice, Miss., by Rev. R. A. Sibley, Jr., Mr. M. SHELTON and Mrs. SALLIE JARMON.

March 20, 1910, at 6 p. m., at the parsonage in Eureka, Miss., by Rev. C. Wesley Baley, Mr. J. R. STILL, of Pope, Miss., and Miss JEFFIE D. HARRIS, of Shuford, Miss.

March 27, 1910, at 6 p. m., in front of the Methodist Church in Eureka, Miss., by Rev. C. Wesley Baley, Mr. R. L. FURR, of Courtland, Miss., and Miss MAUDE LEE BRIGHT, of Eureka, Miss.

March 19, 1910, at the parsonage in Carthage, Miss., by Rev. A. B. Barry, Mr. W. B. OWEN and Miss BESSIE BLOCKER.

March 23, 1910, at the home of the bride, eight miles north of Carthage, by Rev. A. B. Barry, Mr. MURPHY and Miss MATTIE COOPER.

April 12, 1910, at the Methodist Church, Poplar Springs, Meridian, Miss., by Rev. I. L. Peebles, Dr. RA-LEIGH J. WILSON to Miss ETTA HARRINGTON, daughter of Mrs. M. A. Harrington.

Bilious?

Doctors all agree that an active liver is positively essential to health. Ask your own doctor about Ayer's Pills.

"How are your bowels?" the doctor always asks. He knows how important is the question of constipation. He knows that inactivity of the liver will often produce most disastrous results. We believe Ayer's Pills are the best liver pills you can possibly take. Sold for over 60 years.

J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by U.S.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

Rheumatic Pains

and stiffness in joints or muscles; neuralgia; backache; tired, painful, aching feet; sore hands; sprains and bruises; sore throat and chest; due to colds or grippe; in fact, all the common aches and pains that occur in any family from day to day, yield almost instantly to a good rubbing with

Minard's Liniment.

It does not stain, it is neither sticky nor oily—it is just a delightfully smooth, aromatic cream that feels good on the skin and rubs right in and stops inflammation like magic. Minard's Liniment ought to be on every family medicine shelf, because it is so useful in emergencies and so prompt in giving relief.

We guarantee it to be just as we represent—should you find it otherwise, we will refund your money on request. Sold by all druggists in three sizes, price 25c., 50c. and $1.00.

FREE. If you have never tried it, and wish to test its merit, write us today for a free trial bottle.

MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO.,
South Framingham, Mass.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Shreveport Dist.—Second Round.

Coushatta, at Carroll	May 6, 7
Campit, at Clarence	May 8, 9
Greenwood, at Greenwood	May 14, 15
La Chute, at Atkins	May 21, 22
Hornbeck, at Prospect	May 28, 29
Leesville	May 29, 30
Ida	June 4, 5
Zwolle	June 10, 11
Many	June 11, 12
Pelican	June 18, 19
Pleasant Hill	June 19, 20
De Ridder	June 25, 26
Bon Ami	June 27, 28
Mansfield	July 2, 3
Mooringsport	July 3, 4
Shreveport, 1st Church	July 6, 7
Bossier City	July 7, 8

Shreveport District Conference will meet at Zwolle, La., June 14. The opening sermon will be preached Monday night. T. J. WARLICK, P. E.

Baton Rouge Dist.—Second Round.

Pinegrove, at Pipkin's C.	May 7, 8
Baton Rouge
Second Ch., at Antioch	May 14, 15
First Church	May 15, 16
Tickfaw, at James Chapel	May 18, 19
E. Feliciana, at Independence	May 21, 22
Bogalusa—District Conference	May 28, 30
New Roads, at New Roads	June 4, 5

C. C. MILLER, P. E.

Monroe Dist.—Second Round.

Florence	May 8, 9
Mangham, at L. Creek	May 14, 15
Delhi	May 21, 22
Collinston	May 28, 29
Downsville	June 1, 2
Floyd	June 4, 5
Lake Providence	June 11, 12
St. Joseph	June 18, 19
Brookland	June 22, 23
Calhoun	June 25, 26

S. S. KEENER, P. E.

Ruston Dist.—Second Round.

Ruston	11 a.m. May 8, 9
Arcadia	8 p.m. May 8, 9
Plaindealing, at Emma	May 14, 15
Vernon, at Wesley	May 21, 22
Gibbsland, at Mt. Moriah	May 28, 29
Ringgold, at Rocky Mt.	June 3, 4
Lanesville, at Brashwood	June 4, 5
Bernice, at Bernice	June 8, 9
Winnfield	June 11, 12
Jonesboro, at Hodge	June 12, 13
Cotton Valley	June 18, 19
Lisbon	June 22, 23
Houghton, at Castor	June 25, 26
Minden	8 p.m. June 26, 27

The District Conference will convene at Arcadia July 1 to 3. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. Robert Randle on June 30, at 8 p.m. R. W. TUCKER, P. E.

Lafayette Dist.—Second Round.

Prudehomme, at P.	May 7, 8
Lake Charles	May 14, 15
Rayne	May 15, 16
Sulphur, at Vinton	May 21, 22
Jennings	May 22, 23
Bell City	May 28, 29
Lake Arthur	May 29, 30

J. E. DENSON, P. E.

New Orleans Dist.—Second Round.

Felicity	May 29, 30
First Church	a.m. June 5, 6
Second Church	p.m. June 5, 6
Rayne Memorial	June 12, 13

F. N. PARKER.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Aberdeen Dist.—Second Round.

Amory and Nettleton, at A.	May 8, 9
Smithville, at Greenbriar	May 7, 8
Greenwood Springs	May 11, 12
Fulton, at Friendship	May 14, 15
Tremont	June 4, 5
Houlka	June 10, 11
Derma	June 11, 12
Buena Vista	June 18, 19
Prairie	June 19, 20
Dist. Conf. at Pontotoc	June 21, 24

JAS. H. FELTS, P. E.

Corinth Dist.—Second Round.

Ripley and B. M., at Ripley	May 8, 9
Dry Run	May 14, 15

Tlshomingo Ct.	May 20, 21
Mooreville Ct.	May 21, 22
Marletta Ct.	May 26, 27
Mantachie Ct.	May 28, 29

BEN P. JACO, P. E.

Sardis Dist.—Second Round.

Mt. Pleasant, at Marshall Institute	May 7, 8
Long Town, at McGees Chapel	May 14, 15
Eureka, at Love Joy	May 21, 22
Olive Branch, at Cen. Hill	May 27, 28
Pleasant Hill, at Lewisbg.	May 28, 29
Senatobia	June 4, 5
Arkabutla	June 8, 9
Crenshaw	June 9, 10
Batesville	June 11, 12
Enid	June 12, 13
Courtland	June 18, 19

W. M. YOUNG, P. E.

Winona Dist.—Second Round.

Webb, at Watson	May 8, 9
Ruleville, at Drew	May 15, 16
Lambert, at Porchman	May 21, 22
Tutwiler, at Glendora	May 28, 29
Minter City	7:30 p.m. May 29, 30
Eupora, at Maben	June 5, 6
Slate Springs, Tuesday	June 7, 8
North Carrollton, Friday	June 10, 11
Inverness	June 11, 12
Indianola	June 12, 13

E. S. LEWIS, P. E.

Oxford Dist.—Second Round.

Grenada Ct., at D'k Hill	Apr. 30, May 1
Coffeeville, at C.	May 7, 8
Holly Spgs. Ct., at Sylvestria	May 14, 15
Waterford, at Asbury	May 21, 22
Charleston, at C.	May 28, 29
Grenada	June 5, 6
Ashland, at Salem	June 11, 12
Lafayette, at Old Liberty	June 17, 18
Toccoola, at Salem	June 18, 19
Randolph, at Spg. Hill	June 21, 22
Dist. Conf. at Abbeville	May 11, 13

J. E. CUNNINGHAM, P. E.

Durant Dist.—Second Round.

Kosciusko Ct.	May 7, 8
Kosciusko Station	May 8, 9
Rural Hill	May 14, 15
Louisville	May 21, 22
Chester	May 28, 29
Ackerman	May 29, 30
Poplar Creek	June 4, 5
Sallis	June 11, 12
McCool	June 18, 19
Black Hawk	June 25, 26

N. G. AUGUSTUS.

Greenville Dist.—Second Round.

Rosedale	May 8, 9
Hillhouse, at Hillhouse	May 15, 16
Shaw, at Merigold	May 22, 23
Gunnison, at Kuhn	May 28, 29
Friar's Point	June 5, 6

W. W. WOOLLARD, P. E.

Columbus Dist.—Second Round.

Columbus, Second Church	May 8, 9
Starkville ct., at Steel's C.	May 14, 15
Hebron, at Cochran, Ala.	May 22, 23
Columbus ct.	May 28, 29

The District Conference will be held in Mayhew April 27th. J. E. THOMAS, P. E.

Hattiesburg Dist.—Second Round.

Lux, at Lux	May 7, 8
Purvis, at Dearmans	May 9, 10
Sumrall	May 14, 15
Maxie, at Epps	May 16, 17
Oloh, at Tracy's	May 21, 22
Eastahutchie, at Pleas. R.	May 29, 30
Magee, at Sharon	June 4, 5
Collins, at Collins	June 6, 7
Lucedale	June 11, 12

M. B. SHARBROUGH, P. E.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

Four Years to Pay for This Piano

UNDER the Werlein Club Plan one hundred people buy one hundred pianos, each agreeing to pay for one piano only. The piano is shipped upon payment of $10. The monthly payment is $6. This is for a $400 piano. Write for particulars—how to save $108 on your purchase.

Sixty-seven years in business.

Philip Werlein, Ltd., 605-7-9 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

Weber, Chickering, Mathushek, Behr, Pease, Wegman, Ivers & Pond, Steck, Werlein Pianos and Pianolas. Sheet Music—Victor Talking Machines.

THE BEST MADE Angell's Cough and Whooping Cough Syrup

For Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and Throat Trouble.

Contains no Opium or Morphine. All Druggists. Price 25 and 50 cents.

DUGGAN'S BOLL WEEVIL REMEDY WILL INSURE A GOOD COTTON CROP

Should be used by every cotton planter in the South. Simple, Cheap, Effective. Fully demonstrated at Natchez, Miss., last season. Write for particulars and references.

One gallon diluted treats 2 acres

J. J. DUGGAN, Mn'r.

4326 Magazine Street, New Orleans, La.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents; twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection; beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER, Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Grenada College.

Secure our catalogue before deciding where to place your daughter. Superior Home Comforts; Only Two Girls in a Room; Marvelous Health Record; Excellent Fine Arts Department; Strong Lyceum Course; Well-Adapted Library; Personal Attention to Individual Pupils; Superior Student Body as Associates; Carefully Selected Faculty; Strong Course of Study; Rates Reasonable; Constant Christian Influence permeating and dominating College Life.

Apply for rooms at once and thus secure choice of location. W. L. CLIFTON, A.B., Ph.D., President, Grenada, Miss.

I. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Richl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd., JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. NEW ORLEANS D. C. Godfrey Optician.

COMPLETE ONLY $15.00

Just Send Me One Dollar

and I will ship C. O. D. to any open railroad station in the U. S., east of the rocky mountains, this fine Willard Steel Range. Anyone can say they have the best range in the world, but I will furnish the evidence and leave the verdict to you. After you examine this range, if you are satisfied in every way, pay agent $14.00 and freight, and you become the possessor of the best range in the world for the money. The range has six 8-inch lids; 17-inch oven; 15-gal. reservoir; large warming closet; top cooking surface, 30x26 inches. Guaranteed to reach you in perfect order. Shipping weight 400 lbs. "Write for Catalogue." Agents wanted to take orders for this range.

Burns Wood or Coal

No. 135 Willard Bldg. 320 Chestnut Street

ST. LOUIS, MO.

DON'T BUY PAINT TILL YOU GET OUR BOOK

Here's the difference between Chase's fresh, made-to-order paint and the paint at dealers' and paint that is made by painters. Dealers' paint is stale, with the binder broken up by chemicals. And no painter has the heavy machinery to mix and grind paint. Our paint is made after each order is received and shipped the day it is made. Chase paint means, fresh paint, longer service, better service. Be sure to write, now, for Big, Free Book and Color Card. Also direct-from-factory prices, free trial and freight-prepaid offer.

O. L. CHASE, THE PAINT MAN.

DEPARTMENT 17, ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

NEW BOOKS.

The Morning Glory. By Mrs. Cora Gannaway Williams. Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn. Price, 75 cents.

This beautiful little volume was written at the suggestion of Bishop E. R. Hendrix, who has also contributed the introduction. The author is a brilliant Arkansas woman whose home is at Hot Springs. The story, which has all the charm of a romance, is a true one. It is the life-history of Miss Mae McKenzie, one of the deaconesses of the M. E. Church, South, who wrought and died at Crossett, Ark., where are located some of the largest lumber mills to be found in the South. It tells of how God touched the heart of the little girl at twelve years of age; how her purpose to serve her Lord ripened with the passing years; of the sorrows which came to her; of her education and finishing at the Scarritt Bible and Training School; of how in devotion to her work she pushed aside the love to which her soul responded, and was led by Providence into the field where she was named "Morning Glory," where she won all hearts, and performed a service which was truly remarkable, and which yet abides. The story is finely written, the printing and binding are all that could be desired, and the book is a credit to all who had a hand in its making. It is calculated to do much good, and deserves a wide circulation. Like "The Sky Pilot," it shows the transforming and uplifting power of love properly manifested. It is an excellent volume to be put into the hands of our young people, who will not fail to read it if given the opportunity.

Scientific Living; or, The New Domestic Science. By Laura Nettleton Brown. Health-Culture Company, Passaic, N. J.

This volume of 234 pages deals with an important subject—how and what to eat to keep the body vigorous and healthful. It points out the duty of trying to intelligently safeguard the physical constitution in every possible way by giving attention to recognized hygienic laws. The constituent elements of various foods and their relative nutritive values are discussed. The neglected art of cooking also comes in for a share of attention, and many practical and helpful suggestions are made. The volume is timely in a country where rapid and injudicious eating is widely prevalent and dyspeptics abound.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, God in his allwise goodness and infinite wisdom, has taken from our midst our friend and co-laborer, Mr. W. F. WEEMS; be it, Resolved, 1st. That we, as a Sunday school, deeply deplore the loss of such a friend, but rejoice that an entrance to the heavenly kingdom has been his, and thank God for his beautiful life and service in the cause of Christ; that this Church, this community, this county has sustained a great loss in his decease and will miss him most when a call is made for a conscientious, fearless man.

2d. That the memory and example of this consecrated man, do their work in the lives of his friends and family.

3d. That while we miss his pleasant face and encouraging words in our Sunday school, we will cherish his memory and strive to emulate his example.

4th. That we extend to the family our greatest sympathy in this their dark hour of bereavement.

5th. That this tribute to the memory of our deceased brother be spread on the minutes of our Sunday school and a copy be sent to the Newton Record and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

(Mrs.) A. L. MONROE.
(Mrs.) C. R. ABNEY.
(Mrs.) O. C. HULL.

CALENDAR.

The World's Missionary Conference, Edinburgh, Scotland, June 14-24.

Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, Annual Meeting, Tupelo, Miss., June 11.

Seashore Divinity School, Seashore Campground, Biloxi, Miss., June 28-July 7.

Young People's Missionary Movement Conf., Asheville, N. C., July 1-10.

Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, Seashore Campground, July 21-31.

Epworth League.

Shreveport Dist. League Conf., Grand Cane, La., June 12, 13.

North Mississippi League Conference, Kosciusko, Miss., June 14-16.

District Conferences.

Oxford District, Abbeville, Miss., May 11-13.

Baton Rouge District, Bogalusa, La., May 28-30.

Meridian District, Fifth Street Church, Meridian, Miss., May 30-June 3.

Winona District, Moorhead, Miss., June 2-5.

Newton District, Newton, Miss., June 6-10.

Lafayette District Conference, Eunice, La., June 8.

Shreveport District, Zwolle, La., June 14.

Ruston District, Arcadia, La., July 1-3.

Greenville District, Tunica, Miss., June 15-17.

Aberdeen District, Pontotoc, Miss., June 20-24.

College Commencements.

Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., May 8-10.

Port Gibson Female College, May 13-16.

Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., June 5-7.

Mansfield Female College, Mansfield, La., June 5-7.

Sunday School.

World's Sunday School Convention, Washington, D. C., May 19-24.

CHURCH DIRECTORY.

New Orleans District, Rev. F. N. Parker, D.D., presiding elder; residence, 241 Olivier Street.

First Methodist Church, St. Charles Ave., near Callopie St.; Dr. S. H. Werlein, pastor; residence, 5830 Prytanis St.; phone, Uptown 329.

Rayne Memorial Church, St. Charles Ave. and General Taylor St.; Dr. John A. Rice, pastor; residence, 1421 Constantinople St.

Second Methodist Church, 2331 Burgundy, near Lafayette Ave.; Rev. A. I. Townsley, pastor; residence, 2723 N. Rampart St.; office hours, 9 to 11 a. m.; phone, Hemlock 978.

Parker Memorial, corner Nashville Ave. and Ferris St.; Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor; residence, 734 Nashville Ave.

Louisiana Avenue, cor. Louisiana Ave. and Magazine St.; Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor; residence, 2903 Camp St.; phone, Uptown 1391.

Felicity Street Church, cor. Felicity and Chestnut Sts.; Rev. Albert S. Lutz, pastor; residence, 1619 St. Mary St.; phone, Jackson 144.

Carrollton Avenue Church, cor. Carrollton Ave. and Elm St.; Rev. Henry T. Carley, pastor; residence, 1125 Fern St.; phone, Uptown 1238.

Algiers, Laverne Street, cor. Delaronde; Rev. J. F. Foster, pastor; residence, 214 Seguin.

Melbourneville and Mary Werlein, Rev. H. Whitehead, pastor; residence, 1619 St. Mary St.; phone, Jackson 144.

Epworth Church, cor. Banks and Scott Sts.; Rev. J. A. Sims, pastor; residence, 232 South Pierce St.

Rev. John L. Sutton, Superintendent Orphan Boy's Asylum; residence, 5220 St. Charles Ave.; phone, Uptown 128.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, Superintendent St. Mark's Hall, 619-21 Esplanade; Residence, 721 Henry Clay Avenue; phones: Residence, Uptown 2739; St. Mark's Hall, Hemlock 1458.

Rev. John T. Sawyer, D.D., residence, 2330 Nalence St.; phone, Uptown 879.

R. F. Harrell, Secretary Y. M. C. A., 815 St. Charles St.

Hicks' CAPUDINE Cures Sick Headache Also Nervous Headache, Travellers Headache and aches from Grip, Stomach Troubles or Female troubles. Try Capudine—it's liquid—effects immediately. Sold by druggists.

Spend Your Summer in the

BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAINS

Pure water, no malaria or Mosquitoes. Public and private baths. Select Southern guests solicited. Write for booklet.

OAK HALL, E. BROWNLEE, Prop. Tryon, N. C.

Furniture for School Rooms, made

in the South, of Southern wood, by Southern people, with Southern capital. New factory—one of the best equipped in America, employing skilled labor only.

Lowest Prices—Advantageous Freight Rates.

We make Desks, Seats, Teachers' Desks, Book Cases, Library Tables, Magazine Racks, etc. Write for illustrated catalog and price list. Address

W. A. PRICE & SON, West Jackson, Miss.

CONVENIENT WAY,

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA, SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL, General Passenger Agent.

Royaline Oil

The GREAT ANTISEPTIC

YOU can mix one-third water with it and it will still be as powerful as the other antiseptics. What does this mean to you? It means that in Royaline Oil you get A GOOD PAIN MEDICINE as well as a superior antiseptic which will relieve Soreness, Inflammation and Pain in any part of your body. It is good For Headache, Diarrhoea, Burns, Swellings, Rheumatism, Colic.

You ought to keep a bottle of Royaline Oil handy; it is like having a doctor in the house. For man or beast—internal or external. Does not grease or soil.

25c. and 50c. Druggists.

Royaline Medicine Co., Ltd., New Orleans, La.

Free to Saw Mill Men.

It is fresh from the press and the largest, most complete and best illustrated book of its kind in existence. Printed on enameled paper of a very fine quality, this catalog is brimful of information, such as everybody who is interested in the latest saw mill machinery and supplies should have.

The illustrations show the mechanisms perfectly, and are supplemented with accurate descriptions including the principal specifications. Write for this useful catalog. We will send it free and postpaid.

Wheland Machine Works, 2700 Sydney St., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM

"In the Land of the Sky."

Devoted to the cure of chronic diseases by natural methods. No drugs. No surgery. If you are afflicted with Paralysis, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Neurasthenia, or some other disease that medicines have failed to cure, write for our free illustrated book which tells all about this new and better way.

Ideal climate, beautiful mountain scenery, pure water, home-like conditions, hygienic food, personal care and attention to each case; complete new sanitarium equipment, low charges and liberal guarantee of satisfaction are features here.

Patients unable to come to the sanitarium may be successfully treated in their own homes at slight cost.

Write to-day for the book and diagnosis blank—Both free.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM,
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS

Should buy for 1910, "Hymns of Glory" by Hamip Sewell, Atlanta, Ga. It is the best book for Sunday Schools. It's New, Over 100 songs, never before printed. Sunday Schools Superintendents can get a sample copy free by writing to-day. And we have a song book—easy payment-plan, giving you all the time you want to pay for song books for Sunday Schools only. Let me tell you about it:

Sunday School Superintendents send for free sample "Hymns of Glory" and ask for song book easy payment-plan. Address all orders to HAMP SEWELL, Atlanta, Ga.

ASTHMA

If you have asthma simply send me your name and address and nearest express office and I will at once send you FREE to try my regular $1.00 bottle the LANE'S CURE FOR ASTHMA. Certain results, wonderful relief. Send no money, but let me prove my great remedy. Write to-day. You have nothing to lose, everything to gain.
D. J. Lane, 338 Lane Bldg., St. Marys, Kansas.

DAISY FLY KILLER

placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Can't spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c. HAROLD BOWERS, 150 De Kalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

FREE

Beautiful Organ Book

Shows organs in natural colors of the wood. Tells all about the finest and sweetest toned organs made. Send me your name and address and I will send you this book and write you full particulars. I send organs anywhere in the United States on free trial and have hundreds of satisfied customers in all parts of the country. I sell.

Direct from Factory
On Easy Terms

—less than ten cents a day will pay for a Purcell organ. My direct price beats them all—saves you jobbers' and dealers' profits. Don't decide until you get my proposition.
L. S. PURCELL, Factory to Home Piano and Organ Man
No. 6, Western Ave., Chicago, Ill.

DON'T BE WITHOUT WATER.

There is no need of the property-holders of this city being any longer without water and sewer connections. This has been the one great distress of our city, not being able to have modern improvements in our homes. But now there is no need of any more complaints along this line, as the city is perfectly willing to connect free any property with the water main, carrying the pipes to the property-holders line, without any cost what ever to them.

The popular firm of C. C. Hartwell & Co., on Baronne Street, are making a liberal proposition to connect the sewer pipes free of charge. They also go farther, and agree to do all plumbing and laying of pipes necessary to connect the house with the sewer and water on monthly payments. This enables the property holders to not only put the property occupied by him, but any property he has for rent in modern shape, with practically no outlay of ready cash. People interested in this proposition should consult C. C. Hartwell & Co., for a detailed explanation.

In taking revenge, a man is but even with his enemy; but in passing it over, he is superior; for it is a prince's part to pardon.—Francis Bacon.

Habits were never formed in a day, and they can not be mastered in a day. Time, with heart and mind united in determination, can conquer any evil habit, and make or strengthen any good one.—Selected.

Tidings from the Field

Sumrall, Miss.:

Our meeting began the first Sunday in April: Rev. George D. Anders was with us the first week, preaching with great earnestness and power. The meeting continued about seventeen days, and the people were deeply moved, spiritually. Rev. D. E. Kelley, our Conference Evangelist, came to us the second week and continued till the close, preaching beautiful sermons and entertaining vast throngs of people who hung upon his words. The meeting waxed warmer and warmer unto the end, closing with great victory. The meeting resulted in a great revival to the entire community with seventy-eight accessions to the Methodist Church, and several members to the Baptist Church also. The people gave as a token of their appreciation of the work done a purse of $176. The meeting will be long remembered and the faithful preachers will perhaps never be forgotten in the minds of the people.—R. F. Witt.

Booneville, Miss.:

The Booneville Methodist Sunday School is running at high tide. For a year now its enrollment has been around five hundred, sometimes more, sometimes less. The present enrollment is about 460. We hope soon to run it to near 600. The cold winter seriously affected the enrollment and the attendance. On a recent Sunday the attendance was 345. Our church roll is 332. We have about a hundred members not in the school. Our purpose as a school is to wipe out this list by June 26th, thus having every member of the church connected with the Sunday school. "We can do it, and we will."

One secret of success of this school is a live, wide-awake superintendent; another is a well selected body of enthusiastic teachers. The part that has put most life and enthusiasm in the school body is the organized Bible Classes. We have five adult classes above the senior department. One of these, "The Business Men's Class," with 155 enrollment, is one of the greatest classes in the State. It is taught by Mrs. Mollie Allen, a most capable lady and efficient teacher. Another large, enthusiastic class is "The Matrons' Bible Class," with an enrollment of forty. This is the housekeepers' class. The pastor teaches this class in the main auditorium of the church. Its enrollment will in a few weeks leave the half-hundred mark far in the rear. Some of the most efficient classes of the school are the smaller classes. They are active, enthusiastic, with live teachers that love the work and their classes. We are working, praying, rejoicing along the way.—J. H. Holder, Pastor.

Fick's CAPUDINE Cures Sick Headache. Also Nervous Headache, Travelers' Headache and aches from Grip, Stomach Troubles or Female troubles. Capudine—it's liquid—effects immediate relief. Sold by druggists.

CORRECTION.

Without reflection on our very efficient Conference Secretary, for I feel sure the mistake is not his, please let me call attention to the fact that the Minutes do not give the credit on specials on the Oxford District to which we are entitled. I happen to know of several of which there is no report, namely, $47.50 at one place, $17.50 at another, $13 at another, $12.30 at another, and $100 at another. There may be others. These all did not go into the Laymen's Fund, but they are specials, and our pastors should have so entered them on their reports. I think this is due our faithful presiding elder and myself as lay leader of last year.

J. M. WYATT.

Oxford, Miss.

NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Newton District Conference will be held at Newton, Miss., June 6-10. Let the brethren take notice and arrange their work accordingly.
T. J. O'NEAL, P. E.

LAFAYETTE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Lafayette District Conference will convene at Eunice, La., June 8, at 9 a.m., and continue until the business is finished. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. A. J. Gearhead, of Gueydan, on Tuesday, June 7, at 7:45 p.m. The following are the committees:

License to Preach—L. N. Hoffpauir, J. D. Nesom, C. A. Battle.
Admission on Trial—W. W. Drake, W. H. Benton, K. W. Dodson.
Elder's and Deacon's Orders—C. C. Weir, J. I. Hoffpauir, A. F. Vaughan.
State of the Church—H. N. Brown, W. L. Doss, J. S. Rutledge.
Missions in the District—Martin Hebert, C. V. Breithaupt, John Sholars.

Sunday School and Epworth Leagues—M. C. Holt, A. F. Vaughan, A. J. Gearhead.

Financial Systems—R. P. Howell, W. W. Drake, K. W. Dodson.
American Bible Society—H. B. Vandenburg, S. D. Howard, L. N. Hoffpauir.

Quarterly Conference Records—W. H. Benton, C. C. Weir, C. A. Battle.

Let the brethren make no conflicting appointments; and arrange to be present at the opening session.

J. E. DENSON, P. E.

Lafayette, La., April 27, 1910.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

Seek not to pry into the deep things of God, when he was satisfied with the solution, "Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight."—Selected.

THE "THEY-SAYERS."

Every neighborhood has its "they-sayer," a person whose chief pleasure and occupation in life is to spread abroad the little scandals and falsehoods of the community. If you happen to remark on the loveliness of Miss Mary Brown's complexion, the "they-sayer" is ready for you with the news that "they say" it is not natural. Of all human beings the "they-sayer" has the smallest excuse for existence. "They say" is an anonymous covering for falsehoods. Truth never lacks an author. But the purest, sweetest character in the community has no immunity from the biting tongue of the "they-sayer."

If you happen to remark on the delicious and refreshing qualities of Coca-Cola the "they-sayer" is ready and waiting to insinuate that it must contain something that is injurious. Like Miss Mary Brown's complexion, it is so excellent that the "they-sayers" say that it can not be natural.

Don't be a "they-sayer." If you know nothing pleasant to say, better say nothing. And more important still, don't say ugly things unless you know absolutely that they are true. Follow that rule and you will never say anything unpleasant about the national temperance drink. If you want to know the truth about Coca-Cola and exactly what it contains, write for a copy of "Truth about Coca-Cola." Address The Coca-Cola Company, Atlanta, Ga.

Next Time You Drive Into Town you'll be wanting during your stay a real good drink. "Something to quench your thirst to stay quenched."

DRINK

Coca-Cola

No matter how thirsty you are, or how tired you are or how particular you are, you'll like Coca-Cola because it hits that dry spot—relieves fatigue and tickles the palate all the way down.

Delicious - Refreshing - Wholesome

Send for Our Free Booklet, "The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells all about Coca-Cola, what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial.

THE COCA-COLA CO.
Atlanta, Ga.

Whenever you see an arrow think of Coca-Cola

Darsam Bros. Coal Co.

COAL, COKE AND ANTHRACITE,
2217 Callopo Street, New Orleans.
Phone Main 1552, P. O. Box 1406.

VISIT MINERAL WELLS

For HEALTH AND PLEASURE AND WEST TEXAS

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.
E. P. TURNER,
General Passenger Agent,
DALLAS TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves 8:00 a.m.
Instead of at 9:20 a.m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville
THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati
Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves 7:30 p.m. at

FOR
NEW YORK, CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS.

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.
SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW ON SALE.

FITSCURED NO CURE NO PAY—Pay our small professional fee until cured and satisfied. German-American Institute, 924 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

Stop LaGrippe!

Before it Stops You.

Take
JOHNSON'S
Chill and Fever Tonic
Knocks it up every time.
Your money back if it fails.
Get it to-day!

50c at Druggists.

ESTABLISHED 1868
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
WILLIAMS BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

LYMYER
CHURCH
BELL FOUNDRY, CINCINNATI, O.

Bowden
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Catalog Free.
BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

RHEUMATISM

A CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as those who have it know, for over three years, and tried almost everything. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has not returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and it effected a cure in every case. Anyone desiring to give this precious remedy a trial, I will send it free. Address, Mrs. E. Jackson, No. 525 James Street, Syracuse, N. Y. No return is required. Above statement true.—Puh.

A REAL BLESSING

What a blessing is perfect health! What enjoyment there is in feeling well! Life is all pleasure, and work is but play. But if one is continually ailing, life seems scarcely worth living.

Thousands of women suffer, continually or periodically, from the ills or weakness peculiar to their sex. Pain kills pleasure, hinders the performance of their daily duties and makes them most wretched.

Countless women, suffering such ills, have found relief or cure in that old, reliable medicine, especially prepared for women,—Wine of Cardui. Thousands of these grateful ladies write to tell what Cardui has done for them.

We recently had this letter from Mrs. Annie Vaughan, of Raleigh, N. C.: "I cannot find words to express my deep gratitude for what your wonderful medicine, Cardui, did for me, for I sincerely believe it saved my life. I was sick and worn out, almost unto death. My sister finally persuaded me to take Cardui. Before I had taken 5 bottles I was well and strong."

Cardui is a pure, vegetable remedy, which acts gently and naturally on the woman's system. If you are nervous, weak or sick, try Cardui. Get it at once. It will help you.

At all druggists in $1.00 bottles.

Epworth League

By Rev. Wm. H. Coleman.

TOPIC FOR MAY 8.

A SPIRITUAL BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY.

(1 Thess. 1:5-8; Gal. 1:15-16.)

I. Introduction.

The greatest event in any life is "The soul's return to God." It is more important than the day of its occurrence or the anniversary thereof. It matters little when and where and how I was "born again," but it is a matter of great concern to me to know that I am a child of God to-day, and the Bible teaches us that it is by the spiritual birth alone that we enter into the rich heritage of divine sonship.

II. This Spiritual Birth is Scriptural.

Not only does the Bible teach that it is necessary, but gives us a better understanding of its nature and true significance, by variously designating it as follows:

(1) Conversion. "Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, etc., Acts iii:19; "Except ye be converted * * * ye cannot enter the kingdom of heaven." Matt. xviii:3.

(2) Regeneration. "He saved us by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost." Titus iii:5.

(3) Being born of God. John i:12-13.

(4) Being born again, or from above. John iii:3.

(5) Passing from death unto life. John v:24; I John iii:14.

III. It is Experimental.

This spiritual birth is not alone a theological fact, but as Dr. A. B. Jackson tells us in his "Fact of Conversion" it is also a fact of consciousness. It is an experience. "It is not a mere change of belief, but a modification of character." If we are converted we will know it, though we may not know the exact day or hour of its occurrence in our life, and though the manner of our conversion may not have been like that of our friend's conversion.

IV. Its Fruits.

The value of conversion depends not on how it happens, but on what it effects. "If you are born of God you are a 'new creature'; old things are passed away; all things are become new." (2 Cor. iii, 17.) And this new relationship into which you have come, and the new experience that has come into you, are so conducive to a transformation of your life and character as to enable you to live the Christ-like life. Being born of the Spirit, you may have the Spirit dwelling in you (John xiv:17) and the fruit of the Spirit (Gal. v, 22-23) manifested in your life. Thus the life is kept from sin (I John iii:9; v:18). And your mission in the world becomes that of an ambassador for Christ, to be the "salt of the earth," "the light of the world." (Matt. 5:13, 16.)

All these fruits of conversion seem to have been manifested in the lives of the Thessalonians, to whom St. Paul is writing in our first reference. The gospel had come unto them "in power, in the Holy Spirit, in much assurance." They had become "followers of the Lord." They were examples to all that believed. From them "sounded out the word of the Lord."

V. This experience is necessary for every soul, no difference how correct the life may have been without it. (John 3:3.)

Therefore, the question of greatest importance to each one of us to-day is, "Am I born again?" Not have I been born again, but am I in the experience now? If so, then we have an heritage richer than all this world could give. And with thanksgiving in our hearts for the spiritual birth that brought us into this rich heritage, we may fittingly establish "A Spiritual Birthday Anniversary." We should not, however, be satisfied by an annual celebration of this great event in our lives, but in every day we should celebrate our spiritual birth by living the spiritual life.

NOTICE.

To the Leaguers and Pastors of the North Mississippi Conference.

Only a few weeks now until our League Conference and we cannot afford to fail on the raising of our League pledge to the Mississippi Girls' School. We are still behind $336 on this pledge. We have in pledges still due, $500. So you see every League must send us the amount it has pledged for us to pay the same in full.

The Board of Missions is counting on our being ready to report all of the $1,000 pledge paid by the time of our League Conference.

Will you not make a special effort to raise your part and send to me at once? Also send me a full report of your missionary department.

The following pledges are still due: Booneville, Senior and Junior, $50; West Point, $25; Louisville, $25; Amory, $25; Pontotoc, $25; Okolona, Senior, $15; Okolona, Junior, $10; Iuka, $10; Senatobia, $25; Sains, $15; Houlka, $20; Myrtle, $5; Shipman Boys, $25; Miss B. Herron, $5; W. L. Thomas, $5; Houston, $25; Nettleton, Durant and a few other Leagues have also promised to help in this cause.

W. I. BOSWELL,
Fourth Vice-President,
Kosciusko, Miss.

FINE POST CARDS FREE

A Big Package Sent to All Our Readers Who Write at Once.

To any reader of this paper who writes immediately and encloses 2 cents stamps we will mail a set of five most beautiful post cards you ever saw. Ten very finest floral, birthday and motto cards, all different, in exquisite colors, silk finish, beautifully embossed, etc., for only 10 cents. Thirty cards all different 25 cents. With each order we include our plan for getting 50 choice cards free. Address: The Art Post Card Club, 704 Jackson St., Topeka, Kan.

"We speak of the 'shadow of death'—it is only the shadow which falls on the portico as we stand knocking at the door—the next the Father's voice of welcome is heard.—Selected.

20th Century Treatment.

In this day and generation the opium and liquor habits are not regarded so much as an outward and visible sign of viciousness as they are of an inward and "physical" condition. With this change of view point has come a change in the method of treatment. We no longer treat our morphine users and drunkards as criminals. We no longer try to reform them mentally until we make the attempt to cure them physically. One of the chief exponents of this theory, and perhaps the most successful—is Dr. E. M. Woolley, of Atlanta, Ga. For over thirty years he has held firmly to this belief and the number of absolute cures he has made is something wonderful, as persons from every part of the Union who have been treated by him can testify. Address him at his Sanitarium, the Victor, No. 21 E. Atlanta, Ga.

Where it is said, "There is no fear in love," there is a gracious suggestion to some amiable persons who should have clearer vision and larger in-flowings of spiritual life.—Selected.

Mothers, Protect the Little Ones.

Sometimes a splinter gets in the flesh deep, and festers; a "skeeter" bite is scratched and makes a big, ugly sore; poison oak or some disgusting skin disease breaks out on one of the little ones. Don't let it run on without the proper attention—the result is disastrous. Stop these little eruptions of the skin, such as boils, bruises, burns, cuts, poison oak and sores of any kind, with "Gray's Ointment." You can rely on it for a speedy, permanent cure. For sale by your druggist for 25c per box; if not write us for free sample box, addressing Dr. W. E. Gray & Co., 509 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., and it will be sent to you postpaid.

Mr. E. B. Virgin, of New Orleans, La., writes: "We have been using Gray's Ointment in our family for 25 years, and can recommend it for anything in the line of cuts, bruises, nail punctures, boils, carbuncles, skin bruises and splinters in the flesh."

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also.

COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.

1300-1302

DRYADES STREET.

PHONES—Jackson 1080—1081.

Rider Agents Wanted

In each town to ride and exhibit sample 1910 bicycles. Write for Special Offer. Finest Guaranteed $10 to $27 1910 Models with Coaster Brakes and Puncture Proof tires. 1908 & 1909 Models all of best makes $7 to $12 100 Second Hand Wheels, all makes and models $3 to $8 Great FACTORY CLEARING SALE. We ship on approval without a cent deposit, pay the freight and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL. TIRES, coaster brake rear wheels, lamps, sundries, half usual prices. Do not buy till you get our catalog and offer. Write now. MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. M. 76, Chicago.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS
UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing by hand—no breakage.
WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE

LE PAGE
INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO
TORONTO - CANADA

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00
St. Louis, $26.00
Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares
To ALL Principal Points in the
United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD,
141 St. Charles Street New Orleans.
Phone Main 3618.

Where the finest biscuit, cake, hot-breads, crusts or puddings are required Royal is indispensable.

ROYAL
Baking Powder
Absolutely Pure

Not only for rich or fine food or for special times or service. Royal is equally valuable in the preparation of plain, substantial, every-day foods, for all occasions. It makes the food more tasty, nutritious and wholesome.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

GEORGE THOMAS ROSS was born in Alabama May 28, 1855, and died at Pelahatchie, Miss., Feb. 15, 1910. When he was a few months old his father moved to east Texas, where he was reared and spent the larger part of his life. From East Texas he moved to Ruston, La., where a number of years were spent, and from there to Pelahatchie, Miss. He was married Jan. 6, 1881, to Miss Lou Lockwood, who, with one son, one brother and four sisters, survive him. His life did not embrace quite fifty-five years. The worth of a life is not to be measured by length of years, but by noble deeds. He was actuated throughout his life by high ideals. He sought to glorify God by upright and righteous conduct, rather than by high sounding professions. In early life he was bereft of a mother's love and care. His father married again. His step-mother being a woman of deep piety and earnest Christian activity, was instrumental in bringing her husband and step-children to Christ. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church when a boy. His step-mother used to say that when Tom got religion that he got a good case of it. He was a consistent member of the Church, and active in Church work up to the day of his death. During a large part of his life he served in the capacity of steward. He took pride in bringing up the full amount of a hard list, and of going beyond its estimated value. He was liberal with his own means in supporting the Church and her institutions, and could not conceal his impatience with those who refused to give the preacher their support. He contended for the largest salary that the Church was able to pay the pastor, and to the collection of it he willingly gave his time and earnest effort. He was the preachers' friend. His home was the preachers' home, one room of which was dedicated to the use of preachers. He loved his Church and his pastors. The beautiful and commodious church at Ruston, La., was built largely through his planning and efforts, and represents his ideal of the kind of house of worship that Methodists ought to build.

Brother Ross believed in men. He trusted men to the uttermost. Honest himself, he believed that all men were. In business transactions, he never required a note or security of any kind, believing that the obligation would be met. He assisted quite a number of young men in various ways, some of whom are now in the ministry of the Church. A former pastor, who knew him well, writes: "By nature he was impulsive, but no living man who knew him well would charge him with being otherwise than manly, sincere, straight-forward and true. He would not nurse a grudge. If he was wronged, he was quick to forgive. If he did wrong, he was anxious to make amends. He did not want anything to disturb his relation to God or his fellowman."

His death was a great shock to all. It was so sudden, so unexpected. It came without a moment's warning to himself, or to his devoted wife. He ceased at once to work and to live, dying as he had hoped to, without a struggle or prolonged illness.

May the kind heavenly Father comfort the sorrowing ones.

His remains were taken to Ruston, La., and there interred.

"Earth to earth, and dust to dust,
Calmly now the words we say;
Left behind, we wait in trust
For the resurrection day.
Father, in thy gracious keeping
Leave we now thy servant sleeping."
W. J. DAWSON.

Mr. J. T. HOWARD was born Nov. 12, 1854, and died Feb. 10, 1910. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1872, but was not converted until October, 1874. He was married to Miss Mary Josephine Curry Nov. 21, 1876. He was the father of eight children, all living, and the grandfather of eight grandchildren. He leaves a mother, one brother, one sister, a wife and eight children to mourn for him. He was a member of the Church from young manhood and stood for her doctrines, often filling offices in the Church. He was a member of the Board of Trustees when he died. His life was filled with religious joy. He was always ready and willing to go and do anything the Church saw fit to place upon him or ask of him. He was not afraid to die, although he wanted to live. He said just before departing, "I am not afraid to die, I am ready to go; but I am needed here. That was true, not only in his family, but the Church also needed him."

Brother Howard loved his family with that love that makes home sweet and happy. He loved his Church and was always at the place of prayer and duty, willing to do his part and help in every way possible. While he was a willing worker and the Church needed him, the Father saw fit to call him home. The Father of all Spirits said, "It is enough; lay down the cross and take thy crown."

There is a vacant place in home and a vacant place in the Church. Loved ones, weep not as those who have no hope. He is not dead, but sleepeth. We look forward with blessed assurance of meeting him beyond the vale of tears, where we will never say good-bye to those we love so much.—J. F. Waltman, Coushatta, La.

On March 2, 1910, at 4 o'clock in the morning, the Lord saw fit to take from us our dear grandfather and father, Mr. HUGH McKINNON. He was a Christian, we can all say. He was a kind and affectionate father, husband and grandfather. About his last words were, "Heaven, sweet heaven." He was loved by all who knew him. Our loss is his eternal gain. We miss him greatly on earth, but hope to meet him in heaven some day, to part with him never more. His granddaughter, CLARA.

Mr. W. W. CLARK was born at Caralton, Pickens County, Alabama, October 29, 1835, and died at Chunky, Miss., March 11, 1910. He was married to Miss Jennie Renfro, November 25, 1869. She was the daughter of one of our preachers who was serving this charge at the time of her marriage to Brother Clark. To Brother and Sister Clark five girls and three boys were born. Three of the girls preside over three different parsonages in the Mississippi Conference. One is the wife of one of our stewards, and Miss Sallie, the only one yet single, is one of the most useful workers in our Church. The three boys are useful members of the Church here. Brother Clark was a Methodist and devout Christian about fifty years. He was Sunday school superintendent for a number of years. No one else it seemed did so well as he. His oldest son will take his father's place. Bro. Clark was one of the preacher's best friends. We miss him so much. But we rejoice that he fought a good fight and won the crown. As we think of him we feel a strange sadness—sadness mingled with joy because of his noble life. And we rejoice because he rests from his labors in the many mansions not made with hands; eternal in the heavens. J. F. McCLELLAN.

ALFRED WILLIAM FAULK was born at Grand Gulf, Miss., May 14, 1881, and died at his home at Cedars, Warren County, Mississippi, Feb. 25, 1910, after an illness of only a few days. He was laid to rest in the cemetery at Port Gibson. Bro. Black and Bro. Hawkins conducted the funeral services.

He was a consistent member of the Methodist Church. In all of the relations of life he was faithful to every trust, exemplifying the true qualities of manhood. How we hated to give up our precious one, God only knows!

He leaves a devoted wife, three little children, a father, three sisters, a brother and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep, from which none ever wakes to weep."
HIS SISTER.

Miss SUE BATTLE MARTIN was born in North Carolina, raised in Louisiana and died in Minden, La., March 1, 1910. Her parents were Dr. H. L. and Mrs. A. D. Martin, who died years ago in North Louisiana.

Miss Sue became religious in early life and lived up to her professions and the requirements of the Word of God, and was a true and devoted Christian to the close of her life, which was March 1, 1910. She left several brothers and sisters and quite a number of other relatives, and especially a sorely afflicted sister, with whom she was raised. None who knew Miss Sue doubt her having entered into "that rest prepared for the people of God."

She was a true woman, a devoted sister and consecrated Christian.—Thos. J. Upton, Gibsland, La.
March 26, 1910.

Died, at his home, Warrenton, Warren County, Miss., Friday morning, Feb. 25, 1910, in the 29th year of life, Mr. ALFRED WILLIAM FAULK, son of Alfred and Clara Johnson Faulk. He leaves a wife, three little boys, a father, three sisters and one brother. His sainted mother preceded him to that land of rest something more than two years ago.

Fred was a good son, always loved, honored and obeyed his parents; was a devoted husband and father, and a consistent member of the Methodist Church, having united with the Church when he was quite young.

How hard it was for us to give him up. But our loss is his gain. Yes, my boy is at rest. God has given me that assurance, and some sweet day we shall meet again, where there is no parting. His disease was such that he could not talk with us about the home he was going to, but it is all well with his soul; and now he will be waiting and watching for the coming of loved ones left behind.

We laid his mortal remains to rest in the cemetery at Port Gibson, Mississippi, Saturday February 26, 1910.

Brothers M. M. Black and H. G. Hawkins conducted the funeral services from the M. E. Church at Port Gibson.

And now, as God has seen best to take my dear boy home to be with him, I will say, Thy will and not mine be done; only give me grace, Father, to look up to Thee every day and every hour.
FATHER.

SOUTHERN SEATING

and
CABINET COMPANY

Manufacturers

HIGH GRADE CHURCH
FURNITURE

Largest and Oldest Makers of Church Furniture in the South

Jackson, - - - - - Tennessee.

USE THE L. & A. RAILWAY

"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service
Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden
and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

Summer Tours

VIA

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

California, Colorado, Utah, Mexico,
AND ALL THE WEST.

NEW YORK

And ALL EASTERN and NORTHERN RESORTS

See Your Local Agent for full Particulars, or Write

J. H. R. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La.

C. W. MURPHEY, City Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, MAY 12, 1910.

C. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

VOL. 57—No. 19.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2831

General Conference

FIRST DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

Bishop A. W. Wilson, Presiding.

The Sixteenth General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, began its first session at 9 a. m., Wednesday, May 4, 1910. Bishop A. W. Wilson, presiding. Bishop E. E. Hoss announced Hymn 560, "And are we yet alive?" which the Conference sang very impressively.

After the hymn, the Conference, led by Bishop Wilson, joined heartily in repeating the Apostle's Creed. Bishop H. C. Morrison then offered prayer. The scripture lessons were then read, Bishop J. S. Key reading Psalm 2, and Bishop James Atkins reading the second chapter of Ephesians. Hymn 188, "O Spirit of the living God," was announced by Bishop W. A. Candler, and was sung by the Conference.

The Conference was then led in prayer by the Rev. Frank Richardson, D.D., of the Holston Conference, the senior member of the General Conference.

Bishop Wilson: We meet together, brethren, under heavier shadows than have fallen upon us at any time before. The memories of the dead are with us. A larger number than ever before of our chief leaders, to whom we have looked for counsel and example, have been called from our midst. We miss them. They have left the savor of pure and godly lives behind them. They are worthy of remembrance. And we have this, too—the joy that overtops all sorrow and puts away all sadness—we know that he who was dead and is alive again and alive for ever more, is with us, and we shall never meet without him. I trust that the sense of his presence will be in every heart during every session of this Conference, and that his hand may guide us in every way, and his wisdom inspire all our counsels, and that his spirit may effectually rule all our plans, so that the Church, in the quadrennium to come, and in the years that lie beyond, may have a larger scope of service and more glorious triumphs than she has ever yet achieved. We may well thank God for what she has done, and take courage for the future.

We are here now to begin the great work that is put upon us. We ask, as your presiding officers, the considerate co-operation of every member of this body. And we pray that in perfect harmony and mutual love and Christian fellowship we may abide together and work together. May the God of all grace make our work effectual for the accomplishment of his own gracious purposes. The secretary of the last General Conference will call the roll.

The secretary: I will call first all the names of the Bishops.

The following responded or were reported present: Bishops Wilson, Hendrix, Key, Candler, Morrison, Hoss, Atkins.

The roll of the Conference was called, and almost all of the members were present and responded to their names, hardly any of the clerical members failing to do so.

The Bishop: Whom will you have for secretary, A. F. Watkins, of the Mississippi Conference, was put in nomination by H. M. DuBose; J. M. Barcus, of the Northwest Texas Conference, by H. A. Boaz, and Gross Alexander, of the Louisville Conference, by R. W. Browder.

On a standing vote, A. F. Watkins received 149 votes; John M. Barcus received 44, and Gross Alexander received 69.

The Bishop: A. F. Watkins has received the majority of the entire vote, and therefore is elected secretary of the General Conference.

The Bishop: We will now decide as to the number of assistant secretaries.

The secretary: I wish nine, as follows: J. A. Burrows, C. H. Briggs, R. A. Meek, J. M. Barcus, E. O. Watson, J. H. McCoy, F. N. Parker, Gross Alexander, J. E. Harrison.

The following are the standing committees ordered by the Conference:

1. Episcopacy.
2. Itinerancy.
3. Revisals.
4. Publishing Interests.
5. Education.
6. Church Extension.
7. Missions.
8. Boundaries.
9. Temperance and other Moral and Social Questions.
10. Sunday Schools.
11. Epworth League.
12. Appeals.
13. Finance.
14. Church Relations.

The following directions were given as to the organization of these committees and their time of meeting:

When the committees assemble for organization they shall elect a temporary chairman and secretary, and afterward a permanent chairman and secretary by ballot.

The committees on Episcopacy, Revisals, Education, Missions, Temperance and other Moral and Social Questions, Epworth League, and Finance, which are the odd numbers on the list, shall hold their stated meetings on Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week at 3 p. m., and the Committees on Itinerancy, Publishing Interests, Church Extension, Boundaries, Sunday Schools, Appeals, and Church Relations, which are the even numbers on the list, shall hold their stated meetings on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of each week at 3 p. m.

Some other routine business was transacted, after which Bishop Hendrix read the Episcopal Address to the Conference. The reading consumed a little over two hours, and when finished the Conference adjourned.

SECOND DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

May 5th, 1910.

Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson called the Conference to order promptly at 9 o'clock, and asked Rev. J. D. Simpson, D.D., of the North Alabama Conference, to conduct the devotional exercises. Dr. Simpson announced Hymn No. 2 of the Hymnal, "Come, Thou Almighty King." After the hymn was sung, he read Phil. iii. The hymn No. 180, "All hail the power of Jesus' Name," was sung, and prayer was offered by Dr. Simpson.

Rev. A. F. Watkins, the secretary, read the minutes of yesterday's session, including the roll of delegates who answered to their names. By request of the Bishop he read the proceedings of the evening reception which was given to the General Conference by the city of Asheville.

Slight corrections were made in the minutes as read.

Bishop Hendrix then took the chair.

Bishop Hendrix presented a matter of privilege, saying: It gives me great pleasure to introduce the English representative to this General Conference, Rev. John S. Simon, ex-president of the British Wesleyan Conference, as fraternal messenger from that great body, our mother church.

The British representative was received by the Conference rising to their feet.

The British Representative said: I am thankful to you for this cordial reception, and to the members of the Conference for their reception individually. I will not take up your time, but will show my appreciation of your kindness by deferring my remarks.

Rev. H. M. DuBose, of the Mississippi Conference, was introduced by the Bishop, and said: This is the 16th session of our General Conference, and the 31st General Conference since the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1784. No Methodist who has ever lived has been permitted to create to his memory so great a monument, a single monument, as that which Joshua Soule was permitted to erect to his memory in the Constitution of Methodism. It is now 102 years since that immortal document was indorsed in the classic Methodist city of Baltimore, and the marvel grows, and it still abides a marvel, and it is a question which is the greater wonder, the Constitution itself, or the man who wrote it, the youth and rusticity of the man who at 27 years of age wrote the Constitution of Methodism. That Constitution has been the binding force in Methodism, has held together its great interests, and has stood for its lofty ideals in the Western World.

When the author of the Constitution, Joshua Soule, began to be two and forty years of age, Providence gave him to the South as a pastor in the city of Baltimore, and from that time until his translation he lived in the hearts of the people of the South. In the melancholy events of 1841, and those which followed, the Constitution held him more deeply in the hearts and affections of the Methodists of the South. He was received by them as their chief rabbi, as their master in Israel. He was with us to lead and to guide in council. He made his home at the center of our ecclesiastical life, the city of Nashville; and for more than twenty years after coming to us he had his residence either in the city or near the city. For a dozen of years, the melancholy years of the war between the States, he lived in a quiet manner about six miles from the city of Nashville. His home was surrounded by fragrant meadow lands, the clover and blue grass that made the sward. There in his retirement he cultivated his garden, and pruned and nursed the young trees in his orchard. He spent the hours among his books, and in the dignity and majesty of life, and was visited by those who loved and all but worshipped him. Only a few weeks before his death he left this quiet cedar-built house and went down to the city of Nashville, where he was translated.

A few days ago one of our great Tennessee church women, Mrs. Bell, the wife of one of the justices of the Supreme Court, made a visit to this shrine, and was graciously permitted to secure a piece of the red cedar from those sacred walls. She has had it made into a gavel, which has been sent to this General Conference, and I have been asked to present it to the General Conference to its President, and I do so in the name of Mrs. Bell. It is a symbol of the majesty and enduring strength of the Constitution.

Bishop Hendrix: With great delight we welcome what when alive sheltered the noble form of Bishop Soule. He was a great man, great in counsel, great as a bishop, great in saving common sense. He is immortal because he knew how to ask leave to print, and so we have the Constitution not only from his lips, but from his pen. And it is an immortal heritage of the Church, having gone into its history, and now helps to shape all its future. I thank Dr. DuBose, and through him the donor of this gavel. Now another privileged question. I introduce Captain W. T. Weaver.

Captain W. T. Weaver: Mr. Chairman, there is an intention on our part so to equip the Chair that he can hammer into submission all the hard-headed Methodists in this assembly. One of the dearest of Scotch friends I ever had was accused of being a very hard-headed old man. His response was, "The only difference between you and me is that I have a hard head and a soft heart, and you have a hard heart and a soft head." Now, gentlemen, the hard-headed element has been prevailing in Methodism.

ever since I knew it, and it is consequently a combination of the qualities of hard-headedness and soft-heartedness. That is a great combination, a hard head and a soft heart; but a soft head and a hard heart is a dangerous thing. And, gentlemen, the committee on arrangements asked me to present this gavel for the use of the General Conference at this session. And when we have men of strong individual opinions and convictions that they do not like to surrender unless they are hammered into submission, we thought it might be somewhat of an aid to the Chairman to call your attention by the presentation of this gavel to some men who were willing to sacrifice their opinions, their convictions, their pride for the good of the Church; and all these things are necessary in a legislative body, when we have our own convictions, and believe that the world revolves around our circle. We must remember that other men have convictions that are just as strong, and possibly to be considered with just as much carefulness as our own. Now this gavel was taken, through the kindness of a friend, from the old stairway in the house where our first Methodist class was formed by Bishop Asbury, known as the "Old Killian Home," to which reference has been made heretofore. The wood in this is said to be 122 years old; and I think that is entirely accurate. We present this for use at this Conference, and we trust that it will be an instrument in helping on and facilitating your business.

The Bishop: Two is a company, three is a crowd. I think we may make the rule of Asbury and Soule at this time. (Lays aside the gavel on the table.)

I am reminded that we are in Buncombe, immortal Buncombe, where the Hon. Mr. Walker, a member of Congress, when quietly informed that he was not speaking to the question, said, "O, I am speaking to Buncombe." And so Buncombe became immortal by reason of the man who wanted to be heard by his constituents and to have it known that he did speak. I have two requests that came up a while ago, that any brethren who want Buncombe to know that they are here must give their names when they begin to speak, so that the stenographers can take them; and also, if they want what they say to be accurately reported, they must send up their resolutions in duplicate, which is the rule of Asbury and Soule, and of the Chair this morning.

Two telegrams were read, as follows:

Chicago, Ill., May 4, 1910.

To the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Asheville, N. C.:

The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church send brotherly and Christian greetings to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

H. W. WARREN,
L. B. WILSON.

Santer, S. C., May 4.

To the 16th Quadrennial Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Asheville, N. C.:

The cordial greetings of the 120th council of the Diocese of South Carolina are extended to the 16th Quadrennial Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now in session at Asheville, with the prayer that Divine blessing may attend its deliberations.

A. S. THOMAS, Secretary.

The Bishop: What is your pleasure respecting these greetings?

On motion of J. O. Wilson, they were referred to the committee on fraternal correspondence, with directions to make proper reply.

James Cannon: Is it time for the report of the organization of the standing committees?

The Bishop: Let the secretary report the organization.

This was reported, as follows:

Episcopacy: Collins Denny, chairman; E. G. B. Mann, secretary.

Itinerancy: J. O. Wilson, chairman; T. E. Sharp, secretary.

Revisals: E. W. Alderson, chairman; W. A. Christian, secretary.

Publishing Interests: N. E. Harris, chairman; E. M. Glenn, secretary.

Education: E. C. O'Rear, chairman; James Cannon, Jr., secretary.

Church Extension: W. F. McMurtry, chairman; T. C. Shuler, secretary.

Missions: O. E. Brown, chairman; J. W. Perry, secretary.

Boundaries: J. M. Dannelly, chairman; C. M. Harless, secretary.

Temperance and other Moral and Social Reforms: Not organized yet.

Sunday Schools: E. B. Chappell, chairman; John H. Hinemon, secretary.

Epworth League: T. W. Lewis, chairman; E. C. Bare, secretary.

Appeals: E. R. Hendrix, chairman; R. A. Meek, secretary.

Finance: T. S. Garrison, chairman; C. A. Sanford, secretary.

Church Relations: W. J. Young, chairman; C. H. Briggs, secretary.

The Committee on Rules then submitted its report, which was read and discussed seriatim and adopted without material alteration.

E. H. Rawlings, of Virginia: I wish to offer a privilege resolution. It would be recognized as privileged and provoke no discussion.

The secretary read the resolution as follows:

Resolved, 1. That the secretary of the Conference be directed to send to the National Missionary Congress, now in session in Chicago, the following telegram of greeting:

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now in session at Asheville, N. C., sends hearty greetings to the National Missionary Congress, and offers special prayer for God's blessing upon your work in the closer federation of all the Churches and their more aggressive co-operation in the great business of winning a world for Christ. Read Isaiah 2:1-5.

Resolved, 2. That the Conference pause solemnly in its work for five minutes and the presiding Bishop be requested to lead in special prayer in behalf of the National Congress.

E. H. Rawlings: I move the adoption of the paper as read by the secretary.

The Bishop suggested that the same be adopted by a rising vote, and it was so adopted.

J. M. Barcus: I have a resolution that I would like to present at this time:

Resolved, That the Committee on Fraternal Correspondence be requested to send the greetings of this Conference to our venerable and beloved Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

The roll of Annual Conferences was then called for appeals, memorials and petitions, and a vast array of papers were placed in the hands of the secretary and referred to the various committees.

The representatives from Brazil, Rev. J. W. Tarboux, D.D., and Rev. H. C. Tucker, then addressed the Conference at considerable length.

The session closed at 1 p.m. with the singing of the Doxology and the benediction by Bishop Hendrix.

GENERAL CONFERENCE NOTES.

The General Conference is holding its sessions in a spacious auditorium, which has a sharply inclined floor and a number of galleries. Its seating capacity is probably about 1500. Its acoustics are not good, and the delegations seated in the rear have great difficulty in keeping up with the proceedings.

The Bishops preside over the General Conference in the order of their seniority in office. Perhaps the best presiding officer among them is Bishop Hendrix, who has a fine presence, a strong voice, and remarkable quickness of decision. He is also an accomplished parliamentarian. Business is always transacted with dispatch and few hitches occur when he is in the chair.

The best debaters in the General Conference are Dr. Collins Denny, of the Baltimore Conference; Dr. B. F. Lipscomb and James Cannon, Jr., of the Virginia Conference; Dr. Gross Alexander, of the Louisville Conference; and Dr. E. W. Alderson, of the North Texas Conference. Each of them is thoroughly conversant with the rules, and has the gift of clear statement and ready utterance. As yet no great discussions have taken place in the body.

The Episcopal Address, which was written and presented by Bishop Hendrix, was well received. It is conceded by all to be a masterful discussion of the condition and needs of the Church. No abler or more comprehensive paper has ever come from the Episcopal College. It was read with great effectiveness, and made a profound impression. The Bishop seemed deeply touched when he read that part of the address which paid tribute to the character and services of his beloved colleague, Bishop Charles B. Galloway. The great Mississippian is sorely missed, not only by his comrades in the episcopacy, but by the entire Conference. This is the first general assembly of Southern Methodism in a quarter of a century in which he has not been a conspicuous and leading figure.

The general impression is that the women's memorial for the "full rights and privileges of the laity" is a badly defeated measure. The refusal of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions to concur in the petition struck the movement a serious blow, and the kindly but strong deliverance of the Bishops against it seems to have left it without the faintest hope of success. Miss Belle Bennett, Mrs. R. W. McDonald and other leaders are reported to be here to champion the measure, but we dare say that they entertain little expectation of its passage.

Dr. A. F. Watkins makes a capital secretary. He has a voice which carries well and can be distinctly heard throughout the auditorium. He has a fine corps of assistants, who keep matters well in hand. Dr. C. H. Briggs, of Missouri, does most of the reading, and the service which he is rendering in this capacity merits the highest praise.

The overshadowing issue before the General Conference is the Vanderbilt question. Memorials have come up from all parts of the connection asking that such action be taken as will safeguard the interests of the Church and settle finally and forever the question of the ownership of the institution and the other questions pertaining to its management which have been raised. All papers relating to this subject have been referred to Committee on Education which is sitting with open doors. Bishops Hoss and Hendrix and Chancellor Kirkland will appear before the committee and make statements Monday afternoon. It is expected that a large crowd of visitors will assemble to hear these statements and listen to the discussion of matters relating to the University.

The fraternal messenger from the British Wesleyan Conference is Dr. John S. Simon. He is a worthy representative of English Methodism and a scholar of great reputation. He was president of the British Wesleyan Conference in 1905. He is at present the governor, or as we would say, the dean of the Theological School at Bishop's, where he has been in charge for the last eight years. He was born in Glasgow, June 25, 1833, when his father, Rev. John Simon, was stationed in that city. He was educated at Kingswood school, Bath, Elizabeth College, Gower, and Victoria College, Jersey. After leaving college he spent three years in the study of law. He became a Wesleyan minister in 1863. He served as pastor in Lancaster, Weymouth, Doncaster, Birmingham, London and Bristol. Before becoming dean of the Theological School he was chairman of the Bristol and Bath districts for two years, and also served on the Manchester district. He has been a member of the legal conference, which is the greatest governing body of the British Wesleyan Church, since 1895. He was a member of the Ecumenical Conference in Washington in 1899, and in London in 1901. He has been a frequent contributor to The London Quarterly Review and The Wesleyan Methodist Magazine. For several years he has been chairman of the board of publication of The Methodist Recorder, the official organ of this church.

A FRIENDLY WORD TO GROWN-UP CHILDREN OF CHRISTIAN MINISTERS.

By Rev. P. O. Lowry.

Almost anywhere we go we find some representative of a preacher's family—brother, sister, children, etc.—some to honor and some to dishonor. Especially to the children of our Methodist preachers do I drop these words of exhortation.

Perhaps, more than you think, your father's piety and integrity is being tested over in you, though he may be sleeping the long sleep, or may be an honored superintendent of the Church to whose service he has given his life, or yet in the active service of his holy calling as a Christian minister. When he was charged with the sacred office to which he was set apart by the Church you were not forgotten, and he was required to answer affirmatively this question: "Will you be diligent to frame and fashion yourself and your family according to the doctrine of Christ; and to make both yourself and them, as much as in you lieth, wholesome examples and patterns to the flock of Christ?"

With this solemn obligation resting on him he went before a critical world and expectant Church and put to the test the power of the gospel committed to him to preach. Like heaven's vitality was tested by its influence, and heaven always works from within out. If then his own children fail to recognize the laws of the Lord he preached or the church that sent him out and supported him in his sacred work, not only is the influence of what he has endeavored to do for others greatly hindered, but the genuineness of his own piety is brought into question. His honor and good name are at stake. How dare you treat carelessly that which means so much to him? A patriot would die to uphold the good name of his native land. Can you do less for him whose name you bear?

And besides this you owe the Church something. She has honored you in honoring your father, and for his sake, if for nothing else, throw open her arms to receive you into the best society of the land, and for his sake ministered to your temporal needs, and for his sake admitted you to her schools and did all in her power to make of you a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, a noble son of a worthy sire. And while he was earnestly watching over the children of others, how many of God's saints have borne you heavenward on the wings of prayer! Without this what might you not have been? Now, my brother or sister, what are you doing to honor the church and the God who has honored you? Your opportunities for usefulness have been peculiar and your obligations sacred, and the world is both judging you and rejudging your father in the service you render, or fail to render the Church for which he gave his life. Many times pastors find their truest friends and most faithful and efficient helpers in the children of our pastors gone before, but sometimes they are a constant source of grief and disappointment; some even still drawing pensions from the benevolence of the Church, never rendering her a service, and sometimes never entering her doors of worship. What a spectacle of ingratitude and the hardness of the human heart! My friend, let not this sin be laid to your charge.

If not for the sake of the Christ who redeemed you, or the Church that nourished you, then for the sake of him who begat you, I would at least respect some of the habits of his life and the sacred tenets of the religion that it cost him so much to preach, and in which he has been or expects to be comforted when he passes to the life beyond.

REV. JOHN C. LOWE.

It is with sorrow that we record the death of our beloved brother and co-laborer, Rev. J. C. Lowe, a veteran member of the North Mississippi Conference, and a superannuate since the session of his conference at Columbus, Miss., in December, 1907. He died at his home in Monticello, Tenn., on Sunday morning, February 27, 1910. He had not seemed well for about three weeks, and during the last week of this time had suffered greatly from heart trouble.

On the Sunday morning above mentioned he had eaten his breakfast and was sitting by the fire when with an exclamation and call to his wife, who was in the room, he passed away without a groan or struggle. His end was peaceful, after much suffering.

After appropriate service in the home conducted by Rev. W. W. Alexander, of Vanderbilt University, and pastor at Monticello, he was laid to rest in the village cemetery.

Rev. John C. Lowe, son of Henry and Mary Lowe, was born in Queen Anne's County, Maryland, March 28, 1834. He was united in marriage November 21, 1872, to Miss Mary A. Hinton, near Forest City, Ark., who with two daughters survive him. One of the daughters was in New York studying music, and one teaching in Georgia. Neither could be present at his death. Let the prayers and sympathy of the Church go out for these sorely stricken and sorrowing ones.

Brother Lowe was converted in Baltimore in 1852, and licensed to preach by the Fourth Quarterly Conference of Ashbury charge, Memphis, Tenn., October 19, 1860 (B. D. Mullins, presiding elder). The year following he served as a supply and junior preacher on Concordia circuit, with C. C. Glover as preacher in charge. He was received on trial into the Memphis Conference November 20, 1861, and sent again to Concordia circuit as junior preacher, with Rev. G. W. Bachman as preacher in charge.

Brother Bachman says: "We soon became closely attached to each other, but in a few months he accepted a chaplaincy in the army, where he remained until the next Conference when he returned to the pastorate, and was again sent to Concordia as preacher in charge. The two following years he served the Friars Point circuit, making five successive years in what is known as the 'Delta' country. The white population was sparse, but mostly of a high-toned and intelligent class of people, with whom Brother Lowe was very popular as a man and preacher. As a preacher, he ranked well in his class; was of a social nature, and very diligent in his pastoral duties, especially looking after the sick, distressed and poor of his charge. He studied carefully the doctrines and polity of the Church, and became an able expounder of the Scriptures and defender of Methodism. He was a good man, true to the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, and has gone to the home of the faithful."

Of his class of ten received on trial in 1864, only two are now living—A. B. Jones of the Memphis, and J. W. Honnoll, of the North Mississippi Conference.

Brother Lowe was a good and indulgent husband, and a kind and devoted father. He was a high-toned Christian gentleman; a man of dignified and striking personality, and yet of a genial and affable spirit. I was his fellow-guest and room-mate during the late session of our Conference, December 1-6, at Okolona, Miss. I enjoyed his kindly association and brotherly fellowship. He was looking well at this time, and I had no thought that we would so soon be called to sorrow for his passing away.

In a notice of his death and character, the New Orleans Christian Advocate pays to him this well deserved tribute:

"During the many years of his active service, he filled a number of important appointments, and was a diligent and effective worker. He was well educated, possessed a strong and vigorous intellect, and was a forceful and impressive preacher. His style was expository. And few men had a more comprehensive grasp of the fundamental doctrines of the Church."

During his sixth year in the ministry, Dr. Lowe was stationed at Jackson, Tenn. At the organization of the North Mississippi Conference, in 1870, he became a member of this Conference, serving among other charges, Okolona, Iuka, Corinth, Pontotoc; was two years supernumerary; and in the fall of 1879 was transferred to the Holston Conference. Here, in filled Marion station, Wytheville station and other appointments. He was a superannuate one year. His last appointment in this Conference, on account of poor health, he did not fill.

In the fall of 1880 he was transferred back to the North Mississippi Conference. From this time on for twenty-one years, he was continuously effective, following his "loved employ," the gospel ministry in the service of the Church and of our Lord, in heat and in cold, sometimes faint it may be, yet still persevering, ever constant, ever loyal and true.

With his last appointment, Cedar Bluff, he closed his active ministry in the latter part of 1907, and at the Conference following took the superannuate relation, in which he continued until the Master called and he passed to his heavenly reward.

A letter from Rev. W. W. Alexander, his pastor, speaks of our ascended brother and the closing scene in kind and tender words: "He had endeavored and join us as heartily as we will welcome them. At himself to the people at Monticello. In these circumstances, generally, he was held in great respect. In our Church he was a favorite with everyone. His presence and prayer were a benediction to our services. His last days were peaceful ones. He often spoke of going, and assured me about a week before he died that he was ready to go, or pending, as it pleased the Master. The final summons came suddenly. There was no word of his going; no time to say farewell. No testimony he might have given could have added to the abundant testimony of his godly life among us." T. C. WEIR.

A BUNDLE OF SCRAPS.

By Rev. W. P. J. Sullivan, D.D.

First—I am more than glad that you occupy the editorial chair of the Advocate. You give your readers sound doctrine, spiritual nourishment and good English. I am in hearty accord with your views on questions that are to come before our General Conference. At the Conference will elect six Bishops, and a complement of episcopal officers, and they let all other matters stay as they are, in my judgment it will do well.

Second—But progress depends upon the plan. Word of God as the Holy Ghost has given it to us by the inspiration of patriarchs, prophet and apostle, and which the Church of God has held in all ages, and not upon shifting the order and movement of the Church about to suit the fancies of a spiritualized denomination or the spirit of the age. The Holy Spirit is the Spirit of the ages, and men must follow His leading, both by His Word and by His presence. If they would reach safe methods and ends of progress, taking this as true, I see no advantage in trying to alter either the form or the function of our episcopacy. Nobody has been seriously hurt in this country by the episcopal administration. Our Bishops have all been good and true men, as much so as preachers in any other part of the world. No more harm need come from an appointment made by the Bishop than from the finding or angry protest of the people appointed. Complaints are generally on social or material accounts, not against spiritual disadvantages. So I hope the General Conference will be still on their isocopes. So also on the presiding eldership. Let the Bishop appoint them. For the Conference to elect them, would be a change for the worse, as I see it. Also let the licensing of preachers stay with the district conferences. I am sure that is the best way. No harm has come from it.

Third—Let the time limit stay as it is. The four-year limit has worked well with us. To widen the limit or remove it will make occasion for greater dissatisfaction, and greater difficulty in adjusting appointments. Very few of our preachers are qualified at the start to fill a quadrennium of service. Many must wait twelve or sixteen years; some never gain that long. When one who is fit stays out his four years he can easily be assigned into another charge for another term. It is not likely that any time limit will be free from hardships, but the one we have or will add more to efficiency. What change has been lost or lowered by the quadrennium?

Fourth—I see no good reason for taking the word "South" out of our name. It does not make the Church geographical. The country does that. Our Church will always be South, because its home is South. Change of name will not change our location or our characteristics. We shall still be called "South," whether the word is in our name or not. The word came vital into use as a mark of difference in the General Conference of 1844. Our life and character have gone into it, and we shall lose an important landmark if it is taken out. I see no good reason why "South" should be removed from our name. It certainly does not make us less spiritual, less friendly or less devoted to our Lord, less peaceful and brotherly to his people. Why cannot any Christian come and live in peace and co-operation with us? We have a German Methodist Conference composed of German people living side by side with our own Saxon population. Likewise the Italian Mission Conference. These make no complaint against our converted word. The sole ground for asking a change of our name is, that we may remove an object of bitter prejudice. We are not responsible for those prejudices, and it does not seem just the right thing for us to be asked to gratify them. Will that remove the grudge? We shall be the same people with all Southern nature and our beliefs concerning slavery, the Civil War, reconstruction, etc. Southern Methodists have done all that devotion to our divine Master requires us to do to remove out of the way obstructions to hearty and complete fraternity between the two sections of Methodist people—that we may dwell together in unity and may unite in carrying the kingdom of our Lord to the ends of the earth. It does not seem a noble, courageous Christian spirit for one who claims to wear the yoke and bear the burden of the Lord to ask other Christians to humiliate themselves in order to gratify the ugly prejudices of the other party. Cannot those who want to come with us for their convenience, or even for their spiritual welfare, lay aside those prejudices, and join us as heartily as we will welcome them? At should be easier for them to yield their prejudices than for us to surrender our name by which we have been known from our beginning to this day. It seems to me very extraordinary and unreasonable that we should be asked to make the change sought on the grounds advocated.

Fifth—And it is wise for the General Conference to give women Bishops rights in the Conference, and place the church conference. I strongly believe that it will not. Woman was made to help man. A wide difference between the man and the woman was fixed in their creation, these differences have led to different functions, so that, being together, they might complete the circle of life, and might perpetuate and develop the race. Man was made for the part he was to serve in the work of life, and the woman for the part she was to serve. Each by a natural law fell into the line of life in which they were fitted, and working together, founded their parts into a beautiful harmony of life.

God made the sexes, and gave them different functions, so that, being together, they might complete the circle of life, and might perpetuate and develop the race. Man was made for the part he was to serve in the work of life, and the woman for the part she was to serve. Each by a natural law fell into the line of life in which they were fitted, and working together, founded their parts into a beautiful harmony of life. God made the sexes, and gave them different functions, so that, being together, they might complete the circle of life, and might perpetuate and develop the race. Man was made for the part he was to serve in the work of life, and the woman for the part she was to serve. Each by a natural law fell into the line of life in which they were fitted, and working together, founded their parts into a beautiful harmony of life.

God made the sexes, and gave them different functions, so that, being together, they might complete the circle of life, and might perpetuate and develop the race. Man was made for the part he was to serve in the work of life, and the woman for the part she was to serve. Each by a natural law fell into the line of life in which they were fitted, and working together, founded their parts into a beautiful harmony of life. God made the sexes, and gave them different functions, so that, being together, they might complete the circle of life, and might perpetuate and develop the race. Man was made for the part he was to serve in the work of life, and the woman for the part she was to serve. Each by a natural law fell into the line of life in which they were fitted, and working together, founded their parts into a beautiful harmony of life.

God made the sexes, and gave them different functions, so that, being together, they might complete the circle of life, and might perpetuate and develop the race. Man was made for the part he was to serve in the work of life, and the woman for the part she was to serve. Each by a natural law fell into the line of life in which they were fitted, and working together, founded their parts into a beautiful harmony of life.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND

of FURNITURE that

— Lasts a LIFETIME —

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd.

Manufacturer

Exporter of Lumber

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Church News

The Baptists claim 362,000 members in Mississippi, of whom 110,000 are said to be white.

The Oklahoma Conference received last year 11,716 members. There has been a gain of 27,326 within the past seven years.

The Wesleyans of England have out a Methodist Who's Who. Why should we not have such a publication for Southern Methodism at least?

The Japanese Methodist Church is praying, planning and working for 100,000 converts during the Conference year which began the last of March.

There are now in the active ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 665 ex-students of the Vanderbilt University, most of them graduates.

The proposed union of the Congregational, Presbyterian and Methodist Churches of Canada has neither been rejected or accepted. It is still under discussion, and is finding many advocates.

More than forty countries will be represented by officially appointed delegates at the World's Sunday School Convention in Washington, May 19 to 24. The constituency represented by this convention numbers more than 25,000,000 persons.

At the recent session of the Baltimore Conference, an assessment of $3,000 was placed on the charges for the Baltimore Southern Methodist, the Conference organ. We know of no other church paper that is supported in this way, but we do not see why the plan should not work well. No enterprise is more important to Methodism than the maintenance of her periodical publications.

The Board of Managers of the American Bible Society has voted to enlarge its work along the line of the New York City Water Works. The intention is to use colporters speaking Italian, Bohemian, Hungarian and other languages, and so to reach with the Bible others besides the colored and other English-speaking laborers on the aqueduct in Westchester, Putnam, Orange and Ulster Counties.

The British Wesleyan Church shows a net loss for the four years past of 9,869. Its leaders are not content with explanations, but with prayer and heart-searching they are making careful investigation of the causes. The Methodist Recorder says: "If we are to have any connection with our past; if we are to be true to our theology, we must still be able to produce men and women who have passed from death unto life."

The extended preparation for the World Missionary Conference to be held in Edinburgh June 14-24 indicates that it will rank in importance with some of the Ecumenical Councils of earlier Christianity. It is feared by many that the vast machinery may make the conference too mechanical. All the effort will be wasted unless the spirit of prayer pervades the hearts of the men who gather and the Holy Spirit rules in all the councils. The task is too great for men, but "He is able." To the end that the Lord may be glorified and his kingdom advanced, by this great gathering, all Christendom is invited to make next Sunday, May 15, a day of special prayer for this conference.

On April 30 Dr. James E. Dickey, president of Emory College, completed the raising of $300,000 to be added to the endowment of the Georgia Institution. The effort to raise this amount began in July, 1908, and has been vigorously continued until the end has been reached. Practically all of the money has been raised among the Methodists of the State of Georgia, the only exceptions being contributions made by alumni and close friends of the institution outside of the State. With the addition of this amount, the endowment of the college will be raised to approximately $550,000. The zealous work and earnest appeals of Dr. Dickey have been responded to with remarkable willingness by the Methodists of Georgia, both rich and poor, and the friends of Christian education are rejoicing at the successful outcome of the campaign.

The press dispatches report that a new confession of faith, which drops the Apostles' Creed and requires no formal expression as to the divinity of Christ, has been adopted by the deacons of the Center Congregation Church, of New Haven, Conn., and will be recommended to the congregation for ratification. This church was founded in 1638 and until recent years was thoroughly orthodox, but from now on those desiring to join will only be required to pledge themselves to belief in a higher life and to the practice of moral purposes. It is said that the old confession of faith will be spread upon the record of the church as a historical relic. This action need occasion little surprise. When a sect begins to drift away from the standards of orthodoxy it usually lands sooner or later in the ranks of infidelity. With its great colleges and all of its boasted enlightenment, New England has more isms and less religion to the square inch than any other section of the Union. This is proof conclusive of the utter inability of education to keep a people in safe religious paths and effect their salvation. The gospel of Christ preached in its purity alone can do that.

Every Southern Methodist Church within the city limits of St. Louis, excepting two, has been built outright within the last twenty years, and seven of them have been completed within the last ten years. Centenary was completed in 1869; Scruggs-Memorial a little more than twenty years ago; Mt. Auburn, Marvin, Wagoner Place and Kirkwood less than twenty; while St. John's, Lafayette Park, Cabanne, St. Paul's, Shaw Avenue, Carondelet, and Grand Avenue, have been erected entirely within the last ten years. The estimated value of these seven churches built within the last ten years is over $400,000. Last year the property of Kingdom House was purchased at a cost of almost $60,000. Not one of these churches has been built without the contribution of a certain number of our men. St. Louis has been busy with the work of church building. She is maintaining two Orphans' Home. Kingdom House requires an annual outlay of $7,500. Her people give very largely to all the humanitarian demands of the city. At present two or three church enterprises are in progress and a stream of benevolence will be turned in their direction. Notwithstanding the fact that many of our people have not been aroused to the connectional interests, yet St. Louis has done as much in the line of connectional work as any other city. The Kingdom House work has already opened up the way for concerted action in missionary enterprises and it is the earnest hope, and even expectation of many of us that the day is near at hand when St. Louis will act as a unit in her work of evangelizing her own people. The Federal Council of Churches is studying closely now the needy fields of the city and the chances are that the field will be divided and each denomination be made responsible for certain territory. If that is done, Southern Methodism will rally to her obligation and will reflect credit upon the Church at large. We are willing to confess that we are not as connectional as we should be, but we are anxiously looking forward to the time when we will be able to take concerted action in the great mission work that is at our doors. —Dr. J. M. Moore, in the St. Louis Advocate.

A VISIT TO PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

During the last week in March, President Hawkins requested me to come up about April 18 and hold a few days' meeting in the college. So, the morning of the 18th found me on my way to Port Gibson, where I was met by Brother Hawkins, accompanied to the college, and soon, for my first time, I stood before a body of college girls to preach to them the everlasting gospel.

The good Lord was with us from the first; and I don't know that I ever spent a more refreshing week in the service of the Lord than I did during that week in Port Gibson College. The success of the meeting was not in the preaching abilities of the preacher, but rather in the hearty co-operation of all the Christian students and faculty.

Upon my arrival, I heard the statement made upon the part of several among both faculty and students that a revival was greatly needed. Feeling their sense of the need, they all took hold earnestly and zealously, and before the close of the first day's services there were manifestations of the Spirit's working and God's answer to prayer. The conditions were so favorable that it was not hard to make the meeting go. I never saw a finer spirit of harmony, unity and fellowship than was manifested throughout the meeting. Quite a number of girls were converted and reclaimed. Five applied for membership in the churches; two in the Methodist, and one each in the Baptist, Presbyterian and Christian. Of course, we could only receive those who applied to our Church for membership, which was done Friday evening in the college chapel, where the new converts could receive the right-hand of fellowship from their fellow students.

Brother Black, the pastor of the Methodist Church, stood right by us throughout the entire meeting, and rendered valuable assistance by his encouragement, prayers and co-operation.

Port Gibson Female College is doing a fine work. President Hawkins is undoubtedly the right man in the right place. He holds the esteem and confidence of all the faculty and students. They believe in him, and follow his leadership. Under his management the college is having the most prosperous experience of its history. The girls placed under his care are in good, safe hands. He is doing a noble work with the aid of his well-selected faculty for the future womanhood of our Commonwealth. Everything about the college is conducted in an orderly, systematic manner.

May God continue his richest blessings upon this

ROAST COFFEE IN A FRYING PAN

If you want to disinfect or deodorize your premises, but if it's coffee for your table that you want,—perfectly blended, exquisitely flavored, and scientifically roasted so that every grain is even and perfect, then do as your neighbor is doing, avoid worry, waste and labor and buy

LUZIANNE COFFEE

When you roast at home you have only a limited choice of green coffee kept by your dealers. We have millions of pounds to select from for you. Where your kitchen facilities permit you only to toast, parch or scorch the grains, our gigantic, scientific, modern battery of roasters, going all the time, roast evenly and uniformly so that the full strength of every particle is thoroughly developed. Then it goes, hot and crisp, into air-tight cans and reaches you fresh and satisfying wherever you may be,—the best article of the kind that money can buy.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

THE REILY-TAYLOR CO.
New Orleans, U. S. A.

institution, its president, faculty and student body, is my prayer. And, if we Methodists fully realized the value of this our school for girls, I have no doubt but that we would seek to give it a more liberal patronage. H. P. LEWIS, JR.

Natchez, Miss., April 26, 1910.

REVIVAL MEETING AT CROWLEY, LA.

When last year closed with its record of repeated nervous breakdowns, I went into winter quarters as nearly discouraged as ever before in my life. Nothing so heartens a man as success; and here, at the very threshold of the year, my fifth meeting, is the great meeting at Crowley, equaling the great victories of year before last, when an inexhaustible nervous force rose to the demands of repeated meetings, and over all, like a cloud of light, the Holy Spirit's blessing rested.

The good pastor has already reported the results of that meeting. I have nothing to add to that. What I do want to say is, that no words of mine could tell how much that great victory was due to the zeal and tireless energy of the pastor. Any place is fortunate in having Wm. H. Benton as its pastor. At the head of a nuptial official board, the church lined solidly behind, he stood by the leader of the meeting, a tower of steel.

I am now engaged in a meeting at Jennings with that Chesterfield in manner and time in simplicity of consecration. Rev. Chas. A. Battle. From here I go into Arkansas, and return to dear old Mississippi—the beloved scene of my early ministry and some of my greatest victories for God. I shall be thankful to be remembered in prayer by my friends.

WALTER G. HARBIN.

W. F. M. S.

ANNUAL MEETING OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

All delegates and visitors who expect to attend the annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference which convenes in the Methodist Church at Tupelo, Miss., June 11, will please send their names to Mrs. C. H. Hall, Tupelo, Miss. A large delegation is earnestly desired. Homes will be provided and a warm welcome awaits us. A most interesting and instructive program has been prepared. Miss Watkins, returned missionary from China, and Mrs. J. B. Cobb, corresponding secretary of the Woman's Board, will be with us giving information and inspiration and rendering valuable assistance at different periods of the meeting.

MRS. S. M. THAMES, Pres.
Mrs. W. M. ALEXANDER, Rec. Sec.

A man with good references seeks a position as watchman in the city or country. Apply to WILLIAM E. BROWN,
917 Poydras St., New Orleans, La.

In that glorious likeness of Christ thou wilt be made rich and fed all the souls and sanctities in the world.—John Tauler.

The thoughts of some people live so near to God that to ask them to think of us is to ask them to pray for us.—Edith C. Richards.

Secular News and Comment

The Philadelphia street-car strike has been settled by mutual agreement.

According to the American Newspaper Association, a famine of print paper is at hand.

There is an official report that United States capital to the amount of $225,000,000 is invested in Canada.

St. Louis and Chicago are throwing their influence for New Orleans as the logical point for holding the World's Panama Exposition in 1915.

It is reported in the press dispatches that 2000 lives were lost in the recent earthquake in Costa Rica, while the property loss will reach $25,000,000 or over.

For over a hundred years the cotton gin invented by Eli Whitney has remained practically unchanged. Now it is said that a citizen of New York has patented a machine, which will result in saving many millions of dollars in the total value of the cotton crop.

There has been a general disposition by the corporations of the nation to make returns for the assessment of the corporation tax. The tax will yield $26,000,000. Returns have been made for 275,000 corporations. Of the 400,000 listed a large number are of the classes exempted by law.

It is estimated that in western Siberia alone there are 465,000,000 acres of virgin forest, and eastern Siberia, though not quite so rich in timber, has sufficient forests to supply the world for years to come. The paper manufacturers and users would like to see a little more of this timber made available for this generation.

The sudden death of Edward VII, King of Great Britain and Emperor of India, has startled the world. The Prince of Wales has been proclaimed king under the title of George V. While it is said that the late king at times feared that he might be the last king of England, the conservatism of the English people makes it certain that the new king will be crowned without opposition.

At the time of this writing ex-President Roosevelt is in Stockholm, Sweden. The death of King Edward will cause material change in the plans for his entertainment, both in Germany and Great Britain. It is likely that Mr. Roosevelt will be the special ambassador to represent the United States at the funeral of King Edward.

Governor Sanders favors the use of a portion of the convicts of the State in making roads. Country life is only desirable when there are good roads, and when to the freedom of the country it is possible to add many of the conveniences of the town, and when easy communication brings the school and church in reach. Good roads must come. The method is not yet plain.

The Louisiana legislature is now in session in Baton Rouge. Before this body there will come legislation in the cause of temperance that should command the support of all good citizens who have the welfare of this State at heart. Watch your representatives, and see that those who stand for the protection of your homes have your hearty support. The saloon men will watch, and not forget.

The United States Army engineers contend that the United States now has a better system of interior waterways than any in Europe. We have 14,000 miles of navigable waterways. At all stages of the Mississippi boats with 25-foot draught can go 200 miles from the mouth, with 9 feet they may reach Pittsburgh, 2000 miles away, while a boat with 45-foot can go to Chicago. Our present need seems to be a greater development of our inland steamboats. The deep waterway must also come, with an adequate shipping afloat on it.

The tomato, wholesome, toothsome, capable for such variety of edible use as it is, was not found out by man until comparatively recent times. It is a native of western South America, whence it was introduced and cultivated in Europe during the sixteenth century. At first its wrinkled fruits were regarded with suspicion and it was grown to be looked at as a curiosity more than anything else. Cultivation smoothed out the wrinkles and developed the tomato so that in the eighteenth century both yellow and red varieties were known. There are old people now living to-day, who relate that in their childhood the tomato was known as the "love apple" and was said to be poisonous if eaten too much of. The Daily States.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

XI.

I served Mount Carmel Circuit three years, with Rev. B. B. Whittington for presiding elder one year, and James English two years. Brother English was a Canadian. He adhered to the Republican Party after the war closed. He read much, and felt sure the M. E. Church, South, would be overrun and absorbed by the M. E. Church in a few years' time. He and his wife boarded with us the greater part of the two years he was my presiding elder. He was a pleasant man to have about our home. He died a few years later.

He intimated to me not long before Conference, which met in Natchez November, 1867, that he was going to locate and join the M. E. Church, and was going to have me placed in charge of the district. I thought but little about it at first. Yet, when the appointments were announced at the close of the Conference, I was read out for the Paulding District. The district embraced all of South Rankin, Smith, Jasper, Perry, Simpson, Jones, Harrison, Hancock and Covington Counties, and all of Lawrence and Marion east of the Pearl River.

My brother, W. B. Lewis, was stationed in Jackson that year. Epaphroditus W. Simmons was on Columbia Circuit. We three were together during Conference. The night after the appointments were read I could not sleep. After rolling and tumbling for quite a while, I said: "I wonder if presiding elders ever get sleepy." My brother said: "I would like to know if stationed preachers ever get sleepy." Then Brother Simmons said: "It is a question in my mind if circuit riders ever get sleepy." In a few days my first round of appointments was published in our Advocate, and I started out on my work. There were no railroads within the bounds of my work. The roads were, as a rule, too rough for buggies; so I had to travel the district on horseback. Where Hattiesburg now is were old fields and pine woods. Where Poplarville now is there lived a man whom the people called "Poplar Jim Smith."

I served the district three years. Only one man was licensed to preach in my district during the three years, viz, Lyman Carley. He is yet living, doing good work on the New Augusta Charge. Brother Carley has a son, Rev. H. T. Carley, who is a promising young man, doing good work in New Orleans, Louisiana Conference. The only two who went up from my district for admission on trial during the three years were J. M. Weems and L. Carley. Both of them have been presiding elders, and both have been men of great usefulness in our Conference. Brother Weems served as missionary in Mexico a few years. I kept the two (Weems and Carley) with me as long as I was on the district. The name of the district was changed to "Mount Carmel" in 1869; later it was called "Biloxi," then "Hattiesburg." Now there are two large presiding elders' districts covering the same territory.

Presiding elders were not as well supported in those days as they are now. I do not remember that Hansboro, Biloxi, Black Creek, Gainesville or Pearlington ever gave me anything for services rendered. About $250 or $300 was as much as the district gave me any one year for my work. The mission board supplemented my salary to the amount of $300, making from $500 to $550 I received, and I thought I was well paid. When I gave up the district I had more money than I had ever had at one time. My traveling expenses were but little. Presiding elders ought to be well paid. Then they ought to travel "at large throughout their districts." So many young preachers need the advice and counsel and help that good, wide-awake, up-to-date presiding elders are capable of giving. I call to mind while I write these lines instances where I failed to spend as much time as I might have spent in a way that would have been helpful to both pastor and people. A day of reckoning is coming!

I well remember when the coming of the presiding elder and the quarterly meeting was considered a great and profitable occasion. Stewards, local preachers, exhorters and others thought nothing of riding from twenty-five to forty miles to attend a quarterly meeting. People did not give as much money in those days for the support of the Church as they do now, but they gave more of their time. Great improvements have been made along many lines during the last fifty years, and I rejoice in it all. I am not a pessimist, yet I cannot but think it would be best for the good cause if our preachers and presiding elders would go out into the "highways and hedges" more than they do. Mormonism would not get the hold it is getting in some out-of-the-way places. We do not need the Mormon in our country, and I doubt if we would have any if we preachers were to do as preachers did in the early days of Methodism. We are better paid than preachers were in those days; now, why not give all, or the greater part, of our time to the work assigned us by the Bishop? I have had some presiding elders who were very helpful to me in many ways.

I baptized thirty-seven children at one time while I was presiding elder. One good sister had me baptize seven of her children. She was a good Methodist. This happened on or near Pearl River, at Bird's Chapel, in Hancock County (now Pearl River County).

At the end of three years I gave up the district, and was placed in charge of one of the poorest circuits in Brookhaven District. I was just as happy and contented when back in the pastorate as I was when in charge of a district. I had some experience while on the district. On one occasion, after holding a quarterly meeting at Coveville, ten or twelve miles from Biloxi, I spent a day or two with Brother Kit Adams, an uncle, I think, of our T. W. Adams; then struck out through the country in the direction of Gainesville, where I was to hold my next conference. After spending a night with J. J. Clark in Handsboro, another night with James Mathony, on or near Wolf River, I crossed the river, got into the Gainesville road, and was making my way through an open woods, with only now and then a human habitation, when unexpectedly I came to a large body of water. I saw no way of crossing the water. Upon inquiry, I learned I could cross at Spencer's Mill, some distance up the bayou. I started, got lost, rambled some time, got completely turned around. I looked ahead and saw a large body of water, with many small sailboats, playing on the surface. I was completely bewildered, did not know where I was. I spied a neat cottage near the water's edge. I soon reached the place and hailed. A nice lady came to the door. I told her who I was, that I was lost and wanted to go to Gainesville to hold a quarterly meeting. She stood a moment, seemed to be in deep study, and then said: "I am aware of the difficulties under which people labor in traveling through this country." After making inquiry about different preachers she had met in other days, she told me to go in a certain direction till I came to an old road, take the left-hand end of same, keep in the "old beaten track," and I would get to Spencer's Mill. I did so, found the mill, and spent the night with a Mr. King, whom I had known in other years. Next morning, by 9 o'clock, I reached the home of Brother McFadden, where I was due the previous night. He and I went on to church; I preached, then sang the "Golden Harp." Brother McFadden got happy and shouted over the house. He was a good and true man. I spent several nights with him before I left the district. He went home years ago.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT.

The fortieth session of the Columbus District Conference convened at Mayhew, Miss., at 9 a. m., April 27, with Rev. J. E. Thomas, P. E., in the chair. Thirteen of the sixteen pastors of the district were present: Revs. R. H. B. Gladney and Q. A. Oats were absent on account of sickness.

Dr. T. C. Wier and Rev. A. P. Leach were present and were very helpful to us with their counsel and presence.

Rev. G. W. Bachman, our colporteur, was with us to represent our Publishing House interests.

The Conference was favored with a high order of preaching by Revs. J. E. Thomas, L. B. Hankins, W. E. M. Brogan and T. W. Lewis. B. F. M. Bullard was granted license to preach.

Brother W. H. Carter presented the Laymen's Movement in a forceful and interesting manner. Prof. J. A. Cook was elected lay leader for the ensuing year. With him to lead, and his efficient corps of helpers, we predict a decided advance in this great movement during the present year.

Twenty-one laymen were present and took an active interest in the proceedings of the Conference.

Delegates to the Annual Conference: Prof. J. F. Cook, Judge F. A. Critz, W. V. Connell and L. C. Anderson. Alternates: Walter Stokes and B. L. Smith.

Judging from the expressions of the delegation and hosts, all were delighted that the Conference was held at Mayhew.

Next Conference goes to Sturgis.

W. V. CONNELL, Sec.

Mayhew, Miss.

FOR SALE.

Theological Library: Hastings's Bible Dictionary, Strong's Concordance, Ellicott's Commentary, Four Years' Course of Study, and other valuable books. Address L. I. 1128 Amelia St., New Orleans.

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH
LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 585.

Phone Main.

ROOMS and BOARD

634 and 638 SOUTH STREET

(Lafayette Square)

Corner St. Charles St.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Unlimited Meals.

Alvin Porter, Mgr.

"MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE."

By Rev. W. E. M. Brogan.

Recently there has been issued from the press a most helpful and well-written little volume from the gifted pen of Rev. W. E. M. Brogan, formerly a member of the North Mississippi Conference, dealing with one of the most important and pertinent doctrines of our Methodism. The book is made up of a series of sermons, five in number, in which the author gives a sane and calm discussion of the office work for the performance of which the Holy Spirit was sent, and the concomitant blessings that flow to the individual as the result of His gracious administration of a finished redemption. The little volume is timely and thought-provoking, and it deserves that reverent consideration that the importance of the great doctrine with which it deals would justify.

Let it be said in the beginning that neither in claim nor in spirit is this little volume dogmatic; nor does the writer profess to have spoken the last word in his treatment of this vital doctrine of our Methodism. It is the author's final conclusion as to the work for which the Holy Spirit was sent, and which He accomplishes; and it represents the sum of the author's spiritual experience in his struggle upward after the truth that makes us free.

The title of the little volume is eminently suggestive of the great fundamental truth discussed on the written page, and few men of our day, in so small a compass, have contributed to the cause of God a greater piety, a more varied learning, and a more unwearied industry. That this volume was born in the heart of a man WHO KNOWS GOD, even the most casual reader will observe at a glance. One cannot escape the impression that many of the paragraphs with which this little volume is replete were penned when the author was upon the mountain-peak of rare and holy experience in communion with his Lord face to face.

The book is made up of five discourses, in the first of which we find the foundation for the real teaching of the entire volume. In the first discourse the author discusses the purpose for which the Holy Spirit is given; and he therein gives a brief resume of the other four discourses, and settles their place in his doctrine of the Spirit. The emphasis is properly placed upon the Holy Spirit as "the personal representative of Jesus Christ and the administrator of a finished redemption," and hence as the great agent in the work of regeneration and as the heavenly witness to the fact of this moral and spiritual change in human nature. That the Holy Spirit, by His mighty pentecost of power, qualifies us for service, that He reveals unto us, as our teacher, the deep things of God, and by His imparted grace enables us to pray as we ought, the author clearly proves in the remaining four discourses.

Some one has rightly called the new birth the key-stone of the Wesleyan system of doctrine. In a very special sense is it also true that the doctrine of "the witness of the Spirit to the Christian's adoption into the family of God" is peculiarly Methodist. Receiving this doctrine from the Moravians, the apostolic Wesley turned to the Scriptures for its verification with that tireless energy that characterized him in all his research after truth. Seeing it there, he not only sought and experienced its blessed meaning, but also proclaimed it with a tongue of fire all over the empire of England. Our author rightly places the emphasis upon the great doctrine of regeneration as being fundamental to any witness whatever to the possession of Christian virtue as a law of life and action. The natural, unregenerated heart of man "talks of blessings and smothers a curse. It points up to spotless ideals and reaches down to filthy depths. It knows right and does wrong. It delights in the law of God, while it serves the law of sin." A new heart, a new nature, a new relationship, the Holy Spirit creates within us through His miracle of regeneration; and they are fundamental to the possession of any "heritage as joint heirs with Jesus Christ."

This wonderful experience wrought by the Holy Spirit is likewise attested by the same heavenly personage. In a few terse sentences our author shows that the witness of the Spirit is not found in what is termed obedience to the precepts of the Gospel, "for such is opposed to all those numerous scriptures that found salvation upon faith." Neither is it seen in that mere hope of salvation because of the possession of faith, for such would render the "whole religious discipline of life a fearful looking-for of final decision," and would render meaningless those Scriptural declarations that have to do with personal consciousness. Rather, the true Scriptural teaching is that the witness of the Spirit is an inward, divine impression upon the moral nature of man, "uplifting all the higher sensibilities of the soul."

And the witness of the Spirit, our author declares, with emphasis, is to a great FACT IN MAN'S EXPERIENCE. Not to a mere hope of eternal life that leaves us ever in uncertainty and doubt, but to a great fact in definite experience to which we can turn in the stress of life's battle for that inspiration and encouragement that will enable us to put to rest the combatted hosts of hell and hate. Endure upon this solid rock.

Though earth and hell with voice declare with the great apostle, we can shout with that confidence born of conscious experience: "I know him whom I have believed, and I am persuaded that he is able to guard that which I have committed unto him against that day." This is humanity's last fortress, the court of final appeal for a race redeemed.
Tis false.

The fact to which the Spirit bears witness is our adoption into the divine family, and as members of that family, we have that love, joy, and peace, that are the characteristics of the household of God.

The author then goes on to discuss the concomitant blessings that flow from the indwelling presence of the Holy Spirit, namely: The power for service imparted to the children of God, the Holy Spirit as instructor in the school of service, revealing unto us the deep things of God, and the gift of the spirit of prayer, through which gracious ministry of intercession in the behalf of the mighty triumphs of the Gospel have been wrought out along the pathway of the centuries gone.

The author boldly affirms that the great problems of the Church today are power problems. That the Church is failing to reach the vast masses of men is too sadly apparent to all who study the social and economic questions of the present time. The poor listen to the Gospel no longer. The slums, with their dens and dives, have become inaccessible to the Word of God. The laborer turns from the altar of God to the union, to Socialism, or to some propaganda with a great deal of economic sugar coating the same old political pill. The rich, barricaded in the club, sunk deep in business, is becoming alarmingly hard to reach with the message of Jesus. Never has the city problem seemed so aggravated. Confronting the Church are the subtle problems arising from the vast and rapid changes in the front of thought, the readjustments in Biblical criticism, theological trends, and philosophic and psychological hypotheses. These problems the Church cannot avoid. Yet she cannot, of her own strength, overcome them, because they are beyond her power. Is it that the Gospel is unable to solve these aggravated problems of the day? Far from it! The trouble lies in the lack of the "promised power of the living God of power."

And this power for service, the author rightly declares, is the indwelling presence of the Holy Spirit. "The Church of God sweeps down the centuries, uplifting the thought of generations, and swaying the course of the years toward God. We say, here is moral power. It is not. The power of the Church is an unseen Person, who stands between Jesus Christ and the visible triumphs of His Word." Not by all the might conferred by kingly authority or legislative enactment does the Kingdom of God achieve its splendid victories over the organized forces of Satan and sin, "for it has access to a power that guarantees its triumph" even in the face of the sternest opposition.

The author then very pertinently asks what was the secret of the marvelous power of those splendid men of history whom God has so mightily used to carry on his work in the days ago, and he answers his own question in these words: "The great occasions and the lofty characters that have most of all swayed humanity toward God have derived their last, highest and most potent influence directly from God. The mere gathering together of the one hundred and twenty did not make Pentecost. Nailing a thesis to a cathedral door did not make the German Reformation. The signing of a covenant with blood did not bring about the regeneration of Scotland. In each instance the explanation of the vast results hanging upon the incident lies also in something else. The something else is God."

In the great school of Christian service, the emphasis is placed upon the Holy Spirit as instructor and guide in our study of the deep things of God. And this need is nowhere more apparent than when we consider the filthy depths from which we have been lifted and the holy heights to which we have been elevated by the marvelous miracle of regeneration, and the demands made upon us as the "favored children of the King of kings." In our ignorance of the deep things of God, in our folly which is one of the characteristic modes in which the fallen condition of the race reveals itself, and in the native, moral inertia of the heart, its constant tendency to relax from the tension of any lofty moral or spiritual sentiment, the author finds the ground of necessity for the Spirit's constant and gracious instruction of the sons of God redeemed.

And the method of the Spirit's instruction is along the line of the revealed Word of God and the gracious ministrations of that Providence that shapes our lives. The Word of God is a revelation of the divine thought and purpose concerning us, and it is given unto us in proportion as we are able to understand its meaning and transmute its teachings into life and character. Our author rightly affirms that this is the great textbook of the Spirit, to which all others are made subservient. By the providential shaping of our destiny, the Holy Spirit teaches us what is God's will concerning us. By His imparted aid, He enables us to reach that will actual in developed life and character.

In the closing discourse our author discusses the Holy Spirit's gracious ministry in the believer—the spirit of prayer—and he defines the same as "that gracious ministration of the Holy Spirit in which He helps our weakness and our ignorance, and gives us strength and grace to pray." He grounds the necessity for the spirit of prayer in the fact of our infirmity, our ignorance, and our need. Recovering "from the ravages of sin through the healing of the great Physician," how truly we need the aid of the blessed Spirit who "helpeth our infirmity." Ignorance of the deep things of God, yet understanding not our own heart's cry, and destitute of the power to express our wants to God, how vast is our need of the ministration of that Spirit who "maketh intercessions for us with groanings which cannot be uttered." Herein, the author finds the explanation of the lives of the apostles and saints and martyrs who, scoring the awful argument of the stake and the keen logic of the sword, hurled themselves against the entrenched hosts of darkness and have changed the history of the world. Herein is the explanation of those mighty spiritual revolutions that have shaken thrones to their fall and transformed the lives of nations. And herein is found the weapon by which we too can win a lost world for our Lord and sway the long eternities of God.

To all lovers of our Lord Jesus Christ and of the doctrines of our beloved Methodism, this timely and well-written little volume is commended, with the earnest prayer that it will receive that wide circulation and devout reading that the importance of the great subjects with which it deals would warrant.

Starkville, Miss.

FROM REV. W. C. HARRIS.

Dear Brother Meek: Since transferring from the North Mississippi to the Northwest Texas Conference, I have been repeatedly requested to write a letter to the Advocate, that my Mississippi friends might know something as to how I am getting along in my new field.

First, let me congratulate you on the good paper you are giving us. I enjoy its weekly visits very much, and am sure that your readers generally are very much gratified at your successful beginning.

My charge, Talpa Circuit, is in the Brownwood District, and consists of five appointments, rather badly scattered. There is an organization at each place, but only two church buildings of our own. At one place we use the Baptist church, and at two places are in school houses. So you see there is plenty of work to be done. A good many who will read this have recently received a statement from me concerning our parsonage. Of these, a goodly number have kindly responded with help. With this help the situation has been very much relieved. To the couple of rooms that we had, we have added two other rooms, with a hall between. We moved into the parsonage just a month ago, having been in a rented house a little more than three months. We are comfortably fixed, and have paid for the work as far as we have gone, though the house lacks quite a good deal being finished.

We are very grateful to all who have helped us, and if others should be disposed to contribute I assure them they will be helping both the cause of Methodism and of Christ.

To the many who have so kindly inquired as to my health, I am glad to say I am doing well. It is generally known throughout the North Mississippi Conference that for the greater part of last year my health was very poor. To those who were intimately associated with me, it is known that toward the close of the year there was gratifying improvement. I am glad to report that this improved condition has, so far, been permanent.

I confess that my charge is not the character of work that I would have selected for myself. I had serious misgivings about my being physically equal to it. Possibly, however, it is just what I needed. At any rate, I have done the work without any inconvenience, have kept well, and decidedly stronger than when I began it and prospects for a successful year grow brighter as the weeks pass.

Talpa is a nice little town with a population of about eight hundred, with an altitude of twenty-one hundred feet. The one drawback to the healthfulness of this section is the scarcity of good water. For a man just from a section of country where it rains all winter and spring, things begin to look distressingly dry here at this time. There were two or three light rains in November and December, and a considerable little snow about Christmas. Through January, February and March there has been no rain of amount to anything, very few cloudy days, and almost constant wind. So you can imagine that it must be dry, indeed. Knowing ones say, however, that conditions are not alarming, that we will yet have rain in time to make good crops. Since I came here looking for a dry country, I reckon I ought not to worry any over the situation.

With very best wishes for the editor and readers of the Advocate, and craving an interest in the prayers of all, I remain, Yours in Christ,

W. C. HARRIS.
Talpa, Tex.

The Home Circle.

HAST THOU LOST JESUS?

(Suggested by a Sermon by Rev. W. G. Alarbin.)
By Mrs. Margie Howard Benton.

The Passover feast is ended,
And the people wend their way
Homeward along the rocky road,
But half past the close of day.

Now camp-fires light up the wayside,
The evening meal they prepare,
Then does the thought of each mother
Turn to those within her care.

Mary looks around for Jesus,
Not thinking that the Saviour
Along with some of her kindred,
Her heart feels no doubt nor fear.

All day with friends they have traveled,
Conversing along the way
Of things of the past to them—
Topics of the time and day.

Confident their son was with them,
But taking no special care,
To be sure of his dear presence,
But now they find him not there.

No sleep is there for the parents
Tonight on the starlit plain,
No ease for their great heart-hunger,
Till they've found their son again.

Now turn they back over their journey,
Retracing their onward way,
Wondering how they could have been
So careless all through the day.

Now enter they the great city,
Jerusalem among the hills,
Here is the City of David—
The mother's heart strangely thrills.

They seek him in the thronging streets,
In the busy market place,
But they catch no sound of his voice,
They get no glimpse of his face.

Hark! Some one says, "In the Temple
I hear there is a young boy
Who speaks so wisely for his years,
Then again that thrill of joy."

Springs up within the mother's heart,
Straight to the Temple now speeding,
They find him sitting with wise men,
Who to his words are heeding.

They find him right where they left him,
They had gone away, not he,
And in answer to reproaches,
Know ye not that I must be

About my Father's business?
And then returning with them
Homeward to little Nazareth,
Goes this child of Bethlehem.

Hast thou lost Jesus from thy life?
Then back over thy journey go!
Do not stop till thou has found Him—
The Saviour who loves thee so!

Thou wilt find Him where thy duty
Lies neglected by the way,
O, if thou wouldst have His presence,
Take up thy duty to-day!

Thou mayst have lost Him in sorrow,
Thou mayst have lost Him in joy,
Thou mayst have lost Him through neglect,
The means of grace to employ—

The searching of God's holy Word,
Or the quiet hour of prayer,
Whatever the cause, go back to Him,
Thou wilt find Him waiting there.

Crowley, La., May, 1910.

THE BIRD THAT TOLD.

Dudley wasn't very good-natured. It was a warm afternoon.

"How would you like to eat supper out doors?" said mamma.

"O, good!"

"Paige won't be home, so you and Helen and I will take something in a basket and go down to Squaw Lake. Run and find Helen."

Dudley ran for shoes. "O, Helen," he called, "we're going down to Squaw Lake, and eat our supper in a baxit."

Helen bounced out of the hammock, and was in the house in five minutes.

Mamma was getting ready brown bread sandwiches, and apricots and cookies and milk.

"Oh, can I have a papercoat now, mamma?"

Dudley was very fond of apricots. Mamma gave him two.

"I think you'd better have your shoes on, my boy. Blisters are bad for bare feet."

Helen ran to find the shoes.

"I don't think we better stop now, mamma. Sides, I can't wear 'em, 'cause my sore toe isn't got well."

"Let me see."

Dudley stood on one foot, and thrust five little toes up over the edge of the sink.

"What, there's no sore toe there, child."

"I fink it was the iver foot."

Five more little toes showed up.

"Nor there," said mamma, looking carefully. "Well, it's so warm—never mind his shoes, Helen. I suppose they'll fret him."

It was cool and shady by the lake. Mamma put the basket into a bunch of tall ferns at the foot of a big tree, and they all went down to the water's edge to find conch shells. There were ever so many, and Helen filled her handkerchief with them. Dudley amused himself by digging his toes into the sand and watching the holes fill with water. It was such fun! He would never have dreamed of crying if a sharp stone had not hurt his foot.

"I know just the place for a boy with a hurt foot," said mamma. "It's on the shawl under that big tree."

Dudley limped slowly away into the shade, and after much fussing found a soft place to lie down. Soon his little nose sniffed something.

"I smelled papercoats, I do believe. Maybe they grow on this tree. I fink I'll climb it and see." He jumped up quickly. "Oh, I mos' stepped into our baxit. Helen's where the papercoats are. How many? One, two, free, four, ten, eight and—oh, lots more. I fink I'll take one. Course I'll ask mamma. May be I better have two, free. Oh, dear, I've squeezed 'em! Course they're spoiled now. Course I better eat 'em, 'cause nobody wants 'em now."

Dudley ate the fruit, and threw the stones away.

"You—you—you took three—e—e! took three—e—e!" cried a bird voice overhead.

Dudley started and looked up into the tree. A brown bird was whisking his tail and flitting about.

"You—took—three—e—e!" it repeated.

Dudley threw a stick. It touched one of the lower branches, and the bird flew away.

It was a very quiet little boy that mamma and Helen found sitting in the middle of the old gray shawl when they came up.

"We'll have supper now. This little boy is hungry. Hand us the basket, Helen."

Dudley brightened up while mamma told the children stories of the woods and seashore as they ate sandwiches and cookies.

"Here's the biggest apricot. Dud can have it," said Helen, dropping it into his outstretched hand.

"Took—took—three—e—e!" called the thrush from a tree-top.

Dudley's apricot rolled away in the grass, while he hid his face in mamma's lap and burst into tears.

"What is it, dear?" said mamma, anxiously.

"I did take free papercoats mamma. I was going to tell you," he sobbed, "but they got all squeezed, an' I—didn't. At old b-bird fought I was a f-fef, an' he mu' t-tell."

"Took—took—three—e—e!" sang the thrush, and mamma understood.

They had a sober little talk then. When it was over, Dudley felt much better.

"I'm glad at frush told," he said as they finished the apricots, " 'cause I might have forgotten if he hadn't remembered for me." Josephine E. Teal, in Sunday School Times.

WHY PEOPLE ARE NOT SAVED.

I heard a minister of the gospel say: "Men are not looking for a Savior." Oh! that he could look into men's hearts and see the hunger and thirst, the longing to learn how to find the Savior.

How often Christians fail to realize how difficult it is for those to understand who have never trusted in the Savior. If "the story of the cross" could be made plain to men, told by men whose hearts are filled with a Savior's love, then it could be seen that many men are looking for a Savior. Some writer has well said: "Why should we wonder that men are not readily won to Christ? The wonder is we should expect them to come with so little help."

How often church services are very formal. The songs are not known well enough by the congregation for them to take part in lifting their voices in praise, and the words of the songs given by the choir are so muffled that ears must be strained to hear even the name Savior. The sermons are often lectures, in which little can be found from the Bible.

How many Christians are trying to lead souls to find the Savior? I confess I have not done my duty. May the Lord help all Christians to lead souls to him! AN OBSERVER.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location; price, including furniture, only $400. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

HOUSE ON CAMPGROUNDS FOR SALE.

A desirable two-story cottage, with four rooms and hall, bathroom with latest sanitary improvements; completely furnished facing open square in front of Keller Lodge, with a small, shady park in the rear. Address, Christian Advocate, 512 Camp, New Orleans.

Gentleness of speech has made the most willful to be as the heart of a little child and filled many a troubled life with the peace of Jehovah.—Selected.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER.

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co
INCORPORATED.

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

The appearance, and usefulness of many good animals, are ruined by neglected Saddle or Harness Galls.

A few applications of Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic takes out the "fever" and stops all inflammation—in a day or so your horse is well.

Always keep a bottle in the stable.

AT ALL DRUGGISTS - 25 and 50 Cents
ALSO IN QUART BOTTLES

FOR SADDLE or HARNESS GALLS

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulter, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woolfard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

DIVERSITIES OF GIFTS.

In the twelfth chapter of 1 Corinthians the Apostle Paul discusses the diversities of gifts bestowed by the Holy Spirit upon the early disciples. Among those specifically mentioned are the word of wisdom, the word of knowledge, faith, healing, the working of miracles, prophecy, the discerning of spirits, divers kinds of tongues and the interpretation of tongues. The exact nature of each of these gifts it is now impossible to determine. The ablest of the commentators are widely at variance on the subject, and much of what has been written on it has been largely an indulgence in conjecture and speculation. Two things, however, seem to be clear. One is, that all of these gifts were bestowed to promote the common good of the Church, and the other is, that they were supernatural and limited to the apostolic age.

But though these charisms, these supernatural endowments no longer exist among Christians—there are yet diversities of gifts among them. Providence bestows upon individuals different orders of talents, so that the capacity and aptitudes of no two are precisely alike. One is skilled in one kind of service, and another in a kind wholly different. One is perhaps blessed with good judgment and is valuable in counsel; another has facility of utterance, and is gifted in prayer and useful in conducting the devotional meetings of the Church. Some have the gift of teaching; some, the gift of song; some, the gift of making money; and others have a tender, sympathetic nature which especially qualifies them for ministering to the sick, the sorrowful and the suffering. And, as Emerson has said, an aptitude for a work is a divine call to take it up. It is not alone through supernatural agencies that the will of God is revealed. It is also to some extent disclosed in the ordinary operations of nature. In all the wide universe there is no such thing as chance; nothing is accidental. If we hold to the doctrine of Providence, we must believe that the aptitudes of men are divinely given; that there is a work in the world for every human being to do. All may aid in the upbuilding of a higher civilization and in ushering in the coming kingdom of Christ, of which inspired bards have sung and far-seeing prophets have foretold.

Nor is a man himself always the best judge of what task he is the most fitted to perform. The mind of the Church should carry great weight in such matters. Not infrequently under the stress of some great exigency one is influenced to undertake a service, which he feels that he can never satisfactorily render, only to discover later that he is unusually well adapted to it. The use of a faculty develops and enlarges it. It was by "trading with them" that the man with five talents increased them to ten, and that the man with two talents gained two others besides them. Neglect dwarfs and atrophies; exercise expands and multiplies.

Especially striking are the diversities of gifts observable among ministers. Some have the gift of eloquence; some, of logic; some, of exhortation, and some of a searching directness that probes the conscience and stirs the deeper depths of the moral nature. Others are wholly unimpressive in the pulpit, but are remarkably useful in the pastorate, or perhaps they have the faculty of organizing every available force and putting others to work. The Church has use for all of these preachers with their differing gifts. They supplement each other, and are all needed in reaching the unsaved, and in edifying the saints and bringing them to perfection in Christ. And one important advantage of our itinerant system is that it gives to every congregation the ministry of men of unlike endowments, and thus promotes a fuller and more symmetrical development.

All the great forward movements of Christendom have had to promote them men of unlike types and temperaments. Among the apostles, there was John, gentle, loving, with a philosophic, contemplative cast of mind; Peter, rash, impulsive, and voluble in speech; and Paul, masterful in intellect, with a world-wide vision, and an energy that nothing could depress. Behind the great Reformation in the sixteenth century were the quiet, scholarly, judicious Melancthon, and the fiery, intrepid, heroic Luther. And leading the revival out of which Methodism came, were Whitefield, the matchless orator; John Wesley, the scholar, logician, and organizer, and Charles Wesley, the most appealing of the world's sacred poets. Nor, as we look at the busy workers in the field, can we always tell who is accomplishing most for the cause of Christ. The showy gifts which dazzle and arouse temporary enthusiasm do not always achieve the most far-reaching and enduring results. As Paul has said, the more uncomely parts of the body are often the more necessary, and the functions which they perform may be the more substantial and lasting.

After Charles Wesley's happy marriage and the abatement in his preaching activity which followed, a contemporary referred to him as being "maimed" in the service; yet out of that quiet, happy home came many of those glorious hymns which have been sung around the world, and the uplifting force of which no finite mind can measure.

Tennessee's gifted poet, Judge Walter Malone, of Memphis, has in the following lines beautifully described the widespread influence exerted by the sweet singer of Methodism:

What simple strains are these, to live so long,
To move so many in so many lands;
When self-appointed arbiters of song
Are all effaced like scribbblings in the sands!

In dens of London, choked with sin and shame,
The beggar and the burglar stop to hear,
And in the night, beneath the street lamp's flame,
The ruined woman feels a burning tear.

In mines of Cornwall, underneath the sea,
The grimy laborer hears their martial tread,
Their fervent call from coming wrath to flee,
Above the ocean thunders overhead.

Amid Missouri's forests, dark and lone,
And by the Mississippi's turbid waves,
In nameless churchyards, bramble-overgrown,
Their converts fill a thousand thousand graves.

Among the rude huts of the pioneers
These hymns awoke the wilderness at dark,
Above the cries of wild beasts, fraught with fears,
The panther's growling and the gray wolf's bark.

So I remember, when a barefoot boy,
I thrilled to hear thy wondrous trumpet-call
To Zion and its days of deathless joy,
Its crystal river and its jasper wall.

And, led by thee, I saw its clustered palms,
Its shining summits with their diamond skies,
A Beulah-land, with everlasting calms
And lilies wet with dew of Paradise.

These hymns have raised the peasant from the sod,
Have made the rude, half-savage nature sweet,
Have reared a score of kingdoms unto God,
And laid a million hearts at Jesus' feet.

THE CHURCH.

Among all the organizations in the world, the Church stands unique and supreme. All the others are of human origin. It alone has been divinely founded. Other societies are dependent, wholly upon human instrumentalities for their maintenance and extension, but the Church, though it does not discard human agencies, relies chiefly upon divine power to promote its prosperity and success. None of the fraternal orders have any guarantee of perpetuity, but of the Church our Lord has said, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Its mission is the highest and noblest of which the human mind can conceive. It not only teaches sound morals, but brings into the heart of fallen man a mighty regenerating power. It not only illumines, but uplifts. It alone proclaims the existence of the Holy Ghost as the ever-present helper of the weak, and offers salvation to the person who has made himself a wreck.

And in the field of philanthropy the Church is pre-eminent. The benevolence in other orders is chiefly the overflow from this great central fountain. The Church makes man fit to live, prepares him for the solemn hour of death, and shows him the shining stairway up which he may climb to the Father's spacious house.

Every man should recognize the claim of the Church upon him as first and paramount. The member who pays more to other orders than to the Church has a distorted conception of duty. If he forsakes the services of Zion for other meetings, he makes a serious mistake. And the minister who grows enthusiastic in the work of other organizations, but renders to the Church a perfunctory and indifferent service, needs to re-examine the question of his call to preach. We have nothing against many of the other societies. We belong to a number of them and appreciate them. But we insist upon the supremacy and superiority of the Church. Christ is the world's greatest need, and the Church is the agency through which he must chiefly be given to the perishing millions of mankind. Therefore, he who aids in promoting the progress of the Church renders humanity the greatest service possible.

INTENSIVE WORK.

We are convinced that in many places our pastors would do well to work upon the intensive plan. Especially do we think such a course wise where spirituality is at a low ebb and the field is unusually difficult. Draw around you those members, whether one or a half dozen, who give the most promise of usefulness, and by Scripture teaching and prayer seek to deepen their religious life. Have an hour with them at least once a week, strive to make them realize what it means to be a genuine Christian, and endeavor to bring them to a conscious experience of salvation. At the proper time gradually enlarge the circle, taking care not to let enough who are worldly in to put out the little fire already kindled. One earnest, aggressive worker thus developed is a valuable reinforcement, and two or three of them are a mighty tower of strength.

The pastor himself needs the fellowship of such a band. The Bible knows nothing of a solitary religion. The communion of saints is a necessity. It was such work as this that developed Whitefield and the Wesleys and gave rise to Methodism. The work of our Lord which counted for most, aside from his atoning work, was his private teaching and training of the twelve. We will never develop our people dealing with them en masse. We must get at them personally or in small groups. We need to be diligent and make our every-day ministry tell. We should be pleased to hear of the formation of such prayer and study circles throughout the Church. We doubt not that their organization would mark the beginning of a better day.

A CRYING EVIL.

One of the most widespread evils of this day is Sabbath desecration. In many places Sunday scarcely differs at all from other days. Stores are kept open, goods are sold, other kinds of business are transacted, hunting and fishing are carried on, and various forms of amusement are indulged in. In some communities it is a very common thing for merchants in the interior to take the Lord's day to go to the city and replenish their stocks of goods, giving as an excuse that they cannot leave home in the week-time. On several occasions within recent years we have been horrified to see boys in knee trousers getting aboard the train on Sunday en route to a neighboring town to play a game of Sunday baseball. And as has recently been stated in the Advocate, some of our cities allow match games of the same sport in open and flagrant violation of the statutes of the State.

We are not Puritanical in our ideas of Sabbath observance, but we earnestly protest against such practices on the Lord's holy day. They are violations of human law, and those guilty ought to be arrested and made to pay the penalty. But more than that: they are violations of the divine law and every offender will be punished. "The mills of the gods may grind slowly, but they grind exceedingly small." We love our beautiful Southland and its generous, noble people, but we warn them that the clanging, wasting curse of God is upon iniquity in all its forms. With storm and flood and pestilence and devouring insects, Jehovah has in the past scourged those who set his laws at defiance. With the boll weevil already beginning to infest Louisiana and Mississippi, it is no time for our people to be running riot in wickedness. Better had we be upon our knees supplicating the throne of grace. It is as true now as it ever was, that "righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE, W. H. M. S.

The Woman's Home Mission Society held its annual meeting for Louisiana in First Church, in this city, last week. Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, the president, proved herself a graceful and effective presiding officer. She held the conference in order and transacted the business with dispatch.

The program proved very interesting to the visitors, for it was so planned as to intersperse the discussion of pertinent subjects with the routine business. If we read history aright, this was the process pursued in the earliest Methodist conferences. Each day at noon a lunch was served in the church, thus enabling the delegates to become much better acquainted with each other than they could otherwise have been. The impression made upon the visitor was that these women are doing a great work to-day and planning larger things for the future. We pray that the divine hand may guide them. A detailed report of the proceedings will be printed later when furnished by the secretary.

PERSONAL.

Rev. T. V. Peters, of Slidell, who excels in his good works, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call one day last week.

Rev. E. H. Rook, of Tyro, Miss., put us under many obligations by his services in behalf of the Advocate. He is getting on nicely with his charge.

Rev. W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Seashore District, and Rev. J. M. Morse, of Gulfport, Miss., are attending the General Conference at Asheville this week.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Superintendent of the Louisiana Orphans' Home, has been selected as one of the leading preachers at the Bluff Springs Camp Meeting in August.

Dr. John A. Rice, pastor of Rayne Memorial, and Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor of Louisiana Avenue, New Orleans, are in attendance upon the General Conference this week as visitors.

The ladies' prayer meeting at Crowley, La., made the projected Sunday horse races there a matter of special prayer, and the following week the races were declared off for lack of entries.

The Church at Houma, La., is erecting a beautiful parsonage home for the pastor, Rev. Clyde V. Briethaupt. The effects of the recent revival endure. The Adult Bible Class now numbers 36.

Rev. H. T. Carley, pastor of Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church of this city, was unable to occupy his pulpit on last Sunday. Mr. J. E. Selfe held the morning service and Rev. L. I. McCain preached at night.

Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir is serving a responsive and loyal people at Lake Arthur. The young men have a fine weekly prayer meeting. The ladies' prayer meeting organized after the revival last November, is doing great good.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, pastor of Second Methodist Church, New Orleans, will leave for Asheville next Monday to visit the General Conference. From there he will go to Washington, D. C., to attend the World's Sunday School Convention.

We learn that the new church, now under way at Arcadia, La., will cost about $4,000 when it is finished. Rev. R. O. Wier, the pastor, hopes to have it completed by the time the Ruston District Conference meets at that place in July.

Rev. W. H. Whatley, of Merryville, La., puts us under obligations by working for the Advocate. He writes that Dr. J. T. Sawyer has been assisting him in a meeting, "preaching strong gospel sermons to the edification and delight of the congregation."

We acknowledge an appreciated invitation from the faculty and students of Port Gibson Female College to be present at their commencement exercises May 13-16. We regret that it will be impossible to accept, but extend to the College and graduates our congratulations.

The Kilmichael Charge is prospering under the able ministry of Rev. J. R. Wilson. He writes, "We will charge the enemy the first Sunday in August with Brother Graves assisting." In addition to kind words, there was a cheering addition to our subscription list, in our brother's letter.

Rev. Martin Hebert has removed from New Iberia to St. Martinville, where a handsome parsonage, the gift of the Woman's Board, has been erected for the French Mission. The outlook for this great work was never brighter. Brother Hebert is planning an energetic and aggressive revival campaign in his work.

Rev. G. D. Purcell, of Jena, La., writes: "We held our first service in the basement of our new church at Jena, May the 1st. The meeting at Harrisonburg was a grand success; the church membership revived and thirty new names added to our church roll, and some eight or ten to the Baptist Church, with more to follow."

We are saddened by a note from Rev. D. W. Babb, telling of the passing away of Rev. Q. A. Oats, pastor at Shuqualak. This veteran of the Cross heard the summons and quietly fell asleep at 11:15 last Friday morning. His funeral took place at Verona, Miss., at 2:30 last Sunday. An extended and suitable memoir will be published later.

A note, deep and clear, and true, sounded from Rev. J. E. Denson, the energetic presiding elder of the Lafayette District, when in this office one day last week. Brother Denson is in clear accord with the Methodism of the Fathers, and thinks that a minimum of legislation on the part of the General Conference will produce the maximum benefits for the Church at large.

Mr. A. J. Harris, a traveling man who is a member of Fourth Street Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., paid his respects to the editorial sanctum a few days since. He suggested that he might carry a little slide line for the Lord, and help his cause by sending in an occasional subscription for the Advocate. We would that more of our traveling friends would do similar missionary work.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, of Osyka, in sending in a club of subscribers from that place and from Holmesville, Miss., gives Miss Sarah Vanorden and Miss Addye Ferguson of Holmesville credit for the names sent from there. We thank these ladies for their kindness, and we also thank our good Brother Decell for raising up friends for us, who will manifest their friendship in such practical manner.

Rev. Arthur C. Day, a local preacher whose services have been exceedingly valuable in the work of the Church in this city, and who has been for some time president of the Epworth League Union of New Orleans, will leave in a few days to take charge of a circuit near Baltimore, Md. We congratulate the charge to which he is sent, and pray that the Lord will abundantly bless his labors.

Rev. Geo. Jackson, the veteran of the Louisiana Conference, who bears his 86 years with ease, has been in the city for some days, visiting the annual meeting of the Woman's Home Mission Society of Louisiana. He has preached several times, and manages to keep as busy as some of the boys. Brother Jackson is a good friend to the Advocate, and never fails to speak a good word for it when opportunity offers.

In a business letter to this office Rev. Hilary Westbrook, the pastor at Oakvale, Miss., writes: "The work is moving along nicely. We are getting ready to hold our revival meetings. Rev. W. B. Jones was with us on the 2d inst. and held our second quarterly conference. We had a good meeting at Oakvale Sunday night, when seventeen came up for prayer after the sermon." Brother Westbrook sends us a nice list of subscribers.

It is with deep regret that we learn of the death of a son of Rev. O. G. Halliburton, our pastor at Bogue Chitto. We quote the following from a personal note: "I write you these words with a broken heart. Our son, Harry, was killed in British Columbia on the 3rd inst. in a railroad wreck. He was buried at Everett, Washington. Of the days are dark, so dark!" May the healing touch of the Master's hand be upon these broken hearts.

The Laymen's Missionary Committee of the Methodist Church at Haynesville, La., of which Rev. Walter G. Harbin is leader, has recently concluded its "gift from every member" canvass. The missionary offering from Haynesville Church will be doubled. Brother Harbin directed the canvass by correspondence. Rev. W. T. Woodward, the pastor, ably seconded the work of the leader and committee, and made this fine record possible.

Rev. S. W. Miller, of Frisco, Tex., one time member of the North Mississippi Conference, contemplates a visit among his old friends. He has arranged to hold a number of meetings while in the hounds of his old Conference, but would be glad to plan for others still. If any of the preachers who have not yet provided help for their summer meetings, will write to Brother Miller at the above address, if he has still time to spare, he will be glad to make arrangements with them.

We clip the following from The Enterprise, of Fitzgerald, Ga., in regard to a former pastor of this city, now in charge of Mulberry Street Church, Macon, Ga.: "The memorial address delivered Tuesday afternoon by Rev. J. E. Wray, D.D., was one of the most masterful that ever fell from the lips of an orator. Mr. Wray is decidedly one of the best and most eloquent speakers on the platform or in the southern pulpit. His address was not only patriotic and fragrant with Southern sentiment, but was classical, poetical, historical and logical."

We have just received word from Rev. J. R. Jones informing us that Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, one of the oldest and most intellectual members of the Mississippi Conference, died at 2 a.m. Tuesday morning. This is the second time this week that this office has received news of the death of a veteran of the itinerant ranks. Rev. Q. A. Oats having served 38 years in the North Mississippi Conference, and Dr. Hunnicutt having served 48 years in the Mississippi Conference, according to the records in this office. For us there remains the sadness of the parting, and the weary marches of those who still stand in the ranks; but for these two soldiers of the cross there is the joy of the great reunion, and of meeting their Captain face to face.

From the Asheville Citizen (North Carolina) we appropriate the following: "Miss Lina Renshaw, the daughter of Rev. J. S. Renshaw, died at her home in Paris, Tenn., Monday, May 2, at 6 p.m. She came to Asheville several years ago and was connected with the Emmanuel school of stenography and typewriting. Later she established a flourishing business school in Salisbury, but was forced to give up this work on account of her health and return to Asheville. She was an active member of Central Methodist Church and a charming personality. She left here last February for Paris." Miss Renshaw resided in Greenville, Miss., several years ago while her brothers were in business there, and has many friends in that city who will be deeply grieved to learn of her decease.

We acknowledge ourselves to be under many obligations to the following friends who have sent us subscriptions for the Advocate during the last few days: Mr. James Faulk, Leakesville, Miss.; Rev. P. O. Lowry, Leconte, La.; Rev. F. B. Ormon, Hickory, Miss.; Miss Madge Weems, Lawrence, Miss.; Rev. J. Loyd Decell, Osyka, Miss.; Rev. R. Wilson, Kilmichael, Miss.; Rev. B. P. Fullilove, Abbeville, Miss.; Rev. L. E. Wicht, Haynesville, La.; Rev. J. W. Thompson, Pachuta, Miss.; Rev. C. M. Martin, Escatawpa, Miss.; Rev. C. W. Crisler, Jackson, Miss.; Rev. W. W. Graves, Homewood, Miss.; Rev. Hilary Westbrook, Oakvale, Miss.; Rev. B. F. Lewis, Columbia, Miss.; Rev. J. W. Bell, Charleston, Miss.; Rev. E. H. Rook, Tyro, Miss.; Rev. Rob. Pandle, Vernon, La.; Rev. J. D. Nesom, Sulphur, La.; Rev. Jno. W. Chisolm, Camden, Miss.; Rev. L. T. A'ford, Newton, Miss.; Rev. T. M. Bradley, Jonesown, Miss.; Rev. J. G. Johnson, Lambert, Miss.; Rev. W. L. Froome, Oxford, Miss.; Rev. R. O. Wier, Arcadia, La.; Rev. J. B. Williams, Lisbon, La.; Rev. W. N. Duncan, Batesville, La.; Rev. M. R. Jones, D. Soto, Miss.; Rev. J. M. Huggin, Mount Pleasant, Miss.; Rev. T. E. Gregory, North Carrollton, Miss.; and Rev. Thos. Mills, Pontotoc, Miss.

REV. Q. A. OATS PASSES AWAY.

The Rev. Q. A. Oats, who has passed to his reward was one of the most faithful and prompt member of the Ministerial Relief Association of the North Mississippi Conference. Assessment No. 4 is now due and all members are urged to make prompt payments of assessment.

JOHN C. PARK, Sec. Treas.
Oxford, Miss., May 7, 1910.

THE MEANING OF "BARACA."

C. E. Crossland.

There are a great many people who do not know the unique origin and the meaning of the word "Baraca." Indeed, there are some Sunday school workers to whom this will be a bit of new information. Since the word "Baraca" is now a most usual one in the vocabulary of Sunday school workers throughout the entire world, it will be well to know how we came to have it.

In the 20th chapter of II Chronicles will be found the story from which "Baraca" is secured. Briefly, it is this: The kingdom of Judah was threatened by an army of its enemies. Good King Jehoshaphat prayed unto Jehovah for deliverance, and the Lord answered this prayer by vexing the hosts of the enemy, so that they fell upon and slew each other. Thus when King Jehoshaphat and his people went from Jerusalem out to the scene of the camp of the enemy, they found most of them slain and the remnant fled. They also found so many jewels and riches that they were three days gathering up the spoil.

Then comes the 26th verse, as follows: "And on the fourth day they assembled themselves in the valley of Beracah; for there they blessed Jehovah. Therefore, the name of that place was called the valley of Beracah unto this day." The margin translates this Beracah as "blessing."

When Mr. Marshall A. Hudson organized his first class for young men, he wanted a name for it. In carefully reading his Bible, he came upon this word meaning "blessing," and seized it for his class. The spelling of the word was changed slightly, so as to permit the making of the monogram design which is so familiar in well-organized Sunday schools today.

Baraca has indeed been a real "blessing" to thousands and literally hundreds of thousands of young men all over North America and the world. It could not but bless them, when it has brought them into the Sunday school and to the Bible and to God.

Every pastor and superintendent and teacher of young men or boys ought to investigate carefully the Baraca class idea. Its wonderful success from every viewpoint proves conclusively the correctness of its methods.

The author of this article will be glad to furnish free of any charge full information to any reader. Simply write a letter to C. E. Crossland, Nashville, Tenn.

Phlathia.

In like manner, the young ladies have a most appropriate name for their organized classes. The word "Phlathia" is made up from two Greek words, and means "Lovers of Truth."

The history of the derivation of these two great words in our modern Sunday school and religious life will make an interesting item for the scrap book of the reader of this article.

The first step toward all conquests is the conquest of self. Who masters his own will can easily master the world.—Selected.

Hardship, trial, restriction and opposition mean new vitality to character.—Selected.

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

SECOND SUNDAY AFTER EASTER—LESSON VII: MAY 15, 1910.
GROWING HATRED TO JESUS.—Matt. 12:22-32; 38-42.
Parallel Passages: Mark 3:22-30; Luke 11:14-36.

22. Then was there a dumb and deaf man possessed with a devil, and he brought him into the synagogue. And all the people were amazed, and said, Is not this the Son of David? 23. But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, It is not so. 24. But he answered and said unto them, I will cast out devils, but by Beelzebub the prince of the devils. 25. And Jesus knew their thoughts, and said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand. 26. And if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand? 27. And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out? therefore they shall be your judges. 28. But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you. 29. Or else, how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man? and then he will spoil his house. 30. He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad. 31. Wherefore I say unto you, All power of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.

32. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come.

33. Then certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee. 34. But he answered and said unto them, An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas.

35. For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.

36. The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and behold, it is greater than Jonas is here.

37. The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and behold, it is greater than Solomon is here.

Golden Text.—He that is not with me, nor with me scattereth abroad. Matt. 12:30.

The miracles and teachings of Christ were having their due effect upon the simple, open-hearted multitudes who saw and heard them; so that they even began to whisper among themselves—as after the miracle of the healing of the blind and dumb demoniac with which our lesson for to-day opens—"May not this possibly be the Messiah?" a question of imperfect, yet growing faith. This the Pharisees immediately perceived; and with hearts set hard they made their last desperate stand against Jesus, and against his growing influence over the people. The fact that an amazing miracle was wrought they could not deny, and that the deed was good they could not gainsay; so, as a last extremity, they questioned the motive and the power in which the deed was done, and said that these were evil and through a league with the evil one.

It is almost surprising that Christ would stop to reason with men so wilfully blind; and making so base a charge. It would seem but fit that he should have at once denounced them, as he did before the incident closed (v. 34). "Ye offspring of vipers, how can ye being evil, speak good things?" Yet he did not, but tried again to reason with them, as he had a short time before concerning the Sabbath. It may be noted that Christ argued more often, than many suppose. His argument here was in refutation of their charge: "This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub, the prince of the devils." This he shows to be both unreasonable and inconsistent: (1) unreasonable, because Satan would then be destroying his own kingdom, fighting against himself; and (2) inconsistent, because the works of their own "sons," the Jewish exorcists, in casting out devils they attributed to divine power. Then why suggest, when Jesus was doing more effectively what they did, that he was an agent of Satan? This leads him to impress a great and solemn truth which follows: "But if I, by the finger of God (as Luke puts it) cast out devils, then is the kingdom of God come upon you." If by the power of God I am casting out devils, then I must have overcome Satan, the strong man of the house, and be stronger than he. Is not this convincing proof of my Messiahship?

But again no impression was made upon the Pharisees, jealous of their power and place and blinded by prejudice, they were, despite every miracle, argument or appeal, "against him;" and Christ recognizes and condemns this spirit on their part as the one mortal, unpardonable sin.

What constitutes blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, or the unpardonable sin, has been discussed and may be discussed without end. Plainly, in the case before us, as Wesley says, "It was ascribing those miracles to the power of the devil which Christ wrought by the power of the Holy Ghost." But more generally, and with equal plainness it seems to me, it is a continual resisting, disobeying, and crushing out the promptings of God's Spirit, stifling the voice of conscience, closing one's eyes to the light, refusing to see, until divine influences no longer are felt, conscience no longer speaks, and a state of spiritual death results. It is not then some one transgression of divine law, but a hatred of all divine law, an attitude of fixed hostility to the truth which Stephen vividly portrayed in his scorching words to the Pharisees: "Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost." Most briefly, then, the sin against the Holy Ghost is always, resisting his influence.

The impossibility of forgiveness is found in the man's dead moral state in which no divine impulse toward penitence can reach him. He has stifled moral desire until he has no moral desire. His soul is a faded, shrivelled flower which no water however fresh can revive. The water, God's Holy Spirit, remains the same, but he has placed himself beyond its life-giving influence. To spiritual realities and spiritual truth he is utterly indifferent, or uniformly hostile when brought to face them.

And now, after all this, almost in illustration of this state of utter spiritual callousness, we find Pharisees approaching him with the hypocritical request, "Master, we would see a sign of thee." The answer comes quick and short, "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas." He alludes to his death and resurrection as having been pre-figured in the history of Jonas. The expression, "three days and three nights" was long ago harmonized with the actual time spent in the tomb thus: "As the Hebrews had no word to express a natural day, they used night and day or day and night for it. So that to say a thing happened after three days and three nights was with them the same as to say, it happened after three days, or on the third day" (Wesley).

A modern writer affirms that the Jewish expression is equivalent to what we mean by two or three days. Our lesson closes with a warning from Christ similar to that in a recent lesson, that as would Tyre, Sidon, and Sodom, so also would the men of Nineveh and the queen of Sheba rise up in the judgment with his own generation and condemn it, because with lesser spiritual opportunities they possessed greater spiritual responsiveness.

II. The Lesson's Message. Points to Impress.

1. All noble, unselfish ministry, either in word or deed, we should recognize and respond to as of God. If there is any good in us we will thus respond to God in others. It was because the Pharisees were base at heart that they could not appreciate the spirit and deeds of Jesus.

2. To criticize and find fault with the methods of those who are casting devils out of the world and out of purg the motives of those so ministering is to manifest the spirit of the Pharisee.

3. Every man must choose to side either with truth and righteousness and God in Christ, or on some pretext to side against all these. There is no neutral ground. "He that is not with me, is against me." And I standing loyally with Christ, in deed and word, for all that he stands for in the world?

4. Have I committed the unpardonable sin? We ask the question only to make clearer a more pointed and practical one—am I committing this sin? We would not affirm of anyone that he has committed the unpardonable sin, but we fear that many—it may be some of us—are committing it, are resisting the Holy Spirit, refusing to see the truth and the pathway of duty (because we don't want to follow it) and so are becoming hardened and in danger. Beware of an attitude of hostility toward light and truth and duty. Such persisted in quenching the Spirit.

A CARD OF THANKS

We, the husband, mother, brothers and sisters of the deceased Mrs. Claud C. Davis, of Bond, Miss., desire to express our deepest love and heartfelt thanks to the loved ones and friends for their expressions of love to her in her illness, and to us in our sad hour of bereavement. God alone can measure the depth of our appreciation.

After a brief service at the home, in Bond, her remains were carried to Parvis to be laid to rest in the family graveyard. Rev. John P. Culpeper, of Newton, Miss., met the remains and loved ones at Parvis, and conducted the funeral there.

H. C. FOYNER,
Pastor at Wiggins.

May 2, 1910.

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS IN THE S. S. SCRANTON ADVERTISEMENT.

In our issue of April 27, 1910, an advertisement of S. S. Scranton Company, Portland, Maine, appeared, and certifying that it was a valuable reference book, we placed it in the price list attached to the advertisement. It contained a serious error, the line reading, "Complete set of fifteen volumes $1.00," should read, "Complete set of fifteen volumes $1.50," and in the same line, under the heading of "S. S. Scranton," where the advertisement reads, "S. S. Scranton Company," it should read, "S. S. Scranton, Portland, Maine." In other words, the monthly payment for the 15 volume set is $1.50, while for the same number of volumes the cash price is $1.00.

THE JACKSON SANATORIUM

OPPOSITE WEST SIDE OF GOVERNOR'S MANSION

Chris Herbert, M. D., General Practice and Obstetrics.	Julius Crisler, M. D., Surgery and Gynecology.
O. M. Turner, M. D., Surgery and General Practice.	H. H. Harrison, M. D., General Practice and Consultation.
N. J. Milstead, M. D., General Practice and Obstetrics.	W. E. Britt, M. D., Genito-Urinary and Rectal Diseases.
L. H. Galloway, M. D., Physician and General Surgery.	N. Stewart, M. D., Mental and Nervous Diseases.
W. M. Smithson, M. D., General Practice and Consultation.
MISS ROSE KEATING, Graduate Nurse, Superintendent.
MISS FANNY FERGUSON, Graduate Nurse, Asst. Superintendent.
JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI.

We are Headquarters for Edison's Phonographs, Records and Supplies

—CASH OR INSTALLMENT—

We pay transportation charges on purchase of one dozen records or more.

NATIONAL AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM CO. OF LA.
614 GRAVIER STREET NEW ORLEANS.

Methodist Benevolent Association
Ministers and Laymen of Southern Methodist Church. Benefits at Death, or Old Age, or Disability. One dollar per year. Widows, Orphans, Disabled. Insurance cost. If in good health, $1.00 per year. NASHVILLE TENN.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

Brother JAMES LARKIN CAIN, son of Patrick and Mary Cain, was born in Tusculoosa, Ala., April 29, 1835; his parents moved to Carroll County, Miss., when he was only two years old. He married Martha Turnentine Dec. 17, 1857, who died April 5, 1860. Two children were born to them; both dying in infancy. He married Abigail G. Eubanks, Aug. 6, 1861. Seven children were born to them, all of whom are still living. Brother Cain lived in Carroll County nearly all his life. He spent a short time in Arkansas and served a year in the Southern Army during the Civil War. Brother Cain lived in and near Vaiden nearly all his life, and was closely identified with all its interests, filling several offices in the town and county. Brother Cain joined the Methodist Church when about nine years old, and continued in the communion the remainder of his long life, being a member for about sixty-six years. He at different times held all the offices of the local church; was Sunday school superintendent for twenty-five years. Brother Cain was feeble for several years before his death, and for a few weeks suffered much pain, but as he would struggle for life he would sometimes say, "I suffer so much but this is nothing compared with what my precious Savior suffer for me." When he realized that the end would be soon, he prayed a very touching and earnest prayer for his loved ones; his parting words were tender and beautiful. He said he would soon be in the home over there, with his Savior, his mother and loved ones who had gone before. Brother Cain lived well and though he be dead, his works will follow him, and it still remains a fact that "Our people die well." He is safe at home now where we trust the loved ones will all greet him some sweet day, never to part any more.

His pastor, J. H. SMITH.

Monday evening, March 29, 1910, at Daleville, Miss., Mrs. MARTHA JANE HOUSTON departed this life and went to a better clime where there is no more death. She had the privilege of living longer than her allotted time, having reached the ripe age of 79 years, 2 months and 9 days. She was born in Sumter County, Ala., Jan. 3, 1831 and moved to Mississippi when she was quite young, where she lived all her long life. She and John J. Houston were united in holy matrimony, Jan. 20, 1848; their home was blessed with eight children, four boys and four girls. She joined the M. E. Church when six years old and had been a devoted Christian all the way. Her husband and one child preceded her to the grave. She leaves a host of grandchildren, friends and relatives to mourn their loss. Her body was laid to rest in the old home graveyard at New Hope Church, near De Kalb, Miss. We have lost a mother and a grandmother, but she has gone home to rest.

Her grandson,

JOHN J. HOUSTON.

COLLIE D. WHIGHAM was born in Alabama on March 20, 1888. On Feb. 23, 1910, he peacefully closed his eyes to earthly scenes, and his pure spirit took its flight from all that is mortal to be with God, from whence it came. Collie, as he was generally known, united with the New Hope Methodist Church during the year 1908, under the ministry of Rev. J. L. Red, who was then his pastor. Those who have known him most intimately do not hesitate to say that he had always been a good boy. But this is not the only evidence we have as to his future. His last testimony, which was given only a few hours before his death, was that all is well. He wanted to live to be with his family, to whom he was devoted. Nevertheless he was submissive to God's will, and quietly committed the welfare of his wife and baby-boy to the God in whom he trusted. Brother Whigham leaves, besides a wife and baby, a father, mother and four brothers. To all of these we can only say, live so that the end of your earthly journey may be as his was. Our prayers and sympathy go out to those here and loving hearts. May the angels keep watch over them for all time. And when time is no more, may there be a joyous meeting of the entire number on the other shore.

E. J. COKER, P. C.

Miss EDITH THOMSON died at her home, 1522 Foucher Street, New Orleans, March 4, 1910. She was the eldest daughter of Brother and Sister W. B. Thomson. She had not been well for several weeks, yet her going away was sudden and unexpected. Two days of intense suffering brought her bright young life to a close. She was ready to go, for her life had been in keeping with the good and beautiful. However much she may have had to suffer, there was never an occasion for complaint. The petty annoyance of life did not wear her spirit away, for the Christian life to her meant triumph, victory and good cheer. She became a member of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church when a child, and was a faithful member to the day of her death. She will be missed from the Epworth League, of which she was an officer, and from the church, where she was in attendance at every service. Her heart was open to her friends and to her loved ones and to God. Such a life can never end. It has only begun. True, we shall look upon her face no more here, but thanks be unto God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has arisen from the dead, in the sweet by and by we may see her again.

W. W. HOLMES.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. LUCINDA L. O'NEIL, the second daughter of T. D. and Mrs. Martha A. Algiers, was born in Covington County, Ala., March 25, 1849. She moved with her parents to Clark County, Miss., in 1853, where she spent the days of her childhood and young womanhood. On Sept. 12, 1869, she was happily married to Mr. James J. O'Neil. The matrimonial joys of this young couple increased with the passing years until death called the wife away. To this union were born four sons and four daughters, all of whom with the father survive. The eldest son, Rev. T. J. O'Neil, is now presiding elder of the Newton District. Just ten minutes after the clock struck 12, announcing the passing away of April 4, 1910, Sister O'Neil peacefully fell on sleep, and on April 6 her mortal remains were laid to rest in the family burying ground, Rev. M. R. Jones, her pastor, officiating. In May, 1869, Sister O'Neil joined the Baptist Church, there being no other church near her home. In this church she lived about five years, when the Methodist Church was pioneered into the community in which she lived. Then she, her father and mother and two sisters joined the Methodist Church. Later her three sisters joined the same church. She had four brothers, but they all died in infancy. Sister O'Neil lived a faithful, consistent life in the church of her choice, till God called her to join the Church triumphant. Her home was the preacher's home, and oftentimes the resting place of the traveler and the shelter of the homeless. She was a devoted wife, a loving mother and a good neighbor. She was a great pacificator in time of trouble, an efficient nurse in time of sickness, the sunshine of any company in which she appeared, and no doubt in the resurrection many will rise up to call her blessed. In her later years she was a great sufferer, but she bore it all with that fortitude that characterizes the true child of God. A short time before her departure she, realizing the end was near, exclaimed, "All is

(Continued on Page 12.)

Run Down?

Ask your doctor all about Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Entirely free from alcohol. A strong tonic and alterative.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a tonic. It does not stimulate. It does not make you feel better one day, then as bad as ever the next. There is not a drop of alcohol in it. You have the steady, even gain that comes from a strong tonic. Ask your doctor all about this.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital $200,000.00
Assets 479,360.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

New Orleans, La.

— GET THE — RIGHT ENGINE ON FIRST PURCHASE

YOU don't want to experiment with an engine. It's too expensive. Buy right the first time and your power troubles are over—at once and for all. The engine question isn't a hard one to answer—if you investigate thoroughly. For you will find I H C engines far superior. Others cannot compare in efficiency, simplicity, economy and strength. Profit by the experience of those who are discarding other engines for the I H C. Buy an I H C first—and save the cost of a "one year" engine.

I H C Gasoline Engines

There is one to meet your needs exactly. For the I H C line offers wide choice. Ask the local I H C agent to tell you about these styles and sizes. I H C Vertical engines—made in 2, 3 and 25-horsepower; Horizontal (portable and stationary) in 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 15, 20 and 25-horsepower; Famous air-cooled engines—in 1, 2 and 3-horsepower; Hopper-cooled—in 2, 2½, 3, 4, 6 and 8-horsepower; also sawing, spraying and pumping outfits.

International tractors have been successful in every contest, winning the highest honors at home and abroad—an ideal plowing and general purpose tractor—made in 12, 15 and 20-horsepower sizes.

Whichever I H C engine you buy will save you a world of time, work and money. You can find no better power to run the cream separator, wood saw, feed cutter, churn, grindstone, fanning mill, corn sheller, thrasher, shredder, and the many other machines on your farm. There is no better power to pump water. And the I H C does these things quickly, surely and cheaply. It's the engine that pays for itself—and pays the biggest dividend on its cost.

Investigate! Then judge for yourself. Send the I H C dealer in your town. Or, if you prefer, write direct to us for catalogues you are interested in.

International Harvester Company of America Chicago, U.S.A.
(Incorporated)

Obituaries.

(Continued from Page 11.)

well; then, her pain becoming great, she prayed to the Father for relief, and she soon fell into a stupor and in a few hours breathed her life out without a struggle. May God comfort the loved ones and give them strength to so live that all shall meet again "over on the other shore."

L. F. ALFORD.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions of the Canton Home Mission Society on the death of Rev. W. B. Lewis:

"Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."

Whereas, It has pleased our allwise Father to transplant to the courts of heaven one who was so apart in his Godly life—whose influence and example of the lowly Nazarene make his death just a passing over into the beautiful Beulah land.

Whereas, We sadly bow to this dispensation, we feel that this holy, consecrated life of fifty-two years, following the Man of Galilee, will, with its benign influence live on to perpetuity—a boundless power, leading and guiding others to the realms above, therefore, be it resolved,

First—That the Canton Home Mission Society in the death of our sainted and beloved pastor, Rev. W. B. Lewis, realize, that only time with its healing can cure our irreparable loss, one who was an earnest and true co-laborer, ready at all times to aid and further our cause.

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved wife and loved ones, and commend them to a merciful God and loving Savior, who alone can comfort.

MISS K. C. HILL,

MRS. BLANCHE HOWELL,

MRS. JOHN SHARP, JR.,

Committee.

MEMORIAL.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Ladies' Aid Society of Wabahalak, Miss.:

Whereas our Heavenly Father, in his unerring wisdom, has seen fit to take from our circle our much loved sister and friend, Mrs. IRA BOUNDS, therefore, be it resolved:

First—That in the passing away of our sister we have lost a consecrated Christian worker, one whose joy it was to do and to suffer the Master's will.

Second—That we shall miss her wherever we are gathered, from her seat in church and from our social life, where hers was ever a welcome presence.

Third—That though we shall miss her from the earthly walks who exhibited so much of cheerful courage, we will strive the more earnestly to follow her along the shining way that leads above.

Fourth—Through the mist of our tears we look above, whence cometh our help, and by faith we say He doeth all things well, even to the taking away of His most faithful workers.

Fifth—That we extend our loving sympathy to the bereaved loved ones, and may they find comfort in His promises that never fail.

MRS. FRANKS.

MRS. HUNGERFORD.

MRS. ADAMS.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Natchez Dist.—Second Round.

Adams, at A..... May 14, 15
Wilkinson, at May 21, 22
Centerville May 28, 29
Nebo, at Oak Grove June 4, 5
Barlow, at June 11, 12
Bayou Pierre, at June 13
Scotland, at June 18, 19
Homochitto, at Rosetta June 25, 26
H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, P. E.

Jackson Dist.—Second Round.

Jackson, First Ch..... May 15
Jackson, Capitol St. May 22
Mendenhall, at Braxton May 28, 29
Eden, at Thornton June 1
Lintonia, at Crymes Ch. June 4, 5
Yazoo City, at 8 p. m. June 5
Flora, at Bentonia June 11, 12
Deasonville, at Fletcher's Chapel June 17
Benton, at Zeiglerville June 18, 19
Fannin, at Goshen Spgs. June 22
Harrisville, at Rexford June 25, 26
J. R. JONES, P. E.

Seashore Dist.—Second Round.

Coalville, at Cedar Lake May 25
Wolf River Mission, at Beulah, 10 a. m. May 27
Biloxi May 28, 29
Gulfport, 25th Avenue June 1
Lumberton June 4, 5
Poplarville June 6
Carriere and McNeill, at McNeill June 7
Americus, 11 a. m. June 10
Escatawpa, 11 a. m. June 11
Moss Point June 11, 12
Pascagoula June 12, 13
Vanceave June 15
W. B. JONES, P. E.

Brookhaven Dist.—Second Round.

Gallman, at Mt. Pleasant May 14, 15
Crystal Springs May 15, 16
Silver Creek, at N. Hebron May 21, 22
Hazlehurst May 29, 30
Monticello, at Tilton June 4, 5
Prentiss, at Santee June 11
Boguechitto and Norfield, at Norfield June 12, 13
Pearlhaven, Hawkin Chap June 18, 19
Buford, at Summers Chapel June 26
District Conference June 8, 10
J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

Meridian Dist.—Second Round.

Buckatunna, at State Line May 15, 16
North Kemper, at Hope'll May 21, 22
Meridian, East End May 25
Meridian, South Side and Poplar Springs, at Poplar Springs May 26
Enterprise and Stonewall, at Stonewall May 28, 29
Porterville, at Union June 4, 5
Meridian, Central June 7
Meridian, 5th Street June 8
DeKalb, at Pleasant Ridge June 11, 12
Meridian, 7th Avenue June 15
Vimville, at Why Not June 18, 19
W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

District Conference, at Fifth Street, Meridian, May 30 to June 3.
W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

Newton Dist.—Second Round.

Rose Hill, at Pleas. Grove May 14, 15
Newton May 18
Hickory, at Garlandville May 21, 22
Trenton, at New Prospect May 27
Fri. May 28, 29
Shiloh, at Johns June 1
Chunkey, at Meehan Wed. June 4, 5
Homewood, at High Hill June 10
Decatur, at Decatur June 11, 12
Neshoba, at Mars Hill June 12, 13
Philadelphia, at P. June 12, 13
T. J. O'NEIL, P. E.

Newton, Miss.

Vicksburg Dist.—Second Round.

Silver City, at Holly Bluff May 12, 13
Satartia, at Wesley Chpl May 14, 15
Harriston, at Martin May 21, 22
Oak Ridge, at Red Bone May 28, 29
Hermanville, at Pisgah May 31
Edwards, at Clinton June 3
Crawford St. June 5
District Conference at Marysville June 7, 11. Opens on 7th, at 11 a. m.
G. H. GALLOWAY, P. E.

Four Years to Pay for This Piano

UNDER the Werlein Club Plan one hundred people buy one hundred pianos, each agreeing to pay for one piano only. The piano is shipped upon payment of $10. The monthly payment is $6. This is for a $400 piano. Write for particulars—how to save $108 on your purchase.

Sixty-seven years in business

Philip Werlein, Ltd., 605-7-9 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

Weber, Chickering, Mathushek, Behr, Pease, Wegman, Ivers & Pond, Steck, Werlein Pianos and Pianolas. Sheet Music—Victor Talking Machines.

THE BEST MADE Angell's Cough and Whooping Cough Syrup

For Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and Throat Trouble.

Contains no Opium or Morphine.
All Druggists, Price 25 and 50 cents.

DUGGAN'S BOLL WEEVIL REMEDY WILL INSURE A GOOD COTTON CROP

Should be used by every cotton planter in the South. Simple, Cheap, Effective. Fully demonstrated at Natchez, Miss., last season. Write for particulars and references.

One gallon diluted treats 2 acres

J. J. DUGGAN, Mn'fr,

4326 Magazine Street, New Orleans, La.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection; beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Grenada College.

Secure our catalogue before deciding where to place your daughter. Superior Home Comforts; Only Two Girls in a Room; Marvelous Health Record; Excellent Fine Arts Department; Strong Lyceum Course; Well-Adapted Library; Personal Attention to Individual Pupil; Superior Student Body as Associates; Carefully Selected Faculty; Strong Course of Study; Rates Reasonable; Constant Christian Influence Permeating and Dominating College Life. Apply for rooms at once and thus secure choice of location.

W. L. CLIFTON, A.B., Ph.D., President, Grenada, Miss.

I. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Richl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd., JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. . . . NEW ORLEANS
D. C. Godfrey Optician.

CONVENIENT WAY,

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA,
SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS
ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL, General Passenger Agent.

GRENADA COLLEGE.

Mr. Editor: Please to allow me to commend and emphasize the importance of the suggestion of the president of the board of trustees, that one hundred preachers of the Conference join him in a pledge to send at least one pupil each to the Grenada College next fall.

Not at all times have all the ministers given me the support in this way that I have thought they might. Brother Couniss is worthy of your undivided support actively expressed, and he will need and appreciate it.

The State schools for higher education have the State treasury behind them as support; normally and naturally, almost every teacher in the public schools is an agent, and in an indirect way, they have constantly in the field traveling representatives. If we, as a church, expect to hold our own against these awful odds, we must be up and doing and act, all of us, as a unit. This is no criticism of the State schools; the State is taking care of its own.

For my own part, I am using greater effort to retain for next session a larger percentage of our present patronage than we have ever done before. I expect to succeed. To my many friends throughout the North Mississippi Conference, I desire to say, "Stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong," and the new president will carry forward with more rapid strides the great work you have already made possible in the Grenada College.

W. L. CLIFTON.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES OF CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Shreveport, La., June 5, 1910.

Commencement Sermon, 11 a.m. at First Methodist Church by Rev. J. M. Henry, of Baton Rouge.

Y. M. C. A. Sermon, 8 p.m. by Rev. A. B. Shankle, of Ruston, at Noel Memorial Methodist Church.

Annual Meeting of Alumni and banquet for alumni and trustees, at 6 p.m., in College building, Monday, June 6.

Oratorical contests by students for "Murrif Medal," at 8 p.m., and Alumni Address by Judge S. C. Fullilove, of Shreveport.

Annual Meeting of Trustees, Tuesday, June 7, at 10 a.m., in the College building.

Athletic games for entertainment of visitors, in New Athletic Park, at 4 p.m.

Contest by students, for "Hutchinson Medal" for Declamation, at 8 p.m. It is earnestly desired that there be full meetings of the Trustees and Alumni, and that they all participate in the festivities of the Banquet on Monday evening.

We close the college year full of hope and encouragement. New catalogues will be ready for distribution by May 20.

FELIX R. HILL, President.
Shreveport, La., May 5, 1910.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors and Sunday School Superintendents of the Mississippi Conference:

Brother W. H. Morse, of Tylertown, Miss., has been elected treasurer of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board in place of Rev. W. W. Morse, deceased.

B. F. LEWIS, Chairman.
Columbia, Miss., May 1, 1910.

NEW BOOKS.

Characteristics of the Southern Negro. By E. H. Randle, A.M., LL.D. The Neale Publishing Co., New York and Washington.

This publication contains the opinions of the author as to the present status of the negro in the South and also touches upon the question of his outlook for the future. Neither statistics nor argumentation are indulged in to any considerable extent; the writer's conclusions are given dogmatically and the reader is left to accept or reject them as he pleases. Though he says many kindly things of the colored people, we think Prof. Randle takes rather too gloomy a view of existing conditions among them. He seems to us to some extent at least to have fallen a victim to that great enemy of logic—the habit of making hasty generalizations. The author is a citizen of Mississippi, a Methodist, and a Christian gentleman. So few books are composed by the people of our immediate section, that it always pleases to see an additional one coming from the press. Dr. Randle's volume is well written.

Letters of a Physician to His Daughters. By F. A. Rupp, M. D. The Vir Publishing Company, Philadelphia.

This booklet is designed to point out to young women the grave consequences which are liable to result to them from wedding young men whose antecedent lives have been impure. It contains three letters: two to young ladies and one to their parents. We frankly confess that we have always doubted the wisdom of discussing such subjects either from the platform or upon the printed page. In the present instance, the author handles his theme in a clean and capable manner, and we do not doubt that his little volume is sincerely meant to do good, and is as unobjectionable as any of the kind that could be written. And it may be that its circulation would exert a wholesome and reformatory influence. It should not, however, be placed in the hands of very young girls.

CALENDAR.

The World's Missionary Conference, Edinburgh, Scotland, June 14-24.

Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference Annual Meeting, Tupelo, Miss., June 11.

Seashore Divinity School, Seashore Campground, Biloxi, Miss., June 28-July 7.

Young People's Missionary Movement Conf., Asheville, N. C., July 1-10.

Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, Seashore Campground, July 21-31.

Epworth League.

Shreveport Dist. League Conf., Grand Cane, La., June 12-13.

North Mississippi League Conference, Kosciusko, Miss., June 14-16.

District Conferences.

Baton Rouge District, Bogalusa, La., May 28-30.

Meridian District, Fifth Street Church, Meridian, Miss., May 30-June 3.

Wilona District, Moorhead, Miss., June 2-5.

Newton District, Newton, Miss., June 6-10.

Lafayette District Conference, Eunice, La., June 8.

Alexandria District Conference, Mellville, La., June 10-14.

Shreveport District, Zwolle, La., June 14.

Ruston District, Arcadia, La., July 1-3.

Greenville District, Tunica, Miss., June 15-17.

Aberdeen District, Pontotoc, Miss., June 20-24.

College Commencements.

Port Gibson Female College, May 13-16.

Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., May 29-30.

Mississippi College, Jackson, Miss., June 5-7.

Mansfield Female College, Mansfield, La., June 5-7.

Centenary College, Shreveport, La., June 5-7.

Sunday School.

World's Sunday School Convention, Washington, D. C., May 19-24.

Hicks' CAPUDINE Cures Sick Headache Also Nervous Headache, Travellers Headache and aches from Grip, Stomach Troubles, or Female troubles. Try Capudine—it's liquid—effects immediately. Sold by druggists.

Spend Your Summer in the

BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAINS

Pure water, no malaria or Mosquitos. Public and private baths. Select Southern guests solicited. Write for booklet.

OAK HALL.

E. BROWNLEE, Prop.

Tryon, N. C.

USE THE L. & A. RAILWAY

"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service

Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

Summer Tours

VIA

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

California, Colorado, Utah, Mexico, AND ALL THE WEST.

NEW YORK

And ALL EASTERN and NORTHERN RESORTS

See Your Local Agent for full Particulars, or Write

J. H. R. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt., New Orleans, La.

C. W. MURPHEY, City Pass. Agt., New Orleans, La.

"It Turns Your Waste Material Into Dollars."

THREE MACHINES IN ONE.

SHORT Log Saw Mill, Lath and Shingle Machine. Does all kinds of sawing. Just the machine for small Saw Mills and Farmers' use.

It's a Big Money Maker.

Write for circulars and particulars.

Manufactured only by COLUMBIAN IRON WORKS, Chattanooga, Tenn.

YOUR Boy May Become a Great Merchant

But not unless he has the necessary training. The business of this institution is to fit young men and women for successful business careers. We have the best systems for teaching Bookkeeping, Shortland, Typewriting, Penmanship, Salesmanship, Telegraphy, Proofreading, Railroad, Public Accounting, Banking and Civil Service. Correspondence courses for those who cannot attend. Write for particulars and free booklet, entitled "OUR PRESIDENTS," giving a complete history of each, from Washington down to and including Taft.

FALL'S BUSINESS COLLEGE, Broadway & 8th Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

Before and After the Fire

Nobody knows when fire or lightning or wind will rage and destroy.

Some church building is being harmed by one of these destroyers somewhere every day. Absolute protection against loss is furnished, and money saved the assured, and Methodism perpetuated, by

The National Mutual Church Insurance Co. of Chicago—The Methodist Mutual

No assessments. All that you have guessed about mutual insurance may be wrong. If you want to KNOW, write for information to HENRY P. MAGILL, Sec'y & Mgr., 184 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

MRS. ALICE HARGROVE BARCLAY, Agent, Mc. E. Church South, South Brook 1118, Louisville, Kentucky.

No Organ Money

Write to Estey for a good suggestion how to get good money for the purchase of a good organ for Church or Sabbath School.

Estey Brattleboro, Vt.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS

Should buy for 1910, "Hymns of Glory" by Hamp Sewell, Atlanta, Ga. It is the best book for Sunday Schools. It's New, Over 100 songs, never before printed. Sunday Schools Superintendents can get a sample copy free by writing to-day. And we have a song book—easy payment plan, giving you all the time you want to pay for song books for Sunday Schools only. Let me tell you about it:

Sunday School Superintendents send for free sample "Hymns of Glory" and ask for song book easy payment plan. Address all orders to HAMP SEWELL, Atlanta, Ga.

FINE POST CARDS FREE

A Big Package Sent to All Our Readers Who Write at Once.

To any reader of this paper who writes immediately and encloses 2 cents stamps we will mail a set of five most beautiful post cards you ever saw. Ten very finest Floral, Birthday and motto cards, all different, in exquisite colors, silk finish, beautifully embossed, etc., for only 10 cents. Thirty cards all different 25 cents. With each order we include our plan for getting 50 choice cards free. Address The Art Post Card Club, 703 Jackson St., Topeka, Kan.

Don't Throw It Away

USE MENDETS

They mend all leaks in all utensils—tin, brass, copper, graniteware, hot water bags, etc. No solder, cement or rivet. Any one can use them; fit any surface; three million in use. Send for sample pkg. 10c. Complete pkg. assorted sizes, 25c. postpaid. Agents wanted. Collette Mfg. Co., Box 1141, Amsterdam, N. Y.

DON'T BE WITHOUT WATER.

There is no need of the property holders of this city being any longer without water and sewer connections. This has been the one great distress of our city, not being able to have modern improvements in our homes. But now there is no need of any more complaints along this line, as the city is perfectly willing to connect free any property with the water main, carrying the pipes to the property holders line, without any cost whatever to them.

The popular firm of C. C. Hartwell & Co., on Baronne Street, are making a liberal proposition to connect the sewer pipes free of charge. They also go farther, and agree to do all plumbing and laying of pipes necessary to connect the house with the sewer and water on monthly payments. This enables the property holders to not only put the property occupied by him but any property he has for rent in modern shape, with practically no outlay of ready cash. People interested in this proposition should consult C. C. Hartwell & Co., for a detailed explanation.

If a man can write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mousetrap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten pathway to his den.—Emerson.

Tidings from the Field

Meridian, Miss.

The Lord is blessing us at our little church. On last Sunday night I preached to a large crowd of earnest listeners, and at the close of the service three young men came to the altar and two of them quickly prayed their way into the kingdom, while the saints rejoiced, and one of them, with another young man who has recently been saved, united with the church, which makes twenty-five accessions up to the present. At almost every service "showers of blessings" fall upon us in answer to the prayer of faith. The pastor's and presiding elder's salaries are paid up to date, and the Conference collections by cash and subscriptions are well under way. Before long a genuine revival is going to break out among us, for a goodly number of us are asking God to send it; we are meeting all known conditions as they present themselves, so we are expecting it soon. His "time and season" we feel sure, is close at hand. (Acts 1:7.)—J. A. Wells.

Baker, La.

Dear Brother Meek: Our second quarterly meeting for the Baker Circuit was held last Saturday and Sunday at the Bethel Church. There was a fairly good turnout on Saturday and Brother Miller gave us a good, soul-stirring sermon. After the close of this service, the ladies began bringing their baskets laden with good things and laid them out upon cloths on the ground which was enough to tickle the palate of any preacher. After partaking sufficiently of the good things to satisfy the inner-man, all repaired to the church again for the Quarterly Conference. The churches were well represented. Yes, Brother Joe Millican was there, the old wheel-horse from Deerford, as he always is, and was not laden with excuses that he hadn't had time etc., to see his people, but you could see that bright expression on his face that indicated the fact that he had been doing something, and that he had something to gladden the heart of his pastor. Brother Millican will be 70 years old next September and if he and his wife live to see next January, they will celebrate their golden wedding. May the Lord raise us up more such faithful men! It was indeed a pleasant Conference. At night the presiding elder put the pastor up to preach and he can say that he had a good listener in Brother Miller. Sunday morning dawned a beautiful day and the people gathered from all parts of the country till the newly-finished, nicely-seated church was filled to its utmost capacity. The building committee consisting of Lee Browning, chairman; Dr. Thomas Wilson, secretary-treasurer; S. L. Hooper, T. W. Lovett, R. T. Devoll, and J. E. Nettles, set to the left of the pulpit. Brother Miller preached a great sermon, and when the time came for the dedicatory service Brother S. L. Hooper presented the church out of debt and the beautiful service was pronounced. The Lord's Supper was then administered and thus ended an occasion long to be remembered by all.—F. N. Sweetney, P. C.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Alexandria District Conference will be held at Melville, La., June 10-14, 1910. The opening sermon will be preached Friday, June 10, at 8 p.m., by Rev. Geo. D. Purcell. The following committees will serve the Conference:

License to Preach—Revs. I. T. Reames, R. H. Harper and T. D. Lipscomb.

Admission on Trial—Revs. H. W. May, H. W. Lebetter and F. J. McCoy.

Orders—Revs. H. R. Singleton, C. W. Carter and H. Armstrong. Quarterly Conference Records—G. A. Morgan, F. P. Moss and Dr. Paul Foster.

Preachers on circuits will please fill their second appointment on the fifth Sunday in May. Preachers on stations will be expected to give their congregations a respite on District Conference Sunday. We hope to announce later that one of our Bishops will preside.

PAUL M. BROWN, P. E.

Greatest of All for Man and Beast.

Mr. M. M. Garig, Denham Springs, La., says: "During the last sixteen years we have used ROYALINE OIL extensively, for almost every purpose, internally and externally, on man and beast. It has never failed us, and I do not hesitate to pronounce it the greatest of all the pain medicines and antiseptics known to me, and I have tried nearly every one on the market." Price 25c. bottle. Sold by druggists or the Royaline Medicine Co., New Orleans, La.

Christ himself bases prayer, its reasonableness, its certainty of answer, on the certain nature of our human instincts. The answer to prayer is the victory of instinct.—W. S. Rainford.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVES TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

To be led by the Spirit does not always mean that we know where we are going in a literal sense of the word, but it does mean that we know who is with us, and all is well.—Selected.

THIS WILL INTEREST MANY.

E. W. Parkhurst, the Boston publisher, says that if any one afflicted with rheumatism in any form, neuralgia or kidney trouble, will send their address to him at 704-35 Carney Bldg., Boston, Mass., he will direct them to a perfect cure. He has nothing to sell or give, only tells you how he was cured after years of search for relief. Hundreds have tested it with success.

A FOOL FOR HIS LAWYER.

You have often heard the statement that the man who pleads his own case in court has a fool for his lawyer. It is true in every line of knowledge. You need a specialist to help you understand your Bible. You need a specialist to prescribe the medicine when you are sick. You need a specialist to build your house, to shoe your horse, to gin your cotton.

No one man can hope to master all learning and so it is that a good preacher is apt to be a poor farmer, and a good farmer is apt to be a poor doctor.

Now suppose you wanted to know the truth about the chemical composition of Coca-Cola. Would you consult a carpenter, a blacksmith, a doctor or a lawyer? Certainly not. You would consult a professional chemist who makes his living by analyzing substances for people who do not know how to do it for themselves. Suppose that all the leading chemists of the United States were to write you that they have analyzed Coca-Cola and find that it contains "no dope," and then suppose that a blacksmith, a carpenter, a merchant, or a farmer were to tell you that Coca-Cola contains "dope," which would you believe?

Write for a free copy of "Truth about Coca-Cola" containing reports of eminent chemists of our Colleges, Universities and Boards of Health throughout America. Address The Coca-Cola Company, Atlanta, Ga.

Hot Sun—Dusty Roads

By the time you reach town and light you'll be hot and tired and your throat dry with dust and dirt. Hunt up a soda fountain and treat yourself to A Glass or a Bottle of

Coca-Cola

Just as cooling as the bottom step in the spring house. You'll find it relieves fatigue too, and washes away all the dirt and thirst as nothing else will. It touches the spot.

Delicious • Refreshing • Wholesome
5c Everywhere

Our Free Booklet

"The Truth About Coca-Cola" tells all about Coca-Cola—what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial. It gives analyses made by scientists and chemists from coast to coast, proving purity and wholesomeness. Your name and address on a postal will bring you this interesting booklet.

The Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga.

When ever you see an arrow (link) of Coca-Cola

Darsam Bros. Coal Co.

COAL, COKE AND ANTHRACITE

2217 Callopo Street, New Orleans

Phone Main 1552, P. O. Box 1406.

MINERAL WELLS

HEALTH AND PLEASURE AND

WEST TEXAS

FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,

General Passenger Agent,

DALLAS TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a. m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p. m.

FOR

NEW YORK, CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS.

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars. SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW ON SALE.

Because of those ugly, grizzly gray hairs. Use "LA CREOLE" HAIR COLOR RESTORER. Price $1.00, retail.

CAKE, hot biscuit,
hot breads,
pastry, are lessened in cost and increased in quality and wholesomeness,
by
ROYAL
Baking Powder
Bake the food at home and save money and health

THE ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN.

Several times we have touched briefly in our columns upon the question of the management and circulation of the Advocate, and some six weeks ago we mailed a personal letter to all of the preachers in our territory bearing on the subject. We frankly confess to a sense of disappointment with the success we have achieved in increasing our subscription list up to the present time. On January 1, we were issuing 6,725 copies of the Advocate, and on April 28 our issue was 8,050 copies; and our receipts from subscriptions for the four months of the current year which have passed show a gain over the same months for the preceding year of $438. This, to be sure, is a distinct advancement, and we highly appreciate the assistance which our friends and patrons have so kindly given us, but in view of the increased work we have put into the paper, setting it up in small type and carrying much more matter than hitherto, we feel that the gain shown is not in proportion to the enlarged outlay we have been making. As now printed an issue of the Advocate costs considerably more than heretofore.

In fixing the subscription price at $1.50 for single subscribers and $1.25 in clubs, the management of the Advocate is making a test of the possibility of issuing a cheap paper, for which there has been such a widespread and insistent demand. In undertaking this, it was fully realized that we were going contrary to the course being pursued by nearly all of our contemporaries, and that the venture was by no means certain of success; but in the interest of the Church we desired to send the paper into as many homes as possible, and thereby make its influence more far-reaching for good. We indulged the hope, of course, that the reduced price would so increase the circulation that this policy would not prove financially unwise.

The situation at present may be summed up in a few words: The Advocate in its present form cannot be published at its present price without a largely-increased subscription list. With less than 10,000 subscribers, the basis upon which we are now operating is unsound and impracticable. Should our circulation remain stationary, but two alternatives are possible: we shall either have to advance the subscription price to $2, or issue a cheap and shoddy paper. The latter thing, of course, is not to be thought of; hence we must either add a large number of names to our subscription files, or an advance in price is inevitable. Four thousand subscribers at $2 would be much better financially for the management than 7,000 or 8,000 at $1.25. But it would not be better for the Church. If ever there was a time when Methodism needed wholesome literature in the homes of her people, it is now when vicious periodicals assailing missions and the most sacred teachings of Christianity are being scattered broadcast over the land. To be forced to adopt a contraction policy at such an hour, would be most unfortunate. It would be to make retreat when everything calls for steady and aggressive advancement.

But in view of existing conditions, what can be done to obviate this necessity? It can be averted only by our friends throughout our entire territory pressing energetically the claims of the Advocate. Our reliance is mainly upon them. Were we to put an agent in the field, his salary and expenses would, according to our calculation, amount to more than the increase resulting from his labors. Charged wholly with the responsibility of procuring matter for the Advocate, working much of it over, and forced to do much writing for its columns, the editor's hands are more than full in the office, and the extent to which he can get out must necessarily be quite limited. So the only hope lies in our busy, burdened pastors and the faithful laymen numbered among our constituency. Grateful for what they have already done, to them we make our earnest appeal. We desire especially that an effort be made to collect arrearages and procure new subscribers in every charge. Under the law many will have to be dropped soon unless paid up. Shall we not work energetically together to build up a vigorous and creditable organ to voice the sentiments and champion the cause of Methodism? If this is done, the Church will be the chief beneficiary. The editor is working for several hundred dollars less than he has received in a number of years; nor is he expecting more. The publisher has his heart in the work; nor is he sparing himself in serving the Advocate and the Church. The cause is a common one in which the prosperity of our beloved Zion is to no small extent involved. Let us unitedly take hold of it and carry it triumphantly forward to success. The many sacred interests committed to our hands demand that we do so; the voice of twentieth-century Methodism bids us rise up and press the battle all along the line. The goal at which we are aiming is 10,000 bona fide subscribers, and we earnestly ask the assistance of every Methodist in Mississippi and Louisiana in reaching it. Six additional subscribers (with renewals of those already on our list) from every pastoral charge would put us well across the line; and surely to ask for that number is not unreasonable. The campaign is on, and we hope soon to hear from every part of the field.

Hereafter we will carry continuously a list of those who have sent in twenty or more subscribers during the year. Those who have done so up to the present are as follows:

Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.; Rev. W. L. Duren, Tupelo, Miss.; Rev. J. M. Carpenter, Booneville, Miss.; Rev. D. H. Crowson, Randolph, Miss.; Rev. W. E. Dickens, Pelahatchie, Miss.; Rev. T. H. Dorsey, West Point, Miss.; Rev. R. A. Ellis, Yazoo City, Miss.; Rev. W. G. Harbin, Haynesville, La.; Rev. W. S. Lagrone, Greenville, Miss.; Rev. T. W. Lewis, Columbus, Miss.; Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, Indianola, Miss.; Rev. S. B. Myers, Louisville, Miss.; Rev. L. A. McKeown, Shaw, Miss.; Rev. J. D. McWhorter, Sallis, Miss.; Rev. J. E. Sampley, Rocky Springs, Miss.; Rev. O. L. Savage, Guntown, Miss.; Rev. C. F. Staples, Gibbsland, La.

CHURCH DIRECTORY.

New Orleans District, Rev. F. N. Parker, D.D., presiding elder; residence, 241 Oliver Street.

First Methodist Church, St. Charles Ave., near Callopo St.; Dr. S. H. Werlein, pastor; residence, 5530 Prytanla St.; phone, Uptown 323.

Rayne Memorial Church, St. Charles Ave. and General Taylor St.; Dr. John A. Rice, pastor; residence, 1421 Constantinople St.

Second Methodist Church, 2531 Burgundy, near Lafayette Ave.; Rev. A. I. Townsley, pastor; residence, 2728 N. Rampart St.; office hours, 9 to 11 a. m.; phone, Hemlock 978.

Parker Memorial, corner Nashville Ave. and Perrier St.; Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor; residence, 734 Nashville Ave.

Louisiana Avenue, cor. Louisiana Ave. and Magazine St.; Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor; residence, 2903 Camp St.; phone, Uptown 1291.

Felicity Street Church, cor. Felicity and Chestnut Sts.; Rev. Albert S. Lutz, pastor; residence, 1619 St. Mary St.; phone, Jackson 144.

Carrollton Avenue Church, cor. Carrollton Ave. and Elm St.; Rev. Henry T. Carley, pastor; residence, 1125 Fern St.; phone, Uptown 1238.

Algiers, Laverne Street, cor. Delaronde; Rev. J. F. Foster, pastor; residence, 214 Seguin.

McDonoghville and Mary Werlein; Rev. H. Whitehead, pastor; residence, 1619 St. Mary St.; phone, Jackson 144.

Epworth Church, cor. Banks and Scott Sts.; Rev. L. A. Sims, pastor; residence, 232 South Pierce St.

Rev. John L. Sutton, Superintendent Orphan Boy's Asylum; residence, 5220 St. Charles Ave.; phone, Uptown 128.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, Superintendent St. Mark's Hall, 619-21 Esplanade. Residence, 721 Henry Clay Avenue; phones: Residence, Uptown 2739; St. Mark's Hall, Hemlock 1458.

Rev. John T. Sawyer, D.D., residence, 2330 Valence St.; phone, Uptown 879.

R. F. Harrell, Secretary Y. M. C. A., 815 St. Charles St.

Memorize this package

It is the symbol of gelatine purity and will bring you joy and satisfaction each time it enters your home.

BOSTON
CRYSTAL GELATINE

"I can't keep house without it."

Crystal Gelatine will save you more pin money than any other article of food you can buy. Each package makes two quarts of delicious, "tender" jelly, which is truly as "clear as crystal". Simple to prepare, never curdles, agrees with the most delicate stomach. Thousands will use no other kind.

Ask your dealer. Free sample for your dealer's name.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.
121 A Beverly St.,
BOSTON, MASS.

PARALYSIS Locomotor Ataxia. Conquer it! Lose Chase's Blood & Nerve Tablets does it. Write for Proof. Advice Free. Dr. CHASE, 224 North 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

ESTABLISHED 1858
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

BLMYER BELL CHURCH BELLS
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Bowlden CHURCH & SCHOOL BELLS
Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA. THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1910.

C. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

VOL. 57—No. 20.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2832.

General Conference

THIRD DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

At 9 a. m. Friday, May 6, the Conference was called to order by Bishop E. R. Hendrix. The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. E. D. Moulton, and after the reading of the minutes Bishop J. S. Key took the chair. On the call of Conferences a number of petitions, memorials, and resolutions were presented. From twenty-two Conferences there came memorials and petitions on granting women the rights of the laity. Some of these Conferences presented only several of these memorials, but of a large number it is said, "a shower of memorials on woman's rights."

Bishop Hoss presented the report of the Commission on Federation. This report stated that, at the meeting of the Commission on Federation from the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Cincinnati, April 13, 1910, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved that we recommend to our respective General Conferences the following action, amending the action taken by the said General Conferences at their last session: That the growth of the spirit of fraternity and of practical federation between evangelical churches in many communities, and especially in this country between the Methodist Episcopal Church and the M. E. Church, South, requires the creation of a Federal Council for these two Churches, which, without interfering with the autonomy of either Church, and having no legislative functions, shall yet be invested with advisory powers in regard to world-wide missions, Christian education, and the evangelization of the unchurched masses; and, furthermore, in order to carry into effect the purpose of the two General Conferences in the creation of the Commission on Federation, and to secure the direct application of the conclusions reached in the work of said Commission, shall also have full power to hear and finally determine, without appeal from its decisions, all cases of conflict or misunderstanding between the two branches of Methodism."

It is the earnest hope of your Commission that this measure of peace and charity may meet your cordial approval. Surely it is the will of God that all Methodists everywhere should adjust their differences, if any exist between them, on the basis of mutual confidence and good will.

A. W. WILSON, Chairman.

E. E. HOSS, Secretary.

This report was referred to the Committee on the State of the Church.

Sunday, May 8th, was made a day of prayer for divine guidance in the election of Bishops.

Dr. Haven of the American Bible Society, reported that remarkable progress had been made during the past four years, and that larger plans than ever were being laid to meet the growing demand. He also announced that Mrs. Russell Sage had paid over the $500,000 that she had promised when the American Bible Society should meet the condition.

A number of reports were submitted by the Committee on Boundaries, the Committee on Church Extension, and the Committee on the Laymen's Movement. These reports all went to the calendar for later action.

SATURDAY, FOURTH DAY.

The General Conference was called to order at 9 o'clock. Bishop Joseph S. Key in the chair. Rev. J. W. Tyler, of the Texas Conference conducted the devotional service. The minutes of the session of Friday were read, and after several corrections had been made, the minutes were adopted.

Bishop Warren A. Candler took the chair, and presided during the remainder of the session of the day.

The following resolution was presented and read, and was adopted by a rising vote:

Whereas, Edward VII, King of Great Britain and Ireland, and Emperor of India, ruler in the land in which Methodism had its earthly birth, departed this life yesterday, therefore, be it resolved,

First—That we tender respectful sympathy to her majesty, Queen and Empress Alexandria, who now wears "sorrow's crown of sorrows," and pray that divine comfort may sustain her, and that she may long continue that gracious life by which in the past she has ennobled royalty.

Second—That we mourn with the British Wesleyan Church, and with her messenger to us, Dr. J. S. Simons, and with other Methodists of Great Britain and Ireland in their grief at the death of one who reigned more in their hearts than over their actions.

Third—That we sorrow with all Christendom on the falling on sleep of the king, whose lifework was to do his duty, and who was understood to stand strongly for peace among the nations.

Fourth—That we trust the successor to the throne, George the Fifth, may catch and wear the mantle of peace-maker king, and be guided from on high in ruling the great people whom he has been called to serve.

Fifth—That copies of these resolutions be handed to Dr. Simon, and to the ambassador of England to our country for transmission to those for whom our hearts go out in tender sympathy.

Rev. W. R. Young, fraternal messenger from the Methodist Church in Canada, was introduced and spoke briefly to the Conference. He expressed his pleasure at being present at this Conference, and also expressed his appreciation of the sympathy of this Conference on account of the death of King Edward.

Rev. John S. Simon, fraternal messenger from the British Wesleyan Church, also expressed appreciation in behalf of the Church which he represents, on account of this resolution of sympathy.

The secretary read the report of Bishop Warren A. Candler as the fraternal messenger from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the British Wesleyan Church, at the great gathering of that Church held in York in 1898, and this report was adopted.

The presence of Hon. T. J. Jarvis, a lay delegate of the North Carolina Conference, was noted, also the presence of lay delegates in several other Conferences was noted.

Item 3, of rule 2, was called and the secretary called the alphabetical roll of the Conference for the presentation of memorials, appeals, and petitions, and a number of petitions and memorials were presented.

A memorial from the West Virginia Conference was read asking that, in view of the difficulties to be met in order to carry on effectively the work of this Annual Conference, a committee be appointed at this session of the General Conference, this committee to consist of one Bishop, three members of the West Virginia Conference, and one member of each of the adjoining Conferences, Virginia, Kentucky, Holston, and Baltimore Conferences. The appointment of this committee was requested, believing that as a result of the advisory counsel of such a committee the difficult problems now facing the Western Virginia Conference can be solved more quickly and more satisfactorily.

W. F. McMurray submitted the quadrennial report of the Woman's Home Mission Society. This report was referred to the committee on Church Extension. The committee on boundaries also submitted report No. 1.

This report related to the petition presented by the Northwest Texas Conference asking for a division of the Conference. The committee reported concurrence in the request, and the report was adopted. In the division, the Southern part of the present Conference will be known as the Central Texas Conference, while the Northern part will continue to be the original name—Northwest Texas Conference.

W. R. Lambuth presented the report of the special commission appointed at the last General Conference to report at this session as to the advisability of uniting the foreign and home interests of the Church, including the separate work in these interests which the women of the Church are now doing. The report read recommended that such a union be effected, but that the work of the Church Extension interests continue to be carried on under separate management.

The report commended highly the work of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, and referred to it as a providential movement.

W. F. Tillitt presented a resolution providing that the book editor of the Church publish a complete directory each year of all the clerical members of each Annual Conference in the Church. The resolution provided further that the secretary of each Annual Conference every year immediately after the close of the session, furnish the book editor with a complete list of the preachers in the Conference, including their addresses.

The committee on revisals submitted a report concerning the petition requesting that delegates to the Annual Conference be elected by the Quarterly Conferences and the Church Conferences. The committee reported non-concurrence.

The committee on revisals also submitted a report concerning the petition requesting that stewards be elected by the Church Conference. The committee reported non-concurrence.

The reports were adopted.

The special committee on rules submitted a report that was adopted.

A resolution was presented recommending that the Conference meet in regular session Monday evening next for the purpose of hearing the fraternal address of Rev. W. R. Young, D.D., of the Methodist Church in Canada, and that on Wednesday evening the Conference hold a regular session for the purpose of hearing the fraternal address of Rev. John S. Simon, D.D., of the British Wesleyan Church.

A petition recommending the extension of the time limit, at the discretion of the presiding Bishop, provided there is unanimous consent on the part of the presiding elders, was presented, and was referred to the committee on itinerancy.

A number of the petitions presented favored the granting of the rights of the laity to the women of the Church.

Under the call of the Conferences for petitions recommending changes in the Discipline very few were presented.

Conference adjourned at 1 o'clock.

MONDAY, FIFTH DAY.

The Conference was called to order at 9 o'clock. Bishop Warren A. Candler in the chair. Rev. David W. Carter, of the Mexican Border Mission, conducted the devotional service with which the session opened.

Bishop H. C. Morrison took the chair, and presided. On motion, the action of the Conference Saturday revising the section in the Discipline with reference to the equal division of Church Extension funds between Annual and General Conference Boards was reconsidered, and the resolution was referred to the committee on Church Extension for consideration.

The request for the action of the Conference to be reconsidered was made upon the ground that the change as effected rendered the wording both confusing and contradictory.

W. F. McMurray spoke to the question and said that the only desire for revision of the section was in order to enable the Annual Conferences to retain all overplus of Church Extension funds in the Annual Conferences, without division with the General Conference Boards.

The secretary of the Conference read several telegrams to the Conference recommending the rights of the laity to the women of the Church.

The secretary read also a telegram of greeting from Bishop Oscar P. Fitzgerald, whose illness prevented his attendance at the Conference.

The next call was for reports from standing committees. The publishers of The Daily Christian Advocate were instructed to print the calendar of the Conference in the issue of each day.

A resolution was presented recommending that the Sunday before Labor Day be observed as "Labor Sunday," and that upon that day pastors be requested to preach sermons appropriate to the labor question now agitating the country. The resolution was adopted.

The committee on publishing interests submitted a report in which it concurred in the petition that a directory of the traveling preachers be published each year by the book editor, also concurrence with the petition that a more complete edition of the Psalms be published in the Methodist Hymn Book.

Bishop Hendrix at this juncture presented, to Bishop Morrison, three representatives of the United Methodist Church in Japan: Bishop Y. Honda, of Tokio; Rev. M. Hori, of Tokio; and Rev. Y. Tamaka, of Kiota. Rev. Mr. Hori is the fraternal messenger from the Methodist Church in Japan to this General Conference.

The report of the Sunday school committee submitted showed that the number of members now enrolled in the Sunday schools of the Church is 1,393,903, showing a gain over the gain in Church membership of 35,748.

The secretary read a report of the committee on appeals, which recommended that a new trial be granted in the appeal of C. W. Gow, of the Missouri Conference.

The Conference adjourned at 1 o'clock, Rev. John S. Simon, D.D., pronouncing the benediction.

TUESDAY, SIXTH DAY.

The General Conference was called to order at 9 o'clock, with Bishop Morrison in the chair. Rev. J. W. Tarboug, D.D., of Brazil, conducted the devotional service. The minutes of the session of Monday were read, and after several corrections, were adopted.

Bishop E. Embree Hoss took the chair.

Mr. T. L. Jefferson, president of the board of Church Extension, was presented and was introduced to the Conference.

On motion, it was ordered that when the Conference adjourns the morning session, it do so to meet at 8 o'clock in the evening for the purpose of hearing the presentation of the cause of Church Extension by several speakers.

The call of Annual Conferences was made for the presentation of memorials, appeals, and petitions, and those presented were referred to the proper committees.

The call was not made for the reports of connectional officers and standing committees. A report of the committee on Church Extension, recommending the placing of an assessment upon the Church for the purpose of erecting a Church in Washington City was presented and it became the center of an interesting debate. The report recommended that an assessment amounting to two and one-half cents per member be raised annually during the next quadrennium for this purpose.

Several speeches were made in opposition to the report and several in favor of its adoption. One speaker recommended that the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the Church use special effort in the direction of the erection of this representative Church in Washington City.

Rev. Collins Denny expressed his opinion on this subject clearly and concisely in the following words: "We ought to do this thing and we can do it." Dr. Denny said that he deemed it unnecessary for the Church to erect a building of great expense at first.

On motion of J. C. Wilson, a collection was taken for the relief of sufferers on account of the mine disaster at Palos, Ala. The collection amounted to $167.45.

Mr. T. H. Yun, of Korea, was introduced to the Conference.

The report of Rev. J. H. McKoy, who was the fraternal messenger from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Canada at the meeting of the latter body held in 1906, was read and adopted.

The committee on boundaries submitted a report in which they concurred with the request from the Arizona District that a Conference be formed, to be known as the Arizona Conference. The committee concurred also in the request from the Oklahoma Conference, asking for a division of that Conference and ordered that such a division be made at any time that such a division might be deemed wise during the coming four years.

A communication from the Publicity League, of Louisville, Ky., was read extending an invitation to the General Conference to hold its next session in that city. The communication was referred to the committee on General Conference entertainment.

The committee on revisions submitted a report stating concurrence with the petition that the Psalter in the Methodist Hymn Book be revised. A resolution was adopted by which Rev. W. F. Tillett, dean of the Biblical Department of the Vanderbilt University, and Rev. Gross Alexander, Book Editor, constitute the committee to revise the Psalter as it is to appear in the Hymn Book.

Conference adjourned at 12:45, Bishop Hoss pronouncing the benediction.

WEDNESDAY, SEVENTH DAY.

The Conference met at 9 o'clock, Bishop E. E. Hoss, in the chair. After devotional exercises which Rev. T. C. Sauler conducted, the minutes of the session of Tuesday were read and adopted.

Bishop James Atkins then took the chair and presided throughout the remainder of the session.

On motion, the Conference reconsidered its action of Tuesday regarding report No. 2 of the committee on publishing interests, with reference to the petition for the publication of a more complete edition of the Psalms in the Methodist Hymn Book. The petition came from the Virginia Conference. The action of the Conference was reconsidered and the report of the committee was recommitted to the committee on publishing interests for further consideration.

The following letter of Bishop Joseph S. Key was read at this point and was referred to the committee on Episcopacy:

"Dear Fathers and Brothers:

"Twenty-four years ago, at Richmond, Va., the General Conference laid on me the responsibility and work of one of its Bishops. In all fidelity of purpose and singleness of eye, I have sought to serve the Church and meet my obligations. My busy life has passed so swiftly and silently that, without realizing it, I find myself to-day near the eighty-first year of age. My health is perfect, thank God. My head is clear, my heart is warm, and my love and interest for our beloved Church grows with the years.

"But I realize that a Methodist Bishop at eighty years is an unreliable asset. The calendar is inexorable. The son of a Methodist preacher, born in a parsonage, the grandson of a preacher and the father of two preacher-sons, and educated in a Church college, and with a record of sixty-two years of unbroken service, I ask in the fear of God, and with perfect respect and love to all, that you grant me the release from the official and routine duties of the Episcopacy, and pass my commission to a younger and stronger man.

JOSEPH S. KEY"

The roll call of the Conference was made for the presentation of memorials, appeals and petitions. The next call was for the reports of standing committees and the committee on itinerancy in this convention presented the following report, which will be of interest to the Church in every part of its territory and will be of interest also to a large per cent of ministers and laymen in other denominations.

The minority report, which follows, was read also. After the reading of both reports were referred to the calendar to be taken up in their regular order unless a motion should be made and should prevail to take them up at a special time.

Report No. 2—Committee on Itinerancy.

We, your committee on itinerancy, beg leave to submit the following report. We have had before us a resolution signed by James Cannon, Jr., E. H. Rawlings, C. M. Bishop and O. E. Brown, asking for the amendment of paragraph 99 of the Discipline, as follows:

To fix the appointments of preachers in the Annual Conference: Provided he shall not allow any preacher to remain in the same circuit or station more than four years successively, except the preachers stationed at Key West, Florida Conference, the connectional officers, the supernumerary and superannuated preachers, missionaries among the Indians and on foreign stations or in the employ of the Annual Conference Board of Missions, Japanese preachers in the Japan Mission Conference, chaplains to State prisons and military posts, those preachers that may be appointed to labor for the special benefit of seamen, for the American Bible Society, for the Sunday school League of America, for any institution having the care of orphan and homeless children, and the presidents, principals or teachers of seminaries under our superintendence; and when requested by an Annual Conference, to appoint a preacher for a longer time than four years to any seminary of learning not under our care; also an agent to travel throughout the bounds of such Conferences for the purpose of establishing and aiding Sunday schools and distributing tracts; and an agent or agents for the benefit of our literary and benevolent institutions; a general colporteur agent or general colporter and the editor of annual conference organs: Provided, further, that upon the request of all the presiding elders of any conference over which he is presiding, he may in his discretion appoint a preacher to any circuit or station for a longer time than four years successively.

We recommend concurrence.

Following is the minority report of committee on itinerancy No. 2:

The undersigned minority of the committee on itinerancy beg leave most respectfully to dissent from the judgment of a majority and offer as a substitute for their report the following:

Having carefully considered all the memorials and resolutions submitted on the subject of a time limit, we recommend the concurrence in the memorial from the North Georgia Conference and the South

Georgia Conference, which ask that no change be made in the Discipline on this subject.

The committee on appeals submitted report No. 2, as follows:

Your committee on appeals has had before it the appeal of C. W. Creighton of South Carolina, and the appeal is disallowed. E. R. HENDRIX, Chm.

R. A. MEEK, Secretary.

Rev. A. M. Parker, D.D., the senior missionary of the church in China, was at this point introduced to the Conference. Dr. Parker has spent more than thirty years in China; he has been closely identified with the civic and religious life of the empire, and his work as missionary has been crowned with success. His church at home and the Chinese among whom he labors hold him in the highest esteem and impose on him the greatest confidence.

W. N. Ainsworth announced that Rev. W. R. Young, D.D., fraternal messenger to the General Conference from the Methodist Church in Canada, had found it necessary to leave the city within a few hours, and that he therefore decided to make a few farewell remarks to the Conference. This request was granted and Dr. Young, expressed again the pleasure he had experienced in being present at this Conference and his appreciation of the courtesies and honors extended him while here. He spoke in the highest terms of the Bishops of the Church, of the prospective Bishops, and of all with whom he had been brought into association during his stay in this city. He said also that he would take back to his church the many fraternal expressions he had heard while here concerning the Methodist Church in Canada, and said that his church would await with pleasure the coming of the fraternal messenger from this Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the General Conference that is to be held in Ottawa, Canada, in August of the present year.

Bishop Atkins responded to the remarks of Dr. Young on behalf of the Conference.

A communication from ministers and laymen in Florida was read, extending to the Conference an invitation to hold the next session in Tampa. Accompanying this was a similar invitation from the Tampa Board of Trade. Both invitations were referred to the committee on General Conference entertainment.

The special committee on the Western Virginia Conference submitted a report recommending that $2500 be expended at once in meeting the special conditions in that Conference, which conditions must be met, if the work of the M. E. Church, South, is to go forward in that territory. The report also recommended that the Bishops of the Church spend as much time in that territory as possible.

A resolution, offered with reference to the erection of a representative Church in Washington City was referred to the committee on Church Extension.

A lengthy discussion followed the report which the Sunday school committee submitted and in which certain changes in the Discipline were recommended. One of these changes suggested would, as it appeared to some of the delegates, confer too much power on the Sunday School Board of the Church and J. W. Perry and C. H. Briggs spoke against the same. They argued that the conditions to be met in the various phases of the work of the local Church can be met best by the pastors of the Church.

Conference adjourned at 1 o'clock, Bishop Wilson pronouncing the benediction.

THURSDAY, EIGHTH DAY.

The eighth day's session began with Bishop Atkins in the chair. After devotional exercises, conducted by Mr. John R. Pepper, Bishop Wilson took the chair.

Rev. W. R. Lambuth made a report of his mission as fraternal delegate to the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America. His address was well received, and this Church promised to cooperate with ours in missionary work in Africa, both with money and men.

Reports from many committees were received and placed on the calendar.

The report of the Committee on Temperance asking Congress and the President to enact the Curtis-Miller Bill, which seeks to restrict the interstate commerce in liquors, was adopted by a standing vote.

J. N. Cole, E. V. Register, W. N. Ainsworth, C. H. Briggs and C. H. Ireland were appointed the Committee for the Entertainment of the next General Conference.

Rev. T. A. Kerley, A. J. Lamar, B. C. Horton, G. C. Loch and J. M. Vadeit were appointed a commission to meet at the Publishing House on the call of the chairman, and prepare suitable blanks for the reports of pastors to the Annual Conference.

When the Conference adjourned, the Sunday school report was under discussion, and paragraph ix had just been adopted, the most essential features of which were the authorizing of adult Bible classes, and providing for a connectional relationship, and the taking from the Board of Education of the 10 per cent hitherto paid to it, and directing that it should be added to the funds being used for the endowment of the Chair of Religious Pedagogy and Sunday schools in Vanderbilt.

The Conference adjourned with the benediction by Bishop Wilson.

FRIDAY, NINTH DAY.

Bishop A. W. Wilson called the Conference to order promptly at 9 o'clock. After devotional service conducted by Dr. J. W. Boswell, and the reading of the minutes, Bishop E. R. Hendrix took the chair.

A telegram was received from the Southern Baptist Convention, sending brotherly greetings.

The Committee on Episcopacy submitted their report, paying tribute to the bishops that have died during the quarter: John C. Granbery, William W. Duncan, Charles B. Galloway, A. Coke Smith, John J. Tigert and Seth Ward each receiving due tribute. The report was put at once on its passage, and adopted by a rising vote.

Dr. Chas. M. Stuart, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate; Dr. C. B. Spencer, editor of the Central Christian Advocate, and Bishop John H. Vincent, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, were introduced to the Conference.

The report of the Committee on Episcopacy, ordering the election of seven bishops, was received and adopted.

Rev. M. Hori, the fraternal messenger from the Methodist Church of Japan, made his address. The bishop stated that there were on the platform representatives from every continent, except Australia, and afterwards the Conference joined in singing, "Blest be the tie that binds."

Report No. 2 of the Committee on Boundaries, dividing the Brazil Mission Conference into two Annual Conferences—the Brazil Conference and the South-Brazil Conference—was adopted.

After a prolonged debate, the Conference adopted the report of the Committee on Temperance and Social Reform, adding the following paragraph: "The Committee on Admission shall urge all applicants on trial to abstain from the use of tobacco for at least reasons of ministerial prudence." The Conference refused to adopt a paragraph which would have made mandatory the abstaining from tobacco by the preachers received on trial in the Annual Conference.

The session closed with singing the doxology, and with the benediction by Bishop Vincent.

(See Ninth Page for Notes.)

PREACHING.

By Rev. W. S. Harrison.

Preaching is the divinely appointed method of teaching divine truth. It was pre-eminently the method of Jesus. By his appointment it is to be continued through all time. And his presence assures success in every age and clime. "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

True preaching interprets Christ; his marvelous life; his amazing nature; his wonderful history. In this way God is made known. His wonderful attributes come into plain view the moment we learn the nature of the Christ. The awful fact of sin, the mysteries of redemption, and the fearful fact of individual responsibility to God; these and kindred subjects give to the preacher the highest place in the domain of thought.

The preacher's field of activity is on the Godward side of humanity. Such position involves great responsibility, and affords joy indescribable. In the floodtide of his discourse with his audience in complete rapport, no man is more thrilled with the certainty of God's presence and the fact of his own immortality—none whose vivid faith more illumines and unifies the whole field of truth—none whose inspiration more clearly grasps the essential virtues of both earth and heaven. He estimates earth at its real value and appreciates heaven; as that can be done only by the illuminating power of the Holy Spirit. He reaches here the high noon of human sanity. From such viewpoint all great truths appear in their real size and blend in delightful harmony.

The preacher appeals to all that is best in humanity. He interprets the will of God to men. It is his high vocation to persuade men to be reconciled to God. "He is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." The grandest thoughts, the strongest emotions and the purest motives, are the sharp tools of his craft—sharper than any steel—tempered in the workshop of heaven! Standing on the highest plane of morality and breathing the atmosphere of purity, he calls to his fellows to come up higher.

To the preacher belongs appropriately the purest type of speech. His should ever be the words of wisdom—words burning with earnestness, vital and tremulous with the weight of meaning. The cogent reasoning, the persuasive unction, the poetic fervor, the chastened and sanctified imagination, may all be used to attract men to the higher life. The poise of a never failing sanity may draw to his service the whole range of thought.

"Covet earnestly the best gifts." Surely the successful preacher has the very best gift; also, he has the sweetest experience known to men. More of God, more of the kingdom of heaven; more of ecstatic joy, enter the human soul in this than in any other employment. What sensations must have moved like shouting angels through the consciousness of men like Loyola, Whitefield, Beecher and Phillips Brooks. To them preaching was as natural as flight to the eagle, or swirl to the trout. And their thrilling experience was such as angels might covet. To see in the rapt faces of your hearers the genesis of better purposes; the birth throes of a new life; yea, to read there the sign manual of the Christ as the new name is given to know that he still receives sinners and eats with them, in the love feast of the soul—this is happiness!

The pulpit in the hands of God's chosen is a very dynamic of power. It wields an influence stronger than the thrones of kings and mightier than the decrees of senates. Away with the suggestion that because of the multiplied facilities for extending knowledge the pulpit must lose its high place as the leader in the world's progress! Here truly is a challenge to the Church to maintain a still higher per cent of sanctified intellect. Viewed in right relations, these wonderful appliances are aids rather than hindrances to successful preaching.

We are witnessing the fulfillment of the prophecy: "Many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased." Our increasing facilities for travel and communication, resulting in endless attrition of mind and mind, must result in vastly increased mental power. This increase is for the redemption of the Lord; let them say so. Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that he will send laborers, adequate laborers, into his harvest.

Starkville, Miss.

A CHALLENGE.

To the Pastors and Sunday School Superintendents of the Louisiana Conference.

Dear Brethren: That prince among Sunday school workers, Mr. John R. Pepper, of Memphis, has thrown out a challenge to all the Sunday school workers of Southern Methodism, which I herewith pass on to you.

Memphis, Tenn., April 21, 1910.

Prof. H. B. Carre,
Nashville, Tenn.

Dear Brother Chairman: I am writing you this purely unofficial letter about a matter that I regard as of vital importance to our general Sunday school interests at this time, viz.: The completion of the endowment of the Sunday school chair in Vanderbilt University as ordered by our last General Conference.

Now, as to the wisdom or desirability of that action there may be some difference of opinion, but as to loyally performing a thing set to be done by the greatest representative body of our Church, there should be no discussion. Personally I believe it to be one of the most far-reaching things for good undertaken during the past several decades.

It should have been accomplished this quadrimum; but because of much misunderstanding and lack of interest in some directions, it has not been done.

It can be finished this year if energetic, persistent, intelligent effort is made. Permit me to suggest to you as my fellow-conference chairman a few reasons why, and then the plan by which to complete the task and get it out of the way this year.

First, it would be a reflection on us as chairmen or presidents of Conference Boards, not to do a work ordered by our General Conference.

Second, it will permanently establish a chair through which all of our preachers in the theological department of Vanderbilt University will be trained in Sunday school work for generations to come.

Third, it will permit us to turn our funds and efforts to much-needed work in our several Conferences, for which I am sure the General Conference next month will make wise provision along very aggressive lines.

How to Do It: This Year as Per Conferences and Amounts Suggested Below.

Let 12 Conferences pay $1,500 each this year.	$18,000
Let 8 Conferences pay 1,200 each this year.	9,600
Let 7 Conferences pay 750 each this year.	5,250
Let 3 Conferences pay 500 each this year.	1,500
Let 3 Conferences pay 100 each this year.	300
Let 6 Conferences pay 75 each this year.	450
Total	$35,100

Conferences Paying the Following Amounts Each:

For $1,500—Alabama, Holston, Memphis, North Alabama, North Carolina, North Georgia, Northwest Texas, South Carolina, South Georgia, Tennessee, Virginia, Western North Carolina.

For $1,200—Little Rock, Louisville, Mississippi, North Mississippi, North Texas, Oklahoma, Texas.

For $750—Arkansas, Baltimore, Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana, St. Louis, Southwest Missouri.

For $500—West Texas, West Virginia, White River.

For $100—Illinois, Los Angeles, Pacific.

For $75—Columbia, Denver, East Columbia, German Mission, Montana, New Mexico.

The names and amounts are arranged according to numerical strength of the Sunday schools in Conferences as suggested, and this writer believes that with proper effort on our part as chairmen and with the real interest of pastors and superintendents every Conference can easily raise the amount suggested for it.

As you doubtless know, we have over 15,000 Sunday schools in our Church, and about 1,300,000 officers, teachers and scholars. So you will see that the aggregate of $35,100 means an average of less than $2.00 per school and less than 4 cents per member.

As chairman of the Memphis Conference I will pledge the maximum amount of $1500, to be paid this year if the chairman of the other conferences will accept this challenge and raise the amount suggested in each case.

Please let me hear from you and let us each one buckle down to it and write the record. We can do it and we will. Yours sincerely,

J. R. PEPPER.

According to the plan here proposed, the Sunday schools of our Conference are asked to raise the sum of $1500. Are we going to do it? Shall we not all say, "We can and we will"? Let us make this the slogan throughout our Conference for the next two months. Let it be heard through the Advocate, by our who have helpful suggestions. Beath to talk it up in your schools at once, and prepare for the celebration of Children's Day by prayer, education and consecration.

Let every superintendent write to Rev. H. R. Singleton, Alexandria, La., for Children's Day programs.

HENRY BEACH CARRE.

Chairman Ec. Conf. S. S. Board,
Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.

REV. HIRAM R. SINGLETON.

When I read the announcement of the death of this "holy man of God," I said, "Who ever knew Singleton and didn't love him?" Any way, because there was so much about him to love. So did the sentiment of love fill his being that, while he was a pastor in the pulpit on any occasion, it was with presenting the great theme of the Father's love that he arose to the highest eloquence. The writer has heard his strong, convincing and often overwhelming arraignment of sin, which caused his hearers to almost cry out, but it was when with enticing pathos he pleaded the consuming love of God for the prodigal sons that he reached the hearts of men, and impelled them to seek pardon for their sins. It was my privilege to first meet him in the summer of 1877, when he was assisting Rev. T. B. Robertson in a protracted service at Old Wesley Chapel in Yazoo County. At that time he was minister pastor of Rocky Springs Circuit. His appearance was so youthful that he looked a mere boy, but his utterances were so stirring and profound that they stood in wonder. Being a boy just returned from college and unsettled in my purposes (but not my convictions), it was this work and this personality that largely determined the course of my future years. Between us sprang up a bond of tenderest friendship which lasted throughout these years, though our pathways have not crossed at many points. It was ours to be entertained at the same firesides at the Conference sessions, and these were always happy and helpful days to the writer. Few have struggled against the infirmities of the flesh as he to preach the glad tidings of peace to men. The thorn in the flesh was always with him, but by the sufficient grace of God he overcame and pleaded the cause of his Lord. He sleeps in peace, and we mourn as we count another friend gone from our circle.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE.

For one year	$1.50
(Commission to agents 15 cents for each subscription.)
Six months	.75
To preachers	1.00
To widows of preachers	1.00

In order to help our friends circulate the Advocate, and to bring the paper within reach of our subscribers at the very lowest possible price, we have granted the privilege of a rate of $1.25 in clubs of five or more. Although we continue a club rate as a privilege, yet where our agents desire it, they may retain ten cents commission on each subscription, to cover expense of remitting, etc.

FOR SALE.

Theological Library: Hastings' Bible Dictionary, Strong's Concordance, Elliott's Commentary, Four Years' Course of Study, and other valuable books. Address L. I. 1128, Amelia St., New Orleans.

THE Grant Furniture Co.
THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that
— Lasts a LIFETIME —

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

Church News

The General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church will convene at Lewisburg, W. Va., May 19.

At LeFlore is strong among the Indians in Oklahoma. The first person of the Choctaws belongs to the Baptist Church, South.

The Southern Baptist Convention is in session at Baltimore. The past year has been a prosperous one for the Baptist Church.

Thirty years ago Uganda, Africa, was heathen and uncivilized. To-day it is said 350,000 of its inhabitants are Christian. Missionary work succeeds.

It has been announced that St. John's Church, Memphis, Tenn., will equip a department for institutional work at a cost of not less than $30,000.

The Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Church reports that last year was the best in its history. After meeting all obligations, it had a small balance in the treasury.

The Presbyterian Church has lost one of its strongest men and most liberal supporters in the death of Mr. John H. Converse. He was one of the great businessmen of the country, but he found time to help forward many religious and philanthropic movements.

The Episcopal Address, which was written by Bishop Hendrix, and read to the General Conference at Asheville, has attracted widespread mention and favor throughout the Church press. Especially flattering have been the comments of some of the papers of the M. E. Church.

The magnificent building of the Wesley Memorial Church, Atlanta, was formally opened last month. It is only a part of the great plant that Methodism has established in that city. Great cities can be taken for Christ only by great work. Suitable equipment is sadly needed in many of our cities.

An experiment in evangelistic work was the meeting recently in Paris, France, conducted by Gipsy Smith. It was held under the auspices of the National Free Church Council. The work was undertaken with much trepidation, but it is said the result was very gratifying. The hall was crowded, and hundreds signed pledge cards accepting Christ.

The Board of Conference Claimants of the Methodist Episcopal Church has made an appeal for a million dollars for superannuates in 1910-11. To secure this it will be necessary to raise about a quarter of a million dollars more than is in sight for this year. It is greatly to be hoped that this appeal will meet a hearty response on the part of the Church at large.

In the death of Dr. Alexander Maclaren, of London, a few days ago, the religious world has lost one of its greatest preachers. In the opinion of many competent critics, Dr. Maclaren was unexcelled in the exposition of the Scriptures. Expository preaching is difficult, but it is the kind that accomplishes lasting results. All preachers may well study the method of this great expositor.

The Men's National Missionary Congress of the United States, held its first meeting in Chicago, May 3-6. The attendance was large, and the missionary enterprise was forwarded by the work of the Congress. A declaration of policy was adopted which calls for a great increase in contributions, and in the number of workers in the foreign field. To carry out this policy in full will require 45 million dollars annually. This is a tremendous amount of money, but the evangelization of the world is a tremendous business.

JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Jackson District Conference convened in the Methodist Church at Canton, Miss., Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, April 27, 1910, with Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder, in the chair.

After religious services conducted by the presiding elder, J. E. Gray was elected secretary, with J. S. Purcell, assistant. The various committees were announced by the chair, and the Conference settled down to work.

Brother Jones announced a missionary program with various members of the Conference appointed to discuss live features of the great subject. All the discussions proved the wisdom of the presiding elder in their appointments and showed the thoroughness of preparation on the part of those to whom the work had been assigned.

The reports from the several pastoral charges showed a healthy religious condition throughout the district. No note of pessimism was heard, but from every point was heard the optimistic cry of "victory in the name of Christ, is ours."

Rev. H. A. Gatlin preached a most helpful sermon Tuesday evening before the Conference convened, and on Wednesday at 11 o'clock Rev. C. H. Ellis preached a notable and helpful sermon on missions. Then at the evening hour, Rev. C. W. Crisler preached a sermon that thrilled and edified us all. Thus closed the distinctly missionary program, and we were thereby the better prepared to proceed with the routine work of the Conference.

It has never been the privilege of the writer to look upon a District Conference made up so universally of young men—all consecrated, zealous and active. But we need the few older ones among us to "season the lump," and steady us in our wisdom.

The following young men were licensed to preach, viz: Simon Duncan Roberts and Hugh Andrew Warren, and both give promise of vast usefulness to the Church.

The following "connectional officers" were introduced and addressed the Conference in the interest of the institutions they represent respectfully: Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D., of Whitworth Female College; Rev. H. G. Hawkins, of Port Gibson Female College, and Prof. J. E. Walmsley, of Millsaps College.

The whole work of the Conference was harmonious throughout and our worthy and efficient presiding elder, Rev. J. R. Jones, made us all feel like he is one of us and more than ever endeared himself to us.

Another pleasant feature was the royal hospitality extended to us by our host, Rev. C. F. Emery (who is yet a young man) and his loyal flock.

The only sadness that marred our session was the absence of our "St. John," Rev. W. B. Lewis, whom God had called to a closer association with himself. We expect to see him again. Amen!

J. EARLY GRAY.

Benton, Miss.

THE CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Corinth District Conference convened in the Methodist Church at Blue Mountain, Miss., May 3, 1910, Rev. B. P. Jaco, presiding elder, in the chair. Each session was full of interest from start to finish. The aggressive policy of the presiding elder was heartily endorsed—the number of charges having increased in the district from seventeen or eighteen to twenty-eight during the last three years. The trustees of the district parsonage were authorized to sell the property at Booneville, Miss., and to buy at Corinth, Miss. We were delighted to have with us the Rev. J. H. Felts, Jno. R. Countiss, G. W. Bachman, R. P. Neblett.

G. B. Love was licensed to preach. The following persons were recommended to the Annual Conference on trial: James Dennis Bogg, William Newton Dodds, William Wiley Hartfield, James Riley James. Dr. F. F. Carmack, R. M. Weaver, F. E. Ray, J. T. Gullett were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. Dr. J. Y. Young and W. D. Bass, alternates.

An interesting feature of the meeting was a debate on the subject, resolved, "That the W. H. M. Society should have precedence in time and place over the W. F. M. Society. Affirmative: Miss Mattie G. Reynolds and Rev. W. D. Shearer. Negative: Miss Etta Murry and Rev. J. H. Bass. The decision of the judge was that both were of equal importance.

F. E. Ray was elected leader of the Laymen's Missionary Movement in the district.

All of the preachers in the district were present except one.

The next session will be held at Myrtle, Miss.

The hospitality of Blue Mountain was fully equal to the occasion. We are all indebted to the pastor, Rev. J. H. Bass, for his untiring attention.

We were very materially aided by the courtesy of Rev. R. A. Kinbrough, pastor of the Baptist Church, in extending the Conference the use of their handsome brick church for the hours of public worship.

O. L. SAVAGE, Sec.

NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The opening sermon of the Newton District Conference will be preached in the Methodist Church, Newton, Miss., Monday evening, at 8 o'clock, June 6, 1910, by Rev. W. A. Hays. The business session will open Tuesday morning, June 7, at 9 o'clock, and adjourn Friday afternoon, June 10.

Committee on License to Preach and Recommendation for Admission on Trial—J. M. Weems, D.D., H. F. Tolle, G. W. Mars.

Recommendation for Orders—W. W. Graves, J. F. McClellan, W. H. Lane.

Spiritual State of the Church—H. Mellard, chairman.

Books and Periodicals—L. F. Alford, chairman.

Financial System—A. M. Broadfoot, chairman.

Foreign Missions—W. J. Dawson, chairman.

Domestic Missions—H. F. Tolle, chairman.

Sunday Schools—B. F. Ormond, chairman.

Education—W. W. Moore, chairman.

Epworth Leagues—E. L. Whiddon, chairman.

American Bible Society—A. B. Barry, chairman.

Temperance—N. B. Harmon, chairman.

Quarterly Conference Records—H. E. Carter, chairman.

GET ALL THAT'S COMING TO YOU.

You don't get it when you buy loose or bulk coffee, or coffee by the pound wrapped up in a paper bag. The least exposure to the air lets strength, aroma and flavor escape—all that makes coffee worth while. You get what is left and you get badly left if you think you are getting all you pay for. BUY the coffee of double strength, crisp and fresh in its air-tight can, a little higher in price, perhaps, than the loose article, but really cheaper and infinitely more satisfying. Every good grocer sells it.

LUZIANNE COFFEE

THE REILY-TAYLOR CO.
New Orleans.

Due prominence will be given to the Laymen's Missionary Movement, the Women's Missionary Societies, and religious exercises. Let all come praying that the Conference may be a great spiritual feast.

T. J. O'NEIL, P. E.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Brookhaven District Conference will be held at Prentiss, Miss., June 7-10, 1910. The opening sermon will be preached Tuesday, June 7, at 8 p.m., by Rev. Paul D. Hardin. The Conference will open in business session Wednesday at 8:30 a.m. The following committees have been appointed:

License to Preach—W. L. Fennell, H. M. Ellis and O. G. Halliburton.

Admission on Trial—H. B. Watkins, W. M. Sullivan and D. Scarborough.

For Orders—J. G. Galloway, P. D. Hardin and C. N. Gulce.

Let the pastors call the attention of their delegates to the time of meeting, and urge them to attend the Conference. Local preachers holding membership within the district will be expected to report to the Conference.

J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Meridian District Conference will convene at the Fifth Street Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., May 30. The opening sermon will be preached at 7:45 p.m. by Rev. W. G. Forsyth.

Tuesday, the 31st, will be devoted to a Missionary Institute; two hours. Wednesday, June 1, will be given over to the Sunday school, and the interests of the Epworth League will be discussed Thursday. The Conference will adjourn Friday at noon. Each session of the Conference will be opened with a devotional half-hour, and 3 p.m. and 7:45 p.m. each day will be set apart for the preaching of the gospel. The following committees have been appointed:

License to Preach—G. S. Harmon, W. W. Lewis, S. N. Young.

Admission on Trial—B. F. Jones, D.D.; H. J. Maddox, R. H. Barr.

Deacons and Elders' Orders—W. H. LaPrade, D.D.; W. G. Forsythe, J. D. Ellis.

The brethren are requested to remember the Conference in their daily devotions.

W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

We are sure there are persons who have means which they desire to give to some worthy enterprise of the Church, and yet they desire to draw an income from the same during their lifetime.

The Board of Trustees of the Mississippi Conference Training School upon certain conditions has authorized me as financial agent to give to persons complying with the conditions six, seven, or eight per cent on donations. The Board can use several thousand dollars according to this plan. Write for particulars.

WALDO W. MOORE,
Financial Agent.

Montrose, Miss.

ORPHANAGE DIRECTORS TO MEET.

The Board of Directors of The Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home will meet at the Home, in Jackson, Miss., at 3 o'clock p.m., Tuesday, June 7, 1910.

J. B. STREATER, Secy.

Secular News and Comment

The persecution of the Jews in Russia seems to have no end. An order has been issued requiring a large number to leave Kiev by June 14.

An uprising of the Taos Pueblo Indians is reported in New Mexico. The bloody massacres of the past have taught their lesson, and stringent measures have been taken to bring the Indians into subjection.

Ireland is not usually thought of as being especially favorable to the total abstinence movement, but the statement has recently been made that there are nearly 400,000 members of total abstinence societies in that country.

New Orleans will soon open her first public baths. This is a municipal improvement that has been found valuable in many large cities. In certain sections of all large cities facilities for bathing are limited, and public baths properly conducted are a great blessing.

Pellagra is a disease that has recently been found to be prevalent in some sections of the country. It was supposed to have its origin in the eating of corn bread made from moldy meal, but an Italian scientist now claims to have discovered the germ in water. Its real origin is still in doubt.

There is a spirited rivalry between New Orleans and San Francisco for the World's Panama Exposition to be held in 1915. The President of the United States seems to have given his influence in favor of San Francisco, but the citizens of New Orleans hope to win the approval of Congress.

The Mohonk Lake Conference is in its sixteenth annual session this week. This Conference is held for the purpose of promoting the movement for international arbitration. Many of the prominent educators and statesmen of the country will deliver addresses in the interest of this great cause.

The Florida, the greatest battleship ever launched in American waters, slipped from the ways of the Brooklyn Navy Yard last Thursday. She is 510 feet long, has a displacement of 21,000 tons, is driven by engines of 23,000 horse power, and is expected to attain a speed of more than 20 knots an hour. She carries a main battery of ten 12-inch guns, with a broadside of sixteen 5-inch rifles. Her crew will consist of 60 officers and 954 men.

The temperance movement grows throughout the world. Last year the total expenditure for strong drink in the United Kingdom was $780,000,000. This is a large amount, but it is a decrease of $30,000,000 over the year before. The actual decrease in the consumption of liquor was even larger than is indicated by these figures, however, on account of the increase of price. People are gaining in wisdom as to the evils of intoxicants.

The Panama Canal Commission has just launched two boats built of re-enforced concrete and weighing 60,000 lbs. Two others will soon follow. These vessels are unaffected by marine insects, sea vegetation does not adhere to them and they are practically indestructible. While it is said that these concrete boats are stronger, more durable, and even lighter than a strongly-built wooden boat, yet most of us would feel as skeptical about them as a former generation was about boats of iron.

A few weeks ago, a Japanese submarine boat sank, and the entire crew suffocated. When the boat was raised, a written report from the commander, Lieutenant Satsumi, was found, giving all the details of the accident. He described the endeavors that the officers and crew had made to raise the boat, and the slow approach of suffocation. The pitiful story, written in the face of impending death, and without the slightest mark of fear, is a remarkable tribute to the discipline and courage in the Japanese Navy.

The high price of all food commodities is of the most far-reaching importance in its effect upon the general welfare of the people. Much discussion has been indulged in as to the cause of the high cost of living, and as to measures that may bring about a change. There seems to be no satisfactory conclusion. Undoubtedly in some lines the supply is not equal to the demand, and naturally that raises the price. The press dispatches state that arrangements have recently been completed for the importation of cattle on a large scale into the United States from Honduras. This may ultimately have some effect on the price of meat.

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside, $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

XII.

In November, 1870, we moved from near Williamsburg, in Covington County, where we had lived during the time I was presiding elder, to Holmesville, Pike County. We left our first-born son, Willie, behind when we moved from Williamsburg.

In the summer of 1869 he had a severe attack of sickness. I was away from home on my district. At Sylvestra I came in contact with a severe type of flux. After reaching home, I took the disease and came near dying. Little Willie, who was just up from his spell, was much about my bed; he took the disease, and in a week's time breathed his last. He came as near being a little saint as any child I ever saw. Not long before he died he sang, "I want to be an angel." It being our first loss of the kind, we found it hard to give him up. But God reminds us that "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

My parents were old and feeble, and they desired me to take charge of their home and farm, with a promise that I should fall heir to same when they passed away. Really, I did not know what to do. To comply with their request, I would have to give up the district. After considering the matter prayerfully, I decided to comply with their request. So we moved to Holmesville and lived there twelve years, during which time I served Franklinton, China Grove, Holmesville, Magnolia and Amite charges. I was five years in charge of Holmesville Church, where my parents hold membership. Many of the best people of the church passed peacefully away while I was pastor there. Among the number was my precious mother, who died Dec. 30, 1875, and devoted father, who fell asleep in Jesus Jan. 18, 1881, in his 87th year. Just before my mother passed away, I said to her while I held one of her hands, "You are almost gone." She pressed my hand in hers and said, "Yes, but I am not afraid." Again, when almost across the river, I said, "Mother, how is it now?" She replied in a faint whisper, "All bright and glorious."

"How blessed the righteous when he dies." Just 6 years and 14 days after her death father went home. Thus two as good people as ever lived in Pike County, Miss., went home to rest.

In July and August, 1874, we held revival meetings in each of my four churches. At China Grove fifty were converted and joined the church. The Sartinsville meetings resulted in thirty additions to the membership. At Holmesville, twenty-eight members were added, and at Magnolia more than twenty came into the fold.

During my pastorate at China Grove I had some serious difficulties to settle between parties. There are but few misunderstandings among people who are truly saved, and have the mind and spirit of Christ. If all good people would be careful to cast the beam out of their own eye, they could see clearly to cast the mote out of their brother's eye. During our meeting at China Grove, while God was wonderfully blessing our labors, a good sister said to me one morning, "Brother Lewis, read this letter," at the same time handing me the letter. I took it, read it, then without any comment handed it back to her, hoping that would be the last of it. But not so. She said, "What do you think of that?" I said, "Well, Sister, you know we all are liable to do, say or write things when in an ill humor that we would not when in a good humor. Sister P. was angry when she wrote that letter, and of course, she wrote some things she ought not to have written." "I think so, too," she said. I then said to her, "Sister T., we are having a good meeting; let us drop all this trouble and go to work right, and God will give us a glorious victory. The love of God is the best remedy in the world to settle difficulties." She said no more.

That afternoon I visited Sister P. As I took my seat in her parlor, I saw she had been crying. I said, "Sister P., how are you getting along?" "Bad enough," was her reply. She then told me of her trouble with Mrs. T., alluding to the letter she had written and other matters. I told her I had read the letter, and repeated what I had said to Mrs. T. about it. Then I added, "Sister P., let us drop the whole matter, go to work and have a good meeting." I never heard of the trouble afterwards. But before the revival ended, I had the great joy of seeing these good sisters embrace each other and shout aloud the praises of God.

When there are differences between brethren, the pastor should never take sides with either party. Treat all alike as near as you can consistently. If you lean either way, let it be in favor of the weaker brother. So many have been driven from the church by improper treatment or conduct on the part of unwise pastors.

I have had occasion to write many letters to different people under my pastorate, or in whom I felt a special interest. I have never written an anonymous letter. I have written some letters for which I have been ashamed afterwards, and have endeavored to make proper apologies; but never have I written one without signing my name to it. To write anonymous letters is like stabbing a fellow in the dark, and it takes a coward to do that. I wrote a letter to a man once, who was known to be a bad man. When I met him again, he seemed to be glad to see me, and thanked me for the letter. "No, I would advise all my young brethren to do all the good to all men you possibly can, but never be guilty of writing anonymous letters. If you can't afford to put your name to what you write, don't write it."

A man, many years ago, wrote me a very rough letter. I read it, put it in my pocket and went on home. After a few days I read it again. He accused me of things I was clear of. Yet, viewing it from the standpoint he occupied while in an ill-humor, he thought he was right. I prayed over the matter till I felt I could reply in a proper spirit, then proceeded to show him where he was mistaken. He was a good friend afterwards.

I have never had any trouble in getting along with reasonable people. Good people often differ in their views on opinions about religion, politics and other things. I have often heard this, "I am willing to go half way to have peace." Why not go the other half and a little the first if necessary, rather than be at variance with your brother? The blessed Savior came all the way from heaven, then won all the way to Calvary to keep you and me out of hell. Let us seek to have the mind and spirit of Christ.

After staying as long at Magnolia and Holmesville as our Church law would allow, my presiding elder, Rev. L. A. Godfrey, said to me, "Where do you want to go?" I said, "If you can't do better, send me to Amite Circuit." It was done.

BROTHER HARRISON ENDORSED.

Dear Brother Meek: I read Brother Harrison's article on "The Call to the Ministry" with a great deal of interest and heartily say "amen" to it. I have often thought that a great many have a mistaken idea of what constitutes a call to the ministry. I do not believe that the need of the field alone is a sufficient call for any man. Indeed, I believe Christ himself bears out this idea when he says, "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." (Matt. x, 37-38.) And in Luke x, 2, "Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, why this exhortation if the need of the field constitutes a sufficient call? Why is it necessary to pray the Lord of the harvest to send laborers into the harvest?" The harvest is plenteous, or as John puts it, "the fields, then, are white already to harvest." (John iv, 35.) The need of the field was imperative. The call, according to some, was sufficient; yet Christ called on his followers to pray that laborers might be sent forth into the harvest. No; the need of the field does not constitute a valid call to the ministry.

Then does a desire to do good constitute a valid call? I think not. Every man, woman and child who has been truly converted has a desire to do good; yet they are not all called to the ministry. Many a man, who desires and is doing good in his sphere, would be a complete failure as a preacher.

Then, again, does the desire and solicitation of the parents, before or after birth, constitute a call to the ministry? I answer in the negative.

In support of my position, I will call attention to the case of Samuel, whose mother, Hannah, promised the Lord if he would give her "a man child," that she would give him "unto the Lord all the days of his life," and when he was weaned, she carried him to the Temple and dedicated him unto the Lord; yet it was necessary for God to call Samuel directly and personally. I think home influence and parental solicitation does much toward causing a man to enter the ministry. Yet it is not a sufficient call.

The question then arises, what constitutes a valid call to the ministry? I would answer that it is that impression on the soul that it is our duty to preach the gospel; that it is imperative on us and absolutely necessary that we should preach in order to be saved.

To Brother Harrison's entire article, I want to say a hearty amen! C. WESLEY BAILEY.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McCloskey, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynn, Gen. Mgr. C. H. Eids, Sec. Treas.
Geo. A. Hero.

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH

LEON IRWIN & CO.

FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street. Phone, Main 585.

Phone Main.

ROOMS and BOARD

634 and 632 SOUTH STREET

(Lafayette Square)

Corner St. Charles St. NEW ORLEANS, LA.
Unlimited Meals. Alvin Porter, Mgr.

MISSIONARY WORK IN OUR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By Rev. W. W. Perry.

Our section of country at the beginning of the nineteenth century was known as the "Mississippi Territory." It was owned and governed by various European powers till March 30, 1798, when it was ceded by Spain to the United States. During this turbulent period the population was furnished largely by foreign emigration, principally from Spain and France. Yet some of the people came from the States because of the admirable climate and fertile soil; others because this territory afforded an asylum in which to shelter from the punishment of crimes committed in their home country. As heterogeneous as this condition would indicate, it was considerably augmented by the amalgamation of the foreigners with the Indians and negroes. To this intolerance of Romanism. For twenty-five years prior to the cession of this territory to the United States the sparse Protestant population was forbidden to worship God according to the dictates of their consciences and enlightened minds. Bibles and other religious literature were carefully sought to be destroyed by the emissaries of Rome.

The original mission territory to which our first missionaries were sent was bounded as follows: Beginning on the east bank of the Mississippi river at the point where the thirty-first parallel of latitude crosses east along said 31st parallel to the west line of Georgia, thence north along said west line of Georgia to where it intersects the south line of Tennessee, thence west along said line to the Mississippi river, thence south to point of beginning. This vast area, besides the Indians, contained a white population of 8,850 and about 2,000 slaves, in 1800. To these people was sent Tobias Gibson by Bishop Asbury, from the South Carolina Conference, which convened at Charleston Jan. 1, 1799. About the last of March of this year, our missionary landed at Natchez and at once proceeded to his work. As he was in the Georgia District of the South Carolina Conference this year, of course he reported to the said Conference, showing sixty accessions. In 1800, Natchez District was placed under the jurisdiction of the Western Conference and in the Nashville District. At the end of this year Mr. Gibson reported eighty members, the next year 100. These three years our missionary labored alone, the nearest Methodist preacher being about five hundred miles away. His circuit comprised Adams, Jefferson, Claiborne and Warren Counties. In 1802 he visited the Western Conference which met in East Tennessee. Again in 1803. But this time the Conference convened in Kentucky, and meant an 800-mile ride on horseback. At each of these sessions of the Conference he secured help. 1803 was a notable year with the settlers of this new territory and mission, because of the visit of that early revivalist, Lorenzo Dow. He was doubtless the first Methodist that preached to the settlers along the Tombigbee and Mobile rivers, and also in Louisiana. On his return from Louisiana to Natchez, Dow made a favorable report of conditions to Learner Blackman, who was now in charge of the Natchez Mission. This was during 1805, when Dow was on a second visit to the country. Presiding Elder Blackman had the first appointment made for Louisiana for 1806. Thereafter Louisiana was an integral part of the Mississippi Conference till 1846, when it was formed into an Annual Conference.

From the strip of territory occupied along the Mississippi river the work continued eastward to the settlements on the Homochitto, Amite and Bogue Chitto rivers. In 1812 the South Carolina Conference turned over to the care of the Mississippi Conference the work it had kept up in Alabama, so that the bounds of the Mississippi Conference were enlarged to the Sabine river on the west, to the Gulf of Mexico on the south, to the Georgia line on the east, and as far as there were settlements among the Indian nations to the north. Our early missionaries were virile men. They pressed the battle of righteousness in all quarters, so that by 1824-28-30 we had them at work in the Eastern borders of the Province of Texas. After the decisive battle of San Jacinto she threw wide open her doors to all Protestant missionaries. Among those whom our Church sent in 1834 was Robert Alexander, the pastor at Natchez. Being the nearest by, he was the first on the field. So well did our missionaries their work that Texas became a self-supporting Conference by 1840. The Alabama was set off in 1832, the Louisiana in 1846, and the North Mississippi in 1870. The small force of 1799 had grown to a mighty army by 1870. In seventy-one years they had marched to the Georgia line on the east, and to the Rio Grande river on the west. Out of this territory eleven Annual Conferences have been carved. Though somewhat cursory, this brings us to the present bounds and forces of our Conference.

The Southern half of the State of Mississippi is our present territory, with the following forces at work:

1. Epworth Leagues—Methodism has always regarded tenderly and carefully the usefulness of her young people, and of the various organizations for their training and development, perhaps none has exceeded the League when given a fair chance to demonstrate itself. We regret to note that our Conference is far behind some others in developing this arm of service. We had reported last year 58 Senior and 34 Junior Leagues, with a total of 3,106 members, that paid $409.33 to missions.

2. Sunday Schools—We have come to regard Sunday schools as the nurseries of the Church. But some of us fear that we are not putting as much emphasis on the Sabbath schools and Leagues as we should. The goal should be every member of the Church a member of the Sunday school and every Sunday school organized into a missionary society. And this is not impossible for us under the present splendidly arranged courses of study prepared by our Board. The "Home Circle," for instance, will answer the needs of our shut-ins and even the lazy ones. We have in our Conference 53,134 members of the Church and only 29,532 Sunday school scholars in 442 schools. While this is not what we would like to have done in the way of reaching and training our people for Christian service, yet it is a really creditable showing for our Conference.

There was reported 2,350 Sunday schools, with a total enrollment of 127,369 scholars, or about eight per cent of the inhabitants for the entire State last year. Whereas more than fifty per cent of our people are in the Sunday schools, or nearly one-fifth of the schools, with nearly one-fourth of the scholars in the State are under the supervision of our Conference in the Southern half of the State; our Sunday school people raised $3,675 for missions, or about twelve and one-half cents per scholar, last year.

3. Woman's Societies—1. Foreign: For no class of people has the cross been a greater proclamation of emancipation than to women. Where the light of the cross shines in the hearts of men, it means social equality and a higher plane of service for women. And where the opportunity has been given, they have not been slow to accept service for their blessed Lord. The interest is gradually growing in this service among the women. They now have 62 societies, with 1,819 members, whose contributions amounted to $4,314. They have in the field Misses Nellie Drake, Janie Watkins and Hallie Bonie, and I think some Bible women. 2. Home—The first real home mission work that was done by our women was that service rendered by the Female Aid Society of Washington. They contributed both money and clothing. Many a pioneer preacher had his heart made happy by their unselfish work. But that day is gone. Their work is now for parsonages, schools and the Orphans' Home. Our good women helped five local and one district parsonage last year. The home department is growing rapidly of late. There are now 111 societies, with 2,594 members, who raised $15,454.

4. Church Extension—This department of our Church service secures a permanent home for the converts won to Christ. When the preachers go to unoccupied territory they know that they have the Church behind them. They can drive their stakes to stay. Last year our Conference Board helped 16 churches to the amount of $1,820.

5. Foreign Missions—We raised last year $9,748 and our assessment for this year is $11,250. Our Conference is represented abroad by Dr. J. B. Fearn and wife. We have only one Church supporting a missionary abroad and only one individual that supports a missionary on the foreign field, and one individual who contributes $1,000 a year to a chair in one of the Chinese colleges. Altogether, we have six laborers in the field.

6. Domestic Missions—Last year our Conference collections for domestic missions amounted to $9,375. Including the amounts raised by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, the Mississippi Conference last year contributed $21,000, or about 41c per member to missions. We are doing special work at Gulfport for the sailors. Rev. W. T. Griffin, superintendent, reported that 9,918 visits had been made by sailors during 1909, and nearly 4,000 had attended gospel services. Some of them professed conversion. Mission work is also being done at West Biloxi among the canning factory operatives. They have preaching and Sunday schools; also kindergartens. Miss Dragoo, deaconess, is in charge of the Biloxi work. We have a deaconess at Meridian, but of the nature of her work there, I do not know.

Now, in addition to all these specials, let us remember the 162 preachers in charge of circuits and stations, going into the highways and hedges, anxious for all to hear the gospel, anxious for all to know the Lord Jesus Christ, whom to know is to love, and whom to love is to serve. Let us think of the eight tried, true men who are leading us forward. Let us think of all led by the Divine Spirit. Under His leadership the past victories were won; under His leadership this and the coming generations will accomplish greater things than have been achieved in the past.

A friend whom you have been your whole life gaining, you ought not to be displeased with in a moment.—Saadi.

THE OBLIGATION TO SUPPORT THE GOSPEL

By Rev. S. D. Howard.

The Gospel in its primary form means good tidings; in a theological and Scriptural sense it means the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew first and also to the Greek. It is the plan of human redemption conveyed to the hearts of men and women through human agency. It is adapted to all alike, regardless of nationality or circumstance, to the king on his throne and the peasant in his hut, to the man of culture as well as the ignorant. In short it is adapted to everyone of every clime and nation.

The benefits derived from the Gospel are so many that no man could name them. The high type of civilization that is enjoyed in every Christian land has been made possible by the Gospel of Jesus Christ: freedom of speech and the press, the liberty that our women enjoy, the protection thrown around our homes all emanating from influences that spring from the Gospel of Christ. The right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness is only fully realized where the Gospel has sway.

Surely then, if all are beneficiaries of the Gospel, all are under obligations to support the Gospel. This seems to be the only logical conclusion. Every man is under obligation to support the Gospel, whether he be saint or sinner, in the church or out of it, whether he listens to the preaching of the Gospel or not. He who takes the vows of church membership simply recognizes the obligation that rests on all. He who refuses to support the Gospel is ungrateful to the Lord that bought him.

The church member has taken a solemn vow to support the Gospel through the church to which he belongs, adding to the former obligation the duty of keeping his own word. The supporting of those who preach the Gospel is not an act of charity, but rather the payment of a debt. The minister is not a beggar, but a laborer who is worthy of his hire, for so our Lord has ordained. Neither have the people a claim upon the preacher's salary after it has been paid to him; he has the same right to spend it for things which are proper that the school teacher, lawyer or doctor has. The average Methodist preacher does more work and receives less pay for it than men of almost any other occupation.

Many men pay all other bills first, and then if anything be left, pay towards the support of the Gospel. Many a church, when it falls behind with its pastor's salary, seems to think that the meeting of the Annual Conference cancels the debt; a charge may be behind from $50 to $250 and still make no effort to pay the balance due. Can the preacher settle his bills in this way? Nay, verily, the men that he owes expect and demand their money, while the church cancels its debt to the preacher. How will that church and community face the judgment? It is high time that many of our stations and circuits repented in sackcloth and ashes. Let them heed the warning given by the Lord through the prophet: "Return unto me and I will return unto you saith the Lord." And they say "Wherein shall we return?" In tithes and offerings. Mal. 3:7-8.

The preacher that fails to pay his bills is classified as dishonest. I ask this question, how can the preacher pay his bills unless the church pays him? Yet the church and community that demands the preacher's best talents and then fails to pay him for his service is the first to complain if he be slow about paying his debts. When a church fails to pay its pastor, it cripples Christianity and hinders the cause of Christ. Every charge should see that the preacher is paid in full. There is no debt that men owe that is more sacred than that of supporting the ministry. Our pastors, evangelists and presiding elders should preach more on the importance of supporting the ministry properly.

And you, O reader, are you doing your duty? If not, wake up and surely restitution will follow. May the Lord move upon the hearts of men and women throughout the land.

Kindle the light, and the darkness will disperse of itself.—Erasmus.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd.
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

THADDEUS P. BELL, M. D.

EYE, EAR, NOSE and THROAT.

818 Audubon Building.

(Next to Maison Blanche.)

NEW ORLEANS

Inquiries Promptly Answered.

The Home Circle.

THE OLD HOME.

There's a mother bent and wrinkled, in a home back among the hills,
And a longing for a letter that mother's lone heart fills.
Just a line from son or daughter who for years has been away,
But the letter's long in coming—none she gets, day after day.
No one knows how still and lonesome is that house where years ago
Mother rocked the old red cradle, gently, gently, to and fro.
Smoothed away child griefs with kisses, bound up cuts and fingers sore,
And a smiling watched the playing on the spotless kitchen floor.
Merry children round the table; quaint old dishes white and blue;
Now none come when dinner's ready—table's only set for two.
Often, when the light is waning, from the little parlor stand
Mother takes an old-time picture in her work-worn, trembling hand.
Gazes on the face intently (such love's strong earth's chiefest charms)—
"I was never half so happy as when you were in my arms.
I was often tired and weary, filled with care, and oft perplexed;
Had so much to do I wondered what the task I should do next.
But I'd bear the burden gladly, suffer what I did—and more,
If those days—now gone forever—I could once again live o'er."
Now her longing's for a letter, as she does her household chores—
Write and tell her how you love her—if that lone-some mother's yours!

—A. F. Caldwell.

JOHN, THREE, SIXTEEN.

One cold, wintry night, a poor Irish boy stood in the streets of Dublin—a little city, Arab, homeless, houseless, friendless. He had taken to bad courses, and become an associate of thieves, who were leading him on the broad road to destruction. That very night they had planned to commit a burglary, and appointed him to meet them in a certain street at a certain hour.

As he stood there waiting, shivering and cold, a hand was suddenly laid on his shoulder. It was very dark, he could see only a tall form standing by him, and he trembled with fear. But a kindly voice said: "Boy, what are you doing here at this time of night? Such as you have no business to be in the streets at so late an hour, go home, go to bed."

"I have no home, and no bed to go to."
"Would you go to a home and to a bed if I provided one?"

"That would I sharp!" replied the boy.
"Well, in such a street and at such a number (indicating the place) you will find a bed." Before he could add more, the lad had started off. "Stop!" said the voice, "how are you going to get in? You need a pass, no one can go in there without a pass. Here is one for you—you can read?"

"No, sir."
"Well, remember that the pass is John, 3:16. Don't forget, or they won't let you in. John 3:16. There, that's something that will do you good."

Joyfully the lad rushed off, repeating his lesson, and soon found himself in the street and at the number indicated, before a pair of large iron gates. Then his heart failed him, they looked so grand. How could he get in the gate? Timidly he rang the bell. The night porter opened, and in a gruff voice asked: "Who's there?" "Me, sir. Please, sir, I'm John, Three, Sixteen," in very trembling tones.

"All right, in with you, that's the pass," and in the boy went.

He was soon in a nice, warm bed, and between sheets such as he had never seen before. As he curled himself up to go to sleep, he thought: "This is a lucky night, I'll stick to it!"

The next morning he was given a bowl of hot bread and milk, before being sent out into the street (for this home was only for a night). He wandered on, and on, fearful of meeting his old companions; thinking over the wonders of the night, and of his new name, when heedlessly crossing a crowded thoroughfare by accident—or, rather, we would say, in the good providence of God—he was run over.

A crowd collected, the unconscious form was placed on a stretcher and carried to the nearest hospital. He revived as they entered.

After his injuries had been attended to, he was carried up into the accident ward. In a short time his sufferings brought on fever and delirium. Then was heard in ringing tones, and oft-repeated, "John, Three, Sixteen! John, Three, Sixteen!" It was to do me good, and so it has! It was to do me good, and so it has!

These persistent cries aroused the other patients. Testaments were pulled out to see in what he pointed. What could he mean? and here one, and there another, read the precious words, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Consciousness returned, and the poor little fellow gazed around him; how vast it looked, and how quiet it was! Where was he? Presently a voice from the next bed said—"John, Three, Sixteen, and how are you to-day?"

"Why, how do you know my new name?"

"Know it! You've never ceased with your John, Three, Sixteen, and I for one say, Blessed John, Three, Sixteen!"

This sounded strange to the little lad's ears. To be called blessed! he for whom no one cared!

"And don't you know where it comes from?—It's from the Bible."

"Read it to me," he said, and as the words fell on his ear, he muttered: "That's beautiful; it's all about love, and not a home for a night, but a home for always!"

He soon learned the text, saying, "I've not only got a new name, but something to it." This was indeed a joy.

Days passed on, and there were changes in the ward, but our little friend never felt lonely; he fed on his text and its precious words, little thinking how soon he would have use for them. Yet another soul in that ward was to be won to Christ by his means, and now in simple, conscious faith he was to be the agent of blessing. On a cot near him lay an old man named Patrick, who was very ill. Poor Patrick groaned aloud, "God has mercy!" he cried. "I'm such a sinner, I'm not fit to die. What shall I do? Oh! what will become o' me?"

Our little fellow heard his miserable words. Poor, old man, thinks he, he wants a pass! "Patrick," he called, "I know something that will do you good—quite sure—it has done me."

"Tell me, tell me quickly," cried Patrick. "If only I could find something to do me good."

"Here it is! Now listen, John, 3:16. Are you listening?"

"Yes, yes; go on!"

"John 3:16—For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Again and again he had to repeat these words. Through them Patrick found peace in his dying hour, and with his pass he entered into everlasting life. Another soul brought to Christ in that hospital ward, by means of a single text, blessed by the Holy Spirit.

Our little friend recovered. For a long time John, Three, Sixteen, was his one text. God blessed his simple faith, friends were raised up to him, and he was placed at school. Now he is an earnest, hearty worker for the Master. The Dayspring.

W. H. M. S.

Dear Christian Advocate: As you have given our home Mission women a column, I will write you a little of our work in Collins. We have thirty-two members, nine ladies, and thirty-four homes. We hold two business meetings and one social meeting each month; have a cottage prayer meeting once a week. We have a parsonage list of about eighteen or twenty names that pay 25 cents each month, by that means we keep up our parsonage. We also send $10 each month, or $120 per quarter, to Coast Mission work and will send $5 to Bloyd Wesley House. For the past four years we have sent each month $5 to our Orphanage, but we were compelled to use the money to get our church this year. We have just ordered hand saws, pulleys, chain saws, paint, chains, chains, rails, and pulley stand, all in mission style. Our women have worked hard to raise money enough to pay for them when they will be delivered. With the exception of the sale of 200 book books, 50 cents each, all the money was subscribed at free will offerings. We are preparing for a great revival the last week in May. We are praying for the salvation of our young people. MRS. D. A. McINTOSH, President.

May 10, 1910.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location; price, including furniture, only $400. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

HOUSE ON CAMPGROUNDS FOR SALE.

A desirable two-story cottage, with four rooms and hall, bathroom with latest sanitary improvements; completely furnished facing open square in front of Keller Lodge, with a small, shady park in the rear. Address, Christian Advocate, 512 Camp, New Orleans.

Happiness does not consist in what we have, but in what we are.—Selected.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER,

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co

INCORPORATED.

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

Is the best "accident insurance" in the world.

It relieves Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Tired and Blistered Feet, immediately upon application. You will be delighted with one test!

At all Druggists.
25 and 50 Cents

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Mounger, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murray, Rev. W. W. Woodard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

THE ASSAULT OF UNCHRISTIAN FAITHS.

While Christianity is attacking paganism in its stronghold abroad, its own right to supremacy is being more and more challenged in enlightened America. Having come to this Western Republic, where personal and property rights and freedom of worship are accorded to all, the adherents of alien and hostile faiths are beginning to insist vigorously that our Federal and State governments shall, in the work of legislation and administration, treat them as being absolutely on a par with the Christian religion. Thus they vehemently contend that the Bible which they do not accept shall be shut wholly out of the public schools, and that in conducting their business they be allowed to observe what day they please as the Sabbath, or none at all if they see fit. In many places the educational authorities have acceded to their demands relative to the schools, and so that now the strange spectacle is presented of children assembling in places of public instruction and entering upon their scholastic duties without hearing a passage read from the Book of Holy Writ or having the divine blessing and guidance invoked. In the matter of freeing themselves from the restraints of Sabbath observance, they have not been so successful, but they are little, if any, less clamorous for what they are pleased to term their rights, and the obedience which they render to the law is complaining and most reluctant.

In view of this general attitude of those beneath our flag who do not accept the gospel of Christ, it is pertinent to enquire to what extent the United States is a Christian nation. Is it true that Mormonism, Judaism, Buddhism, and every other ism sustains the same relation to our government as Christianity? We do not for one moment admit any such claim; nor is there anything substantial to base such a contention upon. It is true that the Constitution of the United States declares that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; and again, that "No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any public office or public trust under the United States." But it is only in the light of the circumstances under which these provisions were enacted that their meaning can be properly interpreted. The framers of our Constitution were chiefly the descendants of Englishmen, and fresh in their minds were the memories of the bitter struggles between Protestantism and Roman Catholicism for ascendancy in the government of the mother country, as were also the recollections of the unholy strife between the Established Church and the other churches in the British Isles. Indeed, religious persecution had driven the ancestors of many of them across the wide seas to become settlers in the New World. It was to make impossible a repetition of those unhappy scenes in the history of the young nation which they were founding that our forefathers wrote plainly and unequivocally these salutary principles in the organic law by which it was to be governed. The thought of recognizing all other faiths as being entitled to the same rights and privileges under our government as the Christian religion was not at all within the scope of their purpose. As Bishop Galloway forcefully says in his admirable book, "Christianity and the Nation:" "The aim of these articles was not to renounce Christianity or to give countenance to infidelity or any pagan religion, but to exclude all rivalry among Christian denominations and prevent any national ecclesiastical establishment which should give to a hierarchy the exclusive patronage of the national government. It was not antichristian, but antisectarian. It would not favor one branch of the Church of Christ over another."

So far from the government of the United States regarding with equal favor the creeds and religious practices of all races and climes, it has in scores of ways recognized the Christian religion as sustaining to it a vital and essential relation. More than one high court of the country has proclaimed that Christianity is a part of the common law of the land. Daniel Webster took that position in his great argument in the Girard Will case, and set it forth with all the cogency and strength of which his luminous intellect was capable. Our Presidents take the oath of office upon the Book of Holy Writ. Our Houses of Congress and State Legislatures daily open their sessions with prayers by Christian ministers. Witnesses in the tribunals of justice from ocean to ocean are sworn upon the Bible as the volume of righteousness and truth. Official proclamations, State and National, annually call upon our people to render thanks to God for his bountiful benefits and blessings. Statutory enactments forbid Sunday desecration and profaning the name of God in public places. "In God we trust" is stamped upon the coins issued from our mints, and all of our currency bears upon it a date reckoned from the birth of the Man of Galilee.

So the claim of unchristian faiths that under the American Government their views are entitled to the same respect and weight as Christianity is wholly without foundation. It is a display of both ingratitude and brazen effrontery for them to suggest such a thing. Here they have found the largest toleration that exists upon the planet. No effort is made to fetter their consciences or restrict the freedom of their worship. They may believe absolutely what they please. But as the Supreme Court has decided, they must not in their conduct contravene Christian customs and morals as they have become crystallized into the law of the land. They may believe in polygamy, but they can not practice it because a Christian public has adjudged it to be subversive of the general good. And for the same reason they are not allowed to buy and sell on the Sabbath day.

Nor do we think that their clamor should be allowed to exclude the Bible from our public schools. We would have no sectarian teaching extracted from the Holy Book, but we think it should be publicly read and its general authority acknowledged. Nothing more vitally concerns the welfare of the nation than the moral instruction of its youth. Indeed, its very life and perpetuity depend upon it. In this day of lax notions upon the subject of religious training, we would do well to ponder the words of George Washington in his famous farewell address: "Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician equally with the pious man, ought to respect and cherish them. And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

One additional observation we wish to make. There is no reason to be misled by the plea of the unchristian peoples among us, that because they pay to support the public schools they have a right to demand that everything which conflicts with their religious views shall be eliminated from them. With an equal show of logic they might contend that because they pay to the support of our tribunals of justice, they shall be exempted from the necessity of taking an oath in court, or insist that if they must be sworn, the Koran or Book of Mormon shall be used. The course which we think should be pursued toward those among us who are not Christians is to practice the utmost charity and forbearance without yielding a single important principle. We should say to them, build your temples where you please; worship in any way you think proper; but you must not seek to tear down the Christian civilization of whose blessings you are the beneficiaries, or stand in the way of the application of those principles which are necessary to the promotion of the moral welfare of the state and nation.

OUR GREATEST NEED.

The supreme need of our Methodism is a deepening of its spiritual life. In some places we need better houses of worship, more effective financial systems, and greater outward activity, but these needs, urgent as they may seem, are not to be compared to the great crying need of an awakening that shall make our people to know God and live in daily fellowship with him. A church lacking in spirituality, whatever else it may possess, is pitifully poor. There can be no substitute for spiritual life in the hearts of our people. And when a high tide of spirituality exists in a congregation, it is rarely found lacking in anything else. The primary function of the Church is to save the souls of men and promote their growth in holiness and likeness to our Lord. The preacher who does not project his ministry beyond financial and material things has failed to see what his true calling is. The prophets of the Lord are not commissioned merely to build churches and raise collections. They are to proclaim and enforce the truth in a manner that will reach men and turn them from the service of Satan into the service of God.

How may we promote the spirituality of our congregations?

1. We must be deeply spiritual ourselves. Life only can produce life. We can not impart that which we do not possess. Only holy men may expect to influence others to become holy.

2. By visiting our people frequently and praying with them in their homes.

3. By making our preaching thoroughly practical and evangelical. Let us preach the gospel simply and fervently, and expect immediate results.

4. By practicing the ministry of intercession. If it seems that we cannot reach the people, let us fall upon our knees. The greatest battles in the history of the Church have been won by prayer in the privacy of the closet. Paul, upon his knees in the Roman dungeon, was a mightier spiritual force than was Paul thundering the gospel from the Acropolis at Athens.

WORK WELL DONE.

The two glorious things of this world are work well done and a life well spent. A poorly done task interferes with the harmony of the universe, and a mispent life is a tragedy. Completeness, perfection, is a thing we long for, both for ourselves and for others. When we fall short of it, our own hearts condemn us. When we see failure in others, it saddens us.

The men who do their work well are the men who make the world better, and the men who spend their lives well are the ones who extend the borders of the Kingdom of God. The world is not so large but that it misses all such when death calls them away.

But the legacy of life well spent and work well done is a rich one. Through the changing years it will never be dissipated, as legacies of money often are. It is a very part of the fabric of time itself, and must endure forever.

We chronicled last week the deaths of Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, of the Mississippi Conference, and Rev. Q. A. Oats, of the North Mississippi Conference. They were among the oldest members, in point of service, of their respective Conferences, and their lives were spent in the service of the Church. They lived and wrought well. They have left us a rich heritage.

OUR NEW BISHOPS AND OTHER CONNECTIONAL OFFICERS.

The balloting for Bishops by the General Conference at Asheville, N. C., up to the time of going to press resulted in the election of Dr. Collins Denny, of the Baltimore Conference; Dr. J. C. Kilgo, of the North Carolina Conference; Dr. W. B. Murray, of the North Mississippi Conference; Dr. W. R. Lambuth, of Tennessee; Dr. E. D. Mouzon, of Texas; Dr. R. G.

Waterhouse, of Virginia, and Dr. J. H. McCoy, of Alabama.

These men have long been prominent in the work of the Church, and are looked upon as among its wisest leaders. In the patronizing territory of this Advocate, Dr. W. B. Murrah is too well-known to need special mention. He has been President of Millsaps College from its foundation, and to him is due, in a large measure, the remarkable success of that institution. He has administered all its affairs with great wisdom, and has made it one of the leading colleges of the Church. He is counted as one of our strongest preachers, both because of his profound grasp of the fundamentals of the gospel and his dignified eloquence. He will reflect great honor upon Methodism in his exalted position, and the Church may confidently expect most efficient service from him.

Dr. J. C. Kilgo is another college president, during whose administration a great school has been built up. In resources and equipment Trinity stands in the very front rank of the colleges of Methodism. Dr. Kilgo lacked only a few votes of election to the episcopacy at the last General Conference, and it was generally thought that this Conference would elevate him to that high position. He possesses great administrative ability, which is no mean asset for a bishop, and he is one of the great orators of our Church. He is a vigorous thinker, and his administration promises much for the success of our work.

Dr. Collins Denny, as professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy in Vanderbilt University, has made a reputation which extends far beyond the borders of our own Church. His election as bishop was looked upon as practically certain at this session of the General Conference, and the press dispatches state that he received the largest majority ever given for that office in the history of the Church. For vigor of thought and clarity of expression in the pulpit, he is pre-eminent, and he will probably be one of the most active and efficient members of the College of Bishops.

Dr. Lambuth has been for many years Secretary of the Board of Missions. Drs. Mouzon, Waterhouse and McCoy have been engaged in college work. Nearly all of the newly-elected Bishops are in the prime of life.

Rev. T. N. Ivoy was elected editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, and Rev. E. B. Chapell was re-elected Sunday school editor. Dr. Gross Alexander retains his position as book editor.

PERSONAL.

Rev. G. D. Anders, pastor at Purvis, Miss., honored this office with a call on Tuesday of this week.

Rev. T. B. Cottrell, of Bay St. Louis, Miss., is visiting the General Conference at Asheville, N. C.

Rev. E. L. Alford has moved into a handsome, new parsonage at Long Beach, Miss. He is now holding a meeting at that point, assisted by Rev. D. E. Kelley.

We thank Rev. J. M. Ward, of Madison, Miss., for favors shown the Advocate. His circuit moves along harmoniously under his able ministry.

We have received an appreciated invitation to attend the Brookhaven District Conference, at Prentiss, Miss., June 7-10. We expect to be out among the brethren as much as possible.

Rev. S. S. Keener, presiding elder of the Monroe District of the Louisiana Conference, who is well versed in ecclesiastical law, is in Asheville, N. C., watching the lawmakers of the General Conference.

Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor of Broad Street Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., has been selected to lead the singing at the Conference of the Young People's Missionary Movement that meets in Asheville, N. C., July 1.

We thank Rev. W. H. Lewis for the tender of an opportunity to represent the interests of the New Orleans Christian Advocate at the Meridian District Conference, that convenes in Fifth Street Church, Meridian, Miss., May 30.

Dr. John T. Sawyer, at Covington, La., informs us that he had large congregations at both services on last Sabbath, the night audience nearly filling the auditorium. The Doctor seems to be greatly encouraged, and hopes to do a good year's work.

The first of the week Mr. T. V. Ellzey, secretary of the State Sunday School Association, returned from Oklahoma. He tarried in the city but a few days, and then went on to Washington, D. C., to attend the World's Sunday School Convention.

Rev. J. J. Kelley, of Winnfield, was operated on at the New Orleans Sanitarium the first part of this week. We understand that this is the third operation since he has been in this institution. The report has come to us that he is doing well under the circumstances.

Rev. H. W. Van Hook, pastor of our church at Woodville and president of the Edward McGehee College, states that the section of Mississippi in which he lives is having a struggle with the boll weevil, but that they hope to win the fight in the long run.

Melville, La., is moving on nicely under the efficient leadership of Rev. A. A. Bernard, who is preparing to entertain the Alexandria District Conference, which meets there June 10. We are under obligations for the handsome club of subscribers received from this charge a few days since.

Mr. J. G. Hamilton, an honored and efficient layman and lay-delegate to the last session of the North Mississippi Conference, is now visiting in South Pasadena, Cal. He expects to remain there until fall. He writes in terms of high commendation of the Advocate, and we thank him for his kindly words.

We thank the faculty and graduating class of the South Mississippi College, Hattiesburg, Miss., for an invitation to the Commencement exercises. We trust that not only will the college be honored in its graduates, but that many students will come to take the places of those who have completed their tasks.

Rev. W. W. Graham, of Carrizozo, N. Mex., is very anxious for a copy of Bishop Galloway's life of Bishop Parker. If any of the readers of this paper have a spare copy, it would be well to write to the above address. Brother Graham further writes, "I am out here, literally on the outside row, and, as Dr. T. O. Summers used to say, working like a heaver for the Master and Methodism. The harvest is great and the laborers are few."

Rev. Walter G. Harbin writes: "I am in a meeting at Danyville, Ark. We began last Sunday, and already twenty-seven have joined the Church. We have started what promises to be the greatest revival in my experience. Rev. H. H. Griffin, the pastor, is an old Mississippi boy. His father is an honored member of the Mississippi Conference, and is now stationed at Daleville. Brother Griffin has recently completed here a six thousand dollar church which is an architectural gem. I do not know when I have seen a more tasteful church. This is the second church he has built since he came to the Arkansas Conference three years ago."

A note from Rev. W. T. Woodward, our pastor at Haynesville, La., says: "We have just closed our campaign on Missions. We made a house-to-house canvass of it. Our secretary and treasurer has already sent in our entire assessment, $134, for Home and Foreign Missions. This work was done by our laymen under the wise leadership of Rev. W. G. Harbin, our lay leader for the Haynesville charge. Our meeting closed with a rally by the committee, and a report from each one. It was rich, indeed. Four prayers were offered, and a real spiritual feast to our souls. I was reminded of Wesley and his company in the early days of Methodism."

GENERAL CONFERENCE NOTES.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

So far the main work of the General Conference has been in the various committees. Very little legislation of importance has been enacted. The present week promises to be a historic one in the history of Southern Methodism. The name of the Church, the time limit, the women's memorial and the Vanderbilt question will all probably be discussed and passed upon. In addition to this, seven new Bishops will be elected. The balloting for these chief pastors will begin Monday, the 16th, at 11 o'clock.

The fraternal addresses delivered at this General Conference have been in admirable form, and have elicited much enthusiasm. Dr. W. R. Young, the representative of the Canadian Church, spoke on Monday evening, the 9th inst., and by his wit and eloquence completely captivated his hearers. Dr. John S. Simon, who brought the greetings of the mother Church from across the seas, made a most happy impression. He had much to say of what John Wesley learned in Georgia, and acknowledged the indebtedness of Wesleyan Methodism to the Methodism of the New World. His statement that English Methodists are still loyal to the teachings of John Wesley evoked hearty applause.

The Vanderbilt question at this writing seems to be acute and beyond any hope of settlement outside of the courts. It looked a few days ago as if an adjustment would be reached that would be satisfactory to all. The proposed plan of compromise was for the Board of Trust of the University to assemble while the General Conference is in session, and by formal action signify their acceptance of the findings of the Vanderbilt Commission; and that when they had done this, the General Conference would allow the present method of selecting the trustees to remain in force. The Vanderbilt Board, however, finally refused to accede to these terms, and there now appears to be an irreconcilable conflict between them and the Committee on Education. By a formal vote, the General Conference has requested the calling of the Board of Trust to confer with the Education Committee, but it is rumored that the call will not be issued. There is little doubt that the contentions of Bishop Hoss are endorsed by a large majority of the delegates, and that steps will be taken to put the findings of the Vanderbilt Commission into force. It is predicted that the Board of Trust will resist the execution of these alleged rights of the Church, and that a great law-suit will follow. The crux of the whole matter is that the Church insists upon the right of selecting the trustees of the University, if it should choose to exercise it, while the Board of Trust claims that under the charter it is a self-perpetuating body. All else connected with the question is merely incidental to this main question.

Several spirited discussions have already taken place upon the floor of the General Conference. One was on a committee report to have the stewards elected by the church conference upon the nomination of the pastor, instead of by the quarterly conference. This measure was lost by a very narrow margin. Another proposal which stirred up a vigorous debate was that of requiring candidates for the ministry to abstain from the use of tobacco. It lacked only three votes of passage. A paragraph urging young ministers not to use the weed was incorporated into the Discipline, instead of the positive prohibition which so many sought to make the law of the Church.

Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Scott are in Asheville, where they will remain for a few days to witness the proceedings of the General Conference. From here they will go to New York, and thence to Europe.

Quite a number of Mississippians are here to look in on the great law-making body of Southern Methodism. We have noted the presence of the following brethren from the Mississippi Conference: Revs. J. M. Morse, C. M. Crossly, T. B. Cottrell, H. J. Moore, G. P. McKeown, J. R. Jones, W. B. Jones, C. M. Chapman and Robert Selby. From the North Mississippi Conference: Revs. J. H. Felts, W. L. Duren, O. W. Bradley and H. M. Young.

Dr. L. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, and one of the delegates from the Mississippi Conference, entertained quite a number of his Conference brethren at dinner on last Saturday, the 14th inst. A number of interesting speeches were made and good fellowship abounded. Dr. Cooper is making his influence felt at the General Conference, and is beloved by all who know him.

GRENADA COLLEGE.

Dear Mr. Editor: In a change of administration of a college, it is natural and generally true that there is a falling off of patronage for a year or two. The undersigned desire that the change in the presidency of the Grenada College be an exception to the rule. The retiring president desires it, we desire it, and have all pledged ourselves to work to the end of realizing our desire.

We have already started organizations to prevent defection in our ranks now in school and hope through this public notice and by private letters to secure the co-operation of all the graduates of the college and of all former students to the end of making next year the banner year of the college from the standpoint of enrollment.

The Board of Trustees are doing their utmost for the advancement of the interests of the college; we approve heartily the Board's choice as successor to our beloved president, who has served the institution so faithfully and well for eight years and who goes out with the burden of our welfare still upon his heart; we, therefore, ask ourselves whether we must not do all within our power for ourselves and for the institution?

We beg the assistance of the preachers of the Conference, we ask volunteers for our campaign from among former students of the college, we call upon all those in North Mississippi who favor higher ideals in the education of women to rally to our banner.

Enlist in our army by private letters to us or announce yourself publicly in the New Orleans Advocate. Respectfully,

WILLIE MAY MCINTOSH.
MAYSEL WILLINGHAM.
PEACHIE CARTER.
EDNA MITCHELL.
FRANCES BINGHAM.
MABEL WEST.

EDWARD MCGEHEE COLLEGE.

Following is the program of the Commencement exercises of Edward McGehee College, Woodville, Miss.:

Friday, May 20—Closing of Primary Department.
Sunday, May 22—Commencement sermon by Rev. J. M. Henry, of Baton Rouge, La.
Monday—Afternoon—Art exhibit.
Tuesday Evening—Concert.
Wednesday Morning—Graduating exercises, address by Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College.
H. W. VAN HOOK, President.

Modes of the Heavenly Life.

A series of five sermons on the work of the Holy Spirit.

By REV. WALTER G. HARBIN.

Price, 75 cents.

Send to CHAS. O. CHALMERS, 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

THE LIFE OF
JAMES M. SMITH

THE BIBLE IN

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

Special One

Larson Phonographs

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

Ensuring Strong Factors and Symbols

[illegible]

THE NATIONAL MISSIONARY POLICY.

Adopted by the National Missionary Congress, Held at Chicago, May 3-6, 1910.

In view of the Fatherhood of God, the unity of the human race and the sufficiency and finality of the gospel of Christ.

Knowing that the field is the world and that this is the only generation we can reach.

This first National Missionary Congress in the United States, representing more than twenty millions of Church members, recognizes the immediate world-wide presentation of the gospel messages to be the central and commanding obligation resting upon all Christian churches, and declares its conviction that the Church of our generation can and should obey literally the great commission of our Lord, to preach the gospel to every creature.

As indicating the measure required among the non-Christian peoples of the earth, we accept as a working policy the standard that, in addition to the native agencies, there should be provided from the Churches of Christian lands an average of at least one missionary to every twenty-five thousand of the people to be evangelized. This would require the quadrupling of our present force of workers, and a corresponding increase in contributions from approximately $11,000,000 last year to about $45,000,000 annually. This estimate indicates the measure of personal duty at home rather than the method of missionary work abroad, in determining which diversities of conditions in the work, dissimilarities of equipment and power among the workers, the part to be taken by the native Churches which are to be raised up to do the great bulk of the work as self-supporting and self-propagating agencies, must all be taken into account.

We declare our conviction that according to their ability and opportunity, the laymen of the Churches are equally responsible with the ministers to pray and to plan, to give and to work for the coming of the Kingdom of God upon earth. We believe that the call to share actively in extending the knowledge of Christ presents to every man his supreme opportunity for development, usefulness, and satisfaction, and we appeal to men everywhere to invest their intelligence, their influence, their energy, and their possessions in the united effort of the Church of Christ to evangelize the world.

While seeking the enlistment of all the laymen of the Church in fulfilling the missionary task of our generation, we declare our belief that this work is the work of the organized Church, and that the natural leaders are the ministers and the missionary agencies of the various Churches; and it is our conviction that all that is done in the name of the Laymen's Missionary Movement should help to strengthen these leaders and the agencies through which the Churches as such must discharge their missionary responsibility.

We urge the adoption by every Church of regular and thorough methods of missionary education and finance, culminating once each year in an organized personal canvass of each congregation, with the earnest purpose of securing the systematic and proportionate contributions of every member toward the world-wide propagation of the Christian evangel, and we recommend for universal adoption the Scriptural plan of a missionary offering every week, in order that this vast world-enterprise may be kept constantly in the minds and prayers of all Christians, and that funds for the work may be adequate and steadily available.

We recommend that there be formed in each individual Church a strong Missionary Committee, charged with the responsibility of promoting missionary intelligence, intercession and contributions; and that in each city or county where work is undertaken a Co-operative Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement be formed, composed of laymen, selected so far as possible by the various churches, to represent their continuity in the territory covered, and that the Laymen's Missionary Movement, through its Executive Committee, in co-operation with the established missionary agencies of the several churches, be authorized to provide such measures for the supervision and assistance of these Co-operating Committees as the providential developments of the work may require.

We earnestly remind all Christians of the duty of habitual prayer for missionaries for native Christians; and for pastors and Churches at home that laborers may be thrust forth into all harvest fields; that the unity of the Church may be realized and that the glory of God may be universally revealed.

Remembering that the promises of divine blessing are conditioned upon obedience to the will of God, and recognizing the deep spiritual quickening which has already come to the Churches in many parts of the United States and Canada, through the awakening of the missionary spirit, we call upon the whole membership of the Churches here represented to unite with us in discharging our personal and national missionary obligations.

Assembled in this National Missionary Congress, and deeply persuaded of the power of Christ through His united Church to solve all the problems of human society, we desire to unite the churches of Canada and of our sister nations throughout Christendom, as loyal servants of the King of Kings, in a comprehensive and adequate campaign for the conquest of the world by Jesus Christ, who is the Way, the Truth and the Life, the Desire of the Nations, and the Light of the World.

Epworth Pianos and Organs on Display at General Conference

Here's Your Chance for an Extra Good Bargain.

I have shipped a carload of our finest, sweetest toned Epworth Pianos and Organs to Asheville, North Carolina, for exhibition during the Methodist General Conference which opened May 4.

This fine display of Epworth Pianos and Organs will be in charge of our Mr. Bradley whom many of you have met in this same capacity at three previous General Conferences. Mr. Bradley will be pleased to have all the delegates and their friends call at our headquarters and examine these beautiful sample instruments.

Rather than have these sample instruments returned to the factory, we will make special clearing sale prices and pay the freight to your home anywhere in the United States and let you name your own terms of payment.

No matter where you live, if you will drop me a postal I will send you pictures of these fine pianos and our Special General Conference Clearance Sale Offer which will save you a good part of your piano money. It will only cost you a penny postal to learn all about this good bargain chance on one of the fine General Conference Epworth Pianos or Organs.

Address me personally, "H. B. Williams, Sales Manager, Williams Organ & Piano Co., Room 326, 57 Washington St., Chicago, and say: Please send pictures and special sale price on one of the (say which) piano, church organ or parlor organ you have on display at the General Conference."

Write name and address plainly. Better send the postal right now before you forget it.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

Hair falling out? Troubled with dandruff? Want more hair? An elegant dressing?

Ingredients: Sulfur, Glycerin, Quinine, Sodium Chloride, Capricum, Base, Alcohol, Water, Perfume.

We believe doctors endorse this formula, or we would not put it up.

Does not Color the Hair

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616 618 COMMON STREET

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital $200,000.00
Assets $79,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

Every Druggist Knows

and thousands of users know that

MINARD'S
"KING OF PAIN"
LINIMENT

is the great family Remedy For Bodily Pain

resulting from rheumatism or neuralgia, stiff joints, strained or lame muscles, sprains, tired, aching feet, sore hands, and all sorts of bruises; also for painful chest or tubes, heavy colics, sore throat and hoarseness; as well as for scores of every-day emergencies and accidents that happen in every family. MINARD'S LINIMENT is a safe and reliable standby, and should be on every medicine shelf.

MINARD'S LINIMENT is a smooth, aromatic cream, clean to use, powerful, penetrating and soothing, and absolutely free from anything poisonous or harmful. When rubbed into the skin it stops inflammation, easing the pain and soreness at once.

If you are not one of the thousands who are already familiar with its merits, we want you to

TRY MINARD'S LINIMENT AT OUR RISK

Buy it from your druggist or dealer, use as directed, and if not found exactly as represented, we will refund your money. Prices: Small 25c., Medium 50c., Large $1.00.

MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO. SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS.

THE ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN.

Circulation Now 8,000, and is Increasing With Arrival of Each Mail.

The sole purpose of the Church is to extend the Kingdom of Christ. Men are to be brought to know the Christ, and those who have been with the Lord are to be helped to know the Master in his fullness. The Church can have no other ultimate object. In working to this end many forces may be used, and many incidental purposes enter into our motives, but all must be subordinate to the supreme motives.

One of the great forces in working out the problems of the Church is the Church paper. Into it should enter the best wisdom of the strongest men; and prayer, study and constant effort should go to make this potent agency effective.

But when you have made a publication all that human wisdom can possibly attain to, when the Holy Spirit has breathed upon its editors and inspired their pens, even then the Church paper must utterly fail of its object unless it gets into the hands of the people where it will be read.

If a paper published in the name of the Church does not advance the Kingdom of Christ, the sooner it finds a peaceful rest and ceases to disturb Zion, the better; but if it does do the work set for it, the larger the circulation the nearer will it come to accomplishing the purposes for which it was created.

We are asking ten thousand subscribers for the Advocate. This will not only make it possible for us to continue the improvements already under way, but will make effective in reaching individual lives the effort and prayer already put forth. If it is for the glory of the Lord that the New Orleans Christian Advocate should be published for the Methodist Church in Louisiana and Mississippi, it is also for his glory that it should go into the home of every Methodist in this territory, and reach as many other homes as possible.

We come before you asking for a vote of confidence and approval. We appreciate kind words, and were it not for them we would hardly find courage to go forward; but the votes that do most to make a paper a success come in the shape of subscriptions. In this campaign, a renewal helps as truly as a new subscriber, for we must hold that which we have, if the new subscribers shall count.

The following have not only given kind words, but have rendered practical help by sending new subscribers and renewals:

Rev. H. C. Edmonson, Marietta, Miss.; Rev. W. R. Williams, Cockrum, Miss.; Rev. W. E. Roberts, Raleigh, Miss.; Rev. W. R. Whatley, Merryville, La.; Rev. Thos. E. Yancey, Nettleton, Miss.; Rev. J. L. Neill, Lorman, Miss.; Rev. J. F. Waltman, Coushatta, La.; Rev. S. S. Holladay, Pelican, La.; Rev. J. W. Ward, Madison, Miss.; Rev. W. E. Aiken, Pelican, La.; Rev. J. P. Wynn, Pelican, La.; Rev. A. F. Vaughan, Lafayette, La.; Rev. J. H. Montgomery, Hammond, La.; Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Baker, La.; Rev. Thos. L. Porter, Taylor, Miss.; Rev. A. L. Davenport, Rara Avis, Miss.; Rev. R. A. Sibley, Glancy, Miss.; Rev. W. R. Goudelock, Caledonia, Miss.; Rev. R. A. Tucker, Kosciusko, Miss.; Rev. W. H. Lane, Rose Hill, Miss.; Rev. James Porter, Oakland, Miss.; Rev. R. A. Clark, Okolona, Miss.; Rev. A. A. Bernard, Melville, La.; Rev. J. H. Smith, Vaden, Miss.; Rev. M. J. Miller, Edinburgh, Miss.; and Rev. L. Carley, New Augusta, Miss.

We give below our roll of honor, consisting of those who have sent in twenty or more subscribers during this conference year:

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, Greenville, Miss.
Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.
Rev. J. M. Carpenter, Booneville, Miss.
Rev. W. E. Dickens, Pelahatchie, Miss.
Rev. T. H. Dorsey, West Point, Miss.
Rev. W. L. Duren, Tupelo, Miss.

Rev. R. A. Ellis, Yazoo City, Miss.
Rev. E. E. Langford, Brooksville, Miss.
Rev. T. W. Lewis, Columbus, Miss.
Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, Indianola, Miss.
Rev. S. B. Myers, Louisville, Miss.
Rev. L. A. McKeown, Shaw, Miss.
Rev. J. E. Sampley, Rocky Springs.
Rev. O. L. Savage, Guntown, Miss.
Rev. T. E. Yancey, Nettleton, Miss.
Rev. W. G. Harbin, Haynesville, La.
Rev. C. F. Staples, Gibbsland, La.
Rev. W. T. Woodward, Haynesville, La.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Shreveport Dist.—Second Round.

La Chute, at Atkins May 21, 22
Hornbeck, at Prospect May 28, 29
Leesville May 29, 30
Ida June 4, 5
Zwolle June 10,
Many June 11, 12
Pelican June 18, 19
Pleasant Hill June 19, 20
De Ridder June 25, 26
Bon Ami June 27, 28
Mansfield July 2, 3
Mooringsport July 3, 4
Shreveport, 1st Church July 6,
Bossier City July 7.
Shreveport District Conference will meet at Zwolle, La., June 14. The opening sermon will be preached Monday night. T. J. WARLICK, P. E.

Baton Rouge Dist.—Second Round.

Tickfaw, at James Chapel May 18,
E. Feliciana, at Independence May 21, 22
Bogalusa—District Conference May 28, 30
New Roads, at New Roads June 4, 5
C. C. MILLER, P. E.

Monroe Dist.—Second Round.

Delhi May 21, 22
Collinston May 28, 29
Downsville June 1
Floyd June 4, 5
Lake Providence June 11, 12
St. Joseph June 18, 19
Brookland June 22
Calhoun June 25, 26
S. S. KEENER, P. E.

Ruston Dist.—Second Round.

Vernon, at Wesley May 21, 22
Gibbsland, at Mt. Moriah May 28, 29
Ringgold, at Rocky Mt. June 3,
Lanesville, at Brashwood June 4, 5
Bernice, at Bernice, 8 p.m. June 8,
Winnfield June 11, 12
Jonesboro, at Hodge June 12, 13
Cotton Valley June 18, 19
Lishon June 22,
Houghton, at Castor June 25, 26
Minden 8 p.m. June 26,
The District Conference will convene at Arcadia July 1 to 3. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. Robert Randle on June 30, at 8 p.m. R. W. TUCKER, P. E.

Lafayette Dist.—Second Round.

Sulphur, at Vinton May 21, 22
Jennings May 22, 23
Bell City May 28, 29
Lake Arthur May 29, 30
J. E. DENSON, P. E.

New Orleans Dist.—Second Round.

Felicity May 29
First Church June 5
Second Church June 5
Rayne Memorial June 12
F. N. PARKER.

3 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McCord, Verbena, Ala., used 3 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 20 years."

C. G. Butler, Argenta, Ark., wrote: "Used 4 bottles and gained 12 pounds and feel 100 per cent better."

Money back when it fails.
The Johnson's Chill & Fever Tonic Co.
Savannah, Georgia.

Four Years to Pay for This Piano

UNDER the Werlein Club Plan one hundred people buy one hundred pianos, each agreeing to pay for one piano only. The piano is shipped upon payment of $10. The monthly payment is $6. This is for a $400 piano. Write for particulars—how to save $108 on your purchase.

Sixty-seven years in business

Philip Werlein, Ltd., 605-7-9 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

Weber, Chickering, Mathushek, Behr, Pease, Wegman, Ivers & Pond, Steck, Werlein Pianos and Pianolas, Sheet Music—Victor Talking Machines.

THE BEST MADE Angel's Cough and Whooping Cough Syrup

For Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and Throat Trouble.

Contains no Opium or Morphine.
All Druggists, Price 25 and 50 cents.

DUGGAN'S BOLL WEEVIL REMEDY WILL INSURE A GOOD COTTON CROP

Should be used by every cotton planter in the South. Simple, Cheap, Effective. Fully demonstrated at Natchez, Miss., last season. Write for particulars and references.

One gallon diluted treats 2 acres

J. J. DUGGAN, Mfr.,
4326 Magazine Street, New Orleans, La.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection: beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Grenada College.

Secure our catalogue before deciding where to place your daughter. Superior Home Comforts; Only Two Girls in a Room; Marvelous Health Record; Excellent Fine Arts Department; Strong Lyceum Course; Well-Adapted Library; Personal Attention to Individual Pupils; Superior Student Body as Associates; Carefully Selected Faculty; Strong Course of Study; Rates Reasonable; Constant Christian Influence permeating and dominating College Life. Apply for rooms at once and thus secure choice of location.

W. L. OLIFTON, A.B., Ph.D., President, Grenada, Miss.

I. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Riehl, Sec. Q. Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd., JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. NEW ORLEANS
D. C. Godfrey Optician.

CONVENIENT WAY,

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN
NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA,
SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS
ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL, General Passenger Agent.

Tidings from the Field

South Side and Poplar Springs Charge

We are making progress under disadvantages with the hope of a more rapid one soon. Our people are struggling against heavy debts, which they purpose meeting in full this year, the Lord blessing us. Our new parsonage is now in process of erection at South Side and likely will be completed in time for us to occupy it before this month expires. It is being built on the church lot and so near the church that we shall be able to attend church services at all seasons and in all conditions of weather without any exposure. Poplar Springs will likely become a station at or this year if its financial strain is not too great this year in paying all indebtedness. Our people there have accomplished much up to this time and as yet seem not to flag in the least. Our meeting there will begin in June, the Lord permitting. Owing to the building of our new church there last year we held no meeting and hence hope for one this time that will be the most efficient and most abundant in fruitage for God's glory and the greatest good for our church in the community at large. South Side hopes to rank as a station of no small import another year, the Lord continuing to bless it. The Lord bless each Church much, spiritually and temporally. Bro. D. E. Kelley has held a meeting for us at South Side, and although it did not ultimate as we hoped, yet we are very thankful for all the good that resulted. Bro. Kelley preaches hard against sin, and this we like much and must say that no one can preach too hard against sin scripturally, for us. We need not only more hard Scriptural preaching against all forms of sin, but we need more real hard Scriptural living against it, for it is easier to preach against it than to live against it. It is so inconsistent to preach against sin and then not to live against it. The Lord help us to denounce it most bitterly, Scripturally and then, most rightly, to live it in daily practice. The truly Scriptural idea of a sinless life merits the most serious and prayerful consideration of each and every one, for we fear that the tendency now is to entertain very loose views of serious and spiritual matters. Make a joke and create a giggle is the fashion that is meeting a most universal approval, we are sorry to say. It is thought to be long-faced, not to be in a giggle, or carry even an affected cheery countenance or face. We should not forget that as long as members of the Church do not live as they can and should, and also as long as so many are being lost daily, we are not manifesting that interest and love for souls that our Savior did, who, instead of joking and converting serious things into a giggle, was full of sorrow and weeping. An unselfish religion moves us and constrains us to live for others, and we find our most abiding joys in the salvation of others. A selfish religion is animal, and hence finds its best moments in times of good pay, personal ease and selfish gratification, and is peculiar in expressing its joys by unguarded jokes, puns, drudging seriousness, and also by giving great freedom to silly giggles. O God, raise up more true souls against sin in all its forms, not only to denounce it, but to live against it. An account of our meeting, having been sent in, we shall now close by asking all who shall read this to pray to God not only for mine and me to be abundant in fruitage for our Holy Father, but also my people I am serving. Isaac L. Peebles.

Lambert, Miss.

This is our second year on the Lambert Mission, although it is changed some this year from what it was last. Last year we had Marks and Bellevue. They were both taken off this year and Rome, Porchman and Sandy Bayou were put on, and in our new congregations we find some good people. Marks is a beautiful little town located on the banks of Old Water river and its growing fast. We feel that in this town our Church has a great future. Bellevue is a country Church, and it is a fine neighborhood. We have a fine congregation there and a good laboring ship. I feel that we should make special mention of Mrs. Bledsoe, Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Barker, as these ladies have been so faithful to our Church under adverse circumstances. They have about completed a neat little house of worship that would be a credit to any neighborhood. These women are faithful to their Church and true to their God. And we feel that we should also make mention of Bro. Bledsoe, for it is due to his efforts that our Church has held its own with the many odds against it. Our Church here at Lambert is continually growing in strength and in membership. When we came here last year we found only five members, now we have thirty-five. We have a fine Sunday school and prayer meeting, and we are planning to build a $2,000 church, which we hope to have up by conference. We have greatly improved the parsonage, having closed the hall and added one room. Our town is growing fast. We have several fine two-story brick buildings and a dozen or more new residences are now under construction and others are planning to build. The contract has been let for an up-to-date $5,000 school building, and will be added to according to the need of the school. We think it will only be a short time before the word mission will be dropped from our charge, as we expect to be self-supporting. At Vance, we have a nice little town, some good people and the prospect for our Church there is good. Pray for us. J. G. Johnson, P. C.

Silver Creek, Miss.

Dear Advocate—On the 17th of April we began a meeting at Silver Creek. Bro. G. D. Anders coming to us to do the preaching on Monday, instead of Bro. D. E. Kelley, whom we had engaged to do the preaching in the meeting. Bro. Anders preached with power and the Spirit was with us from the very start. We had some very interesting services while Bro. Anders remained with us, but he only remained three days. Bro. Kelley came to us Thursday, and he preached from two to three sermons a day for the next eight days. We had a great meeting in many respects. Our Church was wonderfully revived; only two or three of our members failed to get a blessing out of the exercises. At least, calculation a hundred claimed either to have been converted or reclaimed, the most of them claiming conversion. We have received into our Church, on profession of faith, thirty-one and others are yet to be received in while we are to be received into the Baptist Church. Besides the conversions and accessions to the Church, the churches of the town were drawn closer together and promised to work more harmoniously than ever before. This has been a place noted for denominational prejudice, for some time. We hope now for peace, since we have seen how God blesses his people when they unite in a meeting to save souls. Brother Kelley is the man for the place that he occupies. He looks after every interest of the Church; he encourages the people to keep their churches in good repair; and a good comfortable home for their pastor. He also insists that a revival that does not result in a more liberal spirit toward the cause of Christ is little more than a failure. Where he has co-operation of the pastor, he almost always leaves the Church on a much better financial basis. For instance, our meeting has resulted in a raise of the preacher's salary amounting to nearly $300. It is no wonder that people pay him willingly for his work. In teaching them to pay their own pastor they are inspired to do a good part by him.

Spend Your Summer in the

BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAINS

Pure water, no malaria or Mosquitos. Public and private baths. Select Southern guests solicited. Write for booklet.

OAK HALL,

E. BROWNLEE, Prop.

Tryon, N. C.

Summer Tours

VIA

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

California, Colorado, Utah, Mexico, AND ALL THE WEST.

NEW YORK

And ALL EASTERN and NORTHERN RESORTS

See Your Local Agent for full Particulars, or Write.

J. H. R. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La.

C. W. MURPHEY, City Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La.

Furniture for School Rooms, made

in the South, of Southern wood, by Southern people, with Southern capital. New factory—one of the best equipped in America, employing skilled labor only.

Lowest Prices—Advantageous Freight Rates.

We make Desks, Seats, Teachers' Desks, Book Cases, Library Tables, Magazine Racks, etc. Write for illustrated catalog and price list. Address

W. A. PRICE & SON, West Jackson, Miss.

Polishes in a "Jiffy"

QCKWORK METAL POLISH is something new, something different, something quicker than you ever dreamed of. Simply rub on—then rub off. A bright polish in a few seconds. Nothing injurious in it—no acid—no grit. Fine for polishing all metals.

In 25c Tins Everywhere.

QCKWORK SILVER PASTE relieves household drudgery. It gives silverware a quick, lasting polish. Makes old pieces look new. Free from acid. Fine for gold and cut glass. Insist on Qckwork.

In 25c Jars Everywhere.

May our Lord continue his blessings upon him. The effects of his work will be felt for the years to come in our town, and the souls led to God through his efforts here will rise and call him blessed in that great day of all days. God has been with us and we are glad, and we love him more.

—J. E. Williams.

The smallest things become great when God requires them of us; they are small only in themselves; they are always great when they are done for God, and when they serve to unite us with him eternally.—Fenelon.

THE GREAT ANTISEPTIC.

Royaline Oil, made by the Royaline Medicine Co. of New Orleans, La., is a truly antiseptic as any remedy can be, being composed of a number of the best antiseptic ingredients known to the materia medica. In addition it is a good pain medicine and therefore has an advantage over other antiseptics, being of greater strength. A test of this can be made in the case of severe pain. Equally useful for man or beast. Price, 25c a bottle. Druggists.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children; 50c.

FITS CURED NO CURE NO PAY-other who would not pay for results; professional attention is guaranteed. German
 American Institute, 984 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

The Old Reliable
ROYAL
Baking Powder
Absolutely Pure
The only baking powder made
from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar
No Alum No Lime Phosphate

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

Mr. J. T. HOWARD was born Nov. 12, 1854, and died Feb. 10, 1910. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1872, but was not converted until October, 1874. He was married to Miss Mary Josephine Curry, Nov. 21, 1876. He was the father of eight children, all living, and eight grandchildren. He leaves a mother, one brother and one sister, a wife and eight children to mourn for him. He was a member of the Church from young manhood and ever stood at his post, and for the doctrines of the Church he loved so much. He often filled offices in the Church and was a member of the Board of Trustees at the time of his death. His life was filled with religious joy and he was ready to go. He said that he was not afraid to die, but wanted to live, for he was needed here. However, his preparations were all made and he was not afraid to meet his Lord. As to his being needed here, not only did his family need him, but the Church feels a great loss in the death of dear Brother Howard. Bro. Howard loved his family with that love that makes home happy. Bro. Howard loved his Church and was always at the place of prayer and duty when it was possible for him to be there. There is a vacant place in the home that can never be filled, and a vacant place in the Church that is hard to fill. But our Father said it was enough, lay down the cross and take up thy crown. Loved ones, weep not as those who have no hope. He is not dead, but sleepeth. We look forward with the blessed assurance of meeting him beyond this vale of tears, where we will never say goodbye to those we love so dearly.

A precious one from us has gone,

A voice we loved is stilled;

A place is vacant in our home

Which never can be filled.

God in his wisdom has recalled,

The boon His love had given,

And though the body slumbers here,

The soul is safe in heaven.

J. F. WALTMAN.

At her home, Mentor, Miss., on the night of March 23, 1910, while loved ones lingered 'round the bedside to see the last sweet smile and catch her latest breath, the soul of another mother went up to God. Mrs. MILDRED COX was born June 4, 1845, and in early life united with the M. E. Church, South, consecrating her life wholly to God. On July 12, 1865, she was united in marriage to Rev. A. P. Cox, who, together with eight children, survive her. For this saintly woman naught can be said but words of praise. Indeed, she was the most motherly of mothers. Her whole life was spent in deeds of kindness, and the influence of this consecrated life, through her children and associates is, indeed, immeasurable. Although for many years she was practically an invalid and suffering intense pain, not a murmur of complaint came from her lips. With implicit faith in the Divine Father, she bore her cross patiently and cheerfully; forgetful of her own sufferings in her efforts to carry sunshine into the lives of others. No one ever came in contact with this saintly woman who was not inspired to a higher, nobler life. In early life the writer was deeply impressed with the unfeigned devotion of her husband and children for her, but when he came to know her better, he found that in her life was the secret of this devotion. All people with whom she came in contact felt the influence of her holy life, and were drawn to her in bonds of love. To know her was to love her. During her last sufferings she called her loved ones to her bedside, expressed her unflinching faith in God, and assured them that heaven was her home. Since she has gone, what have we to comfort us? The heritage of a saintly, noble life, well spent. The assurance that she is with her Lord and the loved ones gone before, there to await the coming of dear ones left behind. She now rests from her labors and her works shall follow her.

Weep not for the mother called to God,
Mourn not her peaceful end;
She was called by angel hands to wear
Christ's precious diadem.

Mourn not the mother gone to rest,
Who sweetly closed her eyes,
She found a Father and awaits her friends,
In God's bright Paradise.

Dear one, reluctantly we gave thee up, and yet we feel that God knew best. Thy labors and sufferings are over and together with him in whose service thy life was spent, thou dost await our coming.

Though lone are the paths and sad the bowers,

Whence thy sweet smile is gone,
We know a brighter home than our's,
In heaven is now thine own.

JAMES BROWN.

FRANCIS CORINNE HILL was born Aug. 8, 1838, married to Dewitt Clinton Vaughn, Jan. 10, 1856; united with the Church early in life, and ever afterwards lived a consistent Christian life. She was left a widow Aug. 6, 1872, with five children; the oldest only 13 years old. She struggled hard to raise her children right. She was born and lived all her life in the community where she died. The last seven years of her life she lived with her youngest daughter. The last several months were months of much suffering, but in it all could be seen the beautiful, patient, trustful Christian spirit characteristic of those whose trust is stayed in the Lord. In personal character, she was a timid, shrinking woman, never wanting any praise or thanks for what she did. The blessed consciousness of having lightened some one's burden was enough for her. Her last days were brightened by kind friends who spent much time with her in song and prayer, during which time, though a great sufferer, she would talk to those about her bed of the all-importance and blessedness of being ready to go out to meet God. May all that was beautiful in her be reflected in the lives of her daughters, together with all whose hearts and lives were blessed by her life of faith in God. We laid her away to rest in the family cemetery, near Pine Bluff, March 7, 1910.—A Friend.

We, the Sunday school of the Methodist Church of Garlandville, Miss., have recently been called to mourn the loss of one of our most faithful pupils, LITTLE W. B. WEIR, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Weir, who was called to a higher service in the Master's vineyard March 30, 1910. His stay in this world was 9 years and 5 months. In the death of little W. B. we realize our great loss. He was faithful to the best interests of our Sunday school. We will miss his example of inspiration and good cheer. To the father and mother, who have lost a most dutiful son and upon whom this sad bereavement falls most heavily, and to the brothers and sisters, we tender our most sincere sympathy. Praying that the God of all comfort may comfort your hearts. Let us turn to and meditate upon those precious promises contained in the Word of God. Little W. B. is now among the angels in heaven, where God and Jesus and all of the blood-washed throng dwell. He has been permitted to join in the song of redeeming love and to ascribe praise and thanksgiving to Him who saves us from sin and death. A little time, and we who knew thee well and loved thee here, one by one shall follow thee.

RALPH HERD COWART, eldest son of D. H. and Louisa Cowart, was born April 14, 1874, near what is now Mentor, Harrison County, Miss., and died near Lyman, Harrison County, Miss., Jan. 31, 1910, aged 35 years, 9 months and 17 days. Bro. Cowart being poor had to start out on life's battle without much education, but to help him he had a genuine good supply of good common sense, which he used. He did what all others should do; he joined the Church early in life. He joined the Methodist Church in his boyhood days, being the Church of his choice. He was always found in the front of the battle working for the upbuilding of his Church. For said he, "It is good enough to be in, fine enough to live in, and grand enough to die in." Bro. Cowart was a genuine Christian, a noble man, a patriotic citizen. Being very temperate and industrious, he began to accumulate this world's goods. He was married to Miss Mary Thomas, Sept. 25, 1904, whom he leaves to mourn his loss. Bro. Cowart's great hobby in this world was to make a successful farmer, and how well he succeeded! He had accumulated a nice body of land, a fine little farm, a good comfortable home, with horses, cattle, hogs and chickens surrounding him. He and his wife only was just beginning to enjoy life, after a hard struggle. But the grim reaper says no, Ralph, you can't do that. He was stricken with cancer, and as Job of old, that was not enough, so while God held his soul, cancer held his body. Consumption seized his lungs, and in spite of all that medical skill in New Orleans and Gulfport and Lyman, Miss., could do, consumption and cancer claimed him at last. Bro. Cowart suffered untold agonies, and for about 60 days before death he was unconscious. He had a competent trained nurse with him and the very best of medical attention. But all in vain. We miss him in the church. We miss him in the home. We miss a citizen of sterling worth. His death is a sad, sad loss to us. But our loss is his eternal gain, we know. We laid his remains in old Whittington graveyard to await the great rising day. The funeral exercises were held by Rev. L. Fayard, assisted by Rev. R. T. Pickett. To all the loved ones, to the bereaved wife, look to Jesus, for in him is comfort and joy forever. Grieve not as those that have no hope, for though he be dead, yet shall he live. He will never come back. It is true, but in Jesus' bosom let us seek him. May God's blessings rest on all the bereaved ones.—Rev. L. Fayard.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

Clear as crystal—pure as snow—The richest, tenderest and most healthful jellies are made from Crystal Gelatine. No home should be without it.

Each package makes two full quarts. You can eat this dainty jelly when you can afford no other dessert. Fine for children as well as grown-ups. Does not curdle and is delicious with fruits. You should try it this very day.

Ask your grocer. Send his name and we will mail you free sample package.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.
121 A Beverly St.
BOSTON, MASS.

ESTABLISHED 1858
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

BLMYER BELL CHURCH BELLS
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Bowlden BELL CHURCH & SCHOOL BELLS
Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

It has been wisely said that every really useful, every active man in any sense, is a hopeful man.—Selected.

Bishop Hendrix announced to the Conference of the Synod for the North Central District, at Hays, Kan., that he had received information from the Board of Christian Education of the Synod for the North Central District, of the Board of Trustees of Vanderbilt University, at Nashville, Tenn., that the Board of Trustees of Vanderbilt University had decided to the effect that no meeting of the Board of Trustees would be held in Nashville, Tenn., on the 14th day of May, 1935.

votes was declared elected. No one else having received a majority of the votes, a third ballot was taken, which when counted, showed no one elected. Those receiving the highest votes were: Dr. W. R. Lambuth, 138; Dr. E. D. Mouzon, 132; Dr. R. G. Waterhouse, 132; H. M. DuBose, 108; W. F. McMurry, 105; James H. McCoy, 103. The Conference then took a fourth ballot, and after considerable routine work, adjourned with the doxology and benediction.

TUESDAY, TWELFTH DAY.

At 9:15 a. m., of the twelfth day, Bishop Hoss took the chair, and said: The Conference will come to order. Dr. John M. Moore will lead the devotional exercises of the morning.

Dr. Moore read I. Cor. xiii. After Hymn 180, "All hail the power of Jesus' name," was sung, Dr. Moore offered prayer, and Hymn 312, "O happy day, that fixed my choice," was sung.

The minutes of yesterday afternoon's session were read and approved.

The name of C. H. Briggs was announced as chairman of the Committee on Episcopacy in place of Collins Denny, who has been elected a Bishop.

The tellers reported the result of the fourth ballot for Bishops, as follows: W. R. Lambuth, 163; R. G. Waterhouse, 163; E. D. Mouzon, 155; J. H. McCoy, 121; H. M. DuBose, 103; W. F. McMurry, 91; W. N. Ainsworth, 87; J. E. Dickey, 40; N. L. Linebaugh, 25.

The Bishop: Dr. Walter R. Lambuth, Dr. Edwin D. Mouzon, Dr. Richard G. Waterhouse, having each received a majority of all the votes cast, are elected Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

You will prepare your ballots for another man.

Bishop Hoss: As far back as 1820 there came a stormy time in the history of the Methodist Church in this country. As a result of the disturbances at that time there came into being a new Methodist Church, the Methodist Protestant Church. Between that Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, there was for some years an acrimonious debate. We have reached the point at which we are all ready to confess that as far as the main contention of the Methodist Protestants were concerned, they were entirely right. I have the very great pleasure of introducing to you Dr. T. H. Lewis, of the Methodist Protestant Church, who in the course of the morning will deliver to you a fraternal message from that body. The Conference rose in a body to greet Dr. Lewis.

The secretary called the roll of the Conferences for the election of the seventh Bishop.

The Bishop: That completes the call of the roll. Clear the aisles and sit down, and we will resume business.

Report No. 11 of the Committee on Episcopacy was taken up and after considerable discussion was adopted.

The Bishop: The tellers are here, and ready to report.

The whole number of votes cast are 299; 150 are necessary to a choice:

William Ainsworth, 37; James Cannon, Jr., 6; I. W. Cooper, 1; James E. Dickey, 1; H. M. DuBose, 6; G. C. Rankin, 1; Frank M. Thomas, 3; James H. McCoy, 19; W. F. McMurry, 30.

The Bishop: There is no election.

The order of the day is before you.

A Delegate: I move that the order of the day be postponed until we have taken another vote.

There was much confusion, but after silence was secured, the roll of the Conferences was called, and another ballot for Bishop was taken.

The Bishop: The secretary will read the credentials of Dr. T. H. Lewis, the fraternal messenger from the Methodist Protestant Church.

Dr. Watkins read the credentials.

The Bishop: If such men as Nicholas Snethen and Thomas A. Stockton, and other such men were suddenly to drop down into your General Conference, composed one-half of laymen, what would they say? I am not able to answer the question, but I would refer them to Dr. Lewis. It gives me very great pleasure to introduce to you Rev. Dr. Thomas H. Lewis, of the Methodist Protestant Church, and I assure you he is able to deliver his message, and carry it home.

(At the point in his address where the speaker gave a marvelous description of the birth of spiritual life in Methodism, there was a wonderful burst of redoubled applause, and Bishop Hoss rose, his handkerchief in hand, and the Conference with him gave the speaker the Chautauqua salute.)

The Bishop: There is only one man in our Church competent to answer that address, and I have asked Bishop Willson to do so, but he is suffering from an infirmity of his throat, and cannot do it. But I want him at least to stand up and let us look at him.

Bishop Willson arose, and was received with great applause by the Conference.

Bishop Hoss then made a happy response to Dr. Lewis' address and the Conference sang with great enthusiasm, "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

Dr. John O. Willson, for himself and M. B. Kelly, offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That we have heard with profound joy the eloquent and able address of Dr. Lewis.

Second—That the subject of his great address be referred to the Committee on Church Relations.

The Bishop: All of you who will approve this resolution, say aye. Those opposed, no. They are unanimously adopted.

P. S. Rader: I offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Publishing Agents be instructed to print 10,000 copies of Dr. Lewis' address in such form and style as will be suitable for use among our people.

The motion was put by the Bishop, and was adopted.

The tellers returned with the ballot for one Bishop. The Bishop announced that 300 votes had been cast; necessary to a choice, 151.

W. N. Ainsworth, 23; James Cannon, Jr., 4; I. W. Cooper, 1; F. P. Culver, 1; G. H. Detwiler, 1; James E. Dickey, 1; H. M. DuBose, 62; H. B. Johnston, 4; J. J. N. Kenney, 2; N. L. Linebaugh, 2; F. M. Thomas, 4; W. F. McMurry, 36; James H. McCoy, 153.

The Bishop: James H. McCoy, having received a majority of all the ballots, is declared elected Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

J. O. Willson: I move that all of the Bishops-elect be invited to seats on the platform.

The Bishop: You hear the motion? If you will so invite them, say aye. Those opposed, no. They are cordially invited.

Changes in delegations, owing to the election of members of these delegations as Bishops, were announced, and the names sent to the secretary.

Bishop Willson: It is very desirable, and it is but right, that these brethren elected, should be consecrated to their work at the earliest possible day. We have, therefore, fixed upon Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock, as the time of ordination.

Bishop Hoss: Bishop Willson requests me to say that the ordination service will be held in the Central Methodist Church, South.

Several delegates were allowed leave of absence after to-day's session.

The Bishop: You are acting, Brethren, under a continuing order. The next business is to elect a book editor, and editor of the Quarterly Review. Prepare your ballots.

J. M. Barcus: I move that when we adjourn, it be to meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The tellers came in, and the result of the ballot for book editor was announced as follows: Votes cast, 286; necessary to an election, 144. Gross Alexander had 274, and was elected.

On motion of W. N. Ainsworth, the Conference adjourned, with the singing of the doxology, and the benediction pronounced by Dr. Lewis, fraternal delegate from the Methodist Protestant Church.

AFTERNOON SESSION, TWELFTH DAY.

Bishop Hoss called the Conference to order and asked Dr. J. O. Willson, of South Carolina, to conduct the devotions. Dr. Willson asked the Conference to join in singing No. 208.

The Bishop: The secretary will read the minutes of the morning's session.

After singing,

"A charge to keep I have," the minutes were read, and a motion to approve was adopted.

Bishop H. C. Morrison took the chair, and was received with great applause by the Conference.

Secretary Watkins read a communication from various bodies in San Antonio, Texas, inviting the next General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1914 to be held in that city.

Bishop Morrison: What will you do with that paper?

On motion the paper was referred to the Committee on the next General Conference.

The secretary presented a similar communication from Atlanta, Ga., bearing various endorsements. This paper was on motion, referred to the Committee on the next General Conference.

The Bishop: We will now ballot for the editor of the Christian Advocate.

The secretary called the roll of the Conferences, and the tellers retired.

James Cannon, Jr., I move to take the call of standing committees.

The Bishop: There need be no call, as that is a part of the standing order.

At this time the tellers announced the following ballot, the first ballot for the editor of the Christian Advocate: G. B. Winton, 127; T. M. Ivey, 44; J. M. Moore, 35; E. W. Anderson, 27; W. C. Lovett, 27. Two more ballots were taken for editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate. Dr. Ivey received 157 votes on the third ballot and was declared elected. The Conference adjourned with the benediction.

WEDNESDAY, THIRTEENTH DAY.

The thirteenth day's session of the Conference was opened with devotional exercises led by Dr. J. B. Cox, of the Central Mexico Mission Conference. The first song was "Come, Thou Fount of Every Blessing." The Scripture lesson was from the 27th Psalm. After the singing of "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," Dr. Cox offered a prayer.

Following the reading of the minutes, Bishop Carman of the Methodist Church, of Canada, was presented.

The second ballot for secretary of the board of missions was taken.

Bishop Morrison yielded the chair to Bishop Atkins, who presided at to-day's session.

Dr. W. W. Pinson was elected secretary of the board of missions, receiving 185 votes to 82 for Dr. O. E. Brown, of Vanderbilt University. Dr. Pinson succeeds Bishop-elect W. R. Lambuth. Dr. Pinson has been connected with Dr. Lambuth as assistant secretary. He is a member of the Louisville Conference.

The report of the finance committee was read recommending the following men as trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South: Goodloe Cockrill, Preston Vaughn, A. J. Lamar, Thomas S. Webster, and J. R. Stewart, each for eight years and A. F. Watkins for four. The report was adopted.

Judge M. E. Lawson offered a resolution that no members be excused unless upon the most urgent grounds. It was adopted.

Dr. Naphtali Luccock, the fraternal messenger from the Methodist Episcopal Church, was introduced. The time for receiving his message was changed from Friday to Thursday night. Dr. W. F. McMurry, of Louisville, was re-elected secretary of the board of Church Extension by a vote of 249 out of 289 cast.

Dr. H. M. DuBose, secretary of the Epworth League, took the floor on a matter of personal privilege. He said he had been twelve years in this position. He asked that his name be not considered in this connection as he wished to resume pastoral work.

Bishop Honda, the "Asbury of Japan," made a short address of farewell. He had greatly enjoyed his stay here and had learned much during his stay. He asked for the prayers of this Church for the Japan work.

The committee on church relations submitted a report recommending that the representatives of this Church in the federal council of Methodists be instructed to work for carrying into effect the suggestions of Church union as embraced in Dr. Lewis' address. The college of Bishops was also instructed to select delegates to a meeting in 1912 to discuss this question.

The Vanderbilt University affair, concerning the relations of the Church and the University, was amicably settled when the compromise report of the committee on education was almost unanimously adopted. The report adopted accepts the findings of the Vanderbilt Commission as a true definition of the relation of the Church and the University; that the Bishops are common law visitors to the University; and that the General Conference has the power to elect or provide for the election of the trustees of the University. The compromise consisted in allowing the General Conference to elect three and that in the future the board of trust of Vanderbilt should nominate trustees and the board of education affirm the nomination. The nomination of the following by the committee on education, as Vanderbilt trustees, was ratified by the Conference: Col. N. E. Harris, of Macon; A. W. Biggs, of Memphis; V. A. Godbey, of Austin, Tex.

To select the place of holding the Conference in 1914, the following committee was elected: J. G. Brown, of Raleigh; Thomas B. King, of Memphis; M. Thomas, of Chattanooga; L. W. Davis, of Baltimore; Rev. A. J. Lamar, of Nashville, Tenn. The following cities have submitted official invitations: San Antonio, Tex.; Louisville, Tampa, and Atlanta.

The first ballot for secretary of the board of education resulted in no election, as did the second. The leading men on the first ballot were Dr. J. D. Hammond, the present incumbent, 108; Dr. J. E. Dickey, 92; James Cannon, Jr., 49; second ballot, Dr. Hammond, 101; Dr. Dickey, 130; Dr. Cannon, 47. On the third Dr. Dickey was elected, receiving 177 votes. Dr. Hammond, 59; Dr. Cannon, 44.

D. M. Smith and A. J. Lamar were re-elected publishing agents.

Rev. M. Hori, the fraternal messenger from Japan, thanked the Conference for its many kindnesses shown him while here.

Bishop Atkins made a short address of appreciation of the visit of these two native Japanese, whom he termed "the fruit of our work."

The report of Bishop-elect Denny, the fraternal delegate to the Methodist Episcopal Church, was read, stating that he had performed his duties to the best of his ability. He found a healthy spirit of friendship on the part of the Methodist Episcopal Church for this Conference.

The first ballot for secretary of the Epworth League resulted in no choice.

The highest vote was as follows: J. M. Barcus, 53; J. A. Burrow, 67; F. S. Parker, 83.

The committee on church relation reported favorably upon the suggestion of Dr. Lewis for a closer union of Methodists, and asked that the representatives in the federal council of Methodists be authorized to do all in their power to further this union and that the college of Bishops appoint delegates to a meeting to be held in 1912 to discuss the question of union. This report was adopted.

As a committee to select the next place of meeting and provided for all questions of entertainment, the following, nominated by the special committee, were confirmed: J. G. Brown, of Raleigh; Thomas B. King, of Memphis; M. Thomas, of Chattanooga; L. W. Davis, of Baltimore; and Rev. A. J. Lamar, of Nashville.

On the second ballot for secretary of the Epworth League, there was no choice. The principal candidates stood: J. M. Barcus, 33; J. A. Burrow, 97; F. S. Parker, 130.

The tellers reported the third ballot for Epworth League Secretary, and Dr. F. S. Parker was declared elected, he having received 166 votes.

Dr. E. B. Chappell was re-elected as editor of Sunday school literature by 277 votes out of 293 cast.

When the Conference adjourned for the afternoon session, it had taken one ballot for secretary of the board of missions, to succeed Bishop-elect W. R. Lambuth. There was no election. The high vote stood, Dr. O. E. Brown, 104; Dr. W. W. Pinson, 66; Dr. G. H. Detwiler, 15.

The question of granting equal rights of the laity to the women of the Church was made a special order for Thursday at 10 o'clock.

THURSDAY, FOURTEENTH DAY.

The Conference met at 9 o'clock. Bishop Eugene R. Hendrix took the chair and presided throughout the morning.

W. N. Ainsworth made a motion that the conference reconsider its action of yesterday afternoon, when Monday, at the close of the morning session was fixed as the time for final adjournment, and fix Friday afternoon instead. The point of order was raised that Dr. Ainsworth did not vote in favor of the resolution adopted, and Bishop Hendrix ruled that the point was well taken, and that Dr. Ainsworth was out of order. Another delegate who did vote for the resolution adopted yesterday, made a motion that the conference adjourn on Friday afternoon, instead of Monday, and Dr. Ainsworth made a motion as a substitute that Friday evening be named as the time for adjournment, but this motion and the substitute were lost.

Bishop Warren A. Candler was recognized on a point of privilege, and presented to Bishop Joseph S. Key a handsome silver loving cup as an expression of love and esteem from the delegates of the Texas conferences, within the territory of which Bishop Key has resided for a number of years, having gone there from Georgia, his native state.

Bishop Candler paid a high tribute to the life and work of Bishop Key, and in placing the cup in his hands he said that he knew it to be filled with the affection of those who had given it.

Bishop Key was deeply affected, and simply said in receiving the gift: "Brethren, I am not worthy of this. I give you my heart's thanks."

A resolution was adopted in which was recommended the appointment of a commission to consider thoroughly the Laymen's Missionary Movement and its work during the quadrennium to come, and report the result of this consideration to the next General Conference.

Announcement was made that the committee on General Conference entertainment had been organized with T. B. King, of Memphis, chairman, and L. M. Thomas, of Chattanooga, as secretary. This committee is subject to call for a meeting at any time, and all matters concerning the next General Conference will be referred to it.

A telegram of fraternal greeting from the conference was sent to the general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, which convened in annual session yesterday in Lewisburg, W. Va.

The women's memorial for full rights and privileges of the laity was now taken up, and a spirited and lengthy debate followed.

On motion, the privilege was granted Miss Bennett to speak, in the midst of the discussion, and she was heard with undivided attention and interest.

After expressing her appreciation of the privilege accorded her, Miss Bennett urged the conference to adopt the minority report submitted by the committee on revisals, and thus put the measure on its passage, to be finally settled four years hence.

She referred briefly to the great work for the Church which the women are doing in the home and foreign mission departments, and stated in this connection that the money raised by their efforts reached far into the hundreds of thousands of dollars, yet because the women had no official voice in the direction of church affairs they were allowed to direct the use of only $5,000. She emphasized the point that in the work of the Church the women are needed in an official way in matters of counsel and in directing the funds of the Church. There could be nothing unwomanly, she said, in the fact of a woman's having a voice in the conferences of the Church and in her counsel being given in directing the course which the money shall take in the different departments of the Church.

Speaking of the far West and other districts where the Church is not strong and where pastors and presiding elders are compelled to call upon the women of the Church to act as stewards, superintendents of Sunday schools in many instances, she said: "When you preachers do that, you are disregarding the law of the Church, and how can you expect the young people of the Church to regard its law when you are disregarding it?"

Rev. George Stuart spoke immediately after Miss Bennett. He stated in his opening remarks that he wanted it thoroughly understood that he was against the memorial. Then he said, in part: "All legislation is made by majorities. All of us are doing about what our wives say for us to do. My wife is on the same side I am. We make laws for rules, and not for exceptions. God's law is, husband and wife, father and mother. We make laws for the rule, and the women who do not marry are the exception. We do not make laws for the exception.

There are four things to-day that are directly against the home. First, there is financial ambition. Second, social ambition. Third, political ambition. Fourth, ecclesiastical ambition.

Rev. J. M. Barcus began his speech by saying that it was never intended for men and women to do the same work. "This is not a question of rights," he said, "but a question of division of labors. The women of the Church who are engaged in church work already have enough to do to get the many other women to work who are not at work now. It would be a disadvantage to the men in the Church to grant laity rights to the women."

After the subject had been thoroughly discussed there were a number of calls for the question. The majority report, which recommended non-conference in the petition of the women, was read, and the minority report also. The latter recommended certain changes in the discipline so as to include women in all of the directions given to the laymen.

The vote was taken first on the minority report, and it was lost by a vote of 74 to 188. The majority report was then adopted.

Conference adjourned at 1 o'clock, Bishop Hendrix pronouncing the benediction.

FRIDAY, FIFTEENTH DAY.

The conference was called to order at 9 o'clock, Bishop Eugene R. Hendrix in the chair. After the devotional service and the reading of the minutes, Bishop Hendrix announced that from this time on the new Bishops would occupy the chair, and the gavel was handed to Bishop Collins Denny.

The subject of lay representation in the district and annual conferences was the first question considered. T. J. Duncan, of the Northwest Texas Conference, claimed the floor on a question of privilege. His request was granted, and he presented to Rev. G. H. Detwiler, the host of the conference, a handsome gold-headed cane from the delegations from Mississippi and Texas, as a token of appreciation of his services in contributing to the comfort and pleasure of the members of the conference.

A resolution was offered in which it was recommended that the publishing agents pay to the secretary of the conference $100 and to each of the assistants $50 for the excellent service rendered during the conference. Dr. W. F. Watkins, secretary, for himself and the assistants, protested against the adoption of the recommendation, saying that he and the assistants were glad to render this service to the conference without any thought of remuneration.

The committee on revisals submitted the remainder of its report, which was acted upon serially. Each item of this report related to changes in the ritual of the Church.

Bishop Denny expressed his appreciation of the courtesy and co-operation extended to him by the conference, and handed the gavel to Bishop John C. Kilgo, who took the chair.

The majority and minority reports of the committee on revisals, relative to the change of the name of the Church, were taken up, and one of the most interesting debates of the conference followed. The arguments made in support of keeping the present name of the Church without change, were the association and sentiment clinging around it, the legal point to be involved if a change is made, and the fact that it is not so much the name that causes opposition in some sections of the country as it is the gospel that is preached and the opposition which preachers make against sin.

Those who supported the report argued most of all upon the ground that in the West especially, the word "South" was a hindrance to the progress of the Church. The majority report to change the name to "The Methodist Church" carried by a vote slightly less than two-thirds. The order of the day for 12 o'clock was the hearing the address of the fraternal messenger from the Colored M. E. Church.

Bishop W. B. Murrah took the chair at 12:30. He introduced Rev. R. L. Bonner, fraternal messenger, who, while speaking of morality, assured the conference that his church was doing its utmost to prevent crime, and that it was trying to raise the colored race to a higher standard, but was not in sympathy with efforts at social equality.

The afternoon session began at 3 o'clock, with Bishop Denny in the chair, and Rev. H. P. Hamill conducted the devotional service. After the reading of the minutes, Bishop W. R. Lambuth took the chair. Rev. R. F. Campbell, state president of the Lord's Day Alliance for North Carolina, was introduced, and addressed the conference in the interest of Sabbath observance. A resolution was adopted pledging the support of the conference to this movement.

By special privilege, Bishop Candler read to the conference a communication from the College of Bishops, conveying the information that the Bishops had found it advisable to place their veto upon the action of the conference at the morning session, by which it had voted in favor of a change in the name of the Church, until this question can be submitted to the annual conferences and obtain from them a three-fourths vote in favor of such a change.

A resolution was offered almost immediately removing the College of Bishops, in their round of conferences just preceding the next meeting of the General Conference, to ask the conferences this question: "Do you desire the name of the Church changed from Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the Methodist Church?"

This resolution was amended so that the question as amended reads: "Do you desire the name of the Church changed from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the Methodist Episcopal Church in America?" An aye and no vote was taken on this resolution, and it was adopted by a large majority.

Conference adjourned at 5 o'clock with benediction.

SATURDAY, SIXTEENTH DAY.

The conference met at 9 a.m. After devotional exercises, the minutes were read and approved.

The Vanderbilt University matter was further compromised to-day, when the conference adopted a resolution that in the future not more than 25 per cent of the trustees of a college or university under church control may be non-Methodists, if deemed necessary. This is done to legalize the action of the Vanderbilt trustees in electing William K. Vanderbilt and others not Methodists to trusteeships at Vanderbilt.

The proposition for a re-statement of faith of the Methodist Church died a natural death when the commission reported that the General Conference of the M. E. Church had refused to co-operate, and the commission was discharged.

Only the matter of a committee report not being in proper form perhaps to-day saved to the Apostle's Creed the words "holy catholic church," for which "Church of God" was attempted to be substituted. The proposition had a majority of four votes, when it was thrown out on its technical form.

Dr. Lincock and ex-Gov. Hanley, fraternal delegates from the M. E. Church, took an affectionate leave of the conference. Gov. Hanley expressed the hope that the two great Methodist bodies would become one in deed and fact.

A resolution was passed requiring bishops to read the appointments of preachers at annual conferences in the presence of the presiding elders before announcing them in open session of the conference.

On recommendation of the committee on itinerancy, a measure was adopted providing for a court of appeals to which a preacher under charges can appeal his case in the interval of the General Conference.

An increase in the assessments for educational purposes was authorized by the conference. The conference voted to hold the next session of the General Conference beginning the first Wednesday in May, 1914. Several measures favorable to the superannuated preachers of the annual conferences were passed.

The question of an assessment for the endowment fund for worn-out preachers was taken up and lost. A resolution was passed asking that a committee be appointed by the College of Bishops to consider a plan for increased activities of the laymen and for larger representation in the annual conferences.

The conference voted in favor of a recommendation of the committee on missions to appoint a committee on evangelism to operate under the home department of the board of missions, and to provide for the evangelistic movements throughout the Church.

The night session opened with Bishop W. A. Candler in the chair. The salary of the secretary of the board of education was raised to $2,600. An appropriation of $12,000 was voted for the Pacific Methodist Advocate. The report of the committee on episcopacy regarding the semi-annual meeting of the College of Bishops in New Orleans was approved.

The Board of Church Extension was given authority to move its headquarters from Louisville, Ky.

The last measure adopted by the conference before adjourning sine die was the adoption of a report that a committee of five be appointed to co-operate with the national committee on uniform divorce law.

The motion to adjourn sine die was carried at 10:35 p.m. Bishop Wilson pronounced the benediction.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd.
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of Lumber
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH
LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.
736 Union Street. Phone, Main 585.

Phone Main.
ROOMS and BOARD
634 and 638 SOUTH STREET
(Lafayette Square)
Corner St. Charles St. NEW ORLEANS, LA.
Unlimited Meals. Alvin Porter, Mgr.

Church News

Dr. J. A. Stubblefield, former president of Central Female College, at Cleveland, Tenn., died on May 10.

The Garrett Biblical Institute has a graduating class this year numbering forty-two. This is the largest in the history of the institution.

John D. Rockefeller has offered $3,000 a year for the support of a work among the Italians of New York, under the auspices of the Baptist Church.

On May 16 the board of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church met at Philadelphia, Pa., and issued a statement upholding the methods of the Church in Italy.

The leader of the great Welsh revival was Evans Roberts. After the great strain of that work he suffered a physical breakdown, but it is said he has fully recovered his strength, and will continue his religious work.

Dr. J. W. Bachman, of Chattanooga, Tenn., was elected Moderator of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, in session at Lewisburg, W. Va. This is the greatest honor in the gift of the Assembly.

The Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church will be twenty-one years old the 6th of next July. It comes to its majority with a cash balance of nearly $2,500. That is a splendid showing for the cause of the young people.

The plans for the buildings of the great Robert A. Barnes Hospital in the city of St. Louis have been approved. The institution will have a superb site fronting on Forest Park. Its endowment will be a round million, and it will be far and away the largest and best equipped hospital in the Southern States. It will be owned and operated by the M. E. Church, South, through a representative body of trustees.

The next Ecumenical Methodist Conference will assemble in Toronto, Canada, in October, 1911. The program is now being arranged, and the gathering is expected to be the most representative one ever held upon the planet. From all quarters of the globe the delegates will come, and it is probable that the assembly will contain men of every race and clime. The sun in his march around the world never sets upon the dominion of Methodism.

The African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church was organized in New York in 1796, with three preachers and one hundred members. It now has 9 Bishops, 36 Conferences, 3,500 preachers, and 500,000 members. Fraternal greetings to our General Conference from this body were brought by Rev. G. C. Clement, D.D., who delivered a brilliant and forceful address. He is the editor of the general organ of his Church, The Star of Zion, which is published in Charlotte, N. C.

The Methodists of Texas are grappling with the problem of correlating and strengthening their educational institutions. Dallas has offered $400,000 and a site to have the Southwestern University and the Polytechnic College of Fort Worth consolidated and brought to that city, and the prospect is that this will be done. The plan under consideration contemplates the establishment of a training school at Georgetown, the present site of the Southwestern University, and the removal of Mrs. Key's great Female College from Sherman to Fort Worth to occupy the property of the Polytechnic. It is reported that no effort will be made to maintain a school in Sherman; but that the buildings and grounds there will be sold. We wish our friends of the Lone Star State success in this undertaking. We think their policy of concentration is a wise one, which might well be imitated elsewhere in the Church.

CHILDREN'S DAY IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

To the Pastors and Sunday School Superintendents of the North Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren:—Our last General Conference made provision for the raising by the general Sunday School interests of the Church the sum of $50,000 for the endowment of the Sunday School Chair in Vanderbilt University.

The object of this movement was to provide a competent department in the university for the instruction of the theological students and others who attend the university, in the matter of the organization, equipment and administration of the Sunday schools throughout the Church. Other churches have already set the example in this regard. Our ecclesiastical law-makers have recognized at last that the greatest duty our pastors can perform is that of the systematic instruction of the children of the Church through the agency of the Sunday school and the family. To do this work well requires special equipment. Personal fitness is a great factor, to be sure, but every young pastor can be greatly quickened in his work through instruction as to time, manner, agencies and facilities for doing it.

Certain portions of the Children's Day collections were set apart by the last General Conference to raise this endowment, and it was hoped that the money would long since have been in hand, but only about $15,000 of the $50,000 has yet been raised, which leaves something like $35,000 yet to be raised, and our General Sunday School Board has undertaken to do so this year. Of this amount, the General Board thinks that our Conference ought to raise $12,000.

If the Children's Day programs are well executed and the interest that is possible to be engendered is worked up on that occasion, and the matter properly placed before the people, we have no doubt that the required sum will be forthcoming during the present summer.

This letter is to bring the matter to your personal attention and to ask your energetic enlistment and interest in the problem. We need not only ask your personal contribution, but also that the matter be thoroughly discussed in the Sunday schools, and that great pains be taken to have enthusiastic Children's Day meetings, and gratifying collections will be almost sure to follow. The necessary programs and such other literature as is needed can be had by addressing the undersigned agent, or the Publishing House at Nashville. Fraternally yours,

GEO. J. LEFTWICH, Chairman.

R. P. NEBLETT, Agent of the Board.

P. S.—The Children's Day programs have been ordered sent to each pastor in the Conference. If for any reason you have not received yours, or you need any more, or know of any one who should have copies of the program, who has not yet received them, a notice to me will be gladly received and promptly looked after. Do your best for us this year.—R. P. N.

1402 Bell Avenue, Columbus, Miss., May 10, 1910.

A MEMOIR.

Rev. Quincy Anderson Oats, son of Parham Var-brough and Nancy Stewart Oats, was born in Moore County, N. C., May 2, 1849. He came to Mississippi in 1869, where he managed a plantation for Captain Beauford in the Delta for three years, during which time he was licensed to preach. Brother Oats joined the North Mississippi Conference in 1872 at Corinth. Only three of the large class of twenty-five or more survive him in the Conference—Revs. R. M. Davis, R. A. Ellis and W. S. Lagrone, the last named being on the effective list.

Brother Oats' first ten years in the ministry were given to the Delta, before there were any railroads, when much of the travel to plant the banner of our risen Christ there, had to be done over backwater in dugouts and the swimming of many streams on horseback. Many of the sturdy Christians that help to make up the best towns in that region were influenced to righteousness by his preaching and godly life. In consequence of the threatened bad health of his wife, he transferred to the Los Angeles Conference and spent ten years, serving as presiding elder and pastor-in-charge of many of the best churches in that Conference. He came back to his mother conference in 1899, and since that time he served the following charges: Friars Point, two years; Verona, two years; Crawford, two years. He was the untiring and lovable manager of our Mississippi Orphan's Home two years. Brother Oats found the children of that institution at Water Valley, in a rented house, their home having burned down, and he, co-operating with the board of directors, set to work to secure a new building, which was located at Jackson. With untiring interest for the new home, he canvassed the state as far as he could and secured most of the money with which our present home was built. Having equipped and moved the children into their new quarters, he became the loving and loved Christian father of all those children the remainder of his term. And now many of those fatherless ones speak in terms of affection of Brother Oats. His devotion to them was unstinted, and we will never know what sacrifices he made and how much he endured for the orphan children until revealed in eternity.

Brother Oats' last work was Shuqualak, where he planted himself in the hearts of those people as no other man had done. Though seriously afflicted during the last four and a half months, he had pulled up to the middle of his fourth year on that charge, and his people, seeing his enfeebled condition, gladly granted him two or more months' vacation. He came to Verona to rest a few days at the home of his only daughter, Mrs. M. O. Clark, before proceeding to his old home in North Carolina to see his mother. But Verona became his last earthly resting-place. He gradually grew feebler, until the sixteenth day after his arrival at Verona, when he fell on sleep. He stayed with us long enough to let his daughter, son-in-law and a few friends have the pleasure of the last ministrations to a servant of God.

Brother Oats became a Christian at the age of 8 or 9 years. He grew in grace and knowledge of God's Word to the last day of his earthly stay. He was a strong preacher, had a strong grasp on the Word of God, a keen insight to its meaning, never handling it has been known to sleep in the coffee barrel, or, if the cat's away, that gives the rats and mice a chance. Then there's the dust of the atmosphere and the pickled-pigs-feet and mackerel smells that coffee in open barrels take in and so readily absorb. Oh yes, you get a plenty when you buy loose coffee and have the grocer wrap it up for you in a paper bag that leaks strength and flavor all the way to your home; but do you want it all, or simply a clean, crisp, fresh, high-grade article like packed in dust-proof, strength-preserving, germ-free, air-tight cans.

THE GROCERY CAT

LUZIANNE COFFEE

America's Foremost Brand Sold Everywhere.

THE REILY-TAYLOR CO.,

New Orleans, U. S. A.

deceitfully, he not only preached it, but lived it. Our brother was broad in his catholicity; he loved Christians of other folds. Honesty, justice and mercy were among his crowning virtues; meekness, humbleness of spirit, unostentatiousness, were marked prominently in his life. Self-importance was abhorrent to him.

Rev. Q. A. Oats was married twice. His first companion only living about two years after marriage. She was a Miss Collier. His second marriage took place Jan. 29, 1882, in Woodville, Miss., to Miss Alice Coleman, who was teaching in Edward McGehee College, at that place. Her life was one of labor and love, with her husband, for the Master, the one preaching, the other teaching. To them were born a son and a daughter, S. C. and Carroll Oats Clark, who, with their mother, grieve because of the loss of counsel and companionship of husband and father. Brother Oats kept his lamp trimmed and burning. He said frequently before the end came that he was ready. He talked with his family frequently about his prospect for the glory world. We will miss him at Conference. We have sustained a personal loss, but we know where to find him.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth, yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

Thus passed away this noble man of God's creation on Friday morning, at 11:15 o'clock, the 6th of May, 1910, aged 61 years and 6 days. D. W. BABB.

HOW TO SAVE THE CHILDREN.

The work must begin in the home. If parents pray with their children and talk with them about their souls, they may expect to see them converted early. Those who will not pray and talk with them need not expect to save their own souls nor see their children saved.

The Sunday school must help. Teachers must talk with scholars and learn which have been converted. Teachers failing to do this should resign. Let the superintendent ask the teacher, in the presence of the scholars, how many have been converted?

Let the pastor ask the superintendent, in the presence of the school, how many unconverted persons are in the school? In this way the whole school would soon learn that the one object of the Sunday school is to save souls. A. D. BETTS, Greensboro, N. C.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE.

For one year	$1.50
(Commission to agents 15 cents for each subscription.)
Six months	.75
To preachers	1.00
To widows of preachers	1.00

Modes of the Heavenly Life.

A series of five sermons on the work of the Holy Spirit.

By REV. WALTER G. HARBIN.

Price, 75 cents.

Send to CHAS. O. CHALMERS, 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

Secular News and Comment

On account of the great suffering in Costa Rica caused by the recent earthquake, the Red Cross Society of the United States will send relief.

The legislature of Louisiana will make a trip to Washington in a body in the interest of securing the World's Panama Exposition for New Orleans in 1915.

On May 16 the United States Senate passed a bill providing a system of parole for Federal prisoners sentenced for more than one year, who have served at least one-third of their term.

The Democratic Senators are much displeased with the policy of Secretary of State Knox in regard to the situation in Nicaragua, and Senator Stone, of Missouri, is preparing to introduce a resolution of inquiry.

The funeral of the late King Edward of England took place Friday in the presence of a vast concourse of people. Many of the reigning sovereigns of Europe were in attendance. The United States was represented by Theodore Roosevelt as special ambassador.

A bill has been favorably reported in both houses of Congress, compelling all ocean-going vessels, carrying fifty or more passengers, to be equipped with wireless telegraph apparatus. If passed the law will take effect July 1, 1911, and suitable penalty will follow its violation.

The recent speech of Speaker Cannon in which he roundly denounced the insurgent Republican members of Congress has started anew the bitter hostility existing between them and the insurgents now threaten to introduce a resolution declaring the chair of the Speaker vacant.

Argentina, one of the most progressive and prosperous republics of South America, will celebrate this year the one-hundredth anniversary of its independence from Spain, by holding a world's Exposition. The prosperity of the republic is seen from the fact that it stands fourth among the nations in the amount of its gold reserve.

The Austrian Government controls practically the entire supply of pitchblende from which radium is extracted. The largest deposits of pitchblende in the world are found at Joachimsthal, Bohemia. All the radium extracted must be turned over to the Government. It is packed in cells of lead, and is sold under the direction of the Minister of Public Works. The price is about $84 a milligram—0.015 grains.

The return of Halley's comet has attracted great attention throughout the world. Astronomers have kept their telescopes upon it constantly, and have observed many interesting phenomena. At a time when it was supposed to be seen only in the west the tail appeared plainly in the east. A short time after that a broad spectrum of light appeared across the sun, extending a considerable distance to each side. A comprehensive report of the scientific observers is awaited with great interest.

There is a notion in this country, and one that is frequently expressed, that nothing is easier than to conduct a newspaper business, whereas there is nothing more difficult. The reason for this flippant notion is that journalism is not a profession, but a trade. A profession is something that is learned in school, such as law, medicine and theology, while a trade is learned in the workshop, where, commencing as an apprentice, the diligent and intelligent person works his way, acquiring knowledge and skill as he goes and constantly gaining judgment from experience. Some of the most disastrous failures in the newspaper world are made by persons who want to fly before they can crawl, who can write with facility or make a show on the outside, but are entirely ignorant of the complicated operations that go to make up a newspaper. Much of the work of making a newspaper is done by the use of machinery and mechanical processes that require skill and knowledge that can only be learned by experience.—The Daily Picayune.

A FORGIVING SPIRIT.

An unforgiving temper characterizes the most of people. Perhaps there is nothing more common among people of all classes than this trait is. Very many who possess a number of very admirable qualities, are much lacking in the disposition to forgive the offenses of others against them. They will remember a single offense against them a great deal longer than they will remember a favor done for them by the same person. One may grant many valuable favors to a certain person, and then if he chances to offend that person, with no intention of doing him any harm, he will continue to refuse to forgive him for it. And there are very many professors of religion who act thus. A few years ago I unintentionally offended the editor of a religious paper. I knew nothing of the ground of the offense until word came to me from him, and it bore the marks of indignation. The spirit manifested was more spiteful than respectful. I at once wrote to him in the kindest manner possible, and asked his forgiveness; but, a second letter from him showed that he had no purpose to forgive me, and still later action gave proof of a vindictive spirit. Yet, this man professed to maintain the highest order of piety.

Let no one think that he has a large measure of the Holy Spirit, if he be destitute of a forgiving spirit. The two spirits are not in agreement. One is opposed to the other. The Holy Spirit is a freely forgiving spirit, and he who is possessed by him will manifest a similar temper. A refusal to forgive the confessed offenses of another person is an evidence that the person is devoid of the Holy Spirit. He is also destitute of true brotherly love. He in whom the love of Christ abides, and by which he is ruled, has a forgiving spirit, and no urging is necessary for him to manifest it. C. H. WETHERS.

ATTENTION.

To the Ministers and Delegates of the Baton Rouge District Conference, which meets at Bogalusa, La., May 27-29—

Since early in April I have been trying to secure a reduction in rates for our District Conference, which meets here May 27-30. I have failed on all the roads except the New Orleans Great Northern. I am just now in receipt of a letter granting us a rate of one and one-third plus 25 cents for the round trip from all points. Sale of tickets will be on for two days prior to the opening of Conference.

Now about railroad schedules. The New Orleans and Great Northern runs two trains daily out of New Orleans, one leaving at 6:30 in the morning and another at 4:30 in the afternoon. The latter will get you to Bogalusa at 7 o'clock which will give you one hour to get to your home and be at the church for the 8 o'clock service. The trains over the Y and M. V. arriving at New Orleans at 9:40 a. m. and over the I. C. arriving at 4 o'clock p. m. will give you ample time to make connection with the 4:20 N. O. & G. N. If you come by Hammond and Covington, you will have to remain over night in Covington and take an early train the next day.

Those wishing to go via Kentwood will get a train over the K. E. which will put them at Warrington in good time to get the afternoon train on the N. O. & G. N. coming from Tylertown via Franklinton to Bogalusa.

Now brethren, we hope all will come, and all be on time, and all remain throughout the session. You will be cared for and we promise you a good time.

I will meet you at some point below Bogalusa and place in your hands a program of the Conference, a business directory of the town and the name and location of the place where you will be entertained.

Let us pray that the Conference may be a blessing to all who come and a benediction to the church and town. I am, your servant in Christ.

J. M. ALFORD, Pastor.

Bogalusa, La., May 21, 1910.

WINONA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

This Conference will be held at Moorhead, June 2-5. Rev. W. C. Lester will preach the opening sermon at 8 p. m., Thursday, June 2. This will be the first service. Let all pastors and delegates be present at the first service, if possible. Send your name to Rev. J. T. McCafferty, that he may provide you a home.

E. S. LEWIS, P. E.

We are expecting a large attendance on the sessions of the Winona District Conference, to be held at Moorhead June 3-5. Let each delegate that expects to attend notify me at once. Brethren, it is necessary that you do this that proper arrangements may be made for your entertainment. If there are any expecting to come to the Conference as visitors, they should make arrangements for entertainment before coming. Some of the brethren have sent me their official rolls. I appreciate their good intentions, but the entertainment committee wants the names of the delegates only.

JAS. T. McCAFFERTY.

Moorhead, Miss.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Greenville District Conference will meet at Tunica, June 15-17. Rev. R. L. Allen will preach the opening sermon Wednesday night, the 15th. The business session will open Thursday morning the 16th. It is earnestly hoped that all the members of the Conference will reach there to be at the opening service for a great consecration meeting.

The following examining committees are appointed:

For License to Preach and Admission on Trial—

W. H. Moulter, L. P. Wasson, and W. C. Galloway, For Deacon's and Elder's Orders—W. S. Shilpman, L. A. McKeown and J. W. Price.

A full program will be mailed out to the pastors and laymen shortly. Let us come to Tunica expecting great things from the Lord for the great work of our Church in this Delta. Mr. Editor, we are confidently expecting you.

W. W. WOOLLARD, P. E.

OXFORD DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference of the Oxford District convened at Abbeville, Miss., the 11th, 12th and 13th of May, with the presiding elder, Rev. J. E. Cunningham, in the chair.

A majority of our ministers and district stewards were in attendance, and entered heartily into the meeting.

Much interest along all lines of church work is being manifested throughout the district and we predict for this a successful year.

Large crowds were in attendance each day and able sermons delivered from time to time by different preachers of the district. This was said to be the best District Conference ever held in this district.

Thursday was set apart for the District Meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. W. G. Burks, of Grenada and was most powerfully attended by the Holy Spirit, impressing profoundly the large and attentive audience. Every missionary woman present received an encouraging uplift that doubtless will inspire them to move forward in the noble work they have espoused and love so well. The afternoon session was conducted by Mrs. Emma Binford, of Water Valley for the Foreign and Mrs. Fount Calloway of Oxford, for the Home work. Mrs. S. S. Spence, of Water Valley, was secretary. A number of delegates were in attendance and brought good reports from their auxiliaries. Some excellent papers were read on different phases of Home and Foreign Work, which were very interesting and helpful.

The Conference session closed Friday evening, feeling under lasting obligations to the courteous and hospitable people of Abbeville for the pleasant stay among them.

SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Mr. Editor: The District Conference of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, will be held in Wiggins, June 18-22. Bishop Murrah is expected to preside. The opening sermon will be preached Friday night, June 17, by Rev. J. T. Abney. The Conference will be called to order Saturday at 9 a. m. It is expected that the preachers and delegates will remain over Sunday, and the business of the Conference will be resumed on Monday. The missionary institute will be held in connection with the Conference.

Let us pray that God will greatly bless us and help us to make it a great occasion.

The following committees are appointed: License to Preach—T. B. Holloman, L. A. Dorsey, T. B. Cottrell. Orders—T. W. Adams, B. F. Lewis, H. J. Moore. Recommendation for Admission on Trial—J. M. Morse, E. W. Lipscomb, M. H. Moore.

W. B. JONES, P. E.

NOTICE.

To the Preachers of the Newton District:

Will you please send me at once the names of delegates and local preachers from your charge who expect to attend our District Conference. We will have ample entertainment for the members of the Conference, but can't promise to entertain visitors who have not a special invitation. Would also like to know who expect to come by private conveyance.

The schedule of the roads entering Newton are as follows: A. and V., east bound, 11:25 a. m. and 4:42 p. m.; west bound, 8:05 a. m. and 12:13 noon; M. J. and K. C., north bound, 8:50 a. m. and 12:59 noon; south bound, 10:10 a. m. and 4:07 p. m.

Our people are expecting a great blessing out of the Conference, so come praying that they may not be disappointed. Yours fraternally,

L. F. ALFORD.

FOR SALE.

Theological Library: Hastings's Bible Dictionary, Strong's Concordance, Ellcott's Commentary, Four Years' Course of Study, and other valuable books. Address L. L. 1123 Amella St., New Orleans.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McClosky, Vice-Pres. W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec. Treas. Geo. A. Hero.

A. DISCUSSION OF SUNDAY SCHOOL METHODS.

By A. P. Holt, Superintendent of the Crowley (La.) Sunday School.

With a desire to aid somewhat, if possible, in the forward movement of Sunday school work in this field, I will outline a plan that has been very helpful here, hoping that some Sunday school may be able to adapt the scheme to its needs.

In formulating the year's work, ten points were selected that needed special emphasis in our Sunday school. Each Sunday both pupils and teachers are graded on these points, allowing ten to each, making 100 the perfect or highest possible mark.

For the pupils were chosen (1) attendance, (2) punctuality, (3) lesson, (4) deportment, (5) missionary work, (6) church attendance, (7) contribution, (8) bringing Bibles to Sunday School, (9) Home Department, (10) singing. For the teacher the same points were selected, except that attendance at teachers' meetings was substituted for deportment, it being assumed that all the teachers would conduct themselves properly. Each Sunday, reports are made by classes. The pupils' grades added to the teachers' grades, and the total divided by the entire membership of the class, present and absent, gives the class grade. The hanner is awarded each Sunday to the class having the highest grade. When the term of the contest ends on June 1st, the class having the highest general average during the entire period will have its picture appear in the "Visitor." This works up a commendable spirit of class emulation and teachers and pupils work together to establish a higher class record.

It happens that in some classes, for varying reasons, some pupils drag down the class average, which tends to discourage the balance of the class. To offset this and encourage individual effort an attractive Roll of Honor is provided each month and the names of pupils receiving a grade of 100 every Sunday during the month are placed thereon. The first Roll of Honor contained nine names; last month's, thirty-two names. In addition to this, on Promotion Day all pupils with an average of 90 and over will be promoted "with honor." Thus both individual and class pride are appealed to and the best that is in the individual and the class is developed by inciting a healthy rivalry.

We will discuss each one of these ten points in their order, explaining the system and pointing out the results.

1st. Attendance. On this point only two grades are possible, ten or zero. If the teacher or any pupil is absent the class average is drawn down very materially. Frequently the hanner is lost by the absence of one member. This furnishes an incentive to each one to come and to make an effort to bring his class-mates. Each individual has an additional stimulus, for one absence will deprive him of the privilege of getting on the Roll of Honor for that month and lessen the chances of promotion "with honor." This has increased the attendance and regularity—the attendance varying little from Sunday to Sunday. Even on rainy and bitter cold days there is over 50 per cent of the usual attendance. The school is "evergreen"—that is, it assembles every Sunday, regardless of weather. The teachers have entered as heartily into the plan as the pupils and never miss a Sunday without a valid excuse.

2nd. Punctuality. The grade on this point varies according to the time of arrival, 10 being allowed for presence at opening and decreasing to 5, if present when lesson is taken up; if later, zero is given. This has caused teachers and pupils to be very much more punctual than formerly. Few teachers are ever late and most of the pupils now come on time.

3rd. Lesson. The grades on this point will, of course, vary according to the degree of mastery of the lesson. Much better lessons have resulted, thus helping the teacher to solve one of the most difficult problems and bring up this (the most important) part of the work, because if properly conducted, it will lead the pupils to Christ.

4th. Deportment, as to pupils: attendance, at teachers' meeting, as to teacher. The behavior of the pupil determines his grade on this point and of course varies from zero to ten. Much better order now reigns in our school.

The teachers' meeting, a failure before, has become an interesting and helpful part of our machinery, giving unity to our work and esprit de corps to our school.

5th. Missionary Work. By this is meant work for others. It is interesting to note the work that is being done in this line. Home and foreign work are not separated, but anything that helps to comfort, minister to, and uplift humanity is the lesson taught. The second Sunday of each month is set apart as Missionary Sunday, and the contribution goes into missionary channels. Under the direction of a special Missionary Committee, missionary exercises and drills are given to instruct, to arouse, interest, and to enlist co-operation in the worldwide missionary movement. To give definiteness to the work, a scholarship is to be supported.

6th. Church Attendance. To be perfect on this point requires attendance at our own church at least once on the previous Sunday. By this means the tide of children who leave the church after Sunday school has been turned toward worship in the holy sanctuary. The children are thus learning to attend the regular services of the church and to love the house of the Lord. At the church service they are given special attention, and sermons and parts of sermons are directed specially to them. We expect to raise up a generation of church-goers. Eighty-five per cent of our pupils, beyond the beginners, are members of the church.

7th. Contribution. The regularity of giving and not the amount, is stressed. The poor and the rich are placed on the same plane. A penny gives the same grade as a dollar, any contribution entitling the contributor to ten. This has resulted in about doubling the weekly offering.

8th. Bringing the Bible to Sunday School. This point, likewise, means either ten or zero. At the first count thirty-seven Bibles were present. At the "show of Bibles" last Sunday, 124 were proudly exhibited. The pupil is taught that he is studying not the lesson paper, but the Bible. It is sought to inculcate in him a love for it and to familiarize him with its use. To this end ten minutes each Sunday at the beginning of the lesson period is devoted to teaching the divisions and books of the Bible and other needed information about the Bible itself, as outlined in the International Course of Supplemental Work. There are drills by the whole school in which one-half minute is given to find a certain hook or passage, and as each one finds it he rises in his place. There is always an interesting race to see who shall rise first.

Daily Bible reading in private and family devotions, is specially stressed. The first count revealed fifteen daily Bible readers. On last Sunday there were 106. After the close of the present contest the daily reading of the Bible, as well as bringing it to Sunday school, will be included under this head.

If we can teach God's Word and inculcate a deep love for it and impart dexterity in its use, we will have a church "thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

9th. Home Department. Few schools will have to contend with the same difficulties in this matter that we have had. Several attempts to run a home department have failed for lack of an efficient superintendent who would continue in the work. Now each class has a home department, each teacher is superintendent of the home department of his class and each pupil a visitor with one member to look after. The pupil makes monthly reports to the teacher. Our home department is now doing efficient work.

10th. Singing. By grading on this point the indifference to the song service has been overcome. The boys, as well as the girls, now join heartily in the singing, making this one of the most enjoyable parts of the exercises.

The Sunday school is thoroughly graded, and this system is not used in the beginners or first year of primaries, but is taken up in the second grade. Even the adult classes are using it with profit. The school had an average grade on last Sunday of 87.79, and three classes had a grade of 100, showing how well the plan is working with us.

I am aware that this system is open to criticism, particularly the classing of things of differing importance as if they were of equal importance, but when you take into consideration the fact that the teacher is thus spared much mathematical calculation and that all are on the same footing, perhaps this is not so serious a defect after all.

As this article is intended to be merely suggestive, I shall not point out other defects, hoping that the plan may prove to be elastic enough to permit of modification to meet varying conditions.

Crowley, La.

THE UNIT OF POWER.

Rev. Roht B. Downer.

The Twentieth Century idea of power is the combination of forces, as manifested in alliances among nations, trades, business, investments, etc.

To a certain extent, there is wisdom in the world's methods in executing the divine mandate, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." At the same time there is danger, if in combinations the power of the individual is underestimated, or not fully developed. The alliance of one wholly sanctified soul with the Holy Ghost is a force that gives Satan great concern. God's seeking for a man (see Jer. 5:1), not a company of men, is an advertisement not affected by the flight of years. He can still work wonders through the agency of one wholly the Lord's.

The Bible is full of appeals and promises to the individual, and while it is wise to combine forces in some great assault upon the powers of darkness, the unit of power must never be weakened by association with other units. The success of Christ's Kingdom is dependent upon the faithful, loving service of the individual disciple.

One of the pressing needs of our Southern Methodism today is the individual endowment of divine power upon bishops, editors, presiding elders, pastors, missionaries, Sunday school superintendents, teachers, deaconesses and Church members. No pastor will make any mistake to feel the apostolic injunction: "Let a man examine himself" (not the other pastors). Am I in this office called specially by the Holy Ghost? Am I wholly the Lord's, without a single reservation, as an individual, and as God's ambassador? Is the service that I am now rendering indicative to the sinful world that "I walk in the light, as God is in the light, that we have fellowship one with the other, and that the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth me from all sin?"

Do I fully realize that until I have faithfully performed my every duty, the blood of all souls lie at my door? Do I know Christ in the power of his resurrection and fellowship of his sufferings? Is my soul groaning after the perfection of Christian love? Have I any lack of strong faith in God's written Word? We must be careful in our examinations to have a correct, a perfect standard by which to test our record.

Talking with a friend on one occasion about his soul, and after some searching questions had been asked, he intimated that his standard of action was unattainable, and replied: "If I can be as good as my father was, I will be satisfied." It will be well to remember that there is but one authoritative standard of excellence by which all souls will be tested. (See Ephesians 4:13.) "Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

Some counterfeits have value until squared by the standard of truth and authority. Take, for instance, a well executed, yet spurious bank bill. It may come into my possession in payment of a debt; it looks correct and I have no reason to doubt its genuineness. It shows signs of age, and rough service. I, in good faith, pay my grocer, he his shoemaker, and on and on it goes scattering sunshine into many homes, and as long as it keeps in circulation answers every purpose of good money, and yet it is a fraud, and woe to the holder when finally it is deposited in the purported bank of issue, and there is declared to lack the marks of genuineness. At once it is seized and destroyed as an enemy of sound commerce.

Now, why not be wise and realize the force of this illustration? Yes, you now move in Church circles as a paragon of usefulness. Your money, time and influence scatter sunshine and good cheer. If a preacher, you may attain even to the bishopric; if a layman, well—receive the plaudits of the world for generosity of gifts and great zeal and love for your Church, and when dead, have the coffin ornamented with flowers, yet the final test can not be evaded. "Every man must give an account of himself at the day of judgment." You know your secret record, love of the praise of men, your impure life of unholy desires, if not accomplished acts. Your life's record is smirched with supreme selfishness. What avails all your success in deceiving your fellowmen, if at the last the Omniscient Eye fails to account your record worthy of divine approval?

Examine yourselves as to the character, degree and cost of service, that you now are rendering unto the Lord, while professing an obedience to the mandate, "Go ye into the highways and hedges, and make known that my supper is now ready, and by force of love compel them to come in." God waits to be gracious. He waits upon you, brother, you, sister, while the blood of souls lie at your door, while men in despair are crying, "No man cares for my soul." Come, get into that state of consecration making it possible for the Holy Ghost to use you successfully. Cry out sincerely, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

Report to your pastor, "I am ready to perform any needed service to save souls. If service is not accepted, ask for special orders from Christ—hunt up God's poor, the sick, the aged, the destitute of your town or city. "Dare to be a Daniel," "Dare to stand alone."

Glory to God for the late tidings from Korea. Individual disciples have been agonizing at a throne of grace. Missionaries are profoundly moved to an enlarged activity. The Holy Spirit has increased their faith, to ask for one million of souls in Korea for 1910. Psalm 2d, 8th verse, justifies their request. Shall we in our Southland be shamed by Korea—for lack of desire, for souls and faith in God?

Long Beach, Miss.

To love abundantly is to live abundantly; to love forever is to live forever.—Drummond.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND

of FURNITURE that

—Lasts a LIFETIME—

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

W. H. M. S.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The eighteenth annual meeting of the Woman's Home Mission Society in Louisiana has come and gone. Again, we have felt the uplift of Christian fellowship in the renewed courage to press forward in another year's work for the Master. Advance in membership, more help to parsonages, more Bible study, more earnest effort to enlist new members, marked the reports of the work. The key-note of the meeting was "Service"—the giving of self in the ministry of love to others.

The initial note of praise and thanksgiving on Thursday morning was followed by cheering reports of the year's progress from the Conference Secretary and Treasurer—twenty-seven new auxiliaries had been organized; with 500 additional members, thus marking an advance all along the line.

A message from the Orphanage in Ruslon was brought by Rev. R. W. Vaughan, superintendent of the institution, showing the great work being done for homeless little ones and the imperative need of rallying the forces of the Church to its support, if this noble enterprise is to be placed on a solid basis.

To the cordial words of welcome voiced by Dr. Werlein, pastor of First Church, and Mrs. Edward Alvis, of Rayne Memorial, an appreciative response was offered for the body by Mrs. H. R. Singleton, of Alexandria. The daily Bible studies outlined by Miss Ragland, deaconess at St. Mark's Hall, were seasons of spiritual uplift and encouragement; and when the young ladies (now four in number) stationed in New Orleans told of their life-work, their joy in this service, the true meaning of the surrendered life impressed itself anew upon those who listened.

The dainty lunches served every day by the ladies of the different churches, and their unvarying kindness and courtesy, presented many opportunities for social enjoyment, refreshing both to body and mind. Those little intervals of leisure were much enjoyed.

We take pleasure in noting the interest manifested by our ministers in this work, many of whom were presented to the body speaking words of encouragement and commendation. Among the many pertinent questions brought up for discussion and most ably presented by the speakers were the following: "Prison Reform," by Rev. J. L. Sutton; "French Mission Work," Rev. C. V. Breithaupt; "Social and Industrial Conditions in Our Cities," Mrs. S. H. Werlein; "Our Young People," Mrs. Munholland; "Why Grant Equal Rights to Women?" Mrs. Ino. B. Parker; "Prohibition in Louisiana," Mrs. A. G. McKinney, and "The Child and the State," Miss Jean Gordon. These problems are ours, and bring with them grave responsibilities and matter for serious consideration by our thinking men and women.

If time and space permitted, I should like to tell of the work of St. Mark's Hall, as outlined by Mrs. W. W. Carré, President of the City Mission Board; also the fine report of the Secretary of the Board, Mrs. A. A. Bartels, and the beautiful ministry of our city missionary, Mrs. L. Meekin. The annual sermon on Sunday morning by Rev. R. W. Vaughan was broad in its scope for world-wide salvation and in its appeal for consecrated effort. It was earnest, eloquent and impressive. Rev. A. L. Townsley spoke Sunday evening, the last service of the meeting, on "The Call and Claim of Home Missions." Outlining briefly the work already accomplished, he spoke of the outlook at the present time, and the great necessity of united effort, if we are to evangelize the nations coming to our shores. His words were forcible and convincing.

This notice would not be complete without reference to the presence in our midst of Rev. George Jackson, a true friend to home missions, and a life member of the society. He strongly presented the claims of our church paper, the New Orleans Christian Advocate; and we would like to emphasize his appeal by asking every home mission woman to subscribe for this paper, thus showing our appreciation of the column always open to our work. Especial mention should be made of the organist, Mr. I. N. Niebergal, and the excellent choir of First Church, who furnished us with splendid music.

MRS. E. R. KENNEDY, President.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

Port Gibson Female College has just closed one of the most successful sessions in its long and honored history, which dates back seventy years. The commencement exercises were largely attended, and were of unusual interest. The commencement sermon on Sunday, May 15th, was preached by Rev. J. E. Carpenter, of Jackson, Miss., who delivered an able and inspiring discourse on "The Value and Power of Ideals," based on Ezekiel xx, 29.

The same speaker made the address at the evening service, which was conducted by the members of the College Epworth League, his subject being "The Immortality of Influence." Brother Carpenter was again pressed into service on Monday for the baccalaureate address, which charmed all who heard it. "The Primal Need of Heart Culture," was the felicitous subject, in the elucidation of which the speaker was at his best. The medals were presented to the successful contestants by Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Vicksburg, who made a very powerful and appropriate speech.

Monday, May 16th, was the eventful day when seven bright and queenly young women received their long coveted diplomas. The following were graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, namely: Misses May Florillo Levy, Marie Beulah Levy, Carleen Marie Strickland, Mary Ella Smith, Nona Belle Rush and Stella Mary White. The degree of Bachelor of Literature was conferred upon Miss Elizabeth Brown. Miss May Ella Johnston was the fortunate winner of a post-graduate certificate in Expression, and a diploma in bookkeeping was awarded to Miss Clara King. Other awards were as follows: College Scholarship medal, Miss Lola Rowland; Junior Essay medal, Miss Marnes Johnston; Freshman Reading medal, Miss Ruth Whitney; Preparatory Scholarship medal, Miss Nora Gray; W. C. T. U. gold medal, Miss May Ella Johnston; First Year Latin medal, Miss Lena Price. Miss Clara King, who kept the best account of expenses during the session, was awarded a beautiful souvenir spoon with the monogram of the college thereupon.

By unanimous vote, the Board of Trustees conferred the degree of D.D. upon two of our most worthy missionaries, namely: Rev. W. B. Nance, of our China Mission, and Rev. C. B. Moseley, of Kobe, Japan. The degree of M. A. was conferred upon Miss Ariminta M. Kennard, of Port Gibson, who for a number of years, has rendered splendid service as a member of the college faculty, and who is at present lady principal.

The class tree exercises, which were held on Saturday afternoon, have come to be one of the most popular and interesting events of commencement. An address by the president of the class of 1910, a class poem, a class prophecy, and a class history, concluding with an address by Superintendent T. V. Rush, were the most important features of these exercises. The closing concert on Monday night both edified and entertained the many who were present, and reflected additional credit upon the work of the students and faculty. The art exhibit elicited much favorable comment, and gave evidence that the students in the art department had been trained by a gifted and experienced specialist.

The announcement on commencement day by Rev. G. H. Galloway, president of the Board of Trustees, that the Board has arranged a new five-year contract with Rev. H. G. Hawkins as president of the institution was greeted with loud and prolonged applause. President Hawkins, aided by his accomplished wife, has achieved remarkable success in building up the patronage of the college in the face of grave difficulties, and it is confidently expected that during his next term of service it will enter upon an era of still greater prosperity. Three years ago the curriculum was raised one year higher, and Port Gibson Female College now ranks among the best in the southwest in the standard of scholarship and in the thorough quality of the work done. Brother Hawkins manages somehow to set an excellent table day after day—no wonder then that the students look well and happy.

The enrollment the past session was one hundred and twenty-one, seventy of these being boarding pupils, this average in the boarding department being maintained throughout the session. One of the greatest needs of the college is more dormitory room. The health of the student body has been excellent. Thanks to a kind Providence, no epidemic nor serious illness of any kind has occurred among the students. The college buildings are in splendid repair, the sum of $417 having been expended during the session in improvements and furnishings. Twenty-five students paid their way in part, in service rendered the college in one way or another. Thus our college at Port Gibson is performing a noble mission in aiding worthy girls to obtain a college education who otherwise would be deprived of this advantage. I do not know of any denominational school where more attention is given to the matter of ethical and spiritual culture than is true of our school here; or that is pervaded by a more wholesome religious atmosphere. Port Gibson, the town after which our school is named, has many historic associations, is noted for its beautiful scenery, healthfulness, and atmosphere of refinement and culture. Parents who desire to place their daughters in a safe, thorough, homelike, Christian school cannot make any mistake in sending to Port Gibson Female College, the seventy-first session of which will open Sept. 14.

MCKENDREE M. BLACK, Pastor.

May 18, 1910.

MONROE REVIVAL MEETING.

A great union revival meeting was held here April 20 to May 4, under the leadership of Dr. J. Earnest Thacher, evangelist of the Southern Presbyterian Church. A splendid chorus choir was directed by Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Fisher.

The Protestant pastors here began to plan for this meeting last fall, and the business details were admirably executed by committees of laymen.

Services were held twice daily in a tent, the capacity of which was fifteen hundred, and the location of which was in the heart of the business district.

Without a single undignified or sensational expedient, great crowds flocked to the meetings from the beginning to close. The gospel message was presented in a simple, persuasive manner, and made a profound impression upon all classes of people. The meeting was a splendid object lesson in denominational co-operation.

The card system of confessing Christ, or of pledging new consecration to him was used and hundreds of cards were signed and distributed to the various pastors. All of our churches have been refreshed and benefited, and the membership substantially increased.

The Presbyterian Church made a splendid choice of evangelist, in Dr. Thacher, and Monroe was fortunate to secure him. His voice has magnificent carrying-quality, and vibrates with genuine sympathy. His personality is magnetic—and impresses all with sincerity—and great earnestness. Christ and the cross are the center of every sermon that is preached, and the basis of every appeal.

R. H. WYNN.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location, price, including furniture, only $400. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

HOUSE ON CAMPGROUNDS FOR SALE.

A desirable two-story cottage, with four rooms and half bathroom with latest sanitary improvements; completely furnished facing open square in front of Keller Lodge, with a small, shady park in the rear. Address, Christian Advocate, 512 Camp, New Orleans.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER.

Gumbarland Telephone & Telegraph Co

INCORPORATED.

FLESH WOUNDS

Whether Cuts, Bruises or Burns cannot and will not inflame if treated promptly with

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

The cooling effect stops the pain at once—and a prompt cure, without swelling or suppuration, will follow in each instance.

A bottle in the house is your best safeguard against accidents.

All druggists 25 and 50 cts.

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic.
ASK ANY ONE WHO HAS EVER USED IT!

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulner, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

THE PROBLEM OF UNEMPLOYED HEADS.

Man is a working animal, and he is placed in a world that needs a great deal of work. Whatever may have been the case in other times, it is certainly true to-day that labor is the price of success. This is seen in every department of human activity. Now and then some cases appear where great results have followed apparently small effort, and where success has been preceded by apparently little attempt to win it. But usually such cases only seem so, and when careful investigation is made it will be found that the price has been paid in full.

This is true in the Church as it is everywhere else, and it is a truth that preachers and laymen alike need to learn. Now and then things just happen, but not often enough to make it safe to rely upon a merely fortuitous combination of circumstances to bring about the end desired. The man who does put his trust in such chance is guilty not only of indolence but of unfaithfulness as well.

The Church has always faced tremendous difficulties, and its progress has been marked by hard-fought battles. It is not different to-day; and it is altogether likely that it never will be different. The forces of evil will not easily give up the ground, or slacken their efforts. The fight the Church has on hand is hard, even though it is a winning one, and every man needs to do his part. That part is to work.

The hardest work in the world is thinking. That may be one reason why so little of it is done. A man may be wonderfully energetic physically, and utterly indolent intellectually. Great things may be accomplished through physical energy, but the greatest accomplishments are not those of the hands, but of the head. There are fifty hands to execute, where there is one head to plan. That is because more men are willing to use their hands than are willing to use their heads. Sometimes we hear much about unemployed hands; we need to begin to think about unemployed heads. The problem of unemployed heads is the greatest problem that confronts us.

The leaders of the world are the men who think. The originator of an idea has more followers than the commander of an army, and the influence of an idea is more pervasive than the circumambient ether. The world admires deeds, but it is ruled by thought. He who would make a lasting impression upon his time must do it with his head. Made in any other way, it will fade.

It takes a thinking ministry to make a leading Church. In the face of the many pressing problems of to-day, the world cannot bring itself to pay much attention to platitudes, from the pulpit or anywhere else. It needs, and demands freshness and vigor and power from those who assume to be its teachers. Never before have greater opportunities presented themselves to preachers. The world naturally turns to them for guidance, and if they have a message, it gladly hears them. A mission means a message, and without a message the preacher has no mission.

Let our young men give themselves to study. The man with the obscure appointment may feel discouraged because he has not sufficient opportunity to exercise his powers. But let him read great books and think great thoughts, and do with all his might the things that are appointed to him, and the whole wide world will become his opportunity. The Church is looking for the great preacher to-day. It will find him in the man who is thinking.

GIVING.

"Therefore, as ye abound in everything, in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also." Such was the message of Saint Paul to the Church at Corinth. And it was a needed message. Liberality is the neglected grace. Where the other Christian virtues exist in full cluster, it is often missing, or imperfectly developed. Very few people give as much as they ought. Men worth their thousands frequently give a paltry sum of $15 or $20 to the support of the ministry, and flatter themselves that they have done their full duty. Professed Christians, who think nothing of spending scores of dollars upon some needless self-indulgence, contribute almost nothing to the benevolences of the Church. The tobacco bills of many are larger than the amounts they give for the spread of the gospel.

It is high time we were waking up on this subject. God is going to hold us responsible for the use we make of our means. We have never believed that the law of tithing is in force under the Christian dispensation. As we see it, a man might tithe his income, and yet fall far below what he ought to give to humanity and the cause of God. But certainly, if the Jew in the meager light of a preparatory dispensation gave a tenth, the Christian, living amid the rich splendors of this gospel age, should count it a shame to give less. The Church never needed money more urgently than now. Her widening fields are calling for increased activity. Hundreds of her necessary enterprises are languishing for the want of funds. So every disciple should contribute all he can. And he should count it a glorious privilege to do so. It was the Master himself who said: "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

A VAIN ATTEMPT.

The notion that religion and morals may be divorced is utterly foolish, but there are not a few in every age who attempt the task. In Isaiah's time there were those who were painstaking to offer sacrifices and worship, but whose "hands were bloody" and whose lives were impure. Through the Prophet the Lord informed them that their offerings and attempted praise were an "abomination," and that not until they had "ceased to do evil," and "learned to do well," would their worship be acceptable.

This lesson needs to be emphasized in our day. The idea is now widely prevalent that if one will attend services on the Sabbath, he may do pretty much as he pleases during the week-time. Having kept Lent for forty days, he is privileged to indulge in all the vices of modern society during the rest of the year. Having listened to the sermon on Sunday, it is allowable to drive a sharp bargain with a customer across the counter. Having appeased God by partaking of the Holy Sacrament, he is at liberty to gamble on the result of a pending election. Nothing could be further from the truth than such a view. God wants no worship from the lips while Satan is regnant in the heart. A religion that does not make one aspire to be upright at all times and in everything, is spurious and utterly impotent to save. No contribution of means, no affection of devotion, can take the place of a holy heart, a clean life, and an honest, high-minded purpose. These are what our Lord demands of every follower, and without them, every attempt at worship and service is a hollow mockery. The harp of the human soul must be cleansed and attuned by the divine touches of the Holy Ghost before it is fit to breathe out sweet cadences of praises to God.

HOW TO READ.

Slow reading is essential for the mastery of books. The skimmer gathers little of what is best as he rushes through the fair fields of literature. Rev. Fred W. Robertson, the scholar-preacher, the man whose massive thought has given him a grip upon the minds of men which increases rather than weakens with the passing years, said: "I never knew but one or two fast readers of many books whose knowledge was worth anything. I read hard or not at all, never skimming, never turning aside to merely inviting books; and the thought of Plato, Aristotle, Thucydides, Sterne, and Jonathan Edwards have passed like the iron atoms of the blood into my mental constitution."

Harriet Martineau said of herself: "I am the slowest of readers; sometimes a page an hour." But what she read she made her own. A story is told of a college professor who used to startle his class by saying: "Young gentlemen, do not waste your time over good books." Of course the boys would ask: "How can there be such waste?" But deeper thought would show them that if anyone gives time even to good books at the cost of neglecting the best, it is deplorable waste.

Particularly does a minister need to exercise a wise choice in the selection of reading matter. With so many things to do, the extent to which he can read is necessarily limited. And yet he must inform and furnish his mind if he is to become an efficient workman for the Master. Wesley exhorted his preachers to contract a taste for reading, or return to their trades. The precious hours at the disposal of a pastor for this should be husbanded and wisely directed. Only volumes that are strengthening and uplifting should be purchased, and the truth contained in them should be thoroughly grasped and assimilated. Thus only can one fit himself for lofty and substantial service.

THE LIST COMPLETED.

Since our last issue the corps of connectional officers for the present quadrennium has been completed by the General Conference at Asheville. Dr. W. W. Pinson was chosen as chief missionary secretary to succeed Dr. Lamhuth. He has been connected with the work for several years, and is admirably qualified for the place. Dr. J. E. Dickey, the accomplished president of Emory College, Ga., was elected secretary of the Board of Education, in place of Dr. J. D. Hammond. Those who know him predict that he will infuse new life and energy into the educational work of the Church. Dr. Du Bose refused to allow his name to be considered for Epworth League Secretary and Editor of the Epworth Era, and Dr. F. S. Parker was chosen for that responsible position. That he will fill it with efficiency and distinction, there is not the slightest doubt. He is superbly equipped for the leadership of our young people. Mr. D. M. Smith and Dr. A. J. Lamar were re-elected Publishing Agents. They have been faithful in service, and well deserved the magnificent vote of confidence and new tenure of office given them.

GENERAL CONFERENCE NOTES.

The discussions on the floor of the General Conference were distinctly disappointing. Notwithstanding the grave issues considered, only one remarkable exhibition of forensic ability took place; that was the address of Judge O'Rear in advocating the report of the Committee on Education, which requested the calling of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust. All of the other speeches made by members were quite commonplace. Apparently, none in the body had the gift of eloquent, extemporaneous utterance. Tigert, Hoss, Candler, and Paul Whitehead, who a few years ago made the sessions of the General Conference memorable with their brilliant disputations, seem to have no successors in the Church. It is said, however, that the average ability of the delegates was higher than at any former period. Possibly so, but a legislative assembly without a few orators to enliven the proceedings occasionally becomes painfully dull as the days drag along. We confess to a fondness for an outburst of verbal pyrotechnics now and then in such a gathering.

The seven newly-elected Bishops were ordained at the Central M. E. Church, South, in Asheville, on Thursday afternoon, May 19, at 3 p.m., in the presence of a congregation which taxed the spacious edifice to the utmost. The Bishops entered in the order of their seniority in office and took their seats upon the platform behind the pulpit. Then came the Bishops-elect, each accompanied by two of his closest friends, and were seated immediately in front of the chancel. Those attending them were as follows: With Dr. Collins Denny, Revs. F. J. Prettyman and E. J. Register; with Dr. John C. Kilgo, Revs. J. O. Willson and J. N. Cole; with Dr. W. B. Murrah, Revs. T. W. Lewis and R. A. Meek; with Dr. W. R. Lamhuth, Revs. W. E. Townsend and C. F. Reid; with Dr. R. G. Waterhouse, Revs. F. Richardson and W. S. Neighbors; with Dr. E. D. Mouzon, Revs. C. H. Briggs and A. E. Weeks; with Dr. J. H. McCoy, Revs. J. D. Simpson and B. F. Frazer. The ordination sermon was preached by Bishop Willson from Ephesians IV, 11-13. All the other Bishops took part in the services, which were most solemn and impressive.

The handling of the Vanderbilt question by the Committee on Education met with very general commendation. Having failed to secure the desired conference with the Board of Trust of the University, the committee endorsed strongly and unequivocally all of the findings of the Vanderbilt Commission appointed four years ago, and recommended that the Conference proceed to act in harmony therewith. Hon. N. E. Harris, of the South Georgia Conference; Hon. A. W. Bliggs, of the Memphis Conference, and Rev. V. A. Godby, of the West Texas Conference, were recommended to fill the three vacancies on the Board of Trust. It was suggested that hereafter, as a matter of expediency, the Trustees be allowed to elect the members of the Board, subject to confirmation by the General Board of Education. A change in the Discipline allowing one-fourth of the Trustees of educational institutions to be chosen from outside the Church was proposed. The report was adopted without amendment or discussion by a large majority. It is conservative, but compromises upon no essential point. The ownership of the Church and its right to elect the trustees at the General Conference, if it should choose to exercise it, is stoutly maintained. In exercising this right for a single time and naming three trustees, the issue as to whether the Board of Trust of the University is a self-perpetuating body is sharply joined. If those who maintain the independence of the Trustees mean ever to litigate, this doubtless will bring it on. The Bishops were instructed to take all necessary steps to maintain the rights of the Church in connection with the institution, and provision was made for the funds necessary to do so. It is earnestly hoped, however, that no recourse to law will be taken, and that all the parties interested will accept the action of the General Conference as authoritative and final.

The following boards were elected for the next four years:

Board of Church Extension—Thomas L. Jefferson, president; Dr. R. B. Gilbert, vice president; J. Edgar Stewart, treasurer; Pressley H. Tapp, Rev. G. S. Sexton, Rev. T. W. Lewis, Rev. M. J. Cofer, Rev. N. L. Linebaugh, Rev. Henry Trawick, Rev. Jas. Thomas, Hon. T. S. Garrison, Rev. S. R. Hay, Rev. E. H. Monroe, Rev. W. L. Sherrill, Hon. D. L. Coon, Rev. L. W. Moore, Rev. F. N. Parker, Rev. J. B. Cochran, Rev. Paul H. Linn, Rev. H. B. Johnston, Rev. N. B. Henry, Rev. W. L. Young, Rev. R. E. Stackhouse.

Book Committee—Rev. O. E. Brown, Prof. Thomas Carter, Rev. James Campbell, Rev. R. A. Child, Rev. J. G. Frazer, Rev. E. V. Register, J. B. Morgan, W. C. Bibbrell, J. Horton Eall, Sidney Bass, J. L. Nelson, E. C. Reeves and D. H. Linebaugh.

Board of Education—Bishop E. E. Hoss, Bishop W. B. Murrah, J. W. Blackard, James Cannon, Jr., T. W. Cooper, T. H. Ware, James Kilgo, T. F. Brewer, H. N. Snyder, C. E. Dowman, W. F. Tillett, R. J. Flowers, J. W. Vaughan, J. G. Trent, W. E. Vaughan, John W. Robbins, Percy D. Madden.

Epworth League—Bishop J. H. McCoy, president; Rev. R. W. Hood, Rev. Paul Kern, Rev. H. W. Featherston, E. P. Peabody, Gus W. Thomas, H. S. Lock.

Board of Missions—Bishop A. W. Wilson, president; Bishop W. R. Lambuth, vice president; Revs. J. W. Perry, R. P. Howell, F. S. Parker, A. F. Watkins, O. E. Brown, J. T. Daves, G. C. Rankin, G. B. Winton, H. K. Boyer, U. V. W. Darlington, Messrs. J. B. Greene, H. H. White (Florida), M. O. Hughes, J. B. Howell, W. R. Cole, A. B. Ransom, T. S. Weaver, J. T. Matlock, Thomas Southgate, F. M. Daniels, Miss Belle H. Bennett, Miss Maria L. Gibson, Mrs. L. P. Smith, Mrs. L. G. Johnson, Mrs. W. E. Barnum, Mrs. E. B. Chappell, Miss Daisy Davies, Mrs. Hume R. Steele, Miss Mary N. Moore, Mrs. Lee Britt.

The address of Dr. Thomas H. Lewis, the fraternal messenger from the Methodist Protestant Church, was from beginning to end a brilliant piece of oratory. Though he made an earnest plea for the union of the Methodist bodies in the United States, not once did he transgress the bounds of propriety. His eloquence was irresistible, and time and again the audience was wrought up to a high pitch of enthusiasm, sometimes standing up and waving their handkerchiefs in the air. Not since the voice of Charles B. Galloway was hushed have we listened to such a master of persuasive speech. The Conference ordered the Publishing Agents to print 10,000 copies of the address for sale. Bishop Hoss' response was worthy of the occasion, and voiced in happy phrase the sentiments of the Methodists of the South.

Already different cities are seeking to secure as residents some one of the new Bishops. Bishop J. C. Kilgo, who now resides at Durham, N. C., has been invited to make his home at Charlotte, with the promise of having a house furnished him if he shall consent to do so. The Memphis Conference delegation waited on Bishop Murrah at Asheville and invited him to settle in the metropolis of west Tennessee. This stirred up the Mississippians present, who presented Bishop Murrah with a written request, urging him to continue to reside at Jackson, where he has lived for many years, and which for a quarter of a century has been the home of a Methodist Bishop. We hardly think it probable that he will leave the State in which he has wrought all of his life and is so universally loved and honored.

PERSONAL.

Rev. Walter G. Harbin is helping Rev. H. L. Norton, of Collins, Miss., in a revival meeting.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, pastor of our church in Donaldsonville, La., was in the city one day last week.

After a session of sixteen working days the General Conference adjourned on Saturday night, the 21st inst.

Rev. A. R. Hoffpauir filled the pulpit at Lake Arthur, La., during the time spent by the pastor, Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir, at the General Conference.

Our church at Bogalusa is undergoing repairs. The pastor reports things in a flourishing condition. The prospects are much brighter than at this time last year.

Rev. H. T. Carley, pastor of Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, will deliver the Commencement address at Jefferson Military College, at Washington, Miss., on May 26.

Dr. S. S. Keener, of Monroe, La., visited Asheville during the session of the General Conference. He had many acquaintances among the delegates, who gave him a cordial greeting.

We thank Mrs. J. S. Copeland, of Natchez, Miss., for a donation of $4 to our "help fund." We will see that this money is used to place the Advocate in homes where it will prove a blessing.

In sending in a contribution of $1 to our "helping fund," Brother Wm. A. Powell writes: "May God bless this fund, and like the widow's cruse of oil and morsel of meal, may it never grow less!"

Among the Mississippians in Asheville and Washington last week were Revs. J. H. Holder and W. V. Shearer, of Booneville. They were in fine health and spirits, and appeared to be greatly enjoying their trip.

As a rule, we do not approve of anonymous letters, but we received one this week to which we take no exception. It was signed "A Subscriber," and enclosed money to send the Advocate one year to a widow.

Rev. H. B. Van Valkenburg, well-known in New Orleans, attended the World's Sunday-school Convention in Washington, D. C. He will go from there to Haverhill, Mass., where he will spend the summer with his son.

Bishop J. S. McCoy will preach the commencement sermon of Hendrix College, at Conway, Ark., on June 12th. He is a master in the pulpit, and doubtless will give his hearers a message which they will long remember.

Professor W. L. Weber has recently been tendered the presidency of Mansfield Female College, but declined the honor. His health is much improved, but he is yet far from being strong. As an educator, he easily ranks with the best.

We learn from Rev. R. H. Wynn that Dr. M. A. McHenry, for many years prominently connected with our church in Monroe, La., passed away on Sunday, May 15, after a lingering illness. May the comfort of the "God of consolation" abide with his loved ones.

The College of Bishops have named Dr. H. M. DuBose as fraternal messenger to the Canadian General Conference which will be held at Victoria in August of the present year. That he will worthily represent Southern Methodism, needs not to be said.

Rev. W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, attended the World's Sunday-school Convention in Washington, D. C. We trust that he will be able to inspire all his preachers with the "world vision" of the Sunday-school work.

Rev. N. E. Alford, a local preacher of Magnolia, Miss., who is the father of three effective Methodist preachers, has been placed in charge of the St. Tammany Circuit by the presiding elder of the New Orleans District. Good congregations wait upon his ministry, and the outlook is encouraging.

In another column of this issue we print an admirable article on a discussion of Sunday-school methods by Mr. A. P. Holt, the genial Sunday-school superintendent at Crowley, La. The paper is well written and has some very valuable suggestions. We commend it to our readers as worthy of a careful study.

Rev. W. H. Coleman, of Homer, La., looked in on the General Conference for a day last week, and then hurried on to Washington to attend the great Sunday-school Convention in session in that city. He is wide awake to all that goes on in religious circles, and there are few men better posted on the general work of the Church.

Bishop Hoss recently changed Rev. J. T. Murrah from Sardis to Aberdeen, Miss., to take the place of Rev. J. R. Countiss, who has accepted the presidency of Grenada Female College. Dr. J. W. Boswell has been appointed to succeed Brother Murrah at Sardis. Who will fill the pastorate thus left vacant at Ruleville is unknown to us at this writing.

We learn that the wife of Rev. H. W. Ledbetter has been ill for the last fifteen months, confined to her bed most of the time. We extend our sympathies to this anxious husband and afflicted wife. May the hand of the Great Physician give his healing touch both to hearts and body. The trouble in his home has not prevented Brother Ledbetter from sending in a fine club of subscribers to the Advocate.

The Commencement sermon at Millsaps will be preached on June 5th by the Rev. W. F. McMurry, D. D., secretary of the General Board of Church Extension. Rev. George R. Stuart, the well-known evangelist, will preach for the Young Men's Christian Association at night. The closing exercises of this growing institution promise to be up to the usual high standard, and will, no doubt, be largely attended.

Mr. M. Green, a Methodist from Picayune, Miss., favored this office with a call a few days since. Picayune has seven Methodist families, but no Sunday school and no church organization. As the first Methodist organization grew out of the spiritual needs of a few earnest people, we trust that this little company of Methodists will press forward for a Methodist Church, and a large development of the Master's work.

A VETERAN CALLED HOME.

Rev. D. G. W. Ellis, one of the veterans of the Mississippi Conference, was translated from his home here at Meridian at 7:30 this morning. He was 84 years old, and rich in grace, and is now rejoicing in the glory land.

G. S. HARMON.
May 21, 1910.

THE PAST AND THE PRESENT.

By Rev. J. E. Godbey, D. D.

Doubtless the gospel of Christ is still the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth, and we should not be ashamed of the gospel. But we are often reminded that the gospel, as preached to-day, does not appeal to the conscience of men as the preaching did fifty years ago. The reason is not far to seek. In the preaching of fifty years ago the aim was almost exclusively to arouse the consciences of men in regard to sin and salvation. "Repent for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," was still a good epitome of the preacher's message. The sermon was effective and attained the end of preaching according as it led individuals to realize their true relation to God. The preacher probed the conscience, assailed the refuges of false security and peace, urged the personal experience of acceptance with God, and backed his reasoning of sin and righteousness with his warning of judgment to come. Salvation was witnessed by conscious spiritual relations to God. The evidences of experience were the criterion by which the true Christian was judged.

The preaching of to-day is not directed to individual relations to God as tested by spiritual experience. Social duties, Christian citizenship, the enterprises of the Church, education, missions, doctrines which pertain to the mission of the Church, the future of the Church, etc., or speculative and critical questions furnish the themes of the preacher. Why this change? It is a natural result of the growth of the Church.

In the beginning the Methodist movement was a revival. The Methodist Church was not. Methodist societies there were, whose one aim was to spread Scriptural holiness over the land. Every Methodist preacher was an evangelist. His business was not about Church societies or institutions. He knew only to press the one issue of repentance and regeneration. The success of this work built churches. Churches rapidly grew great and rich. It is generally held that a great Church must develop from within. Education takes the place of evangelization. A great Church is a militant host to be wielded. Many societies are needed to give its members spheres for work. The work comes to be social, rather than evangelical. Often a preacher looks upon a great congregation and knows there are not a score out of the hundreds before him that are not Church members. He preaches to edify, to educate. He preaches to the Church about the Church. The great congregation is part of a great denomination. The power of a great denomination ought to be felt in society, in government, in the settlement of national questions where humanity and philanthropy are involved. Thought is turned from the individual to the Church as an organized power, and to its various arms of service. There is much drilling, parading, arming, but less direct conflict with sin in the hearts of men.

In the beginning of the Methodist movement the conditions made all the preachers evangelists. Our circuit preachers are evangelists still. The existing conditions draw the pastors of our great churches into social work and often to themes in the pulpit which have no bearing upon the individual conscience.

Besides the influences which result naturally from the growth of the Church, the higher criticism has turned many into paths of speculation and they preach about the gospel, but do not preach the gospel. All sincere search for truth must be encouraged. There may be as much piety and as much vital faith in heterodoxy as in orthodoxy. But speculation and criticism and apology do not become the pulpit. The pulpit stands for the calling of men from sin to salvation by faith in Christ, and its tone must be positive. It can only be positive by keeping to fundamental truth. We have preachers in our great churches who still keep to the vital truths of the gospel, who know how to call sinners to repentance and who never need the help of an evangelist. They are examples worthy of imitation. The churches desire them and prosper under their care. There is need to resist the tide that bears so many away from the simple message of salvation through repentance and faith in Christ. If the Church can bring men to right personal relations to God, the love of God as a self-regulating principle will lead them into proper spheres of work. The Church can regulate society only by getting men right with God individually. The Church must appeal to all men upon the common ground of salvation by faith, not as capitalists or as laborers, not as rich or poor, not as belonging to any class or station or party, but simply as men fallen, sinful and needing to be born again. In Jesus Christ there is neither Greek nor Jew, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free, male nor female. The pulpit attracts as long as it holds its grasp upon the consciences of men. To reach the conscience it is only needful to preach the gospel. The word which the Holy Ghost dictated the Holy Ghost will still own.

Obituaries.

LULA E. GARDNER, daughter of W. D. and Margie E. Gardner, born Feb. 25, 1891, died March 3, 1910. Lula was always a good and obedient daughter, always trying to make those about her happy. As her teacher several years ago, the writer never had occasion to correct her on the school ground or find fault with her about her lessons, for her deportment was perfect in every department. She was delighted to take part in Sabbath school and other kinds of church work. Lula was happily converted during a revival conducted by her pastor, Rev. H. C. Edmonson, in August, 1906, and at the close of the meeting, with twelve others, she joined the Methodist Church at Midway, on the Toccoola Circuit, where, on March 4, 1910, the writer conducted the funeral service, and amidst a host of weeping friends, we laid her body to rest beside her brother, Lewis, who preceded her to the "land of pure delight." We commend the broken-hearted father and mother and brothers and sisters to the grace of God and to the power of his love who is able to sustain them and bring comfort to the grief-stricken soul. You shall see Lula again, for on the last day she will rise from the tomb and there be a living witness to the power of Jesus Christ to save not only from sin, but to deliver from death and the grave. D. M. GEAN.

On Jan. 10, 1910, at the home of her son, J. F. Carlisle, near Pope, Miss., the spirit of Sister JANE CICLEY CARLISLE (nee Glenn) took its flight and returned to God who gave it. Sister Carlisle was born in South Carolina on Dec. 29, 1833. She moved in early life to Mississippi, and in 1852 was married to Coleman P. Carlisle in South Mississippi. Five children were born to this union, four of whom still survive her. J. F. Carlisle, of Pope, Miss.; Rev. W. C. Carlisle, of Calhoun City, Miss.; Mrs. J. G. Holloway, of Frederick, Miss.; and Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, of Central Academy, Miss. Sister Carlisle was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in childhood and lived a consistent Christian life. She had been a patient sufferer for a number of years and amid it all she continued steadfast in her implicit confidence in God. Sister Carlisle's husband died on Feb. 7, 1904, and since then she had lived with her children. A short while before her death she had the misfortune of breaking a limb. With this and a cancer, she suffered the severest pain, yet without a murmur. Having finished her course and reached the advanced age of 76 years, she fell on sleep and on Jan. 11, 1910, amid sorrowing relatives and friends she was laid to rest in Mt. Olivet Cemetery. C. W. BAILEY.

MR. JOS. A. SLOTT was born in East Baton Rouge Parish, Louisiana, March 28, 1853; was left an orphan boy at the age of 8. In early life he came to East Feliciana Parish, La., where he made his home near Olive Branch, La., until God saw fit to call him to his eternal home. His illness was of short duration. He took sick with pneumonia on the 11th of March, 1910, and died on the 20th at 4:30 a. m. Interment took place on the 21st at 2 p. m., at Pompea Cemetery. Brother Slott was received into the M. E. Church, South, in the year 1880, by Rev. Ira B. Robertson. He was elected to the stewardship Nov. 17, 1888, which office he held until his death. Later in his religious life he was elected a member of the Board of Trustees of his Church; also Sunday-school superintendent. The above offices he filled faithfully until the time came to give an account of his stewardship to Him who doeth all things well. Besides being a faithful member of the church, he was a member of the following orders: "Fraternal Mystic Circle" and "Fleet of the Sailors" for a number of years. Bro. Slott was a man generally liked by all whom he knew and knew him. The Church and community could not afford to part with such a man as he; but we have got to be submissive to the workings of the mysterious hand of the all-wise Creator, Bro. Slott was twice married. First, to Miss Ariadne Jackson. To this union were born four children—three sons and one daughter. His first wife died Jan. 26, 1893. All the children survive him. Second marriage, to Miss Eulalia Peairs, Jan. 26, 1901. This marriage was blessed with five children—two daughters and three sons. The youngest of the latter is only one year of age. Therefore he leaves his last wife and nine children to survive him and meet him in the eternal beyond. May God, in His wise providence administer to the companion and children of the deceased in their sad hours of bereavement, and may the comforting balm of the Holy Ghost be poured into their wounded hearts. Weep not loved one, as one who has not any hope, but trust in him who gave and hath taken away. Blessed is his name. And joy, peace, happiness, and the comforting influence of the Holy Spirit shall be thine.—His Pastor, J. W. Harper.

Mrs. SALLIE WARREN was born in South Carolina, March 31, 1836; married to Wm. W. Warren, Oct. 25, 1860, and "fell on sleep" in Byhalia, Miss., April 16, 1910, just a few weeks past seventy-four years of age, and lacking a few months of fifty years of married life. Converted in early life, she joined the Methodist Church, in which she proved herself an ideal member. No one came in contact with her but felt the influence of her consecration. As teacher in the Sunday school, near which she lived, she has left a haloed memory in many hearts. Her vacant seat in the church, filled so regularly till the last few months, will be a silent reminder and admonition to those who loved her. No night too dark, no day too dreary for her to answer the call of distress. Only one little one blessed the lives of Brother and Sister Warren, and then for only eleven months did God permit them to keep it. A tiny baby-boy was adopted after the little one died. The loving care devoted to him was amply repaid by tender love and thoughtfulness when Roger Warren grew to young manhood. Some six years ago the grim reaper came and carried off this treasure of the home. The mother heart was crushed, but strove to comfort the husband and sister. Soon failing health indicated the depth of her grief, and for six years suffering has been her portion. From the home near Ingram's Mill the family came to Byhalia, that medical aid should be near. Till last fall Sister Warren was able to attend church and visit her friends, but a stroke of paralysis came affecting one side in such a manner that she was unable to get about. Weaker and weaker grew the frail body; the patient heart, yearning for those gone before, beat more and more slowly. Medical attention, tender nursing, devotion unceasing, was given freely, but to no avail: the gentle spirit left its human habitation for brighter scenes. Sunday, April 11th, we carried the loved body of our sister to Fountain Head Church where a crowd of loving friends waited. Old, young, white and black, met to do honor to their good friend, loved teacher and kind neighbor. She was laid to rest after service conducted by Revs. R. M. Davis and J. W. Raper. We "sorrow not as others which have no hope," for "we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so they also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." J. W. RAPER, Pastor.

AGENTS WANTED.

WANTED—Good men and women agents at once for "Roosevelt's Famous Hunt for Big Game," also for "Traffic in Girls." Immense sellers. Price, $1.50. 50 per cent commission. Outfit free. Send 15c for mailing. Both outfits 25c. Also district managers for easy payment installment plan. Permanent work. $2,000 to $5,000 per year profits. Particulars free. Address, A. B. Kuhlman Company, Chicago, Ill. 7616.

Weak Lungs

Ask your doctor to name the best family medicine for coughs, colds, bronchitis, weak lungs. Follow his advice.

Seventy years of experience with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral have given us great confidence in it. We strongly recommend it for coughs, colds, bronchitis, weak throats, and weak lungs. It prevents. It soothes. It heals. Just the help nature needs.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616 618 COMMON STREET

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

We are Headquarters for

Edison's Phonographs, Records and Supplies

—CASH OR INSTALLMENT—

We pay transportation charges on purchase of one dozen records or more.

NATIONAL AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM CO., OF LA.

614 GRAVIER STREET . . . NEW ORLEANS.

"It Turns Your Waste Material Into Dollars."

THREE MACHINES IN ONE.

SHORT Log Saw Mill, Lath and Shingle Machine. Does all kinds of sawing. Just the machine for small Saw Mills and Farmers' use.

It's a Big Money Maker.

Write for circulars and particulars.

Manufactured only by

COLUMBIAN IRON WORKS,

Chattanooga, Tenn.

YOUR Boy May Become a Great Merchant

But not unless he has the necessary training. The business of this institution is to fit young men and women for successful business careers. We have the best systems for teaching Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Typewriting, Penmanship, Salesmanship, Telegraphy, Proofreading, Railroading, Public Accounting, Banking and Civil Service. Correspondence courses for those who cannot attend. Write for particulars and free booklet, entitled "OUR PRESIDENTS," giving a complete history of each, from Washington down to and including Taft.

FALL'S BUSINESS COLLEGE,
Broadway & 8th Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

CUT OUT AND MAIL THIS COUPON
Name.....
Address.....
Please send me your free booklet, "Our Presidents."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Durant Dist.—Third Round.

Dist. Conf. at Pickens	July 6, 8
Viaden, at Columbia	July 2, 3
Pickens, at Richland	July 9, 10
Durant	July 10, 11
Elmore, at Bethany	July 10, 11
Lexington	July 17, 18
Sidon, at Sidon	July 17, 18
Rural Hill, at Macedonia	July 23, 24
Grester, at So. Union	July 25
Louisville, at Noxapater	July 26
West, at Hebron	July 30, 31
Kosciusko Sta., at E. Union	Aug. 1
Sallis	Aug. 6
Ackerman	Aug. 7, 8
Kosciusko Ct.	Aug. 13
McCool	Aug. 14, 15
Poplar Creek	Aug. 20, 21
Black Hawk	Aug. 27, 28

N. G. AUGUSTUS, P. E.

Corinth Dist.—Third Round.

Belmont Ct., at Dennis	June 2, 3
Iuka Ct., at Hebron	June 4, 5
Iuka Sta., at Iuka	June 5, 6
Boonville Ct., at Hodges	June 11, 12
Corinth, So. Side, at S. S.	June 12, 13
Booneville Sta., at B.	June 13
Corinth Ct., at Gaines Chap.	June 17
Kossuth Ct., at P's Mt. Hill	June 18, 19
Corinth, 1st Ch., at 1st Ch.	June 19, 20
Wheeler's Ct., at Asbury	June 24
E. Booneville Ct., at Shady
Grove	June 25, 26
Rienzi Ct., at Bethel	July 2
Guntown Ct., at Pleasant
Valley	July 3, 4
Myrtle Ct., at Friendship	July 9, 10
Hatchie Miss., at El Bethel	July 16
Rainey Miss., at Marvin	July 23
Ripley and B. M., at Falk-
ner	July 24, 25
Beiden Ct., at Bethel	July 29
New Albany Ct., at Ecu.	July 30
New Albany Sta., at N. A.	July 30, 31
Jonesboro Ct., at Ebenezer	Aug. 6, 7
Dumas Ct., at Dumas	Aug. 13
Dry Run Miss., at Mt. Zion	Aug. 13, 14
Tishomingo Ct.	Aug. 20, 21
Mooreville Ct.	Aug. 25
Mantachie Ct.	Aug. 26
Marietta Ct.	Aug. 27, 28

Pastors will please see that answers are furnished to questions 17, 20 and 22.

BEN P. JACO, P. E.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Natchez Dist.—Second Round.

Centerville	May 28, 29
Nebo, at Oak Grove	June 4, 5
Barlow, at	June 11, 12
Bayou Pierre, at	June 13
Scotland, at	June 18, 19
Homochitto, at Rosetta	June 25, 26

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, P. E.

Jackson Dist.—Second Round.

Mendenhall, at Braxton	May 28, 29
Eden, at Thornton	June 1
Lintonia, at Crymes Ch.	June 4, 5
Yazoo City, at 8 p. m.	June 5
Flora, at Bentonia	June 11, 12
Deasonville, at Fletcher's Chapel	June 17
Benton, at Zeiglerville	June 18, 19
Fannin, at Goshen Spgs.	June 22
Harrisville, at Rexford	June 25, 26

J. R. JONES, P. E.

Seashore Dist.—Second Round.

Bihoi	May 25, 29
Gulfport, 25th Avenue	June 1
Lumberton	June 3, 5
Poplarville	June 6
Carriere and McNeill, at Mc-
Neill	June 7
Americus, 11 a. m.	June 10
Escatawpa, 11 a. m.	June 11
Moss Point	June 11, 12
Pascagoula	June 12, 13
Vancleave	June 15

W. B. JONES, P. E.

Brookhaven Dist.—Second Round.

Hazlehurst	May 29, 30
Monticello, at Tikon	June 4, 5
Prentiss, at Santee	June 11
Boguechitto and Norfield, at
Norfield	June 12, 13
Pearlhaven, Hawkin Chap.	June 18, 19
Buford, at Summers Chapel	June 26
District Conference	June 8, 10

J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

Meridian Dist.—Second Round.

Enterprise and Stonewall,
at Stonewall	May 28, 29
Porterville, at Union	June 4, 5
Meridian, Central	June 7
Meridian, 5th Street	June 8
DeKalb, at Pleasant Ridge	June 11, 12
Meridian, 7th Avenue	June 15
Vimville, at Why Not	June 18, 19

W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

District Conference, at Fifth Street, Meridian, May 30 to June 3.

W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

Newton Dist.—Second Round.

Shiloh, at Johns	May 28, 29
Chunky, at Meehan	June 1
Homewood, at High Hill	June 4, 5
Decatur, at Decatur	June 10
Neshoba, at Mars Hill	June 11, 12
Philadelphia, at P.	June 12, 13

T. J. O'NEIL, P. E.

Newton, Miss.

Vicksburg Dist.—Second Round.

Oak Ridge, at Red Bone	May 28, 29
Hermanville, at Pisgah	May 31
Edwards, at Clinton	June 3
Crawford St.	June 5

District Conference at Marysville June 7, 11. Opens on 7th, at 11 a. m.

G. H. GALLOWAY, P. E.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Shreveport Dist.—Second Round.

Hornbeck, at Prospect	May 28, 29
Leesville	May 29, 30
Ida	June 4, 5
Zwolle	June 10
Many	June 11, 12
Pelican	June 18, 19
Pleasant Hill	June 19, 20
De Ridder	June 25, 26
Bon Ami	June 27, 28
Mansfield	July 2, 3
Mooringport	July 3, 4
Shreveport, 1st Church	July 6
Bossier City	July 7

Shreveport District Conference will meet at Zwolle, La., June 14. The opening sermon will be preached Monday night.

T. J. WARLICK, P. E.

Baton Rouge Dist.—Second Round.

E. Feliciana, at Independ'ce	May 21, 22
Bogalusa—District Confer-
ence	May 28, 30
New Roads, at New Roads	June 4, 5

C. C. MILLER, P. E.

Monroe Dist.—Second Round.

Delhi	May 21, 22
Collinston	May 28, 29
Downsville	June 1
Floyd	June 4, 5
Lake Providence	June 11, 12
St. Joseph	June 18, 19
Brookland	June 22
Calhoun	June 25, 26

S. S. KEENER, P. E.

Ruston Dist.—Second Round.

Vernon, at Wesley	May 21, 22
Gibbsland, at Mt. Moriah	May 28, 29
Ringgold, at Rocky Mt.	June 3
Lanesville, at Brashwood	June 4, 5
Bernice, at Bernice, 8 p. m.	June 8
Winnfield	June 11, 12
Jonesboro, at Hodge	June 12, 13
Cotton Valley	June 18, 19
Lisbon	June 22
Houghton, at Castor	June 25, 26
Minden	June 28, 29

The District Conference will convene at Arcadia July 1 to 3. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. Robert Randle on June 30, at 8 p. m.

R. W. TUCKER, P. E.

Lafayette Dist.—Second Round.

Sulphur, at Vinton	May 21, 22
Jennings	May 22, 23
Bell City	May 28, 29
Lake Arthur	May 29, 30

J. E. DENSON, P. E.

New Orleans Dist.—Second Round.

Felicity	May 29
First Church	June 5
Second Church	June 5
Rayne Memorial	June 12

F. N. PARKER.

Grenada College.

Secure our catalogue before deciding where to place your daughter. Superior Home Comforts. Only Two Girls in a Room; Marvelous Health Record; Excellent Fine Arts Department; Strong Lyceum Course; Well-Adapted Library; Personal Attention to Individual Pupil; Superior Student Body as Associates; Carefully Selected Faculty; Strong Course of Study; Rates Reasonable; Constant Christian Influence Permeating and Dominating College Life.

Apply for rooms at once and thus secure choice of location.

W. L. CLIFTON, A. B., Ph. B., President, Grenada, Miss.

THE BEST MADE
Angell's Cough and Whooping
Cough SyrupFor Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs,
Colds and Throat Trouble.Contains no Opium or Morphine.
All Druggists, Price 25 and 50 cents.DUGGAN'S BOLL WEEVIL REMEDY
WILL INSURE A GOOD COTTON CROPShould be used by every cotton planter in the South. Simple, Cheap, Effective.
Fully demonstrated at Natchez, Miss., last season. Write for particulars and references.

One gallon diluted treats 2 acres

J. J. DUGGAN, Mn'fr,

4326 Magazine Street, New Orleans, La.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection; beans and peas not included. Give me a trial! Mail Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

I. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Riehl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres.

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd.,
JEWELERS.122 BARONNE ST. NEW ORLEANS
D. C. Godfrey Optician.

CONVENIENT WAY,

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA,
SHREVEPORT.PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS
ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL, General Passenger Agent.

A NEW CHANNEL FOR THE WISE
CONSERVATION OF RESOURCES.

Conservation of natural resources is highly desirable, and the movement deserves all the popular support which is behind it; but why not also a movement for the greater conservation of artificial resources? The waste and extravagance of most people in the matter of dress, for example, is little less than a national evil in its effect upon the increasing cost of living. The decree of fashion which alters the cut or color, the material and style, is blindly followed, by millions at the cost of discarding garments, hats and shoes which are practically as wearable as when purchased.—The Youth's Companion.

3 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McCord, Verbena, Ala., used 3 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 20 years."

C. G. Butler, Arzenta, Ark., wrote: "Used 4 bottles and gained 12 pounds and feel 100 per cent better."

Money back when it fails.
The Johnson's Chill & Fever
Tonic Co.
Savannah, Georgia.

Tidings from the Field

McHenry, Miss.

Dear Bro. Meek: I send you a small list of subscribers, will try and send a few more soon. Am well pleased with Advocate this year. It gets better and better. We have just closed one of the most revivals I ever attended, at Wiggins. Rev. P. D. Hardin assisted. There were about 50 conversions, 35 accessions to the Methodist Church and 4 to the Baptist. Provisions to meeting I received 28, making 64 since Conference. Several more are coming in next appointments. Our finances there are up to date. Our District Conference will be there, either the 15th or 17th of June, will let you know in a few days. Bro. W. G. Harbin will assist me at McHenry first Sabbath in June, to continue 10 days, work moves nicely here also. 15 accessions since Conference, finances up. God is blessing us. Rev. R. S. Gale.

Dry Run, Mission.

Dear Brother Meek: For the first time I will write a few lines from my work. This is my second year in the Dry Run, charge, also the second year in the mission. We had a good year last year. We had 14 conversions on the work, 122 additions to the Church. We met a cordial welcome. We are moving along fine this year and have raised up to date over half of our Conference assessments, and we feel sure of getting them in full before the close of the year. We think we have some as good people on our charge as there is in the world, and we are hoping and praying that we may have a few in revival at every one of our places. The fields are now white unto the harvest and the laborers are few. We are praying for more laborers. We think we have the best presiding elder in the North Mississippi Conference, and hope he will be ours next year. Best wishes to you and the paper. J. E. Fullert, D. C.

Oxford, Miss.

Early in April our pastor here at Oxford, Bro. J. C. Paddy, began preparations for a revival. He talked it and held a good prayer service for several weeks prior to its beginning. At the appointed time Bro. J. C. Paddy, the blind evangelist, came to us and on all the time preaching. Mrs. E. R. Smart also came and took charge of the singing, which added greatly to the meeting. For ten days the large audience, who treated to some of the boldest thought and sublimest words of truths that has ever been the privilege of any people to hear. Twice daily he stood before waiting and eager congregations and preached messages that burned their way into the hearts and minds, presiding and message that seemed indeed sharper than a two-edged sword, causing saint and sinner to think on their lives, as doubtless they had never thought before. One very marked feature of the meeting was the absence of pitchforks. In stead of all the gospel may being pitched by the heater into a neighbor's paw, the solemn countenances and snatches of pointed conversation, here and there, revealed the fact that each went away with an equal share taken into himself. We had a great meeting, much interest being manifested by the upstart at every service. Many times the altar and aisles were filled with penitents, weeping and pleading for mercy and peace. There were scores of bright conversions, over fifty coming with our Church. Quite a number of the University and Training School boys surrendered to Christ. This was very gratifying, as the Christian people of Oxford are deeply interested at all times in the students who come into the city. Many of the Christians of the three denominations, fell into line and joined the battle valiantly. Bro. Rutledge got a hold upon our hearts and consciences that we can not explain and that eternity alone will reveal. One thing we know, Oxford has undergone a very great change. Our mid-week prayer services are well attended. Our Union Ladies' prayer meeting has been revived, family altars have been created and at every Christian gathering there creeps into one's being a sensation that causes the heart to exclaim with one of old, "Behold how good and how blessed it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." To God be all the praise. Bro. Ramsey daily stood before us, his eyes closed to the beauties of earth, but open wide to a sin-cursed world, a Savior's intercession, and a wonderful birth. He spoke often of the friendship of Jesus, who led him so tenderly each day. Of the many mansioned home in glory, waiting just over the way. He plead for recruits for the Master, with hand outstretched to receive all who would respond to his earnest "Come on, friends, and in God's mercy believe. We may sing of receptions in heaven, when the faithful ones here cease to roam; but we know Gabriel's host will shout, 'Welcome,' when 'Little Bro. Joe' gets home." Mrs. Fount Callaway, Oxford, Miss.

Sold on Guarantee.

Royaline Oil, the great disinfectant, made by the Royaline Medicine Co. of New Orleans, La., has been on the market for sixteen years and is an acknowledged remedy for pains, aches, swellings, inflammations and every other kind of soreness, to which flesh is heir. You can cure your horse and cow with it as well as yourself. You ought to keep a bottle of it in the house all the time.

CALENDAR.

The World's Missionary Conference, Edinburgh, Scotland, June 14-24.
Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, Annual Meeting, Tupelo, Miss., June 11.
Seashore Divinity School, Seashore Campground, Biloxi, Miss., June 28-July 7.
Young People's Missionary Movement Conf., Asheville, N. C., July 1-10.
Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, Seashore Campground, July 21-31.

Epworth League.

Shreveport Dist. League Conf., Grand Cane, La., June 12, 13.
North Mississippi League Conference, Kosciusko, Miss., June 14-16.

District Conferences.

Baton Rouge District, Bogalusa, La., May 28-30.
Meridian District, Fifth Street Church, Meridian, Miss., May 30-June 3.
Winona District, Moorhead, Miss., June 2-5.
Newton District, Newton, Miss., June 6-10.
Brookhaven District, Prentiss, Miss., June 7-10.
Lafayette District Conference, Eunice, La., June 8.
Alexandria District Conference, Melville, La., June 10-11.
Shreveport District, Zwolle, La., June 14.
Ruston District, Arcadia, La., July 1-3.
Greenville District, Tunica, Miss., June 15-17.
Aberdeen District, Pontotoc, Miss., June 20-24.
Durant District, Pickens, Miss., July 6-8.

College Commencements.

Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., May 29-30.
Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., June 5-7.
Mansfield Female College, Mansfield, La., June 5-7.
Centenary College, Shreveport, La., June 5-7.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVES TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effective form. For grown people and children, 50c.

Spend Your Summer in the

BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAINS

Pure water, no malaria or Mosquitos. Public and private baths. Select Southern guests solicited. Write for booklet.

OAK HALL,

E. BROWNLEE, Prop.

Tryon, N. C.

Summer Tours

VIA

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

California, Colorado, Utah, Mexico, AND ALL THE WEST.

NEW YORK

And ALL EASTERN and NORTHERN RESORTS

See Your Local Agent for full Particulars, or Write

J. H. R. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt.

C. W. MURPHEY, City Pass. Agt.

New Orleans, La.

New Orleans, La.

Methodist Benevolent Association

Ministers and Laymen of Southern Methodist Church. Benefits at Death, or Old Age, or Disability. Over $5000 paid to Widows, Orphans, Disabled. Insurance at cost. If in good health, write for rates and other information.

CARE METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE

NASHVILLE, TENN.

METAL POLISH A pure liquid free from acid or grit. Apply it—then rub off. A brilliant and lasting polish in a "jiffy." For brass, copper, zinc, tin, enamel, nickel plate, glass, silver, etc. Fine for automobiles, yachts, carriages.

IN 25c TINS EVERYWHERE.

SILVER PASTE Qckwork Silver Paste keeps silver looking brand new. No acid—nothing to injure. Good for gold; cut glass, etc. Insist on Qckwork—the time saver.

IN 25c. JARS EVERYWHERE

USE THE L. & A. RAILWAY

"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service

Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

To Charge for the Name would be like a man's claiming remuneration for being good. Estey organs are made right because it is not right to make them otherwise. They cost what it costs to make them, plus a legitimate profit. No charge for the good name.

Address Estey Brattleboro, Vt.

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00
St. Louis, $26.00
Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares

To ALL Principal Points in the United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.
141 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
Phone Main 3618.

TO YOUNG WOMEN

You may be laying up for yourself much future suffering, by not treating your ailments promptly. (Before they have a chance to become chronic), with that well-known female remedy, Wine of Cardul,—about which you have so often heard.

Look ahead, and plan for a healthy, happy life, by preventing female trouble from getting a foothold.

Try that famous medicine, Cardul, which has helped so many others; will help you.

For young girls just entering into womanhood, and young ladies whose life duties have not long begun, Cardul is often of vital importance, giving them strength for daily tasks.

Read what Mrs. Mary Hudson, of Eastman, Miss., says about her young sister: "While staying with me, and going to school, my young sister was in terrible misery. I got her to take a few doses of Cardul and it helped her at once."

"I have taken Cardul myself and believe I would have been under the day, if it had not been for that wonderful medicine."

"Now I am in better health than in three years."

Try Cardul.

Let your face always be turned towards the light. There is nothing in the darkness for you.—Selected.

"Happiness grows at our firesides, and it is not picked up in strangers' gardens."—Southern Churchman.

Epworth League

By Rev. H. B. Watkins.

TOPIC FOR MAY 29.

THE CHARACTER AND MOTIVE OF WOMAN'S MISSIONARY WORK.

(Mark xiv, 3-9.)

No passage that could be selected for our study to-day could be better illustrative of the devotion of womanhood to the personal divine Christ.

There are many beautiful lessons that are to be drawn from it. The first of these is the charming lack of self-consciousness, as forgetful of the ordinary embarrassment the crowd might occasion, she ministers to her Lord in this public way. It was no lack of modesty. Her face doubtless flushed crimson when the propriety of her act was questioned. She had intended only good and her love had made her forget to be embarrassed. It must be with such self-forgetfulness that the devoted womanhood of Christianity comes into public work for their Lord. With no lack of modesty, surprised that any one should question its motive or propriety, she breaks through the natural hesitation that would be hers, and in her own beautiful, tender way, ministers to her Lord. We all shrink from women preaching. And yet, some of the sweetest public services we have ever attended were conducted by modest women, led into such work in spite of being embarrassed, by a self-forgetful love for Christ Jesus. Our women of our missionary societies have been none the less womanly because they have done these public things for Jesus Christ.

This was an act such as only a woman's hand could do, and such as only such a gentle, devoted mind would have thought to do. As we see our sisters at work among women at home and abroad we remember that they go in their kindly ministry where no man could enter and bind up wounds no man's hand could touch. Into Oriental homes, to the very bedside of sick womanhood, she goes and carries the consolations of the gospel of Christ, while she also ministers to her physical needs. All honor to the devoted sisters of ours who in all lands among their less fortunate sisters are doing a work no man, however well equipped, could do. It is this fact that gives confidence to the hearts of the women of our Church as they are organized somewhat independently to do what their brothers and fathers and husbands can not do. As the years go by and more and more our Methodist women get the confidence of the women of China and Korea and Japan, and they more and more place their daughters in their hands for mental and religious training, no man can predict what shall be the influence of Christianity and womanhood in these lands. Let us pray often for Jane Watkins, Hallie Buie, Nell Drake, Mrs. Eearn and a host of others, who work close to the hearts of the womanhood of those lands. The work they are doing no man could do. The Christ who approved the kindly ministrations of Mary of Bethany, looks with love and appreciation also on them.

Our teachers in our Methodist schools, our Bible women, our women who are medical missionaries under the Woman's Board, are a factor that shall count immensely in the evangelization of those nations beyond.

This act of Mary's was such a little thing, and yet Jesus said it should be told wherever the gospel was preached. A little thing? Ah, who can begin to measure the size and consequence of any act done in Christ's name? To me it is marvelous that with their dimes, and mite boxes, and pledges, etc., the women of Southern Methodism give practically one-third of our total amount given to foreign missions. In many pastoral charges the Foreign Auxiliary gives as much as the total assessment to that charge. To-day they have nearly one hundred workers in foreign lands. They have their great Scafritt Bible and Training School at Kansas City; they have thousands of dollars worth of property in schools and hospitals in the foreign fields. But it all comes from such a little thing. It all comes from a little band of women in each pastoral charge, giving their dimes every month to Christ Jesus. It is an honor to any pastorate to have this little share in what emerges into a very great movement.

Love led Mary to do what she never thought of doing. She anointed his body for its burial—anointed him while its fragrance could delight him and in time for its memory to sweeten the very agony of his death. She never dreamed she would do that. She only followed her heart's desire to show her love. Women of Methodism, neither do you realize the significance of what you are doing for your Lord. Your eye can not see the future, but God is using your loving hearts and hands for preparing for things in that future of which you have not dreamed. But when the veil is removed you shall find that unwittingly "aforehand," you have made ready in Jesus' name.

Let love work on with her "little deeds" and "little gifts." Some day you shall find that Christ led you by a way you knew not and into fields of usefulness of which you did not dream.

This Mary who so loved her Lord would not neglect his poor. These women will not neglect Christ's "help the world over, because they love him. At the foundation of all service is a great throbbing self-forgetful love—a love that will not content itself with words, but will express itself in a hundred deeds, of which no one else had thought.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE LEAGUES.

You will please notify Bro. Walter Boswell, Kosciusko, of your election of delegates, giving their names. It is important that you do this at once. Be sure that every league is well represented at the Conference in Kosciusko, June 14, 15 and 16. Meeting opens Wednesday evening.

JAMES B. SMALL, President.

Believer's Headache

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

Relieves headache, and nervousness caused by impaired digestion, wakefulness or overwork.

IN THE JUNE ST. NICHOLAS.

There are nine serial features now running in St. Nicholas—six stories, De Witt Clinton Fall's "Leaves from the Journey Book," and Palmer Cox's and Mrs. Ruth McEnery Stuart's series of jingles. In addition to the June chapters of these serials, and plenty of short stories and verse, the June St. Nicholas will have much interesting information for its young readers about comets in general and the Halley comet in particular. "Nature and Science" will discuss the broad subject of comets in a way young readers can easily understand, and A. Russell Bond will tell the story of Halley's comet, and just where and when to see it, with reproductions of a number of photographs taken by Professor Barnard.

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch, and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also.

COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY, have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.

1300-1302

DRYADES STREET.

PHONES.—Jackson 1080—1081.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS
UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE
Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing by hand—no breakage.
WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
LE PAGE
INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO
TORONTO—CANADA

Rider Agents Wanted

In each town to ride and exhibit sample 1910 bicycle. Write for special offer. Finest Guaranteed 1910 Models $10 to $27 with Coaster Brake and Pneumatic Proof tires. 1908 & 1909 Models all of best makes $7 to $12. 100 Second Hand Wheels. All makes and models. $3 to $8 good as new. Great FACTORY CLEARING SALE. We ship on approval without a cent deposit, pay the freight and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL. Tires, coaster brake, rear wheels, lamps, sundries, half usual price. Do not buy till you get our catalog and offer. Write now. MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. M. 275, Chicago.

FITS CURED NO CURE NO PAY—in 6 days. Write for details. Do not pay until you are cured. For full details and testimonials, German-American Institute, 384 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

GALL STONES or LIVER

or Stomach Ailment Cured. AVOID AN OPERATION.

Have you Pain or Distress in Right Stomach, Pains 2 hours after meals, Right side pains or Backache? Spells of Indigestion, Sick Headache, Bloating, Colic, Jaundice, Bile, Constipation, Piles, Soreness, Fullness or heaviness over Liver or Stomach? If you have any of these symptoms you need the "SECRET SOLVING STONE" Remedy. Write for FREE Booklet. CALLSTONE REMEDY CO., Sole U. S. Agents, Dept. 34 225 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

WE OFFER YOU A POSITION

Own right away. Must have them and will pay $5.00 to $10.00 a day guaranteed amount of work. You need no money. Everything done on capital. You deliver our goods and collect. Write today for free plans, sample, etc. All free. G. H. GROUNDS Manager 1927 W. Adams Street, Dept. 5588, Chicago, Ill.

You Look Prematurely Old

Because of those ugly, grizzly gray hairs. Use "LA OREOLE" HAIR COLOR RESTORER. Price $1.00, retail.

HOME BAKED FOOD,
fresh, good, wholesome, economical. Readily made with

Royal

Baking Powder

No Alum
No Lime

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

HUGH T. BUCKLEY.

Mr. Hugh T. Buckley, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Buckley, was born in Vaiden, Miss., July 14, 1886, and departed this life Feb. 25, 1910. His remains were laid to rest in the family cemetery of the town of his nativity. At the early age of ten he accepted Christ and joined the Methodist Church, of which he was a member at the time of his death. He loved his Lord, and his faith in him, in his wisdom, his love, his goodness, was beautiful. It ripened as the years went by. After graduating from the Winona High School, Mr. Buckley entered the University at Oxford, where he spent four years. He made an enviable record both at the High School and as a student in the University. His studious habits, his earnest, faithful work, and his dutiful obedience to his teachers, made him a great favorite among them. His thoughtfulness of his fellow students, his deep interest in them, together with his genial and companionable disposition, won for him their highest esteem. They all loved him. He taught school a while. During the session of 1908-09 he was principal of the High School of Bolton, Miss. He was next elected professor of mathematics in the public school of Natchez. At the time of his death he was serving as book-keeper for the Blackston Mercantile Company, of Winona.

Hugh was a choice young man. He was ever courteous and polite, and it was that politeness which is the fruit of a cultured mind and a good heart; that politeness which satisfies by a behavior which weighs and discriminates aright. His bright, cheerful disposition and his gracious manners won for him many friends. His noble nature was so full "of the milk of human kindness" that to know him was to be his friend. In reading the many letters of condolence from persons all over the State and elsewhere, one is deeply impressed with the high esteem in which he was held by all who knew him. They show that he captured the hearts of all whom he met. They all speak of his nobility of purpose, his high sense of honor, his winning ways, his fidelity to duty, and his devout Christian spirit. He was ever actuated by right principles and governed by pure, unselfish motives. He loved the truth, was firm in his convictions and steadfast in his purpose. When he made up his mind that a course of action was right, he believed in resolutely abiding by his decision. He had that rare courage which is ever true to the right, and which is ever obedient to the inner voice, the voice of conscience, the voice of God. Uprightness, probity, integrity, marked his every act. He was always manly, because he possessed every moral excellence of a man.

His relations to the immediate family were ideal. He was a tender, thoughtful, dutiful and affectionate son; a gentle, courteous, considerate brother. A sister, in referring to his many beautiful traits of character, spoke especially of his great patience. What can adorn and beautify character more than this noble grace? Nothing. It is, indeed, the Soul of Peace, of all the virtues, the nearest kin to heaven. We do not know why death should claim this young man, who was so well qualified for a service of usefulness, standing, as it were, on the very threshold of life, with a past so well spent in preparation for the duties of life behind him, and a future so bright with promises before him. But our God knows, he understands, and will some day reveal the meaning of this sad dispensation of his providence. We do know, however, that Hugh did not live in vain; for the gentle and sweet influence of his beautiful young life will never fade from the memory of those who loved him, and it will ever help to guide them up to the home to which he has gone.

Our hearts go out in deepest sympathy to the bereaved. We commend them to the God of infinite love and mercy, and pray that he may send into their hearts his Angel of Patience, and that they may hear that angel as he gently whispers: Be resigned. Bear up, bear up, the end shall tell. Our dear Lord ordereth all things well.

J. A. HAMIL.

Mrs. Y. ELIZABETH HOLLINS-WORTH NUGENT was born in Rapides Parish, La., Oct. 7, 1831, and died in Grant Parish, April 11, 1910. She was married to Wm. Nugent April 8, 1841. Ten children were born unto them, eight of whom survive her. Her husband and the other two children preceded her to the glory land. All of her children living are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and are trying to emulate the Christian virtues of their mother. Sister Nugent was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1855. It was our privilege to be her pastor fifteen years ago, and when she died I visited her in her last illness, which was of several months duration, and found her cheerful and patiently resigned to the will of God, whatever it might be. Sister Nugent loved her church and was loyal to its doctrine and discipline. Her pastor, as well as Methodist preachers, and preachers of other denominations, were welcome in her home. Sister Nugent had the courage of her convictions, and stood up for Jesus under adverse circumstances. May the choicest blessings of heaven rest upon her children, and may her life be an inspiration to them, and may they all meet her in that home beyond the skies.

Her pastor, WILSON MOORE.

Little CLARENCE DELAINE GARRISON was born Nov. 4, 1901, and after intense suffering for about two weeks he departed this life on March 6, 1910. He was a bright boy, and he bid fair to make a strong and useful man in the future. His place is vacant in the home, and we shall never more hear his sweet voice on earth. It is sad, indeed, to part with those whom we love, but it is a great consolation to know that one day we shall meet him again in the bright beyond, where pain and death never enter. Our sympathies are with the father and mother. While they cannot call little Clarence back, they can go where he is. He is now shining in the presence of the King. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, after which the little form of Clarence was laid to rest in the Society Hill Cemetery. The child's friend,

HILARY WESTBROOK,
Oakvale, Miss.

On the morning of March 31, 1910, at the home of his mother, Mrs. Florence Reed, in Yazoo City, Miss., WILLIAM BUCK REED departed this life. He was a young man, richly endowed by nature and training to fill the sphere of a happy and useful citizen. High and honorable in his ideals; straightforward in his business methods, he commanded the respect and friendship of his colleagues and competitors in the business world. Kind and courteous in his daily bearing, he won and held many friendships. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and lived consistently with its teachings. Four years ago he was happily married to Miss Minnie McLeod. This marriage was the culmination of vows made in perfect love and trust. While their lives were so soon to fall within the shadow, they learned to feel that they stood under the shadow of the Almighty, and were not alone as they trod the vineyard and "through the valley," their Father, went all the way. Many of us wonder that a life so bright and promising should have been cut down at his age; but we know that our Father doeth all things in wisdom, and loves us, though he withholds not the cup.

Whereas, GEORGE W. GILLIS, who was an active member of Brooklyn Epworth League, Chapter 5380, has been called to his home in the great beyond; and whereas Brother Gillis was faithful to attend and to assist in making the League service interesting; therefore, be it resolved:

First—That we, as an Epworth League, lament the untimely death of this true member.

Second—That we submit to the will of our Father in heaven, who never makes mistakes.

Third—That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, and that we point them for consolation to the Christ, who is able to wipe all tears away.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the sorrowing family; that a copy be spread upon the Epworth League minutes; and that a copy be sent the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Mrs. BLANCHE FERGUSON,
Mrs. BEULAH CALHOUN,
Committee.
Brooklyn, Miss., April 20, 1910.

JOHN H. LEWIS departed this life on April 19, 1910, after three weeks of suffering, which he bore bravely, always calling on the Lord for help. He said he wanted to go and meet his father, mother, sisters and brothers, and two darling boys, who had gone before him, around that great white throne above. He was in his 65th year. He was a devoted companion and an affectionate father. Mr. Lewis was reared by Christian parents and joined the Methodist Church when quite a young man. He leaves seven children, two sisters, two brothers, a faithful wife, and a host of friends to mourn his death. He was born and reared in Kentucky, and came to Mississippi some twenty years ago. He is gone, but not forgotten. Written by his lonely companion, BEULAH, Charleston, Miss.

"What if some morning, when the stars were paling,
And the dawn whitened and the east was clear,
Strange peace and rest fell on me from the presence
Of a benignant spirit standing near?"

Thus it was with our friend, Miss ZOE HICKS, who was suddenly called to her home beyond the blue, but was conscious that the end was near. She felt ready to go, since her trust was not in her own merit, but in Him, the One who sticketh closer than a brother, and walks through the dark valley, with each believing child. She had for more than thirty years been a faithful member of the Methodist Church. She loved the house of God and the people of God, and was always true to her duty toward all departments of the church life; even the day before death placed its icy chains, she contributed to the Laymen's Missionary fund. Gladly did she give as her Lord prospered her. Farewell, dear friend, the same faith and zeal that sustained you in many hours of affliction here will stand as a glad heritage in the land beyond the stars.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

PLAN OF EPISCOPAL VISITATION.

- First District, Bishop A. W. Wilson.
Virginia Conference, Centenary Church, Richmond, Va., Nov. 9th.
North Georgia Conference, Athens, Ga., Nov. 16th.
Alabama, Troy, Ala., Dec. 7th.
- Second District, Bishop E. E. Hendrix.
Denver, Denver, Colo., Sept. 8th.
Western North Carolina, Winston-Salem, N. C., Nov. 16th.
North Carolina, Elizabeth City, N. C., Nov. 30th.
South Carolina, Charleston, S. C., Dec. 7th.
- Third Dist., Bishop Warren A. Canfield.
Holston, Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 5th.
Tennessee, Clarksville, Tenn., Oct. 12th.
Memphis, Paducah, Ky., Nov. 9th.
Cuban Mission, Havana, Cuba, Jan. 19th, 1911.
- Fourth Dist., Bishop E. C. Morrison.
Western Virginia, New Martinsville, W. Va., Sept. 7th.
Illinois, Patoka, Ill., Sept. 22d.
South Georgia, Columbus, Ga., Nov. 30th.
- Fifth Dist., Bishop E. E. Ross.
Japan Mission, Arima, Japan, Sept. 1st.
Korean Mission, Songdo, Korea, Sept. 15th.
China Mission, Huchow, China, Oct. 12th.
Baltimore, Clifton Forge, Va., March 29th, 1911.
- Sixth Dist., Bishop James Atkins.
New Mexico, Artesia, New Mex., Oct. 6th.
West Texas, Austin, Tex., Oct. 26th.
Central Texas, Waxahachie, Tex., Nov. 2d.
- Northwest, Texas, Clarendon, Tex., Nov. 9th.
- Seventh Dist., Bishop Collins Denny.
Missouri, Plattsburg, Mo., Aug. 31st.
Southwest Missouri, Webb City, Mo., Sept. 14th.
St. Louis, Cape Girardeau, Mo., Sept. 28th.
- Eighth Dist., Bishop John C. Elger.
Kentucky, Harrodsburg, Ky., Sept. 21st.
Louisville, Russellville, Ky., Sept. 28th.
- North Alabama, Huntsville, Ala., Nov. 30th.
- Florida, Springfield Church, Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 14th.
- Ninth Dist., Bishop W. E. Marshall.
German Mission, East Bernard, Tex., Oct. 27th.
North Texas, Wichita Falls, Tex., Nov. 23d.
- Texas, Galveston, Tex., Nov. 30th.
Louisiana, Homer, La., Dec. 7th.
- Tenth Dist., Bishop W. E. Lambuth.
Brazil Mission, Sao Paulo, Brazil, July 28th.
South Brazil Mission, Santa Maria, Brazil, July 7th.
- Bishop Lambuth will go to Africa also in the interest of the Mission which the Board of Missions proposes to open in that field.
- Eleventh Dist., Bishop E. G. Waterhouse.
Montana, Butte, Mont., Sept. 1st.
East Columbia, Walla Walla, Wash., Sept. 15th.
- Columbia, Medford, Oregon, Sept. 22d.
Pacific, Stockton, Cal., Oct. 5th.
Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 12th.
- Twelfth Dist., Bishop E. D. Moulton.
Mississippi, Hattiesburg, Miss., Dec. 7th.
- Mexican Border Mission, Monterey, Mex., Feb. 2d, 1911.
Central Mexico Mission, Mexico City, Feb. 9th, 1911.
Northwest Mexican Mission, Mazatlan, Feb. 23rd, 1911.
- Thirteenth Dist., Bishop J. E. McCoy.
Arkansas, Fayetteville, Ark., Nov. 2d.
Little Rock, Prescott, Ark., Nov. 16th.
White River, Forest City, Ark., Nov. 23rd.
- North Mississippi, Sardis, Miss., Nov. 30th.
- The semi-annual meeting of the Bishops will be held in New Orleans, La., Oct. 20th.

ESTABLISHED 1858
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Oct. 26, 1910.
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

BLMYER
CHURCH
BELLS
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Bowden
CHURCH & SCHOOL BELLS
Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, MONTVILLE, CONNECTICUT.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

It has been wisely said that every really useful, every active man in any sense, is a hopeful man.—Selected.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1910.

C. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

VOL. 57—No. 22.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2824.

BISHOP Wm. B. MURRAH, D.D., LL.D.

Christian Advocate.

Published for the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DIRECTIONS.

Correspondents will please direct all communications intended for the Editor to 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Communications intended for the Business Department should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Write with ink, and only on one side of the paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after two weeks, notify us, and we will make it right. Papers will be continued unless subscribers order otherwise.

THE NEW BISHOPS.

Bishop Collins Denny.

Dr. Denny was born in Winchester, Va., May 28, 1854, and is a son of William R. and Margaret Collins Denny. He was educated in the Shenandoah Valley Academy at Winchester. He completed his education at Princeton University, taking the degree of M. A. He then entered the University of Virginia, being graduated in the schools of English language, literature and moral philosophy, and also in law, receiving the degree of B. L.

He soon after began the practice of law in the city of Baltimore. He was married in that city to Miss Lucy C. Chapman. He has five children living; one the wife of our city missionary in Richmond, Va., another the wife of our city missionary in Rio, Brazil. In 1880 he joined the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and has represented his Conference in five General Conferences. At the Dallas and Birmingham Conferences he was strongly supported by his Conference and a large number of delegates from other conferences for the office of Bishop, failing of an election each time by only a few votes.

In 1886-7 Dr. Denny visited the Asiatic missions of his Church by Episcopal appointment, in company with Bishop Wilson. On his return he was elected to the office of chairman of the University of Virginia, a position he held from 1889 to 1894 when he was called to a professorship in Vanderbilt University, which he has filled since with much ability. He was elected a member of the Book Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1894 and has been its chairman since 1908. In 1908, by the appointment of our College of Bishops, he went as our fraternal delegate to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church assembled in Baltimore, Maryland, and addressed that great body. He has been a frequent contributor to the Church papers and periodicals.

Bishop John C. Kilgo.

Dr. John C. Kilgo was born July 22, 1861, in Laurens, S. C. His father, Rev. James T. Kilgo, was for many years a circuit rider.

He was educated in Wofford College and was licensed to preach May 27, 1882, and joined the South Carolina Conference in December, 1882. He was a circuit rider for six years, and was connected with Wofford College, where he was president of the college in 1885. He then served as president of the college in 1886, 1887, 1888, 1889, 1890, 1891, 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895, 1896, 1897, 1898, 1899, 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905, 1906, 1907, 1908, 1909, 1910, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930, 1931, 1932, 1933, 1934, 1935, 1936, 1937, 1938, 1939, 1940, 1941, 1942, 1943, 1944, 1945, 1946, 1947, 1948, 1949, 1950, 1951, 1952, 1953, 1954, 1955, 1956, 1957, 1958, 1959, 1960, 1961, 1962, 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966, 1967, 1968, 1969, 1970, 1971, 1972, 1973, 1974, 1975, 1976, 1977, 1978, 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988, 1989, 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995, 1996, 1997, 1998, 1999, 2000, 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009, 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015, 2016, 2017, 2018, 2019, 2020, 2021, 2022, 2023, 2024, 2025, 2026, 2027, 2028, 2029, 2030, 2031, 2032, 2033, 2034, 2035, 2036, 2037, 2038, 2039, 2040, 2041, 2042, 2043, 2044, 2045, 2046, 2047, 2048, 2049, 2050, 2051, 2052, 2053, 2054, 2055, 2056, 2057, 2058, 2059, 2060, 2061, 2062, 2063, 2064, 2065, 2066, 2067, 2068, 2069, 2070, 2071, 2072, 2073, 2074, 2075, 2076, 2077, 2078, 2079, 2080, 2081, 2082, 2083, 2084, 2085, 2086, 2087, 2088, 2089, 2090, 2091, 2092, 2093, 2094, 2095, 2096, 2097, 2098, 2099, 2100, 2101, 2102, 2103, 2104, 2105, 2106, 2107, 2108, 2109, 2110, 2111, 2112, 2113, 2114, 2115, 2116, 2117, 2118, 2119, 2120, 2121, 2122, 2123, 2124, 2125, 2126, 2127, 2128, 2129, 2130, 2131, 2132, 2133, 2134, 2135, 2136, 2137, 2138, 2139, 2140, 2141, 2142, 2143, 2144, 2145, 2146, 2147, 2148, 2149, 2150, 2151, 2152, 2153, 2154, 2155, 2156, 2157, 2158, 2159, 2160, 2161, 2162, 2163, 2164, 2165, 2166, 2167, 2168, 2169, 2170, 2171, 2172, 2173, 2174, 2175, 2176, 2177, 2178, 2179, 2180, 2181, 2182, 2183, 2184, 2185, 2186, 2187, 2188, 2189, 2190, 2191, 2192, 2193, 2194, 2195, 2196, 2197, 2198, 2199, 2200, 2201, 2202, 2203, 2204, 2205, 2206, 2207, 2208, 2209, 2210, 2211, 2212, 2213, 2214, 2215, 2216, 2217, 2218, 2219, 2220, 2221, 2222, 2223, 2224, 2225, 2226, 2227, 2228, 2229, 2230, 2231, 2232, 2233, 2234, 2235, 2236, 2237, 2238, 2239, 2240, 2241, 2242, 2243, 2244, 2245, 2246, 2247, 2248, 2249, 2250, 2251, 2252, 2253, 2254, 2255, 2256, 2257, 2258, 2259, 2260, 2261, 2262, 2263, 2264, 2265, 2266, 2267, 2268, 2269, 2270, 2271, 2272, 2273, 2274, 2275, 2276, 2277, 2278, 2279, 2280, 2281, 2282, 2283, 2284, 2285, 2286, 2287, 2288, 2289, 2290, 2291, 2292, 2293, 2294, 2295, 2296, 2297, 2298, 2299, 2300, 2301, 2302, 2303, 2304, 2305, 2306, 2307, 2308, 2309, 2310, 2311, 2312, 2313, 2314, 2315, 2316, 2317, 2318, 2319, 2320, 2321, 2322, 2323, 2324, 2325, 2326, 2327, 2328, 2329, 2330, 2331, 2332, 2333, 2334, 2335, 2336, 2337, 2338, 2339, 2340, 2341, 2342, 2343, 2344, 2345, 2346, 2347, 2348, 2349, 2350, 2351, 2352, 2353, 2354, 2355, 2356, 2357, 2358, 2359, 2360, 2361, 2362, 2363, 2364, 2365, 2366, 2367, 2368, 2369, 2370, 2371, 2372, 2373, 2374, 2375, 2376, 2377, 2378, 2379, 2380, 2381, 2382, 2383, 2384, 2385, 2386, 2387, 2388, 2389, 2390, 2391, 2392, 2393, 2394, 2395, 2396, 2397, 2398, 2399, 2400, 2401, 2402, 2403, 2404, 2405, 2406, 2407, 2408, 2409, 2410, 2411, 2412, 2413, 2414, 2415, 2416, 2417, 2418, 2419, 2420, 2421, 2422, 2423, 2424, 2425, 2426, 2427, 2428, 2429, 2430, 2431, 2432, 2433, 2434, 2435, 2436, 2437, 2438, 2439, 2440, 2441, 2442, 2443, 2444, 2445, 2446, 2447, 2448, 2449, 2450, 2451, 2452, 2453, 2454, 2455, 2456, 2457, 2458, 2459, 2460, 2461, 2462, 2463, 2464, 2465, 2466, 2467, 2468, 2469, 2470, 2471, 2472, 2473, 2474, 2475, 2476, 2477, 2478, 2479, 2480, 2481, 2482, 2483, 2484, 2485, 2486, 2487, 2488, 2489, 2490, 2491, 2492, 2493, 2494, 2495, 2496, 2497, 2498, 2499, 2500, 2501, 2502, 2503, 2504, 2505, 2506, 2507, 2508, 2509, 2510, 2511, 2512, 2513, 2514, 2515, 2516, 2517, 2518, 2519, 2520, 2521, 2522, 2523, 2524, 2525, 2526, 2527, 2528, 2529, 2530, 2531, 2532, 2533, 2534, 2535, 2536, 2537, 2538, 2539, 2540, 2541, 2542, 2543, 2544, 2545, 2546, 2547, 2548, 2549, 2550, 2551, 2552, 2553, 2554, 2555, 2556, 2557, 2558, 2559, 2560, 2561, 2562, 2563, 2564, 2565, 2566, 2567, 2568, 2569, 2570, 2571, 2572, 2573, 2574, 2575, 2576, 2577, 2578, 2579, 2580, 2581, 2582, 2583, 2584, 2585, 2586, 2587, 2588, 2589, 2590, 2591, 2592, 2593, 2594, 2595, 2596, 2597, 2598, 2599, 2600, 2601, 2602, 2603, 2604, 2605, 2606, 2607, 2608, 2609, 2610, 2611, 2612, 2613, 2614, 2615, 2616, 2617, 2618, 2619, 2620, 2621, 2622, 2623, 2624, 2625, 2626, 2627, 2628, 2629, 2630, 2631, 2632, 2633, 2634, 2635, 2636, 2637, 2638, 2639, 2640, 2641, 2642, 2643, 2644, 2645, 2646, 2647, 2648, 2649, 2650, 2651, 2652, 2653, 2654, 2655, 2656, 2657, 2658, 2659, 2660, 2661, 2662, 2663, 2664, 2665, 2666, 2667, 2668, 2669, 2670, 2671, 2672, 2673, 2674, 2675, 2676, 2677, 2678, 2679, 2680, 2681, 2682, 2683, 2684, 2685, 2686, 2687, 2688, 2689, 2690, 2691, 2692, 2693, 2694, 2695, 2696, 2697, 2698, 2699, 2700, 2701, 2702, 2703, 2704, 2705, 2706, 2707, 2708, 2709, 2710, 2711, 2712, 2713, 2714, 2715, 2716, 2717, 2718, 2719, 2720, 2721, 2722, 2723, 2724, 2725, 2726, 2727, 2728, 2729, 2730, 2731, 2732, 2733, 2734, 2735, 2736, 2737, 2738, 2739, 2740, 2741, 2742, 2743, 2744, 2745, 2746, 2747, 2748, 2749, 2750, 2751, 2752, 2753, 2754, 2755, 2756, 2757, 2758, 2759, 2760, 2761, 2762, 2763, 2764, 2765, 2766, 2767, 2768, 2769, 2770, 2771, 2772, 2773, 2774, 2775, 2776, 2777, 2778, 2779, 2780, 2781, 2782, 2783, 2784, 2785, 2786, 2787, 2788, 2789, 2790, 2791, 2792, 2793, 2794, 2795, 2796, 2797, 2798, 2799, 2800, 2801, 2802, 2803, 2804, 2805, 2806, 2807, 2808, 2809, 2810, 2811, 2812, 2813, 2814, 2815, 2816, 2817, 2818, 2819, 2820, 2821, 2822, 2823, 2824, 2825, 2826, 2827, 2828, 2829, 2830, 2831, 2832, 2833, 2834, 2835, 2836, 2837, 2838, 2839, 2840, 2841, 2842, 2843, 2844, 2845, 2846, 2847, 2848, 2849, 2850, 2851, 2852, 2853, 2854, 2855, 2856, 2857, 2858, 2859, 2860, 2861, 2862, 2863, 2864, 2865, 2866, 2867, 2868, 2869, 2870, 2871, 2872, 2873, 2874, 2875, 2876, 2877, 2878, 2879, 2880, 2881, 2882, 2883, 2884, 2885, 2886, 2887, 2888, 2889, 2890, 2891, 2892, 2893, 2894, 2895, 2896, 2897, 2898, 2899, 2900, 2901, 2902, 2903, 2904, 2905, 2906, 2907, 2908, 2909, 2910, 2911, 2912, 2913, 2914, 2915, 2916, 2917, 2918, 2919, 2920, 2921, 2922, 2923, 2924, 2925, 2926, 2927, 2928, 2929, 2930, 2931, 2932, 2933, 2934, 2935, 2936, 2937, 2938, 2939, 2940, 2941, 2942, 2943, 2944, 2945, 2946, 2947, 2948, 2949, 2950, 2951, 2952, 2953, 2954, 2955, 2956, 2957, 2958, 2959, 2960, 2961, 2962, 2963, 2964, 2965, 2966, 2967, 2968, 2969, 2970, 2971, 2972, 2973, 2974, 2975, 2976, 2977, 2978, 2979, 2980, 2981, 2982, 2983, 2984, 2985, 2986, 2987, 2988, 2989, 2990, 2991, 2992, 2993, 2994, 2995, 2996, 2997, 2998, 2999, 3000, 3001, 3002, 3003, 3004, 3005, 3006, 3007, 3008, 3009, 3010, 3011, 3012, 3013, 3014, 3015, 3016, 3017, 3018, 3019, 3020, 3021, 3022, 3023, 3024, 3025, 3026, 3027, 3028, 3029, 3030, 3031, 3032, 3033, 3034, 3035, 3036, 3037, 3038, 3039, 3040, 3041, 3042, 3043, 3044, 3045, 3046, 3047, 3048, 3049, 3050, 3051, 3052, 3053, 3054, 3055, 3056, 3057, 3058, 3059, 3060, 3061, 3062, 3063, 3064, 3065, 3066, 3067, 3068, 3069, 3070, 3071, 3072, 3073, 3074, 3075, 3076, 3077, 3078, 3079, 3080, 3081, 3082, 3083, 3084, 3085, 3086, 3087, 3088, 3089, 3090, 3091, 3092, 3093, 3094, 3095, 3096, 3097, 3098, 3099, 3100, 3101, 3102, 3103, 3104, 3105, 3106, 3107, 3108, 3109, 3110, 3111, 3112, 3113, 3114, 3115, 3116, 3117, 3118, 3119, 3120, 3121, 3122, 3123, 3124, 3125, 3126, 3127, 3128, 3129, 3130, 3131, 3132, 3133, 3134, 3135, 3136, 3137, 3138, 3139, 3140, 3141, 3142, 3143, 3144, 3145, 3146, 3147, 3148, 3149, 3150, 3151, 3152, 3153, 3154, 3155, 3156, 3157, 3158, 3159, 3160, 3161, 3162, 3163, 3164, 3165, 3166, 3167, 3168, 3169, 3170, 3171, 3172, 3173, 3174, 3175, 3176, 3177, 3178, 3179, 3180, 3181, 3182, 3183, 3184, 3185, 3186, 3187, 3188, 3189, 3190, 3191, 3192, 3193, 3194, 3195, 3196, 3197, 3198, 3199, 3200, 3201, 3202, 3203, 3204, 3205, 3206, 3207, 3208, 3209, 3210, 3211, 3212, 3213, 3214, 3215, 3216, 3217, 3218, 3219, 3220, 3221, 3222, 3223, 3224, 3225, 3226, 3227, 3228, 3229, 3230, 3231, 3232, 3233, 3234, 3235, 3236, 3237, 3238, 3239, 3240, 3241, 3242, 3243, 3244, 3245, 3246, 3247, 3248, 3249, 3250, 3251, 3252, 3253, 3254, 3255, 3256, 3257, 3258, 3259, 3260, 3261, 3262, 3263, 3264, 3265, 3266, 3267, 3268, 3269, 3270, 3271, 3272, 3273, 3274, 3275, 3276, 3277, 3278, 3279, 3280, 3281, 3282, 3283, 3284, 3285, 3286, 3287, 3288, 3289, 3290, 3291, 3292, 3293, 3294, 3295, 3296, 3297, 3298, 3299, 3300, 3301, 3302, 3303, 3304, 3305, 3306, 3307, 3308, 3309, 3310, 3311, 3312, 3313, 3314, 3315, 3316, 3317, 3318, 3319, 3320, 3321, 3322, 3323, 3324, 3325, 3326, 3327, 3328, 3329, 3330, 3331, 3332, 3333, 3334, 3335, 3336, 3337, 3338, 3339, 3340, 3341, 3342, 3343, 3344, 3345, 3346, 3347, 3348, 3349, 3350, 3351, 3352, 3353, 3354, 3355, 3356, 3357, 3358, 3359, 3360, 3361, 3362, 3363, 3364, 3365, 3366, 3367, 3368, 3369, 3370, 3371, 3372, 3373, 3374, 3375, 3376, 3377, 3378, 3379, 3380, 3381, 3382, 3383, 3384, 3385, 3386, 3387, 3388, 3389, 3390, 3391, 3392, 3393, 3394, 3395, 3396, 3397, 3398, 3399, 3400, 3401, 3402, 3403, 3404, 3405, 3406, 3407, 3408, 3409, 3410, 3411, 3412, 3413, 3414, 3415, 3416, 3417, 3418, 3419, 3420, 3421, 3422, 3423, 3424, 3425, 3426, 3427, 3428, 3429, 3430, 3431, 3432, 3433, 3434, 3435, 3436, 3437, 3438, 3439, 3440, 3441, 3442, 3443, 3444, 3445, 3446, 3447, 3448, 3449, 3450, 3451, 3452, 3453, 3454, 3455, 3456, 3457, 3458, 3459, 3460, 3461, 3462, 3463, 3464, 3465, 3466, 3467, 3468, 3469, 3470, 3471, 3472, 3473, 3474, 3475, 3476, 3477, 3478, 3479, 3480, 3481, 3482, 3483, 3484, 3485, 3486, 3487, 3488, 3489, 3490, 3491, 3492, 3493, 3494, 3495, 3496, 3497, 3498, 3499, 3500, 3501, 3502, 3503, 3504, 3505, 3506, 3507, 3508, 3509, 3510, 3511, 3512, 3513, 3514, 3515, 3516, 3517, 3518, 3519, 3520, 3521, 3522, 3523, 3524, 3525, 3526, 3527, 3528, 3529, 3530, 3531, 3532, 3533, 3534, 3535, 3536, 3537, 3538, 3539, 3540, 3541, 3542, 3543, 3544, 3545, 3546, 3547, 3548, 3549, 3550, 3551, 3552, 3553, 3554, 3555, 3556, 3557, 3558, 3559, 3560, 3561, 3562, 3563, 3564, 3565, 3566, 3567, 3568, 3569, 3570, 3571, 3572, 3573, 3574, 3575, 3576, 3577, 3578, 3579, 3580, 3581, 3582, 3583, 3584, 3585, 3586, 3587, 3588, 3589, 3590, 3591, 3592, 3593, 3594, 3595, 3596, 3597, 3598, 3599, 3600, 3601, 3602, 3603, 3604, 3605, 3606, 3607, 3608, 3609, 3610, 3611, 3612, 3613, 3614, 3615, 3616, 3617, 3618, 3619, 3620, 3621, 3622, 3623, 3624, 3625, 3626, 3627, 3628, 3629, 3630, 3631, 3632, 3633, 3634, 3635, 3636, 3637, 3638, 3639, 3640, 3641, 3642, 3643, 3644, 3645, 3646, 3647, 3648, 3649, 3650, 3651, 3652, 3653, 3654, 3655, 3656, 3657, 3658, 3659, 3660, 3661, 3662, 3663, 3664, 3665, 3666, 3667, 3668, 3669, 3670, 3671, 3672, 3673, 3674, 3675, 3676, 3677, 3678, 3679, 3680, 3681, 3682, 3683, 3684, 3685, 3686, 3687, 3688, 3689, 3690, 3691, 3692, 3693, 3694, 3695, 3696, 3697, 3698, 3699, 3700, 3701, 3702, 3703, 3704, 3705, 3706, 3707, 3708, 3709, 3710, 3711, 3712, 3713, 371

Bishop Collins Denny.

BISHOP CANDLER ON THE NAME OF THE CHURCH.

Bishop W. A. Candler has returned home from Asheville, N. C., where he has been attending the General Conference during the last three weeks.

A representative of the Atlanta Journal called on him for an expression of his views concerning the change of name of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to that of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America, and to him the Bishop said:

"The Methodist people in the South and their thousands of friends need not be disturbed about this effort to change the name which is so dear to our people. The effort has been made twice before and failed."

"The action taken at Asheville was at first to change the name by a mere majority vote of the General Conference which was unconstitutional, and was, therefore, vetoed by the Bishops in a message framed by Bishop Wilson in these brief but cogent sentences: 'We, the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, reluctantly and very respectfully interpose our veto upon the action by which it was proposed to change the name of the Church, upon the ground that the name is a part of the organic law of the Church.' An effort was made to change the name of the Church in 1866 and again in 1886, and on both occasions the necessity for the constitutional process was recognized by the General Conference, and by that Conference was referred to the Annual Conferences for final determination. We do not, therefore, feel at liberty to allow a matter of such grave import, involving titles to property, opening the way for extended litigation, to take effect without the sanction of the Annual Conferences."

"It should not be overlooked," continued Bishop Candler, "that the action of the Conference which was thus vetoed was taken when fully one-third of the Conference had gone home, and it may well be doubted that it could have passed at all but for this fact. The small Conferences in the Northwest, which have votes in the General Conference out of proportion to their strength in membership, brought forward this proposition and championed it. Their delegates being far from home, remained to the last moment of the session, while many of the more conservative members from the great Conferences of the Central South, living near by, had gone home, thinking that the work of the Conference was about over. Had they remained to the end, the proposition would have failed doubtless. Moreover, not a few who voted for it will not vote in favor of the proposition when it is submitted to the Annual Conferences, where it must receive a three-fourths vote in order to carry. It is also noteworthy that no attempt was made to override the veto of the Bishops; the friends of the measure, perhaps, felt that such a motion would have failed. After the veto was transmitted to the Conference, a simple motion to submit the matter, or rather requesting the Bishops to submit it, to the Annual Conference was adopted. Let no one be alarmed; for there has been no change in the name of the Church, nor is it very probable there will be any change made."

"But what are your own views concerning the matter, Bishop? Do you favor the change?" said the representative of The Journal.

With an amused expression upon his face he replied: "Did you ever know a man to change his name without being laughed at by the community? Now, I like that, but not at the expense of my Church."

Bishop Walter R. Lambuth.

When men change their names, it generally means that they are trying to get away from their history for some reason or other. Our history is too good to be ashamed of; if pride were allowable, we would rather be proud of it. Our name holds our history, and we are likely to hold our name."

"But does not the name limit the Church geographically?" it was asked.

"By no means," replied the Bishop. "Geographic names do not hinder churches when those names hold history. The Roman Catholic Church rests on a city for a part of its name; the Greek Church on a small and decadent national name, and the Anglican Church upon the name of one of the British Isles. Yet these great churches carry their work successfully to the ends of the earth, and if they should undertake to change their names they would have more trouble explaining the change than they have carrying their names. Our Church during the past four years has had the greatest growth in its history, and has enjoyed marked prosperity in these Northwestern States, where some now claim that the name hinders. If the name should be changed, we would be laughed out of countenance in those States, as well as in the Central South. And how could we face the sister bodies of Methodism in the United States under the boastful name, 'The Methodist Episcopal Church in America?' There are others besides us."

"But," continued the Bishop, "my views are best expressed in a passage from the Episcopal address which was read to the Conference at the opening session by Bishop Hendrix, who had been appointed to prepare it. In that very able paper by Bishop Hendrix occurs this passage, which I dare say, will express the judgment of a large majority of the Annual Conferences when the matter is submitted to them and their sober second thought is recorded:

"Whatever our legal style, we will always be called Southern Methodists, as in our great Federal and fraternal gatherings our brethren are called Northern Methodists. In all the mission fields and great councils our fellow-Christians are given to recognizing each other by what they are doing for Christ rather than by what name they hear or what section they hail from. No greater calamity can come to a Church than to aspire to be the American or National Church, with its natural tendency to claim all that is in sight. We are too world-wide to seek to be simply national. Sympathizing with our Northwestern brethren, whose fathers welcomed us because of our name and because we preached Christ and him only, we see no sufficient reason for any change. Moreover, the sense of the whole Church was taken comparatively a few years ago on the change of our name to the Methodist Episcopal Church in America, the same to be reported to the General Conference of 1886. The Bishops reported that only 91 had voted for the change and 3,415 had voted against it. The Episcopal Address, reporting the result of the vote, added: 'It is to be hoped that a corporate name which was first introduced by Bishop Paine and adopted by the Committee of Nine into their report to the General Conference of 1844, which was further recognized at Louisville in 1845, and in the formation of our first General Conference in 1846, which is the title by which all our lawsuits for the recovery of property was known and in favor of which the Supreme Court made its decree, the title and name by which we were known through the ample and deep experiences of the Civil War, the name which was reaffirmed by a constitutional vote of the Church in 1866 and 1867, and by which the status of our Church was recognized by the Cape May Commission 1876, and about which our whole domestic and foreign missionary work has clustered, will be accepted fully and forever as the primal and final designation of our beloved Methodism.'"

"Now," said the Bishop, after reading the passage quoted, "those strong words written by Bishop Hendrix put the case about right. We are not a sectional Church, nor do we aspire to be a national Church; but we propose to do our part in carrying the gospel to all the world. If this mission is hindered by the name 'Methodist Episcopal Church, South,' it will be hindered not less by the more ambitious title, 'Methodist Episcopal Church in America.' If we changed our name forty times in a decade we would always be known as Southern Methodists, as Bishop Hendrix so clearly points out. We can neither get away from our old name nor our old history, and for one I have no desire to do so. We have nothing of which to be ashamed, and nothing for which to apologize; but I am not sure that would be the case if we started out to live henceforth under an alias. As a man, I would not dare such an experiment. If I were named 'Smith,' I would stand by that time-honored patronymic, and would never try to change it to 'Montmorency,' however distinguished the latter may sound to some. Any other course would set my neighbors laughing at me."

"I am the more free to express myself fully through the columns of The Journal," the Bishop declared, "because I desire to relieve the minds of any of the Methodists who may be disturbed on the subject. The name has not been changed and there is no more danger of a change in the near future than Bishop R. G. Waterhouse.

there was in 1866 and again in 1886. Let all be easy, and go manfully to our work. It is not agitation we need now, but more consecration; it is not revolution, but a great revival at which we should aim. Our name is all right. Our history is all right. I trust we will live up to our name and make under it a future history as good as has been the past history which has been wrought by the devoted men and women who have gone before us." (From the Atlanta Journal of May 21.)

CHRISTIANS AND MISSIONS.

By C. H. Wetherbe.

It is fair to assume that the professor of religion who is not at all concerned about missions, either on home or foreign fields, is giving proof that he is not a real Christian. And this is particularly true of one who has had plenty of opportunities to know what missions have been doing for the evangelization of the world. The person who says that he loves Christ's cause should show that love by both praying for and giving money to the cause of missions. It is not at all consistent in one to pray for the extension of Christ's kingdom in this world, and yet not give anything to aid that extension.

A minister relates the following incident: "I called one afternoon on a member of my Church, one who was an officer, in fact, to ask for his subscription to the annual missionary fund, which I was raising by personal solicitation. I had not been long in that field, and innocently expected the brother to give at least five dollars. Out of my small salary I had given ten, and he was a man of means. To my utter astonishment he absolutely refused to give a cent to either home missions or foreign. I urged the moral obligations resting upon us, and pointed out the patriotic duty of supporting home missions, at least as a movement in the interests of our country against the threatening waves of greed, anarchy and unbelief. He became positively bitter, and practically insulted me for my pains. 'It's no use,' he finally exclaimed, 'to say a word to me when I make up my mind, and if the President himself was to talk to me all day, he couldn't influence me a particle.'"

And that man called himself a Christian! He was also officially a leader in his Church. His conception of Christianity was very narrow and mean. If all professing Christians, in all past ages, had been like this man, all heathen lands would have forever remained in dense darkness.

True Christians are true to missions.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd.
Manufacturer of Lumber
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Phone Main.

ROOMS and BOARD

634 and 638 SOUTH STREET

(Lafayette Square)

Corner St. Charles St.

Unlimited Meals.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Alvin Porter, Mgr.

Church News

The Baptists will hold a World Congress in Philadelphia in 1911. The next Southern Convention will be held in Jacksonville, Fla.

The cash collection for the Supernuminate Endowment for the quadriennial fund closed was $26,805.25. The assets assumed for next year aggregate $25,000. The total gross assets of this fund now amount to $268,157.

The Commencement exercises of Birmingham College were held May 27 to June 1. The commencement sermon was preached by Dr. H. M. Hamill, of Nashville, Tenn., and the Hon. Richard Pearson Hobson delivered the annual address.

There are now said to be in the world more than 250,000 Sunday schools, with more than 2,000,000 teachers and more than 25,000,000 pupils. These figures were given out at the great convention recently held in Washington City.

The International Convention of Epworth Leaguers assembled in Boston on May 18. The growth of this organization, which came into existence in 1889, has been phenomenal. It now claims throughout the world, 25,000 chapters and 2,000,000 members.

A movement is under way to establish a Borden Parker Bowne Professorship of Philosophy at Boston University, which is to become operative when the sum of $60,000 has been secured. Dr. Parkhurst, the editor of Zion's Herald, is leading in this commendable enterprise.

Mormonism is reported to be growing rapidly. It is said that 14,325 new converts were baptized last year. In 1890 there were 144,252 of them in the United States; now they are estimated to number 330,000. As propagandists, they are tireless and aggressive. This is the secret of their success.

The Baptists of the South are determined that their Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky., shall be adequately endowed. Already nearly $500,000 has been pledged for that purpose, and the work of enlarging the fund is still going on. $34,000 was subscribed to this cause at the convention held a few days since in Baltimore.

The recent General Conference provided a Court of Appeals, so that a preacher who has been tried by a committee appointed at the Annual Conference may, if he desires, have his case reviewed by a higher tribunal without waiting five years to do so. The Court as now constituted is as follows: Rev. J. M. Barcus, Rev. T. D. Ellis, Rev. H. B. Reams, Rev. S. G. Thompson, Hon. J. A. McCullough, Judge E. C. O'Rear, and Hon. M. E. Lawson.

The General Conference which has just adjourned was composed of 310 delegates and was next to the largest in the history of the M. E. Church, South. The largest was that of 1894, which had 343 members and was so unwieldy that the ratio of representation was changed. Only 41 whose names were on the roll of membership of the Dallas Conference eight years ago and 66 of those who were delegates or alternates at Birmingham four years ago were members of this body. This means that the Asheville gathering had in it 244 new men.

The following are the delegates from the M. E. Church, South, to the World's Missionary Conference to be held at Edinburgh, Scotland, June 14-24: Bishop E. R. Hendrix, W. N. Ainsworth, W. B. Beauchamp, O. E. Brown, Jas. Cannon, Jr., W. G. Cram, S. L. Dobbs, R. C. Elliott, N. E. Joyner, J. R. Nelson, J. C. C. Newton, A. P. Parker, W. W. Pinson, E. H. Rawlings, O. F. Sensabaugh, J. W. Tarbox, F. B. Turner, W. W. Woodard, G. B. Winton. From the Woman's Board: Miss Belle Bennett, Miss Esther Case, Mrs. J. B. Cobb, Miss Daisy Davies, Miss M. L. Gibson, Mrs. A. L. Marshall, Mrs. J. C. Mimms, Mrs. John R. Nelson, Mrs. A. P. Parker, Miss Leila Roberts, Mrs. Arch Trawick, Miss Ella Tydings.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By H. P. Lewis, Sr.

CHAPTER XIII.

When put in charge of Amite Circuit it embraced nearly all of Amite County, with a small portion of Lincoln and Franklin Counties. Brother John Richie, now of North Mississippi Conference, had been on the work four years. I soon learned he was held in high esteem by the people in general, and by Methodists in particular. One good sister said to me soon after I took charge of the work, "I hope we will not be so loath to give you up as we were to give up Brother Richie." Another one said to me, just after our great revival at Adams Camp Ground, in speaking of the great revival, "I cannot but believe it is, in part, the result of Brother Richie's faithful preaching." "One sower and another reaper." I served the Amite charge under difficulties. At that time they had no parsonage on the work. It was twenty miles from where I lived, near Homerville, to the nearest appointment, and forty-five to the most remote appointment. I had six regular appointments, besides three or four places where I was expected to preach occasionally. I usually left home on Friday or Saturday and returned home the following Monday week. Occasionally I started away from home over three Sundays, or 18 or 20 days. I tried to see each of my members in his own home.

On one occasion, after spending a night with Bro. Allen Tarver, one of the best men I ever knew, he said to me as I was fixing to leave for home, "Bro. Lewis, I want you to call and see Sister Gerald; she is in trouble, and I fear our preachers do not visit her often." "Tell me what she likes and I will see her to-day," was my reply. He directed me to her home. In less than two hours I was at her front gate. She had a very bad dog. Ordinarily he would not let strangers in the yard. I knew nothing of the dog. On reaching the gate, I dismounted, hitched my horse and walked idly to the house. As I did so I saw a woman standing just inside the left hand room. The door was just a little ajar; I saw only a part of her face and one eye. I noticed a sad expression about her face. I advanced toward her and said, "Sister Gerald, I presume." She simply made a slight bow, but said nothing. I then said, "Sister Gerald, my name is Lewis; I am your pastor; I came to see you." She opened the door and extending her hand, bid me welcome, while tears of joy ran down her cheeks. She was a poor widow with several children. I prayed with mother and children—had a good time. When I bid her goodbye she said in an impressive way, "Brother Lewis, come again." I did so. She lived six months from her church, yet she seldom missed a preaching service while I was her pastor.

Bishop Edwin DuBose Mouzon.

It pays to look after the poor. To me, some of the most profitable pastoral visits I have ever made have been made in the homes of the humble poor. The poor have the gospel preached to them. "I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; sick, and ye visited me," etc. If some of our pastors would spend a little more time looking after the sick, the poor, maimed, halt, and the blind, they might preach better on Sunday, and to more people. It pays in many ways to visit the people, sing and pray with them and talk to them of Jesus and His love.

There were many good people on the work. Rev. J. E. Jagers, a local preacher on the work, was helpful in protracted meetings. Then there were Tarvers, Woods, Butlers, Flowers, McNulty, Raiford, Wilkins, Webbs, Roberts, and many others, most of whom passed away years ago. When I returned to the Liberty charge thirty years afterwards, I found, with few exceptions, a new set of people.

In August, 1879, we held a wonderful meeting at Adams Camp Ground, which resulted in a large number of conversions and 66 new members. J. V. Penn was one of the converts. He became a preacher, joined our Conference, did some good work, died in August, 1897. Rev. Milton Ferral, well-known to many of our preachers, came to us during that meeting from the Baptist Church. I asked him three years ago, when he was converted. He said, "During that wonderful meeting you held at Adams Camp Ground, in 1879." He was a useful local preacher, and went home to rest less than two years ago. Dr. W. H. Featherston knew him well. He lived in high esteem as a local preacher. He lived so close to the blessed Savior it was good to be with him and hear him talk. Unlettered, yet full of the Holy Ghost. Then there were the Carvers, J. Throck, John P. Bob, and others—so helpful to the preachers in many ways. Sister J. P. Carver, who fell asleep in Jesus more than fifteen years ago, was one of the best friends I had on the work. It was my sad privilege to be by her bedside when she breathed her last. Her husband, who had watched faithfully by her bedside for days, exclaimed when her nursing spirit took its departure, "Thank God, the battle is fought, the victory won, and the weary is at rest." We then sang "Oh come and bid me come and around me stand. Oh, hear me now on your snowy wings to my immortal home." It is still true that our people die well. When J. P. Carver, of Salem Church, was nearing the end of his earthly career, he said to his faithful wife, "I want to go home." She replied, "You are at home." He then said, "I want to go to my Father's home." His only son, J. E. Carver, married my only daughter. He also was a local preacher. He died in 1889.

At last, 1889, after a grand good meeting at Woodland, one of my churches, Nash, Roberts, and others were wonderfully converted, and went to a protracted prayer meeting, exhorting those who came to hear, and in this way did a vast amount of good. Old Uncle Arthur Whittington, who lived in the "Ark" was in his glory when with the people in one of their services. Both these days became preachers. Rev. G. D. Anders is yet with us, doing good work. Brother W. W. Simmons did the preaching in the Woodland meeting. A better more successful meeting he seldom, if ever, held. The people of that community love him yet.

Win. B. Raiford, of precious memory, and W. Z. Webb were my leading members in Liberty. A. A. Brewer, precious man, had just moved there. Brother and Sister A. B. (Belle and Sookie), are now in Gloster. Two better friends I never had in that section. When our Conference met in Gloster a few years ago, just before Conference I received a note something like this: "You are to stay with us during Conference, bring two of your boys with you—the two most like you, Philie and Sookie." During my pastor, at Adams Camp Ground I received about 150 into the Church, and baptized about 150 babies, several of them named for me. I also performed many marriage ceremonies. On one occasion, after I had celebrated the rites of matrimony between a couple, a lady said to me, "Brother Lewis, that ceremony was short and sweet." "Yes," said the bride, "if I marry forty times I want Brother Lewis to perform the ceremony each time." She is now a grandmother.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND

of FURNITURE that

—Lasts a LIFETIME—

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

—A. J. Connor & Co. is, 601, 603, 605, 607, 609, 611, 613, 615, 617, 619, 621, 623, 625, 627, 629, 631, 633, 635, 637, 639, 641, 643, 645, 647, 649, 651, 653, 655, 657, 659, 661, 663, 665, 667, 669, 671, 673, 675, 677, 679, 681, 683, 685, 687, 689, 691, 693, 695, 697, 699, 701, 703, 705, 707, 709, 711, 713, 715, 717, 719, 721, 723, 725, 727, 729, 731, 733, 735, 737, 739, 741, 743, 745, 747, 749, 751, 753, 755, 757, 759, 761, 763, 765, 767, 769, 771, 773, 775, 777, 779, 781, 783, 785, 787, 789, 791, 793, 795, 797, 799, 801, 803, 805, 807, 809, 811, 813, 815, 817, 819, 821, 823, 825, 827, 829, 831, 833, 835, 837, 839, 841, 843, 845, 847, 849, 851, 853, 855, 857, 859, 861, 863, 865, 867, 869, 871, 873, 875, 877, 879, 881, 883, 885, 887, 889, 891, 893, 895, 897, 899, 901, 903, 905, 907, 909, 911, 913, 915, 917, 919, 921, 923, 925, 927, 929, 931, 933, 935, 937, 939, 941, 943, 945, 947, 949, 951, 953, 955, 957, 959, 961, 963, 965, 967, 969, 971, 973, 975, 977, 979, 981, 983, 985, 987, 989, 991, 993, 995, 997, 999, 1001, 1003, 1005, 1007, 1009, 1011, 1013, 1015, 1017, 1019, 1021, 1023, 1025, 1027, 1029, 1031, 1033, 1035, 1037, 1039, 1041, 1043, 1045, 1047, 1049, 1051, 1053, 1055, 1057, 1059, 1061, 1063, 1065, 1067, 1069, 1071, 1073, 1075, 1077, 1079, 1081, 1083, 1085, 1087, 1089, 1091, 1093, 1095, 1097, 1099, 1101, 1103, 1105, 1107, 1109, 1111, 1113, 1115, 1117, 1119, 1121, 1123, 1125, 1127, 1129, 1131, 1133, 1135, 1137, 1139, 1141, 1143, 1145, 1147, 1149, 1151, 1153, 1155, 1157, 1159, 1161, 1163, 1165, 1167, 1169, 1171, 1173, 1175, 1177, 1179, 1181, 1183, 1185, 1187, 1189, 1191, 1193, 1195, 1197, 1199, 1201, 1203, 1205, 1207, 1209, 1211, 1213, 1215, 1217, 1219, 1221, 1223, 1225, 1227, 1229, 1231, 1233, 1235, 1237, 1239, 1241, 1243, 1245, 1247, 1249, 1251, 1253, 1255, 1257, 1259, 1261, 1263, 1265, 1267, 1269, 1271, 1273, 1275, 1277, 1279, 1281, 1283, 1285, 1287, 1289, 1291, 1293, 1295, 1297, 1299, 1301, 1303, 1305, 1307, 1309, 1311, 1313, 1315, 1317, 1319, 1321, 1323, 1325, 1327, 1329, 1331, 1333, 1335, 1337, 1339, 1341, 1343, 1345, 1347, 1349, 1351, 1353, 1355, 1357, 1359, 1361, 1363, 1365, 1367, 1369, 1371, 1373, 1375, 1377, 1379, 1381, 1383, 1385, 1387, 1389, 1391, 1393, 1395, 1397, 1399, 1401, 1403, 1405, 1407, 1409, 1411, 1413, 1415, 1417, 1419, 1421, 1423, 1425, 1427, 1429, 1431, 1433, 1435, 1437, 1439, 1441, 1443, 1445, 1447, 1449, 1451, 1453, 1455, 1457, 1459, 1461, 1463, 1465, 1467, 1469, 1471, 1473, 1475, 1477, 1479, 1481, 1483, 1485, 1487, 1489, 1491, 1493, 1495, 1497, 1499, 1501, 1503, 1505, 1507, 1509, 1511, 1513, 1515, 1517, 1519, 1521, 1523, 1525, 1527, 1529, 1531, 1533, 1535, 1537, 1539, 1541, 1543, 1545, 1547, 1549, 1551, 1553, 1555, 1557, 1559, 1561, 1563, 1565, 1567, 1569, 1571, 1573, 1575, 1577, 1579, 1581, 1583, 1585, 1587, 1589, 1591, 1593, 1595, 1597, 1599, 1601, 1603, 1605, 1607, 1609, 1611, 1613, 1615, 1617, 1619, 1621, 1623, 1625, 1627, 1629, 1631, 1633, 1635, 1637, 1639, 1641, 1643, 1645, 1647, 1649, 1651, 1653, 1655, 1657, 1659, 1661, 1663, 1665, 1667, 1669, 1671, 1673, 1675, 1677, 1679, 1681, 1683, 1685, 1687, 1689, 1691, 1693, 1695, 1697, 1699, 1701, 1703, 1705, 1707, 1709, 1711, 1713, 1715, 1717, 1719, 1721, 1723, 1725, 1727, 1729, 1731, 1733, 1735, 1737, 1739, 1741, 1743, 1745, 1747, 1749, 1751, 1753, 1755, 1757, 1759, 1761, 1763, 1765, 1767, 1769, 1771, 1773, 1775, 1777, 1779, 1781, 1783, 1785, 1787, 1789, 1791, 1793, 1795, 1797, 1799, 1801, 1803, 1805, 1807, 1809, 1811, 1813, 1815, 1817, 1819, 1821, 1823, 1825, 1827, 1829, 1831, 1833, 1835, 1837, 1839, 1841, 1843, 1845, 1847, 1849, 1851, 1853, 1855, 1857, 1859, 1861, 1863, 1865, 1867, 1869, 1871, 1873, 1875, 1877, 1879, 1881, 1883, 1885, 1887, 1889, 1891, 1893, 1895, 1897, 1899, 1901, 1903, 1905, 1907, 1909, 1911, 1913, 1915, 1917, 1919, 1921, 1923, 1925, 1927, 1929, 1931, 1933, 1935, 1937, 1939, 1941, 1943, 1945, 1947, 1949, 1951, 1953, 1955, 1957, 1959, 1961, 1963, 1965, 1967, 1969, 1971, 1973, 1975, 1977, 1979, 1981, 1983, 1985, 1987, 1989, 1991, 1993, 1995, 1997, 1999, 2001, 2003, 2005, 2007, 2009, 2011, 2013, 2015, 2017, 2019, 2021, 2023, 2025, 20

THE SIN AGAINST THE HOLY GHOST.

By Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D.

Has not the failure to satisfactorily define this sin been in the supposition that the offense was against the person of the Holy Ghost, as such, rather than as the representative of a dispensation? Is there any reason in correct thought, or assigned in revelation, for the conclusion that one person in the Trinity is in any sense superior to the other two in point of dignity, or in the importance of the work done for the salvation of man?

If not, then why should a sin against the Holy Ghost be of so much greater offense than the same act against the Father or the Son? It does not answer the question to say, because Christ said it was so. Christ never spoke an untruth, nor did he ever seek to make a false impression upon the mind of man. If such a result followed any teaching of his, the difficulty was in man's apprehension of his words, and not in the doctrines they taught.

It matters not how far into the depths of humility Christ went in his efforts to bring man back to God, he never thought it robbery to claim absolute equality in the oneness of the three in the one God. Then if his words were designed to teach that the sin against the one person, as such, was a greater offense than if it had been directed against the other two, where is the reason for the thought? And where in all the Word of God do we find its justification?

What are the facts to be considered? Plainly these: Christ had healed a man possessed of a devil, blind and dumb; and the Pharisees affirmed he did this by authority of the prince of the devils, meaning, of course, that he was not what he claimed to be, and that for the more complete deception the preponderance of all evil was so lodged in him as that he possessed authority over its every form, wherever met.

To this he replied: "You may repudiate me, and ascribe my work to authority given me by the prince of devils, and yet there is hope for forgiveness." And why? Because there is yet one more dispensation of mercy coming to you, and it will be represented in the person of the Holy Ghost, so that your attitude toward me does not destroy your last chance and hope for life in me.

But if you continue in your present attitude toward the truth, and repudiate the person of the Holy Ghost, and ascribe his office and work to the authority granted him by the prince of the devils, you have rejected the last approach and offer of mercy, and your sin is hopelessly fixed upon you.

We have the correlative thought in Heb. vi, 1-6. The address is to Hebrews who had repudiated Judaism and had destroyed it as a foundation of hope for life, and had accepted the person and the doctrines of Christ as the end of the law for righteousness. Now, if they should repudiate Christ, and emphasize their rejection by their approval of his crucifixion as one who deceived the people, they destroy the last foundation of hope, and there is nothing on which they can stand and be renewed.

This great sin must be in the last rejection of the plan of salvation, by the denial of the divinity of the Holy Ghost, and the ascribing of his authority over evil to a delegated power from evil itself. All rejection of the recognized authority of the Holy Ghost is a dangerous sin in the soul of man. And yet necessarily not more so than is the same sin against the Father and against the Son; for the three are one.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

By E. F. Arnold, M. D.

This subject of late appears to be stirring up at least a tempest of words. I have read everything, including Mr. Watson's Jeffersonian and "Foreign Missions Exposed," and do not doubt that the Georgia politico-preacher is doing this question great harm, for the reason that so many are seeking some excuse, however lame, to combat the question and incidentally to save themselves a few pennies.

I believe as strongly as ever in the "Go ye into all the world," and don't object to hospitals, colleges and even a little gold put in a Chinaman's tooth occasionally, but I find one fault with our friends in their answers: there are too many "glittering generalities" and not enough facts and figures. Dr. Penson's article is masterful, full and complete, except it fails in that it does not give facts the people want.

Whether you are aware of it or not, there is an impression among the people (some people) that very little money they pay really gets into the foreign field. In other words, it has to pass through too many hands and too much salary must come out.

I understand this is an old charge, but one that must constantly be met. Now, why not give these figures to the people? And I suggest that Dr. Penson give all the salaries of every one, and what percentage really reaches the foreign field. And incidentally give what foreign missionaries, not generally, but several individually are paid, naming highest and lowest salaries.

Let's meet the question fairly and squarely, as the issue is up, and always exhibit the Christian spirit.

The mistake was made in ever paying any attention to Watson. He has gotten just what he wanted—plenty of free advertisement.

Now, for facts and figures, as we have already enjoyed plenty of rhetoric.

AS SPEAK THE MINUTES.

By Rev. A. H. Williams.

The Greenville District of the North Mississippi Conference, with 2,631 Church members, paid in 1909, for all purposes, $45,201—an average of $17.00 per member.

The Winona District follows as next best, with $8.00 per member, in round numbers.

The other districts go all the way from $7.00 as best to $3.50 as the lowest.

The Greenville District makes gain in membership of 7 per cent. The Corinth District 6 per cent, and after this is Columbus with 4 per cent. The same at the Winona District.

Among pastoral charges Ripley and Blue Mountain of the Corinth District reports largest gain in membership, being near 100 per cent. Unless we except Dry Run Mission, Rev. J. Gullett, supply, which began the year with 100 members and finished with 222.

Dumas and New Hope of the same district, has 254 additions to the Church, being the largest number added, any single pastoral charge of the Conference.

Macon Station paid, for all purposes, $6,913—$3 per member. A great showing; but Hillhouse and Deeson, of the Greenville District, with 22 members, paid $1,364, being $62 per member. Rev. J. W. Honnoll was the pastor.

Next to this is Coahoma, of the same district, with $61 per member. D. L. Cogdell, pastor.

These are veteran ministers of the Conference and appear to have easily overtopped all others in the financial record. They evidently served a royal and well-fixed people.

Sardis Station expended for all purposes $12,254, or $40 per member. The largest sum of any single charge of the Conference.

Mayhew and Artesia was up to the good average of $8.00 per member, and also showed 20 per cent gain in additions to the Church.

The largest sum for all purposes was raised by the Aberdeen District, and also for the layman's work.

The Corinth District is at the lead in largest numbers added to the Church, with the "Tent Evangelist" taking "first honors" in revival work in a few charges of that territory.

The total payments to pastors of the Conference is $8,531 above the previous year, and the gain for all purposes was $50,668. Altogether the record for the year is reported to have been among the best in the history of Methodist movements in North Mississippi.

Mayhew, Miss., March 22.

REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

"Friend after friend departs. Who has not lost a friend?

There is no union here of hearts, that finds not here an end."

There finds echo within my soul these pensive lines of James Montgomery as I write of him whose life has been from my earliest youth an inspiration and a benediction. When the telegram was read which announced his going from us, there came the echo of another parting, "My father! My father! the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof."

When the ravages of an invading army caused the schools in that section of the State where I was reared to be disorganized, by a happy providence I fell under the care of this patient educator, and thoughtful man of God. Having passed but a little within the second decade of my life, I may ascribe to Dr. Hunnicutt more than to anyone the shaping of my school and college course. His kindly advice, his patient instruction and his words of encouragement were always helpful and served to cheer the oft discouraged and desponding boy. Poor, indeed, would have been the preparation for the work to which this life has been devoted but for that which came from him as counsellor and teacher. He was eminently possessed of that first essential of the successful teacher, and which St. James enjoins, that we "May be perfect, and entire wanting nothing." His interest in his pupils was unabating, and his delight in their success was unalloyed. Many, who were his boys at old Madison College, will ever cherish for him the most pleasant memories.

His home life was of that tender, hallowed character which forbids an intrusion and might have been taken as a model for all the homes to which he ministered, either through the pupil, or in the pastorate.

A more interested and interesting student of nature was scarcely to be found. The works of God were, indeed, marvelous to him and he never tired of their study. No more did the heavens tell him of the glories of God than did the smallest creature of His hands. He contemplated the tiniest flower, the smallest dew drop and the most unattractive insect to find in them the work of wisdom and of might. Of him it may be written, in letters large, "Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall and do see God." His mind was ever active and one question answered only raised another, to which he gave diligent attention. Oft has the writer heard the statement from his hearers that his sermons gave food for many days of thought.

In later years it again came to the writer as a delightful association, when as presiding elder and pastor, our lines ran parallel for a season. The work of the district was his absorbing care and many, indeed, were his plans for its greater growth and better work.

No man counted of greater value the blessings and benefits of true friendship. His heart was ever open to them, and with them he took sweet counsel. Though possessed of the true evangelistic spirit, he deferred to their judgment when yet his delight was to do the will of his Master. So did this spirit possess him that when the summons came, "Come up higher," he was prosecuting a work by the appointment of his Conference, largely at his own expense, that he might help in giving the bread of life to a perishing world.

On the 24th of April he occupied the pulpit at Moss Point, to the delight and edification of our people. His plea at 11 o'clock was a masterful effort, telling of the value of the Word of God to a fallen race, and the needs of man for a revelation from heaven. At both hours, he spoke as one whose natural force was unabated—clear, convincing, inspiring.

These were, doubtless, his last public utterances. On Tuesday, the 26th, he left us for Mobile where, by appointment, he was to meet his younger brother at the reunion of those who wore the gray. Only a few days passed until the sad message came which told us that our preceptor, our brother and our much-loved friend had taken his departure.

The last days which he spent in our home, and the opportunities which were then given for recalling the past and talking of the future will last with us till our Father shall gather us into that same circle closer to his throne.

"It is not death to die; to leave this weary road,
And midst the brotherhood on high, to be at home with God."

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Moss Point, Miss., May 26, 1910.

REV. Q. A. OATS.

His Funeral Was Conducted In Verona, Sunday,
May 8, 1910.

Brother Oats had been afflicted with heart trouble some time, and came to Verona a little over two weeks before his death to rest, while with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Clark. Sister Oats accompanying him, but instead of getting better he grew worse day by day, and passed away the 6th day of May. This was the place selected for his funeral and burial, he having served here as pastor about ten years ago. His funeral took place in the Methodist Church at 2:30 p. m. The following ministerial brethren of our Conference were present and took part in the services: J. E. Thomas, L. M. Lipscomb, R. O. Brown, J. D. Newsom, W. L. Duren and the pastor, by request of Sister Oats, Bro. L. M. Lipscomb, who had been Brother Oats' presiding elder the last three years, took the lead in the services. The house was filled to overflowing with those who mourned for the departed, and affectionate tributes were paid by his ministerial brethren to the memory of the man of God. Many other of his preacher brethren would have been here, but as it was the Sabbath they had to meet at their appointments. It is proper to state that his present presiding elder, Rev. J. E. Thomas, came Thursday evening and witnessed his closing hours, and stayed over until after he was laid to rest in a substantial vault prepared in the beautiful cemetery at Verona. A number of his parishioners and devoted friends came to the funeral from Shuqualak, his last charge, which he had left less than three weeks before. Among them was the venerable J. D. Newsom, a superannuate of our Conference who joined the Conference 62 years ago. We weep for the departed, not as those who have no hope, but we expect to meet him again. He leaves a sorrow-stricken companion, a son and a daughter, also an adopted little boy, who have our sincere sympathy and prayers. May they be sustained by the grace of God!

D. W. BABB.

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH
LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

726 Union Street.

Phone, Main-585.

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 85c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulter, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woodard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

STILL THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Elsewhere we publish an interview given out by Bishop Candler in Atlanta concerning the proposed change of the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which we think is a timely and admirable discussion of the subject. As he very properly observes, the alteration is by no means assured yet. The final action of the General Conference in regard to the matter was the adoption of a resolution requesting the Bishops to submit to the Annual Conferences during the year 1913 the following question: "Shall the name of the Church be changed to that of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America?"

To effect this change will require a three-fourths vote of the members of the Annual Conferences and a two-thirds vote of the next General Conference. That the proposal will be able to command such majorities is hardly probable. We lay no claim to the gift of prophecy, but we shall be very much surprised if by the year 1913 this measure is not sleeping in a few-made grave side by side with that in which is buried that unfortunate child of the General Conference of 1906 called "A New Statement of the Faith." We can not but believe that the day is far distant when the stone-cutter, with mallet and chisel, will be seen removing from the front of our temples of worship the word, "South." There is no more honorable and significant word than this in the vocabulary of human speech. It stands for a history, both in Church and in State, every page of which is highly creditable and resplendent with exhibitions of self-sacrifice and lofty devotion to principle.

And why are we asked to surrender the name which speaks to us of the sacred memories of the past and under which our Church has forged its way forward to its present commanding position among the religious denominations of the world? Because, forsooth, our brethren along the border in the West are having little success in their work and they imagine that their failure is attributable to the fact that our Church has a geographic word in its name. But in support of this position they do not adduce a scintilla of proof. They furnish no statistics to show that any other denomination, Southern in sentiment, but with a different name, is accomplishing more in the Far West than we are. They back their claim up with nothing except bald and empty assertions.

The General Minutes for 1909 show that all of the western coast Conferences sustained a loss in membership last year, except the Los Angeles. But it yet remains to be proven that the name of the Church is responsible for this. It looks to us very much as if our Western brethren in rushing to such a conclusion have fallen victims to that most common of fallacies known as Non Causa pro Causa; that they have mistaken as the cause of their lack of success that which has had little, if anything, to do with it. It is truly remarkable how thousands of people are sometimes swept off their feet by a delusion. Illustrations of this abound in human history. It has been little more than a decade since the "breachment" was heard throughout the South that the hard times then existing was due to the financial system in vogue and that without the adoption of a different fiscal policy our farm products must continue forever to be sold at starvation prices. But the cause which most of us felt to be essential to the public prosperity failed, and the ensuing years proved utterly false the prophecies of disaster which were made as to what would result. Instead of continuing to be low, the prices of our commodities have been higher than in almost any other period of our history. We have seen so much of this kind of thing, that we have reached a point where we want to be shown the nexus beween an alleged cause and effect before we accept them as truth. We are a Missourian in this respect of no other.

There is no question but that the meager results attending the labors of our brethren in the West are not due to the name of the Church, but to the unfavorable and hostile atmosphere in which they labor. These are mostly Northern in sentiment and are prejudiced to regard with favor a denomination of whose history and antecedent alignments they disapprove. If this be true, a change of name would not in the least help the situation. We would be the same people still and they would know it. It is by no means improbable that we should continue to be called the Southern Church. Nor is it unlikely that an alteration of our name would be construed as an attempt to apologize for our past and that in addition to a feeling of unfriendliness, they would come to entertain for us a feeling of contempt.

The Methodist Episcopal Church has no geographic word in its name, and yet where the atmosphere is unfavorable it achieves no larger success than we do. As we have before observed in these columns in the State of Alabama it has gained in eleven years only 325 members, while our Church in that State during the same period has had an increase of more than 20,000.

But it is worthy of note that not all of the border Conferences desire to have the name of the Church changed. The representatives of the Baltimore Conference, on the contrary, were strongly opposed to such action. They vigorously affirmed that such a step would seriously injure the work in their territory. And this great body is larger than all of the little Conferences that fringe our extreme Western border put together.

Rev. J. J. N. Kenney, of the Pacific Conference, in pleading for the dropping of the suffix, "South," made the startling statement that "there are five thousand Southern Methodists in the city of Seattle who will not come into our Church because of its name." We should like to know how our good brother obtained information so specific. Did he obtain it as a result of a census taken? Did these five thousand persons tell him that the name is what is keeping them out of the Church of their fathers? That there are a multitude of Southern Methodists in Seattle, not connected with any Church, we do not for one moment doubt. The fact is there is a considerable class of such in Memphis, New Orleans, and every other large city. But what keeps their Church letters in their trunks is not the name of our denomination, but the worldly and irreligious atmosphere by which they are surrounded.

But even if we knew that a change of name would bring us larger results in the West, we yet should hesitate to favor it. There is such a thing as paying too dear a price for success. Ever since the Civil War Southern statesmen have had open to them conspicuous places in the national councils, if they would but abandon the tradition and teachings of their fathers. But in most cases, they have spurned the suggestion. There yet lives in memory the picture of the great Lamar standing in the United States Senate, and saying of the South, solid in its loyalty to the principles for which its people had sacrificed and suffered, in words that rang through the Republic: "Neither Federal bayonets, nor Federal honors, can break that solidity." Yet, as a Church, we are asked to take from our name the word "South," in the hope of gathering into our fold a membership to whom that word is offensive. For our part we are not willing to make the sacrifice. We want no conquests that have to be won by hiding out of sight the heroic history made by the noble men and women who have gone before us. Of not a single paragraph of that unsullied record are we ashamed.

We are aware that it is said that the adoption of a new name should carry with it no such significance. We reply that we fear it would at least seem so to the world, and we do not desire to be even apparently disloyal to the principles for which our ancestors stood. We hope to see our Church grow and its missions planted upon every continent and isle, but we want no accessions that do not come with a full recognition of what we are and what we have been in the days gone by. Our pedigree is too good to be repudiated or thrust into the background. If the Southern Methodists of the present and the future shall anything like measure up to the standard of those who lived and wrought in the past, we shall have cause for rejoicing when we stand before the Lord of the harvest in the last great day.

OUR ASSIGNMENT OF BISHOPS.

The three Conferences which comprise our patronizing territory have each this year been placed in a different episcopal district. The North Mississippi Conference has been put under the supervision of Alabama's honored son, Bishop James H. McCoy, and in this respect should count itself most fortunate. He is a minister of deep piety, of unwavering devotion to the work of the Master, and of commanding ability in the pulpit. His brilliant welcome address to the General Conference which met in Birmingham four years ago is yet talked of throughout the connection, and not less eloquent and impressive was his welcome when he was sent to Canada as the bearer of fraternal greetings to our Church to the Methodists of that country. Another characteristic of Bishop McCoy is his genial brotherly spirit. He is a warm-hearted, approachable, and sympathetic—a Methodist preacher's friend. The North Mississippians will give him an enthusiastic reception when he shall choose to come among them, and we predict that they will learn to love him scarcely less than the people of his native State.

The Mississippi Conference is under the oversight of Bishop E. D. Moulton, who enjoys the unqualified endorsement of the Empire State of Texas and who has behind him a splendid record of service. Though young in years, he has filled with rare acceptability a number of important positions, and is universally conceded to be a preacher of uncommon force and effectiveness. That he will prove to be a capable and widely useful chief pastor, we entertain not the slightest doubt. He will find our hearts and homes and plenty of work to do in the Mississippi State, and we pray that his presidency may be a great blessing to the Methodist hosts of South Mississippi. Coming from the commonwealth of Bishop Ward, whose successor he may in a sense be said to be, much will be expected of him, but his friends have assured us that he will measure fully up to the high standard set by his distinguished and lamented predecessor from the West.

Bishop W. B. Murrah needs no introduction to the preachers and people of Louisiana. Either in person or by reputation, he is well known to most of them. They may feel fully assured that their interests are in safe hands, and that they will have an administration which will make for progress. We know of no qualification for the episcopacy which our new Mississippi Bishop does not possess. Dignified, courteous, perfectly poised, an able preacher, and a wise administrator, he enters upon his official career with every promise of far-reaching influence and distinguished success. And crowning all of his other splendid endowments, is his noble Christian character. A chosen spirit we like to have met in an intimate acquaintance, and with him, covering a period of twenty years, we have never known him to utter a rash or unkind word, or to do an unwise thing. Nor have we ever heard any one whisper aught against him. We are aware that this is high praise, but it is well merited, and to whom it is accorded.

The Episcopal Church has our hearty thanks for the worthy trio of chief pastors whom they have seen fit to send to us. And is the name of the thousands of Methodists for whom it is our privilege to speak, we extend to each of these fellow-laborers in the Master's kingdom brotherly greetings and a most cordial welcome.

THE WORK OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The General Conference of 1910 has come and gone. It has passed into history, where we doubt not it will be accorded a creditable place among the successive sessions of our Methodist general assembly. It was distinctly a conservative body. This is plainly seen in what it did not do. Before it came together there was widespread discussion of the removal of the time limit. And after the delegates gathered in Asheville, influential men proposed various schemes for its modification, one of which was even sanctioned by a majority of the Committee on Itinerancy, but by a decisive vote the Conference declared that the four-years law should remain in force. Another measure which attracted much attention was the women's memorial for the "full rights and privileges of the laity." From the Atlantic to the Pacific, our sisters waged their campaign with vigor and unwearying diligence, but by a majority of nearly three to one the issue which they had raised went down in defeat. Those desirous of more democracy urgently pleaded for the election of stewards by the Church instead of the Quarterly Conference, but this petition the body also refused to grant. And it, furthermore, turned a deaf ear to those who came talking of missionary Bishops, episcopal residences, and of four years of continuous episcopal service in each district. All of the reckless experimentations proposed were quickly and decisively disposed of in a manner which left no doubt as to the regency of a wholesome conservatism. It was a bad time for radicals and revolutionary measures.

But let it not be imagined that the session was wholly one of inaction. Far from it. Not a little important constructive legislation was passed. Among the things of consequence done was the unification of the missionary societies of the Church; the constitution of a court of appeals; an extensive revision of the ritual; the adoption of a requirement that the Bishops shall meet semi-annually; and that they shall read their appointments to their cabinets before publicly announcing them; an enactment allowing one-fourth of the trustees of our educational institutions to be non-Methodists; the formulation of a better plan for training our young ministers; the levying of a $20,000 assessment for the Theological Department of Vanderbilt University; the changing of the law so that all of Children's Day money shall hereafter be used for Sunday school work; the development of a plan to promote the organization of adult Bible classes in our Sabbath schools; the es-establishment under our Home Mission Department of a Bureau of Evangelism; provision for continuing with larger sanction the policy of federation; the appointment of a commission to consider the question of how properly to relate the Laymen's Movement to the various organizations of the Church and to open to them a larger field of service; and the incorporation into the Discipline of a paragraph urging young ministers to refrain from the use of tobacco. The session will also probably always be memorable because of the election of seven bishops, and its action with reference to the ownership and control of Vanderbilt University.

All in all, we think the Conference was fairly satisfactory and will compare favorably with most of those which preceded it. At any rate, the exhibition of loyalty to our doctrines and polity has caused us "to thank God and take courage." The great masses of our people have not ceased to be sound. Despite the transitional influences in operation about us, Methodism, unimpaired in purity and power, still exists among men, and fronts the future intent upon spreading scriptural holiness over the earth. The followers of Wesley are yet Wesleyan in experience and the passion for spiritual conquest.

THE TYPE OF MAN NEEDED.

A number of our leading educational institutions are searching for presidents. In view of this fact, it may not be amiss to quote the following from a writer in the Alabama Advocate, who had under discussion the kind of man needed to take Bishop McCoy's place at the head of Birmingham College:

"I have been asked to describe the kind of a man needed for the presidency. Now, that is no small task, and yet I have the temerity to proceed. It may be another case where 'fools rush in where angels fear to tread.' Of course, we will not spend any time discussing his personal life, for in the very nature of the case he must be a good man. A man with a broad, liberal Christian experience, but not so broad that he cannot run on a narrow-gauge track. He ought to be a man with the college spirit, one who can throw himself into the very life of the boy, whether in the college hall or on the athletic field. He ought by all means to be a leader in every sense of that term. He should possess that twentieth century enthusiasm which does things; he should have some 'Rooseveltism' (I coin that expression right now). He ought not to be a bookworm nor a literary crank. The successful school man of this day are by no means our greatest book men. He ought to be able and willing to present his cause before every community within the bounds of our Conference, winning the rank and file of our membership to his support."

PERSONAL.

A number of the Methodist Sunday schools of the city had their annual picnic at the City Park last Saturday.

We acknowledge our indebtedness to Brother H. C. Brown for a contribution of $1 to our Advocate "Help Fund." This assistance is given to a most worthy cause.

Revs. R. W. Vaughan and F. N. Sweeney favored our office with a visit last Friday. They were en route to Bogalusa, the seat of the Baton Rouge District Conference.

One of the largest lists of subscribers we have lately received was from Rev. A. B. Barry, of Carthage, Miss. We are pleased to have our circulation enlarged in the good old county of Leake.

Rev. W. S. Neighbors, of Bristol, Tenn., has been chosen president of Sullins College to succeed Dr. W. E. Martin, who resigned to take charge of the new Woman's College at Montgomery, Ala.

Bishop McCoy has appointed Rev. O. L. Savage to the Ruleville charge to succeed Dr. Boswell. That he will bring things to pass in that growing field, is a foregone conclusion. He has a habit of doing that everywhere.

Both Bishop Murrah and Bishop McCoy are scheduled to be at the Aberdeen District Conference, which will meet at Pontotoc June 21-24. A more extended notice will appear next week. The occasion promises to be a memorable one.

Rev. J. J. Kelley, who has been critically ill at the New Orleans Sanitarium for several weeks is reported as not doing well at this writing, and his recovery is considered doubtful. Let the brethren remember him in their prayers.

The following New Orleans preachers attended the Baton Rouge District Conference at Bogalusa on Monday of this week: H. T. Carley, J. L. Sutton, L. A. Sims, A. I. Townsley, C. D. Atkinson, A. S. Lutz, J. L. Foster, and W. W. Holmes.

We are informed that Mrs. Q. A. Oats, whose honored husband was lately translated, will again devote herself to the work of teaching. She is gifted as an instructor, and any school securing her services may count itself fortunate.

Rev. T. B. Holloman passed through New Orleans last Monday on his way to Irtabena, Miss., to visit his children who reside there. From thence he will go to Jackson to attend the Commencement at Millsaps College, of which institution he is a trustee.

Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, of Forest, Miss., reports his congregations as most encouraging, and the prospects bright for a fine record this year. Along with other things, he is looking faithfully after the interests of the Conference organs for which service we are grateful.

Dr. Frank N. Parker, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, preached two able sermons at Fidelity Street Church last Sunday. His theme at the morning hour was "Reformation," which he handled in a most impressive manner, basing the discussion upon the Fifty-first Psalm.

Writing from Glenora, Ala., Rev. Gustavus A. Morgan says: "We are having good congregations, and are planning for revival meetings. We are expecting results in our work for the Master." Brother Morgan continues to show his friendship for the Advocate in a substantial way.

We acknowledge our indebtedness to Rev. Walter W. Jones, of Myrtle, Miss., for an additional list of six subscribers to the Advocate. This makes fifteen that he has sent this year, and he thinks that he will yet be able to secure more. He is pleased with his work in his present field.

We express our thanks to the Faculty and Senior Class of Mansfield Female College for an invitation to attend their Commencement, June 2-3. Rev. W. W. Holmes, of New Orleans, has been engaged to deliver the sermon. A full program of the exercises appears elsewhere in this issue.

The Commencement sermon of the Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge was preached on May 29 by Dr. J. I. Vance, of Newark, N. J. Dr. Vance was formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Nashville, Tenn., where he made a great reputation for scholarship and eloquence.

The Shreveport District Conference is scheduled to meet at Lake Providence June 23. All the echoes that reach our office indicate that the work in that section is doing well under the efficient leadership of Dr. S. S. Keener, though that territory has suffered greatly from the depredations of the boll weevil.

Rev. H. T. Carley's address at the close of Jackson Military College made a deep impression. The Nashville paper said the speech in full and commended it highly. There is no more promising minister in Louisiana than this man, and young Mississippians who both know how to think and express his thoughts.

We regret to learn that Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Indianapolis, has left his family in Columbus, Miss., for a change. This accounts for the absence of his exposition of the Sunday School lesson from our columns this week. His service in this respect is much appreciated by the readers of the Advocate.

The closing exercises of the Cleveland (Miss.) Public School will be held June 3-5. The sermon will be preached by Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Greenville, and the presentation of diplomas will be by the Hon. T. S. Owen. The principal of this school is Mr. A. K. Eckles, who ranks with the best educators in Mississippi. His work at Cleveland has been of a most superior order.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Edwin Bowman have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Daisy Guay, to Lieutenant William S. Fulton, of the Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army, at Tensas Chapel, Wilkwood, La., June 9, at 2 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. Fulton will be at home after June 20th at Fort Barrancas, La. The Advocate extends congratulations and best wishes.

Rev. John Ellery Lewis is having a series of addresses by laymen in his church at Clarksdale, Miss., on Sunday evenings. The first speaker selected was the Hon. Earl Brewer, who chose as his theme the conversation between Christ and Nicodemus, and whose remarks made a profound impression. The local press referred to Mr. Brewer's discussion in terms most complimentary.

We were honored with an appreciated visit from Mr. W. F. Lagrone of West Point, Miss., a few days since, who was here attending the meeting of the Southern Commercial Secretaries. He is a son of the Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Greenville, Miss., and, like his honored father, abounds in usefulness, being a steward and active worker in his home church. He was in college with Bishop J. H. McCoy, and is much pleased by his election to the episcopacy.

We were pleased to have as callers a few days since Dr. J. A. Biggs, of Columbia, La., and Hon. A. W. Moore, of Winnsboro, La., members of the State Legislature, who were passing through the city en route to Washington, where they were going to aid in securing for New Orleans the Panama Exposition. They are both local preachers, and take an interest in all the affairs of Methodism. It is a delight to meet men who thus love the Church and believe in its future.

Through the kindness of Mr. George G. Hurst, we received a copy of the program of the Commencement exercises of the University Training School at Oxford, Miss., which were held on May 27th. Under his capable superintendence, along with that of his worthy coadjutors, Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, this institution has earned an excellent reputation, and deservedly popular. Missions will find it a most desirable place to send their students for a collegiate or university education.

The press dispatches report that when B. G. Humphreys, of the Third Mississippi District, as being seriously ill at Montgomery, Ala., his attack will be of brief duration. Mr. Humphreys is known as the working carpenter and he has perhaps done more for the cause of temperance than any other man in the public service at Washington. We have in hand an admirable address on missions, which he delivered at Greenwood, Miss., some time ago, that we hope to publish in the near future.

Dr. S. H. Work is planning to do institutional work on a considerable scale at the First Methodist Church in this city. He proposes soon to begin to give instruction in the domestic arts and all the elementary branches of the English and business education. Cooking, sewing, laundering, penmanship, typewriting, bookkeeping, and other practical subjects will be taught. Later in the year he also to open a clinic. He is receiving many offers of generous service, and is much pleased with the outlook for making his church a real force in the community.

Rev. W. G. Harbin has placed us under obligations for the following new items: "Rev. C. N. Guice has received the patronage of Summit and transformed it into a happy home. His congregations are good, and his sermons are well attended." Rev. J. E. McClure, of Clarksburg, Miss., has had a very sick child, but it is now better. "Timothy has bought handsome oak pews and will install them in July." Rev. M. B. Sherbrooke is doing a great work on the Hattiesburg District. He is popular with the preachers, and watchful of every interest of the Church."

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Auxiliary and the Young People's Missionary Society of the Carrollton Avenue Church this city held a joint anniversary service on Sunday evening last. The former was organized by Mrs. Jacob Cohen eleven and the latter four years ago. She has served as head of both organizations since their inception, and they are in fine condition and accomplishing much for the Master. The Woman's Society furnishes two capable leaders to the general missionary work in Louisiana: Mrs. S. A. Montgomery, the Conference Corresponding Secretary, and Mrs. D. C. Worrell, Secretary of the New Orleans District.

We acknowledge the reception of a copy of The Gibson, a quarterly magazine, edited by the young ladies of Port Gibson Female College. In form, matter, and every other respect, it is highly creditable.

The Commencement sermon of Centenary College will be preached on June 5 by Rev. J. M. Henry, of Baton Rouge. Rev. A. C. Shankle, of Ruston, will preach before the Y. M. C. A. at night, and the Alumni address will be delivered on Monday evening, the 6th, by Judge S. C. Fullilove, of Shreveport, when a reunion and banquet of the alumni and teachers will also be held. The catalogue of this excellent institution for 1909-10 has been issued, and shows that the work of the session just closing has been most satisfactory. The new term will open Wednesday, Sept. 14.

PLEASED WITH THE RESULT.

Methodists of New Orleans and Louisiana, especially the young people over whom he will have superintendence, are rejoicing over the honor which has come to a Louisiana man in his election to one of the general offices of the Church. Upon the resignation of the Rev. Dr. H. M. DuBose, for a number of years the general secretary of the Epworth League, the Rev. Dr. Fitzgerald Sale Parker was elected at the recent General Conference to that important office. Dr. F. S. Parker is a son of the late Bishop Linus Parker, and brother of Rev. Dr. Franklin N. Parker and John B. Parker. He was not born in New Orleans, though his father and mother lived here and he was educated in this city, but was born in the old "home" of his mother, near Shreveport. It was in the last year of the Civil War, and she had been sent there as safe retreat for the time. Dr. Parker was educated at Preot's School and Tulane University, and from Tulane he attended the Boston Conservatory of Music. He was recognized as such a master of this subject that when a commission was selected from the Southern Methodist preachers to serve with Northern Methodists on the joint hymn book commission Dr. Parker was one of the number.

Dr. Parker had not planned to enter the ministry, but his father's sudden death in 1885 turned his thoughts in that direction. His first charge was Carrollton and Parker Memorial churches, started as missions of Rayne Memorial Church, and that year taken under its charge by the Annual Conference. Dr. Parker has filled charges in California and in Texas, and has been pastor and presiding elder in several parts of the State. He was one of the pastors of the old Dryades Street Church, which was sold to a dry goods company and torn down. Dr. Parker married Miss Paxton, of Vicksburg.

Six years ago Dr. Parker was elected assistant secretary of the Epworth League and assistant editor of the Epworth Era. In that capacity he has attended the Epworth League gatherings on the Campgrounds, and as a member of the Louisiana Annual Conference, its sessions each December.—Times-Democrat.

Tidings from the Field

Senatobia, Miss.:

Just a line about our meeting here at Senatobia. The series of services were opened Sunday morning, May 1. Bro. Thos. H. Dorsey, of West Point, came to us Monday, and remained until Wednesday night of the following week. We are rejoicing here for the gracious work of grace our Lord has given us. Bro. Dorsey preached in power and great force during the entire meeting. He is most excellent help in a meeting, and our town will not soon forget his strong, fearless, practical and loving presentation of gospel truths. As a result of the meeting 42 have been received into the membership of our Church and about ten will go to other churches. I am sure there are others who will come into the churches here in the near future. We are happy and rejoicing up this way for the blessings of the Lord.—S. L. Pope.

Sarepta, Miss.:

By request of many dear friends to write a "word" through the Advocate, I ask permission to say that all is well with us on the Randolph charge. Our good people keep steadily about our Father's business. My health, as many of you know, has been poor for some time. I have been confined to my bed a good deal, but can sit up some now. I was able to preach thirty minutes Sunday to a packed house, with crowds around doors and windows eager to hear the Word. The great power of God was manifested in their anxious faces and tear-dimmed eyes. Thank God the old gospel has not lost its power to interest and to save. At the close of this service an offering was made, which just about covered the connectional claims upon this congregation. During my short pastorate here, a great number have been converted and reclaimed, a large per cent being of middle age and older. Quite a number of noble young men, as well as ladies, have consecrated their lives to God. One hundred and fifty-nine have joined the Church. We have more than three hundred in Sunday school the year round. Our congregations are well and comfortably housed. One very encouraging feature with us is the great moral reformation which has taken place. This, together with a revival of the spirit of education that is on the people, points to a good day for this part of the country. Owing to the sway that the whiskey and lawless element have held here, coupled with erroneous and damaging doctrines taught, these good people have had a hard pull and deserve much credit. However, there is much to be done yet which, if faithfully done, means this country for Christ and the Church. We crave your prayers. As I am sick and can't get around to see all, let all members of this charge please renew or subscribe for the Advocate at once. I will send your names for you at club rates.—D. H. Crowson, P. C.

South Side, Corinth, Miss.:

This is a new field, but one which promises much in the future. We have an appreciative, earnest, devoted people to serve. They are true to South Side and to Methodism. Since our last Annual Conference, we have thoroughly organized and systematized our work here. We have paid a portion of our Church debt and now have a monthly system of payment, which is working nicely and by means of which the entire debt of nearly one thousand dollars will be paid within twelve months' time. My Church has adopted the weekly envelope plan of paying their pastor. We have increased the Senior Epworth League enrollment from some twenty-five or thirty members to the great number of two hundred and twenty-five. I think we easily have the "Banner League" in Mississippi, and I dare believe we have the "Banner League" in Southern Methodism. I think this speaks well for a new Church only three years old. My Sunday school is growing rapidly now. We have increased our Sunday school enrollment from 140 to over 200. I am very proud of my Young People's class. We at the convention at Meridian, applied for an International charter for this class. We had fifty charter members. We now have sixty-five members. This class has been organized only about two months. The pastor is teacher of this great class of young people, and, O what a responsibility to stand before this great band of young and impressive life and endeavor to instruct, to enable character, to create higher and nobler ideals, and to inspire worthier ambitions, and to point ever to that greatest of characters—Christ! We have held our protracted meeting. The pastor began the special revival services the fourth Sunday in March and preached eight days. Rev. J. H. Holder then came up and preached for us ten days. We had a good meeting, resulting in twenty-six additions to my Church. And even in Corinth, a town of its size, we had the "Old-time Methodist shouting" more than once, and the genuine conversion of hardened sinners. My Church is in fine shape. Bro. Holder is a strong, earnest, consecrated preacher and untiring worker. He did good work here, and we shall not soon forget him. With everything organized, with a "Banner League," and a growing Sunday school, with our Church debt now provided for, with a true, devoted people to serve, and with a faithful, untiring, consecrated, determined presiding elder to encourage us, South Side is coming to the front—and she is coming to stay. We have, on an average of one hundred at our mid-weekly prayer meetings. Can our "big churches" beat that? We are planning for Children's Day, the 12th day of June. Our League rendered a very fine Easter program on Easter evening. We have organized a Junior League, with some twenty-five members, which I think is going to do very fine work. Pray for us in our work.—K. P. Frost.

Effects of Opium and Cocaine.

When improperly used, opium and cocaine are two of the most powerful, life destroying drugs in the world. But even worse is the slavery these drugs produce on those who acquire the habit of using them, first in small and subsequently in gradually increased doses. It is practically impossible for anyone, even with an iron will, to break such bondage. There is a man over in Atlanta, Ga., however—Dr. B. M. Woolley—who for over thirty years has made a business of curing such drug habits. Unlike many specialists he treats these habits as diseases and claims that in most cases the sufferers are not directly responsible for their condition. His success in effecting cures is something phenomenal—so remarkable, in fact, as to call forth favorable editorial comment from the newspapers. Address him at No. 24 F. Victor Sanitarium, Atlanta, Ga.

A LARGER CUSTOMS LIMIT?

In writing of "Women and the Customs House" in the June "Century," Lillie Hamilton French makes the suggestion that, since the $100 limit has not proved a full protection to the government, a larger limit might be allowed to those of us who have no intent to defraud the merchant. A limit of $300 or even $500, she argues, would in no way affect the rich, while it would be an enormous boon to women of limited means.

AGENTS WANTED.

WANTED—Good men and women agents at once for "Roosevelt's Famous Hunt for Big Game," also for "Traffic in Girls," Immense sellers. Price, $1.50, 50 per cent commission. Outfit free. Send $1.50 for mailing. Both outfits 25c. Also district managers for easy payment installment plan. Permanent work $2,000 to $5,000 per year profits. Particulars free. Address, A. B. Kuhlman Company, Chicago, Ill. 7616.

WHITNEY CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS

616 618 COMMON STREET

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street,

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

L. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Riehl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres.

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd.,
JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. NEW ORLEANS
D. C. Godfrey Optician.

A Combination Offer on Edison Amberol Records and the attachment for playing them on your

Edison Phonograph

The cost of an Amberol attachment for an Edison Phonograph of the Standard type is $5.00.

The cost of ten Amberol (four-minute) Records, at 50 cents each, is $5.00. This makes a total of $10.00.

For a limited time any Edison dealer is authorized to put an Amberol Attachment on a Standard Phonograph and furnish ten specially made Amberol Records, all for $6.00—a clean saving of $4.00. For all other types of Edison Phonographs the prices are proportionate.

This offer, which practically gives you ten Amberol Records free, is made to put these new, long-playing Edison Records within reach of all Phonograph owners, making their Phonographs available for playing both the Standard and the Amberol Records.

Go to the nearest Edison Dealer or write us for all the details of this liberal offer. Hear these ten special Amberol Records, which cannot be had in any other way; see the attachment and how it operates, changing from two-minute to four-minute Records and back, at a touch.

Then you will want to bring your Phonograph up to date and enjoy all the entertainment now offered by the great array of Edison stars.

Edison Phonographs.....$12.50 to $200.00
Edison Standard Records.....35c
Edison Amberol Records (play twice as long).....50c
Edison Grand Opera Records.....75c to $2.00

National Phonograph Company 149 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.

We are Headquarters for Edison's Phonographs, Records and Supplies

—CASH OR INSTALLMENT—

We pay transportation charges on purchase of one dozen records or more.

NATIONAL AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM CO., OF LA.
614 GRAVIER STREET NEW ORLEANS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Lafayette Dist.—Third Round.

Croft	June 4, 5
Yates	June 5, 6
Lafayette	June 11, 12
Franklin	June 12, 13
Verde	June 18, 19
Verde, at Perry	June 19, 20
Grayson, at Graydon	June 25, 26
Radnor, at Hebron	July 2, 3
Teague	July 9, 10
New Maria	July 10, 11
French Mission, at St. Mar
Missville	July 16, 17
Houma, at Bourg	Aug. 6, 7
Patterson	Aug. 13, 14
Prichard, at C. P.	Aug. 20, 21
Rayne	Aug. 27, 28
Jennings	Sept. 3, 4
Base Charles	Sept. 10, 11
Sulphur, at Sulphur	Sept. 11, 12
Emire, at L. P.	Sept. 17, 18
Bell City, at B. C.	Sept. 24, 25
Lake Arthur	Sept. 25, 26

J. E. DENSON, P. E.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Natchez Dist.—Third Round.

Woodville, at Bethel	July 9
Woodville Station	July 10
Liberty, at Salem	July 16, 17
Natchez, Pearl St.	July 22, 24
Natchez, Jefferson St.	July 24, 25
Fayette	July 25
Washington	July 25
Meatville, at Eddison	July 30, 31
Hamburg, at Knoxville	Aug. 6, 7
Homochitto, at Mt. Vernon	Aug. 13, 14
Adams, at Ebenezer	Aug. 20, 21
Centerville	Aug. 24, 25
Gloster, at Woodland	Aug. 27, 28
Nebo, at	Sept. 3, 4
Bayou Pierre, at	Sept. 10, 11
Barlow, at	Sept. 12
Wilkinson, at Friendship	Sept. 17, 18
Scotland, at	Sept. 24, 25

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, P. E.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Columbus District—Third Round.

Starkville	June 4, 5
West Point	June 12, 13
Crawford, at Trinity	June 19, 20
Macon	June 26, 27
Columbus, First Church	July 2, 3
Columbus, Second Church	July 3, 4
Shuqualak, at Salem	July 10, 11
Brooksville, at Prairie	July 17, 18
Sturgis	July 22
Starkville, at Lebanon	July 23, 24
Winstonville	July 30, 31
Mathiston	Aug. 4
Cedar Bluff, at Bills	Aug. 5
Mayhew, at Kilgore	Aug. 13, 14
Hebron, at Prairie Chapel	Aug. 20, 21
Columbus, at	Aug. 27, 28

J. E. THOMAS, P. E.

Durant Dist.—Third Round.

Dist. Conf. at Pickens	July 6, 8
Vaden, at Columbiana	July 2, 3
Pickens, at Richland	July 9, 10
Durant	July 10, 11
Ebenezer, at Bethany	July 16
Lexington	July 17, 18
Sidon, at Sidon	July 17, 18
Rural Hill, at Macedonia	July 23, 24
Chester, at So. Union	July 25
Louisville, at Nexapater	July 26
West, at Hebron	July 30, 31
Kosciusko Sta., at E. Union	Aug. 1
Sallis	Aug. 6
Ackerman	Aug. 7, 8
Kosciusko Ct.	Aug. 13
McCool	Aug. 14, 15
Poplar Creek	Aug. 20, 21
Black Hawk	Aug. 27, 28

N. G. AUGUSTUS, P. E.

Corinth Dist.—Third Round.

Belmont Ct., at Dennis	June 3
Iuka Ct., at Hebron	June 4, 5
Iuka Sta., at Iuka	June 5, 6
Boonville Ct., at Hodges	June 11, 12
Corinth, So. Side, at S. S.	June 12, 13
Booneville Sta., at B.	June 13
Corinth Ct., at Gaines Chap.	June 17
Kosciusko Ct., at P'snt Hill	June 18, 19
Corinth, 1st Ch., at 1st Ch.	June 19, 20
Wheeler Ct., at Asbury	June 24
E. Booneville Ct., at Shady
Grove	June 25, 26
Rienzi Ct., at Bethel	July 2
Guntown Ct., at Pleasant
Valley	July 3, 4
Myrtle Ct., at Friendship	July 9, 10

Hatchie Miss., at El Bethel July 16,
 Rainey Miss., at Marvin July 23,
 Ripley and B. M., at Falkner July 24, 25
 Belden Ct., at Bethel July 29,
 New Albany Ct., at Fern July 30,
 New Albany Sta., at N. A. July 30, 31
 Jonesboro Ct., at Ebenezer Aug. 6, 7
 Dumas Ct., at Dumas Aug. 12,
 Dry Run Miss., at Mt. Zion Aug. 13, 14
 Tishomingo Ct., Aug. 20, 21
 Mooreville Ct., Aug. 25,
 Marietta Ct., Aug. 26,
 Marietta Ct., Aug. 27, 28
 Pastors will please see that answers
 are furnished to questions 17, 20 and
 22. BEN P. JACO, P. E.

PLAN OF EPISCOPAL VISITATION.

First District, Bishop A. W. Wilson.
 Virginia Conference, Centenary Church,
 Richmond, Va., Nov. 30th.
 North Georgia Conference, Athens,
 Ga., Nov. 10th.
 Alabama, Troy, Ala., Dec. 7th.
 Second District, Bishop E. B. Hendrix.
 Denver, Denver, Colo., Sept. 25th.
 Western North Carolina, Winston-Salem,
 N. C., Nov. 15th.
 North Carolina, Elizabeth City, N. C.,
 Nov. 30th.
 South Carolina, Charleston, S. C., Dec.
 5th.

Third Dist., Bishop Warren A. Candler.
 Holston, Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 5th.
 Tennessee, Clarksville, Tenn., Oct. 11th.
 Memphis, Memphis, Ky., Nov. 1st.
 Cuban Mission, Havana, Cuba, Jan.
 1st, 1911.

Fourth Dist., Bishop H. C. Morrison.
 Western Virginia, New Martinsville,
 W. Va., Sept. 25th.
 Illinois, Peoria, Ill., Sept. 25th.
 South Georgia, Columbus, Ga., Nov.
 20th.

Fifth Dist., Bishop E. E. Hoss.
 Japan Mission, Yokohama, Japan, Sept.
 1st.
 Korean Mission, Songdo, Korea, Sept.
 1st.
 China Mission, Hanchow, China, Oct.
 12th.

Sixth Dist., Bishop James Atkins.
 New Mexico, Artesia, New Mex., Oct.
 5th.
 West Texas, Austin, Texas, Oct. 20th.
 Central Texas, Waco, Tex., Nov.
 2d.
 Northwest Texas, Cleburne, Tex.,
 Nov. 9th.

Seventh Dist., Bishop Collins Denny.
 Missouri, Plattsburg, Mo., Aug. 31st.
 Southwest Missouri, Webb City, Mo.,
 Sept. 14.
 St. Louis, Cape Girardeau, Mo., Sept.
 25th.

Eighth Dist., Bishop John C. Kilgo.
 Kentucky, Harrodsburg, Ky., Sept.
 21st.
 Louisville, Russellville, Ky., Sept.
 28th.
 North Alabama, Huntsville, Ala., Nov.
 30th.

Ninth Dist., Bishop W. B. Murrah.
 German Mission, East Bernard, Tex.,
 Oct. 27th.
 North Texas, Wichita Falls, Tex., Nov.
 22d.
 Texas, Galveston, Tex., Nov. 30th.
 Louisiana, Houma, La., Dec. 7th.

Tenth Dist., Bishop W. B. Lambuth.
 Brazil Mission, Sao Paulo, Brazil,
 July 28th.
 South Brazil Mission, Santa Maria,
 Brazil, July 7th.

Bishop Lambuth will go to Africa
 also in the interest of the Mission which the Board of Missions proposes to open in that field.

Eleventh Dist., Bishop R. G. Waterhouse.
 Montana, Butte, Mont., Sept. 8.
 East Columbia, Walla Walla, Wash.,
 Sept. 15th.
 Columbia, Medford, Oregon, Sept. 22d.
 Pacific, Stockton, Cal., Oct. 5th.
 Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Cal., Oct.
 12th.

Twelfth Dist., Bishop E. D. Monzon.
 Mississippi, Hattiesburg, Miss., Dec.
 7th.
 Mexican Border Mission, Monterey,
 Mex., Feb. 2d, 1911.
 Central Mexico Mission, Mexico City,
 Feb. 9th, 1911.
 Northwest Mexican Mission, Mazatlan,
 Feb. 30d, 1911.

Thirteenth Dist., Bishop J. H. McCoy.
 Arkansas, Fayetteville, Ark., Nov. 2d.
 Little Rock, Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 15th.
 White River, Forest City, Ark., Nov.
 22d.
 North Mississippi, Sardis, Miss., Nov.
 30th.

The semi-annual meeting of the Bishops will be held in New Orleans, La.,
 Oct. 20th.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA

AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the OLD STANDARD GROVES
 TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing
 it is simply Quinine and Iron in a taste-
 less form, and the most effectual form.
 For grown people and children, 50c.

THE BEST MADE
Angell's Cough and Whooping
Cough Syrup

For Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs,
 Colds and Throat Trouble.
 Contains no Opium or Morphine.
 All Druggists. Price 25 and 50 cents.

DUGGAN'S BOLL WEEVIL REMEDY
WILL INSURE A GOOD COTTON CROP

Should be used by every cotton planter
 in the South. Simple, Cheap, Effective.
 Fully demonstrated at Natchez, Miss., last season. Write for particulars and references.

One gallon diluted treats 2 acres

J. J. DUGGAN, Mn'fr,

4326 Magazine Street, New Orleans, La.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT
TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK GARDENERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guarantee. In order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. MAIL
 Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
 Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

CONVENIENT WAY.

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA,
SHREVEPORT.PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS
ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL.

General Passenger Agent.

Summer Tours

VIA

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

California, Colorado, Utah, Mexico,
AND ALL THE WEST.

NEW YORK

And ALL EASTERN and NORTHERN RESORTS

See Your Local Agent for full Particulars, or Write

J. H. R. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt.

C. W. MURPHEY, City Pass. Agt.

New Orleans, La.

New Orleans, La.

DURABLE, SAFE, SPEEDY

These "heavy duty" engines are constructed with great care to details. They run safely at high speed, with exceptionally steady motion. Are equipped with our "Buckley Valve" which makes, under side the cattle of steam, increases the power and reduces the wear and tear thereby prolonging the life of the engine. Specified thus in our big new catalogue which will be mailed for and

WHELAND MACHINE WORKS,
 2700 Sydney St. Chattanooga, Tenn.

Grenada College.

Centenary College, Shreveport, La.
June 5-7

Royaline Oil, the great antiseptic made by the Royalline Manufacturing Co. of New Orleans, La., has been found to kill putrefactive germs and is a powerful anti-inflammatory and every other kind of remedy for wounds, etc. It is the only cure you have and now with it as well as yourself. You ought to keep a bottle of it in the house all the time.

FITS CURED NO CURE NO PAY-IN Other words, you do not pay your small professional fee until cured and satisfied. German-
American Institute, 884 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

Rheumatic Pains

and stiffness in joints or muscles; neuralgia; backache; tired, painful, aching feet; sore hands; sprains and bruises; sore throat and chest, due to colds or grippe; in fact, all the common aches and pains that occur in any family from day to day, yield almost instantly to a good rubbing with

Minard's Liniment.

It does not stain, it is neither sticky nor oily—it is just a delightfully smooth, aromatic cream that feels good on the skin and rubs right in and stops inflammation like magic. Minard's Liniment ought to be on every family medicine shelf, because it is so useful in emergencies and so prompt in giving relief.

We guarantee it to be just as we represent—should you find it otherwise, we will refund your money on request. Sold by all druggists in three sizes, price 25c., 50c. and $1.00.

FREE. If you have never tried it, and wish to test its merits, write us to-day for a free trial bottle.

MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO., South Framingham, Mass.

ROYALINE OIL

The Great Antiseptic

And a good pain medicine combined

KEEP it on hand for Headache, Neuralgia, Burns, Swellings, Flesh Wounds, Bruises, Bites, Diarrhoea, Rheumatism, Sprains, Colic, etc. For man or beast; inside or outside. Stronger than any other antiseptic on the market.

If you want it weak like others, add water to suit and save money. 25c. and 50c. Druggists.

Royaline Medicine Co., Ltd.
New Orleans, La.

USE THE L. & A. RAILWAY

"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service
Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden
and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

NOTICE.

To the Preachers of Seashore District.
Will you please send me at once the names of delegates and local preachers from your charge who expect to attend our District Conference.

Schedule of trains are as follows:
Northbound arrives at Wiggins 9 a. m., 4 p. m. and 6 p. m. Southbound, 11 a. m., 12:30 p. m. and 8:40 p. m.
Come in the Spirit of the Lord.

Fraternally,

R. S. GALE, P. C.

NOTICE.

The Monroe District Conference will convene at Lake Providence June 22, 3 p. m.

Committee on License to Preach—W. H. Henderson, P. A. Humphrey, W. L. Hunter.

Admission on Trial—T. S. Randle, A. S. J. Neal, T. J. Holladay.

Orders—C. B. Carter, A. J. Coburn, R. H. Wynn.

Quarterly Conference Records—P. H. Fountain, Wm. Schullie, S. S. Bogart.

S. S. KEENER, P. E.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Shreveport District Conference will meet June 13-17, 1910. The opening sermon will be preached Monday, June 13, at 8 p. m., by Rev. A. W. Turner. The Conference will open in business session Tuesday at 8:30 a. m. The following committees have been appointed:

License to Preach—Rev. R. J. Harp, B. T. Crews and R. H. Sheppard.

Recommendation for Admissions—A. W. Turner, Will Howell and H. M. Whaling.

For Orders—J. W. Booth, J. G. Snelling and H. J. Boltz.

Let the pastors call the attention of their delegates to the time of meeting and urge them to attend.

T. J. WARLICK, P. E.

PASTORS' AND LAYMEN'S CONFERENCE—DURANT DIST.

Rev. N. G. Augustus, presiding elder, and Bro. Parham Williams, lay leader for Durant District, called the pastors and laymen to meet in a conference May 18, at Durant, to discuss some of the vital questions relating to the "Laymen's Movement" and the kingdom of God throughout the Durant District. Thirteen pastors and forty-four laymen were enrolled—a better attendance than was expected. The discussions were earnest and enthusiastic, the laymen taking a prominent part.

We seem, indeed, to be waking up to our responsibility and privileges. By the painstaking and earnest efforts of the presiding elder and lay leader, a splendid program was provided, which was followed, but not finished for lack of time.

Some ringing resolutions were adopted in reference to the work in the Durant District.

A resolution expressing our gratification at the election of Dr. W. B. Murrah to the office of Bishop, was unanimously adopted, and asking him to make his home in Mississippi.

Yours in word and work for souls,
J. H. SMITH.

"COLLEGE DEMOCRACY."

Dr. Arthur T. Hadley, Yale University's president, will speak a timely and helpful word to readers of the June Century on "College Democracy," the spirit—a spirit which in Dr. Hadley's opinion represents the ideals and standards of our American colleges in general—which lays stress on work for the commonwealth and on the inherent interests of the commonwealth. "Whether a man regards it as democratic or not," he says, "will depend upon his definition of democracy."

Superior to Lemonade
Horsford's Acid Phosphate

A teaspoonful added to a glass of cold water with sugar, makes a refreshing drink.

Hot Sun—Dusty Roads

By the time you reach town and light you'll be hot and tired and your throat dry with dust and dirt. Hunt up a soda fountain and treat yourself to A Glass or a Bottle of

Coca-Cola

Just as cooling as the bottom step in the spring house. You'll find it relieves fatigue too, and washes away all the dust and thirst is nothing else will. It touches the spot.

Delicious • Refreshing • Wholesome

5c Everywhere

Our Free Booklet

"The Truth About Coca-Cola" tells all about Coca-Cola—what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial. It gives analyses made by scientists and chemists from coast to coast, proving its purity and wholesomeness. Your name and address on a postal will bring you this interesting booklet.

The Coca-Cola Co.,
Atlanta, Ga.
U. S. P.

When you see an arrow that is of Coca-Cola

VISIT

MINERAL WELLS

FOR HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND

WEST TEXAS

For
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE
DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,

General Passenger Agent.

DALLAS - - - - - TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a. m.

Instead of at 9:20 a. m. as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p. m.

FOR

NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW ON SALE.

WILBUR R. SMITH BUSINESS COLLEGE
Model trained Prof. Smith SUMMER SESSION at the World's Fair.
Bookkeeping and Business
Shorthand, Typewriting and Telegraphy taught. Notes reviewed. Situations—10,000 graduates in business.
Begin now. Address WILBUR R. SMITH, Lexington, Ky.

RHEUMATISM

A CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the Spring of 1891 I was attacked by rheumatism, suffered as those who have it know, for over three years, and tried almost everything. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has not returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and it effected a cure in every case. Anyone desiring to give this precious remedy a trial, I will send it free. Address—

Mark H. Jackson, No. 525 James Street, Syracuse, N. Y.

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00
St. Louis, $26.00
Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares

To ALL Principal Points in the United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD
141 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
Phone Main 3618.

A "SQUARE DEAL"

It is often argued that women do not have an equal chance with men, for enjoyment and usefulness, because women suffer so much from pain and weakness. In a general sense, it is true that women bear more physical pain than men. However, the belief that women must suffer regularly, on account of ailments and weakness peculiar to their sex, has been successfully contradicted by the relief so many women have obtained by the use of Cardui, that great remedy for suffering women.

During the past fifty years, many thousands of women have written us, telling of the immediate relief and permanent benefit they have received from Cardui. These letters cover a great many forms of womanly illness. Mrs. M. E. Allred of Hartford, Wash., writes: "Ever since I was 16 years old, I have suffered from female troubles. I had headache, backache and other troubles, every month. Some two years ago, I began to use Cardui, and since then I have had no backache, my other troubles have stopped, I don't need any medicine, and I am well."

What Cardui has done for Mrs. Allred and other women, it surely can do for you. Try it at once. Give yourself a "square deal." You will never regret it. Sold everywhere.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head, no washing by hand—no breakage.

WHILE TOP PATENTED CATHOLIC
LE PAGE
INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO
TORONTO CANADA

Epworth League

Rev. Wm. H. Coleman

TOPIC FOR JUNE 5.

THE CHRISTIAN'S FRIENDSHIP WITH HIS LORD

John xv, 12-15; James ii, 23

I. Friendship Defined. There are several shades of meanings attached to the word "friend," but perhaps the most concise definition would be, one who is in reconciliation with another, one who is in perfect harmony with another. And "friendship" is the relationship existing between friends. It signifies a likeness of character that creates an affinity between them, and hence one of the definitions of friendship is "similarity." Friendship also signifies close acquaintance.

II. Significance of Christ's Friendship to Us.

1. It means that he became like us, not like us in imperfection and sinfulness, but like us in that he became human, a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief; that he thus became closely acquainted with us, by experiencing the human life, there was an affinity that bound him to human beings; that he did this to bestow on ours unmerited favor, the favor of his saving grace; he became like us in our humanity, that we might become like him in his divinity.

2. Christ's friendship to us involved the giving of himself to us, the laying down of his life for us (John xv, 13).

How did he thus lay down his life for us?

1. By sacrificing, giving up, for our sake. He sacrificed, he gave up, he laid aside the eternal majesty and creative glory that he had with the Father from the beginning (John i, 1-3), and though he was rich, yet for our sake he became poor, that we through his poverty might become rich (2 Cor. viii, 9).

Not only did he give up the omnipotence and glory that he had with the Father in creating all things, and come to earth to redeem poor, lost humanity, but when he reached this poor little earth, it was not as one of its greatest ones, according to the flesh and material things, but as a little babe in an humble home of poverty.

So completely did he sacrifice everything for us, to the end purpose of being our friend, that he did not take time to claim even a resting place in the world that he had created (Mark viii, 20).

2. By devoting himself to us. He not only thus so completely gave up everything for our sake, but he devoted himself to us for a human lifetime, giving that much of his time that might have been occupied in creating worlds more glorious than this, that he might be our friend in establishing his kingdom upon earth for us, in teaching the doctrines of the Father for our instruction in righteousness. In setting us an example that we should follow his steps.

Not only did he thus live for us, but he even died for us on the rough Roman cross on Calvary; that he might be our friend in atoning for our sins, and conquering death and the grave for us. Shall we not humbly pause here in the shadow of the cross and contemplate the benign effects for us of this suffering and death of our Lord?

No other such demonstration of perfect friendship has ever been known to the world; for it was perfect not only in its complete devotion, but also in its condescension and in its great benefits.

When I survey the wondrous cross,
On which the Prince of glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And poor contempt in all my pride.

III. What Should Our Friendship to Christ Involve? Just as much unselfish devotion as is involved in his friendship for us. Therefore, the laying down of our lives for him who laid down his life for us. This does not mean that we are to give up our lives in a foolish way, but that we are to give up our lives in a wise way, in a way that will bring us to the Father. It is a life of self-denial, a life of sacrifice, a life of devotion. It is a life that will bring us to the Father, and it is a life that will bring us to the Father.

1. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

2. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

3. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

4. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

5. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

6. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

7. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

8. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

9. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

10. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

11. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

12. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

13. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

14. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

15. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

16. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

17. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

18. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

19. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

20. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

21. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

22. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

23. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

24. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

25. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

26. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

27. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

28. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

29. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

30. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

31. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

32. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

33. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

34. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

35. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

36. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

37. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

38. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

39. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

40. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

41. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

42. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

43. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

44. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

45. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

46. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

47. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

48. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

49. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

50. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

51. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

52. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

53. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

54. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

55. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

56. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

57. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

58. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

59. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

60. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

61. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

62. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

63. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

64. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

65. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

66. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

67. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

68. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

69. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

70. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

71. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

72. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

73. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

74. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

75. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

76. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

77. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

78. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

79. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

80. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

81. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

82. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

83. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

84. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

85. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

86. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

87. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

88. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

89. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

90. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

91. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

92. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

93. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

94. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

95. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

96. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

97. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

98. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

99. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

100. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

101. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

102. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

103. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

104. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

105. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

106. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

107. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

108. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

109. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

110. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

111. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

112. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

113. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

114. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

115. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

116. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

117. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

118. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

119. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

120. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

121. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

122. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

123. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

124. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

125. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

126. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

127. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

128. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

129. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

130. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

131. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

132. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

133. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

134. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

135. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

136. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

137. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

138. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

139. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

140. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

141. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

142. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

143. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

144. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

145. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

146. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

147. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

148. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

149. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

150. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

151. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

152. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

153. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

154. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

155. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

156. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

157. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

158. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

159. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

160. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

161. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

162. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

163. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

164. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

165. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

166. Lay down your life for the Father. Lay down your life for the Father.

167. Lay down your life for the Father.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA. THURSDAY, JUNE 9, 1910.

C. O. CHAMBERS, Publisher.

VOL. 57—No. 23.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2835.

Editorial

I like that every chair should be a throne and hold a king.—Emerson.

Every human being is born into the world a debtor both to God and his fellowmen. To ignore this debt and make no effort to discharge it, is the basest and blackest form of repudiation.

Mrs. Eddy is reported to be worth more than fifteen million dollars. Some people seem to think she is Christ-like, but it certainly cannot be said that she hath not where to lay her head. Wesley was so philanthropic that he died poor, but Mrs. Eddy's philanthropy does not appear to extend beyond Mrs. Eddy.

Those who live for themselves live little lives, but those who give themselves for the advancement of things greater than themselves find a larger life than the one surrendered. Wendell Phillips gave expression to the same idea when he said: "How prudently most men sink into nameless graves, while now and then a few forget themselves in the immortality."—W. J. Bryan.

To be moral and antagonize nothing may make one popular, but such a Christianity is the lowest type. The early disciples were spoken of as "those who turn the world upside down." Paul did not move around through Athens, Corinth, and Rome as if he had the lockjaw. Jesus called the Pharisees "a generation of vipers," and scourged the money-changers from the temple. True Christianity has ever been aggressive. A moral invertebrate who dares not speak for his Lord, is not fit for the kingdom.

The aspiration of every preacher should be for a fruitful ministry. No matter in what other respects he may excel, if he does not win men to Christ and build them up in him, he falls short of his high calling. The world may applaud, and even the Church may crown him with its honors, but what are these worth if the Holy Spirit does not attest the Master's approval by giving efficiency to his words and work. The important question is not whether our record will pass muster at the Annual Conference, but how it will be regarded by the Master when he shall come again to reckon with his servants. Happy the man who, like Paul, can point to his converts as his "joy and crown!"

Growth in grace is normal. It is the divine will concerning every Christian. Infancy, manhood, maturity, beautiful with the ripening tints of autumn, and then harvest home, is God's plan for each and all who live to old age. One who is not consciously making progress in the spiritual life needs to be alarmed. Arrested development means that something is wrong, and the trouble ought to be speedily discovered and remedied. Heart-searching and earnest prayer will disclose the hindering cause. Too much introspection tends to make one morbid and is unwise, but some of it is essential. Meditation is an important factor in the making of saints, and no one can neglect it without sustaining tremendous loss. Christianity owes much to the secret closet, and it will be a sad day when men cease to draw apart to turn the eye of consciousness within and listen for the gentle whisperings of the divine voice. Solitude has ever been the birthplace of vision and of power.

THE APOSTOLIC AGE.

There is a disposition on the part of some to sneer at any recurrence to the apostolic age for precedents as to methods of religious work or church government. And occasionally a voice is heard proclaiming that even as to matters of doctrine and practical religious instruction the scholars of the present time are more to be trusted than the men who nineteen hundred years ago gave us the canonical books of Scripture. Thus, if Paul, or Peter, or John is cited as an authority on any religious question at issue, the reply is quickly made that they belonged to a comparatively unenlightened age of the world and that their views are antiquated and need modification in this advanced period of human history. "They were authorities in their time, and we in this," is the bold contention of not a few among us.

We have not the slightest disposition to strip this boasted modern age of the glories which it really possesses. Its vast superiority in many respects we readily concede. The human mind has made new conquests in many fields before unexplored, and the diffusion of knowledge is vastly more widespread among the masses of mankind. The reign of law throughout the universe has been recognized, and the secrets of nature in earth and sky have disclosed themselves to the importunate questionings of the philosopher and astronomer. Mighty forces, long idle, have been discovered, harnessed, and made the obedient servants of conquering man. Steam, electricity, and ether are performing their wonders on every side, and Tennyson's dream of "the heavens filled with commerce" and "the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue" seems about to be realized.

Nor is it only in things material that the supremacy of the twentieth century is seen. But Christianity is also much more widely extended than at any former period. The Cross has been planted upon practically every continent and isle. The Bible has been translated into hundreds of tongues, and the influence of the gospel has touched human civilization at substantially every point. It has made its impress upon the art, the literature, the manners, the customs, the industries, the commerce, the governments, and even the wars of the nations of the world.

But notwithstanding these proud distinctions of this latter day, there are other respects in which superiority must be accorded to the apostolic period. That was the age of the incarnation—that supreme wonder of earth and heaven. God came in visible form and dwelt among men. He, whose knowledge knew no limit, spoke in the accents of human speech and became the religious teacher of mankind. He gathered about him a chosen band, whom he taught and trained to become his representatives and convey his message to the world. He died upon the heights of Calvary, rose from the dead, and ascended from the slopes of Olivet. Upon his disciples on the day of Pentecost the Holy Ghost descended, and they were supernaturally endowed. In cradling the Christian Church, they were inspired and divinely directed. They had gifts such as have never since belonged to men. Moved and guided by the Spirit, they wrote the gospels and their epistles to their fellow-Christians. They gave directions concerning the government and practices of the Church, and sent laborers out into the whitening fields. With their passing, inspiration ceased. There has been no new revelation of God from that day to this. The Holy Ghost still moves upon the minds and hearts of men, but only to impress and vitalize the truth already given. He brings to remembrance the things already taught, and opens our eyes to behold their wondrous beauty. For any one to contend that he has had an additional message from God, is the very quintessence of presumption. It lays the predicate for the wildest fanaticism and the upspringing of false religions.

In view of the foregoing, it is not strange that Christian men, when perplexed, should turn back to the apostolic period for light and guidance. Only in the literature of that age may they hear the divine voice speaking through men under the conscious influence of inspiration. And only in the lives and labors of the apostles and some of their associates, have they the examples of workmen supernaturally directed by the Holy Spirit. Compared to such religious instruction as may here be obtained, how pitifully poor is that which may be had sitting at the feet of modern scholastics!

There is a fundamental difference between religious and scientific or philosophic truth which should never be forgotten. The latter is a discovery; the former is a revelation. The latter is the acquisition of the unaided human intellect, and hence it is progressive and gradual in growth. The former is undiscoverable by the finite mind, and can be known only as God reveals it. True, his unfolding of it through the patriarchal and prophetic ages from Adam to Christ was gradual; but with the close of the apostolic age it was completed. One of the most pernicious errors of our time is the notion that religious truth must continue to develop and be improved upon like the purely human system of thought blighted by the mind of man. Such is not the case. Christianity was complete in the beginning. Nothing new has been added to it in nineteen hundred years; nor will be until the end of time. The hope of mankind must ever be in Calvary. There will never be any new terms of salvation. The last man, like the first man, must be saved through faith in Christ. Our mission is not to improve on the religion of Pentecost, but to extend it around the world. When Wesley desired to show the backslidden people of Oxford, England, what genuine Christianity is, what did he do? He described to them in graphic speech the life and conduct of the first disciples. And to them men will never cease to turn for a vision of "pure and undefiled religion." And this day is better than that only in that the kingdom then started is now more widely extended. And only its further expansion will make more glorious the future yet to be. And in this connection, it may not be amiss to ask, what has produced the great forward religious movements of the world? Has it been the speculations of progressive theology—the discovery of some new truth before unknown? No, it has been the reversion to first principles; the reassertion of the old truths of the gospel. It was the rediscovery of the neglected doctrine of justification by faith that made Luther a flame of fire and set in motion the mighty reformation. It was with the old, old truth of a conscious salvation that the founder of Methodism beat back the waves of skepticism and made himself the foremost evangelist of the centuries. There was nothing new or novel in the message with which Evans Roberts so profoundly stirred the people of Wales a few years ago. The only Christianity that can triumph now is that which "turned the world upside down" in the beginning.

The present world is rich in opportunities. It is a great school where valuable lessons may be learned. It is a mighty theater where immortal man may play a noble part. It is a wide-reaching battlefield where may be won laurels that will never fade. Living here, we may lay up treasures in heaven; upon deathless souls, we may make an impress that will last forever; in lowly service, we may do that which will command "an abundant entrance" into the eternal kingdom. What more need we want? We have the privilege of performing here worthy ministries that will bring a sure reward, and when we must go hence, an open door to the Father's spacious house. To him who "redeems the time," earth is but a stairway to the sky, and the present is but the dim dawn of a glorious day to come.

Christian Advocate.

Published for the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DIRECTIONS.

Correspondents will please direct all communications intended for the Editor to 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Communications intended for the Business Department should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Write with ink, and only on one side of the paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after two weeks, notify us, and we will make it right. Papers will be continued unless subscribers order otherwise.

BISHOP MURRAH IN HIS HOME PULPIT.

The first sermon of the Rev. William Belton Murrah, D. D., since his ordination as a member of the College of Bishops, was delivered at the First Methodist Church, of Jackson, Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

One of the largest congregations that ever assembled at the historic edifice was present to hear the new Bishop, and to extend their greetings and personal congratulations. There was not a vacant pew in the church, and the congregation had the pleasure of hearing a discourse that revealed the mind of a philosopher, and the diction of a scholar.

Calm, yet sympathetic; self-possessed, yet endowed with the fire and ardor of a consecrated leader in the cause of Christ; slow and deliberate of speech, yet often carrying his hearers to lofty heights with sublime eloquence, it was the universal verdict of the congregation that Dr. Murrah is an ideal Bishop, and that the mantle of the beloved Charles B. Galloway has fallen on worthy shoulders.

Bishop Murrah prefaced his sermon with a few words personal concerning his new relations with the Church.

"I feel no elation over my new relations with Methodism," said the speaker. "The responsibilities of the office I have assumed force into the background any feeling of that character a person might entertain. But I would be negligent in revealing my true feelings if I failed to express a deep sense of gratitude for the kindly interest in my behalf that has been manifested by the citizens of Jackson, among whom I have lived so many years, and these expressions of friendship and personal regard bind me to them with great affection and abiding love.

"I am glad to assume these new duties, chiefly because they bring me back into the pastoral relation once more. I feel that I can now devote my entire work to preaching the gospel; the work that I have always loved. In the future, as in the past, I shall always be glad to serve the people of Jackson in any way, privately or publicly, within my power. There is no order of succession in Methodism, but the office to which I have been ordained is indissolubly associated with the name of Mississippi's best beloved divine, Bishop Charles B. Galloway. I can not hope to fill his place in your affections, but it is my earnest hope and prayer that his illustrious example will ever be an inspiration to me."

Bishop Murrah's text was taken from Luke xix, 10th verse, "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which is lost."

This text, said the speaker, sets forth the real mission of the Church. "Every system has a unifying principle, a focus from which all truth radiates, and to which all things can be traced back unerringly. This is true in all things. It was proven true in astronomy when the fallacy that the earth was the center of the universe was conclusively shown, and all astronomical calculations had to be revised, and the sun adopted as the center of our planetary system. Unless we get hold of the controlling thought in a system we can never understand it.

So long as the center in thought was not the center in fact, the Church, with all the terrors of the inquisition, and the numerous religious wars in behalf of Christ's kingdom was not right. Spencer, with all his depth of learning, was wrong, because he persistently held that all scientific truth must center about the doctrine of evolution.

The text explains the incarnation, the crucifixion, and the resurrection. Leave out the thought that Christ came into the world to seek and to save, and we cannot understand his mission. If this text had been borne in mind in the early dawn of Christian civilization all the profitless wrangles and theological wars that disgrace the pages of history would never have happened, and men would never have lashed themselves into a fury of passion over questions that Jesus regarded as incidental, or of secondary consideration.

When a man has the proper conception of Jesus he breaks over the limitations that circumscribe other men and sees him as a man with a world-wide mission, universal and omnipotent.

Christ came into the world to save the people in the present, not to save them in the by and by. He came to rescue them from the lost state in which they then were, and he illustrated to them their condition in the parables of the lost sheep, the lost coin, and the lost son. The lost sheep was not in reality destroyed. Its value remained, although it had strayed from the fold, and its fleece had been torn by the briars and the brambles. Similarly, Jesus came to save those who had fallen into false ideas of God, who had wandered from paths of purity and righteousness, and were lost in a maze of meaningless ceremonials, and could not find their way back to the fold. He came to teach a simple and abiding faith in God.

The lost coin, told of by Jesus in the parable, was still in existence. It still had its value, but was lost to its usefulness. Many people are lost in the same way. Neither God or the world can make anything of them. They will roll away into some narrow social crevice, and live for no useful purpose whatever, devoid of all ambition or inspiration, practically dead to the world, and playing no part in its destiny. They need the stimulus of God's purpose to bring them back into useful purposes.

The prodigal son who fritters away his time on low and sensual things is not only lost to his personal father, but is lost to his heavenly Father. His life has no value to himself, to the world, or to God's kingdom.

God seeking man is one of the characteristic principles of Christianity. Ours is a man-seeking religion. Jesus Christ introduced a world-transforming thought when he taught us that God seeks man instead of man seeking God. Christ tore away the selfish veil that had shrouded the true scheme of his Father when he showed us God, impelled by an all-pervading love, seeking out the lost sinners of the world. This two-fold idea is embodied only in our Christian religion. Christ came into the world to seek for the purpose of saving. He did not come to abuse, to quarrel, to berate. No man was ever saved by abuse. Jesus came to seek men out and lift them from the low plane on which they had lived and give them loftier visions and nobler ambitions.

All of the forces of the Church are organized to save that which is lost in the present, not merely in the hereafter. The Church seeks to save, not in the narrow sense, but to rescue all things on this earth from wrongful uses and bring them back to God, and to redeem all of the earth, not merely a part of it.

The great purpose of the coming of the Son of God, the all-glorious consummation of his visit, will be the bringing back of this world from wrong purposes to right uses, and the accomplishment of God's will. The great purpose of God, as expressed through Jesus Christ, is to lift the world to loftier heights, and give us a higher conception of his wonderful universe.

Why should there be hungry people in this world? It is because of sin. The fertile soil of our earth yields harvests ample to abundantly feed every living creature. But people are dying of hunger in India, while they are burning corn for fuel in Nebraska. This is the sin of thriftlessness. There would be no deaths from starvation were it not for the sin of greed and selfishness.

Bishop Murrah discussed at some length the plan and scope of work being carried on by the modern Church, its hospitals, colleges, orphanages and other institutions for the uplift of humanity and the propagation of God's doctrine. He declared that we need not despair for the forces of Christianity are equal to any test that may be put to them. The power of the Cross is invincible. It manifests itself in countless ways. God is the all-pervading force behind our advancing civilization, and our world-wide expansion as a Christianizing and civilizing force. Every waste place of this planet will eventually be rescued from wrongful use and restored to right use. Why should we despair of man when God is seeking to save him?

Bishop Murrah declared that the Church should have nothing to do with factional politics, but the Church should have a great deal to do with the things that affect the fundamental principles of our government and national affairs. The Church must maintain an uncompromising front against evil, for only by this policy can its destiny be fulfilled and the purpose of Christ accomplished. Take the Cross out of the world and you will throw the civilized nations back into savagery. The most sublime thought in the universe, the all-pervading force in human affairs to-day, is the knowledge that Christ has come to seek and to save that which is lost. (From the Jackson (Miss.) Evening News of May 30.)

HEART DISEASE DESTROYING THE COMMUNION OF SAINTS.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

John Wesley, who knew the Church of his day as scarcely any man of his age knew it, said concerning one of the most conspicuous defects, "Look east, west, north or south, name what parish you please, is Christian fellowship there? Rather are not the bulk of the parishioners a mere rope of sand? What Christian connection is there between them? What intercourse in spiritual things? What watching over each others' souls?"

To supply the grievous want which he thus laments, he organized the Methodist people into classes and established class meetings and band meetings. He also restored the apostolic "agapae," or "love feasts." If he were returned to the earth to-day, he would have to lament again the absence of Christian fellowship in all the churches, the Methodist bodies included.

The apostolic conception of the Church is that of a family, sprung from the same father, gathered about him, and called by his name. St. Paul speaks of the "whole family in heaven and in earth" called by the name of Christ.

But we seem to have a conception quite different. Our idea seems to be that the Church is a trolley car in which there is a crowd of people, accidentally thrown together, sitting side by side and going in the same direction, carried forward by the same agency and cared for by the same conductor, but entire strangers to each other, having no common interests or common sympathies. They are not knit together by kinship, but are brought together for a season by the chance convenience of a mechanical device for transportation which carries them towards a destination which they all desire to reach. Neither reason nor revelation justifies any such view of the Church of God.

It is contradicted by the Creed of Christendom, and condemned by the whole tenor of the Scriptures. In the Creed we declare that we "believe in the Church of God and the communion of saints." But does this trolley car theory of the Church meet the demands of the creed which we profess to believe? Does it measure up to the words of St. John, when, writing to the humble believers of his time, he said, "That which we have heard and seen declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us, and truly our fellowship is with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ?"

Men want fellowship, and will have it. They can not live alone in isolated individualism. This explains their disposition to unite with all sorts of societies and secret orders. The multiplication of such orders in our country points to the failure of the Church to meet the demands for fellowship. How can this failure be corrected?

By return to the principles and practice of Apostolic Christianity. The fellowship of the Holy Spirit breaks down all barriers and binds men together in the holiest and most intimate and most tender relation possible to human nature. It is said that "one touch of nature makes the whole world kin," but far more truly may it be said that one touch of the supernatural makes the whole universe akin. In the days of St. Paul it broke down the middle wall of partition between Jews and Gentiles, and made them sit together "in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." Writing to the Ephesian Gentiles of this mighty power of Christ to bind together in one all things in heaven and on earth, the great Apostle says, "But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. For he is our peace, who hath made of both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us, having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances, for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby; and came and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh. For through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father. Now therefore, ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints and of the household of God, and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone, in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord, in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit." (Ephesians ii, 13-22.)

These great words of St. Paul will appear almost incomprehensible to the professors and exponents of our modern over-mundane Christianity. It will be noted that the apostle magnifies Christ above all earthly personalities and powers; and that he puts spiritual relations above all other relationships whatsoever. Herein his teachings differ from much that passes current for Christianity in our time.

We can never have the unity and fellowship which Paul sets forth until Christ and his salvation mean to us what they meant to the Apostle. As long as we imagine that Christianity is mainly concerned with the rectification of worldly relations and the amelioration of earthly conditions, leaving out of the account its work of setting men right in their eternal relations to God through the atoning work of Christ, we shall never have an adequate center around which to rally the fellowship which St. Paul and his fellow apostles had in mind when they wrote their epistles to the churches. We shall never know and love man as our brother until we have found God as our Father. When we minimize Christ we minimize his Church and the fellowship which it alone supplies. When we regard him as something less than a Savior we throw off his power to bind us to others by the ties of a common salvation.

This truth is strongly put by Stanley Leathes in his most excellent work entitled, "The Christian Creed. This able Probandary of St. Paul's and Professor in King's College says, "As all true patriots, whatever their political creed, are equally loyal to the Constitution and the Crown, and are necessarily drawn together when the safety or honor of either is threatened, so all true Christians, whatever their individual sentiments, or their denominational creed, are mutually drawn together, and sympathetically united in love and allegiance to their common Lord. There is a magic, talismanic power in the name of Christ, and in the name of Jesus, who is the Christ, which, like the touch of nature that makes the whole world kin, convinces every Christian of a community of origin between all who love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, of an origin that can not be broken by the accidental severance of the churches, any more than those who are united in a common friendship, or bound to a common friend, can be severed by the flight of time, or by the billows that wash divided continents. The communion of saints, then, is a communion which they have with one another through their union with a common center and common object of love. Just as any point on the circumference is united by an invisible line to the center, and may be united with any other point by a line passing through the center, or by two lines meeting in the center, so also is the union of saints in Christ. He is their invisible Head, to whom they one and all are joined by invisible bonds of faith and love; and as nothing can separate between Christ and those whom he calls his own, so nothing can separate between those who belong to Christ, because they are united one with another, by being one and all united in him."

Herein is our difficulty. We are not making enough of being really and vitally united with Christ. We make much of the mechanical organization and little of the interior spiritual life. We bring young people into the Church by the registration of "decision days" and the ceremonies of ritual "confirmation," rather than by the transforming power of converting grace. They fail to appreciate the sinfulness of sin, and by consequence they do not rightly value Christ's great salvation. They have no common experiences of penitence and pardon, and hence they can have no real spiritual fellowship one with another. We make Church members, rather than saints, and for the communion of saints we substitute congregating in a house to hear a man, more or less competent to discuss the subjects he elects to treat, talk about matters more or less related to morals and religion. The hours which we thus spend in the building which we call the church are seasons of entertainment and "ethical culture," rather than seasons of worship and the communion of saints. Hence social distinctions, financial standing, political prominence, and personal peculiarities stand out as prominently in the Church as in the world, and exclude the possibility of that fellowship in which every earthly feature and characteristic of life is eclipsed by the glory of the supernatural experience of redemption in Christ Jesus in which all alike participate. Therefore, we talk of "fashionable churches" and "people's churches"—monstrous descriptives when applied to the Church which do not shock us because we not more consciously the facts of fashion and demeracy than we experience profoundly the unearthly life which proceeds from personal knowledge of our risen Lord. Such terms can have no place in the vocabulary of an apostolic Christianity. They belong to the dialect of a Christianity which has denied its Lord, and whose speech betrayeth it to an accusing world what time it seeks to warm itself by the fires of a discredited ecclesiasticism.

Wesley and his contemporaries restored Christian fellowship by restoring Christian experience. There is no other way to accomplish that great result. We can not have the communion of saints unless we have the saints; and when we have the saints we can not fail to have their communion one with another. The aspirations, struggles, and triumphs of spiritual life bind human souls together as nothing else can. Does the natural birth bind men together in the tender bonds of brotherly love? Much more does the new birth bind them together. Do bonds of comradeship spring up between soldiers who have engaged together in the same campaigns, sharing the hardships of the camp, the weariness of the march, and the perils of the battle? Much more does the Christian warfare unite the soldiers of Christ in indissoluble fellowship.

The decay of Christian fellowship in our day is more a symptom than a disease. It points to a deadly malady at the very center of the Church's life. It shows heart disease. The circulation is bad, because of fatty degeneration of the affections. The members are chilled because there are concretions formed about the cardiac valves.—(From the Atlanta Journal.)

CONFIRMATORY EVIDENCE.

By C. H. Wetherbe.

Inasmuch as skepticism abounds among many of the professed friends of Christianity, in relation to the Bible, and also concerning Christ's person and ministry, it is well to present anew certain facts which afford confirmatory evidence of the truthfulness of all that the Bible affirms of Christ. I may render valuable service to some of my readers by quoting sentences from an article by that sound Bible expositor, Dr. A. T. Plerson, as follows:

"Let us remember that Malachi lived, say in the fourth century before Christ, and that with him the Old Testament canon was complete; that the entire Old Testament Scriptures were compiled, and in the hands of the Jews at least one hundred years before Jesus Christ was born in Bethlehem of Judea, both in the Hebrew Scriptures and in the Septuagint Greek version. That gap of four hundred years between Malachi and Matthew was a providential disconnection of Old Testament and New Testament writers, in order to make collusion or conspiracy impossible, and the charge of a combination, in order to fraud, equally impossible. Here is a fact that stands like a huge mountain in a landscape, a colossal fact of tremendous weight in the estimate of the claims of the Bible upon our belief, and of Christ upon our faith and obedience. At least one hundred years before Matthew took up his stylus to write the first of the gospels, the Jews had all these Old Testament prophecies in their possession, and were familiar with their contents."

These great facts give evidence of the truth that God's guiding hand was upon the writers of the Old Testament, that he so ordered the closing of its composition and compilation as to prevent any fraud in connection with it. That part of the Bible was designed by God to remain four hundred years before the New Testament should be made, and yet the two parts fit into each other perfectly.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

CHAPTER XIV.

In November, 1882, my presiding elder, J. A. B. Jones, late of our Conference, asked me where I wanted to go. I said, "To Providence Circuit."

Conference met in Crystal Springs, December 13. I was put in charge of Providence Circuit. I sold my place and stock, tore up the bridges behind me and left Holmesville late in December. By the first of January we were comfortably fixed in a nice new parsonage, the first we had ever lived in. I had been in the Conference twenty-five years before we lived in a home provided by the Church. Why? Because we had been in charge of works too poor, or too indifferent, to provide homes for preachers. Most of the charges I served those years have nice homes for preachers now. Columbia, Tylertown, Magnolia, Adams and Liberty have homes for the preacher. I found Providence Circuit to be a pleasant work. Better people I have seldom, if ever, served. I served the work three years.

It was in April, 1883, I was bruised and mangled in one of the worst tornadoes that ever passed over that country. It was on Sunday, the 22d day of April, just one year before, to a day, Monticello, of Lawrence County, was blown away. Our second quarterly meeting was on hand. My presiding elder, J. A. B. Jones, was with us. The wind had been blowing hard from the southwest forty-eight hours or more. We spent Saturday night in the home of Hon. J. H. Catchings, near Georgetown. Sunday morning was dark and gloomy. Clouds were running low and fast. I said to Brother Jones, "We are going to have a storm." At 11 o'clock we were at the church. The congregation was small, owing to the threatening weather. Sermon over; two joined the Church, last prayer, then benediction. I looked at Brother Jones and said, "We are going to have a storm." "Maybe not," he said. I walked out of the church; saw the clouds were running low and fast, heard the storm approaching. Brother J. H. Catchings cried out, "Tell everybody to stay in the house, there is a storm coming." I walked back into the house, repeated what Brother Catchings had said, then walked to the west end of the house, where stood my presiding elder and wife looking at a man running, with his eye seemingly fixed on some object. We saw him fall down, and throw his arms around a stump. Just then the storm struck the church. A large tree fell and struck the east end of the church, another struck the south side. Of all the loud screaming on the part of the women and children I ever heard, I heard it then. We men, some of us at least, were doing some earnest praying. I saw the house was going to pieces and fall. No chance to dodge; no place to hide. The idea struck me that the safest plan would be to get down flat on the floor. I remember getting on my knees and hands, but knew no more for quite a while. How long I lay in an unconscious state I do not know—perhaps not over five or ten minutes. When I came to myself I was lying flat on the floor with a heavy weight on top of me. A very heavy weight was on my head. Fortunately while I was lying on my stomach, my face was turned to one side—the right side resting on a bench that had been mashed to the floor; the left side had, it seemed to me, a thousand-pound weight on it. Everything was still. I just could breathe a little.

After awhile I heard voices, like people talking in an excited tone. I tried to call for help, but could only say, "Help." After the third call, Whitt Steel said, "We will get to you as quick as we can." I said no more, but did some loud "groaning" to let them know I was still alive. After twenty or thirty minutes I was relieved, the weight being lifted off my head. I at once discovered that my right arm was broken and doubled. It was a bad break. Only one, a Mr. Savage, was killed. Ten or twelve were hurt. Sister Steel of Crystal Springs and myself were the only ones seriously hurt; but not the only ones frightened nearly to death. In fact, I think we two were less frightened than any others. I was taken to the home of Hon. J. H. Catchings, where I was well cared for till I was able, three weeks later, to be taken to my home at Tryon, fifteen miles away. For months afterwards I never saw a deep ditch, or washout, without thinking what a good place to get into in time of storm. Storms and stormpits, or "tornado holes," were about all you could hear talked about for weeks afterwards. I often found myself singing a song I frequently heard mother sing when I was a boy, viz., "To the land I am bound where no more stormy clouds arise."

I served Providence Circuit three years, got on well with the people; made good reports at Conference. The work paid my predecessor $425. It paid me $600 each year I was there. We had nine in our family, and it required close economy to live on, $600.

Late in the year, 1885, we had measles in our home, a severe type. Conference met in Meridian that year; Bishop McTyre presided. Brother T. B. Holloman was my roommate during Conference. To my certain knowledge each one of my stewards had requested my presiding elder to let me remain on the work; yet I felt just like we were going to be moved. If you want to see a poor fellow in great suspense, just watch a preacher who expects to be moved, but has no idea where he is going to land. Well, I felt a little that way. I said to my good wife when I started to Conference, "You need not be surprised if we are sent to Lauderdale." Why I said it I do not know. For some weeks I had been thinking of, and preaching from the text, "Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath" (James 1, 19).

Well, just as I expected, we were moved. My name was read out in connection with Lauderdale Circuit, nearly two hundred miles from Tryon, where we lived. After the benediction, I went to the Bishop and said, "Bishop, I don't see how I can move to Lauderdale." He looked at me with an eye of pity, and said, "Brother, do the very best you can." I knew that meant go. And I did. Will tell you about it in my next.

SHE GAVE HERSELF.

One of the missionaries at the Nashville Students' Volunteer Convention related the following pathetic incident of devotion to the Lord:

"Over on the west coast of Africa somebody carried the gospel to a young savage girl sixteen years of age, and she came into the house of God on Christmas day to bring her offering, for they have a very beautiful custom of giving their best gifts to Christ on Christmas. They are poor, with a poverty which you and I know nothing about. Most of them could not bring anything save a handful of vegetables, but this girl, just saved out of heathenism, brought a silver coin worth eighty-five cents, and handed that to the missionary as her gift to Christ. He was so astonished at the magnitude of it, that he thought that surely the girl must have stolen this money, and for a moment he was about to refuse to accept it, but thought he had better take it, to save confusion.

"At the conclusion of the service, he called her aside, and asked her where she got that money, for it was really a fortune for one in her condition. She explained to him very simply, that in order to give to Christ an offering which satisfied her own heart, she had gone to a neighboring planter, and bound herself out to him as a slave for the rest of her life for this eighty-five cents, and had brought the whole financial equivalent of her life of pledged service, and laid it down in a single gift at the feet of her Lord."—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure.

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McClosky, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec.-Treas.
Geo. A. Hero.

Phone Main.

ROOMS and BOARD

634 and 636 SOUTH STREET

(Lafayette Square)

Corner St. Charles St.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Unlimited Meals.

Alvin Porter, Mgr.

Church News

A handsome marble bust of Chancellor Garland has been received by Vanderbilt University to take the place of the one destroyed by fire five years ago.

The cost of living has so advanced in Brazil that the salaries of missionaries has been increased from $750 to $900 by the Women's Board of Foreign Missions of the M. E. Church, South.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society now has a membership of 64,423, and raised last year $264,562. The figures show a gain in numbers of 13,793, and in the amount of money contributed of $28,562.

Dr. J. D. Simpson, of the North Alabama Conference, has been chosen president of Birmingham College in place of Bishop James H. McCoy. He is said to be admirably qualified for the responsible position.

Bishop A. W. Wilson has been appointed fraternal delegate from the M. E. Church, South, to the British and Irish Wesleyan Conference. That the brethren across the seas will hear a vigorous message, needs not to be said.

Dr. John R. Nelson, of Texas, who for the past four years has been secretary of the Home Department of the General Board of Missions, will return to the pastorate. Resolutions were adopted by the Board of Missions highly commendatory of his work.

The commencement exercises of Emory College, at Oxford, Ga., have been in full blast this week. The sermons were preached by Bishop W. A. Candler and Dr. J. E. Wray, and the annual address was delivered by Dr. H. M. Snyder, president of Wofford College.

A press report from Oxford, Ga., June 4th, says that Dr. James E. Dickey, president of Emory College, to-day announced his decision to remain at the head of the college. At the Asheville Conference he was elected secretary of the General Education Board of the Church.

The commencement sermon of the Southern University, at Greensboro, Ala., was preached last Sunday by Bishop Collins Denny, and the address before the Literary Societies was delivered on Tuesday by the Hon. J. N. Powers, the Mississippi State Superintendent of Education.

The following negro schools are aided by our General Board of Education: Lane College, Jackson, Tenn.; Miles Memorial College, Birmingham, Ala.; Mississippi Theological and Industrial College, Holly Springs, Miss.; Paine College, Augusta, Ga., and Phillips University, Tyler, Tex.

Dr. Noah K. Davis, who died recently at his home at Charlottesville, Va., was for thirty-three years professor of moral philosophy in the University of Virginia. He was a great teacher and an author of distinction. He was the author of two books in the course of study of the M. E. Church, South.

Dr. Alexander Sutherland, the great Canadian Missionary Secretary who is so well and favorably known to the Methodists of the South, has for some time been seriously ill. The Christian Guardian, of Toronto, of the 25th ult., reported his condition as slightly improved, but still such as to give great anxiety to his friends.

Dr. R. S. McArthur recently celebrated the fortieth anniversary of his pastorate of a downtown church in New York City. The sermon which he preached on that occasion, recorded the building of a church edifice costing $525,000, the reception of 5,000 members into the congregation, and the raising for church and mission work of over $2,000,000. The church now has, free from encumbrance, a property worth $1,000,000, and an endowment at interest of $50,000. Dr. McArthur has long been regarded as one of the ablest and most versatile of American preachers.

GRENADA COLLEGE.

With a brilliant commencement Grenada College has just closed the most successful session in all its history.

The commencement sermon by the Rev. Geo. B. Winton, D. D., was scholarly, profound, simple, spiritual, sound. The evening sermon by our own Bro. Countiss was a worthy companion piece for the great discourse of the morning hour.

In keeping with these two sermons was the literary address by Rev. W. L. Duren. That address marks Bro. Duren as one of the scholarly, progressive and forceful young men of Methodism.

All the work of the entire session was very satisfactory. The trustees are proud of our student body and grateful to our excellent faculty. The greatest single new feature of last session was the department of Domestic Science, which more than demonstrated the wisdom of its establishment.

The financial condition was never so satisfactory. By a unanimous vote and with great enthusiasm, the trustees adopted this paper:

"Mr. W. L. Clifton took charge of Grenada College eight years ago. The school was housed in one building, scantily furnished, and was poorly equipped. He leaves two buildings comfortably furnished and the school well equipped. When he took charge the school was thoroughly demoralized and completely disorganized and was rapidly disintegrating. Out of that chaotic condition he made a school of high and thorough scholastic standing, organized for aggressive and progressive work.

"These facts are more eloquent, and are more convincing of his ability and capacity than any words we could employ.

"An intimate acquaintanceship and close companionship for eight years have enabled us to know Mr. Clifton, and without hesitation or reservation we commend him in all respects.

"He is an accurate scholar, a gifted instructor, a superior business man, and a Christian of unblemished character.

"Mrs. Clifton is entitled to the same high commendation that we give to Mr. Clifton, and it is a pleasure so to commend her. Together they have our profound admiration, sincere esteem and affectionate regard. We part from them with profound regret."

The Rev. J. R. Countiss takes charge under the most favoring conditions, and no doubt exists that he will carry forward Grenada College to still greater success. Every token indicates that every room will be engaged before the first of September.

Thrice Mr. Clifton was offered the presidency of a fine school, and thrice he declined it, because to have accepted would have made it a competitor for the patronage of Grenada College. He worked with greater zeal and larger success to retain pupils for Brother Countiss than he ever did for himself.

The enthusiastic approval which the election of Brother Countiss continues to call forth, cheers the trustees and guarantees the future success of Grenada College.

J. R. BINGHAM,
Chairman Board Trustees.

MERIDIAN COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

Former students who attended commencement tell us this was the best Meridian College ever had.

Rev. C. F. Wimberly, formerly office editor of Pentecostal Herald, now pastor of a large church in Louisville, Ky., preached the commencement sermon for us, which was one of great power and helpfulness. It was a great sermon indited by the Holy Ghost.

The annual college praise service Sunday morning and Pentecostal services each afternoon were in charge of the college pastor, Rev. Joseph H. Smith, and it goes without saying that each service was a feast of good things for the soul, and helped to prepare the young people for their summer's work for the Master. The Pentecostal services are an important part of commencement. Visitors and patrons from a distance, as well as students and teachers, are greatly refreshed and benefited by these services each afternoon of commencement.

Brother Wimberly gave a fine address at the Missionary Anniversary on Sunday night.

On Saturday, Monday and Tuesday nights the elocution, piano, voice and violin departments gave a fine program, thus exemplifying the high grade of work done in these departments of both colleges.

The two military drills by the young men and young ladies were inspiring spectacles, a wonderful sight, with flying flags, and cadets' military band, displaying what is being done to develop the body, make it healthful, and graceful, and encouraging out of door life, teaching punctuality and strict discipline.

The oratorical contest by the young men of the male college for the ready speaker's medal, was interesting and exciting.

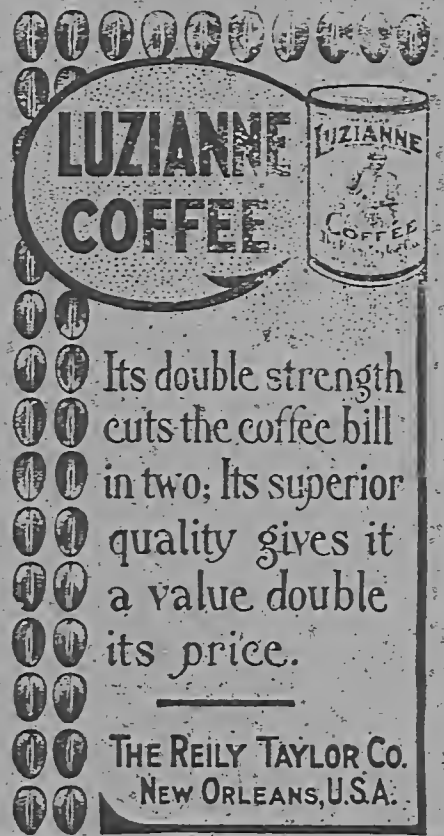

One of the new features of commencement was an organ recital on the large, new pipe organ, which the college has recently installed. The recital was given by Prof. J. E. W. Lord, of London, England, a great musician, composer, performer and teacher, who is to teach pipe organ in the college next year. This is quite an addition to the already great Conservatory of Music connected with these colleges.

Arrangements are being made to put in thirty or more new pianos in exchange for old ones. This, with the new director of piano, who is a famous musician, together with twelve or fifteen music teachers, will put this conservatory in the front ranks of Southern conservatories of music.

The new art teacher bids fair to be the best the college has ever had, and will doubtless put this department on the high plane of the Conservatory of Music.

The expression department, with three teachers in the two colleges, is already at high-water mark and is furnishing fine teachers in different sections, North and South.

The department of household economics came to the front this year with three graduates, who are

LUZIANNE COFFEE

Its double strength cuts the coffee bill in two; its superior quality gives it a value double its price.

THE REILY TAYLOR CO.
NEW ORLEANS, U.S.A.

well up in scientific cooking and home keeping. There were about sixty or seventy-five graduates in all branches, including bookkeeping, stenography, shorthand, dressmaking, music, expression and several literary degrees.

But of all is, that most of them go out as devout Christians, and will, we trust, be instrumental in spreading a full gospel wherever they may be in their various walks of life.

Rev. Joseph H. Smith delivered a masterful address to the graduating class, setting forth the standard which these colleges are holding up to their students.

The year has been a blessed one. Not a death and not a serious case of sickness in their large number of students this session. This is the finest student body the colleges have ever had. Forty-four young preachers and a large band studying for the mission work is encouraging for the Master's cause. Many others are to be Christian teachers, lawyers, merchants and homekeepers.

The colleges have done more to develop out-of-door life on the sixty-acre campus than ever before. A beautiful lake with boats has been made, which the students enjoy. They also enjoy fishing on the campus from another lake stocked with fish from Washington three years ago. The innocent games, such as tennis, basket ball and a long row of swings erected this year add greatly to the charms of a student's life. Occasional receptions under the supervision and guidance of godly teachers, has a wholesome effect. Thus, we get enough of social life and at the same time avoid the evils of the too close contact of co-education.

A dormitory for small children with a matron in charge, is being arranged for next session, where children of means who happen to be without a mother or with an invalid mother, can be cared for in a home-like way in our primary department under the best Christian influence.

J. W. BEESON

President Meridian Woman's College.

EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

To the Methodist Young People of the Shreveport District, Louisiana Conference:

We are planning for the greatest meeting of young people ever held in the Shreveport District on Sunday and Monday, June 12 and 13, 1910, at Grand Cane. We extend a cordial invitation to the pastors, Christian workers and others to come.

An excellent program has been arranged. We ask your prayers and co-operation in making this Annual District Epworth League Conference a great blessing to the young life of our Church.

Whether you have a League or not we urge all young people to come that they may be better equipped for the work of the Master.

Kindly give this as much publicity as possible in your community and send the names of any who may come to Mrs. W. S. Phillips, Grand Cane.

Fraternally,
W. F. HENDERSON,
President District League.

SPEARING & CO.,
(Established 1815)

SAIL MAKERS

AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPAULINS and TENTS.
CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOU LAS STREETS
Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

Secular News and Comment

It is estimated that it will take $100,000,000 a year to pay the old-age pensions in the republic of France. Every laborer over 65 years old will receive $80 annually.

China is having a world's fair. It opened in the city of Nanking on June 1, and will continue six months. It is said that the exhibitions are quite creditable.

As a memorial of his "lasting affection" for his Alma Mater, the graduate school of Princeton University will receive $10,000,000 by the will of the late Isaac C. Wiman, of Salem, Mass.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, authoress of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," recently celebrated her 91st birthday. She is said to be remarkably preserved for one of her years, both in body and mind.

The boll weevil is reported in large numbers in the country surrounding Baton Rouge. Dr. W. D. Hunter, of the United States Entomological Bureau, predicts that within fifteen years the entire cotton belt will be infested by these pests.

A vote to determine whether the importation of intoxicants to the Hawaiian Islands shall be stopped, will be taken July 26th. This election has been ordered by Congress to ascertain the will of the people, and a citizens' committee has been appointed to supervise the referendum campaign.

Mississippi will hold a State immigration meeting at Jackson on June 21 and 22. The various towns and counties are appointing delegates, and it is predicted that the attendance will not be less than 1,500. It is expected that much good will result to the Commonwealth from this great gathering.

The value of the diamonds, pearls and other precious stones imported to the United States during the year ending June 1, is estimated at $14,000,000, the largest in the history of the nation. 1906 came next with importations aggregating $11,100,000. This is construed as an indication of unusual prosperity.

Considerable solicitude is felt for the health of the German Kaiser, who is reported to be suffering from a cancerous affection. He has lately imposed upon his son, the Crown Prince, the duty of signing the State documents of the Empire. The condition of the Emperor's right hand is said to have led to this action.

An International Ornithological Congress assembled in Berlin on May 30th. The object of the meeting was to devise ways and means to stop the wholesale slaughter of innocent and useful birds; or as a writer has expressed it in the language of the day, "bird conservation." This is a most laudable and timely undertaking.

The measure to submit a constitutional amendment to the States making April 30th the day for inaugurating the President and Vice President of the United States, instead of March the 4th, was defeated in Congress by one vote. There seems to be a widespread sentiment in favor of changing the present date.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie thinks that of all the nations of the world, the United States is the best prepared for war and would prove the most invincible in a military struggle. He estimated our available citizen soldiery at 16,000,000. War in these modern times is largely a matter of finance, and the United States is far and away the richest nation on the globe.

The present session of Congress has established a Bureau of Mines and Mining, and appropriated $488,000 for its maintenance. Of this sum, $310,000 is for investigation as to the causes of mine explosions and the discovery of methods of preventing them. The other $100,000 is for analyzing coal, lignites and other minerals. This impresses us as timely and wholesome legislation.

Owing to unusual but necessary expenditures and a failure to rent valuable properties, Tulane University finds itself somewhat pressed financially. In a brilliant article published in the city papers, Prof. William Benjamin Smith has appealed to the people of New Orleans to rally to the support of the institution. This they should be swift to do. The schools of a municipality are among its best assets.

Columbia University has recently awarded the A. B. degree with honors to a blind student, Benjamin Berenstein. He is the second blind man to take a degree at that great institution. He supported himself while taking his course by reading proof with his fingers for a magazine for the blind. He will now take up the study of law at the same university and equip himself for the practice of his chosen profession.

The death of Mr. Page M. Baker, the managing editor of The Times-Democrat, has caused expressions of regret in all parts of the country, particularly in the South. Though born in Pensacola, Fla., he had been a citizen of New Orleans for over a half century and had been connected with The Times-Democrat for twenty-one years. He was a gallant Confederate soldier and a man of large public spirit. His age was seventy.

The Hon. Charles Scott has issued from Rosedale for a committee, of which he is a member, a ringing and eloquent appeal for funds to erect in Mississippi a memorial to the women of the Confederacy. It is the purpose of those who have this work in charge to erect such a monument in every Southern State. The design accepted for the memorials was conceived by Miss Belle Kinney, a brilliant young artist of Nashville, Tenn. The beautifully worded address of Mr. Scott in behalf of a cause so meritorious should meet with a prompt and generous response.

The little, old-fashioned house near Hunting, Long Island, where Walt Whitman was born and spent most of his life, was recently sold at auction, and was bought by a fellowship composed of admirers of the poet, who will take steps to preserve it. Near this house there has stood for several years a marble monument erected by the Colonial Dames and Daughters of the Revolution, which bears the following inscription: "To mark the birthplace of Walt Whitman, the good gray poet; born May 31, 1819." Many European critics give Whitman the first place among America's sons of song.

The Income Tax Amendment to the Federal Constitution is meeting with vigorous opposition in some quarters. It has been ratified by the Legislatures of Alabama, Illinois, Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi, South Carolina and Oklahoma. It has been rejected by those of Georgia, Virginia, Massachusetts and New York. The Outlook expresses the hope that it will fail to carry in the requisite number of States and makes a spirited argument against it. Our view is that the rich should be made to bear a more proportionate share of the burdens of government, and we are inclined to view the pending measure with favor. Objections may be urged against any conceivable form of taxation, which is a necessary evil. We do not think an income tax is more open to criticism than many other methods of levying tribute to obtain public revenue.

WILLIAM LITTLETON CLARKE HUNNICUTT.

An Appreciation.

The tidings of the death of Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt brought sincere sadness to our home.

Among the first preachers in my memory as a child is this man of God, who was a frequent visitor to my father's home in Jefferson County during times when he was presiding elder on the Vicksburg and Natchez Districts. Perhaps I was the more impressed with him, in that he took such pains to teach the children, both in the home and in the congregation. We need no better illustration of what the pastor can be to the children and what lasting impressions he can make than that furnished by the life of this man whose profound scholarship never unfitted him for an efficient ministry to the childhood of the Church.

On the occasion of the death of the Rev. John A. B. Jones during the month of January, this year, we had the pleasure of having this delightful friend of other years in our Magnolia home for several days, and tender memories came surging back to my heart as he taught my little children out of the Word of God. I don't think they will ever forget him. They speak regretfully now every few days of his death.

Summoned here to the funeral of his old comrade and friend, Brother Jones, he delivered a most tender tribute to his memory, and here in my library, aided by the biographical sketches of our preachers, he wrote the obituary of Brother Jones that appeared some weeks later in the New Orleans Advocate. He little thought that so soon his brethren would be performing for him like service; for he seemed well for one of his age, and yet no one I know of required a shorter warning of his end. He was ready for the Master's final call, just as he had been ready to do his bidding all these years.

At our last Conference Brother Hunnicutt manifested a large interest in the affairs of the American Bible Society, and, besides a handsome gift to that cause, he agreed, without compensation, to represent that cause to the extent of his strength in our Conference. He was anxious that the Bible Society should be able to meet the munificent offer of Mrs. Russell Sage.

Brother Hunnicutt remained over Sunday and preached, to the delight of our congregation, on that subject and took a collection. The same day he occupied the pulpit at Centenary, McComb, at the evening hour representing the same cause.

While here Dr. Hunnicutt gave me for the biographical records of the Mississippi Conference a complete outline of his life, which may be of use to the one who prepares his obituary.

It seemed to me he dwelt with peculiar pride on his early life as a teacher at Sharon, where, as president of Madison College, he had as one of his assistants Charles B. Galloway, who had just graduated from the University of Mississippi. I quote one paragraph from his sketch:

"The degree of D. D. was conferred on me by Hwassee College in 1870, or later. I was one of the first trustees of Vanderbilt University. I was a member of the General Conference more than once and of the committee to revise the Hymn Book, the one previous to the joint hymnal. I have had all of this world's goods I needed or desired, and honors more, I fear, than I have merited. I have tried to do my duty, and am grateful to God and my brethren for the good I have received."

Lacking a few weeks of being seventy-six years of age, he had given all of his life to God and had been a benediction to many.

I am grateful to have known him, and his very memory shall be a blessing.

H. B. WATKINS.

Magnolia, Miss., May 26, 1910.

NEW ORLEANS NOTES.

(Reported for the Advocate.)

Rev. John A. Rice, D.D., LL.D., pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, is "on the wing" making college addresses and preaching baccalaureate sermons. His schedule for the next ten days is as follows: Sunday, June 5, baccalaureate sermon at Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C.; Tuesday, June 7, literary address at Emory and Henry College, Emory, Va.; Wednesday, June 8, literary address to graduating class at Methodist Training School for Christian Workers, at Nashville, Tenn.; Sunday, June 12, baccalaureate sermon at the University of Texas, at Austin, Tex.; June 14-17, he delivers six lectures before the Missouri Summer School of Theology at Fayette, Mo.; and, finally, he finishes his whirlwind campaign at Seabrook, Tex., with a course of lectures before the Southwestern Students' Conference.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, B. D., preached the baccalaureate and Y. W. C. A. sermons for Mansfield College on Sunday, June 5. We hear good reports of his work while there. Brother Holmes is one of our most popular and useful young men.

Rev. Franklin N. Parker, D. D., presiding elder of New Orleans District, will preach at the Rayne Memorial Church on Sunday, June 12. Dr. Parker is one of our most profound and spiritual preachers.

The New Orleans Union Epworth League meets at First Church on Monday night, June 14. Brother T. L. McNight, the new president, is putting more life and enthusiasm into the league chapters. He suggests the Union appoint a young man or woman to visit the various league chapters at their devotional and other meetings and report to the Union once a month. Another feature will be the counting of "roses" at each meeting of the Union. This encourages larger attendance.

Rev. A. Innian Townsley preaches the memorial sermon at the annual meeting of the Crescent City Division of Railway Conductors No. 106 on Sunday, June 12. He also makes the address at the dedication of the Children's Playground at the St. Roch Park, on June 16.

SEASHORE COTTAGE FOR SALE.

Write
H. R. Singleton,
Alexandria, La.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location; price, including furniture, only $400. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

REMOVAL SALE.

We will move into our new, big building on Baronne Street, next to Hotel Denechaud.

JULY 1st.

We are offering now BIG BARGAINS in CHINA-WARE, GLASSWARE, KITCHEN-WARE, and the Famous LEONARD REFRIGERATORS.

Agents for Famous Glenwood Ranges—

GAUCHE-CONNOR CO.,

Successors to John Gauche Sons.

614 CANAL ST., Near Camp.

MISSION WORK IN HAWAII.

(An address delivered at a missionary banquet in Greenwood, Miss., by Congressman B. G. Humphries, of the Third Mississippi District.)

Kipling says:

"East is east and west is west
And never the twain shall meet."

but in the Territory of Hawaii the course of human events has refused to follow the poet's prophecy. There east has met west, and together they are working out the problems of a twentieth-century civilization, twentieth century in all its elements, political, social, religious. A Territory of the United States, and whether or not it be destined some day to place its star upon the flag, it is to-day the brightest jewel in Columbia's diadem. No American I believe can ever visit those islands without feeling an intense satisfaction that his flag floats over them. Honolulu is the beauty-spot of this earth and the gentle hospitality of its people is in keeping and full fellowship with its genial climate and its rainbow skies. It is as thoroughly American in sentiment as Greenwood, but there is nevertheless a faint though unmistakable touch of the east, an odor of the Orient which permeates their whole social atmosphere. Not that east which lies

"—some 'eres east of Suez where the best is like the worst.

And there aren't no ten commandments, and a man can raise a thirst."

By no means that. I believe the standards of life are as high there as elsewhere, but the flavor of the cherry blossom has nevertheless followed the kimono and the songs of the kanaka will tempt color to cheeks which might otherwise be sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought.

"This is Hawaii to-day: a land where every prospect pleases and not even man is vile, but I am not to talk of that. I understand that I was invited here to tell of the work of the missionaries as it impressed me in the very short while which I spent in that Territory during the past summer.

"These islands were peopled by the Polynesian race which inhabits all the islands of the Pacific. They were naked savages, though not perhaps cannibals. Each island was a separate kingdom, and on the large island of Hawaii, from which the Territory takes its name, there were several kings. In 1775 Captain Cook discovered the islands and a few years later Vancouver landed there. There was a young chief on the island of Hawaii who had the wisdom to see that these strangers were of a civilization far beyond his own and he determined to make use of it. He first made the conquest of his own island and brought all the petty kings there beneath his rule. He then enlisted the services of a few white men who had been sailors on some of the wandering vessels; purchased some cannon and built ships to carry them and then equipped an army of invasion, and set out upon the ambitious enterprise of subduing the Archipelago. With his superior equipment, and with his superior genius also, for though a savage he was a man of intellectual force as well as physical prowess, he soon brought all the islands under his dominion and founded the monarchy, which existed down to the overthrow of Queen Liliuokalani in 1892. This king who is to the kanaka what Washington is to us, is known in their history as Kamehameha the Great, and his name and his statues can be found in every part of every island.

"He founded a strong government and administered it with an iron hand for a quarter of a century and his dynasty held undisputed sway for nearly a hundred years. Kamehameha was a savage and an idol worshiper, but Vancouver had not only brought cattle and horses, he had told the people of the true religion and had counseled the king against the pernicious tahu. This was the means whereby the most cruel tyrannies were practiced. Acting by authority of his wooden gods a tabu would be pronounced to suit the fancy of the king. If fish were tahu then no one save the king could eat fish for fear of the wrath to come. Women and men could never eat together because of a perpetual tabu. The family circle would be invaded and rights the most sacred would be violated all under the authority of tahu.

"In the course of time a number of young natives were brought to Boston and educated and returned to the islands to tell the story of the Cross. This was the first work of the American Missionary Society in the islands, and it bore fruit rapidly. So rapidly, in fact, that when Kamehameha died faith in his idols and idolatrous priests had been so undermined that the whole system of tabu crumbled and disappeared within a year.

"In 1820 the missionaries came. They sailed from Boston and were seven in number—two ministers and five laymen. They at once began teaching, and in 1824, four years after their arrival, there were two thousand natives who could read and write. Before this army of light the mists and the myths of darkness disappeared and the faith of Calvary spread with almost incredible speed.

"How much more difficult would have been the task of the missionaries had these islands remained each under the rule of its own petty prince can scarcely be reckoned. Kamehameha was endowed as no other savage chief had been endowed with that foreknowledge which recognized the good to come with the white man's civilization. Coming upon the stage of human interests at the very hour when the consolidation of the empire would most simplify the work of the missionary, he was almost another voice crying out in the wilderness, and he surely made the paths both easier and straight. Yet on his deathbed he called his successor to him and counseled him to hold fast to the faith of their pagan fathers. Once more it was manifest that

"There's a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough hew them how we may."

In all ages of the world, men, when put to the test, have proved that they are indeed made in the image of God. Fear of death and dread of death are born in the heart of man when he is born, and yet, in all the years, men have sacrificed life, faced death, and even courted death, rather than surrender their convictions of right. And so it came to pass in Hawaii, Kapiolani, a daughter of a chief, reared in the faith of her pagan fathers, was taught to read by the missionaries and through them also she learned of Israel and the prophets of Israel. She renounced her pagan faith and denounced the false gods under whose sanction and in whose names the people were so sorely persecuted. One of the most popular legends in their mythology was the story of Pele, the patron goddess of the Volcano Kilauea. This volcano is one of the scenic wonders of the world. The trade winds blow steadily from the north-east so that you may stand on the very edge of its active crater upon its windward side and watch the boiling cauldron at close range. The molten lake is perhaps a thousand feet across and its fiery surface arises from eight hundred feet to within two hundred feet of the top of its lava banks. It boils and sputters and lashes its sides in waves of red and melted rock, dashing into a thousand drops and even into spray, just as the breakers do upon the sea shore. It is the most magnificent, the most awe-inspiring, as it is the most frightful spectacle I have ever witnessed here, and I hope most earnestly never to witness its like hereafter. This young princess, Kapiolani, over the protest of her father and in violation of the tabu of the gods, descended five hundred feet to the black ledge inside the crater and there she defied the terrible Pele, ate the sacred berries and hurled rocks into the crater calling upon the God of Israel the while as did the prophets of old.

"Jehovah is my God. He kindled these fires. I fear not Pele. If I perish by her anger then you may fear Pele but if I trust in Jehovah and he preserves me when breaking her tahu then you must fear and serve him alone."

"These were her words to the astonished and terrified natives who stood transfixed throughout the ordeal. Her name is enshrined in the literature of her people and I believe they are justified in their claim that this is one of the greatest acts of moral courage ever performed."

"With such an impetus to their cause the missionaries succeeded beyond their hopes and within a few years the temples of the pagan gods had been converted into churches for Christian worship, and Pele and the kindred deities took their places in the folklore of the people as did Woden and Athene who had gone that way before them on the other side of the world.

"What they spoke was nothing more than an unorderd dialect of Polynesia and the missionaries began at once to reduce it to a written language. Having accomplished this they induced the king to require the chiefs and principal personages throughout the kingdom to learn to read and write and then to teach their tenants. In a few years schools were established in every part of the kingdom and within twenty years from this good beginning education was made compulsory. How many of you may be surprised by that statement I can only conjecture, but it was to me almost unbelievable. I could not associate the South Sea savage and the idea of compulsory education. So well did these plous emissaries do their work, so firm did they lay their foundations that in 1841 the legislature passed a law forbidding any person, male or female, to marry who could not read and write. I cannot say which fact surprised me most, that the law was passed, or that there was a legislature to pass any law.

"Inspired by their successes they continued efforts to elevate and Christianize these people, and with the active co-operation of the various kings and queens of the Kamehameha dynasty they at last founded the Lahainaluna College on the island of Maui and later, the Punahou School or Oahu College at Honolulu. Incredible as it may seem, it is none the less true that in the early days of California, before it became a State and before the great transcontinental railroads brought it in touch with our eastern seminaries, our own people out there used to send their children to these Hawaiian colleges to be educated.

"I am not familiar with the work of our missionaries in other lands. This is the only visit I ever made to a field of their activities, but surely here their work was crowned with success. Under the providence of God these islands have at last come under the Stars and Stripes.

The missionary no longer has to risk his life, endure privation and suffer the hardships which his fathers knew; but the field is still ripe for the reaper. Out of a population of 170,000 souls, 95,000 are Orientals: Buddhists, Mohammedans and followers of Confucius. Missions are maintained throughout the islands, and the school teacher is bearing the torch and leading the feet of the children into the ways of light. I witnessed many ceremonies in their schools, all having one common object. One in particular impressed me. Every morning at nine o'clock all the children in every school in the Territory—Japs, Chinese, Koreans and the rest—are marched into the yard for the flag-raising. As the flag goes up they repeat in unison:

"I give my head and my heart to God and my country. One God, one language, one flag—each child pointing to the flag as the sentence is completed.

"What shall the harvest be is the question in every Hawaiian's heart as he contemplates this little army of Orientals growing into American citizens, for all who are born there are now citizens of the republic. I am neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but I believe in the years to come, if some sad fate should call them to it, that these boys, of whatever race their fathers come, will rally to the flag as American citizens have always done.

"I have of course been able to merely hint at the great work done by the missionaries. That they have done and are still doing even greater work in those lands which open broader fields, I am prepared to believe. We sometimes hear men deride this branch of Christian service and withhold their contributions because they believe it a fruitless undertaking. The divine command was to go into all lands and only in obedience is there wisdom. For those who protest I have no criticism, because I was one of them before I had the sensible and true avowal of mine own eyes, but with the lights now before me I am inclined to believe that it was for those at home and not the benighted heathen that it was written 'The times of their ignorance God winked at'.

DISAPPOINTING.

By Rev. A. H. Williams.

A few days since I was almost prepared to say, "The greatest General Conference ever," but now since the Church name has been "tampered with," and the great Southern section of our country has been almost "slapped in the face" by this proposed change—to please a few Western people and Northern critics who love us not—I am prepared to agree that "great men are not always wise," and that when the best is said it still remains true that "we are all poor mortals." The hope is in the safe and sane conferences to make correction.

"The Methodist Episcopal Church in America" sounds good; but, after all, it is only "the Church, South," renamed.

Some several other Methodist churches do also exist in America, for which most people are thankful, and how can the "M. E., South," insist to be "the only" among so many?

It is suggested that "the Christian Church has made good" by monopolizing the name which is the patrimony of all the churches alike, but it may be said that they do not represent conversion as do the Methodists, and are called "Christians" principally by courtesy, with the private understanding that they are "Campbellites." But had they made good in fact, it is not important to imitate them.

To pose as the "American Methodist Church" demands an explanation, and when the facts are mentioned the question naturally will arise, "Why should a Church profess to be what in reality it is not?"

God has wondrously sustained the simple "M. E. Church, South." No greater people exist—and none more Christian.

When victory already is at hand, and when defeat is an unknown word in the Southern Methodist vocabulary, why should a few leaders show a disposition to retreat and to awaken again the sentiment, "Come in among us, and we will rule over you as we strove to do previous to 1844?"

God himself can not support a craft with misleading colors.

Surely the Methodist people of the Southern section do not care to be mis-named.

Mayhew, Miss.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd.
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH
LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE
736 Union Street. Phone, Main 585.

The Home Circle.

SOAR ALOFT.

By Mrs. Mildred Tate Wells.

Soar aloft. Why linger here—
Where the morning mists hang low?
Up and out from thoughts of night,
Swiftly to the plains of Light,
On the wings of Fancy go.

Soar aloft. The days are long
When the mountain top is gained—
As the lark soars toward the skies,
Starting song-waves as she flies—
Why not human souls unchained?

Soar aloft. 'Tis better far
All alone to rise and go—
Past environments that hurt,
Cares that hinder, doubts that alert,
Than to grovel here below.

Soar aloft. Bright Hope is there
Painting pictures on the skies.
What if they should fade away
Ere we reach them—as they may—
To have seen them helps us rise.

Soar aloft. A Destiny
Truly holds the threads of woof,
That must be thrown in our life,
Back and forth thro' warp of strife,
While the soul stands by aloof.

Still—yes ever—soar aloft,
Destiny will weave, 'tis true;
But the fabric grows still fairer,
As 'tis woven in the rarer
Airs of Heaven, that sweep the blue.

New Albany, Miss.

BERTIE AND QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

One warm, late summer day Bertie and Tom and Elinor were playing down in the orchard at grandma's. It was the loveliest place to play, with its low-branching trees and a feast always ready for the plucking. But things to do will somehow give out, and in one of these pauses Bertie saw Elinor's beloved Queen Alexandra sitting in quiet dignity under a tree.

Now, Elinor's mother had bought this dolly for her in London when they were abroad the year before, and of course she was named for England's queen.

When Bertie and Tom, sauntering along, spied the queen alone, Bertie was seized with an idea, as often happened.

"Let's hang her," he said. "Queens are always beheaded or hung or something."

The little mother not being in sight Tom said, "Let's! that'll be fine."

Bertie produced a good stout string from a pocket which never lacked the usual boy's assortment of things, and without even a pretense of trial Queen Alexandra was strung up on an apple-tree limb.

The deed was barely done, when the queen's mother was seen trudging down the orchard path, and the conspirators disappeared with speed.

"It's a rusty old doll, anyway," said Bertie, to quiet his conscience, as they hurried on out of hearing of the wall which was soon sure to go up. Then he added scornfully: "Girls are so silly about dolls—act like they were real people. But we'll go and take her down after Elinor's gone to the house," which she was also sure to do.

The wall certainly went up when Elinor reached the scene of the execution, for her little heart was completely outraged. Her dolly, and a queen, too, swinging from the limb of a tree! The wail reached Auntie Lou, who happened to be driving along the road by the orchard fence, and it was so woeladen that she stopped and called the little girl to the fence, and heard all about it. Auntie Lou persuaded her to slip through a conveniently loose paling and get into the carriage, so they could hunt up those boys, and have all the wrong righted.

But they didn't see the boys anywhere, for a bounding rabbit had carried them far away, and the ride she had with Auntie Lou was so nice that Elinor and she both forgot all about the poor, swinging queen. Everybody was snugly in bed before she was even thought of again, and then it was Bertie who remembered.

Somehow he had not fallen asleep at once, and soon there came swift gusts of wind and the roll of thunder, and then he thought of Queen Alexandra!

He started up in bed. Oh, oh, he must get her! But he didn't like storms, and it was so dark and so far in the orchard—it seemed then. How could he ever do it? But how Elinor did love that doll!

A little later the wind came sweeping through the house and grandma said to herself, "My! that front door must be open," so leaving her bed she went out to see, and got there just in time to take into her arms a little wet figure in pink pajamas hugging Queen Alexandra tightly to his breast.

When his teeth stopped chattering he said: "I hung Alexandra in an apple-tree this afternoon, and I had to go and get her for I couldn't let her get wet and all spoiled," and grandma folded him closer.—Lis May Mullins in S. S. Times.

THE SNAIL'S LESSON.

Freddy sat on the wall in the garden with a book in his hand, at which he was looking with a very sad face. "I'm sure I shall never learn it!" he cried, in tones of despair.

The master had given all the boys a holiday task, and Freddy Scott had let the time slip past without touching a book, until a week was left and he had his long poem to learn by heart.

Like most boys, he wished to get the prize, but did not like the labor of working for it. Rather an idle boy was master Freddy; in fact, he had got into his head that he was not as clever as other boys, and that it was not much use to try.

He was thinking that very thing now, when his eye fell upon a snail crawling up the bottom of the wall on which he sat. "Surely," thought he, "that silly thing is not going to try to get to the top at that pace." Yet slowly, as he watched it, very slowly, the snail came nearer and nearer, until at length the summit was reached; and, as if in triumph the old snail reared itself up, and waved its horns, until Freddy laughed outright.

Then the thought flashed upon him: Suppose the snail had said, what he had, "It is no use trying!" he would never have reached the top of the wall, that was certain.

"I won't be beaten by a snail!" cried he; and he set to work in downright earnest, and by the time the holidays came to an end he knew his poem by heart, and could recite it without a mistake.

Prize-day came, and the boys listened eagerly for the prize-boy's name. Freddy's surprise can hardly be imagined when he heard his own name called out, but there was no mistake about it, he had won the prize.

When Mr. Frazer, the master, handed him the handsome volume, he patted him on the head, saying kindly—

"Well done, Scott! I am very glad you have gained a prize; but how did you do it so well? Did you expect it?"

"Sir," said Freddy, looking up with beaming eyes, "it was all through the snail on the wall."

And to this day Freddy thinks the snails are very clever things indeed.—Child's Hour.

MAKING A TOILET IN BIRDDOM.

Birds think a great deal about their dress, and are careful to keep themselves tidy and in good order.

Of course, their fashions differ, because birds themselves differ, but they do not change. A robin to day dresses just as her grandmother did, and none of her neighbors would dream of calling her old-fashioned.

Neither do birds have many suits. Two a year are quite sufficient for most of them, and many are content with only one.

As a rule, the gentlemen dress more gaily than their mates, though they spend less time upon their toilets.

Just watch your canary after he has had his daily bath. See how each separate feather is cleaned, pulled and looked over; and how all the loose ones are taken out and dropped.

All this is done by the bill, for a bird's neck is so flexible that it can be turned in all directions, but the bill cannot reach the head, and so Mr. Canary uses his foot.

With it he combs his hair, first on one side, then on the other, scratching very fast as if to get all tangles out. Then he uses his hair oil, for although complexion powders are not known in the bird world, hair oil certainly is. Ladies and gentlemen alike carry it about with them. They have a little pouch or sack on the back, near the tail, for the purpose. When Madame Bird wishes to use it, she squeezes it with her beak, just as you would press a rubber bulb; then she lays the oil on her back, just above her wings, and rubs her head against it, turning her neck in all directions, until every feather in her head is straight and shining.—Selected.

SEASHORE CAMP-MEETING.

39th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING JULY 13-20.

Special Rates on the Railroads.

NO ADMISSION FEE AT THE GATES OF THE GROUNDS DURING THE CAMP MEETING.

The Seashore Camp Meeting is known over a large part of Methodism to day. Men have attended it from all parts of the Union. The religious services are under the direction of the Presiding Elders of New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences of the M. E. Church, South, and these brethren will be assisted by the best preaching talent that can be obtained.

Preaching under the Tabernacle, Grove, and Cottage Prayer Meetings, and other religious services, will be held during each day and evening, to which all persons on the ground are not only cordially invited, but are expected to attend.

Plan to come this year, and bring your unconverted friends with you. All Methodist preachers will be provided with board and lodging free of charge during Camp Meeting.

A DELIGHTFUL SUMMER HOME.

There is not in all the Southland a more delightful place to spend the summer than on the Seashore Camp Ground. There are ample accommodations and good board.

Many men and women date the beginning of their aggressive service for the Master to a few days spent on the camp grounds. There is a distinctively Christian atmosphere, and the many assemblies as well as the Camp Meeting bring together some of the brightest men and some of the most saintly characters we have. There is no compulsion about attending any of the lectures or sermons, but they are in easy reach and there is a sane and healthy tone, that tends to vigorous thinking and wholesome living.

ATTRACTIONS FOR THE SUMMER OF 1910.

The Seashore Divinity School, June 28, to July 7. The Seashore Divinity School is under the control of curators for the Louisiana, Mississippi, North Mississippi and Alabama Conference. Some of the brightest minds in these four Conferences will be among the instructors, and several brilliant men will be brought from a distance.

Annual Camp Meeting July 13-20. The Camp Meeting really gives the right to exist to the grounds, and it was for this purpose that Christian men invested their money in this property, in order that men might come away for a season from their other cares and commune with God. We hope for a revival this year.

Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, July 21 to 31. This is the successor to the former Seashore Epworth League Assembly. It has simply broadened the scope of its work. While not undertaking to do especially evangelical work, but rather to train the young people how to work, this assembly usually numbers many conversions as an immediate result of its work. Some of the gracious revivals that have blessed some of the churches have had their inception in the new motives for service given the young people in this assembly.

For full particulars, address as follows:

In regard to accommodations: R. G. Price, Biloxi, Miss.; or S. G. Meyer, 116 St. Charles St., New Orleans, La.

Christian Workers' Assembly: Rev. F. S. Parker, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.

Seashore Divinity School: Rev. H. M. Ellis, Brookhaven, Miss.

DR. TICHENOR'S ANTISEPTIC

And the life or usefulness of a valuable animal is ruined, unless Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic is applied promptly—if this is done, the wounds will not inflame and will heal promptly leaving but little scar.

Always keep a bottle in the stable.

AT ALL DRUGGISTS
25 and 50 Cents
Also in quart bottles.

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulner, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

THE VALUABLE DIFFICULT OF ACQUISITION.

Anything worth while is obtainable only at the cost of sacrifice and struggle. On the other hand, things of little value may be had almost without effort. It necessitates no cultivation to grow a crop of noxious weeds and grasses, but it takes the patient plodding of the plowman to produce snowy harvests of cotton and the pendant ears of golden grain. One needs only to walk through the fields and the beggar's lice and cockle-hurs will fasten themselves upon him; but roses have to be plucked, and often in plucking, the hand is pierced with cruel thorns. Poverty is easy of acquirement; but it takes arduous toil and the practice of economy to amass a fortune. A man needs to do nothing to be an Ignoramus, but he must burn the midnight oil to become a scholar. It requires no striving to let life run riot in wickedness and make one's self a profligate; but to attain Christian character and sainthood is a task most difficult of accomplishment. The downward way is an easy way, but the ascent of the shining path of the just is like mountain climbing. Only he who musters his strength and steadily perseveres may hope to scale the glory-crowned summit.

How beautifully J. G. Holland has expressed this truth in his "Bitter-Sweet:"

"Thus is it over all the earth!
That which we call the fairest,
And prize for its surpassing worth,
Is always rarest.

"Iron is heaped in mountain piles,
And gluts the laggard forges;
But gold-flakes hide in dim defiles
And lonely gorges.

"The snowy marble flecks the land
With beaped and rounded ledges,
But diamonds bide within the sand
Their starry edges.

"The finny armies clog the twine
That sweeps the lazy river,
But pearls come singly from the brine,
With the pale diver.

"Wide is the gate and broad the way
That open to perdition,
And countless multitudes are they
Who seek admission.

"But strait the gate, the path unkind,
That lead to life immortal,
And few the careful feet that find
The hidden portal.

"All common good has common price;
Exceeding good, exceeding;
Christ hought the keys of Paradise
By cruel bleeding;

"And every soul that wins a place
Upon its hills of pleasure,
Must give its all, and beg for grace
To fill the measure."

ENCOURAGING INFORMATION.

Of late years there has been loud lamentation over the alleged failure of the churches in our larger cities. Much has been written on the subject, and many have been disposed to take a despairing view of the situation. But information just given out by the Census Bureau at Washington, which is still engaged in compiling the religious statistics gathered in 1906, warrants a more hopeful view of religious work in our large municipalities. The figures tabulated show that between 1900 and 1906 church communicants in the leading cities of the United States increased at a rate considerably more rapid than their growth in population. And the largest gain was in those having a population of 300,000 or over.

In 1906, out of every 1,000 people in the nation 391 were church members; at the same time out of every 1,000 of our city population, the church communicants numbered 469; and out of every 1,000 in the rural sections, 363. In the six years under consideration, the cities showed a gain of 90 communicants in each 1,000 of population, and the country a gain of 51.

It may be true that the better showing made by the cities is in some measure due to immigration—to the fact that the drift of population is unmistakably toward them; but no matter how it is done, it is a cause for congratulation that the moral and religious forces are being strengthened in the great marts of commerce, where evil agencies are so active and aggressive. But we are far from thinking that the religious growth in our cities is wholly, or chiefly, due to influences operating from without. The truth is, city Christianity is the most militant type in existence. There the Salvation Army operates, the voice of the street preacher is heard, and the battle with the forces of darkness flames all along the line. With saloons, theaters, open-air concerts, and so many other things to attract the people and draw them away, the churches have to be up and doing, or shut their doors and surrender the field. Only a minister who is tremendously in earnest can hope for success under such conditions.

The great churches of early Christianity were in the centers of population: in Jerusalem, Rome, Corinth, Ephesus, Philippi, and Colosse. So, to-day the population of the world is becoming more and more urban, and it is probable that in the coming years the Church will have her largest opportunities and fiercest battles in the cities. In them she must win her proudest triumphs, or suffer her most inglorious defeats. Hence, anything which indicates that she is succeeding in these congested centers is good news and the occasion for hopefulness.

THE EDUCATION NEEDED.

Any system of education which does not have respect to the three-fold nature of man is seriously defective. If only the head is developed, the result is the making of a man who is lacking in true ideals and a proper conception of his duty to God and his fellow-beings. The cultivation of only the heart produces a fanatic—one in whom the sentimental or emotional is dominant. The training of the physical powers alone makes the athlete, the brutal sport. Only he is truly educated in whom have been harmoniously drawn out all of the potentialities of his being—who has physical strength, mental vigor, and high moral purpose in right relation.

If this be a correct conception of education, the agency which can best promote it is the Church. It has a proper appreciation of the physical and intellectual in man, and it can bring to bear upon his moral development powerful influences which belong to it alone. The great failures of life are chiefly due to moral weakness. The remedy for this is wholesome Christian instruction in the time of youth.

We have not a particle of patience with the view that denominational institutions are lacking in breadth and need to be less under Church control. On the contrary, we think the churches ought to make their influence more vigorously felt in the colleges which they maintain—ought to make the atmosphere by which they are surrounded more pronouncedly religious. And furthermore, we believe that Methodist institutions ought to exalt Methodism and aid in its upbuilding. We would not have them operated along strictly sectarian lines, but we think they should be so conducted that those attending them would at least be led to respect and have a higher regard for the Church which maintains them. We have been impressed for some years that we are too lax at this point and need to make our educational institutions a more direct and potent force in the strengthening of our denomination.

WHAT NEXT?

With a great flourish of trumpets, the advocates of a new name for the Church passed their measure at Asheville requesting the Bishops to submit the question to the Annual Conference. The new title proposed to be fastened upon us is "The Methodist Episcopal Church in America." But even sooner than we expected, difficulties are beginning to appear in the way of this progressive (?) movement. In a communication to the New York Christian Advocate of June 2, Bishop Neeley contends that "The Methodist Episcopal Church," "The Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States," "The Methodist Episcopal Church in America," and "The Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States of America," are all titles belonging to the Northern branch of Methodism, and may be found in their legal documents. He strongly insists that they are but slight verbal variations of but one and the same name, and that a bequest containing any one of them would safely convey property to them. If Bishop Neeley is correct, it is pertinent to enquire what those among us who are so insistent upon having a new title are going to do. Surely, they will not attempt to appropriate a name which legally belongs to another denomination. They might turn the matter over to the Commission on Federation and let them treat with the Northern brethren and see if they can not persuade them to surrender one of their titles for our use; or they may select again the name which they took up and so quickly discarded at Asheville, the all-embracing name of "The Methodist Church." We presume that "it is yet lying around loose." Manifestly these "title-hunters" need to put on their thinking caps and get busy. They yet have work to do.

HE WAS RIGHT.

The situation in some of the States which rushed into an adoption of statutory prohibition is a complete vindication of the wisdom of the views of the South's great temperance leader, Bishop Charles B. Galloway. Believing the liquor traffic to be the greatest evil of all the ages, he yet held that it was not a safe policy to enact legislation too far in advance of public sentiment. Hence, he believed it ill-advised to adopt hastily and without an antecedent campaign of education extreme measures, easily subject to repeal. His position was violently assailed, and in some instances he was misrepresented. But in this, as in nearly everything else, he was right. Mississippi owes much to the safe and sane methods of dealing with this vexed question which he influenced her legislators to adopt. There is no likelihood of a repeal of the statute outlawing the saloon in that commonwealth, because what had gone before had prepared the people for its enactment. But even there we think constitutional prohibition would be safer, and we regret that it has not been possible to secure it. The remedy for the condition existing in Tennessee, Alabama and some of the other States is wholesome education. "Making haste slowly" is often the most certain way of progress.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

For a long time our Church has sustained a large "leakage" as a result of our method of transferring members from one pastoral charge to another. A brother is given a certificate and marked off the roll, but he fails to place it elsewhere and thus ceases to be a member of the Church and is lost sight of. Mr. G. R. Good, in the Raleigh Christian Advocate, proposes a remedy for this which impresses us as being a good one. He suggests a dual form of certificate which would appear as follows:

The bearer hereof, A. B., is an acceptable member of the M. E. Church, South, in C. Station (Circuit or Mission), D. Conference.

And appended to this he would have the following return certificate:

This is to certify that I have this day received A. B. into membership upon the certificate granted him from Station (Circuit or Mission).

. P. C.,
. Station (Circuit or Mission).

Under this plan, the name of no person would be removed from the register of a Church until his membership had actually been placed in another congregation. Mr. Good suggests that reply postal cards might be used to print these forms on. It strikes us that some such arrangement might be adopted to great advantage. Certainly, we Methodists need to devise a better system of keeping up with our people.

A method quite similar to the one explained above was proposed at the General Conference and recommended by the Committee on Itinerary, but in the great rush of work at the close of the session was left unvoted upon on the calendar.

DR. DICKEY RESIGNS.

Dr. James E. Dickey has resigned the secretaryship of the General Board of Education, and will remain at the head of Emory College, with which he has been connected for several years. This will necessitate the election of a new secretary by the Board of Education. To whom this honor will go is at this time a mere matter of conjecture. Those most prominently mentioned are Dr. H. M. DuBose, of Nashville; Dr. W. E. Thompson, of Memphis, and Dr. James Cannon, Jr., of Virginia.

PERSONAL.

Olive Branch, Miss., is making good progress under the careful ministrations of Rev. R. W. Evans.

We thank Rev. J. O. Bennett, of Bernice, La., for a handsome club of subscriptions. He reports that his charge is prospering and moving along in peace and harmony.

Rev. H. T. Carley held a Decision Day service for his Sunday school at Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans, on last Sunday. There were six applications for church membership.

We call especial attention to the resolutions in the interest of the Orphanage at Ruston, adopted by the Baton Rouge District Conference and published elsewhere in this paper.

We were honored by an invitation to attend the laying of the corner-stone of the William LeRoy Brown Engineering Hall of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, Ala., the 6th inst.

The last Sunday in May was a good day at Montpellier, Miss. The pastor, Rev. J. A. Poe, held a Layman's Meeting and a Sunday School Conference. There was a large crowd and fine interest.

The ladies of the Methodist Church in Ackerman purchased a splendid organ and had it in their church for the meeting that began this week under the leadership of Rev. H. S. Spragins, of Greenwood, Miss.

Brother J. W. Harris, in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, writes: "It feels like one of the family. We cannot do without it." The Advocate should be at home in every Methodist family in the bounds of the three Conferences.

Rev. J. E. Wray, D.D., a former pastor of First Methodist Church of New Orleans, preached the Commencement sermon for Barnesville, Institute, at Barnesville, Ga. His masterful presentation of "The Hope of the Gospel" drew many encomiums.

We call attention to the notice published elsewhere changing the date of holding the Seashore District Conference. We thank the wide-awake presiding elder, Rev. W. B. Jones, for his cordial invitation to attend this gathering of the saints, June 16-18, at Wiggins, Miss.

This week we received two dollars from the widow of a preacher to send the Advocate to the widows of preachers who do not feel that they can afford to take it. We shall try to use this money to send the Advocate where it will give much joy. May the Lord bless the one who gave and the ones who may receive.

Rev. E. C. Cargill, of Wilson, La., and Rev. F. N. Sweeney, of Baker, La., passed through the city one day last week, returning from the Baton Rouge District Conference at Bogalusa. From their conversation we gathered that the Conference session had been very pleasant. We are always pleased when the brethren honor this office by calling.

The "Legal Conference" of the Louisiana Annual Conference, met last Friday in the Advocate office, with Dr. S. S. Keener in the chair. Dr. Keener came from Monroe and Dr. J. T. Sawyer from Bogalusa to attend this session. The other members of the Legal Conference who were present reside in this city. The matter under consideration was the sale of timber on land that the Conference owns.

After some weeks spent in the West, Rev. W. A. Betts has returned to Monroe, Miss. We understand that he is open for a pastoral appointment from now until the fall Conference meet. From his letter we learn that Rev. Waldo W. Moore, the new president of the Training School, is getting a thorough hold on his task and planning a vigorous campaign for patronage for the school for this fall.

The Aberdeen District sets an admirable example. Rev. J. H. Felts, the capable presiding elder, has planned for an Advocate Hour. It would be a pleasure to accept the cordial invitation extended us, but we know that the Advocate will have staunch friends, capable of speaking well in its behalf. We shall expect to have the pages of the Advocate enlivened by reports from this field in which much is happening.

Rev. J. A. Bowen, the approaching marriage of whose son we elsewhere notice in this column, has been for the past year the Conference Evangelist of the North Alabama Conference. He has just been appointed to Ensley Church in the Bessemer District to take the place of Dr. J. D. Simpson who was elected president of Birmingham College on last Wednesday, filling the place made vacant by the election of Bishop McCoy.

At the Shreveport District Epworth League Conference, which meets in Grand Cane, La., June 12 to 13, steps will be taken by representatives of the different chapters throughout the State to organize a Conference League. We make room for this note calling attention to the excellent program which has been prepared, and regret that the copy did not reach us in time for insertion in this week's issue. All the departments of League work will be discussed.

We thank the energetic and successful presiding elder, Rev. J. E. Denson, for an invitation to attend the session of the Lafayette District Conference, which convened in Eunice on Wednesday of this week. We deeply regret the call of other imperative duties that prevented our attendance on this band of faithful workers. We learn that the results of the half year on this district have been very gratifying. The future of our Church in this section was never brighter.

Miss Lois Cooper, an A. B. graduate of Whitworth, will graduate from the Conservatory of Music, Cincinnati, Ohio, in June, giving her recital June 17th. Miss Bessie Cooper, also a graduate of Whitworth, received her literary degree from Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., in May. Miss Lois will teach piano, and Miss Bessie, science in Whitworth College, next session. These young ladies have made good use of their splendid advantages and have brought honor to their college and Church.

Mansfield College, at Mansfield, La., witnessed a unique ceremony this week. During the Commencement exercises the graduating class entertained two members of the first class that graduated from the college. These two ladies, Mrs. Virginia E. Dubois and Mrs. Mary E. Elam, received their diplomas in 1856, over half a century ago. We hope and pray that some members of the class who took part in this graceful ceremony may, after another half century, be entertained by some later class of the Mansfield College when the endowment and property values of this worthy institution shall range in the millions.

We have received an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sloss to attend the wedding of their daughter, Nettie, to Rev. Cawthorn Asbury Bowen, a member of the North Alabama Conference, on Thursday the 16th inst. The wedding will take place in the Eleventh Avenue Methodist Church, of Birmingham, Ala. The groom is a son of Rev. J. A. Bowen, formerly of the North Mississippi, but now of the North Alabama Conference. Immediately after the wedding, the bride and groom will take their departure for Europe. They will return to Stevenson, Ala., after having spent some months abroad. We congratulate the happy couple, and pray for them that their wedding day may be bright, that life's pathway may be full of sunshine, and that at last there may be for them a "mansion in the Father's house" above.

A BEAUTIFUL TRIBUTE.

(Remarks of Rev. R. H. Wynn at the funeral service of Dr. M. A. McHenry, who died at Monroe, La., May 15).

After weary months, the silver cord has been loosed, and our beloved doctor has entered upon a range of life, the glorious vistas of which are hidden from us mortals who are left behind.

I have been impressed anew with the significance of the word "commencement," as we use it in connection with the closing school exercises—speaking of that which seems to be the end of something as the beginning. But thus it ever is in the providence of God with those who know the abundant life; they go from "strength to strength," from service to service, from glory to glory, and when, to mortal eyes, the end seems to have come, it is really a glorious commencement.

For many years Dr. McHenry has modestly exemplified in this city lofty ideals of citizenship, scrupulous business integrity, civic righteousness, domestic honor, professional faithfulness, and consecration to the Church of God. He was of a practical bent of mind, had nothing of the visionary in his make-up, had no time to walk in dreams and shadows, and he made his life count for something. His life has been filled with arduous toil. If he made a mistake it was that he exacted too much labor from himself.

His medical skill has been widely known, and a large clientele were bound to him in loving devotion. It was hard for many of them to accept the grim fact that he could no longer minister to them and their children.

He has been a most valuable member and officer in the Church of his choice, Sunday school worker, trustee and steward, and he sustained a vital interest in its work all during his enforced absence.

He had a practical religious faith that took God at his word, he was not disturbed by ghosts of doubt, and he has descended the Dark Valley by the aid of the "Good Shepherd's" rod and staff. No word of repining has escaped his lips. His fortitude has been more heroic than that of the soldier called to face the cannon.

He accepted the loving providence of God, even though healing was denied him, and he stated his belief that God was working out good for him in the crucible of suffering.

He had no smittings of conscience because of a mispent or misdirected life, but the satisfaction of an approving conscience, expressed near the end in words almost similar to the dying words of King Edward: "I have done my duty."

He had absolutely unimpaired vigor of mind up to the very moment of death—a striking exhibition to my mind of essential immortality that is stronger than argument.

The "Good Shepherd" has now led him forth into richer pastures than earth can furnish. He can labor and serve now to the limit of his heart's desire, and shall not grow weary. May the abundant grace of God be granted to the bereft companion of his toil, and to the strong brothers and sons who shall worthily bear aloft the name, McHenry.

A friend is a gift of God to be thankful for. In thinking over his causes for gratitude on Thanksgiving Day, a noble and godly man gave special prominence to the fact that one whom he loved was his friend. He who is not thankful for a friend does not appreciate friendship, and is not worthy of love. —Henry Clay Trumbull.

THE PEOPLE WHO LIFT AND THE PEOPLE WHO LEAN.

We should be the most grateful people in the world. When we remember how Christ faints under his cross, and was afterwards nailed to his cross for us, the spirit of lifting for his cause should possess us. Though we lift till we see stars for Christ's Church, we should do it gladly, remembering how he carried our sins on Calvary.

A keen sense of loyalty to Christ for his goodness and mercy to us will inspire us to lift burdens gladly for his cause. You remember Paul at Damascus. When Christ appeared to him in the heavenly vision, and Paul became convinced that Christ was the divine Savior, all his opposition, and his pride, and his bigotry fell away in a moment. Instead of these, gratitude and loyalty to Jesus filled his heart. And the very first words he had to say were: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" And so Paul became a lifter for Jesus.

Now, I think it must be a lack of a keen sense of gratitude and loyalty to Christ that causes so many people to lean and make the work of the real lifters in the Church so hard. It is no new temptation, this temptation to ingratitude. You remember the ten lepers that came to Christ to be healed, and the Lord sent them all away to healing, and their leprosy dropped off, and they were made whole? One man came back with a heart full of thanksgiving, and his lips warm with gratitude to Christ for the mercy he had received. But what pathos there is in the words of Jesus when he inquires, "Were there not ten cleansed? But where are the nine?"

This becomes a very serious matter in many Churches. It is serious in the question of money to carry on the work of the Church. It is not an uncommon thing in a Church of a thousand or twelve hundred members to find not many, if any, over three hundred subscribers to the support of the Church. This means that, in a financial way, every lifter in the Church has to carry two leaners on his back. And sometimes the load is heavy enough to make his knees tremble and shake under him.

Now, in any one of these Churches where this condition exists the cause of the Master would leap forward with great joy and momentum if all these leaners would crawl down to the ground on their own legs, and join the army of lifters. That would be an ideal Church in brotherhood and helpfulness where every member lifted according to his ability. And such a Church is sure to be strong, spiritually. I have never yet known a chronic leaner to grow in grace, or to have any real spiritual vitality or spiritual influence in the Church. I wish all the leaners could have a dream like that which a prosperous member of a Church in Scotland once had. This old man had been besought often by his pastor to give to the work of evangelizing the poor in Glasgow, but would always reply: "Na, I need it for myself." One night he dreamed that he was at the gate of heaven, which was only a few inches ajar. He tried to get in, but could not, and was in agony at his poor prospect. Just then, the face of his minister appeared, who said: "Sandy, why stand ye glowering there? Why don't ye gae in?" "I can't; I am too large, and my pocketbook sticks out which ever way I turn." "Sandy," replied the minister, "think how mean ye have been to the Lord's poor, and ye will be small enough to go through the eye of a needle." Sandy awoke, and began to reduce both his pocketbook and his meanness by generously lifting forward the cause of his Lord.

We may depend upon it that it is the lifters and not the leaners who have the joy, and the peace, and the triumph of the Christian life.—Louis Albert Banks, D. D., in the Central Christian Advocate.

Don't waste your strength fighting good people because they are not better; better fight with them against the foe.—Selected.

It is not the temptation yielded to, but the temptation rejected, that makes moral fiber.—Henry Churchill King.

Perhaps it would be a good thing for many of us in our praying seasons if we were to say less and to listen more.—J. H. Jowett.

THE Grant Furniture Co.
THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that
Lasts a LIFETIME
WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.
427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

SECOND QUARTER, LESSON XI—JUNE 12, 1910.

THE CANAANITISH WOMAN.

Memory Verses, 21-22. Parallel passages, Mark vii, 24-30.

21. Then Jesus went thence, and departed into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon.
22. And behold, a woman of Canaan, of the same coasts, and cried, saying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David, my daughter, is grievously vexed with a devil.
23. But he answered her not a word.
24. And his disciples came and besought him, saying, Send her away, for she crieth after us.
25. But he answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

25. Then came, she and worshiped him, saying, Lord, help me.
26. But he answered and said, It is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it to dogs.
27. And she said, Truth, Lord; yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table.
28. Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

Golden Text: "Great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt." (Matt. xv, 28.)

The Lesson's Meaning.

It is difficult for some to recognize the fact that outside of Christendom, in all ages, men and women have lived and do live, who are as noble in spirit and manifest as real faith, humility, love as do we, even the best of us, sometimes indeed, putting us to shame. We feel that it is almost disloyal to our religion to admit this; though it is on the authority of Christ that we make the assertion. Two of his highest encomiums were upon the Roman centurion, of whom he said, "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel," and upon the Canaanitish woman in our lesson to-day, who drew from his lips the words of wonder and praise, "O woman, great is thy faith."

Our error lies in forgetting that God's Spirit moves universally upon the hearts of men; and that whoever, anywhere and any time, responds to this divine leading grows in some measure into his likeness, and is made ripe for fuller and clearer revelations, as the Christ, whose light they have seen dimly afar, draws near.

An illustration of this we find in the Syrophenician woman, who is the central figure in the lesson before us. Christ, we are told, had withdrawn into the coasts (rather neighborhood, for coasts often means neighborhood in the Bible) of Tyre and Sidon. "This, however, is not to be understood as implying that Jesus had crossed the borders of Palestine, and entered Gentile territory. (Meyer). Trench says 'It is not probable that our blessed Lord actually overpassed the limits of the Jewish land, now or at any other moment of his earthly ministry.' He evidently sought retirement in a Jewish home, and as Mark tells us, desired that no one should know it. But he could not be hid, and this heathen woman, "a Greek (in religion), a Syrophenician by race" (Mk. 7:26) comes across the border, and beseeches Christ that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter.

These details may help us to understand the seeming harshness of Christ's reply. At first, it is said, "he answered her not a word." The fact that she was a stranger, an alien in race and religion, evidently impressed him, and the question arose in his mind whether he could attempt a personal ministry of healing among the Gentiles. His first reply, after his disciples, weary with her pleading, had suggested that he grant her request and let her go, suggests the answer, no. "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel." Meyer, Ewald, Plumptre, Horton and others see in this a sincere disposition to repel her, in recognition of the limitation of his mission during his life on earth to the Jews. Ewald remarks that in this Christ showed twofold greatness: "First in his calm limitation to his special mission; and then in his equally calm overstepping of it when a higher ground for doing so appeared."

But the woman who in self-forgetting love, as Bengel says, "made the misery of her little child her own" was not to be easily repelled. So she came and worshiped him, falling at his feet and crying in anguish of heart, "Lord, help me." The reply seems even more repellent, most favorably reported by Mark. "Let the children first be fed, for it is not meet to take the children's bread and cast it to the dogs." But the woman was quick-witted as well as persevering, and she saw in the special word Christ used for dogs—a diminutive word suggesting house dogs, or pet dogs, not the wild scavenger dogs of Eastern streets—a thread to hold to, and a further ground of appeal. Turning Christ's own argument against him, she answered, "Truth, Lord; yet the dogs (the household dogs) eat of the crumbs that fall from their master's table." They have some place and some claim, however lowly, and with this she conquered and deserved to conquer.

Trench tells us that "Upon these words Luther, who has dwelt on all the circumstances of this little history with a peculiar love, and seems never weary of extolling the mighty faith of this woman, exclaims, 'Was not that a master stroke? she snares Christ in his own words.' And oftentimes he sets this Canaanitish woman before each troubled and fainting heart, that it may learn from her how to wring a yea from God's nay; or rather, how to hear the deep-hidden yea which many times lies in his seeming nay. 'Like her, thou must give God right in all that he says against thee, and yet not stand off from praying, till thou overcomest as she overcame, till thou hast turned the very charges made against thee into arguments and proofs of thy need—till thou, too, hast taken Christ in his own words.'"

But others, rejecting the suggestion that Christ really meant that his mission was to the Jews only, hold, as Trench, that it was to test her faith and bring it to full and rich development that Christ rebuffed her for a season. And this in compliment to her, for he saw in her no ordinary woman, and knew that through the delay, painful for the moment, she would rise to the heights of faith and humility which would mean much for her and be an illustrious example to all ages following. He would not have dealt thus with a weaker soul, not able to hear it.

Whether, however, his conduct was occasioned by sincere doubt on Christ's part as to the scope of his earthly mission, or whether it was but a means by which an unseen, to other eyes that his, and undeveloped nobility in the woman might be brought out to her praise, the outcome was all that she or we could desire. Her persevering faith was abundantly rewarded; of her, the low born Canaanite, Christ spoke in words of highest commendation; and to her her child was restored, saved by the persistent, all-conquering prayer of a devoted mother.

II. The Lesson's Message.—Points to Impress.

1. As there was goodness and nobility and faith outside of Judaism, so there is such outside the bounds of any one church or nation or race or clime. Christ has his sheep everywhere who hear his voice and follow him, and who will one day sit down with him in his kingdom. Let us cultivate that broadness of vision and optimism of spirit which believes and rejoices that God's Spirit is working everywhere in the hearts of men, and that some, at least, are responding and are growing into his likeness.

2. Beware of being too quickly offended or discouraged by a seeming rebuff. It may be but a means of discovering our real worth and desert of the blessing sought of God, or the position sought for.

Our real character is revealed by how we conduct ourselves under trying circumstances. Many of us would have gone away indignant, with our tongues wagging. He called me a dog, and would never have ceased telling of how mean Christ was to us. Such was not the caliber of this woman.

3. Love, faith, and humility are a trio which nothing can withstand, if the love inspires ardent desire, the faith, hope, and humility, a consciousness of our insufficiency and need.

4. Our failure to obtain blessing for ourselves and others is due to the fact that we don't really desire as this woman did. A sensible parent does not always give a child food at its first request; but continued requests are an evidence of real hunger which none would deny. Too often our prayers are like the childish requests for things not really wanted. If we as parents, Sunday school teachers, pastors, in love made the sins and needs of others our own as this woman did, had more burden for souls as our fathers said, we would be more importunate, and more would be saved. Encouraged may every praying parent be to persevere in fervent prayer for even the most hopeless case of sin or suffering of a child. (Whedon.)

DON'T BE WITHOUT WATER.

There is no need of the property holders of this city being any longer without water and sewer connections. This has been the one great distress of our city, not being able to have modern improvements in our homes. But now there is no need of any more complaints along this line, as the city is perfectly willing to connect free any property with the water main carrying the pipes to the property holders line, without any cost what ever to them.

The popular firm of C. C. Hartwell & Co., on Baronne Street, are making a liberal proposition to connect the sewer pipes free of charge. They also go farther, and agree to do all plumbing and laying of pipes necessary to connect the house with the sewer and water on monthly payments. This enables the property holders to not only put the property occupied by him but any property he has for rent in modern shape, with practically no outlay of ready cash. People interested in this proposition should consult C. C. Hartwell & Co., for a detailed explanation.

"Certainly in taking revenge, a man is but even with his enemy, but in passing it over he is superior for it is a prince's part to pardon.—Selected.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

3 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McCord, Verbena, Ala., used 3 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 20 years."

C. G. Butler, Argenta, Ark., wrote: "Used 4 bottles and gained 12 pounds and feel 100 per cent better."

Money back when it fails.
The Johnson's Chill & Fever Tonic Co.
Savannah, Georgia.

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also. COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.
1300-1302
DRYADES STREET.

PHONES—Jackson 1080—1081.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing by hand—no breakage. WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE. LE PAGE INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO. TORONTO - CANADA

Rider Agents Wanted

In each town to ride and exhibit sample 1910 bicycle. Write for Special Offer. Finest Guaranteed $10 to $27. 1910 Models with Coaster Brakes and Puncture Proof tires. 1908 & 1909 Mod. $7 to $12. All of best make. 100 Second-Hand Wheels. All makes and models $3 to $8 good as new. Great FACTORY CLEARING SALE. We ship on approval without a cent deposit, pay the freight and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL. TIRES, coaster brake rear wheels, lamps, sundries, half usual prices. Do not buy till you get our catalog and offer. Write soon. MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. M. 78, Chicago.

Don't break your Back

In sweeping or the dust. This dust pan has a long handle and reaches in the door without the necessity of stooping contents. It causes a total vacuum automatically when raised. A most satisfactory dust pan. Sent free on request. Write for it. Address: People's Supply Co., 1037 Rush St., Chicago, Ill.

People's Supply Co., 1037 Rush St., Chicago, Ill.

Tidings from the Field

Hattiesburg, Broad Street:

We are in the midst of a gracious revival meeting at Broad Street that began last Sunday. Indications are that this will be the best meeting this town has had for years. Brother George Anders is doing the preaching this week. He is getting right down to the heart of things, and is giving the very best service he can render. The Lord wonderfully blesses his work and through him is reaching the hearts and consciences of the people. We want the prayers of the Church for this meeting at Broad Street. Brother D. E. Kelly will be with us next week. I am highly pleased with the Advocate and hope to send you several new subscribers as a result of this meeting.—Osmond Lewis.

Courtland, Miss.:

Our second Quarterly Conference was held on the 21st and 22nd of May. Brother Young, our presiding elder, was present and preached for us on Saturday night and Sunday. His sermons were soul-stirring and inspiring messages and made a profound impression on his hearers. The reports for the quarter, both from the pastor and stewards, showed considerable progress. The stewards raised the preacher's salary $100 over last year. We are putting $50 in, and on the parsonage together. When we came to the work we found the parsonage without any yard around it. We now have a good wire fence around our parsonage. We have put down a new floor on the porch, and by the time we get through with our work on the parsonage it will be fairly comfortable.—C. Wesley Bailey.

Dumas, Miss.:

We are having good congregations and good services all over our work. We held our second Quarterly Conference the 7th and 8th of May, and had a profitable time. Brother Ben P. Jacob was with us and preached some fine sermons as he always does. A large crowd was present on Saturday, and all of the churches were represented, with the stewards bringing up good reports. The matter of procuring a parsonage was discussed, and I think the people are going to have a home for the preacher next year. No work is what it ought to be without a parsonage. I think the Dumas work is on the upgrade. We have a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and one that seems to have some life in it. The good women of Dumas have organized a lady's prayer meeting, and we are developing a fine Sunday school. We had Children's Day at Jacob's Chapel last Sunday and will have it at Dumas soon. We are expecting great good to be accomplished in this field this year. We are greatly blessed in having the co-operation of a good people and the counsel of a faithful presiding elder.—D. M. Floyd.

East Booneville Circuit:

With your permission I should like to let the brethren throughout the Conference know something about our little work out here in the hill part of Prentiss County, among a people who have the old-time religion, and know how to help a preacher to preach by giving him their presence, their prayers, and co-operation. Sunday, May 29, was a red-letter day for old Mt. Nebo Church as that brought around Children's Day service which could not be surpassed by any church. But why need we wonder at this when we take into consideration the fact that such a man as Columbus Cunningham is superintendent, and is assisted by Brother Howell Goodwin and others. Things are bound to move in the right direction with them in control. No one will ever forget the well-rendered music led by Miss Lena Smith and others. We do not wonder that Brother Cunningham is happy when he has such a bright band of little children who are ready to move at his command. It seemed each little child wanted to please the beloved superintendent. The collection was not as great as we hoped for, but we thank the good people for what they gave.—T. G. Adair, P. C.

CHURCH EXTENSION NO. 3.

W. J. O'Bryant, Crenshaw.....$10
J. R. BINGHAM, Treas.
Carrollton, Miss.

THE MOODY INSTITUTE.

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago is seeking to meet the demands of the different denominations for workers among the foreign-speaking peoples of our large cities. Its students now embrace 20 nationalities, and men and women can be sent out qualified to conduct gospel meetings in sixteen languages. As a matter of fact, work is now being done by these students constantly among Yiddish, Swedish, Danish, Norwegian, Italian, and other foreign-speaking peoples in Chicago and its environs. In addition to this The Bible Institute Colportage Association, besides being a channel for the distribution of the Bible in foreign languages, publishes its own evangelical literature in several tongues. One of D. L. Moody's books is now published in six different languages. The interdenominational character of this work is kept to the front by a faculty composed of men and women trained in the Episcopal, Congregational, Baptist, Presbyterian, United Presbyterian, Methodist and Lutheran communions.

Students of both sexes are welcomed here from all over the country, and churches and institutions in need of helpers are constantly applying for their aid.

"FREE SCHOLARSHIP IN NURSING."

By Miss Lillie Frazier, Superintendent of Nurses.

The Philadelphia School for Nurses, 2219 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., offers free scholarships in trained nursing to young women in every State in the Union. The scholarships cover the full two years' course, with room, board, uniforms, laundry, etc., included, and railroad fare paid to the home-town or district upon completion of the course.

A Home Study Course and a Short Resident Course are also provided, which quickly open the door to opportunity and enable progressive students to render a noble service to humanity and at the same time acquire for themselves a substantial income from the best paid occupation now open to women, besides qualifying every student to deal with emergencies in the home that may mean the saving of a loved one's life.

Far-seeing philanthropists are adding to the resources of this School with the view of ultimately extending these benefits to earnest, energetic young women in all country districts and in all the smaller towns and cities.

The institution is approved and endorsed by leading physicians and educators of the entire country. Some of the leading men of this State are its strongest supporters and endorsers, as will be seen by the catalogue, which will be sent to anyone who writes to the school for it. Philadelphia, Penn., May 24.

THIS WILL INTEREST MANY.

F. W. Parkhurst, the Boston publisher, says that if any one afflicted with rheumatism in any form, neuralgia or kidney trouble, will send their address to him at 704-35 Carney Bldg., Boston, Mass., he will direct them to a perfect cure. He has nothing to sell or give, only tells you how he was cured after years of search for relief. Hundreds have tested it with success.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US.
WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

L. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Riehl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd.,
JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. NEW ORLEANS
D. C. Godfrey.....Optician.

COMPLETE ONLY $15.00

Burns Wood or Coal

Just Send Me One Dollar

and I will ship C. O. D. to any open railroad station in the U. S., east of the rocky mountains, this fine Willard Steel Range. Anyone can say they have the best range in the world, but I will furnish the evidence and leave the verdict to you. After you examine this range, if you are satisfied in every way, pay agent $14.00 and freight, and you become the possessor of the best range in the world for the money. The range has six 8-inch lids; 17-inch oven; 15-gal. reservoir; large warming closet; top cooking surface, 30x26 inches. Guaranteed to reach you in perfect order. Shipping weight 400 lbs. "Write for Catalogue." Agents wanted to take orders for this range.

WM. G. WILLARD,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

Superlatively pure, appetizing and healthful.

Boston Crystal Gelatine is rapidly coming in to favor as the prime dessert in thousands of homes. Its simplicity of preparation, adaptability and economy, make its ultimate selection as the best gelatine inevitable.

Crystal Gelatine makes the tenderest jellies and the greatest variety of dishes. Will not curdle milk or cream.

Being nutritious and easy to digest, it is taking the place of heavier desserts. Try it on your table to-day.

EACH PACKAGE MAKES TWO FULL QUARTS.

Ask your grocer. Sample package free.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.,
121 A Beverly St.
BOSTON, MASS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Lafayette Dist.—Third Round.

Crowley	June 4, 5
Morgan City	June 5, 6
Lafayette	June 11, 12
Franklin	June 12, 13
Abbeville	June 18, 19
Vermillion, at Perry	June 19, 20
Gledan, at Guedan	June 25, 26
Indian Bayou, at Hebron	July 2, 3
Jeanerette	July 9, 10
New Iberia	July 10, 11
French Mission, at St. Mar-
tinsville	July 16, 17
Houma, at Bourg	Aug. 6, 7
Patterson	Aug. 13, 14
Prudhomme, at C. P.	Aug. 20, 21
Rayne	Aug. 27, 28
Jennings	Sept. 3, 4
Lake Charles	Sept. 10, 11
Sulphur, at Sulphur	Sept. 11, 12
Eunice, at L. P.	Sept. 17, 18
Bell City, at B. C.	Sept. 24, 25
Lake Arthur	Sept. 25, 26

J. E. DENSON, P. E.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Natchez Dist.—Third Round.

Woodville Ct., at Bethel	July 9,
Woodville Station	July 10,
Liberty, at Salem	July 16, 17
Natchez, Pearl St.	July 22, 24
Natchez, Jefferson St.	July 24, 25
Fayette	July 25,
Washington	July 23,
Meadville, at Eddiceton	July 30, 31
Hamburg, at Knoxville	Aug. 6, 7
Homochitto, at Mt. Vernon	Aug. 13, 14
Adams, at Ebenezer	Aug. 20, 21
Centreville	Aug. 24,
Gloster, at Woodland	Aug. 27, 28
Nebo, at	Sept. 3, 4
Bayou Pierre, at	Sept. 10, 11
Barlow, at	Sept. 12,
Wilkinson, at Friendship	Sept. 17, 18
Scotland, at	Sept. 24, 25

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, P. E.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Columbus District—Third Round.

Starkville	June 4, 5
West Point	June 12, 13
Crawford, at Trinity	June 19, 20
Macon	June 26, 27
Columbus, First Church	July 2, 3
Columbus, Second Church	July 3, 4
Shuqualak, at Salem	July 10, 11
Brooksville, at Prairie	July 17, 18
Sturgis	July 22,
Starkville ct., at Lebanon	July 23, 24
Winstonville	July 30, 31
Mathiston	Aug. 4,
Cedar Bluff, at Bills	Aug. 5,
Mayhew, at Kilgore	Aug. 13, 14
Hebron, at Prairie Chapel	Aug. 20, 21
Columbus ct.	Aug. 27, 28

J. E. THOMAS, P. E.

Durant Dist.—Third Round.

Dist. Conf. at Pickens	July 6, 8
Vladen, at Columbiana	July 2, 3
Pickens, at Richland	July 9, 10
Durant	July 10, 11
Ebenezer, at Bethany	July 16,
Lexington	July 17, 18
Sidon, at Sidon	July 17, 18
Rural Hill, at Macedonia	July 23, 24
Chester, at So. Union	July 25,
Louisville, at Nexapater	July 26,
West, at Hebron	July 30, 31
Kosciusko Sta., at E. Union	Aug. 1,
Sallis	Aug. 6,
Ackerman	Aug. 7, 8
Kosciusko Ct.	Aug. 13,
McCool	Aug. 14, 15
Poplar Creek	Aug. 20, 21
Black Hawk	Aug. 27, 28

N. G. AUGUSTUS, P. E.

Corinth Dist.—Third Round.

Belmont Ct., at Dennis	June 3,
Iuka Ct., at Hebron	June 4, 5
Iuka Sta., at Iuka	June 5, 6
Boonville Ct., at Hodges	June 11, 12
Corinth, So. Side, at S. S.	June 12, 13
Booneville Sta., at B.	June 13,
Corinth Ct., at Gaines Chap.	June 17,
Kossuth Ct., at Pl'snt Hill	June 18, 19
Corinth, 1st Ch., at 1st Ch.	June 19, 20
Wheeler Ct., at Asbury	June 24,
E. Booneville Ct., at Shady
Grove	June 25, 26
Rienzi Ct., at Bethel	July 2,
Guntown Ct., at Pleasant
Valley	July 3, 4
Myrtle Ct., at Friendship	July 9, 10

Hatchie Miss., at El Bethel July 16,
 Rainey Miss., at Marvin July 23,
 Ripley and B. M., at Falk-
 ner July 24, 25
 Belden Ct., at Bethel July 29,
 New Albany Ct., at Ecru July 30,
 New Albany Sta., at N. A. July 30, 31
 Jonesboro Ct., at Ebenezer Aug. 6, 7
 Dumas Ct., at Dumas Aug. 13,
 Dry Run Miss., at Mt. Zion Aug. 13, 14
 Tishomingo Ct. Aug. 20, 21
 Mooreville Ct. Aug. 25,
 Mantachie Ct. Aug. 26,
 Marietta Ct. Aug. 27, 28
 Pastors will please see that answers
 are furnished to questions 17, 20 and
 22. BEN P. JACO, P. E.

PLAN OF EPISCOPAL VISITATION.

First District, Bishop A. W. Wilson.
 Virginia Conference, Centenary Church,
 Richmond, Va., Nov. 8th.
 North Georgia Conference, Athens,
 Ga., Nov. 16th.
 Alabama, Troy, Ala., Dec. 7th.
Second District, Bishop E. E. Hendrix.
 Denver, Denver, Colo., Sept. 8th.
 Western North Carolina, Winston-Salem, N. C., Nov. 16th.
 North Carolina, Elizabeth City, N. C.,
 Nov. 30th.
 South Carolina, Charleston, S. C., Dec.
 7th.

Third Dist., Bishop Warren A. Candler.
 Holston, Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 5th.
 Tennessee, Clarksville, Tenn., Oct. 11th.
 Memphis, Paducah, Ky., Nov. 9th.
 Cuban Mission, Havana, Cuba, Jan.
 19th, 1911.

Fourth Dist., Bishop H. C. Morrison.
 Western Virginia, New Martinsville,
 W. Va., Sept. 7th.
 Illinois, Pateka, Ill., Sept. 22d.
 South Georgia, Columbus, Ga., Nov.
 30th.

Fifth Dist., Bishop E. E. Hoss.
 Japan Mission, Arima, Japan, Sept.
 1st.
 Korean Mission, Songdo, Korea, Sept.
 15th.
 China Mission, Huchow, China, Oct.
 12th.
 Baltimore, Clifton Forge, Va., March
 29th, 1911.

Sixth Dist., Bishop James Atkins.
 New Mexico, Artesia, New Mex., Oct.
 6th.
 West Texas, Austin, Tex., Oct. 26th.
 Central Texas, Waxahachie, Tex., Nov.
 2d.

Northwest Texas, Clarendon, Tex.,
 Nov. 9th.
Seventh Dist., Bishop Collins Denny.
 Missouri, Plattsburg, Mo., Aug. 31st.
 Southwest Missouri, Webb City, Mo.,
 Sept. 14.

St. Louis, Cape Girardeau, Mo., Sept.
 25th.
Okla. Ardmore, Okla., Nov. 9th.
Eighth Dist., Bishop John C. Kluge.
 Kentucky, Harrodsburg, Ky., Sept.
 21st.
 Louisville, Russellville, Ky., Sept.
 28th.

North Alabama, Huntsville, Ala., Nov.
 30th.
Florida, Springfield Church, Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 14th.
Ninth Dist., Bishop W. B. Murrah.
 German Mission, East Bernard, Tex.,
 Oct. 27th.

Tenth Dist., Bishop W. E. Lambuth.
 Texas, Galveston, Tex., Nov. 30th.
 Louisiana, Homer, La., Dec. 7th.
 Brazil Mission, Sao Paulo, Brazil,
 July 28th.

South Brazil Mission, Santa Maria,
 Brazil, July 7th.
 Bishop Lambuth will go to Africa
 also in the interest of the Mission which the Board of Missions proposes to open
 in that field.

Eleventh Dist., Bishop E. G. Waterhouse.
 Montana, Butte, Mont., Sept. 8.
 East Columbia, Walla Walla, Wash.,
 Sept. 15th.
 Columbia, Medford, Oregon, Sept. 22d.
 Pacific, Stockton, Cal., Oct. 5th.
 Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Cal., Oct.
 12th.

Twelfth Dist., Bishop E. D. Monzon.
 Mississippi, Hattiesburg, Miss., Dec.
 7th.
 Mexican Border Mission, Monterey,
 Mex., Feb. 2d, 1911.
 Central Mexico Mission, Mexico City,
 Feb. 9th, 1911.
 Northwest Mexican Mission, Mazatlan,
 Feb. 23rd, 1911.

Thirteenth Dist., Bishop J. H. McCoy.
 Arkansas, Fayetteville, Ark., Nov. 2d.
 Little Rock, Prescott, Ark., Nov. 16th.
 White River, Forest City Ark., Nov.
 23rd.
 North Mississippi, Sardis, Miss., Nov.
 30th.

The semi-annual meeting of the Bishops will be held in New Orleans, La.,
 Oct. 20th.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA

AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S
 TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing
 it is simply Quinine and Iron in a taste-
 less form, and the most effectual form.
 For grown people and children, 50c.

WHERE WILL YOU
SPEND THE SUMMER?

Why not Try Winona Lake Assembly, Situated on Beautiful Winona Lake in Northern Indiana?

In Chautauqua features equal to Chautauqua, N. Y. in Bible Conference and Sunday School features equal to Northfield, Mass. Largest attended Assembly in America. A series of rich literary and religious entertainments.
 Bathing, boating, fishing, golf, tennis, and all innocent amusements. Fine
 Mineral water. Six large hotels, numerous boarding and lodging houses.
 Write postal and secure free the beautiful Year Book, giving all necessary information. Address—

PUBLICITY BUREAU,

WINONA LAKE, INDIANA.

THE BEST MADE
Angell's Cough and Whooping
Cough Syrup

For Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs,
 Colds and Throat Trouble.
 Contains no Opium or Morphine.
 All Druggists. Price 25 and 50 cents.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK
 FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection: beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail
 Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
 Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

CONVENIENT WAY,

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA,
 SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS
 ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL, General Passenger Agent.

POLISHES - QUICK AS LIGHTNING

Qckwork is something new. It's so quick you'll hardly believe your own eyes. It makes polishing a pleasure. No acid—no grit. For automobiles, yachts, brass, copper, tin, enamel, silver, everything that shines.

In 25c Tins Everywhere.

Qckwork Silver Paste brings a quick and lasting lustre to silver, gold, cut glass, etc. It can not injure.
 Adds years of wear to silver.

In 25c Jars Everywhere.

You are buying for your church

DO Right

About that Organ.

If you have the money; if you're raising it, or only planning—write for helpful suggestions.

ESTEY, Brattleboro, Vt.

SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Change of Date.

Owing to the fact that Bishop Murrain cannot be with us on the date announced, our District Conference will convene at Wiggins Thursday, June 16, 9 a. m., and close Saturday the 18th. The opening sermon will be preached Wednesday night, the 15th, at 8 o'clock, by Rev. J. T. Abney. The preachers in charge will please notify their delegates of the time, and will also please see that the Quarterly Conference Records are on hand for examination. The recording stewards are members ex-officio. The attention of the local preachers is called to the fact that the Discipline requires that they present to the District Conference written reports of the extent and result of their labors. Let all who can, come Wednesday afternoon.

W. B. JONES.

THE SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Sardis District Conference will convene in Senatobia, Miss., June 23-26. The first day will be given to the special interests of Sunday Schools and missions.

The following examining committees are appointed:

On Orders—J. M. Huggin, W. J. O'Bryant and Dr. John W. Boswell.

On License to Preach and Admission to the Annual Conference—V. C. Curtis, W. W. Duncan, and W. E. Wendel.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Woman's Home Mission Society will hold their annual district meetings in Senatobia on June 22, in connection with the District Conference.

Bishop McCoy will preside at the sessions of the District Conference.

W. M. YOUNG, P. E.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Pontotoc, June 21-24.

Missions in full to be reported by every pastor (ordered by laymen at the District Steward's Meeting.) Bishops Murrain and McCoy will be with us and direct the work of the Conference. The one will also represent Millsaps College, and the other will get acquainted with the men, look over the field, and get necessary information.

The opening sermon will be preached Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock probably by Bishop McCoy. Formal organization Wednesday, 9 a. m. At 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon a model Quarterly Conference will be held, and the third such Conference for the year will be held for Pontotoc. It is expected that the stewards and others will make possible a great conference. Rev. B. P. J. will be asked to preside.

J. A. Lowe, Nettleton, will have charge of the Laymen's Movement—and interested parties may write him for information.

President J. R. Countiss will represent Grenada College. Editor R. A. Meek will represent the Advocate. If he should find it impossible to come, then some one appointed by him.

"Advocate Hour" must not be dull or uninteresting. All the work of a District Conference will be done, and a record-breaking attendance is expected.

License and Admission—W. L. Duren, R. O. Brown, D. W. Babb.

Deacons and Elder's Orders—R. A. Clark, J. J. Garner, L. W. Can.

Special emphasis will be given to spiritual life. Preaching, testimony meetings, consecration meeting, prayer meetings will be held from time to time.

J. H. FELTS, P. E.

ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN.

We have had strange charges preferred against the Advocate by one or two of our subscribers; they have accused us of raising the price of the Advocate. As a matter of fact, the price was reduced from $2 to $1.50 during the past year, a hazardous experiment at times when others are raising their prices.

The trouble does not lie in the price that we charge, but in the fact that the man who subscribed in a club wants to renew at club rates. We have no objection to his doing so, provided his name appears in a club this year.

We could not afford to give the club rates, were it not that we received the subscriptions in larger numbers. Where subscribers are sent in large clubs, the proportionate cost of bookkeeping, mailing, editing, etc., is reduced. We can only handle one subscriber at a time, and bill one person at a time from this office; we can do nothing with the clubs. If your pastor will secure a club, you may renew your paper this year at the club rate. If he does not object, you may secure two subscriptions including your own, and send them all in at the club rate of $1.25 each, retaining 10 cents of each subscription to pay for your time and expense.

We are willing for every old subscriber to the Advocate to raise a club of five subscribers, secure the club rate, help yourself and benefit other homes.

We give below the names of friends who have sent in subscriptions in the last week: Rev. E. H. Rook, Tyro, Miss.; Rev. H. B. Lewis, Jr., Natchez, Miss.; Rev. A. A. Bernard, Vicksburg, La.; Rev. T. L. Porter, Taylor, Miss.; Rev. T. M. Bradley, Jonestown, Miss.; Rev. S. L. Riggs, St. Francisville, La.; Rev. W. L. Blackwell, Hernando, Miss.; Rev. W. W. Canhamack, Liberty, Miss.; Rev. D. M. Floyd, Dumas, Miss.; Rev. T. H. King, Tyertown, Miss.; Rev. H. C. Murphy, Pine Grove, La.; Rev. Wilson Moore, Eden, La.; Rev. J. S. Pirell, Florence, Miss.; Rev. A. B. Barry, Carthage, Miss.; Rev. J. O. Bennett, Bernice, La.; Rev. Eugene Johnson, Eupora, Miss.; Rev. T. W. Adams, Lumberton, Miss.; Rev. R. O. Weir, Arcadia, La.; Rev. R. M. Brown, Shumersport, La.; Rev. J. A. Poe, Montpelier, Miss.; Rev. R. W. Evans, Olive Branch, Miss.; and Mrs. T. S. Randle, of Gilbert, La.

We give below our roll of honor, consisting of those who have sent in twenty or more subscribers during this conference year:

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, Greenville, Miss.
Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.
Rev. J. M. Carpenter, Booneville, Miss.
Rev. W. E. Dickens, Pelahatchie, Miss.
Rev. T. H. Dorsey, West Point, Miss.
Rev. W. L. Duren, Tupelo, Miss.
Rev. R. A. Ellis, Yazoo City, Miss.
Rev. E. E. Langford, Brooksville, Miss.
Rev. T. W. Lewis, Columbus, Miss.
Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, Indianola, Miss.
Rev. S. B. Myers, Louisville, Miss.
Rev. L. A. McKeown, Shaw, Miss.
Rev. J. E. Sampley, Rocky Springs.
Rev. O. L. Savage, Guntown, Miss.
Rev. R. A. Tucker, Kosciusko, Miss.
Rev. T. E. Yancey, Nettleton, Miss.
Rev. W. G. Harbin, Haynesville, La.
Rev. C. F. Staples, Gibbsland, La.
Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Baker, La.
Rev. W. T. Woodward, Haynesville, La.

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.

Secure our catalogue before deciding where to place your daughter. Superior Home Comforts; Only Two Girls in a Room; Marvelous Health Record; Excellent Fine Arts Department; Strong Lyceum Course; Well-Adapted Library; Personal Attention to Individual Pupil; Superior Student Body as Associates; Carefully Selected Faculty; Strong Course of Study; Rates Reasonable; Constant Christian Influence Permeating and Dominating College Life.

Apply for rooms at once and thus secure choice of location.

Memphis Conference Female Institute, Jackson, Tenn.

Next School Year begins Wednesday, September 14. Every facility offered for a thorough education for girls and young women. All departments taught, including besides regular Classical and Literary Courses, Music, Art, Expression, Stenography, Typewriting, Business course, Etc. Charges reasonable. For catalogues, etc., apply to

REV. A. B. JONES, Jackson, Tenn.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute is one of the oldest Female Colleges in the South, having been chartered in 1843. The college has 250 attendants and 125 of them are boarding pupils.

Parents desiring to send their daughters to school should write for a catalog of

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Which has a record of high grade work for half a century, maintaining a Faculty of Specialists in the schools of Literature, Mathematics, Science, Languages, Music, Art, and Expression. Beautiful location in most healthful town in State of Virginia. For full information write

REV. S. D. LONG, President, Abingdon, Va.

RYDER HALL HOTEL

SALUDA, N. C.

The Ideal Place to Spend Your Vacation—Summer or Winter

Located right on the top of the mountains. Buildings brand new and modern, fully equipped throughout with hot and cold water, heat and every other comfort and convenience. Private spring water, no mosquitoes and beautiful shade. Bus meets all trains. 15 minutes walk from station. Special Rates to Tourists and Vacationists. Write for Them.

RYDER HALL HOTEL.

SALUDA, N. C.

Port Gibson Female College,

PORT GIBSON, MISS.

First session opens Sept. 14th. Literature, music, art, elocution, stenography, bookkeeping, sewing, Physical culture and chorus work free. Special attention given health and morals. Confers degree of A. B. Preparatory department. Students can reduce expenses by taking duties.

For catalogue, address

REV. H. G. HAWKINS, A. B., Pres.

Let no veneer of culture come between you and the thing you are; and when you have seen all there is to be seen, you must admit that you are indeed a monster if you cannot love your neighbor as you love yourself.— Joel Chandler Harris.

Belmont College

For Young Women
Nashville, Tenn.

Ira Landrith, D. D., LL. D.,
President

Miss Hood and Miss Heron, Principals

Beautiful location in a matchless magnolia-shaded hilltop park.
College and preparatory courses. Music,
Art, Expression,
Physical Culture, Modern Languages,
Domestic Science,
Athletic sports, Horseback riding. Early registration desirable.
For catalogue, address, BELMONT
COLLEGE, Box

YOUR Boy May Become a Great Merchant

But not unless he has the necessary training. The business of this institution is to fit young men and women for successful business careers.

We have the best systems for teaching Bookkeeping, Shortland, Typewriting, Penmanship, Salesmanship, Telegraphy, Proofreading, Railroad, Public Accounting, Banking and Civil Service. Correspondence courses for those who cannot attend. Write for particulars and free booklet, entitled "OUR PRESIDENTS," giving a complete history of each, from Washington down to and including Taft.

FALL'S BUSINESS COLLEGE,
Broadway & 8th Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

Fall's
Business College,
Nashville,
Tenn.

Please send me
your free booklet,
"Our Presidents."

Name.....

Address.....

.....

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER,

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co

INCORPORATED.

Epworth League

By Rev. H. B. Watkins.

TOPIC FOR JUNE 12, 1910.

TRUTH THAT ENLIGHTENS AND PURIFIES.

(Proverbs 11:10-22.)

This is the season when the question of education is much in our minds. It is the commencement season and young men and maidens are coming forth from the halls of their schools with diplomas to mark the steps already taken and already the question of future work or further training is in their hearts. Pastors now are going to preach during the third quarter a sermon on Christian Education. It is fitting that the Leaguers should have an educational day. We shall not waste any time to-day on the benefits of education in general. From one point of view, at least, we all recognize the need of equipment. But do we realize the need of religious education, Christian education? That education should have back of it a higher knowledge, a knowledge of Christ, is emphasized by the fact that the Church has from the earliest days taken charge of education. The Era says this week, "It is of but recent date that education in any large sense has been fostered by any organization outside of the Church of God." It has been from the Church that the State has caught a vision of the importance of education. While the Church has necessarily yielded much of popular education to the State it has kept a jealous eye on what kind of education the States shall furnish, on who are the teachers, and on what part character-training shall have in its work. And then in its anxiety for the religious element in truth, in education, she has built her own schools and colleges in order that she may in this most impressionable age hold close to her heart her boys and girls that she may teach them that "wisdom is the principal thing" and "with all their getting to get understanding."

Let us ask why religious truth should underlie all truth? Why emphasize Christian education? First, because religion gives to education its proper view point. We should stand by Christ as we learn all other things and see these things and their relation to each other and our relation to them from his point of view. Whence came these things? The study of geography loses most of its significance unless we see it from the view of him who created the heavens and the earth. Through all history seen from the religious point of view we shall see the footsteps of our God. Chemistry, with its marvelous messages and Physics with its revelations shall make us feel that we are standing in the great laboratory of God where the hand of an Unseen One still works; who looks through a telescope with other than Christian eyes misses the real vision for such eyes. "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament sheweth his handiwork." Physiology has luminous messages to one who has learned about God with all his heart. There is no such thing as secular education. It is all divine and has a divine message to him who will but listen. Wherever the human mind lightened with divine light extends its sphere there shall it find yet larger lessons of God. He treads on holy ground who walks any of the paths of knowledge and no hand should be allowed to guide along that path except one who looks to God for his light. For its proper view point, all education should be Christian education. Again religion furnishes education its proper motive, its purpose, its ideal. "Knowledge is power." What will you do with that power when gained? Will it be a power for good or for evil? Will it be a power for selfishness or a power for service? Will you use it as a power to destroy or to build; to tear down or to lift up? No one can give the proper motive except the Christ who said "Thou shalt love." No lips can give the proper purpose to education except him who said, "Whoso shall lose his life for my sake shall find it." No one can give the real ideal to education except him who said, "If any man would be great let him become the servant of all." The real successes of life depend much more upon motives and purposes and ideals than upon powers and talents. Education alone may give the latter, but only religious truth can give the former! No wonder we cry out for Christian education. No wonder, at huge expense, the Church supports schools. No wonder the Church is interested in who is to be the teacher. The larger life depends on religion more than on education—more than that, religion gives education its power to do, power to live up to its ideals, power to perform its tasks, power to overcome its difficulties. Useless a vision without the power to attain that vision. Useless a great purpose, without power to achieve it. Useless a motive without the power to follow it. The religion that says, "I will not leave you orphans, I will come unto you," "Ye shall receive power" is the religion which must ever stand back of education and furnish its power.

Religion furnishes education its hope. The thinking mind must be satisfied as to the future. To educate the mind to think on questions of death and human destiny is but to mock it, unless we give that mind an answer to its question. Only revelation does that. "Can we by searching find out God?" No. Religion must speak and answer the question an educated mind has formed. Religion that says, "In my Father's house are many mansions," that declares "we have a house not made with hands eternal in the heavens." Education can form a great question: "If a man die shall he live again?" Religion can answer, "I have come that ye might have life and have it more abundantly." Education can ask, "How are the dead raised up?" Religion answers, "God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him!"

A Doctor in the Family.

Royaline Oil, made by the Royaline Medicine Co., of New Orleans, La., answers so many useful purposes in the like a doctor in the family. Its timely use saves, not only much suffering and time, but also physicians' bills. Cuts, aches, inflammations, swellings or any other soreness can be quickly alleviated by the application of Royaline Oil, the great antiseptic. Price 25c. a bottle. At your druggist.

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

To the Preachers Who Will Attend.

I have seen the Year Book of this School, which has just been published under the editorship of Rev. H. M. Ellis, and I declare it to be a gem of its kind. The cuts of the speakers, instructors, and the directors are as good as I have ever seen. They are as good looking as the originals would allow. The printing, done by The Natchez Printing Co., is of the best, and Mr. Stefnroth, the president of this company, has spared no pains in making a splendid piece of work of it all. You will be charmed with the Year Book. What I wish to call your attention to is the Course of Study for the post-graduate work. There are four schools of this work, and it will be the privilege of those who attend to select their school.

You will please to note the subjects and names of books as they appear below, and the names of the instructors, as follows:

Psychology: Henry F. Cone—King's Rational Living.
Church History: H. H. McNeill—Matthew's New Testament Times in Palestine.

The History of Doctrine: J. A. Rice—Kirkpatrick's Doctrine of The Prophets.

Homiletics: A. F. Watkins—Kern's Ministry to the Congregation.

Biblical Theology: Bishop W. B. Murrah—Steven's Theology of the New Testament.

The above books may be secured from our Publishing House, at Nashville, Tenn.

Let every preacher who can, old and young, attend the Divinity School, June 28 to July 7.

ROBT. SELBY, President.

R. R. ELLISON, Secretary.

AGENTS WANTED.

WANTED—Good men and women agents at once for "Roosevelt's Famous Hunt for Big Game," also for "Traffic in Girls." Immense sellers. Price, $1.50, 50 per cent commission. Outfit free. Send 15c for mailing. Both outfits 25c. Also district managers for easy payment-installment plan. Permanent work. $2,000 to $5,000 per year profits. Particulars free. Address: A. B. Kuhlman Company, Chicago, Ill. 7616.

THE BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE AND THE ORPHANAGE.

The Baton Rouge District Conference very generously gave the 11 o'clock hour of their Conference session on Saturday to the consideration of the Orphanage at Ruston. After a brief statement of the needs of the Orphanage, the Conference unanimously passed the following resolution:

In view of the great pressing needs of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage at Ruston, we, the members of the Baton Rouge District Conference, in session at Bogalusa, do hereby pledge our hearty support to this Institution, assisting in every way we can the effort to raise the amount needed to liquidate the indebtedness. We pledge our support in an effort to raise at least an average of fifty cents per member, for every member of the church in the district, and for the Conference year 1910.

This resolution was signed by several of the substantial laymen of the district and some of the leading preachers of the district. There was not a dissenting vote, and we hope that this means a movement which will spread all over the Conference until it becomes a certainty that our people will respond liberally enough to liquidate our indebtedness before Conference.

It is now certain that unless we have some liberal assistance and that before our heavy debt falls due, we will be compelled to abandon our Orphanage work. Surely the Methodist people in the State will not suffer this to be. A bank note for $1000 will fall due the first of July, and there is not a dollar in hand to meet this note. Eight thousand dollars will be due the 1st of November. There will still be left a note of $4000 for November 1911. Just fifty cents per member from the Methodist people in the State, less than five cents per week for one year, would overpay this debt. Surely this much can be raised. Let all help in this great work. ROBT. W. VAUGHAN, Superintendent, Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

Hot Walking Hot Riding

You can't get away from the heat, but you can keep it from hurting. Whenever you're hot, tired or thirsty DRINK

It refreshes mentally and physically—relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. Whole some as the purest water, and lots nicer to drink. See Everywhere.

Delicious—Refreshing—Wholesome

Send for our free booklet, "The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells all about Coca-Cola, what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial.

THE COCA-COLA COMPANY, Atlanta, Ga.

VISIT

MINERAL WELLS

FOR HEALTH AND PLEASURE AND

WEST TEXAS

FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,

General Passenger Agent,

DALLAS TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a. m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves 7:30 p.m.

FOR

NEW YORK, CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW ON SALE.

You Look Prematurely Old

Because of those ugly, grizzled gray hairs. Use "LA CREOLE" HAIR COLOR RESTORER. Price $1.00, retail.

It Is a Burning Shame

that so many Churches are without sufficient insurance, and not properly safeguarded against fire.

The National Mutual Church Insurance Co., of Chicago--The Methodist Mutual furnishes protection and assists in prevention. Also writes tornado insurance. Take part and you can save money.

Advantages: easy payment; no loss policy holders. And your Church is added to share in these benefits.

IT IS UP TO YOU. For applications and particulars address

HENRY P. MADILL, Sec'y and Manager,
184 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Mrs. Alice H. Barclay, Agent M. E. Church South
South Brook 1116, Louisville, Ky.

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00
St. Louis, $26.00
Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares

To ALL Principal Points in the United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD,
141 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
Phone Main 3618.

HER DUTY

"I feel it my duty," writes Mrs. Martha Dingus, of Lykins, Ky., "to inform you what Cardui has done for me. I have been a chronic invalid for years. I reckon I have had about every ailment that women are heir to. I have doctored a great deal with a great many doctors, as we have traveled a great deal in search of health, yet received but little benefit and got no better."

"Four months ago I commenced to use Cardui, and since then have been steadily improving all the time. I am now 46 years old, and am in better health than I have been in 20 years, and I give Cardui the credit for it."

Cardui has been known, during the past 50 years, as a reliable, effective remedy, for the ailments peculiar to women. It is a pure, non-intoxicating preparation, made exclusively from vegetable ingredients, having a special, curative effect on the female system. Cardui has been found to relieve pain and restore disordered functions to health.

If you're ill, don't wait until you have suffered for years before taking Cardui to relieve you. Isn't it your duty to spare yourself this pain? Get Cardui at once. All reliable druggists sell it.

PARALYSIS Locomotor Ataxia. Conquered at Last. Chase's Blood & Nerve Tonic does it. Write for Proof. Advice Free. CHASE, 224 North 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

FITSCURED NO CURE NO PAY. In other words you do not pay our small professional fee until cured and satisfied. American Institute, 824 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

CHILDREN'S DAY FUND.

By E. B. Chappell, Chairman of the Sunday School Board.

That no confusion in regard to the direction of Children's Day Fund may result from the recent action of the General Conference, I beg that you will allow me to make through your paper the following explanation:

1. There will be no change in the direction of the Fund for the present year. That is, ten per cent is to be sent as heretofore to the General Board of Education and ten per cent to Mr. D. M. Smith, Treasurer of the General Sunday School Board, to be used in helping the Sunday school cause in our mission fields. The various Conference Sunday School Boards are to use so much of the remaining eighty per cent as may be required in aiding needy Sunday schools within their respective boundaries and in defraying their own expenses. The rest, whatever it may be, is to be sent to Mr. D. M. Smith, to be applied to the endowment of the Chair of Religious Pedagogy and Sunday schools in Vanderbilt University. The General Conference at Birmingham directed that $50,000 should be raised for this purpose. Of this amount, the treasurer has in hand at present $16,838.21. The Sunday School Board has sent out an appeal for special offerings this year for this chair from all our schools, believing it possible by concerted action to raise the entire balance of $33,161.66.

2. After this year each Conference Board is to retain sixty per cent of the Children's Day Fund for helping needy Sunday schools and carrying on its own work. The other forty per cent is to be forwarded to the Treasurer of the General Sunday School Board, ten per cent to be used as heretofore for Sunday school extension in mission territory at home and abroad and the remainder to be applied to the endowment of the Vanderbilt chair until the sum of $50,000 is raised. After this sum shall have been raised, this thirty per cent is to be used in employing additional field workers to co-operate with the superintendent of training work in holding institutes throughout our territory.

3. This means that ultimately the entire Children's Day Fund is to be used in building up our Sunday school work, sixty per cent being administered by the Conference Boards and the remainder by the General Board. We believe that this definite direction of the fund will, when our plans are clearly understood, greatly increase the sum of our Children's Day offerings. The ends which are proposed will certainly command the interest of our Sunday school workers. The need of teacher training and of an effective policy of Sunday school extension is every year becoming more apparent. Other denominations are raising and expending large sums for meeting this need, and are reaping the fruits in more thorough and systematic Sunday school work and greatly increased enrollment. The Methodist Episcopal Church is calling for $150,000 this year for the use of its General Sunday School Board. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with a definite and comprehensive program of teacher training and Sunday school extension could easily use to advantage $100,000 per annum. But she has no other source from which to secure it except the offerings of Children's Day. I am confident that when this is clearly understood, our Sunday schools will be found ready to meet this urgent demand.

Meanwhile, we are definitely committed to the raising of the $50,000 for the Vanderbilt chair. Let us finish this task at once in order that the Sunday school department may be left free to enter upon the work of carrying out the larger plans which it has in contemplation.

For Brain Fog
Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.
Relieves tired nerves, brain fog and head ache following mental strain, overwork or worry.

WHY YOUR ENGINE IS IN THE IHC LINE

YOU want the simplest, most economical, most reliable and most durable engine made. You want the one that saves the most work, time and money. In short, you want the engine that pays the biggest dividends. That is why your engine is in the IHC line.

After carefully investigating other engines, thousands have chosen from the IHC line. They now know what perfect power-service means, for IHC engines are unequalled for running the many machines on the farm—such as cream separator, wood saw, feed cutter, churn, grindstone, fanning mill, corn sheller, thrasher, shredder, pump, etc.

Wherever you go—IHC engines are giving satisfactory service. Judge by what they are doing for thousands. Judge by comparison—point by point—with other engines. To be absolutely sure of getting the engine that will mean most to you—choose out of the line of

IHC Gasoline Engines

A Size and Style To Suit Every Need

You will get the engine that is best adapted to your work. You will get the engine that will work simplest, cheapest and best. You will get a simple engine that you can depend on. IHC engines are made in many sizes and styles. Whichever one you choose—is best in its class.

IHC Vertical engines are made in 2, 3 and 25-horsepower; IHC Horizontal engines (portable and stationary) are made in 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 15, 20 and 25-horsepower; Famous air-cooled engines are made in 1, 2 and 3-horsepower; Hopper cooled engines are made in 2, 2½, 3, 4, 6 and 8-horsepower; and there are also IHC sawing, spraying and pumping outfits—besides the International tractors—successful in every contest, winning the highest honors at home and abroad—made in 12, 15 and 20-horsepower sizes.

See the local International dealer at once. Let him tell you all about the IHC engine that meets your needs exactly. You will be well repaid for your visit. If you prefer, write direct to us about the engines you are most interested in and we will promptly send you catalogues and any special information you request.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY OF AMERICA

(Incorporated)
CHICAGO U.S.A.

"It Turns Your Waste Material Into Dollars."

THREE MACHINES IN ONE.

SHORT Log Saw Mill, Lath and Shingle Machine. Does all kinds of sawing. Just the machine for small Saw Mills and Farmers' use.

It's a Big Money Maker.

Write for circulars and particulars.

Manufactured only by
COLUMBIAN IRON WORKS,
Chattanooga, Tenn.

Methodist Benevolent Association

Ministers and Laymen of Southern Methodist Church. Benefits at Death, or Old Age, or Disability. Over $80,000 paid to Widows, Orphans, Disabled. Insurance at cost. If in good health, write for rates and other information.

CARE METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Summer Tours

VIA

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

California, Colorado, Utah, Mexico,
AND ALL THE WEST.

NEW YORK

And ALL EASTERN and NORTHERN RESORTS

See Your Local Agent for full Particulars, or Write

J. H. R. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La.

C. W. MURPHEY, City Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La.

BUSINESS MEN'S BIBLE CLASS. BOONEVILLE METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Organized in the autumn of 1907, reorganized January, 1909. Enrollment, 155; attendance about 100. Mrs. Mollie Allen, teacher; Mr. S. D. Bell, assistant teacher; Mr. Terry D. Rees, president; Mr. J. A. Cunningham, vice president; Mr. Walter Bolton, secretary; Miss Evelyn Allen, assistant secretary; Colonel L. P. Reynolds, treasurer; Mr. J. J. Taylor, Sunday-school superintendent; Rev. J. H. Holder, pastor. New lecture room, 36x50 feet.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

Sister G. T. ROBINSON, nee Watson, was born July 17, 1880, near Tulip, in Claiborne Parish, La., and died April 20, 1910, at her home in Homer. Sister Robinson was a devoted Christian, a faithful wife, a devoted mother, a kind friend. Her departure from us is a loss to the church, to the home and to the community. She leaves a husband, six little girls, and many near relatives and friends who sadly miss her until that glorious day in which we hope to meet her in the eternal city of our God. Verily, "She hath done what she could; may her children follow her example, as she followed Christ, and all her bereaved loved ones and friends live so true to God that in the great judgment day they may renew in that perfect realm the sweet associations thus broken on earth."

Her Pastor,
WM. H. COLEMAN.

MISS MELVINA ROOK, one of God's noble women, passed away on the afternoon of May 8th, 1910, at the home of her niece, Mrs. Geo. L. Patherree, at Overt, Miss. Miss Rook was born the 6th of June, 1838. She had lived a long and useful life, lacking only one month of being 72 years old. She passed away calm and peaceful, without the agony of a protracted illness. She was laid to rest in the Overt Cemetery to await the coming of her Lord. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when she was a young girl, and had lived a consistent member ever since. Her kindly ministry will be missed, as will her words of hope and encouragement. Hers was a happy, peaceful life. She knew that God had been good to her, and she was waiting for Him to say, enough; willing that His will should be done. So she rests in her Lord; rests for the glory that is to come, waiting for the trump to sound. Her pastor,
J. C. CHAMBERS.

The subject of this memoir, SAMUEL WALKER, was born March 2, 1820, and died at his home near Lorraine, Miss., Feb. 17, 1910, lacking only a few days of being 90 years of age. Brother Walker was happily married Feb. 13, 1852, to Miss Elizabeth Jane Byrd. Ten children, six daughters and four sons, were the fruit of this union. Three of the sons and two of the daughters died before the father. J. N. Walker, the only son living, resides at the old homestead. Mrs. Kelly lives almost in sight of the old home. Mrs. Gale lives in Gulfport; Mrs. Saucier and Mrs. Dr. Hopper live at Saucier. Brother Walker united with the M. E. Church, South, when a young man, and so far as I know, lived a consistent Christian life till God called him to the skies. Brother Walker was the exact opposite of his wife (Aunt Jane), she being very emotional, while he was very quiet and composed. To judge his piety or gauge his religion, one need look at what he did rather than at what he said; at his life, instead of his profession. He was faithful in attending the services of his church, and for his day, was quite liberal in supporting it. I was his pastor in 1888, and remember he paid one-fourth the entire assessment of his church, which had a large membership. One of the best comments on his life is his children, all of whom are members of the church of their father and devout Christians. It was my privilege to be at his funeral, and although it was an unusually cold day, quite a large number were present, and many kind words were spoken touching his life and piety. R. A. BRELAND.

ISHAM JULIAN PATTERSON was born Jan. 10, 1835, in North Carolina, and died in the home of his daughter at Vina, Ala., on Jan. 23, 1910. He moved to Alabama with his parents when a boy. There were thirteen children in the family, nine of whom were boys, and three of these were preachers in the M. E. Church, South. He joined the Methodist Church while in his teens and lived a consistent member until his death. He sought to glorify God by an upright, pure and righteous life, rather than by high-sounding professions. In 1855 he was happily married to Miss Margaret A. Blackburn, of which union there were born eight children, three of whom were boys, and one of them is a preacher. In 1874 God saw fit in his wisdom to take his good wife and our dear, good mother from us. In 1876 he was happily married to Mrs. Helen Harrison, of which union were born five children, one boy and four girls. Seven are left to mourn their loss, while six were waiting to greet him in the glory land. He was a good and loving husband and father.

"Earth to earth and dust to dust,
Calmly now the words we say;
Left behind, we wait in trust
For the resurrection day.
Father, in thy gracious keeping
Leave we now thy servant sleeping.
His daughter, LEONA.

MRS. MARTHA INABNET, aged 57 years, 10 months and 10 days, died at her home near Utica, Miss., May 17, 1910. She was married to Mr. John Inabnet at the age of 16. She was a faithful member of the Methodist Church. She leaves a husband, seven children and one brother to mourn their loss. She was born and reared in the community where she died, and every one who knew her loved her. Of this saintly woman naught can be said but words of praise. She was the most motherly of mothers. Her whole life was spent in deeds of kindness, and the influence of her consecrated life through her children and associates is indeed immeasurable. There is a vacant place in the home that never can be filled. But our Father said, it was enough, lay down the cross and take up the crown. Loved ones, weep not as those who have no hope. She is not dead, but sleepeth. We look forward with the blessed assurance of meeting her beyond the vale of tears, where we will never say goodbye to those we love so dearly.

"A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled."

Her nieces,
ETHEL MARBEE
STELLA RAINEY.

Sister ADDIE RAGSDALE GREGORY was born in North Carolina, May 1881, and died at her home in Homer, La., April 19, 1910. Her maiden name was Annie Ragdale. She was married to F. R. Gregory on Feb. 7, 1897. The Lord gave them three children, one of whom preceded the mother to the home beyond. The other two, Emerson, aged 12, and Alberta, aged 10, are left to cheer the heart of the bereaved husband. Sister Gregory was a devout Christian in the home and in society, as well as in the church. She was active in the Sunday-school work. It was a beautiful example that this family set others in their devotion to the service of their Lord. They were all always present at all the services of the church, unless unavoidably detained. Sister Gregory had suffered intensely and long, but in all she was patient and trustful. May the Lord comfort and bless her bereaved loved ones and kindly gather them, a united family, into the mansions above. Her pastor,

WM. H. COLEMAN.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, God in his all-wise goodness and infinite wisdom, has taken from our midst our friend and beloved Sunday-school superintendent, Mr. W. M. JINKINS, he it is resolved:

First—That we as a Sunday school deeply deplore the loss of such a friend, but rejoice that an entrance to the heavenly kingdom has been his, and thank God for his beautiful life and service in the cause of Christ; that this church, this community, and this country have sustained a great loss in his decease, and will miss him most when a call is made for a conscientious, fearless man.

Second—That the memory and example of this consecrated man yet works in the lives of his friends and family.

Third—That while we miss his pleasant face and encouraging words in our Sunday school, we will cherish his memory and strive to emulate his example.

Fourth—That we extend to the family our greatest sympathy in this their dark hour of bereavement.

Fifth—That this tribute to the memory of our deceased brother be spread on the minutes of our Sunday-school and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. (Signed)

Mrs. S. E. Calloway; Mrs. T. R. Montgomery; Mrs. R. B. Eggleston; Mrs. G. P. Hodges; Mrs. J. F. McCullers. Mattson, Miss.

The death angel has again invaded our town (Vardaman), entered the home of Brother J. H. Ramsey, and claimed the father and grandfather, our dear brother, AUGUSTUS M. RAMSEY. He was a kind father, a good grandfather, a splendid neighbor, and a bright Christian. Brother Ramsey was born in Carroll County, Ga., Dec. 12, 1835; moved when only an infant with his parents to Fayette County, Ala., and lived there until he was about fifteen years of age. From there the family moved to Pontotoc County, Miss., where he lived until he reached his majority. He moved to Calhoun County in 1857, and settled near where the town of Vardaman now stands. He was happily married to Miss Mary F. Evans July 8, 1858. Of this union were born four boys; three of whom died in infancy—one, J. H. Ramsey, cashier of the Vardaman Home Bank, survives to mourn for him. His devoted companion departed this life March 6, 1899, in full triumph of a Christian faith. Brother Ramsey professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1859 or 1860, and lived a consistent Christian life until the day of his death. He departed this life March 19, 1910. We cherish his memory. He was a true friend, loyal to his church and kind to his preacher. A good man has gone. Weep not, dear relatives and friends, for he has gone to his reward in heaven. Blessed are they which are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb. (Rev. 19:9)

W. C. CARLISLE, P. C.

Mrs. SARAH ELIZABETH JOHNSON was born in Lauderdale County, Miss., May 13, 1826, and died April 4, 1910. She was only a few years old when her mother moved to Copiah County, where she was reared. She joined the Methodist Church in 1835. She lived as a Christian and died as a Christian should. She was married to Mr. C. M. Johnson in 1846. She was the mother of ten children, all living but two. She had sixty-two grand children and ninety-four great grandchildren. She was left a widow in 1895. She lived to see her youngest child grown and married. Only four of her children were able to come to her funeral, and only nine days after her death one of her daughters followed her to the other world. All who knew her certainly will miss her. She said she was ready and was willing to die. She was laid to rest in the family graveyard, and the pastor of her church conducted the funeral service. But we all must remember our loss is her gain. We all miss our dear mother and grandmother, but we know where to meet her in the sweet by and by. Her granddaughter, LILLIAN.

How often have God's people been led to glory in their infirmities and triumph in their afflictions, seeing the power of Christ, rests more abundantly upon them. The strength which the hour of trial brings often makes the Christian a wonder to himself. Selected.

Marriages

At the home of the bride's mother, in Arkabutla, Miss., on May 1, 1910, by Rev. A. F. Moore, Mr. CONRAD B. WALKER and Miss FAY CARLTON, both of Arkabutla, Miss.

At the home of the bride's parents, Rev. and Mrs. W. G. Bockus, Mississippi City, Miss., by Rev. W. T. Griffin, Mr. T. E. MORRIS, of Gulfport, Miss., and Miss NELLIE GREY BOCKUS.

April 27, 1910, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Wm. Young, in Arcadia, La., by Rev. Robt O. Wier, Mr. GEO. G. PETTIGREW and Miss MARY YOUNG.

May 18, 1910, at the Methodist Church, West Miss., by Rev. W. F. Rogers, Mr. L. D. MOSS and Miss GROVER ROGERS.

April 21, 1910, at the residence of Mrs. Nora Ehlers, Escatawpa, Miss., by Rev. C. M. Martin, Mr. J. C. CARTER and Miss LULA G. DAVIS, of Wade, Miss.

APPRECIATED IN CALIFORNIA.

Dear Brother Meek: The news of the death of dear Brother Oats gave me exquisite pain. He was a splendid man, pure as a sunbeam, true as the needle, with the strength of Gibraltar. I loved him very dearly, and my appreciation was heightened with the years. I knew that he was far from robust, for so he had written me, but I was unprepared for the sad news of his passing away, and in the information I sustained a great shock.

He was held in great esteem by the brethren out here on the Pacific Coast, where he labored so diligently for many years. Only a short time ago the Nestor of this Conference, himself a stalwart hero of the cross, Rev. John W. Allen, said to me that in Brother Oats our Church possessed one of its truest and strongest men. He declared that we might do far worse than to elect him to the episcopacy, in which opinion I readily concurred.

ISAAC D. BORDERS.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors of the Corinth District.

I have been requested to write a history of the District, and in order to do so will need the District Conference Records. Will you be kind enough to inquire of your congregations if they know where any of them can be found and request them to send them to me? I have the two last ones running back twelve years, but back of that I have not been able to find any of them. Please attend to this, and any information about them will be appreciated.

HARDY W. REES.

Booneville, Miss.

"I speak as a man of the world to men of the world; and I say to you, Search the Scriptures! The Bible is the Book of all others, to be read at all ages and in all conditions of human life; not to be read once or twice or thrice through, and then laid aside; but to be read in small portions of one or two chapters every day, and never to be intermitted unless by some overruling necessity."—John Q. Adams.

ESTABLISHED 1858.
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

PLYMYER BELL CHURCH BELLS
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Bowlden BELL CHURCH & SCHOOL BELLS
Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1910.

C. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

VOL. 57—No. 24.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2536.

WHAT KIND OF SERMONS DO LAYMEN LIKE?

By Bishop Joseph F. Berry, D.D.

I have thirty books in my library which discuss homiletical themes. These volumes present all the phases of sermon-making and sermon-preaching. They are full of suggestion, exposition, illustration, and exhortation. No young minister could read any of the books without profit.

Now it happens that all of these books were written by ministers. Is that not right, you ask? Are not law books written by lawyers, and medical books by physicians, and astronomical books by astronomers, and sociological books by sociological specialists? Is it not to be expected, therefore, that all discussion of preaching shall be by preachers—experts on the subject they attempt to present? The point is pertinent. And yet, would you not like to read just one book on preaching which was not written by a preacher?

Laymen are not without opinions on homiletical themes. They know what good preaching is, or at least they know what their standard of such preaching is. They have heard a great variety of sermons and have noted their effect upon the congregations. Who is in a position to observe so closely the excellencies as well as the defects of the pulpit? Why would it not be a profitable thing for one of more of our intelligent laymen to give us a new treatise on homiletics, written from the angle of the pew?

This reflection was the inspiration of twenty letters which I sent out the other day to as many Methodist laymen. I sent the letters somewhat at random, having no previous intimation of what the replies would be. The question asked was this: "What kind of sermons do laymen need and like?" Nineteen answers have come back to me, and the views expressed I will now share with the readers of the Northwestern.

Oscar P. Miller (banker, Rock Rapids, Ia.): Well-prepared, clear-cut gospel sermons from a man who has been much in prayer and has the burden of souls upon his heart.

H. T. Ames (attorney, Williamsport, Pa.): The kind of sermons which I need and like are those which unfold the Word of God and so apply it that when I leave the sanctuary I feel that I must be a better man. This is the preaching which the people demand from the pulpit and with no other will the pew be satisfied.

D. S. Gray (capitalist, Columbus, O.): Speaking for myself alone, I will say that the sermons which please and help me most are those which are permeated with the evangelistic spirit and tone. And the preacher who suits me best is the one that is an evangelist in the sense of leading men into communion with God, or as another has put it, "The transmitting of the divine life and the influencing of men to place allegiance to the kingdom of Jesus Christ." Something of this spirit and purpose I conceive should be the work of every man who has taken upon himself the vows of the ministry.

Alexander Reymick (United States pension agent, Caro, Mich.): I like the plainest and most practical gospel sermons. I want sin and salvation emphasized, with an earnest invitation to sinners to accept of mercy. I do not like sermons that are so broad that they discount the essentials of the old gospel.

W. L. Sykes (lumberman, Buffalo, N. Y.): Laymen do not care for essays. They do not want the Bible picked to pieces and doubts raised that we would never think of if they were not suggested by the pulpit. We like a preacher who believes tremendously what he believes, and makes us believe it, too.

James E. (real estate, Baltimore, Md.): We need sermons delivered "hissing hot" from a heart all aglow with the love of God. An appeal to the heart is more important than one to the head. Doctrinal preaching has its place, but religion applied to the every day needs of life always interests and helps men.

Charles Gibson (wholesale druggist, Albany, N. Y.): Laymen like sermons which are preached as if the preacher believed what he is saying, not stuff which has no meaning, but good, square, honest statements as to faith and practice. Laymen not only like but need this. I have often thought that if I were a minister I would try to preach sermons so that people would come into the church as unbelievers and go away as believers.

Dr. Samuel Dickie (president of Albion College, Albion, Mich.): Some laymen need and some laymen like one kind of sermon and some another. On the whole, I am disposed to believe that the average layman needs and likes a sermon with a judicious mingling of instruction which appeals to the intellect, and emotional utterances which rouse his feelings and incline to better conduct. But a sermon, however intellectual or however instructive it may be, is always short of what it should be if the listener is not moved to resolve within himself that at some point he will improve because of the illuminating and inspiring influence of what he has heard.

H. S. Kennedy (manufacturer, Troy, N. Y.): Laymen like sermons which inspire hope and which make plain to them not only their responsibility toward God, but also their responsibility toward their fellow-men. In other words, that which will show them how they can be of the greatest service in life. While we appreciate oratory, rhetoric and theology, yet we like the sermon which touches the heart and awakens within us that which responds in the life as it is lived out each day.

George C. Rosa (wholesale grocer, Wellsville, N. Y.): There is no doubt in my mind that laymen need straight, thorough gospel sermons. It is, my judgment, based on observation of more than twenty-five years, that this is the kind of sermon they like. A minister who has a real call to the ministry feels it his duty to preach the gospel. It seems to me that he cannot satisfy his conscience by furnishing anything short of the best. Essays or talks on "catchy" topics or frivolous things are usually makeshifts to bring the people. A minister who permits himself to do this will always lose his self-respect and will soon lose his congregation. If a minister feels in his own soul that men must be regenerated or be lost, he should lay it on the hearts of the people as though he really meant it.

James G. Shepherd (coal operator, Scranton, Pa.): Sermons to be effective must be simple, plain statements of the truth, in good, chaste English. They must teach that Christ is divine, merciful, but just, while man is finite, sinful, and lost without salvation. The average man does not shrink from the real facts and approves of their fearless and personal application to the pew. I like the gospel message that has a touch of tenderness, rings with logic, and is given with the power of the Spirit. Such preaching will stir men, arousing them to their need, and cause the soul to reach out after Jesus Christ.

Thomas H. Murray (attorney, Clearfield, Pa.): The kind of preaching laymen need is that which deals largely with the humanity of Christ—his wonderful sympathy with men in their trials and temptations and errors. This is illustrated by his relation to Peter after the betrayal and denial and many other instances showing his insight into the good in men despite their errors. One reason why laymen need this kind of preaching is that their life puts them up against the rough edge of business conflict and trial, of which the clergy have much less practical knowledge and experience. Laymen do not need the kind of preaching commonly called sensational—that which deals with the froth and foam of current life. To a greater extent than is appreciated by the clergy, they need and like the kind of preaching of which Paul speaks in the fourteenth chapter of Romans, in which he distinguishes meat and drink from the things which make for righteousness and peace.

Governor Glascock of West Virginia: I have sometimes thought that the layman did not like the kind of sermon that he needed, and yet I doubt if that is the rule. I believe the average layman likes something that will be helpful to him in his everyday life. He wants to have pointed out to him the snares and pitfalls which often prove fatal to the unwary. He has a strong preference for the sermon that deals with the practical things of life in a common-sense and practical way. If the sermon makes him feel that in his troubles and disappointments there is always present One to whom he can go for aid and assistance, One who is able to do something for him and help him to bear his troubles, he always goes away with a new sense of courage and strength.

H. E. Dingley (president of Methodist Brotherhood, Syracuse, N. Y.): The kind of preaching laymen do not like is that which seeks to discredit the Bible. They will not tolerate the preacher who attacks the authority of the Holy Scriptures, or seeks to shake our faith in its inspiration. Men do not like sermons where the pastor airs his doubts and speculations; they have enough of these themselves. We expect the minister to be an investigator and a student, but he should not bring his guesses before the people. The kind of sermons laymen do like are those which help to a clean, straight, and true life in all relations, political, social, business, or domestic. Men are out in the struggle and stress of life surrounded by temptations and testings of every nature, with sharp and keen competition, and they ask the minister to come to them with a message which will make them overcomers in the strife, and that will constantly remind them of their duty to the State, the home, our brother, and our Maker. The sermon must be direct and close without being censorious, and the preacher frank, fair, and fearless. Sin is sin, and men do not want the plain truth sugar-coated. We like gospel sermons pulsating with the message of redemption. The story of Jesus and his love will reach hearts, will help people nearer to God.

William Phillips Hall (manufacturer, New York City): Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost exalted our Lord Jesus Christ, the Holy Spirit, God the Father and God's written Word. It proved remarkably effective in convicting sinners, creating saints, and inspiring to immediate action. It was eminently scriptural, very positive, intensely personal, and delivered with "the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven." That type of sermon does not seem to be much in fashion these days. Might it not be well for our preachers generally to return to the Petrine, Pentecostal model? There is such a thing as the science of effective sermonizing. It is said that the reading by an indifferent preacher of Jonathan Edwards's celebrated sermon, "Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God," produced remarkable results. If it is still true that other things being equal, "like causes produce like effects," might not a return to apostolic sermonizing produce apostolic results? I am inclined to believe that most laymen prefer constructive rather than destructive, and positive rather than negative deliverances in the pulpit. Sermons that ring true to the old faith and the old Book—and the Christ of both—are needed, imperatively needed, in our pulpits to-day. Men who preach such sermons win success and help the laity. The other kind of sermons—dealing with the so-called new theology—win no laymen and save no souls.

John L. Romer (attorney, Buffalo, N. Y.): Laymen need, and want, straightforward, gospel preaching, from pastors whose chief concern it is to turn the people from their sins. When we want an essay of literary excellence, or a volume of scientific research, the bookstores supply our need. We go to church to be taught concerning God's will and the way of salvation by men supposed to be especially fitted for the purpose. If we don't get what we go for, we cease going. Present-day clergymen gild and refine too much. They seem to forget there is a judgment day. The Beatitudes are lovely, but the tables of the law engraved on Sinai make good foundations whereon to build personal and national character. Insurance presidents, bank cashiers, municipal treasurers are being tried, or committing suicide, for larceny every day; yet I do not remember ever hearing a sermon from the text, "Thou shalt not steal." If I were a minister I would choose as a text for my first sermon: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," and should there be any mutterings about "middle ages," or "John Calvin," or "Puritanism," I would quote from Lincoln: "If God will that it continue until all the wealth piled by the bondman's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword, as was said three thousand years ago, so still it must be said, the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether."

John A. Patten (manufacturer, Chattanooga, Tenn.): Laymen like sermons which show that the preacher is not a stranger to the atmosphere in which they live, but on the contrary can bring them the gospel they need because he personally knows it is adequate for just such busy lives as theirs. That does not mean an easy "opportunist" or "sugar-coated" gospel. For men respect a gospel that calls for manly sacrifice—they will enlist for service that appears to be a grown man's task.

Dr. Henry W. Rogers (dean of the law school of Yale University): You ask me, "What kind of sermons do laymen need and like?" The sermons which laymen need are not necessarily the sermons which they like. One may easily need what he does not like and he may like what he does not need. The sermons which the pew needs to have preached to-day are those which the pew has needed to have preached for nineteen centuries. The ministry of to-day needs to remember the words of Paul: "For I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." The pulpit will be powerful in the degree in which it adheres to the example of Paul. Mr. Beecher said fifty years ago that "it is Christ faithfully preached and rightly understood that has power to do for this world what it needs to have done." That statement is just as true in 1910 as in 1860. And it has been true ever since the days of Christ. The pew does not need sermons on science, or philosophy, or politics, or literature. What information the pew needs on those subjects it prefers to derive from other sources than the pulpit.

Henry Date (publisher, Chicago, Ill.): The average layman usually "likes" the sermon he "needs." The pew can get its secular facts and data from books and periodicals. The man in it does not need to go to church to get his gray matter into a state of oscillation. Essays and lectures can be bought in open market at bargain prices, and are delivered as second-class matter for $1.00 the hundredweight. If this is not enough, the phonograph mail order house will deliver a like portion in cylinder form and furnish a sound-emitting machine on the weekly installment plan. The preacher of to-day has not an easy task, for he usually has to produce a vacuum before he can succeed in getting what he has to offer into the personage who sits before him. In the beginning of every service he has to face a preoccupied congregation. The layman goes to Church to get acquainted with himself and to meet his Maker. The successful preacher is a pathfinder and knows how to lead those he talks to into the inner sanctuary, where dwells the Shekinah. He must be a veritable day-man and a go-between in the best sense of that term. Each of these laymen is a member of an important Methodist Episcopal Church. Each writes with evident candor. Should not the message which each has written, compressed into a brief and burning paragraph, challenge the attention of our ministry?

There is a surprising agreement among my correspondents. If they really represent the pew in their conception of the motive and method of gospel preaching, then some of our pulpits are making a fearful mistake. Not even one of these laymen asks for theological speculations. Not one asks for ethical generalizations. Not one asks for the exploitation of the latest sociological fad. Not one craves the husks of Biblical criticism. On the other hand, almost every one pleads for the gospel, and that the gospel shall be preached with absolute honesty and plainness. They want a direct, courageous, unvarnished declaration of the truth, and insist that the message shall be so practical and close-fitting that it will make its personal appeal to every saint and sinner. Some of my correspondents occupy high places in great business corporations. Others are conspicuous in professional and political life. Not one, I think, could be called an "old fogey." It is an encouraging sign when such men, men of brain and leadership, will write as they have written.

After all, the needs of a human heart are the same everywhere. Men appreciate something of the awfulness of sin and would like to shake off its fetters. They are not only conscious of its presence, but of its logical and certain doom. And though they may not admit it, most persons really hunger for Jesus Christ. They want to know more of his mission and message. Upon the whole, they think well of Christ, and yearn for his sympathy and help in their hard struggle. And they like a preacher who will look them straight in the eye and tell them the truth —tell them the truth about sin, and the judgment, and hell as well as about salvation and holiness and heaven. God pity the preacher who feels it necessary to veneer the truth, and who must always apologize when he speaks of sin and the judgment.

If the young ministers who read this paper shall be encouraged to attempt a more plain, more practical, more searching, more resultful style of gospel preaching, the gathering of this material will not have been in vain. At any rate, we are under obligations to our lay brethren for their frank and forceful words.—The Northwestern Christian Advocate, Buffalo, N. Y.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

Chapter XV.

On my return home from Conference in 1885, I said to my wife, "Well, we have to move to Lauderdale." She looked surprised and troubled, then said, "I wish Bishop McTyeire could just look in our house and see the sick ones." About five of our children and two grandchildren were sick with measles in our house, and my poor wife was about broken down. Dr. Hennington, our family physician, and his good wife, together with other good women, gave us every attention needed. It was a month or more before we could move. Late in January, 1886, we left Tryon, one morning with two of our children still sick.

A Sister Grace, precious woman, had prepared a lunch-basket, well-filled with good things to eat, and gave it to us as we passed her house. ("I was hungry and ye fed me.") She will never know, perhaps, how it was appreciated. We never left better people behind than we did when we left Tryon, or Providence Circuit. At Wesson we took the train; about sun-down we got to Jackson. The Legislature was in session, many visitors were in the city, so we soon learned "there was no room for us in the inns." There we were, in the depot, with two sick children, and no place to sleep. Dr. C. G. Andrews, precious man, came to our relief. He secured a room for us with two beds. There were eight of us, so we slept, four in a bed. Yet, with it all, we were cheerful and happy. We were in the Lord's work, and we felt sure the Lord would provide.

It was late in the day before we got a train to Meridian, and it was 8 or 9 o'clock when we arrived there. In a little while we were aboard a train on the Mobile and Ohio road, and by 10 p. m. we were at Lauderdale. We were piloted to a hotel, where we were forced to go to sleep, hungry, not having had anything to eat in ten hours. We slept the best we could with four in a bed. Next morning, after late breakfast, I started out in search of the preacher's home. An old, dilapidated box-house was pointed out to me. It was in what had been a "frog-pond." I soon procured the key and opened up the house. I found that good women had been there. A ton of coal, a barrel of flour, sugar, coffee, rice, and other good things had been put there for the incoming preacher and family. In a day or two, two good women came to the parsonage and handed the preacher $40. We soon learned that we were among good friends. We find good people everywhere. But why did Bishop McTyeire send me to Lauderdale? We shall see.

In about a week after we got to Lauderdale, a Mrs. Kennedy, my organist, said to me one day, "Brother Lewis, what do you think of the holiness people?" I did not understand what she meant, hence I said, "What did you say?" She repeated, "What do you think of the holiness people?" I said to her, "I don't understand what you mean." I assured her I had not heard of any holiness people in Lauderdale. She then said, "I fear they are going to break up our church," then added, "Don't misunderstand me, I believe they are good people, but they are 'cranky.'" Afterwards I heard a man say, "There is room in heaven for fools and cranks, but no room for hypocrites and unbelievers." I said to Sister K., "I can't answer your question. Wait till I am prepared to give an intelligent answer; then, if I deem it best to do so, I will answer it; if not, I won't answer it." I never did answer it. I then began to understand, in part, why I was sent there.

I moved along as prudently, and cautiously, and prayerfully as I could. Much of my time was spent on my knees, pleading with God for divine guidance in all matters. The holiness people met for worship every Friday night and every first Sunday. In my absence, my good wife attended one of their meetings. She heard the bell-ringing, so she went to church, not knowing it was a "holiness" meeting. She was well dressed, had on a nice bonnet with a feather in it. She had no idea what a sensation her presence produced among some of the people. She listened attentively to what was read, sang and said. She soon felt at home. At the proper time she arose with a face beaming with love and sweetness, and gave in one of the brightest, most ringing testimonies of entire sanctification some of those people had ever heard. She, notwithstanding her bonnet with a feather in it, captivated the entire congregation. They were delighted to know they had a preacher whose wife had religion enough to prompt her to get up and tell it.

A few evenings afterward, wife and I went to one of their prayer meetings. We knew we were being watched. Some people hated these people worse than they did the devil, and they did not fail to let the new preacher and wife know what they thought of these people. On entering the church, we found a good crowd had assembled; the leader was just ready to begin the service. He began by singing a song I had often heard my mother sing, "What can sweetly fill my soul?" Nothing but the love of Jesus." It was sung in a low, sweet, mellow tone, and it thrilled me through and through.

I got along all right with the holiness people by exercising patience, kindness and forbearance. Good seed had been sown; tares also had been sown among the wheat. "An enemy had done it." When the devil can't prevent a revival of religion, his next move is to spoil it if he can. And strange to say, he sometimes gets some preachers to help him. After I had been there over two years, a Dr. Peters, of the Presbyterian Church, who had sided against the holiness people, said to me one day, "Brother Lewis, I heartily approve the course you have pursued since you came here." He then said, "Say what you please, these holiness people have done us good—put some of our people to reading the Bible—something some of them did but little of before." Later, one of the leaders among the holiness people said to me, "I heartily approve the course you have pursued."

But for a few "come-outers," who are always hurtful to the good cause, the holiness people would have been a greater blessing to that section. We need more holiness among us. We spent three years on the Lauderdale Circuit. I am so glad Bishop McTyeire sent me there. My experience with the holiness people was helpful to me.

Capt. Porter and family, Dr. Stevenson, Sisters Webb and Kennedy, Dave Archer, Allen Morse, John Cockeran, Brother Bucher and many others, we found to be good, sensible people. Because of the spirit of "come-outism" that prevailed in some communities, I spent some sleepless nights, pleading with God for help. On one occasion, after preaching at Brogan's Chapel in the forenoon, Mt. Hebron in the afternoon, I accepted an invitation to go and spend the night with Dr. Sylliman and wife of the Presbyterian Church. On entering the house, Sister Sylliman pointed to a lounge and told me to rest. In a few minutes I was asleep. When I waked, Dr. Sylliman was sitting near me. As soon as he discovered I was awake, he began to repeat some verses said to have been written by Miss Caroline A. Mason. As these verses have been a blessing to me more than once, I will insert them here, hoping they may be helpful to others.

Whichever way the wind doth blow,
Some heart is glad to have it so;
Then blow it east, or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best.

My little craft sails not alone;
A thousand fleets from every zone
Are out upon a thousand seas,
What blows for one a favoring breeze.

Might dash another with the shock
Of doom upon some hidden rock.
And so I do not dare to pray
For winds to waft me on my way.

But leave it to a higher will
To stay or speed me, trusting still
That all is well, and soon that he
Who launched my bark will sail with me.

Through storm and calm, and will not fail,
Whatever breezes may prevail,
To land me, every peril passed,
Within his sheltering haven at last.

Then whatsoever wind that blows
My heart is glad to have it so.
Then blow it east, or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best."

CENTENARY COMMENCEMENT.

The close of another session of our Shreveport school was a time of gratitude and bright hope for the future. Dr. Weber's prolonged and critical illness, beginning early in the session, created an emergency in the affairs of the school which was wisely and providentially met by the local trustees in securing, against his natural inclinations, Dr. Felix R. Hill, first as temporary head, and later as president. It now seems providential that Dr. Hill was unable to continue pastoral work this year, that he might pilot our vessel through troublous waters.

His report shows that all current expenses have been paid, and that plans have been wisely perfected for the work of another session. Attractive catalogs have been printed; a good faculty engaged, and canvassers are going to work during the summer. Strenuous work seems to have benefited Dr. Hill's health, and the spirit of youth animates his countenance.

Splendid sermons are reported to have been preached on Sunday by Dr. Henry and Brother Shankle.

On Monday evening a most elegant banquet was served in the college dining hall by the Shreveport women, the guests being alumni, trustees, city pastors, and other friends. A happy greeting was given by Dr. Hill, and spirited responses were made by Judge Murff and Col. Jno. A. Young, the latter being one of the few survivors of the noted class of '55. In the college chapel, on the same evening, an oratorical contest took place in which the alumni medal was worthily won by Ashley Warlick, son of Rev. T. J. Warlick, and Judge A. C. Fullilove delivered in tasteful diction the annual alumni address. The alumni voted to turn over to Dr. Hill the G. H. Wiley fund to invest in the president's home on the campus, the same to perpetuate the name of that good man who left such ineffaceable imprint upon hundreds of lives in the days now past.

The following resolutions were passed by the board of trustees:

Resolved, That the board, in its regular annual session, held in the college June 7, 1910, endorse, ratify and confirm the course of the local members in their action growing out of the sickness and resignation of President Weber, which resulted in the election of Rev. Felix R. Hill, D.D., as president of the Centenary College of Louisiana, express our appreciation of the wise manner in which they met the emergency, and hereby pledge our hearty and fervent sympathy and support for the future good of the school. Signed by J. M. Henry, W. Schuble.

The following resolutions were also passed:

Whereas Dr. W. L. Weber has been compelled through ill-health to give up his work as president of Centenary College, therefore be it resolved,

First—That we express our great appreciation of his faithful and efficient service during the important period of our college re-organization.

Second—That we earnestly hope that he will entirely regain his health and be able to resume educational work.

Third—That in parting from him, we pray God's richest blessings upon himself and family. Signed by R. H. Wynn, J. M. Henry.

The board conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. J. M. Henry, of Baton Rouge, and Prof. Thomas Carter, of Vanderbilt University, honors worthily bestowed.

The board has negotiated for a connection with the city water works so that the supply of water for another session will be ample, and the inconvenience under which the school has labored heretofore will be a thing of the past.

The atmosphere of the college is radiant with hope. R. H. WYNN.

CLOSING EXERCISES AT CENTENARY.

The commencement exercises at Centenary are attracting large crowds from Shreveport in addition to the number of visitors who are with us.

Yesterday at First Church and last night at Noel Memorial, two of the best sermons ever heard in Shreveport were delivered. The commencement sermon was preached by Rev. J. M. Henry, of Baton Rouge. His theme was, "The Revelation of God." He introduced his remarks by saying that it was very important for the young men just entering life in its truest meaning, that they should know God. He further said that the only way by which we can really know God is through his Son, Jesus Christ, whom he has revealed to us.

At night Rev. A. G. Shankle preached the annual Y. M. C. A. sermon. His text was, "He that would save his life shall lose it, and he that would lose his life for my sake shall find it." When he had finished, the text meant more to those who heard him than it had ever meant before.

This evening at 6 o'clock, the exercises at the college were commenced. First, a delicious banquet was served by the Methodist ladies of Shreveport to the president, faculty, alumni, and students of Centenary College. After the banquet the annual alumni meeting was held in the college library. At 8:15 the contest for the "Alumni Medal" was held in the college chapel. This medal is given by Judge A. J. Murff, and is intended to take the place of the old "McGehee Medal" which for many years was given at old Centenary. "The Alumni Medal" was won by Mr. A. W. Warlick, of Shreveport, son of Dr. T. J. Warlick, presiding elder of the Shreveport district. The rest of the exercises give promise of just as much interest as has been shown thus far.

Tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock a contest in declamation will be held. Six young men will participate in this contest, and the interest in the outcome is very keen.

Centenary closes this school term with brighter prospects than for the past twenty years, and her friends have just cause to be proud. We have every reason to believe that next year will be one of the most prosperous in the history of the college.

WM. CENTENARY HONEYCUTT.

CENTENARY COLLEGE NOTES.

Please allow me space in your valuable paper to mention some of the happenings at Centenary College. We have had a fine year and good work has been done. Under the leadership of our beloved president, Dr. Felix R. Hill, who is dear to the hearts of all the students and the people of Shreveport, and with the co-operation of a splendid faculty, great things have been accomplished.

On the evening of the above date, the alumni, students, and visiting friends, met in the dining hall to enjoy the alumni banquet, which was prepared for them by the good ladies of Shreveport. Col. Young and Judge Murff made short addresses which thrilled our hearts with the glorious past of old Centenary. We then repaired to the chapel hall, which we found too small to conveniently hold those present. Following this was the oratorical contest for the Alumni Medal. The contestants were Martin Warlick, and Honeycutt. Each oration was excellent and heard with delight by all. Warlick was the successful contestant.

After the presentation speech by Judge Murff, the alumni address was delivered by Judge S. C. Fullilove, of this city.

The evening of the seventh will bring our exercises to a close. There will be a contest for the Hutchinson Medal, in which several will take part, and promises to be most interesting.

Under the leadership of Dr. Hill, with an excellent faculty, and with Prof. Johnston as Dean, we prophesy a great future for Centenary College.

Very truly yours,

H. WADE CUDD,

"A Student."

MANSFIELD COLLEGE.

The board of directors of Mansfield Female College, feeling the pressing and imperative needs of the hour, have opportunely employed the services of Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard to canvass for girls for the college. This veteran soldier of the cross needs no formal introduction to the Methodists of Louisiana. He has put so much time, energy, prayer and eminently successful work into the college in the years that have passed that no one doubts that he will succeed in the present undertaking, but he needs the hearty co-operation of every true Methodist in the State. He has already entered upon his duties, and we bespeak for him a rich harvest in the hands of a quickened and awakened brotherhood. He will tell you some good things that are being enterprised by our board of directors, whose sagacity is proverbial and whose successful business careers have eminently fitted them for a wise and judicious management of the college affairs. They displayed in an eminent degree their good judgment in the election of Dr. W. L. Weber as president of the college for the ensuing year. Dr. Weber, who is an educator of enviable reputation, needs no introduction to the Methodists of Louisiana, for his record here has been made. It will, no doubt, be gratifying to his many friends and admirers to know that his health has been completely restored and that he will be at his post of duty in due season, to engage in the work assigned him and to earn the salary personally guaranteed by the board of directors, an expression of liberality on the part of the board, that was never displayed before since our official connection with the institution during a period of twenty-six years consecutively. The writer, by reason of ill-health, resigned from the board last fall, hence the grace with which this compliment to the board is made.

We confidently look for an era of greater prosperity for this historic institution of learning. For more than fifty years this college has annually opened its doors to the young women of the State and invited them to enter its sacred precincts, where religion and learning have joined hands for the production of the highest type of Christian womanhood. From its halls of learning, many of the daughters of Louisiana and other States have gone forth to adorn and brighten homes, to bless State and Church. Among its daughters are numbered many of the leading women who stand for God and right and home. Therefore, we appeal to the pride and loyalty of every Methodist in the bounds of the Louisiana Conference to rally around their only female college in the State, which is entitled to their support.

It would be a very difficult thing to estimate the worth of the school to our Church in this State.

Mansfield Female College has a record worthy of admiration. Founded in the long years ago by the lamented Dr. Thweatt, it has maintained a position of great honor, and influence, and we hope to continue it as a fountain of wisdom and inspiration that will touch every heart in our Louisiana Methodism.

Considering its grand possibilities, it is the duty of every Methodist to constitute himself a committee of one to work for the college. It is indeed a very serious mistake for any one to send his daughter anywhere else when his own school affords such opportunities.

A great educational interest is now permeating our Southland, a great demand is upon us. Let us as Methodists, seize the opportunity we have at our doors, and let us as speedily as possible advance this great institution to the best service in the higher Christian education of our young womanhood.

A. F. JACKSON,

Ex-Member Board of Trustees.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT MANSFIELD.

The 55th Commencement of Mansfield College was begun on Thursday evening by a reception given by the Junior to the Senior class. At the appointed hour a large crowd of young people, with a generous sprinkling of older ones, assembled in the lobby of the college, which was en fete for this occasion. The walls were decorated with pennants; a unique band stand created entirely of Senior class colors (crimson and white) was the central feature. Handsome pot plants and rugs added to the beauty of the environment. Delicious frappe was served by four charming lassies of the Preparatory class—Erma Liverman, Marjorie Parsons, Fernia Petty and Claudia Sentell. The parlor and entrance hall were gay with the colors of the Junior class (black and gold), gay sunflowers smiled on the festive scene from mantel, table and floor, and the evening was replete with happiness.

Friday evening the entertainment was in the hands of the Primary and Preparatory departments, and the program, consisting of songs, plays, drills and a mock Commencement, was very pleasingly presented and enthusiastically received by a large audience.

The Commencement sermon was preached on Sunday by Rev. W. W. Holmes, of New Orleans, who took for his text "Covet earnestly that which is best." He delivered an able discourse and conveyed a lesson that was of great importance to the young students and to the great mass of the people.

On Sunday evening Brother Holmes addressed the Young Women's Christian Association.

Monday evening the Junior class entertained the public with an evening of music and readings.

Tuesday morning the Alumnae Association, after a brief business session, entertained the audience with an excellent program.

At the meeting of the board of trustees on Tuesday Prof. W. L. Weber was elected president of the college. The members of the board of trustees living in Mansfield, together with a member of the board from Alexandria, Mr. W. D. Wadley, and Mr. Hicks, of Grand Cane, paid the salaries of the president, teachers and matron for the past three months. This amount, more than $1600, was paid by the above mentioned members of the board from their own private funds. They also engaged the services of Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard to travel in the interest of the college, personally guaranteeing to him his salary and expenses. Mr. Sheppard has for years been a true and tried friend of the college, and he goes to his labors with all the energy and optimism that characterizes him. The Hindoos have a version of love reading thus: "A clapping cannot be made with one hand alone; your love, my beloved, must answer my own." Just so with Mansfield College. The Methodists of Louisiana ought to and must rally to her support, else the labors of the board of trustees and Brother Sheppard will be in vain.

Tuesday evening was Grand Concert night, and the program on this occasion was very pleasing and consisted of piano and vocal selections, readings and a gypsy drill.

An attractive feature of the Commencement exercises was the wearing of caps and gowns by the president, faculty and graduating class.

On Wednesday, June 8th, essays were read by Misses Margaret Lyons and Parle Nabors, and the annual address was delivered by Hon. A. J. Murff, of Shreveport, after which the medals were presented and the degrees conferred. The following young ladies finished the A. B. course: Misses India Cook, Parle Nabors, Aline Weeks, Margaret Lyons, Cora Peguls, Sue Johnson and Ella Petty. There were two graduates in music: Misses Blossom Behnke and India Cook. ELSIE B. LIVERMAN.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure.

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McClosky, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec.-Treas.
Geo. A. Hero

SPEARING & CO.,

(Established 1817.)

SAIL MAKERS

AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPULINS and TENTS.

CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOUAS STREETS

Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

Modes of the Heavenly Life.

A series of five sermons on the work of the Holy Spirit.

By REV. WALTER G. HARBIN.

Price, 75 cents.

Send to CHAS. O. CHALMERS, 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

Church News

The Epworth League of the M. E. Church, South, showed last year a gain in membership of 6,549. Its contributions for all purposes now amount to $75,000 annually.

The movement to make the General Assembly of the Northern Presbyterian Church biennial or triennial, instead of annual, met with little favor. It will continue to meet every year as heretofore.

The city of New York is to have one of the finest French Churches in the United States. The Church of St. Jean Baptiste has completed arrangements for the purchase of a large lot at the southeast corner of Lexington Avenue and Seventy-sixth street, and will proceed to erect upon it a structure to cost $300,000.

The late John H. Converse left $200,000 to promote evangelical work in the Presbyterian Church, North. This is an unusual but timely beneficence. The various denominations need nothing to-day more than they do an aggressive revival spirit. The reawakening of this is the supreme need of modern Christianity.

The average age of the seven new Bishops of our Church is slightly less than fifty-one years. The eldest is 57 and the youngest 41. Three of the seven are sons of Methodist preachers. Six are the graduates of Methodist schools: the Southern University, Wofford, and Emory and Henry each furnishing two.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

Rev. L. S. Massey, of Oxford, N. C., has been chosen to succeed Dr. T. N. Ivey as editor of the Raleigh Christian Advocate. He is an experienced pastor, and is reported to be a man of force and scholarship. His "Introductory Statements" are in good taste and have the right ring. We are pleased to note that he declares himself a conservative. We welcome him to the tripod and to the fellowship of its sufferings.

As a result of a special meeting of the Board of Trustees held on June 9, Princeton University will acquire additional gifts amounting to $1,150,000. The bulk of this comes from the renewal of the offer made by William Cooper Proctor, of Cincinnati, and brings to an end the controversy over the site of the graduate college. This makes more than $11,000,000 that has been donated to Princeton within the past few weeks.

The press dispatches report that at their recent meeting the trustees of Emory and Henry College elected Dr. Charles S. Weaver, of North Carolina, president in place of Bishop Waterhouse. He is thirty-five years old, a graduate of Trinity College, and has a Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins University. The faculty and trustees also conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. R. A. Meek, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The new president of Trinity College is Dr. W. P. Few, who has been a member of the faculty of that institution for fourteen years, and whose chair was that of English. Like his distinguished predecessor, he is a native of the good old State of South Carolina. Dr. W. I. Crawford, of the Chair of Philosophy, will succeed Dr. Few as Dean of the College. The career of Trinity has been a creditable and growing one, and we trust that the new hands upon the helm will be able to speed it forward to still larger things.

A handsome portrait of Bishop Bascom was unveiled in the chapel of Transylvania University, at Lexington, Ky., on May 27, with appropriate exercises, the principal address being made by Dr. E. B. G. Mann, editor of the Central Methodist Advocate. Dr. Bascom was president of this institution from 1842 to 1849. The movement to procure a painting of the great preacher and orator was inaugurated by Mr. J. W. Townsend, of Lexington, and the artist who did the work was Mr. Paul H. Sawyer. The Kentuckians reflect credit upon themselves in thus honoring the Chrysostom of American Methodism.

Buddhism in modern China has fallen into a shocking state of degradation and decay, according to the correspondent of the London Times, who is traveling across the Celestial Empire. He says: "At the first inn, where hot cakes were being sold, my men rested. There was a temple here, and I went across to see it. The priest politely invited me into the guestroom. He probably did not expect me to enter, but I did so, and found in a small room some twenty men smoking opium or drowsing after the debauch. And it was the priest who had supplied the opium and the opium pipes. Could the Buddhist faith as exemplified in its degraded ministers in China sink much lower?"

AGAINST RACE TRACK GAMBLING.

The following resolutions opposing the amendment or repeal of the Locke law were adopted by the Lafayette District Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on Wednesday, the 8th, at Eunice. Whereas, a determined effort is now being made to amend the Locke law against race track gambling in the State of Louisiana; and

Whereas, the proposed amendment or modification of this law would be the official recognition of a degrading betting system, which was abolished two years ago; and

Whereas, the present law against race track gambling has been a great benefit to the moral welfare of the entire State; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Lafayette District Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now in session at Eunice, declares its firm belief that this agitation for the restoration of race track gambling is a vicious and evil thing, a disgrace to the State of Louisiana, and should be discouraged by every law-abiding citizen.

Resolved, That since an effort is being made by certain commercial organizations to change the Locke law, we petition the State Legislature to stand by its action of two years ago, and we do most earnestly pledge ourselves to do all within our power to preserve the law as it now stands.

WINONA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The session of the Winona District Conference at Moorhead, June 2-5, was pleasant and profitable. Twenty-two pastors, not counting assistant pastors, were present representing twenty-one charges. That unusual statement is true, because Dr. Boswell, who was recently sent from Ruleville to Sardis, was present the first day, and Brother Savage, who succeeded Dr. Boswell at Ruleville, was present on the second day. No church ever had such a system of ministerial supply as that system employed by the Methodists. The recent General Conference did not tamper with it.

The district served by the twenty-one pastors has more than six thousand members, and church property valued at more than $125,000, and no debt on it.

The preaching during the Conference was thoughtful and spiritual—two prime qualities to make it good to the use of edifying. It was done by W. C. Lester, W. M. Campbell, W. W. Woollard, T. H. Lipscomb, J. A. Hall, E. S. Lewis. Our visitors were Rev. W. M. Williams of the Orphans' Home, Rev. W. W. Woollard, presiding elder of the Greenville District; Rev. J. M. Wyatt, of the Oxford Training School; Rev. R. P. Neblett, of Columbus, representing the Annual Conference Sunday School Board; Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Greenville station.

Each of the brethren gave a good account of his work, and greatly refreshed our spirits by helpful speech and brotherly association. All this is due to Rev. J. R. Countiss, president of Grenada College, whom we do not account a visitor, but at home in the Winona District. That fine school has achieved marvelous success under the heroic and self-denying labors of W. L. Clifton, and will go forward to greater things under the skillful and able administration of Rev. Jno. R. Countiss. Rev. W. C. Lester is No. 4 and 5 in my "100 club," having secured two pupils for next session. The girl who fails to register for a room in advance of the opening of next session will not be able to secure one.

J. R. Bingham, J. J. Beck, E. R. Blackston, W. T. Johnson were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, with M. C. Smith and P. M. Bankston as reserve delegates.

Irb. E. Holland was granted license to preach the gospel. This choice young man will go to Vanderbilt University next session.

The people of Moorhead laid themselves out for our pleasure and edification. In addition to receiving us into their hospitable homes, they entertained us at a charming reception in the Bungalow, which is used as a Sunday school annex to the church. Delicious refreshments were served in abundance, and the good cheer and high fellowship were more abundant. My home with Hon. C. H. Pond gave to me the opportunity to renew former friendships and to add new ones. How sweet the "communion of saints!" Such delightful associations suggest these lines:

And if our fellowship, below
In Jesus be so sweet,
What height of rapture shall we know
When round His throne we meet?"

The next session of the Conference will be held at Webb. No section of Mississippi is comparable to this great Delta.

A district board of church extension was organized for a forward movement in this important section. I give it as my deliberate judgment that we should have two districts composed exclusively of charges in the Delta. At least two presiding elders should give all their time to this territory alone. Bishop McCoy could not do a wiser thing than to make such provision at our approaching Annual Conference. The good Bishop will receive a royal welcome among us, and he need not fear to "read the appointments to the cabinet before announcing them in open Conference."

The presidency of Rev. E. S. Lewis was like all his work as presiding elder—nothing is left to be desired. The stock of episcopal timber in Missis-

Real French Drip Coffee can not be made unless the coffee itself is prepared, blended and roasted according to the famous French method. Use

LUZIANNE COFFEE

For French Drip Coffee For all-around family use

THE REILY TAYLOR CO
NEW ORLEANS, U.S.A.

supplies by no means exhausted. J. T. McCafferty made a ideal Conference host. S. E. C.

REPORT ON EDUCATION.

To the President and Members of the Winona District Conference:

Your committee notes with some concern the fact of important changes being made in the presidencies of our Conference schools, as such times are always critical in the life and work of such institutions.

It is gratified at the selection of Rev. J. R. Countiss as president of Grenada College, and urges upon all members of the District Conference, the preaching especially, the importance of making such change an occasion for directing anew the attention of our people to this worthy institution, and urging upon them the privilege and duty of patronage.

We believe that, while nothing but genuine and thorough work should be done by this institution, its usefulness and success would be hindered rather than furthered by making the standards of admission both in purpose and requirement so rigid as to shut out many and prospective pupils who recognize such noble purposes and thorough preparation they have not as yet. We believe that it is the function of such an institution in sympathy and love to welcome all raw material, and then labor to inspire its worthiness and endless gifts new and nobler purposes and aspirations.

We would specially urge that the Board of Trustees and new president consider these words in their canvass for the coming school year.

Your committee feels that it is of vital importance that we have been so careful in the choice of a successor to Bishop W. L. Clifton in the presidency of Mills College. It would call the attention of the Board of Trustees to the description of the kind of man needed, quoted from the Alabama Advocate's description of the late Bishop in the Birmingham College, in this week's issue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and would especially note the words: "He ought to be a man able and willing to present his cause before every community within the bounds of our Conference, winning the rank and file of our membership to his support."

It deplores the small attendance throughout the district of our people at these institutions, and believes that this can be corrected by the thorough, sympathetic canvass of the district by representatives of these institutions indicated above.

That these respectful suggestions from this body may be brought to the attention of the parties interested, we recommend that the secretary be instructed to send copies of this report to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and to the Boards of Trustees of Grenada and Mills College, and to the president-elect of the former institution. Respectfully submitted,

THOS. H. LIPSCOMB,

Chairman of Committee.

Moorhead, Miss., June 4, 1910.

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI; greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

HOUSE ON CAMPGROUNDS FOR SALE.

Desirable two-story cottage, with four rooms and bath, bathroom with latest sanitary improvements; completely furnished; facing open square in front of Koller Lodge, with a small shady park in the rear. Address, Christian Advocate, 512 Camp, New Orleans.

Secular News and Comment

Senator J. B. Tillman, of South Carolina, has announced that, owing to failing health, he will not stand for reelection. His present term will expire March 3, 1913.

There is talk of a line of electric railway between New Orleans and Baton Rouge. The company which is figuring on this project was incorporated two or three years ago.

Representative Shattuck, of Calcasieu parish, has announced that he will introduce during the present session of the Louisiana Legislature a bill providing for woman suffrage in the State.

It is reported that the Duke of Connaught will succeed Earl Grey as Governor General of Canada next spring. This change is said to be in accordance with the desire of the late King Edward.

Leading Confederate Veterans of Louisiana are asking the Legislature for an appropriation of $250,000 for needy soldiers of the Lost Cause. What they ask for, and even more, should be given them.

The Hague Arbitration Court, which is to adjudicate the Newfoundland fisheries question between the United States and Great Britain, met on June 6. The president of the tribunal is Prof. Heinrich Lammasch, of Austria. The issue under consideration arose out of the Newfoundland Fisheries Treaty of 1858.

Nine States have state-wide prohibition. Three of these—Maine, Kansas, and North Dakota—are Northern States. The others—Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, Tennessee, Oklahoma and Mississippi—are Southern States. Several other commonwealths will vote on the question of license or no license this fall.

The per capita circulation of money in the United States is now $31.70. This is 42 cents less than it was a year ago, although there has been an increase in the aggregate amount of money in the country of $14,000,000. But population also has been increasing, hence the per capita decrease. Our general stock of money on June 1 was estimated to be $3,419,382,384.

The Department of Agriculture of the United States Government is rendering the public valuable service in the enforcement of the pure food laws. Seizures of adulterated or dangerous commodities occur almost daily. This work of inspection is urgently needed and should be extended and made still more searching. Safeguarding the health of the people is second to no other governmental function in importance.

Mrs. W. J. Behan, president of the Jefferson Davis Monument Association, is reported to be much encouraged by the outlook for the movement to erect in New Orleans a fitting memorial to the illustrious President of the Confederacy. The State Legislature has been requested to donate $10,000 to this worthy cause. This enthusiasm should have the hearty support of all our people. Lee has a beautiful and imposing monument in the Crescent City, and so should Jefferson Davis have. His memory deserves to be cherished forever by the people of the South.

The 61st session of the American Medical Association assembled in St. Louis on the 9th inst. Among the many papers read was one discussing the subject of leprosy by Drs. Isadore Dyer and Ralph Hopkins, of New Orleans, which awakened much interest. It stated that this dread disease is spreading to nearly every State in the Union, and that no concerted method of caring for the victims is practiced. Officials were accused of neglecting the quarantine laws. The association gave out the view that John D. Rockefeller's appropriation of $1,000,000 for the eradication of the hookworm is accomplishing great good.

THE WORK AT MEADVILLE

Dear Editors: If you will allow me a flat space in the columns of the Advocate, I will say a few things to the Church regarding the work at Meadville.

Of course everybody knows about Meadville—all the bad, ugly things, but it is not of these I wish to write. I want to mention some of the good things connected with Meadville. If men were as careful to observe the good as they are to observe and publish to the world the bad, ugly things about men and places, the world would be much better and a great deal more uplifted. Certainly every law-abiding citizen deplores the conditions as they have existed here for some time, but why show that side to the world all the time and leave the impression on the outside world that Meadville is composed of outlaws and out-throats?

It is a sad fact that there is a lawless element in Franklin County, Miss., and the county politics have been dominated by that element to a considerable extent, but we pray God to hasten the day when this shall not be the case. It is written, "When the wicked rule the people mourn." As for the shooting element, they are no longer of Meadville, thank goodness.

I came to Meadville last December, and I venture to say that there is not another place in the State of its numerical and financial strength that has done so much to advance the kingdom of Christ. It has been published to the world time and again that Meadville was a hundred years old, and had never had a church. I suppose they meant to say a house. Newborn men ought to remember that the church of the first born does not consist of a house, but of all who have been baptized in the name of Christ, and who thereby make a visible profession of faith in His divine mission and all the doctrines taught by Him and His inspired apostles. In a stricter sense, it consists of all who are vitally united to Christ—imbued with spiritual life—who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. Such a church we have had here for nearly a hundred years.

Now, the statement that "there had never been a church building in Meadville" was true only in part. When the judge asked the old negro who was testifying to the court, "Ned, have you told the whole truth?" Ned replied, "Yes, sir, boss, and I tell the whole truth. I do not think we should go beyond the truth, but often by not telling the whole truth we leave things in bad shape. There had not been a house erected exclusively for church purposes, but there was a place of worship. Some of the oldest people in the county have told me that some seventy-five years or more ago the Methodist people, who were largely Masons also, joined with the Masons and erected what was then a magnificent two-story brick structure, which was to be used as Masonic temple and church, the church using the first and the Masons the second story. The church was furnished with pulpit, chancel, organ and pews by the Methodist people and from that sacred altar the praise and adoration of some of the most saintly souls the world has ever known went up as a sweet incense to the throne of God. In after years the Baptists and Presbyterians organized churches in the same house, and we all have been for years worshipping our common Lord in the same house, using the same Bible, same pulpit and same organ; in fact, we used all things in common, and so far as I have been able to ascertain, there has been no discord, which is not always the case. I am sorry to say I have been in the Mississippi Conference ten years and it has never been my lot to be thrown among a kinder, more generous, loyal and self-denying people than those of Meadville.

Our church people here are a struggling people, and deserve the love and sympathy of the Church at large. We are not strong in numbers nor in money, but we have completed two churches already this year. The Presbyterian and Methodist are complete, and the Baptist is nearing completion. When all are completed, they will represent a valuation of some $5,500. The contractor says ours is worth $2,500. It cost us $2,000. I saw a reference to our church today in a certain paper, which stated that we had succeeded in building a little church. Now, it is truly a pity it is so small. It is only 35x50 feet—large enough to accommodate an Annual Conference. We entertained the District Conference in the month of April, but I did not see it mentioned in any paper, save the Franklin Advocate. There were no powder and steel bullets in it. I guess that was the reason.

The church here has had much to discourage it and there are discouraging features connected with the work still, but conditions must change.

Meadville must be a religious and educational center for the county. To say it can't be made such means we have lost faith in God and man. We progress in proportion as we develop mentally and morally. We must have a longer term of school and efficient teachers, if our children are to develop along with those of neighboring counties. Our school is open to some good, competent man, and will pay nearly a hundred dollars salary per month.

We have made a fair start in our church work, added twenty-six to the membership, made some collections on the assessments, but we need help. The Church Extension Board of our Conference for some reason ignored our application to the General Board for a loan on the new church. I do not know why this was done. It left us embarrassed. We owe about $300. Please send us a donation of some amount. If anyone will loan us money, we will give good security. We have $2,500 worth of property with which to secure a loan.

Pray for us that God will give us a great revival this year. I would be glad to correspond with anyone on church business. J. L. RED, P. C.

NOTICE

The Seashore Divinity School will open June 23, scarcely two weeks off. The Louisiana preachers at the Annual Conference in Alexandria last December subscribed $180 toward the expense of the school. Of this amount only $50 have been paid. We need the money at once. Let those whose subscriptions are still unpaid remit to the treasurer, Rev. W. W. Holmes, 1514 Fern street, New Orleans.

Missions.

MEETING OF HOME AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETIES OF WINONA DISTRICT.

By agreement of the district secretaries, Mrs. W. H. Campbell and Mrs. E. A. Neblett, a joint meeting of these two departments of our Church was held in Ruleville, Miss., June 1-2.

The first day was given to the Home Mission Society. The district secretary reported that for the year $1,000.72 had been sent to the Conference Treasurer—making Winona the banner district of the North Mississippi Conference. There are twenty-one auxiliaries in the district. Thirteen of these were represented at this meeting, and all delegates reported great interest and enthusiasm in the work.

The district has taken great pleasure in the education of a girl from the Orphans' Home at Grenada, having kept her there for the term just closing. At this meeting more than the necessary amount for her expense at the same college for another year was pledged.

The second day was taken up with the work of the Foreign Missionary Society in the district, under the management of Mrs. E. A. Neblett.

This work also showed great interest and a good increase in the financial report. A large number of the auxiliaries were represented; the entire day was filled with profitable discussions of the work.

Mrs. J. E. Thomas, of Columbus, who is doing fine work in organizing the young people, was with us and added greatly to the interest of the occasion. An adult auxiliary was organized at Ruleville.

We were delighted with the presence of the presiding elder and several of the pastors of the district, also with the kindness and cordiality of the good people of the progressive little city of Ruleville.

MRS. E. S. LEWIS, Recording Secretary.

Winona, Miss., June 8, 1910.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The number of tithe sent in during the first quarter was very gratifying. This department of our work will grow and spread as our people rise to a higher plane of living. From many of the Auxiliaries came a letter, with the report, which was full of encouragement and cheer for all of these: I am truly grateful. Good reports were sent from some of the Auxiliaries that have never been heard from before. Among these was "Wide-Awake" Magee.

Below is a program rendered by these earnest, capable members. In like manner, they expect soon to present the subject to the Church, in which they have invited me (in my feeble way) to take part. We trust that this second quarter will bring us the glad news of many programs being rendered on this important feature of our work.

Sisters, let me urge you not to fail to send your reports on or before September 1st. Likewise, November, December and March. The Second Vice Presidents are the officers in the field, and I am entirely dependent upon them for a record of the real work being done. Sincerely, MRS. J. R. ELLIS, Second Vice-President.

ENJOYABLE MEETING

The most enjoyable and helpful event of the work of the Ladies' Home Mission Society, Mount Olive, Miss., during this year was held at the hospitable home of Mrs. R. L. Nelson. The meeting was conducted by the 2d Vice-President, Mrs. George Everett, who has charge of the tithe department, and the excellent program gotten up by her and Mrs. Nelson was greatly enjoyed by everyone present. Each member of the society pledged themselves to give not less than a tenth of her income to benevolent purposes. We hope this will inspire to a greater liberality those whom "God hath prospered." After the following program was rendered, delightful refreshments were served:

Song by Society, "Take my life and let it be," Scripture, Mal. third chapter, Prayer, Mrs. Stegall; "Financing the Kingdom," Mrs. E. L. Walker; "Giving to God," Mrs. H. P. Gates; song by Society, "Here am I, send me," "Money and Man's Obligation," Miss Sallie Thames; "The heart that loves the Master," Mrs. J. J. Childre; vocal solo, "Cast thy bread upon the waters," Miss Sallie Thames; "The tithes of the Lords," Miss Cora Burnham; "The law of the tithes," Mrs. R. J. Nelson; song by Society, "All to Christ I owe," "Tithing as a means of grace," Mrs. Geo. Everett; "The beginning and result of tithing in one Church," Mrs. Purser; closing Hymn by Society, "I gave my life for thee."

MISS SALLIE THAMES, Sec'y.

MRS. E. L. WALKER, President.

SEASHORE COTTAGE FOR SALE.

Write
H. R. Singleton,
Alexandria, La.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location; price, including furniture, only $400. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Meridian District Conference was in session at the Fifth Street Church, Meridian, from May 30th to June 2d.

Rev. W. G. Forsyth preached the opening sermon Monday evening, and Rev. W. H. LaPrade the closing one on Thursday evening.

Organization was effected Tuesday morning, May 31, at 8:30, Rev. W. H. Lewis, P. E., in the chair, and this scribe, by election of the brethren, at the secretary's table.

Attendance was good. An unusual feature was the presence of every preacher-in-charge in the district. There were also nine local preachers, forty lay delegates, and eight participating visitors.

Immediately after the organization the Conference was resolved into a District Missionary Institute, and Rev. W. G. Forsyth, president of the Conference Board of Missions, was called to preside. A program which had been carefully arranged was faithfully carried out both as to time allotment and subject matter. A number of subjects vital to missions were discussed and proved both instructive and edifying. The Laymen's Movement was given a prominent place, and notable addresses were made by Hons. A. B. Amls, of Meridian, and D. W. Heidelberg, of Shubuta. The work of the Women's Societies was admirably presented by Mrs. R. M. Hand, of Shubuta, for the Foreign Society, and Mrs. Dr. S. B. Flynt, of Meridian, for the Home Mission Society. Revs. B. F. Lewis and B. F. Jones preached missionary sermons in the afternoon and evening.

Plans were projected for the Meridian District to be represented in the foreign field, the presiding elder to secure the man, and he and the lay leader, W. D. Hawkins, to raise the amount necessary. To this end several hundred dollars were subscribed during the Conference.

Wednesday forenoon was devoted to Sunday School Institute work, with Rev. B. F. Lewis, president of the Conference Sunday School Board, in the chair. The addresses and discussions were all instructive and profitable. Rev. R. E. Rutledge preached at 3 p.m., and Rev. John D. Ellis at 7:45.

On Thursday the Epworth League interests were looked after, and considerable routine business was transacted. In the afternoon, just before the sermon preached by Rev. John Paul, a memorial service was held. The Committee on Memoirs announced that Revs. J. N. Ware and D. G. W. Ellis, superannuate members of the Conference, had passed to their reward. Affectionate tribute was paid to the memory of these brethren by G. S. Harmon, John D. Ellis, I. L. Peebles and H. J. Maddox. The following resolutions presented by the committee were adopted by a rising vote:

Whereas, our beloved brethren, the Rev. J. N. Ware, and the Rev. D. G. W. Ellis, have been removed from our midst by death, therefore, be it resolved

First—That we record their departure with the deepest sorrow, and shall cherish their memory with sincerest brotherly affection.

Second—That we extend to the families of these brethren, our tenderest sympathy, and pray that our Heavenly Father may abundantly bestow upon them the consolation of his love, and the support of his grace.

Third—That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this District Conference, published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and that a copy be furnished the bereaved families.

The following resolution presented by Rev. C. M. Chapman was adopted by a rising vote, and the original copy forwarded to Bishop Murrah, with the signatures of nearly the entire body affixed:

Resolved: That we, the Meridian District Conference, express to Bishop W. B. Murrah our sincere joy over his elevation to the Episcopacy, and assure him of our brotherly love. And that we are delighted to know that Bishop Murrah will continue to live in this State.

During one of the early sessions, Rev. B. F. Jones, D.D., rose to a question of personal privilege and in a felicitous speech presented to the presiding elder, for use during the Conference, a gavel which was given him by a friend while he was presiding elder of the Natchez District, and made from a piece of lumber taken from the house occupied by William Foster where the Mississippi Annual Conference of 1816 was held, presided over by Bishop Robert Roberts, with John Menefee, secretary. The response was most happy.

The characters of the following local preachers were passed, and renewal of license granted: J. D. Bell, R. B. Chisholm, A. Trotter, J. N. Tucker, Robert Zachary, J. T. Griffith, E. A. Sterns, M. G. Matheny, L. B. Moore and H. J. Marshall.

W. W. Hopper, John D. Crymes and John Paul, local elders, and J. N. Broadway, local deacon, reported, and their characters were passed.

Emory Elisha McKeithen, Warren Wesley Moore, and G. Cleveland Simpson, all splendid and promising young men, were licensed to preach.

The following recommendations were made to the Annual Conference:

Robert B. Chisholm, for local elder's orders; James N. Tucker, for recognition of elder's orders, and John Paul, for re-admission into the traveling connection.

After a spirited contest, Lauderdale was selected as the place for holding the next Conference.

Following were elected as delegates to the Annual Conference: L. P. Brown, D. S. Harmon, D. W. Heidelberg and Rev. John Paul, with J. H. Holmes and W. D. Hawkins, alternates.

W. D. Hawkins was elected District Lay Leader.

Revs. B. F. Lewis, president of the Conference Sunday School Board; M. M. Black, Conference Missionary Secretary; W. M. Williams, Manager Orphans' Home; T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder, Newton District and president Joint Board of Finance, and W. W. Moore, president Mississippi Conference Training School, Montrose, were visitors and represented before the Conference the work committed to them.

Brothers Lewis and Black rendered valuable and appreciated service in the missionary and Sunday school programs.

President J. W. Beeson, of the Meridian Woman's College, was introduced and spoke of the work being done by his school, and the Maie College, presided over by Dr. M. A. Beeson. He was followed by Dr. W. H. LaPrade, D.D., pastor of Central Church, who spoke in the kindest terms of the colleges and endorsed the work they are doing. He especially commended the splendid behavior of the student body, stating that as large as it is not a single case of misbehavior had been reported. The following resolution offered by Rev. C. M. Chapman was unanimously adopted:

Resolved: That we, the Meridian District Conference, endorse the Meridian Woman's and Meridian Male Colleges.

The following, nominated by the presiding elder, will serve as the Licensing Committee: B. F. Jones, G. S. Harmon, John D. Ellis, W. H. LaPrade, and the presiding elder.

The verbal reports of the preachers in charge indicated a revival spirit all over the district, and a healthy movement in material things. Led wisely and religiously by the diligent, aggressive, sanctified young presiding elder, the preachers are all hard at work. Some of them are as self-sacrificing and heroic in their labors as were the men who laid the foundations of our Church in this country.

After A. J. Davis, of the Porterville Charge had reported, and he has done magnificent service in a hard field, it was told the Conference that he had been serving his charge for the past six months on foot, walking to his appointments, and not a complaint had escaped. That was all those preachers and laymen needed to know, and in a few minutes there was enough money on the secretary's table to buy a good horse. The amount was supplemented later by the 5th Street and East End congregations, so that a buggy could be purchased for the benefit of Sister Davis and the children.

The following report on the Spiritual State of the Church was adopted:

The work of the district as a whole gives evidence of a decided upward tendency. A spirit of systematic aggressiveness seems not only to have characterized our presiding elder, Rev. W. H. Lewis, in his labors, but the infusion is evident in pastors and laymen. On every hand there seems a strong desire, if not a real hunger, for a genuine revival. Each session of the Conference has witnessed not only a spirit of unanimity among the brethren, but the Spirit's presence has been felt and seen.

The total membership will approximate seven thousand. Number received into our membership this year, 310. Upon profession of faith, only 92, and 51 of this number from two charges. Six charges report not a single accession on profession of faith, and quite a number—including some of our largest churches—only from one to three. Number of family altars, 224. Number of congregations without weekly prayer meetings, 57. Number of Church papers taken, 340. The dearth of class meetings and fasting is practically unanimous.

The consensus of opinion, both of preachers and laymen, was that it was the most spiritual Conference they had ever attended. The presence and power of the Holy Spirit was markedly manifest at every session and service. This is not surprising, however, when it is known that for weeks in advance, at the urgent pleading of the presiding elder, a mighty spirit of prayer had been going up all over the district for the Conference to be deeply spiritual. Bless the Lord, for answered prayer. There was not a harsh word spoken; no arguments, or debates or unkind criticisms. Harmony, unity, and brotherly love prevailed. "Them that honor me, I will honor." I. Sam. ii, 30.

A standing vote of thanks was tendered Rev. C. M. Chapman, the host, and his hospitable congregation, for the splendid entertainment given the Conference.

G. S. HARMON, Secretary.

Meridian, Miss., June 4, 1910.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE AND ELSE.

Dear Brother Meek: I feel like congratulating you, together with all the others who made up the body of our General Conference just closed in Asheville. A great many things came up before that body for settlement, many of which to settle rightly required superior wisdom and judgment, as well as conservatism. I am truly glad, after carefully reading the proceedings, to find that the Conference was not lacking in either of these requirements. Very many of the proposed changes, I dare say, were dangerous propositions, and received at the hands of the Conference all the consideration due them. May the God of all grace put it into our hearts and minds to think and talk more of a vitally spiritual life, and less of changes in a time-honored and heaven-blessed creed, and I believe by another General Conference we will be so well pleased with our progress as a Church that there may not be a change proposed.

I have just read with deep concern Brother Vaughan's last appeal for our Orphanage and its sore needs, and I want to ask, why is it that, as a Church, we seem to be exerting ourselves to the bleeding point for Foreign Missions, while we seemingly ignore the very present needs of a number of our noble home institutions, such, for instance, as the Sunday school interest (the source of greatest revenue to Church membership); to which we give only a fragment of our efforts; hospitals for care and treatment of our needy sick, worn-out preachers' fund and homes for their comfort after they are no longer able to labor for the pittance that most of them get, and fast, but by no means least, the Orphanage, now so crippled and handicapped for the want of means. I call attention to these things, not that I am opposed to foreign missions or that I love foreign missions less, but I love these more. I have always believed if we would do our full duty at home there would be no lack of men and means for the far-away work.

Only a layman.

GEO. D. SANDERS.

Farmerville, La.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd.
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of Lumber
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?
GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH
LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE
736 Union Street. Phone, Main 585.

ROOMS and BOARD
634 and 636 SOUTH STREET
(Lafayette Square)
Corner St. Charles St. NEW ORLEANS, LA.
Unlimited Meals. Alvin Porter, Mgr.

REMOVAL SALE.
We will move into our new, big building on Baronne Street, next to Hotel Denechaud,
JULY 1st.
We are offering now BIG BARGAINS in CHINA-WARE, GLASSWARE, KITCHEN-WARE, and the Famous LEONARD REFRIGERATORS.
—Agents for Famous Glenwood Ranges—

GAUCHE-CONNOR CO.,
Successors to John Ganche Sons.
614 CANAL ST., Near Camp.
THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—TRANSFER MONEY
—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone
FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER.
Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co.
INCORPORATED.

The Home Circle

THE VANDUZEN BEAR HUNT.

It was milking time, between sunset and dark, at the Vanduzen farm, on Wacheesa Mountain, near the headwaters of the Little Kanawha River. Wat VanDuzen had just driven the cows into the barnyard, and he and his brother Ely had gone to milk them. Their father was seated in the kitchen door repairing a hand rake. Sar-Ann, a girl of ten, was standing on the wood pile in front, gathering cherries from a tree that overhung the fence. A pet sheep which pastured with the cows was in the lane just beyond the barnyard bars. Two lambs were with the sheep.

Suddenly the boys heard one of the lambs bleat pitifully, and the other one came leaping over the bars into the yard. At the same moment the girl called out from the wood pile: "O Wat! O Ely! A big black dog is catching one of our lambs!"

The boys jumped up and ran to the bars. In the lane they saw a large black bear throttling one of the lambs, while the pet sheep was hutting at the bear in behalf of her offspring.

The bear had come out of an elder thicket in the nearby woods pasture, having doubtless been run astray from its usual haunts by dogs. At sight of the bear the boys turned and ran for the house "to get a gun," they said.

Boarding at the Vanduzen's was Walter Harris, a young man from Wheeling on a summer outing in the mountains. Trout and game were plentiful thereabouts, and even deer in the open season, but—bear! No one had bargained for Bruin to come hunting the hunters or, in fact, to be easily come by even in his own fastnesses. After supper Harris had taken a rod, gun, and bait and gone to a small branch in the pasture to try for some brook trout for breakfast. He was then returning across the field in fine spirits, with a string of small trout, when he saw the bear, hardly knowing what it was in the dusk, and he heard Sar-Ann screaming. Dropping rod and fish, he ran to the fence line and fired at the bear. But the rifle was only a small "22," intended mostly for squirrels; and probably the bullet only stung the animal enough to irritate, but not to injure him seriously. However, at the gun's crack the bear let the lamb go, ran along the lane, and jumped the bars into the barnyard.

There were a dozen cows and steers in the yard, and the sight and smell of the bear set them wild. Some tried to gore the bear; all ran about, bellowing and snorting. Bruin turned this way and that and, finding the locality too hot, tried to get back out as he had come in.

Meantime Harris, having put in a fresh cartridge, saluted Br'er Bar with another shot from the "22." Turning back, the bear ran through the cattle again to some bars on that side, and jumped into the dooryard.

By this time the whole family was astir, all shouting and running. The two boys had got their own big shotgun, and were trying to load it. Mr. VanDuzen had rushed forth, handrake in hand; and even old Grandpa VanDuzen, then ill with rheumatism, stumbled out from the kitchen, waving his cane and shouting: "Hey, there! hey there! Get out!" The bear then turned to run into the kitchen garden, almost in the path of Sar-Ann on the wood pile. At that the girl redoubled her screams; and either startled at these cries or seeing Harris again, who now came running up from the other side of the barnyard, the bear once more turned and ran toward a long open woodshed which extended from the house to the barn. This shed was empty; and there was a door at the rear that was partly open. Apparently the bear saw the opening, for he made for it, passing into the shed; but it so happened that a puff of the evening breeze swung the door to just as the bear approached. Having little notion of swinging doors, Br'er Bar, thus headed off, turned, uttering a snarl of anger, and tried to get back out of the shed.

Meanwhile Harris was making frantic efforts to cram in another cartridge, and had run up close behind the bear to get a third shot before it got through the door. In his flurry he forgot to set the hammer of the little old-style rifle at halfcock, and the base of the barrel hung and wedged fast on the plunger, so that he could neither open nor close it. More intent on his gun for the instant than on the bear, the now thoroughly startled animal, whirling, leaped at the young man before he could move.

In a trice the bear had him down and was tearing at his clothes, inflicting more than one serious scratch. Harris, while kicking, yelling, pummeling Bruin's head, and trying to choke the brute, VanDuzen ran in and broke his rake over the bear's neck, then punched him with the handle until Bruin, now fully aroused, turned from Harris and sprang after this new assailant.

Being able to make little impression with so slight a weapon, VanDuzen retreated, punching and fending as best he could, and in the struggle upset Grandpa VanDuzen, then hobbling to the rescue with his heavy cane. Wat and Ely, however, had at last got their big-bored old shotgun loaded, with powder at least. Wat, running up, fired it at such close range that Bruin, with his hair singed and smoking, ran back into the wood shed again. There he stood on the defensive, growling in a manner that indicated that he was at last in a dangerous mood. Harris had jumped up and fled, his clothing torn into shreds; while Mr. VanDuzen was calling loudly for some one to bring him the ax from the wood pile.

At this juncture Mrs. VanDuzen took a hand in the proceedings. She had been heating water for a hot bath for grandpa. Suddenly opening the door from the kitchen into the wood shed, she threw a large dipper of scalding water all over the bear. This probably did the bear more damage than all the shooting and thumping the animal had previously undergone.

After loud yelpings of pain, Bruin ran the length of the shed to an open doorway leading into the barn. Here was a calf pen on the barn floor, and three short bars in the doorway kept the calves from invading the shed. Seeing this refuge, the bear leaped over the bars into the midst of several hungry calves waiting for their supper. When Bruin landed, there was a great scampering and bawling, so which the cows in the barnyard added a concerted and excited chorus. The surrounding cliffs and hills echoed to their dissonant and agonizing howlings.

"He's in the barn! The critter's in the barn!" shouted every VanDuzen in dismay.

"Load up again, boys," commanded the father, "Put in lead, nails—anything that'll kill. We got him now."

Harris, recovering from his panic, managed to get his "22" in firing shape again, while the boys, shoving a handful of powder in each barrel, with wadding on top, fairly crammed in lead sinkers from their tackle, nails—in fact, anything, as VanDuzen said, that would kill. Very cautiously they opened the big barn doors and peeped in. The calves had jumped from the pen, and were scampering here and there in search of some outlet of escape. When the big doors opened, they bolted out into the meadow; but the bear did not seem to be in sight. Wider they opened the big doors. At last Wat spied him up on a scaffolding where was stored a bobsled, painted red; that was used in winter when the snows grew deep.

Over the side of this sled Wat discovered the bear's head. The much-hunted creature had climbed up there and entered the sled as a last place of refuge, and seemed to be busily licking his burns. There was hardly enough of the animal's head visible in the gloom over the scaffolding to shoot at with certainty, and no one cared to climb up on the frail support that held the sled; but an odd experiment was hit upon to fetch Bruin down from his refuge.

Outside was the well where water was drawn by means of an old-fashioned sweep. That day the bucket had fallen off in the well. To hook it up a grapnel tied to a bedcord had been used.

"Watch him close, boys," said VanDuzen. "I know a way to git him out'n that bar sled."

He ran to the well; secured the grapnel and cord, and after one of two ineffectual throws succeeded in hooking to the sled. The long line enabled him to stand in the barn door.

"Now, Wat, and you, Harris, be ready to fire," called the farmer, and gave the rope a vigorous pull, assisted by Ely and even grandpa. The bobsled, and with it Br'er Bar, came lumbering down on the barn floor.

"Shoot, boys!" yelled VanDuzen and grandpa. "Why in blazes don't ye shoot? Shoot!"

Both rifle and big shotgun went off, one like a pistol crack, the other like a cannon. Then in the first thrill of excitement all hands ran out and slammed the barn doors shut, barring them tight. Listening, they heard considerable of a racket inside. Wat was nursing a sore shoulder where the over-charged gun had nearly kicked him over the sill. Cautiously, Mr. VanDuzen peeped inside. "Geemineddy!" he shouted. "Wat, you've set fire to the straw in the sled! Water!"

To save the barn they were obliged to open the doors and rush in, bear or no bear. A bucket fetched by Mrs. VanDuzen extinguished the smoking straw ignited by the gun wadding. The bear lay on one side, kicking more or less vigorously.

"Give me that gun," demanded VanDuzen promptly; and without more ado he thrust the muzzle of the unfired barrel close to the bear's ear and pulled the trigger.

With another tremendous roar the charge nearly blew the top of the creature's head off and sent Mr. VanDuzen to the floor in a sitting position.

"I tell you what, folks," said Grandpa VanDuzen, after making sure that Bruin was really dead, "I've hunted bar all my life twel I got too old, but this kind of bar trailin' is a new one on me."

Young Harris bargained rashly for the skin, while Mr. VanDuzen declared that the critter would balance the scales at over three hundred pounds, dressed—William Perry Brown in Forest and stream.

SEASHORE CAMP-MEETING.

39th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING JULY 13-20.

The Seashore Camp Meeting is known over a large part of Methodism to-day. Men have attended it from all parts of the Union. The religious services are under the direction of the Presiding Elders of New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences of the M. E. Church, South, and these brethren will be assisted by the best preaching talent that can be obtained.

Preaching under the Tabernacle, Grove, and Cottage Prayer Meetings, and other religious services, will be held during each day and evening, to which all persons on the ground are not only cordially invited, but are expected to attend.

Plan to come this year, and bring your unconverted friends with you. All Methodist preachers will be provided with board and lodging free of charge during Camp Meeting.

A DELIGHTFUL SUMMER HOME.

There is not in all the Southland a more delightful place to spend the summer than on the Seashore Camp Ground. There are ample accommodations and good board.

Many men and women date the beginning of their aggressive service for the Master to a few days spent on the camp grounds. There is a distinctively Christian atmosphere, and the many assemblies as well as the Camp Meeting bring together some of the brightest men and some of the most saintly characters we have. There is no compulsion about attending any of the lectures or sermons, but they are in easy reach and there is a sane and healthy tone, that tends to vigorous thinking and wholesome living.

ATTRACTIONS FOR THE SUMMER OF 1910.

The Seashore Divinity School, June 28, to July 7. The Seashore Divinity School is under the control of curators for the Louisiana, Mississippi, North Mississippi and Alabama Conference. Some of the brightest minds in these four Conferences will be among the instructors, and several brilliant men will be brought from a distance.

Annual Camp Meeting July 13-20. The Camp Meeting really gives the right to exist to the grounds, and it was for this purpose that Christian men invested their money in this property, in order that men might come away for a season from their other cares and commune with God. We hope for a revival this year.

Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, July 21 to 31. This is the successor to the former Seashore Epworth League Assembly. It has simply broadened the scope of its work. While not undertaking to do especially evangelical work, but rather to train the young people how to work, this assembly usually numbers many conversions as an immediate result of its work. Some of the gracious revivals that have blessed some of the churches have had their inception in the new motives for service given the young people in this assembly.

For full particulars, address as follows:

In regard to accommodations: R. G. Price, Biloxi, Miss., or S. G. Meyer, 116 St. Charles St., New Orleans, La.

Christian Workers' Assembly: Rev. F. S. Parker, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.

Seashore Divinity School: Rev. H. M. Ellis, Brookhaven, Miss.

COLIC, CRAMPS and DIARRHOEA are both painful and dangerous.

Prompt and permanent relief follows one or two doses of Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic. You should never be without it.

At all Druggists
25 and 50 Cents

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulner, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

NOW FOR WORK.

The past two years have been much given to disputation concerning church affairs. The press of Southern Methodism has teemed with discussions of proposed changes in our polity. Scarcely any feature of our system escaped criticism, and many trembled for the safety of our beloved Zion. But the General Conference has come and gone, and whether wisely or unwisely, things have been settled for another quadrennium. The voice of controversy should now be hushed, and all should vigorously address themselves to the work of extending the divine kingdom. It was pre-eminently fitting that in its closing hours the mind of the great Conference at Asheville should turn to spiritual matters, and that our honored Senior Bishop should call upon his colleagues to join him in leading a general revival campaign throughout the connection. We have not the slightest hesitancy in saying that this is our supreme and most urgent need. The most priceless possession of the Church is the Holy Spirit, and her primary mission, as the representative of her ascended Lord, is "to seek and save the lost." No matter what she may achieve in other directions, if she fails in this, she will betray her holiest and most sacred trust.

For the past decade there has been a widespread lament that ours is ceasing to be the leading denomination in the promotion of revival work. Men of far-seeing vision, like the ascended Galloway, have expressed fear for the Church of Wesley at this point. Apparently, we have been disposed to substitute the educational for the evangelical ideal, and as a result our spiritual power has been waning and others have been taking from us our inherited glory and crown. Far be it from us to write a syllable in opposition to a better equipped ministry. Trained minds were never worse needed in the pulpit than now. The mightiest leaders in religious movements have generally been men of intellectual reach. This was true of Moses, of Paul, of Luther, and of Wesley. True learning, humble, consecrated, and baptized with the Holy Spirit, multiplies one's efficiency in the field of service. But knowledge sought as an end in itself, used for display and as a means for attaining high place in an ecclesiasticism, strips the minister of his power and leaves him impotent in the conflict with the forces of darkness. An intellectuality which blinds to the perception of the spiritual and leads to pride and self-reliance, hinders rather than helps.

But we are pleased to note what we take to be indications of a coming reaction from our neglect of the supreme work of saving immortal souls. Our net gain in membership last year was 64,000, the largest we have had in quite a while. The expressed concern of our chief-pastors is also a hopeful omen. If they will begin to aid in protracted services; to preach at camp-meetings, to call penitents, and put emphasis upon spiritual rather than material triumphs, their example will do much to inspire our pastors and light revival fires throughout the land. And why should they not do this? Were not Marvin, and Kavanaugh, and Pierce and other of our Bishops effective and stirring evangelists? Is not performing the routine work of administration to the complete neglect of that of soul-winning, subordinating the higher functions of the Christian ministry to the lower? Why should not our leaders blaze the way in fields where spiritual trophies may be won for the Master and demonstrate that he yet has power to save?

Still another sign of a religious awakening is that our people generally seem to be coming more and more to the realization of the need of it. They are beginning to see the inadequacy of other things as a check to immorality, and the necessity of divine power to vitalize the human conscience, to break the thralldom of sin, and make possible righteous living. In the very despair of the Church, lies her hope of victory. Having learned the futility of reliance upon other agencies, she is more disposed to turn to God, the true source of help. "Human extremity is God's opportunity." When most burdened with her weakness, Zion is ready to be clothed upon with that strength which makes her invincible.

But if the needed revival is to come, there are conditions which must be met. Law governs in the spiritual as well as in the natural realm. A religious awakening is never the result of mere chance. Back of it lies a producing cause, though it may not always be discoverable to the finite mind. Hence, if we desire a work of grace among us, we should labor assiduously to procure it. We should search our own hearts, repent of our sins, and pray until we have the witness of the Holy Spirit. Then we should supplicate the throne of grace in behalf of others. We should visit our people and talk to them of Christ and his power and willingness to save. From the pulpit we should speak plainly, pointedly, and tenderly, relying upon God to make our messages efficacious. We should have seasons of special and continuous effort, but by no means should we depend upon them alone. Every day, and particularly every Sabbath, should be the minister's opportunity to lead wanderers into the way of life.

Nor is this the work of the clergy alone. It should enlist the energy of every disciple. The field of service is a democracy in which there is no exclusive privilege. None can monopolize the noble art of doing good. All may aid in making the world brighter and better, and in hastening the coming of the divine kingdom on earth. And the day of the Church's power has ever been the day when the people were toiling to do the Master's will. As some one has said: "When Jesus has dominion over his followers, it will be but a short time until he has dominion over the whole wide world."

Shall we not make the coming quadrennium the greatest in the history of Southern Methodism? We may, if we will. But to do so, we must not allow ourselves to be sidetracked; we must keep steadily at the main work for which the Church exists; we must count all else as relatively unimportant compared with "spiritual achievements." We must have the faith and evangelical enterprise to dare and do for our Lord. We should adopt as our slogan the memorable words of William Carey: "Attempt great things for God; expect great things from God." Thus laboring together with "a single eye, the glory of Methodism will return, and the fires now languishing upon her altars will again be seen brightly burning, wherever her "far-flung battle-line" extends.

A DISCREDITABLE ATTEMPT.

The attempt to revive race-track gambling in the city of New Orleans is far from being a creditable piece of procedure. If it be true, as is alleged, that a majority of our business men desire a wide-open municipality, where vice, unblushing, may hold high carnival, then our situation is, indeed, most deplorable. But we by no means admit this to be true. After all their strenuous campaigning and the vigorous marshaling of their forces, the advocates of a return to the old regime were able to muster only 525 votes in the test election of the Progressive Union held last Thursday. This is less than one-third of the voting strength of that organization; yet, in view of the heroic effort made, it is fair to presume that the advocates of race-track betting commanded their full support.

Nothing could be more fallacious than the argument that licensed evil would tend to promote the prosperity of the city. On the contrary, it would tend to retard it. The old State Lottery was a financial curse both to New Orleans and the commonwealth of Louisiana. The best business asset of any community is a wholesome moral atmosphere. Among the proudest possessions of our municipality are its schools and colleges, and these cannot flourish where vice is regnant. One of the strongest points made against San Francisco in the contest for the Panama Exposition is the dominance of wickedness within her corporate limits. Out of a population of half a million, only fifteen thousand are members of any branch of the Protestant Church. As has been well said, the re-establishment of race-track gambling in New Orleans would place her more nearly on a parity with her great rival and materially lessen her chances to secure that world-wide celebration, which would contribute so much to her commercial up-building.

But, after all, it is strange that business men should think their views are entitled to unusual weight in such a matter. It is a question which concerns every citizen, rich and poor alike. The manual laborer with sons to rear should be shown more consideration in its settlement than the millionaire whose chief desire is to amass more property. Manhood is better than money, and should never be sacrificed for the mere procurement of wealth.

It is gratifying to observe that this effort to modify the Locke law and restore the vicious practices of the past seems destined to meet with overwhelming defeat. Be it said to their credit, both of our great dailies—the Times-Democrat and Picayune—are standing squarely out against the proposed change. The news from Baton Rouge indicates that the Legislators has been little affected by the agitation, and show no disposition to recede from the position previously taken. They seem to be worthy successors of heroic Governor Nicholls, who said that rather than sign the Louisiana Lottery Bill, he would permit his only remaining arm to be severed from his body and buried upon the battle-field where reposed the other. That there are enough true and incorruptible men in that assembly to check the present vicious movement, we entertain not a particle of doubt. The threats of violence made against some of the clergymen of the city, only serves to show the desperate expedients to which the votaries of vice will resort to carry out their nefarious purposes. But they will not succeed in hushing a single voice, or lowering a single lance raised to do battle in virtue's cause. The forces of righteousness cannot be intimidated. Not to be affrighted are they who stand for God, for the peace and good order of society, and the protection of our youth.

A DESERVING CAUSE.

Elsewhere we publish an earnest appeal from Rev. John C. Park, of Oxford, in behalf of the North Mississippi Conference Ministerial Relief Association. He desires to secure three hundred laymen as honorary members of this organization, who would be expected to pay $1 upon the death of any clerical member of it. They would not be beneficiaries of the Association themselves, but their connection with it would be wholly for the purpose of assisting the families of deceased preachers. Usually they would not be called upon to pay more than $2 or $3 a year, and it would be safe to assume that the demands upon them would never amount to more than $5 or $6 annually. Their contributions would make possible a reduction of the mortuary assessment of the preachers belonging to the order from $5 to $2.50.

The plan suggested by Brother Park is a good one and deserves to succeed. The Brotherhood for which he pleads is purely benevolent in its aims. It takes in all preachers alike, without reference to age or physical condition. It gives to the families of deceased ministers, many of whom find themselves in sore financial straits in the hour of bereavement, assistance when it is most urgently needed. Surely, our laymen will not fail to respond promptly to this call. Membership in the Association will furnish a gracious opportunity to minister to the loved ones of those who toiled unselfishly for a bare subsistence to upbuild the divine kingdom until the Master called them home. Let both our pastors and people heartily co-operate in carrying forward to quick success the scheme suggested. The Advocate will take pleasure in publishing the names of all honorary members as fast as they are secured. We sincerely hope that the desired number will soon be obtained.

A FEW WORDS TO OUR FRIENDS.

The summer is usually a dull season financially for the Advocate. Our subscription list ceases to grow, and our bank account generally dwindles almost to the vanishing point. Yet our working force has to be paid and our current expenses met. Already our receipts are commencing to show a decided falling off, and we are beginning to wonder how we are to tide over the next three months. We cannot make up our mind that existing conditions justify this annual struggle for survival, which we have to undergo. Why is it not a good time to press the claims of the Conference organ when district conferences, revivals, and camp-meetings are being held, and the membership of the Church is being largely increased? When men are impressed religiously, is not the opportunity favorable to induce them to support our various connectional enterprises?

We earnestly request our friends not to forget the interests of the Advocate for the next few weeks. Especially do we invoke assistance in the collection of arrearages. We have hundreds of subscriptions that are past due, and we urgently need the help of the brethren in realizing on them. Where a pastor cannot aid us in this work, we would appreciate it if he would appoint some one in his charge to look after it. This is a matter of the utmost importance. We will gladly send a list of delinquents when requested to do so. Let us, one and all, rally to the support of our paper, and build it up. The good of Methodism in this section demands it. The South is destined to undergo a marvelous development within the next few years, and our Church will have greater responsibilities and opportunities than at any time in the past. In meeting the new problems that will arise, she will need an organ in this territory second to none in the land to voice her sentiments and plead her cause. So he who contributes to the placing of the Advocate upon a more substantial basis is helping to fortify our Gulf Coast Methodism for the work of the future. Will you not lend a hand, brother?

THE MILLSAPS COMMENCEMENT.

The recent Commencement of Millsaps College was among the most interesting in the history of the institution. It began, as usual, with the Freshman and Sophomore declamation contests, which attracted much attention and were highly creditable. A great audience gathered in the chapel on Sunday morning, June 5th, to hear the baccalaureate sermon by Rev. George R. Stuart, of Cleveland, Tenn., who delivered an eloquent discourse on "Fixity of Purpose." On Sunday evening, in the First Methodist Church, the distinguished evangelist gave before the Young Men's Christian Association his famous lecture on "The Stuff that Men are Made of." The Seniors delivered their orations, which elicited much favorable comment, on Monday, and Tuesday at 11 o'clock Judge R. V. Fletcher, of Jackson, made the Commencement address, which evinced much breadth of thought and was admirably suited to the occasion. Then followed the delivery of the diplomas in a most happy and impressive manner by Bishop W. B. Murrah. The graduates numbered 38—13 receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts, 11 the degree of Bachelor of Science, and 14 the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Among those finishing the literary course were two young ladies.

The Board of Trustees held three sessions on Monday and one on Tuesday. All of the affairs of the institution were carefully enquired into, and the customary routine work was dispatched. The various applications for the presidency of the College were painstakingly considered, but no decision was reached. Bishop Murrah was elected President of the Board of Trustees, succeeding Bishop Galloway in that responsible position. Mr. Webster M. Buie, of Jackson, a nephew of Major Millsaps and a young man of competency and sterling worth, was chosen Assistant Treasurer of the Board. A Finance Committee to look after the investment of the funds of the institution was constituted, Major Millsaps, Mr. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, and Mr. W. H. Watkins, of Jackson, composing it. This movement toward the development of a permanent fiscal policy was at the instance of Major Millsaps, who for eighteen years has looked after the business interests of the College with such conspicuous ability, but who now feels the need of some assistance.

Never was the outlook for Millsaps College so bright. It has a capable faculty, which merits and commands the public confidence, and a devoted alumni, which is already beginning to make its influence felt throughout the State. It has an ideal location, a beautiful campus, and buildings well appointed and attractive. Its invested endowment is in the neighborhood of $250,000; it is permeated by a wholesome religious atmosphere, and behind it is nearly two decades of honored and unsurpassed history. Its high place among the schools of the Church is well established and secure. It is the best asset of Mississippi Methodism, and should have the enthusiastic support of all the Methodist people of that commonwealth. Nowhere in the South can better educational advantages be commanded for young men desiring to take a collegiate course.

WORTHILY BESTOWED.

We learn that at the recent session of Centenary College the degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon the Rev. J. M. Henry and Prof. Thomas Carter, both of the Louisiana Conference. The former is the accomplished pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of Baton Rouge, and is conceded to be one of the growing young men of the connection. The latter is a popular professor in Vanderbilt University and a young minister of recognized gifts and scholarship. The honors conferred were well deserved, and will be worthily worn. We congratulate both those receiving the degree and the institution according to the distinction.

PERSONAL.

Bishop W. B. Murrah will spend the month of July in Texas.

Are you in arrears with the Advocate? If so, please renew. The address label on your paper will disclose the status of your subscription.

Miss Belle Bennett is attending the World's Missionary Conference now in session at Edinburgh, Scotland. She is one of the delegates to that great gathering.

The trustees of Millsaps College will meet in Jackson on Tuesday, June 21, to elect a President for the institution. Many applications from distinguished educators have been received.

Rev. J. M. Huggin requests us to state that hereafter his address will be Grand Junction, Tenn., instead of Mount Pleasant, Miss. We thank our brother for commendatory words and good wishes.

Dr. and Mrs. Felix R. Hill, of Centenary College, will spend the summer in Tennessee. Things about the campus will be under the direction of Mr. J. S. Johnston, the new professor of mathematics, during their absence.

Dr. James Cannon, Jr., the accomplished editor of the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate, will be absent for several weeks in Europe. Dr. R. H. Bennett, of Lynchburg, Va., will edit the paper while he is away.

Dr. T. N. Ivey, the new editor of the Nashville Advocate, has made a fine beginning. His initial number measures fully up to expectation. We predict for him a career of large and growing usefulness on the tripod of our General Organ.

Rev. A. G. Hall is pleased with the progress of his work at Lamar, Miss. All is harmonious, and interest in the services continues to increase. The latest development is a young people's prayer-meeting, which meets weekly at the parsonage.

Rev. R. S. Walton, of Hammond, La., has lately been doing some valuable work for the Advocate, for which we heartily thank him. We have heard that it is his habit to do well whatever he undertakes. We wish him large success in his important field.

The Southern Christian Advocate of June the 9th contained the sermon delivered at the Commencement of Wofford College by Dr. John A. Rice, of this city. His theme was "Selfhood and Service," and the discourse abounds in beautiful and impressive passages.

At the recent Commencement at Wofford College the degree of LL.D. was conferred on Dr. Charles Forster Smith, of the University of Wisconsin. Dr. Smith was graduated from Wofford in 1872. He was also lately the recipient of this same degree from the University of Arkansas.

Monday's Jackson Daily News says: "Delegates representing the Methodist churches of Jackson left this afternoon for Natchez, where the annual session of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League will assemble Tuesday morning. About 200 delegates are expected at the meeting."

In sending in his list of appointments for the third round, Rev. W. H. Lewis, presiding elder of the Meridian District, says: "The work under my supervision moves on smoothly, and all of the preachers are rendering faithful service." We thank him for the promise of some field notes in the near future.

Rev. A. F. Moore, our pastor at Arkabutla, Miss., and Miss Lucile Hudson were married near Independence, Miss., on May 25, the Rev. W. M. Young, presiding elder of the Sardis District, officiating. We congratulate the contracting parties, and wish them a long life of usefulness and unalloyed happiness.

Bishop McCoy has recently appointed Rev. C. T. Barton to the Shuqualak charge to succeed Rev. Q. A. Oats, deceased, and transferred Rev. W. G. Burks from Grenada circuit to Guntown, to take the place of Brother Savage, appointed to Ruleville. What disposition has been made of Grenada circuit, we have not learned.

Dr. John W. Boswell has had an agreeable reception at Sardis, Miss., his new charge. He finds that Rev. J. T. Murrah, his predecessor, was quite popular, and was given up with reluctance. Though beginning in the middle of the year, he is encouraged, and "the prospect pleases." His lot has been cast among a royal people.

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation to an entertainment given their little daughter, Dorothy, by Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Knight, of Dubbs, Miss., some days ago. The sight of these familiar names calls up pleasant memories of happy hours spent in their hospitable home. We wish these kind friends every blessing that heaven has to bestow.

We are pleased to note that Mr. Ames Saunders, of Starkville, Miss., has been appointed attorney for Oktibbeha County, an office of responsibility and honor created by the State Legislature at its last session. He is a young lawyer of fine attainments and much promise, and his selection has given general satisfaction. He is an alumnus of the Law Department of Vanderbilt University.

"Bobashela," the Millsaps College annual, issued this year, is the best one which has yet appeared, and justly merits the high praise which it has received. The editor-in-chief was Mr. Edward C. Brewer, of Black Hawk, Carroll County, Miss., who was graduated with the Bachelor of Arts degree and attained distinction in nearly all of his studies. He is a capable and promising young man.

Rev. J. E. Craig, of Oakdale, La., has placed us under obligations for a list of subscribers to the Advocate. He finds the work difficult in his present charge, but is industriously endeavoring to take care of all the interests of the Church. May he realize the presence of the Master in his labors, and be instrumental in leading many into the kingdom! He may be assured that he does not toil in vain.

We take from The Times-Democrat the following dispatch from Gloster, Miss., bearing date of the 13th inst.: "Mrs. W. H. Huntley was taken suddenly ill in the Methodist Church yesterday, and fell to the floor. She has not spoken since. She is the wife of the Rev. W. H. Huntley, pastor of the Methodist Church here. She appears to be sinking, and it is not believed that she will live. One side is paralyzed." Brother Huntley has our sympathy and prayers.

Rev. M. D. Fly, of Byhalla, Miss., has our deepest sympathy in the loss of his beloved wife, who, as is announced elsewhere, passed away after a brief illness on June 3d. Immeasurably sad it is to have our loved ones taken from us, but there is consolation in the thought that they await our coming in the Father's house. May God comfort our brother in his lonely eventide with the sweet consciousness of his presence and the assurance of a happy reunion in the not-far future!

At this writing the North Mississippi Epworth League Conference is in session at Kosciusko. Dr. H. M. DuBose and other speakers of distinction are scheduled to be present. We doubt not that the occasion will prove to be one of much interest. Mr. J. B. Small, of Winona, who is active in the work, sent us a notice of the meeting last week, which reached us too late for publication. We trust that in attendance and every other respect the gathering will fully meet expectation.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Rochester Chism have announced the marriage of their niece, Miss Mildred Elizabeth Chism, to Mr. Travis Henry Taylor, Jr., in the Methodist Church at Friar's Point, Miss., on Wednesday, June 29th, at 1 p.m. Miss Chism is the accomplished daughter of the late Mr. J. B. Chism, of Friar's Point, who was widely known both in church and business circles in North Mississippi, and Mr. Taylor is a young man of capacity and high character. The Advocate extends congratulations.

We have in hand the Year Book of the Seashore Divinity School. It is neatly printed, beautifully illustrated, and admirable in every respect. The second session of this school will be held at the Seashore Campground June 28 to July 7. The program offers a feast of good things. In the absence of Bishop Hoss, whose work will take him to the Far East, the first six lectures will be delivered by Dr. C. M. Bishop, of the Missouri Conference. Let all of our young ministers who can, attend this excellent midsummer institute.

Information has reached us of the marriage of Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, our pastor at Trout, La., and Miss Minnie Martin, formerly a deaconess in the Alexandria District, which took place at the Ridge-dale Methodist Church in Chattanooga, on May 18. Rev. Battle McLester, the pastor, officiating. From Chattanooga the happy couple went to Washington City, where they were delegates to the World's Sunday School Convention; thence they came to New Orleans, and from here went to their home at Trout, where they are busily at work for the Master. We extend felicitations and best wishes.

MRS. L. P. WASSON DEAD.

Just as we are about to close our forms, a note from Rev. J. T. Lewis brings news of the death of Sister Wasson, the wife of our pastor at Friar's Point, Miss., which occurred in the parsonage at a quarter past 10 o'clock last Monday morning. Services were conducted by Brothers Woollard and Lewis, and her remains were taken by the afternoon train to Kosciusko for interment. We knew the deceased and held her in high esteem. She was a woman of many noble qualities. Our heart bleeds for Brother Wasson and the orphaned little ones. May the Master comfort and sustain them!

MRS. M. D. FLY CALLED HOME.

Dear Brother Meek: Sister Fly passed away Friday night, June 3, after a short illness. She was buried Saturday afternoon. Brother Davis and Mr. Raper conducting the services. Brother Fly is very feeble. NINA P. RAPER.

Byhalla, Miss., June 6, 1910.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

To Pastors and Superintendents in the North Mississippi Conference:

As soon as you hold your Children's Day service, or if on circuits when you have finished the round, send any money you have to the Treasurer of the Conference Sunday School Board, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Macon, Miss. This is very important, as the Board wishes to know who has observed the day and the Treasurer wishes to get his books complete before he goes to Conference. Several of the brethren have already reported; let others do likewise.

R. P. NEBLETT, Agent.

Columbus, Miss., June 11, 1910.

THE HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Hattiesburg District Conference will convene in Lucedale, Miss., on Thursday, July 14th, at nine o'clock a.m. Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon will preside. The opening sermon will be preached on Wednesday evening, July 13.

The business of the Conference will be finished on Saturday, but it is expected that all the members who can do so will stay over Sunday.

In order to be present at the organization it will be necessary to be in Lucedale, Wednesday night, at the latest. Any who may come Thursday morning from the north will miss most of the morning session, because of the late arrival of the southbound train.

M. B. SHARBROUGH, P. E.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that

— Lasts a LIFETIME —

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

SECOND QUARTER. LESSON XII.—JUNE 19, 1910.

THE PARABLE OF THE SOWER.

Matthew xiii. 1-9; 18-23. Memory Verse, 23. Parallel Passages; Mark iv. 4-8, 14-21; Luke viii. 5-8, 11-15.

1. The same day Jesus went out of the house, and sat by the sea side.
2. And great multitudes were gathered together unto him, so that he went into a ship, and sat; and the whole multitude stood on the shore.
3. And he spake many things unto them in parables, saying, Behold, a sower went forth to sow.
4. And when he sowed, some seeds fell by the way side, and the fowls came and devoured them up:
5. Some fell upon stony places, where they had not much earth: and forthwith they sprung up, because they had no deepness of earth:
6. And when the sun was up, they were scorched; and because they had no root, they withered away.
7. And some fell among thorns; and the thorns sprung up, and choked them:
8. But other fell into good ground, and brought forth fruit, some a hundredfold, some sixtyfold, some thirtyfold.
9. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

Golden Text: "Wherefore putting away all filthiness and overflowing of wickedness, receive with meekness the implanted word, which is able to save your souls." (Jas. 1, 21, E. V.)

We have been studying the miracles of Christ; to-day we have before us one of his simplest and greatest parables. It is commonly called the Parable of the Sower, but it might well be called the Parable of the Soils, for it is not to the sower or to the seed that our attention is directed—these are both supposed to be good—but to the different kinds of soil upon which the same good seed fall with widely different results.

The parable explains to us something that needs explaining—the reason why God's truth makes such different impressions upon different lives, failing utterly in many, and only partially succeeding in more. The answer of the parable is that the blame lies not with the sower or in the seed—where we sometimes unjustly place it—but with the soil, by which is evidently meant the hearts of men. In other words, the blame lies, at bottom, with the men themselves. Everything, so far as the effect is concerned, depends upon the state of heart in which the truth is received. The parable might be called a sermon from the text, "Take heed, therefore, how ye hear," and the four general classes of hearers are pointed out by analogy to the four different kinds of soil.

Christ himself, at the request of his disciples, interpreted the parable for us in a manner inimitable; and it is ours only to, if possible, re-interpret it in language and with application most appropriate for to-day.

1. Some seed falls by the wayside—hard, beaten soil in which the seed take no root, but are soon crushed or carried away. This is, of course, the worst condition of all, and it is commonly made to typify only the wicked hearer whose heart has long been a highway along which evil passions and desires have had full sway, until all the nobler impulses of the soul have been destroyed, so that no response comes to the higher appeal. And this is true. By the wayside hearer is meant primarily the wicked hearer with a heart rendered callous by sin.

But there are others, who think themselves very different, who must be placed in this class: The thoughtless, indifferent hearer, outwardly moral, perhaps; but so shallow and worldly as to take nothing seriously, is also a wayside for the Word of God. And there are many such, who go to church only to see and be seen, whose thoughts are only on styles, fashions, and pleasures, and on whom the sermon, songs and all, fall as water on a duck's back, with never a thought or mention of them to be applied thereafter. Such hearts are rendered callous by vanity.

But into this company of the wicked and the vain we must place another very different company still, as included also among the wayside hearers—the self-satisfied, self-righteous hearer, the Pharisees of Christ's audience; for on these also the Word of 18. Hear ye therefore the parable of the sower.

19. When any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart. This is he which received seed by the way side.

20. But he that received the seed into stony places; the same is he that heareth the word, and anon with joy receiveth it;

21. Yet hath he not root in himself, but dureth for a while: for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, he and by he is offended.

22. He also that received seed among the thorns is he that heareth the word; and the care of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful.

23. But he that received seed into the good ground is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it; which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, some a hundredfold, some sixty, some thirty.

God makes absolutely no impression. It may seem rather shocking to name thus drunkards, thieves, harlots, society ladies, elders, deacons, stewards, Sunday school superintendents and teachers, pastors, even bishops, as possibly belonging alike to the same class of wayside hearers; but such we do, assured that all alike, from different causes, may be in the same unfruitful state of heart. Certainly, some on whom God's Word makes least impression, whose cases are the most hopeless, sit in the front pews; well guarded lest any truth should strike them, and kindly passing it on to others whom they think it particularly fits.

2. The second kind of soil to which Christ alludes is the stony ground, where a large flat boulder lies unseen a few inches beneath the surface. The seed seem here especially to prosper. The warmth reflected from the stone below causes them straightway to spring up, and an abundant harvest is promised; but a little hotter sun and a little drought ends all. So with many. They receive the Word with joy, and for awhile believe; but in time of temptation fall away, or, as Matthew has it, "When tribulations or persecution ariseth because of the Word, straightway he stumbleth."

Such see religion only as much to get and nothing to give. They want Christ and heaven; but must be carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease, else they'll not go there. A little ridicule, or being called "narrow," an invitation to a ball, any call for self-denial or self-sacrifice destroys all. They just can't afford it, and religion goes.

Our Presbyterian brethren say it never came; but anyhow they fall from grace if they ever had any. The worst of it is they enter the church when with joy they receive the word, and remain there—unfruitful and unsaved—refusing to pay the price of being truly Christian.

3. Those "among thorns" are, of course, the over-busy men and women who "haven't time" for a really religious life and service. No time for Bible reading, family prayer, even church-going often. They are good soil, with large possibilities, but overgrown with weeds. The cares of life, the deceitfulness of riches, the pleasures of this life, and "other things," are enumerated as such by Christ himself. These things they treat as of more importance than their souls' interest, or that of their children; so they fail to bear fruit, or "bring no fruit unto perfection." Whether they may be saved or not, is a question on which interpreters differ.

4. Lastly, upon hearts likened unto good ground seed fall also. These are hearts open to receive truth, desirous of being good, of knowing and doing God's will, and willing to apply to their own lives sincerely the truths received. These bring forth fruit,

All of all the best Music

In Edison Standard Records you get all of the shorter selections in the purest, most lifelike rendering.

And on Amberol Records you get the same pure, lifelike reproduction on longer selections than it is possible to get with the ordinary Record, without hurrying, without crowding or cutting out important parts—because Amberol Records play twice as long as Edison Standard Records.

The EDISON PHONOGRAPH

gives you not only all kinds of music but all of all kinds. There is an Edison Phonograph for you at whatever price you feel you ought to play.

The Amberola $200

Does your Phonograph play Amberol Records? If not, ask your dealer about our money-saving combination offer on Amberol Records and the attachment to play them.

Other Styles $12.50 to $125

There are Edison dealers everywhere. Get complete catalogs of Edison Phonographs and Records from your dealer or from us.

Edison Standard Records 35c
Edison Amberol Records (play twice as long) . . . 50c
Edison Grand Opera Records 75c to $2.00

NATIONAL PHONOGRAPH COMPANY
149 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.

We are Headquarters for Edison's Phonographs, Records and Supplies

—CASH OR INSTALLMENT—

We pay transportation charges on purchase of one dozen records or more.

NATIONAL AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM CO., OF LA.
614 GRAVIER STREET . . . NEW ORLEANS.

USE THE L. & A. RAILWAY

"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service
Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

some an hundred fold, some sixty, some thirty; and a Christlike character gradually appears, with service in proportion to ability, as the effect of a right receiving of the Word at the hands of the great Sower, or through his servants.

The Lesson's Message—Points to Impress:

1. You can find no man who is not included in some one of these classes. To which class do you belong?

2. Outward appearances are not the test to judge by. A Sunday school teacher, a deacon, may be a wayside hearer; a prodigal may prove to be good ground. A "bright conversion" or "great revival," with much weeping and rejoicing, may be but transitory emotion. Not tears, but standing tests is the sure evidence of religion.

3. The test of all hearing is its permanent effect upon the life. What is being the effect upon me of all my church-going? Am I becoming more devout and Christ-like? Am I expecting or desiring to become so? If not, I am a wayside hearer, or one unwilling to pay the price.

4. There is this important difference between the soil and a man's heart. He is responsible for whether his heart is hard, stony, thorny, or good ground; for he makes it one or the other by his daily spirit and conduct. By our choices in little things we are preparing our hearts, as soil, either for the reception or rejection of God's truth when we hear it. If you would enjoy and profit by the sermon Sunday, live right during the week. Indianola, Miss.

Tidings from the Field

Oakvale, Miss.:

We have the foundation laid for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Oakvale, and over half of the lumber sawed. The pastor and the good women are doing their best toward trying to get the church completed in time to hold our revival meeting in, which will begin on Wednesday evening before the fifth Sunday in July. I heard one good woman say that she was going to feed her husband on lumber for breakfast, dinner and supper, until the lumber was sawed. I am sure that he won't dine many times before he will report to her that the lumber is ready. And she is not a member of our Church—she is an Episcopalian. May God bless the good women in their labors. Our Children's Day at Oakvale, on last Sunday, June 5th, was a success, viewed from a religious standpoint. The little children acquitted themselves nobly under the training of Mrs. Pearl Clark and Miss Vera Armstrong as leaders and moving spirits of the entire program. The writer preached a sermon to the children from the text, "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?" (St. Matt. xviii, 1.) We had a good meeting at Baxterville. The altar was crowded several times with penitents seeking for pardon of sin. I thank the Lord for the dear old Advocate, haven't received a copy of it without finding something in it I especially needed at the time. And it increases my desire to get nearer to my Savior. I am under the Blood just now. "Hallelujah!"—Hilary Westbrook, P. C.
June 8, 1910.

Collins, Miss.:

Rev. Walter G. Harbin has recently conducted a revival meeting at Collins in which he not only did the preaching in his usual clear and forceful way, but directed the song service as well. The meeting, in many particulars, was a great success. The Church was graciously revived, many souls professed conversion, others were reclaimed, twenty-eight persons were added to the Church (the M. E. Church, South), and four applied for membership in the Baptist Church. Thirty-six family altars were pledged, two additional prayer meetings were established, and eight new subscribers to The New Orleans Christian Advocate secured. One of the great features of Brother Harbin's meetings is the character of the work he does. His work is permanent. It abides after he has gone to other fields. He leaves the people reading their Church paper, and other wholesome literature, praying in their homes, and at their cottage prayer meetings, and rejoicing because "Christ has been brought into their homes." In this, and in many other ways, he is so helpful to the pastor with whom he labors. To pastors with whom Brother Harbin has not labored in revival meetings, I wish to say, he is a man full of the Holy Ghost and power, his pulpit ability fully meets the demands; his methods are approved; he labors harmoniously with the pastor, and magnifies the pastor in the estimation of his people. As I view it, his chief, his adorning virtue is that of humility. A choleric spirit, I have not known.—H. L. Norton.

Batesville, Miss.:

On Monday, May 23d, Rev. H. S. Spragins, Greenwood, Miss., came to us for the purpose of conducting a revival. His coming was altogether appropriate, as was shown by the large congregations that greeted him from the time of the first service. Knowing Brother Spragins, as you do, it goes without saying that his preaching was clear, strong and productive of great good to the church, as well as to the entire community. The meeting continued for eight days, growing in interest and spiritual power all the while. It has proved to be a veritable benediction to our church. Of recent date we have buried one of our most valuable members, Mrs. Elizabeth Moser Bates, the widow of the late Rev. James W. Bates. Sister Bates was born in Brownsville, Tenn., January 29, 1834, and for sixty-four years lived the life of a devout Christian. For many years she was the efficient and faithful wife of a Methodist preacher, and this service she rendered the Church when such service meant privation and incessant self-sacrifice. Her's was a pure life—so pure that it brings no thought of shame. Here, where she lived and wrought for many years, we hear only words of love and praise. Above all else, Sister Bates was a Christian—a Christian ever turning with love and confidence to her God for strength and guidance. Our hearts are sad, but we do not mourn as those who have no hope.—W. N. Duncan, P. C.

Ellisville, Miss.:

Dear Brother Meek—We have just closed the most remarkable meeting I was ever in here at Ellisville. Bro. D. E. Kelly held the meeting for me, and he held a fine, spiritual meeting. The crowds were very large. We had between three and five hundred out at the morning services, and from six to eight hundred at night. The Spirit came with the first service and there was not a single service but was filled with His power. There were conversions from the start. The meeting was so far-reaching that no one could tell just how many conversions there were. For the last week this meeting has been the sole topic of conversation for the whole town. Wherever there were two together, they were talking the meeting, saints or sinners. I am finding more each day who were influenced by the meeting to lead a new life who did not have an opportunity or did not take advantage of the opportunity during the meeting to testify to it. Seventy-five in all, joined the various churches—ten to the Baptist, sixteen to the Presbyterian. But there were many who were reclaimed, and many who were members of the Church who were converted. Brother Kelly held an old-time Methodist meeting—the kind we hear talked of, the kind we read about. It was a meeting where God was present in his saving power. No one could say anything that would adequately describe it. It was overshadowed and guided by the Spirit. Many took up family prayer, many took up praying in public, and many began to testify. Many whose cups of joy were full, rejoiced in the Lord. Men, women and children were in tears for sin. Strong men were torn all to pieces and sobbed aloud. It will be an abiding testimony of the power of God for years to come here at Ellisville. I wish a whole lot of people who are forever talking about the gospel losing its power and not having the kind of meetings we used to have, could have come and been with us. The Conference acted wisely in selecting Bro. Kelly for this work. He is filling his place full. That God may bless him in his labors is the prayer of Ellisville.—J. C. Chambers, P. C.

Campbell-Hagerman College

Resident school for girls and young women. Board and tuition, $300. New buildings. Every convenience. English College Preparatory, Junior College Courses. Music, Art, Expression. Physical Culture. Students the past year from 16 states. For year book apply to G. P. SIMMONS, Associate President, LEXINGTON, KY., 437 West Second St.

Port Gibson Female College,

PORT GIBSON, MISS.

71st session opens Sept. 14th. Literature, music, art, elocution, stenography, bookkeeping, sewing. Physical culture and chorus work free. Special attention given health and morals. Confers degree of A. B. Preparatory department. Students can reduce expenses by taking duties. For catalogue, address REV. H. G. HAWKINS, A. B., Pres.

Stomach Troubles
Horsford's Acid Phosphate
Produces healthy activity of weak and disordered stomachs. An unexcelled strength builder.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by U.S.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

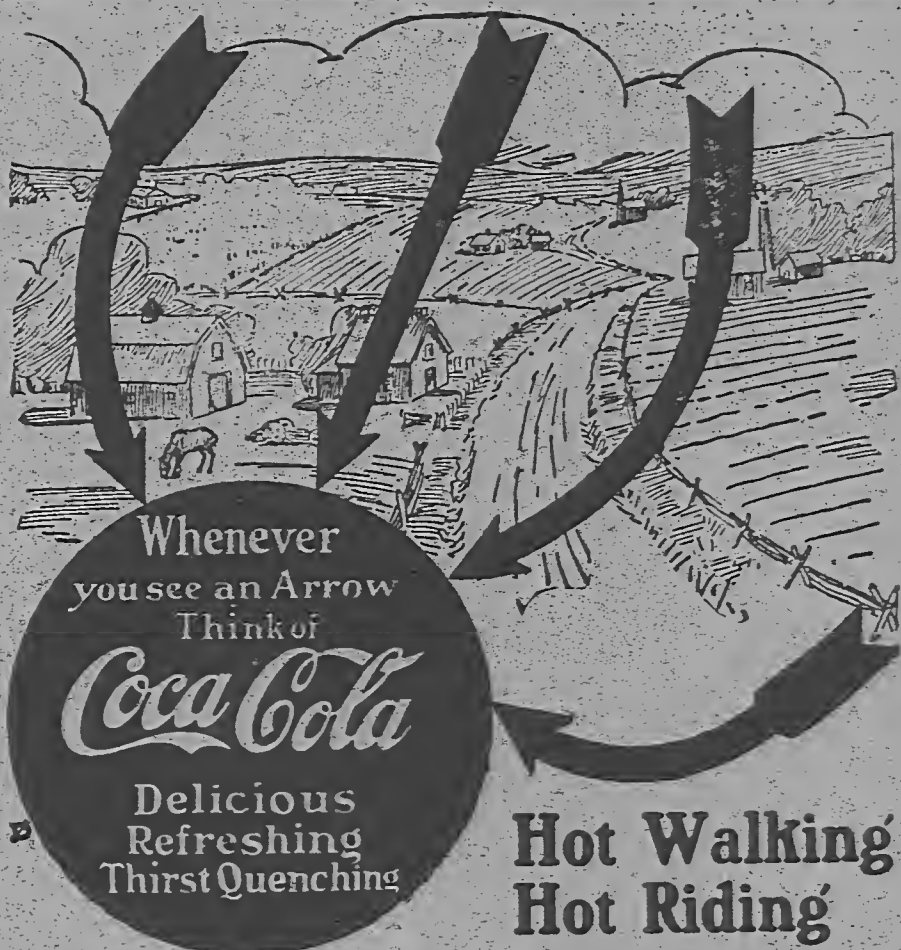

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

I. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Riehl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd.,
JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. . . . NEW ORLEANS
D. C. Godfrey.....Optician.

Whenever you see an Arrow Think of Coca-Cola

Delicious Refreshing Thirst Quenching

Hot Walking Hot Riding

You can't get away from the heat; but you can keep it from hurting. Whenever you're hot, tired or thirsty

DRINK
Coca-Cola

It refreshes mentally and physically—relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. Wholesome as the purest water and lots nicer to drink. 5c Everywhere.

Delicious---Refreshing---Wholesome

Send for our free booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells all about Coca-Cola, what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial.

THE COCA-COLA CO., Atlanta, Ga.

Epworth League

By Rev. W. H. Coleman.

TOPIC FOR JUNE 19.

THE CHRISTIAN'S SECRET.

(Ps. xxv, 14; 1. Cor. ii, 9-13.)

The inquiring mind of man is ever seeking to learn some secret. I made a special visit last summer to the Yerkes Observatory, and made a careful study of the great telescope—the largest in use in the world—that was built at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars for the astronomers to use in learning the secrets of the stars.

The world, from time to time, has been startled as some acute mind penetrating the hidden realm of Nature has discovered some one of her great secrets and revealed it to his fellow humans. As when Newton discovered the secret of gravitation; Watt, the secret of steam power; Edison, the secrets of electricity; Marconi, the secret of ethereal transmission of human messages.

Along all scientific lines men have sought, and are still seeking, to discover the secrets of the vast universe of God as they pertain to man's environment and to his own body, mind and soul in all their complex relationships. But the profoundest secret of them all, and the one that is the richest in its revelations and beneficences is

The Christian's Secret.

I. It is the greatest in revelations.

(a) It reveals God. The mind of man naturally seeks God, but the untaught pagans of all ages and all lands are destitute of a true idea of God. Hence they have numerous and various false gods. But the Christian's secret is a revelation of the one true and living God. Not merely a revelation of the correct idea of God, but an apprehension of God—a consciousness of his presence, his goodness and his love.

(b) It reveals Christ as the divine Son of God and Savior of man. The one who possesses the Christian's secret may have studied the theologians' various theories of the atonement, or he may be ignorant of them all, but whether the one or the other he is undisturbed; for he has the blessed consciousness of the sublime fact of the atonement. The Christ who atoned for him on Calvary and arose from the dead is to him a living, present, personal Savior and Lord, dwelling in his soul in the person of the Holy Spirit and reigning in his life.

(c) Thus revealing God, the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, it reveals the essence of God, which is life and light and love. Therefore, it reveals real life in all its beauty and splendor and richness to the soul that knows the secret.

II. It is greatest in beneficences.

It not only reveals God, but the soul that enters into the fullness of this secret may be filled with all the fullness of God (Eph. iii, 19).

It not only reveals Christ, but the one who will seek and learn this secret may have Christ dwelling in his heart by faith (Eph. iii, 17).

It not only reveals life in all its real beauty and blessedness, but it brings that life into the soul. That life that is hid with Christ in God; the life that is kept by the power of God; the life that is full of peace and joy; the life that is eternal, and hence is free from the fear of death and the horrors of the grave.

III. It is greatest in superior fellowship.

I recently stood looking upon a great congregation of eight thousand choice spirits from twenty-four nations of earth and forty-seven denominations of Christendom as, in the inspiration of this Christian's secret and the joy of its fellowship, they joined hands and sang,

"Blessed be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love."

IV. How do we learn this secret? By the Spirit (1. Cor. ii, 9-10).

Much is stated all through the Bible, especially the New Testament, about the life of the Spirit; its necessity; its great joys and blessings, and how to enter therein.

The disciples learned the fullness of the Christian's secret on the day of Pentecost, by entering into the spiritual life (Acts ii), and since that day we have been living under the dispensation of the Spirit. Christ had taught much regarding the spiritual life, as is recorded in St. John, chapters xiv to xvii. St. Paul, in the eighth chapter of Romans, tells us of the importance of the spiritual life, and in the latter part of the fifth chapter of Galatians he reveals to us the beautiful fruit of the Spirit that is manifest in any life that has learned this secret and continues to live the life that it brings.

Dear Leaguer, have you learned this secret? Are you living the life of the Spirit?

If not, would you learn it to-day; would you enter into the spiritual life now, and let your life be enriched thereby and made what it ought to be in the sight of God?

Then come, let us approach the door of entrance thereto. Now we stand upon the very threshold. Do you now and forever give up every sin and everything that is displeasing to God? Do you wholly commit yourself to him, to constantly do his will as he may reveal it to you, to daily live for him let it cost what it may, and if need be to die for him? Then you have entered into the beginning of the spiritual life and the revelations and blessings of the Christian's secret. Peace and joy will come into your soul; strength to resist sin and live for God will come into your life (Acts i, 8); the beautiful fruit of the Spirit will grow and mature in your life (Gal. v, 22-24); earth will constantly become more beautiful and heaven more real until that perfect day beyond the horizon of time when the transcendent glories of the eternal kingdom of God shall break upon your enraptured sight.

TO THE LAYMEN OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Ministers' Relief Association has as its object the offering of immediate relief to the family on the death of a preacher who is a member of the association. Each preacher is required to pay $5 on each assessment, the aggregate amount of such assessment to be paid to the family of the deceased. Laymen become honorary members (non-participating) by the payment of one ($1.00) dollar on each assessment.

The Five-Dollar assessment is too heavy on those ministers who need the protection most. If 300 laymen will join the association, pledging themselves to pay one dollar on the death of each clerical member, we can reduce the clerical assessment to $2.50.

Now, I make a plea to every layman who reads this notice to join the association, and I make this plea on the ground that you owe it to the Church. These men are working at under-values and they are doing this for you and your families. It is impossible for them to carry much insurance on the salaries they get. When they die, their families are often left without the means of meeting funeral expenses. This association provides for the necessary expenses, following the death of a member, and gives the family something to help them adjust themselves to a new situation.

Let every layman give his pastor one dollar and his name for membership in the association. Do it now. Do it to-day. Think of it, the first time you see your pastor. Do not delay.

JOHN PARK, Sec'y-Treas.

Oxford, Miss., June 10, 1910.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVIER'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND THE SUMMER?

Why not Try Winona Lake Assembly, Situated on Beautiful Winona Lake in Northern Indiana?

In Chautauqua features equal to Chautauqua, N. Y., in Bible Conference and Sunday School features equal to Northfield, Mass., large attended Assembly in America. A series of rich literary and religious entertainments. Bathing, boating, fishing, golf, tennis, and all innocent amusements. Fine Mineral water. Six large hotels, numerous boarding and transient houses. Write postal and secure free the beautiful Year Book, giving all necessary information. Address

PUBLICITY BUREAU,

WINONA LAKE, INDIANA.

THE BEST MADE Angell's Cough and Whooping Cough Syrup

For Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and Throat Trouble.

Contains no Opium or Morphine.

All Druggists, Price 25 and 50 cents.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

HIS SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. P. PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection, beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER, Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

QCKWORK

Polishes in a "Jiffy"

QCKWORK METAL POLISH is something new, something different, something quicker than you ever dreamed of. Simply rub on—then rub off. A bright polish in a few seconds. Nothing injurious in it—no acid—no grit. Fine for polishing all metals.

In 25c Tins Everywhere.

QCKWORK SILVER PASTE relieves household drudgery. It gives silverware a quick, lasting polish. Makes old pieces look new. Free from acid. Fine for gold and cut glass. Insist on Qckwork.

In 25c Jars Everywhere.

Meridian Dist.—Third Round.

Daleville, at Andrew's Chpl. June 21	at Concord Sept. 3, 4
Binnsville & Wahalak, at Binnsville June 22	W. H. LEWIS, P. E.
Lauderdale, at Lockhart June 29
Matherville, at Salem July 2, 3
Wayne Miss'n, at Big Rock July 9, 10
Shubnia and Quitman, at S. July 24, 25
East Clark, at Hopewell July 27
Waynesboro Aug. 7, 8
Scioha, at Spring Hill Aug. 10
Meridian, Central, 11 a.m. Aug. 21
Meridian, East End, 8 p.m. Aug. 21
Meridian, South Side and Poplar Springs, at S. Side Aug. 24
De Kalb Aug. 26
N. Kemper, at Mt. Zion Aug. 27, 28
Buckatuna, at Chicora Sept. 1
Enterprise and Stonewall

Substance of Their Opinions.

"In ten days I was well, sound and healthy—and could sleep soundly." This is the substance of what most of the patients say who receive treatment for the drug or liquor habit at Dr. Woolley's Victor Sanitarium in Atlanta, Ga. These are exactly the words of a man who was an habitual drinker and frequently drank a quart of whisky a day. After eight years' continuous intoxication he went to Dr. Woolley's Sanitarium with the result above described. People from all over the country go to Dr. Woolley for treatment. He has a great reputation founded upon the success he has met within his practice of over thirty years. Dr. Woolley's book on these diseases and their cure can be had with his compliments. Address him No. 21 G. Victor Sanitarium, Atlanta, Ga.

SOUTHERN SEATING and CABINET COMPANY

Manufacturers

HIGH GRADE CHURCH FURNITURE

Largest and Oldest Makers of Church Furniture in the South
Jackson, Tennessee.

RHEUMATISM

A CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as those who have it know, for over three years, and tried almost everything. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has not returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and it effected a cure in every case. Anyone desiring to give this precious remedy a trial, I will send it free. Address, Mark N. Jackson, No. 523 James Street, Syracuse, N. Y. Mr. Jackson is responsible. Above statement true.—F. H.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing by hand—no breakage. WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE LE PAGE INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO TORONTO - CANADA

DAISY FLY KILLER

placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Can't spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effect. Write for full particulars. HAROLD SOWERS, 150 De Kalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

FITS CURED NO CURE NO PAY—IN pay our small professional fee until cured and satisfied. German American Institute, 984 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

Belmont College

For Young Women, Nashville, Tenn. IRA LANDRITH, D. D., LL. D., President. MISS HUBBARD and MISS HERON, Principals. College and Preparatory Courses. Music, Art, Expression, Modern Languages, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Matchless location. Athletics, Horseback Riding. Register now. For catalogue, address, BELMONT COLLEGE, Box 7.

ESTABLISHED 1858 CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS

Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57 THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

BLMYER CHURCH BELLS

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Bowden CHURCH & SCHOOL BELLS

Special discount to readers of this publication.

My faith is that there is a far greater amount of revelation given to guide each man by the principles laid down in the Bible, by conscience and by providence, than most men are aware of. It is not the light which is defective, it is an eye to see it.—Norman Macleod.

MRS. LUCINDA O'NEIL

The memory of a good woman, a wife, a mother, a sister, a neighbor, is sweet and comforting. It is a sad time in the history of a man's life when death comes and takes from him that one for whom he has left all others, the companion of his youth. The mind is found wandering back over the sweet past even to the time of the first happy meeting and back to the last and most sad parting, and there it stops to view the once active but now cold and silent form. The hands that were once engaged in making home happy are now folded upon the breast and the cheerful voice is hushed in death.

It must be a sad time in the life of a son or daughter when they tell us mother is dead. But the memory of that beautiful life of that sainted mother should cheer the hearts of father and children.

No one knows the value of a good woman to a world like ours. When God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life, he committed him to the care of a good woman, who nursed him in his infancy, and fled with him from danger. She watched over him during his childhood days, and sought him, sorrowing, when he was lost from her at 12 years of age. Thus she cared for him until in his young manhood he was torn from her tender embrace by ruthless hands and nailed to the cross. The influence of a good woman in the home or community cannot be excelled. Fathers teach us how to live, but mothers teach us to live, and when we have become men and women, as a rule we live the life mother taught us to live.

Sister O'Neil has gone from us, but her influence will remain and be spreading until time shall be no more. I think she was one of the best women I ever knew. It was my privilege to be her pastor for fifteen months and to visit her in the time of her illness. She manifested great patience during this struggle with what proved to be her last enemy. She was very much concerned about the welfare of the church, though her health was such as prevented her regular attendance thereon during our short acquaintance.

On the 5th day of April, 1910, she took her departure from friends and kindred of earth to the heavenly paradise, and on the next day we gathered with sad hearts at the old home, where she and her beloved companion had entered life together in their youthful days, and we were invited into the room where was placed the casket. Then after a prayer was offered, I witnessed one of the most pathetic scenes of my life. Her oldest son, Tommy, (our Rev. Thomas J. O'Neil of the Mississippi Conference), requested that all be asked to retire from the room for a few moments, except her relatives and pastor, and the door was closed. He asked that all gather around the casket, and as they did so he said, "Mother is gone, she cannot come back for us, but we can go to her now if you will all enter a covenant with me to meet mother in heaven, please join hands," and while hands of father, held hands of children, and hands of children held the hands of grandchildren. "Tommy" asked God to help them to keep their vow, after which we repaired to the old family cemetery near Middleton, in Clark County, Miss., where assembled a large congregation, and we laid the body of this godly woman in its last resting place.

Sister O'Neil was born in Covington County, Ala., March 25, 1849, and came to Clark County, Miss., in early life, where she remained until death. She joined the church in May, 1869, and was married to Mr. James J. O'Neil, Sept. 12, 1869, to which happy union was born eight children, four sons and four daughters.

Sister O'Neil was a good wife. I shall not soon forget with what kindness she spoke to her husband the last time that I was at their home, and one could not associate with the children without being fully persuaded that they had a good Christian mother. She lived to see them all grown and married, and all settled in life. She was a joyful Christian, happiest when busy in the home, or looking after the sick of the community, or engaged in the worship of God. She had the spirit of service, and she hath done what she could.

Memphis Conference Female Institute, Jackson, Tenn.

Next School Year begins Wednesday, September 14. Every facility offered for a thorough education for girls and young women. All departments taught, including besides regular Classical and Literary Course, Music, Art, Expression, Stenography, Typewriting, Business course, Etc. Charges reasonable. For catalogues, etc., apply to

REV. A. B. JONES, Jackson, Tenn.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute is one of the oldest Female Colleges in the South, having been chartered in 1842. The college has 250 attendants and 125 of them are boarding pupils.

Parents desiring to send their daughters to school should write for a catalog of MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Which has a record of high grade work for half a century, maintaining a Faculty of specialists in the schools of Literature, Chemistry, Science, Languages, Music, Art, and Expression. Located in the most beautiful town in State of Virginia. For full information write

REV. S. D. LONG, President, Abingdon, Va.

RYDER HALL HOTEL

SALUDA, N. C.

The Ideal Place to Spend Your Vacation—Summer or Winter

Located right on the top of the mountains. Buildings brand new and modern, equipped throughout with hot and cold water, heat and every other comfort and convenience. Private spring water, no mosquitoes and beautiful shade. Bus meets all trains. 15 minutes walk from station. Special Rates to Tourists and Vacationists. Write for Them. RYDER HALL HOTEL, SALUDA, N. C.

Randolph-Macon Woman's College

LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA

Classified by the U. S. Department of Education as one of the sixteen "A" Colleges for women in the United States. Possesses a scientific astronomical observatory, new gymnasium, swimming pool, athletic grounds, fifty acres of campus, all modern buildings, cost to students $300 a year for full literary course. Instructors 40, students 400. For catalogue, address W. W. SMITH, A. M., LL. D., President.

FEED YOUR STOCK ON NUTRILINE

THE ONLY STEAM-COOKED FEED ON THE MARKET

Manufactured from the best products of rice, pure corn chops, alfalfa and a percentage of cotton seed meal, thoroughly mixed with black-salt molasses. Keeps your stock in strong, healthy condition. Makes your cows give more milk; enables your horses to do more work; puts firm healthy flesh on your hogs. Elton Merc. Co., Elton, La., writes: "Two years ago we sent to the feed business at this point and your product (Nutriline) was known in this section. My first order to you was for five tons. Before the harvest was over we were selling an average of one car per week. All our farmers are using Nutriline and some use it exclusively during the entire season. You will find no better kept teams anywhere than the ones that know no other feed than Nutriline. The records in your office of shipments of us are a recognition of our satisfaction without my farmer patrons' signatures."

Write for our booklet, "Can You Afford to Feed Anything but Nutriline?" which tells you all about stock when and how to feed—IT'S FREE.

NUTRILINE MILLING COMPANY.

CROWLEY, LA.

MEDICAL STUDENTS

Are invited to write for free catalogue and bulletins of the college and hospital of the

Combined Medical School OF THE UNIVERSITY of NASHVILLE

AND THE

UNIVERSITY of TENNESSEE

Fifty-one teachers, twelve laboratories, three hospitals and dispensary. Beside instruction a special feature.

Nearly 8,000 graduates. For catalogue and full information as to expenses and educational requirements for entrance to a medical college, address

E. P. TURNER, Registrar, 632 Second Avenue, South, NASHVILLE, TENN.

Furniture for School Rooms, made in the South, of Southern wood, by Southern people, with Southern capital. New factory—one of the best equipped in America, employing skilled labor only.

Lowest Prices—Advantageous Freight Rates. We make Desks, Seats, Teachers' Desks, Book Cases, Library Tables, Magazine Racks, etc. Write for illustrated catalog and price list. Address W. A. PRICE & SON, West Jackson, Miss.

one could not associate with the children without being fully persuaded that they had a good Christian mother. She lived to see them all grown and married, and all settled in life. She was a joyful Christian, happiest when busy in the home, or looking after the sick of the community, or engaged in the worship of God. She had the spirit of service, and she hath done what she could.

May God bless the husband and children and help them to keep their promise and meet the loved one in heaven. M. R. JONES, DeSoto, Miss.

Every Druggist Knows

and thousands of users know that

MINARD'S
KING OF PAIN
LINIMENT

is the great family Remedy
For Bodily Pain

resulting from rheumatism or neuralgia, stiff joints, strained or lame muscles, sprains, tired, aching feet, sore hands, and all sorts of bruises; also for painful chest or tubes, heavy colds, sore throat and hoarseness; as well as for scores of every-day emergencies and accidents that happen in every family. MINARD'S LINIMENT is a safe and reliable standby, and should be on every medicine shelf.

MINARD'S LINIMENT is a smooth, aromatic cream, clean to use, powerful, penetrating and soothing, and absolutely free from anything poisonous or harmful. When rubbed into the skin it stops inflammation, easing the pain and soreness at once.

If you are not one of the thousands who are already familiar with its merits, we want you to

TRY MINARD'S LINIMENT AT OUR RISK

Buy it from your druggist or dealer, use as directed, and if not found exactly as represented, we will refund your money. Prices: Small 25c., Medium 50c., Large $1.00.

MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO. SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS.

Has 2 or 3 Saws.

Our Light Gang Edger
is just the thing
for small mills.

YEARS of experimenting and the best material have made it a Perfect Light Edger. It is as well constructed as our heavier edgers.

The Drive and Feed Pullers are all on one side so that the saws can be easily and quickly slipped off the other end of the mandrel. The Pressure Rolls swing away from the operator, admitting the stock readily, and preventing the boards from kicking back.

Many other splendid features are described in our big, new catalog, one copy of which belongs to you. Write for it to-day.

WHELAND MACHINE WORKS, 2700 Sydney St. Chattanooga, Tenn.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

Makes healthy happy children. It is better for them than the heavier foods and costs much less. It is delicious with fruit and will not curdle when served with milk and cream. In large families where desserts "count up" Crystal Gelatine is as good as money in the bank. Each package makes two full quarts of delicious jelly, solving the problem of a menu at a small cost. Crystal makes the greatest variety of dainty dishes delighting all who eat it from grandma to the baby.

Ask your grocer to-day. Free sample for dealer's name.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.
121 A Beverly St. BOSTON, MASS.

LOCAL PREACHERS' MEETING.

All who expect to attend the Local Preachers' Association, to be held at Pine Valley, ten miles southeast of Water Valley, Miss., on Saturday and Sunday, July 9 and 10, will please give us notice how they will come; if by railroad, there will be conveyances arranged for Friday, the 8th, from Water Valley.

Let every member be present, and all others who may desire to attend. May the Lord give us a glorious time. Address, Rev. John Braswell, or W. A. Bruner, Pine Valley, Miss.

NOTICE.

• Dear Brother—Will you please say to the preachers of the Ruston District to send to me the names of delegates who will attend the Ruston District Conference, July 1-3, at Arcadia? It is important to get these names a few days before the meeting, so that I can arrange for all. I am trying to get reduced rates on the railroads. You and the publisher are cordially invited.

Brethren, please send me these names as soon as possible, and oblige.
R. O. WEIR, P. C.

NOTICE.

To the Preachers, Monroe District:

There is a northbound local train out of Tallulah, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. The early morning east-bound V. S. and P. train connects with this train, allowing you to arrive in Lake Providence in the afternoon of the same day. You will be sure and instruct your delegates to leave on Wednesday or Friday. Otherwise, they will be delayed in Tallulah until next day. We expect to entertain all who will attend the district Conference and give you a hearty welcome.

L. A. HUMPHREYS, P. C.

MINISTERIAL RELIEF ASSOCIATION OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Preachers:

I am writing to-day an appeal to the laymen in behalf of the Ministers' Relief Association. Will you read it? Then will you co-operate with me in an effort to secure the necessary 300 honorary members?

Have some laymen to present the matter to your people and take the names and one advance assessment ($1.00) and send names, with post-office address of each layman, who joins, to me.

The necessary three hundred can be secured within the next month. Help us now while the matter is on your mind. JOHN PARK, Sec'y-Treas.
Oxford, Miss., June 10, 1910.

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also.

COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.
1300-1302
DRYADES STREET.

PHONES—Jackson 1080—1081.

VISIT
MINERAL WELLS

—FOR—
HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND

WEST TEXAS

—For—
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS.
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE
DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,
General Passenger Agent.

DALLAS TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a.m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS,
WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves 7:30 p.m.

FOR

NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW
ON SALE.

3 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McCord, Verbena, Ala., used 3 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 20 years."

C. G. Butler, Argenta, Ark., wrote: "Used 4 bottles and gained 12 pounds and feel 100 per cent better."

Money back when it fails.
The Johnson's Chill & Fever Tonic Co.
Savannah, Georgia.

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00

St. Louis, $26.00

Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares

To ALL Principal Points in the United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD,
141 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
Phone Main 3618.

WOMAN'S BEAUTY

A woman's beauty is dependent on her health. To keep her beauty, she must keep her health. Sickness and suffering leave their trace, pain leaves its marring imprint. Ladies have come to realize that to be beautiful and attractive they must give attention to physical fitness and health.

Countless women suffer from ailments designated generally as "female complaint," thinking it is the natural lot of their sex to suffer.

This is a mistaken belief. Nature invariably has a cure for her children's ills. Thousands of women have found permanent relief for their sufferings by using that natural, herbal medicine—Wine of Cardui. Cardui is a pure, non-intoxicating remedy, specifically for women, which has grown steadily in favor during the past fifty years. Letters pour in every day, expressing the gratitude of the writers, who have been relieved of their misery and restored to health.

When you are nervous or sick, get Cardui from your druggist, and try it. N. B. Upon request, we will send you, free of charge, our valuable, illustrated 64 page book "Home Treatment for Women." In it you will find valuable information regarding the treatment of female troubles.

Address: Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Rider Agents Wanted

In each town to ride and exhibit sample 1910 bicycle. Write for Special Offer. Finest Guaranteed 1910 Models. $10 to $27 with Coaster Brake and Puncture Proof tires. 1910 & 1909 Models. $7 to $12. 100 Second-Hand Wheels, good as new, $3 to $8. Great FACTORY CLEARING SALE. We ship on approval without a cent deposit, pay the freight and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL. TIRES, coaster brake rear wheels, lamps, sundries, half usual prices. Do not buy till you get our catalog and offer. Write for. MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. M, 725, Chicago.

SOME LINES FROM TEXAS.

Dear Brother: Meek—The New Orleans Advocate reached me this morning at 9:15 a. m., but as it was Quarterly Conference here, I did not get to read it. I went and heard Rev. Foster Pierce, nephew of Bishop Pierce, preach an earnest sermon on why we often fail in the work of the Lord. So I have just perused your excellent paper, and was caused to run back many years to pleasant memories, as well as sad ones.

The obituary of Rev. Q. A. Oats and the sight of the names written and those who took part in his funeral service, touched me. I well remember my introduction to Brother Oats by Rev. B. M. Bounds, now of this Conference, at Corinth, in November, 1872, where he entered the Conference. Rev. R. M. Davis and I were close friends and were in meetings together in 1870, and J. E. Thomas and J. D. Newsom were friends of long ago. I spent some pleasant hours at Rev. L. M. Lipscomb's father's, in November, 1871.

But as I passed further on I saw a communication from Rev. D. H. Crowson, of Serepta. Then I paused, and began to think—there were once some of the best people there I ever saw. It was there I spent twelve years of my boyhood days, and where we had a fine high school, until our principal, Capt. H. G. Dunkin, went into the Civil War. There one of the grandest little women was quietly laid to rest in March, 1860, that these eyes ever saw. Her last words to my father and us children were, "I am going home to heaven; meet me there." The war changed things and many moved to Water Valley at its close. The last time I was there I preached for the P. E. at Quarterly Conference, and I was a stranger to nearly all, yet sweet memories of the place linger still. I could give a history of how that country has changed, but I forbear. I am glad to know the work of the Lord is now prospering there.

I can not close without expressing my sincere gratitude that Rev. W. B. Murrah has been made one of our new Bishops, and I am greatly gratified that we are this fall to have him preside over the North Texas Conference. He will not be a stranger to all when he gets here.

I start for Drew, Miss., to my brother's about the last of this month. I may be able to arrange to help some others in meetings, if they will address me in time. Yours in Christ,
S. W. MILLER.

Frisco, Tex.

DURANT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The members and visitors to the District Conference of the Durant District, which meets July 6th at Picken's, Miss., will please send their names to me at once, so I can provide accommodations for them.

S. M. THAMES.

THE TEST OF TIME

"Time proves all things," but especially the merits of "Gray's Ointment." This remedy for cuts, bruises, boils, burns, carbuncles, rheumatism, blood poison, felons, tumors, and all skin eruptions, has stood the test of nearly a century. It was put on the market in the year 1820, by the eminent physician, Dr. W. W. Gray, of Raleigh, N. C., and has proved to be the most wonderful cure for skin diseases ever discovered. No home should be without it—no trip is complete without a box in your grip, and it only costs 25c per box. Sold by all druggists, but if you would like a sample box to test it, write to Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 809 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., and they will send you postpaid, a free sample box.

H. A. Jackson, Calverton, Tenn., writes: "I have been using your 'Gray's Ointment' with good success when all other remedies failed. For blood poison your Gray's Ointment is just 'worth its weight in gold.'"

AGENTS WANTED.

WANTED—Good men and women agents at once for "Roosevelt's Famous Hunt for Big Game," also for "Traffic in Girls." Immense sellers. Price, $1.50, 50 per cent commission. Outfit free. Send 15c for mailing. Both outfits 25c. Also district managers for easy payment installment plan. Permanent work, $2,000 to $5,000 per year profits. Particulars free. Address, A. B. Kuhlman Company, Chicago, Ill. 7616.

WHY YOUR ENGINE IS IN THE I H C LINE

YOU want the simplest, most economical, most reliable and most durable engine made. You want the one that saves the most work, time and money. In short, you want the engine that pays the biggest dividends. That is why your engine is in the I H C line.

After carefully investigating other engines, thousands have chosen from the I H C line. They now know what perfect power-service means, for I H C engines are unequalled for running the many machines on the farm—such as cream separator, wood saw, feed cutter, churn, grindstone, fanning mill, corn sheller, thrasher, shredder, pump, etc.

Wherever you go—I H C engines are giving satisfactory service. Judge by what they are doing for thousands. Judge by comparison—point by point—with other engines. To be absolutely sure of getting the engine that will mean most to you—choose out of the line of

I H C Gasoline Engines

A Size and Style To Suit Every Need

You will get the engine that is best adapted to your work. You will get the engine that will work simplest, cheapest and best. You will get a simple engine that you can depend on. I H C engines are made in many sizes and styles. Whichever one you choose—is best in its class.

I H C Vertical engines are made in 2, 3 and 25-horsepower; I H C Horizontal engines (portable and stationary) are made in 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 15, 20 and 25-horsepower; Famous air-cooled engines are made in 1, 2 and 3-horsepower; Hopper cooled engines are made in 2, 2½, 3, 4, 6 and 8-horsepower; and there are also I H C sawing, spraying and pumping outfits—besides the International tractors—successful in every contest, winning the highest honors at home and abroad—made in 12, 15 and 20-horsepower sizes.

See the local International dealer at once. Let him tell you all about the I H C engine that meets your needs exactly. You will be well repaid for your visit. If you prefer, write direct to us about the engines you are most interested in, and we will promptly send you catalogues and any special information you request.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY OF AMERICA

(Incorporated)
CHICAGO U S A

THE I-H-C LINE

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM

"In the Land of the Sky."

Devoted to the cure of chronic diseases by natural methods. No drugs. No surgery. If you are afflicted with Paralysis, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Neurasthenia or some other disease that medicines have failed to cure, write for our free illustrated book which tells all about this new and better way.

Ideal climate, beautiful mountain scenery, pure water, home-like conditions, hygienic food, personal care and attention to each case, complete new sanitarium equipment, low charges and liberal guarantee of satisfaction are features here.

Patients unable to come to the sanitarium may be successfully treated in their own homes at slight cost.

Write to-day for the book and diagnosis blank—Both free.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM,

ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Summer Tours

VIA

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

California, Colorado, Utah, Mexico,
AND ALL THE WEST.

NEW YORK

And ALL EASTERN and NORTHERN RESORTS

See Your Local Agent for full Particulars, or Write

J. H. R. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La.

C. W. MURPHEY, City Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

Mrs. MARTHA BURNLEY, wife of W. J. Burnley, died at her home in Ebenezer, Miss., Tuesday morning, May 25, after a severe illness of only a few days. Sister Burnley was born in Yazoo County, Nov. 25, 1836, and has served faithfully in the vineyard of the Master ever since. After a record of 52 years in the church, she "laid her armor down to receive the crown of righteousness" that St. Paul tells us is in store for all those who love his appearing. She leaves a faithful husband, two devoted daughters and a host of friends who mourn their loss, but look forward to another meeting. Ebenezer, Miss. OLIN RAY.

MARTIN ARMAND McHENRY, M.D., was born in Union County, Ark., Feb. 1, 1855, and passed away in Monroe, La., May 15, 1910. He became a member of the church at the age of ten years, was a steward before he was 21, and all during his life served the church in official relation. In 1855 he was married in New York to Miss Willie Holbrook, who, with three sons, survive him. He was a graduate of the University of Arkansas and of Tulane University. Since 1892 he has resided in Monroe and during this time has been an invaluable member of our church, pastor's friend and counselor, steward, trustee, and Sunday school worker. Chastened by a distressing disease, he did not murmur and he met the last enemy with heroic spirit. Former pastors of the church here will hear of his death with deep regret and with sympathy for the surviving ones who are left behind. Monroe, La. R. H. WYNN.

MARY PARNELL BIRDSONG was born at Selma, Ala., in January, 1868, at which place her childhood and young womanhood were spent. Early in life she joined the M. E. Church, South, and was until the day of her death a consistent church member. On the 16th of April, 1890, she was married to Mr. Frank Birdsong, in Issaquena County, Miss. Of this union were born three children, two girls and one boy, all of whom are left to mourn their loss. In the Sanatorium at Greenville, Miss., at 3:30 p.m., May 2, the soul of this Christian woman left its earthly habitation and went to make its home where sorrows, sighings and tears are forever ceased. Her daughters, her son, her husband, her friends, are left to fight the battles of life without the presence of the one who had been so loyal as a Christian, so devoted as a mother, so true as a wife, so kind as a friend. We weep not as those who have no hope, for she who has gone before has left with us the sure testimony of a Christian life and the certainty of a reunion where "sorrow and sighing shall flee away," and "God shall wipe away the tears from all eyes."

ELMER C. GUNN, P. C.
Mayersville, Miss.

After several days of intense suffering, little RUSSELL EVANS KIMBALL, the only son of Brother G. R. and Sister Minnie Kimball, on April 29, "went to sleep." He was born May 2, 1909, and was therefore 11 months and 27 days of age. He was the idol of the home. Everything was being done for his care and development that a delighted father and kind mother could do for their precious little baby boy. He was just walking and beginning to talk, to the great delight of his parents. Russell was a bright, sweet, pleasing child. His was a good home here, and in his hours of pain and suffering all was done for him that loving hands could do. But God had use for little Russell in heaven; so he called him. He stayed in the home and with us long enough to gain our love and affections, and then quietly passed away from us. But we know where he has gone. He is with the Father in heaven. Weep not, dear father and mother and others for him, for Jesus said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not" (Luke 18:16). And Russell Evans has gone to him. Therefore say like David of old: "Can I bring him back again? I shall go to him" (2 Sam. 12:23). So good by, little Russell for a while; we shall see you again. W. C. CARLISLE, P. C.

At her home, Ingleside, Miss., on the morning of Jan. 7, 1910, a mother was sweetly called home, while loved ones lingered around her bed to see the last of their sweet mother. Could we give her up? Yes, it was God's will to call her home; so, while we feel she is safe with her Savior, we accept her departure as best. But O, how we miss her sweet smile and dear presence! Mrs. KATE ELLIS WILLIS was born June 27, 1850 and in early life united with the M. E. Church, consecrating her life wholly to God. Just four months after our dear father, T. D. WILLIS, was laid away beside his dear wife and our fond mother. The funeral was conducted by Rev. G. H. Galloway. We feel as if he could not stay away from his precious companion and went home to God. They leave three daughters and two sons to mourn their going away. He was born Oct. 15, 1845, and died May 4, 1910. Grieve not for them. Our loved ones are not dead, but asleep in Jesus. DAUGHTER.

GUSS DAVIS CHINN, son of A. R. and Mrs. Florence Davis Chinn, was born May 11, 1882, and died May 8, 1910. Guss was one among Hermanville's best boys. He joined the Baptist Church several years ago, but helped in all church work when he was called upon. In the sick room, or in the death room, there wasn't anyone better than Guss. He would go to any and all in time of need. He was a dutiful and thoughtful son and brother and a faithful friend. All who knew him loved him for he was of a sunny disposition. When his name was mentioned anywhere, it was always that Guss is a good boy. He leaves a father, mother, one sister and two brothers and a host of friends; one brother having been called home seven years ago. We feel that Guss is not dead, but sleeping. FRIEND.
Hermanville, Miss.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God in his infallible wisdom and infinite love has since this Conference last met, twice sent the death angel into the Pelahatchie Church, and whereas in the death of Brothers GEO. T. ROSS and W. O. HESLEP, Pelahatchie Church has lost two of its most zealous and faithful members and this Conference two of its most active and loyal officials, and

Whereas, Brother Ross was, during his brief connection with this Conference, a most efficient and enthusiastic steward, and Brother Heslep for more than twenty years an able and earnest official. Therefore, be it resolved:

First—That this Conference of the Morton and Pelahatchie Circuit does lament the loss of these brethren who were ready in service and always exhibited Christian fidelity.

Second—That in our deliberations we shall miss their timely suggestions, their wise counsel, their faithful presence and their effective, Godly influence.

Third—That these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes of the Conference and a copy be sent to each of the widows of our deceased brethren with the assurance of our condolence and sympathy.

Mr. DAVID McDONALD was born March 24, 1831 and died Feb. 19, 1910. He joined the M. E. Church, South, when he was a young man but was not converted until after he was married. He was married to Miss C. J. Davis, Dec. 25, 1855. He was the father of nine children. He leaves a kind and loving wife and six children and twenty-four grandchildren to mourn their loss, but his eternal gain. He has left hosts of friends and relatives. In early life he was bereft of a mother's love and care. Dear papa could not speak to us at the last. He calmly and peacefully closed his eyes and fell asleep, only to awake on the beautiful shore.

Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep.
Where none can ever wake to weep.

Oh, how hard it was to give dear papa up. He was a good Christian. We all can say he was a kind and affectionate husband, father, grandfather and a good neighbor. He was the superintendent of the Sunday School at his home church for many years. He was faithful to attend church when it was possible for him to go and always gave freely and liberally as far as he was able to his minister and all good causes. The last time he had the opportunity to give was to the Orphans' Home, and now in our deepest grief, this is a sweet recollection. Let us hope and pray that thus may the star of our life set. There is no need of sorrow for dear papa, for "It was only the footsteps of angels

That silently entered the door
And carried our own dear papa
To dwell on that beautiful shore."

"It was only a gleam of bright glory,
The gates of pure gold were ajar—
When dear papa went up with the angels
To be a bright, shining star."

"It was only a touch, soft and loving,
And then the dear form was at rest;
While the soul of our loved one departed
To dwell with the pure and the blest."

His daughter,
MRS. F. E. GALLOWAY.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

VANDERBILT TRAINING SCHOOL

ELKTON, KENTUCKY.

Next Term Begins September 7, 1910.

One of the best equipped preparatory schools in the South.

Accurate scholarship, high ideals and noble purposes are the ends of the training school.

Competent corps of teachers.

Six Southern States represented last year.

Buildings equipped with electric lights, steam heat, and all modern conveniences.

New dormitory recently added.

Location healthful and free from city distractions.

Moral surroundings excellent.

$3,000.00 spent in improvements this summer.

Well Endowed Library. Museum. Gymnasium. Y. M. C. A. Hall.

Full Classical and Scientific Courses. Special Attention to Literary Society Work. Write for Catalogue.

W. B. MATHENEY, B. A., and W. O. BATTS, B. A., Principals, - ELKTON, KENTUCKY

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1910.

C. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

VOL. 57—No. 25.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2837.

MEETING OF THE VANDERBILT BOARD OF TRUST.

Monday's Proceedings.

The question of control of Vanderbilt University will be settled, so far as the Board of Trust is concerned, to-day. One of the first acts of the Board after assembling yesterday was the appointment of the committee to investigate the credentials of Rev. V. A. Godbey, of Austin, Tex.; Col. N. E. Harris, of Macon, Ga., and A. W. Biggs, of Memphis, Tenn., who were elected by the Asheville Conference to membership on the Board. W. T. Sanders, Elliott H. Jones, Charles N. Burch, Hon. James C. McReynolds, Judge W. L. Moore, Judge W. C. Ratcliffe and Major R. W. Millsaps composed the committee.

This committee met yesterday afternoon in the office of Whiteford R. Cole, and the question at issue was thoroughly discussed. Mr. Godbey and Mr. Harris appeared before the committee and argued the question from the Church viewpoint, Colonel Harris going into the legal side of the question, and Rev. Mr. Godbey speaking in behalf of the general membership of the Methodist Church, South.

The committee adjourned soon after hearing the above gentlemen, to meet again this morning previous to the meeting of the general Board. The report of this committee and its acceptance or rejection by the general Board will call the turn on the next step in the fight for a self-perpetuating Board of Trust.

Neither Mr. Godbey nor Colonel Harris attended last night's alumni banquet.

The feature of the meeting of the Board yesterday morning was a letter to Dr. Kirkland from William K. Vanderbilt, present head of the Vanderbilt family, in which he virtually stated, according to Mr. Godbey, that he favored a self-perpetuating Board of Trust. It is generally considered that this expression will have considerable weight in the decision of the Board to-day.

The Board of Trust assembled for their annual session at 9 o'clock yesterday morning in the parlors of Wesley Hall, with Bishop Hendrix presiding, and all but two of the members present.

On roll call the names of the three men elected by the Asheville Conference were not read. Mr. Godbey and Judge Harris appeared later, however, and were received with the utmost courtesy. They remained during the session, but made no remarks before the Board. A communication was read from Albert W. Biggs, stating that he was detained from attending the meeting on account of business, but that he was in accord with the attitude of the other two men elected by the Asheville Conference.

The principal feature of the morning session was the report of Chancellor Kirkland to the Board. He presented the affairs of the university in able and concrete form. The Board was reminded of two vacancies in the college faculty, occasioned by the election of Dr. Collins Denny to the College of Bishops and the other by the elevation of Judge H. H. Lurton to the United States Supreme Court. Dr. Allen G. Hall, of the law school, was recommended by Dr. Kirkland to be dean of the law school, to succeed Judge Lurton.

No successor to Dr. Denny was suggested, but several names were filed with the Board.

Committees were named to consider the various features of the Chancellor's report. Committees on nomination to the Board and on budget were also named. These committees met yesterday afternoon and formulated their reports, which will be presented this morning.

Tuesday's Proceedings.

By a vote of 19 to 8 the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University yesterday declined to seat the three gentlemen elected by the Asheville Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to fill the vacancies on the Board. Subsequently the following eight Trustees were elected, thus filling the Board of Trust to its full quota:

1912—Judge Claude Waller, of Nashville.

1914—R. F. Jackson, of Nashville, and Bishop W. B. Murrah, of Jackson, Miss.

1915—J. A. Robins, of McKenzie, Tenn.

1918—Bishop W. R. Lambuth, of Nashville; Judge W. C. Ratcliffe, of Little Rock; Major R. W. Millsaps, of Jackson, Miss., and Allen R. Carter, of Louisville, Ky.

Following the vote relative to seating the Conference-elected delegates, Bishop A. W. Wilson tendered his resignation to the Board, which was accepted, the vacancy being filled with the others. Bishop Key did not vote.

Of the men elected, Judge Ratcliffe, Major Millsaps and Mr. Carter are former members. Judge Waller is general counsel of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway. Mr. Jackson is attorney for the Nashville Railway & Light Company. Bishop Murrah and Bishop Lambuth were both elected to the Episcopacy at Asheville. Prof. Robins is Principal of McTyeire Institute. He is recalled by many Vanderbilt students of the early nineties as one of the most worthy young men of his college days.

Prior to electing the new members, the Board of Trust rescinded its by-law providing for confirmation of its selections by the Board of Education of the Methodist Church, South, of which Bishop E. E. Hoss was recently made Chairman.

By refusing to recognize the Trustees elected by the Methodist General Conference and its other actions, the Board of Trust went on record definitely as favoring a self-perpetuating Board, the action, it is stated, being in keeping with the attitude which the Board of Trust has for thirty-five years maintained toward their trust.

The course of the Board leaves it to the Board of Education or the Church to make the first legal move.

The following letter written Chancellor Kirkland on the subject of the controversy was given out yesterday:

"New York, May 24, 1910.

"Chancellor J. H. Kirkland, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.: My Dear Chancellor Kirkland—I learn with regret of the crisis that has arisen in university affairs. The question of control is vital for every institution. Uncertainty on this point is weakness and danger. The Vanderbilt Board of Trust has heretofore claimed authority, so I am informed, to elect its own members. This form of university administration has been highly satisfactory to me, guaranteeing a stability that inspires confidence. In the past history of the university this has also seemed consistent with the friendliest relationship between the university and the Methodist Church.

"It would seem to me very unwise to change this method of election and especially so as the legality of the change is in question. Such information as I have on the subject indicates that your Board has both legal and equitable right to perpetuate itself. If this be true, that right may not be properly surrendered to any other body without a violation of the trust. Friends and benefactors are entitled to know the exact legal status of the university and the rights of Trustees should be determined, if necessary, in the courts. In my opinion this settlement should be prompt and final. This need not mean unfriendly strife; it is in the interest of peace and harmony and should be sought in that spirit.

"Please convey to your trustees my views in this matter, which spring out of the great interest I have in the future welfare of the university. Yours truly, "W. K. VANDERBILT."

At 11 o'clock yesterday morning Bishop Hendrix called for the report of the sub-committee of seven appointed Monday to investigate the credentials of Rev. V. A. Godbey, Col. W. E. Harris and A. W. Biggs, the conference-elected trustees.

The majority report, favoring the rejection of the above three gentlemen, was signed by six of the committeemen, and was read by Chairman W. T. Sanders.

A minority report was presented by Major R. W. Millsaps, he being the only committeeman favoring the acceptance of the Conference Trustees.

The remainder of the day was spent in discussions of the above reports, practically every member of the Board speaking on the question. The final vote was taken shortly after 5 o'clock with the result as above stated.

Following the vote on the question, Rev. Godbey and Col. Harris, who had been present throughout the session, and had spoken from the floor, retired. Bishop Wilson resigned, and the Board of Trustees proceeded with the election of eight trustees to fill the vacancies.

Following the meeting of the Board, Bishop Wilson, the two members elected by Conference, Col. Harris and Rev. Godbey, held an informal conference and decided to give out no statement at this time regarding the probable attitude of the Methodist Church, or what would be the next step in the controversy.

Bishop Wilson and Col. Harris accompanied each other to Atlanta last night, and Mr. Godbey will leave this morning for his home in Texas.

Col. Harris and Mr. Godbey stated last night that they had received every courtesy at the hands of the Trustees, and that while there was a difference of opinion, their personal relations here had been very pleasant. They declined to discuss what action the Board of Education would take in the matter.

Bishop Hendrix, president of the Board, and Chancellor Kirkland declined to discuss the action of the Trustees.

"The trustees did not feel like changing their methods of administration of the trust without some authority for so doing," said a member of the Board last night. "We will abide by the decision of a court of authority, whatever that decision may be, but we do not feel like changing the administration of the trust without such authority." This expression probably represents the sentiments responsible for the action of the Board yesterday.

It is understood that a resolution was introduced by W. D. Bradfield, of Dallas, Texas, stating in effect that the action of the Board in refusing to seat the Conference-elected Trustees should not be construed to mean that Vanderbilt was not the property of the Church. This resolution was tabled.

The second day's session of the Board of Trust began at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. While the sub-committee of seven were formulating their report the committees appointed to take up the several parts of the Chancellor's report were heard and their reports approved.

On the recommendation of the Chancellor, Allen G. Hall was selected as dean of the Vanderbilt Law School. There was quite a discussion over a successor to Bishop Denny as professor of moral philosophy, but no decision was reached, the matter being left to the Executive Committee with power to act.

A committee on budget and finance was named, the report of the Chancellor showing that there had been a small deficit for the past year.

A resolution was adopted by the Board providing for the segregation of the Theological Department, and a committee was appointed to see to the enactment of such legislation as would make this possible under the Trust incorporation.

A committee was also appointed to secure the location of the George Peabody College for Teachers in close proximity to Vanderbilt.

Following the final vote on the seating of the three gentlemen elected by the Asheville General Conference, the Board proceeded to fill the vacancies on the Board of Trust. The committee on nominations was composed of G. M. Neely, Chairman; William Hughes and W. C. Ratcliffe, and the election resulted as above stated. R. W. Browder, of Bowling Green, Ky., who voted to seat the Conference-elect Trustees, was dropped from the rolls. On the other hand, Major R. W. Millsaps, who brought in the minority report and voted to seat the Trustees, was re-elected.

The organization of the Board for the ensuing year concluded the 1910 session. Bishop Hendrix and Whiteford R. Cole were retained as President and Secretary, respectively. The resignation of Bishop Wilson left the Vice Presidency of the Board vacant, and Bishops Lambuth and Murrah were elected as Vice Presidents.

The Executive Committee is composed as follows: Bishop Hendrix, Bishop Lambuth, Whiteford R. Cole, R. F. Jackson, G. B. Winton, G. M. Neely, Judge Claud Waller and Chancellor Kirkland.—From the Nashville American, June 14 and 15.

THE WORLD'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The World's Missionary Conference, a representative gathering of Protestant churches, opened in Edinburgh, Scotland, June 11, under the presidency of Lord Balfour of Burleigh. There are 1,200 accredited delegates and 2,000 other representatives of churches, and missionaries present, representing all civilized races. The sessions will continue until June 23 and all phases of missionary work among non-Christian peoples will be considered.

The conference is unique in that it is designed to give representatives of all Christian churches an opportunity for an open discussion of all religious questions.

There are 500 American delegates present and 500 representatives of American missionary societies. The convention voted to sit in the deliberative session, which commenced June 12, as a committee of the whole, under the chairmanship of John R. Mott, of New York, General Secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation.

The various religious denominations throughout the world having delegates in the conference are represented in accordance with their incomes. On this basis, the representatives of the Methodist faith have the largest delegation. The total amount of income reported from the various Methodist bodies is $2,679,341. The Methodist delegates number 139. Of this enormous total income, the Board of Foreign Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, reports $1,095,000, and has fifty-five delegates. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the same church reports $631,792, and has 32 delegates. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, reports for its Board of Missions an income of more than $700,000, with 19 delegates; and through its Foreign Missionary Society $226,192, with 12 delegates.

The various Presbyterian bodies rank next to the Methodists, their total reported income being $1,894,613, with a representation of 97 delegates. The Board of Foreign Missions, Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., reports an income of $1,088,800, with 55 delegates, and the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions, Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., has an income of $261,000 and 3 delegates. For some reason, the Cumberland Presbyterians are not mentioned in the list.

The income of the combined Baptist Missionary organizations is reported at $1,280,976, and the Baptists have 66 delegates in the conference. The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society has an income of $888,261, and a delegation of 44 members. The Seventh-Day Baptists have one delegate, representing an income of $1,000.

The Protestant Episcopal Church reports, through its Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society, $397,860, with 22 delegates; and the Missionary Society, Church of England in Canada, has an income of $30,255, with a delegation of 2, making the total under the head of Protestant Episcopal $428,115, and 24 delegates.

The Congregationalists, through the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, report an income of $825,837, and have a delegation of 42 members. The total Congregational income for the United States and Canada is $850,837, entitling the two countries to a delegation of 44.

It is interesting to note that the Society of Friends, commonly known as "Quakers," reports an income of $33,000, and has a delegation of 3 members in the conference. Some of the other reports are as follows: Lutheran, $131,994, 8 delegates; Christian, $10,000, 1 delegate; Reformed Churches, $293,568, 15 delegates; United Brethren in Christ, $72,998, 5 delegates; A large number of inter-denominational associations are represented, with a total income of $726,766 and 42 delegates.

The total income of all the organizations represented in the conference is reported at $9,037,624, with 485 delegates.

What is universally admitted to be one of the most important matters to be considered by the conference is the proper preparation of men and women for missionary work. John R. Mott, M.A., General Secretary of the World's Christian Student Federation and Chairman of the "commission on carrying the gospel unto all the world" for the conference, in a recent pamphlet on the objects and purposes of the body, says:

"On the human side the world's evangelization depends chiefly on the character and working efficiency of the missionary. Although this is generally admitted to be true, the fundamental matter of the preparation of the missionary has received comparatively little attention. It seems incredible that it has never been the subject of a comprehensive investigation and report by a thoroughly competent international commission. There is a growing feeling among missionary leaders and thinkers that the curriculum of studies of most theological colleges and other training institutions should be radically changed in several particulars in order to meet the requirements of a foreign missionary career.

It is believed also that wiser direction would be given to the preparatory studies carried on by missionaries during the first few years after they reach the mission field if there could be made accessible the experience of those societies which have given most thoughtful attention to language study and to the study of the institutions, religious customs and etiquette of the peoples to whom missionaries are sent. The scope of the work of this commission therefore will embrace the preparation of the missionary both at home and after he reaches the field. Its membership includes men and women who have had large experience in training missionaries and other Christian workers.

While the greater part of the time of the Edinburgh Conference will be devoted to the discussion of the reports of the eight commissions, in the evenings and at certain other hours, effort will be made to insure the presence of the principal native Christians. This alone will give the Edinburgh Conference unique distinction, and strikingly illustrate the development of the missionary movement of the Church.

Under the presidency of Lord Balfour, of Burleigh, supported by such vice presidents as Lord Reay, Sir Andrew Frazer and Sir John Kennaway, it is prophesied the deliberations of the Conference will be wisely and impartially guided. The aim and plan of the Conference have received the hearty approval of the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Primus of Scotland, as well as of other prominent men of other Christian communions in Europe and America. As is well known, the missionaries and native Christian leaders have for some time been strongly desirous that such a world missionary gathering be held.

Lord Balfour, of Burleigh, read a telegram which King George addressed to the conference expressive of His Majesty's deep interest and gratification, and his appreciation of the supreme importance of missionary work in cementing international friendship and peace.

THE MISSIONARY SITUATION.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, faces a new missionary situation. What the outcome is to be is for the whole Church to determine. Hence this writing. This new condition of enlarged responsibility and opportunity grows out of several factors which deserve to be set down, read and pondered by all who love our Zion.

1. The whole missionary history of the Church has led up to the present situation. The broad and aggressive policy; the continuous progress and enlargement; the faith that has followed the pillar of cloud, and sought the sheep astray in the wilderness; to the increasing complexity of methods and means; the development of the two Women's Missionary Societies with their manifold service and wonderful success; the emphasis given to Home Missions and their organization into a department of the Board of Missions; all this and more has issued in the unification of all these great interests in one Board. This history and this new consummation gives us a conspicuous place in the ranks of modern missionary forces, and places upon us an obligation that no ordinary and half-hearted effort can meet.

2. The heart of the Church universal is stirred as never before on the subject of missions. Immense forces are marshaling, and unrealized resources are waiting for the hour and the prevailing call to make a fearless assault on the world's darkness and ignorance. The hearts of men are trembling with expectancy and they are crying everywhere, "What shall we do?" This undefined impulse, this tremulous interrogation must be turned into purpose and the certitude of conviction; and conviction must be turned into action.

3. The situation calls for the consecrated efforts of a united Church. It is not a matter that can be wrought out by any amount of official machinery. It is a task for the whole Church. The final word for victory or defeat is not the word of one or a hundred, but the myriad-voiced affirmation of the entire Church.

4. There are none who can bring the whole Church into line except our pastors. They hold the key to the situation. They alone can make the availing plea. All our methods fall short of accomplishment without the earnest, insistent advocacy of the pastor. This cause is too fundamental, too serious, too near to the pierced heart of our Lord to be wrought out by any mere devices of organization or short and easy methods. It must root itself in the conscience of the Church and find its nourishment in the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

The gospel of missions must be laid bare to the thought, and the will of Christ for a lost world must be laid on the consciences of the people till the missionary idea and obligation get into the very life-blood of the Church. Who but our pastors can bring the Church up to this apostolic lead? They alone can make men see that missions is not a matter of mere money, but of faith and love and obedience.

5. A united Board is the signal for a united Church. The time should have passed when a large number in the Church reject the great commission, and stand untouched, by all this throbbing and vivifying current of missionary effort. The whole Church of every name is awakening to the necessity of broadening the base of our constituency. The laymen with customary sagacity have discovered the need of this, and have raised the cry, "A Missionary Committee in every church and a weekly missionary offering from every member." They are offering themselves to help realize this slogan. When it is realized the financial problem of missions will be solved, as far as a method can solve it. Then assessments will cease from troubling and specials will be no longer a burden.

6. The need of such a method for increasing the regular income and so enlarging the basis of appropriation to the current expenses and steady support of our missions grows more emphatic every year. No amount of spasmodic and occasional giving, however liberal for special purposes, can answer the demand. There must be a larger income on the regular apportionment or the work already established will have to suffer.

7. The election of our long-time Senior Secretary to the Episcopacy takes from the leadership of our missionary forces one whose life and talents and training conspired to fit him for the post he has so signally filled. He has wrought his life into the cause and the Church has become accustomed to follow his leadership with confidence. The new secretarial force have inherited the success that has come to his leadership, and with it the first problems and increased demands that success always brings. In addition, the union of the Boards and the new form of organization throw on the new secretaries and other missionaries new and unusual responsibilities. It is scarcely necessary to say that the prayers and sympathy and fullest co-operation of all our people will be needed in the working out of our common task.

W. W. PINSON.

A GRAVE ISSUE FOR PROHIBITIONISTS.

By Nolan B. Harmon.

It was a cause of great rejoicing throughout the State and nation when the Legislature of Mississippi, in 1908, passed a prohibitory statute placing Mississippi, with a number of other Southern States that had passed similar amendments, in the dry column. But a late decision of the Supreme Court of Mississippi has brought us face to face with one of the gravest issues that the prohibitionists have had to deal with for many years.

In the case referred to, the Supreme Court of the State of Mississippi has construed the statute prohibiting the sale of liquors containing a small amount of alcohol and called "soft drink" or "near beer." The question resolves itself into a simple construction of the statute and an insight into the spirit of the statute, and this the Supreme Court gave us about two weeks ago. The statute in question reads as follows:

"If any person shall sell, or barter, or give away to, induce trade, any vinous, alcoholic, malt, intoxicating, or spirituous liquors, or intoxicating bitters, or other drinks, which if drunk to excess will produce intoxication, in any quantity less than one gallon, without having a license," etc., etc.

Now, the above is the statute which the Court has interpreted in a case going before the Court from the city of Jackson. Judge Anderson delivered the opinion of the Court, reversing the attitude of the Court as it had been previously fixed by the decision of a similar case before Justice Whitfield.

Judge Anderson held, in substance, that the clause, "which if drunk to excess will produce intoxication," qualified the kinds of liquor sold; and held that if a liquor or beverage of any character contained a small amount of alcohol, and that the drinking of such liquor or beverage to excess would not produce intoxication, then the liquor or beverage in question would not fall within the statute above rendered.

Anybody who stops a moment to look the issue squarely in the face can clearly see what will be the result of this decision. The bars are thrown down for the sale of near beer, and means but the opening for the sale of other liquors which the Court would hold as prohibited, if presented to them.

Justice Smith disagrees with Judge Anderson in his construction of the statute, but so far as we know gives no opinion in support of this disagreement.

Chief Justice Mayes concurs with Justice Anderson, but qualifies his concurrence by the statement that, if the beverage sold contains a sufficient quantity of alcohol to constitute the dominant quality of the beverage, and is the thing on account of which it is sold, there is then a violation of the law, even though it be conclusively shown that such beverages are not intoxicating.

The concurring opinion of Justice Mayes errs in holding that the dominant ingredient must be alcohol for it evidently was the intent and purpose of the Legislature to prohibit, within the State, the sale of all beverages, sold as beverages, because of the fact that the beverages contain alcohol. As it now stands, the issue is a very grave one. For, as above stated, this decision will permit the sale of liquors, which, if drunk to excess, will produce intoxication. Liquors containing one per cent of alcohol, or one and one-half per cent of alcohol, will be a cover for the sale of all manners of intoxicating drinks. It will not only be "near-beer," but it will be old rye and all of that ilk under the guise of "near-beer."

This is the law of the land now, and will be until the Legislature modifies the statute in such manner as to obviate any such interpretation of the law as that rendered by Judge Anderson, or until the Court reverses itself in a proper case.

As already intimated, Judge Anderson's decision runs against the views of Justice Smith and reverses the Court in a decision rendered by ex-Justice Whitfield. There are, however, two possible ways to prohibit the sale of "near beer" and all other drinks sheltering under this name. Prior to the passage of the prohibition law, there existed all over the State private statutes prohibiting the sale of liquors within a certain distance of a school house. These statutes, it is thought, have not been repealed by the passage of the prohibition statutes, but are now in full force and effect. If this be true, as is thought by many, then it would be well to invoke the aid of these private statutes to prohibit the sale of "near beer" and all other alcoholic drinks. If the language of the private statutes is in effect the same as that of the prohibition statutes, then the opinion of the Supreme Court in its construction of the prohibition statutes will govern. If, however, these private statutes differ, they may be brought to bear with force against the sale of all such drinks.

But there is another proceeding, which if properly carried forward would doubtless bear with exclusive force upon the sale of all alcoholic drinks, "near beer" and all others. Under the opinion of Chief Justice Mayes, above referred to, it is possible and very probable that if in the prosecution of persons for the sale of "near beer" (granting that the liquor in question will not produce intoxication if it is drunk to excess) it is clearly shown by the State or the town, or the prosecution even, that the alcohol contained therein is the ingredient which brings about the sale and moves persons to purchase it, the Supreme Court would probably hold that such liquor or beverage comes within the statutes and is prohibited.

If the laws are properly enforced the vile concoctions known as "near beer" and all alcoholic drinks can be prohibited.

After the rigid enforcement of the liquor laws in the city of San Antonio against Sunday opening, and the closing of four hundred liquor saloons on Sunday for the first time in the history of that city, against the direst and most infamous opposition on the part of the liquor men and their co-adjutors, no one in Mississippi need cry that the laws cannot be enforced.

What we need is some of the vigorous methods which Bishop Mouzon and Dr. Rankin of Texas used in pursuing such institutions.

The Newton District Conference, at the close of the reading of the Temperance Report, adopted the following resolutions:

First—We regret that the Supreme Court could not agree unanimously that any alcoholic liquors sold as a beverage is a violation of the prohibition laws of the State.

Second—That we hereby pledge ourselves as members of the Newton District Conference to use all diligence to see that the laws are rigidly enforced against the sale of near beer and all other alcoholic liquors.

Philadelphia, Miss., June 11, 1910.

THE PAST A GUIDE TO THE FUTURE.

By E. B. Partin, M. D.

Mr. Editor: It did my soul good to read your editorial in a recent Advocate entitled "The Apostolic Age." I am glad that we have one at the helm who can be trusted to steer the dear old New Orleans Advocate in safe channels. The simplicity of the gospel, the old, old story of Jesus and his love, will always be the same as when the apostles first began to preach it in their day. Like its author, it is the "same yesterday, to-day and forever." And when men get the idea that, like material things, it is progressive and changes with the passing ages, they begin to stray from the truth as it is contained in the Bible.

As you say in your editorial, when we have had great revivals and reformations, it was when apostolic teaching and doctrine was restored to the world. It was by restoring to a backslidden world and a backslidden ministry the teachings of apostolic doctrine that Wesley was enabled, in the providence of God, to bring about the greatest revival since the days of the early Church. And yet we sometimes hear it said by some in our own pulpits, that the religion of Christ, like the changing things of this world, must be "progressive." They compare it to the developments in the scientific world and say, "so must religion develop." "The kingdom of God," says the Apostle Paul, "is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost."

This is what constituted the kingdom of God in the days of the first Christians, and it is that which constitutes the kingdom of God to-day. And when this kingdom is set up in the soul of a man, then a growth is to take place, but it is a growth in grace and in the knowledge of Jesus Christ. We are to grow up into him until we come "to the measure of the stature of a full man in Christ." But says the inspired writer, we are to mind the same things, observe the same rule. The great Apostle warned the Christian of the danger of being corrupted from the simplicity of the gospel by the teachings of science, falsely, so-called. And the same warning is applicable in our day.

Before Christ came into the world, men looked forward to the coming Messiah. But after he came, men looked back to the cross on which he suffered and said, "It is finished," and gave up the ghost. Like Bunyan's Pilgrim, when they see "one hanging on the tree in agonies and blood," it is that look which breaks the sinner's heart and he feels his burden roll away. So it has ever been since the day of the atonement on the cross, and so it will ever be to the end of time.

A PLEA FOR THE PASTOR.

Dear Brother Meek—Since this is the day of advocacy of the women's rights in the Church, I ask the privilege of a short space in the dear old Advocate, that I may "speak my mind." However, it is not my purpose to agitate the question which is vexing the righteous souls of some of the sisters, for I am satisfied to let things stand as they are and as they have been ever since I joined the Church more than forty years ago.

In all the discussions of what the laymen should have, and what the sisters want, we have heard nothing of the rank and file—the men behind the guns, so to speak—the hard-worked pastor, whose duties never end and who is thought to have few, if any rights beyond going "where sent," collecting moneys, holding protracted meetings, visiting the people, burying the dead and meeting the demands of "unreasonable and wicked men."

The first rounds of Quarterly Conferences have been held—those which Post Oak Circuit says "tries the souls of men." The salaries have been fixed, and I have wondered if any thought has been had for more than "victuals and clothes." Ever since the return from the last summer's trips, many who worshipped at our Methodist altars and have enjoyed the sermons of these faithful pastors have been planning for their "next summer's outing" at some watering place or mountain home. Now, what provision has been made for these hard-worked servants, for a few days of rest—an annual vacation? When I go into the places of business I hear clerks, bookkeepers and even porters talking of their anticipated vacations (with wages going on, of course). Lawyers, doctors, school teachers, planters, all planning for a rest. Editors and preachers, alone, seem to be exceptions—immune to the contagion.

Now, of all the people in the world who need to be relieved of work for a season and allowed to get out among other men and with other surroundings, it seems to me that the preacher's demand is the greatest. While his great storehouse of information and inspiration is his Bible, and literature bearing thereon, still, for greater effectiveness and freshness of presentation, he needs to come in contact with the outside world—rub up against men of other callings and different experiences. It is well to study books, it is also well to study nature; but his great study is men and the needs of men.

Those of us who occupy the pew appreciate the great value of incident and illustration as employed so effectively by the evangelist. Many of their greatest sermons are only recitals of personal experiences and striking incidents gathered here and there in their travels; yet, we give the pastors no opportunity of such filling, and then compare him, to his discredit, with those who are adding weekly to their stores of information and usefulness.

A month off at chautauquas, among the mountains, on the seaside, communing with nature and associating with people gathered from hither and thither, will not only help the pastor, but will return to his congregation four-fold for the expense of time and money.

Again, it would give us of the pew a relish for the sermon, after we have also had a rest during the long, hot months of July or August. If everybody else is helped as a workman by a season of rest, why not the pastor, as well?

Let some one may accuse me of being a preacher's wife, it might be well that I say that my life has been spent upon the farm, as a farmer's daughter, and now a farmer's wife—a country girl and a country woman—who is proud of the distinction.

Yours in the interest of the pastors.

SISTER PHEBE.

THE LAYMEN'S GREAT MOVEMENT.

By Hon. W. A. Belk.

The preacher is a faithful servant. For centuries he has been declaring the whole gospel and has been standing upon the watch-tower warning the people and begging them to help bring about the salvation of the world.

It seems that at last their pleadings have borne fruit, and to-day we see the great Laymen's Movement spreading out before us. The people, the laity, are becoming aroused and are taking hold of the work. The preacher has been devoutly praying for this all these years, and he must not be surprised that his prayers are about, it seems, to be answered. Help to him has come. But to our mind this great movement is yet in embryo. The tremendous gatherings at these meetings, the magnificent and rousing addresses made there by good and learned men, are only the soundings of the cannon to the real battle. A few more of these great meetings, a little more of the speech-making, and then after the edge has been worn off and the real heart of the tremendous organization has been reached, we will begin to see it take on practical and every-day forms and get down to its real work and purpose. After all, its best work and its greatest ends are to be accomplished and seen right at home. The preacher will still lead in the fight, but what he wants and what he needs is help—practical help—from his laymen. I think that this great move will finally resolve itself into component parts. That it will be set off, if you please, into committees not unlike those of a legislative body and that certain kinds of work will be assigned to certain committees. For instance, let there be in each congregation a committee on finance, one on the needs of the Church, one to meet and welcome the strangers in our gates, one to look after the condition of the Church (I mean physical condition), one to look after the Sunday school, another to watch after the various societies of the Church, and so on to the end. Let there be one grand central or head office or organization for each of these committees; let it be systematic; let reports go up from each committee. Let the organization be complete all along the line. When something like that is done and the laymen thus work in direct harmony with the ministry, we will see results coming in thick and fast from this great Laymen's Movement.

These suggestions are crude, but believing that they point in the right direction, I venture to give them for what they are worth, hoping that others may take them up and clarify and apply them.

Holly Springs, Miss.

NO NEW NAME WANTED.

Dear Brother Meek: I think I shall have to send you back to the General Conference four years from now to undo something which you did.

I was pleased with your selection of Bishops and the way you handled the Vanderbilt question. But I am much displeased with the name you have proposed for our Church. How any body of intelligent Methodist preachers could have been so puffed up as to want to assume for themselves a name which belongs alike to all the Methodists of America, is beyond my comprehension. Such monopoly will be an insult to all the other Methodist Churches. Should I be living when our Conference meets in 1913, I shall vote against it first, last and all the time. It is claimed that the word "South" is a geographical limitation. What about the word "America" in Mexico, Brazil, Cuba, and elsewhere?

While I see no necessity of changing the name of our Church, I could have submitted to the name of Episcopal Methodist Church. That would not have infringed on the rights of others. But to be called the Methodist Episcopal Church in America, never. My opinion is that where there is so much prejudice against the word "South," we have no business to go, and that we have spent thousands of dollars in such territory which would have done much more good in Mexico, Brazil or Cuba. So, I hope that every member of the North Mississippi Conference will vote against this change, and instruct their delegates to the General Conference of 1914 to vote against it.

Tunica, Miss.

J. W. HONNOLL.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd.
Manufacturer of Lumber
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?
GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH
LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 535.

Church News

It has been announced that Bishop Waterhouse will continue to reside at Emory, Va.

Miss Mary Helm's retirement from the editorship of Our Homes has caused widespread regret. She has in a marked degree the journalistic gift.

The General Board of Education will meet in Nashville on June 23d, when a secretary will be elected in place of Dr. Dickey, resigned. Other matters of vast moment will also be considered.

The Pacific Methodist Advocate has expressed pleasure in having the episcopal supervision of Bishop Waterhouse in the Far West. In this the Methodism of that section is indeed fortunate.

The Book Committee met in Nashville on June 10th. Mr. J. B. Morgan was elected chairman; Dr. O. E. Brown, vice-chairman; and Mr. W. C. Dibrell, secretary. Rev. W. E. Vaughan was re-elected editor of the Pacific Methodist Advocate.

Western methods of church work are coming more and more into vogue in the past-fettered Orient. The gospel tent has reached China, and is being used with good effect. So writes Rev. E. Pilley from Huchow in the June number of Go Forward.

Dr. Andrew Sledd has been elected to the presidency of the Southern University, at Greensboro, Ala., to succeed Dr. S. M. Hosmer, who resigned. Dr. Sledd has held chairs in several of the leading institutions of the Church, and was recently Chancellor of the University of Florida.

During his recent stay in the United States, the Hon. T. H. Yun secured money and pledges amounting to $40,000 for a main building for the Anglo-Korean College at Songdo. The total sum asked for is $50,000, so that $10,000 yet remains to be raised. This additional structure is most urgently needed.

The late John A. Kasson, of Washington City, bequeathed a fund estimated at $1,000,000, for the construction and maintenance of a Protestant Episcopal Cathedral in the District of Columbia. The structure is already well under way. All of the denominations seem to realize the importance of firmly entrenching themselves at the Capital of the Nation.

The Commencement sermon of Vanderbilt University was preached last Sunday by Rev. G. A. Ross, D.D., of Bryn Mawr, Pa. The Alumni address was delivered by United States Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, an alumnus of '80, and the Commencement oration was by Ex-Senator James Gordon, of Mississippi.

Mr. John Crowe Ransom, B.A., of Vanderbilt University ('09), has been chosen Cecil Rhodes scholar at Oxford University by the unanimous vote of the Commission for Tennessee. He is the fourth Vanderbilt man to be thus honored, his predecessors having been John J. Tigert ('04), Millard Woodrow ('05), and R. E. Blake ('08).

The new Board of Missions is well officered. Dr. Pinson, the General Secretary, has both the natural gifts and training necessary for the responsible place to which he has been called. Dr. Ed F. Cook, Secretary of the Department of Foreign Missions, is an experienced and tested man. Dr. John M. Moore, the Home Secretary, is distinguished for his power of initiative and constructive church statesmanship, and Dr. E. H. Rawlins, the Educational Secretary, has attracted much attention by his masterful handling of missionary matters in Virginia. The Editorial Secretary yet remains to be selected. With such leadership we should make a great record in mission work during the next quadrennium.

The Methodists of Birmingham tendered Bishop J. H. McCoy an enthusiastic reception at the First Church in that city a few days since. Responding to the cordial greeting of his friends and neighbors, the Bishop, in a voice broken with emotion, said: "I never felt it harder to make a speech than I do to-night. I realize the impotency of mere words in expressing the gratitude and affection in my heart to my friends and neighbors for their kind words and for this great demonstration. To say I am overwhelmed would be to express poorly my feelings, so keenly unworthy do I feel of the confidence in my ability shown by my friends. Since the day of my election my mind has been filled, not with a sense of the dignity and honor of the high office, but of its overwhelming responsibility, and the demand for greater concentration and unremitting service. As you go to your Heavenly Father in prayer, remember your friend, and pray that God may hold up his hands and give him strength and help. Men are but mere incidents: the kingdom of God is everything. It is not the man whom you should consider, but the work for the common Master. I shall dismiss the personal aspect of my talk with a word of affection and gratitude for this notable demonstration.

This occasion shall be in my memory as a white stone, and I shall never forget your expressions of confidence and love." At the conclusion of his remarks Bishop McCoy announced his purpose to continue to reside in Birmingham, which statement was roundly applauded.

NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Newton District Conference of the Mississippi Annual Conference met according to the appointment of the presiding elder in the thriving little city of Newton, Miss., June 7, 1910. The opening sermon was preached Monday evening by Rev. J. M. Weems, D.D., pastor of the Main Street Methodist Church, Laurel. This writer was elected secretary, and J. F. McClellan assistant. Out of a membership of one hundred and fifty-one, there were seventy-four preachers and delegates present at some time during the sessions of the Conference. This was about an average attendance.

A well arranged program had been prepared by the presiding elder covering every department of our Church work, which added very much to the interest and profit of the Conference. Every pastor, together with several local preachers and laymen, had subjects assigned them for discussion. Each speaker thought he had the most important subject, and prepared himself accordingly. Prominence was given to the Sunday school work, Church Extension, Foreign and Domestic Missions, and the work of the Women's Missionary Societies.

N. A. Mott, secretary of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, and Rev. W. F. Long, the General Secretary of the Mississippi State Sunday School Association, were both in attendance by invitation of the presiding elder, and had work assigned them on the program. Each delivered instructive addresses on different phases of the Sunday school work. The work of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was ably presented by Mrs. A. F. Watkins, of Hattiesburg, and Mrs. Reese Price, of Newton. Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, of Laurel, spoke of the work of the Woman's Home Mission Society; while Mrs. J. C. Clark, also of Laurel, spoke with special reference to the city mission work of the society. These elect women discharged well the tasks assigned them, and I am sure that their addresses will give impetus to the work of the two societies. If more of our women could hear leaders like Mrs. Watkins and Hobbs tell of the great work that these societies are doing, it would be easier for the pastors to enlist them in this great work.

Revs. C. M. Chapman, pastor of the Fifth Street Methodist Church, Meridian; R. Selby, Conference Secretary of Education; H. G. Hawkins, president of Port Gibson Female College; and I. W. Cooper, D.D., president of Whitworth Female College, were all present and introduced to the Conference. The preaching was done by J. M. Weems, D.D., R. Selby, N. B. Harmon, H. F. Tolle, and I. W. Cooper, D.D. Each sermon was of a high order, and on subjects vital to present-day conditions and demands.

The routine work of the Conference was done by committees, District Conference blanks being used for pastors reports. This method commends itself in that it expedites the work of the Conference and relieves the secretary of much tedious work. From the report of the committee on the State of the Church, the following statistics are gleaned: Church members, 8,743; received this year, 271; received on profession of faith, 61; baptized, 47 adults and 49 infants; family altars, 224; church papers taken, 415. The district has made substantial progress in the matter of assessment for pastoral support over last year, the advance amounting to $1,395.

The committee on Temperance brought in a very strong report, which was adopted, not only by rising vote of the Conference, but on the invitation of the presiding elder the entire audience voted for it.

The report, by special mention, deprecated and condemned the recent decision of the State Supreme Court, by which the sale of near beer is to be permitted in this State. The Conference, by resolution unanimously adopted, congratulated Bishop Murrain on his election to the Episcopacy, and requested him to make his residence in Mississippi.

A resolution brought in by the committee on Education and adopted by the Conference requests that the "President and Faculty of Millsaps College get out and associate among our people, and get acquainted with our boys, and attract them to our Conference College."

James Orion Ware was recommended for admission into the travelling connection.

A. G. Gaine, G. W. Mars, P. L. Blackwell, and O. D. Laney were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference, and Z. P. Brooks and T. B. Winstead, alternates.

C. W. Crook was elected District Lay Leader, with G. W. Mars, S. M. Ellis, W. L. Weems, Dr. P. H. Saunders, and D. M. White, assistant leaders.

Union was selected as the place for holding the next District Conference.

A resolution congratulating Newton on her substantial growth and the present prosperity, and thanking the people of the city for their generous hospitality was adopted by rising vote.

Rev. T. J. O'Neill, our young and wide-awake presiding elder, presided over the Conference with grace and ease. The affairs of the district move steadily on under his brotherly supervision. His presidency over the Conference gave entire satisfaction. There was no note of discord in the Conference, but the entire sessions were pervaded by a spirit of brotherliness. The Conference was a feast of good things and a time of refreshing to us all. Every member of the Conference seemed to be an optimist. I confidently believe that this will be the best year in the history of the Newton District.

One regrettable feature of the Conference was that no one was licensed to preach. I believe that as a church we need to "pray the Lord of the Harvest" to call men into his ministry.

The licensing committee elected by the Conference are: L. F. Alford, W. W. Moore, H. E. Carter, and F. B. Ormond, with the presiding elder.

W. J. DAWSON, Secretary.

INTEREST GROWING.

To the People Called Methodists in Louisiana. Let me say that your female college at Mansfield has taken on new life. Our people here are enthused as I have never seen them over college affairs, the result of which will be all necessary repairs, buildings, sewerage and water works, and a general brightening up of things about the college. And to my mind, the only question now is, will our people give us their support and patronage or will they continue to contribute to the support of other than their own institution, and leave their own schools to perish for lack of patronage? I do sincerely hope we have seen the end of such folly, and that our people throughout the State will rally to both of our Conference schools as never before.

J. L. P. SHEPPARD.

Experience may rob us of our illusions, but it leaves us our heritage of common-sense, if we ever possessed such.—Arthur S. Hardy.

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

KELLER LODGE,

Seashore Camp Grounds,

New management. Every room faces beach. Salt bathing. Excellent meals. Reasonable rates. Special rates for day board to ministers.

Address,

MRS. ELLA MILLER,
Biloxi, Miss.

HOUSE ON CAMPGROUNDS FOR SALE

Desirable two-story cottage, with four rooms and hall, bathroom with latest sanitary improvements; completely furnished, facing open square in front of Keller Lodge, with a small, shady park in the rear. Address, Christian Advocate, 512 Camp, New Orleans.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location; price, including furniture, only $400. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

Secular News and Comment

The drink bill of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland was $30,000,000 less in 1909 than in the year preceding.

During the last twenty years immigrants into the United States have sent to other countries over $640,000,000, the gains from their labor here.

Michigan was the first American State to try the establishment of a system of public education, which led from the primary school through the university. Four attempts were made to do this before it was successful, in 1850.

Sixty million feet of merchantable timber have been added to the Datil national forest, in New Mexico, and nearly a hundred thousand acres of land will be thrown open to settlement by a proclamation which President Taft signed on June the 8th.

Trade of the United States with its noncontiguous territories aggregated $172,000,000 in the year just ended, against about $64,000,000 a decade ago. In addition to the $172,000,000 worth of merchandise, there was received from Alaska $18,000,000 worth of gold of domestic production.

Luther Burbank, the "plant wizard" of Santa Rosa, Cal., has announced the perfection of two flowers new to the world—a poppy scientifically designated "Oneotbera Burbank II" and a white evening primrose. His new creations, he says, will be extensively reproduced at a ranch at Lempoc, Santa Barbara county.

By a change in the form of the postal order and the elimination of the mail advice to postmasters of the issuance of money orders, Postmaster-general Hitchcock expects to save to the government approximately $500,000 a year. The order making the changes was issued by the Postmaster-general on June the 10th.

Paxton Blair, son of J. P. Blair of New Orleans, was awarded by the faculty of Lawrenceville School, Lawrenceville, N. J., the title of "Head of the School." This is the highest honor attainable in the school and is conferred upon the boy having the best standing in all his classes. This is the centennial year of the Lawrenceville School, which has an attendance of about four hundred pupils.

Levi M. Longenecker of Marietta, O., has completed a novel piece of furniture. It is a table made of forty kinds of wood, in 2628 pieces. It required 226 hours' work to make it. On the top is an owl artistically designed with different colored woods. The work is so neatly done that it would take an expert to detect a flaw. Some of the pieces of wood used were in the old bridge burned by the Confederate army at Columbia.

There is a movement for larger liberty in the Chinese Empire. Recently an imperial decree was issued constituting Provincial Assemblies, and stating that the way was being paved for calling a National Parliament nine years later. But the delegates to the Provincial meetings, who have begun to gather, have petitioned for an imperial decree authorizing a National Legislature at once. To this earnest appeal Prince Chun, the regent, is expected to delay his reply as long as possible. What the final outcome of this movement will be, it is impossible to foretell.

Writing of Iceland, a traveler says: "The people are as a class extremely well educated and many a young fellow you may see haymaking has been through the Latin school at Reykjavik, and is studying law, medicine or divinity in the winter. He finds the means for his winter studies by working on the land during summer. Iceland is essentially a democratic country, and every one has an equal chance of coming to the front. It is singularly unspoiled by the vices of an older civilization, and its people are marked for their simplicity of life and manners. I should unhesitatingly describe Iceland as morally the purest country in the world."

What is described by its makers as the most ingenious safe ever constructed has just been completed by the Chubb Company for the British Radium Corporation. The problem presented to the manufacturers was not only to construct a safe that would bid defiance to burglars, but which would at the same time prevent the escape of the radium. It is well known to science that radium emanations will pass through the thickest and hardest steel. For this reason, the inner coffer of the safe was made of lead three inches thick, inclosed within a burglar proof steel shell. There are many other special features, including a means of collecting the radium emanations before the coffer is opened. This compartment of the safe is designed to hold one hundred pounds of radium, valued at $5,000,000,000. The total weight of the safe is one and half tons.—New York Sun.

The latest battleships of the United States navy are not only living up to their contract speeds, but in recent four-hour trials under full power at forced draft have even exceeded the original contract performance. The latest instance of this is the case of the Louisiana, which, according to a dispatch to the Navy Department from Rear Admiral Shroeder, recently on a four-hour full-power trial maintained an average speed of 18.942 knots, and this, in spite of the fact that she drew about sixteen inches more water, with about one thousand tons greater displacement than on her contract run. The Michigan also made 19.42 knots, which is about a knot above her contract speed.

By a vote of 195 to 101, the lower house of Congress passed the Postal Savings Bank bill on the 9th inst. Under the provisions of this act, a board of trustees is created, consisting of the Postmaster-General, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Attorney-General, who shall declare what postoffices shall become postal savings banks. Deposits in these banks made by any one person shall not be more than $100 a month, or exceed a total of $500. These deposits will draw 2 per cent interest per annum, or may be exchanged for government bonds in denominations ranging from $20 to $500, to bear interest at 2½ per cent. The postal savings banks may deposit their money in either State or National Banks, for which they shall receive interest at the rate of 2½ per cent. Prior to the passage of this bill by the House, the United States Senate had passed a similar measure, so that now the two will be considered by a conference committee representing the two bodies, and out of that will probably emerge the precise measure which is to become the law of the land.

The report of the Carnegie Foundation bearing upon the subject of medical education has stirred up a wave of protest throughout the country. It charges that the facilities for medical instruction are quite inadequate in New York, Missouri, Maryland, Tennessee, Mississippi and a number of other States. The author of the report is Dr. Abraham Flexner, who many are said to have mistaken for Dr. Simon Flexner, formerly of Johns Hopkins University and a physician of great eminence and learning. Commenting upon the strictures of Dr. Flexner, whose opinions are affirmed to be entitled to but little weight, Dr. Oscar Watson, of the Physicians and Surgeons' Hospital in New York City, said: "Medical educational facilities in this country are generally ahead of those in Europe. There may be room for improvement, but there is no occasion for the expressions used by Dr. Flexner. If the Carnegie Foundation is willing to give money toward medical education in this country, it will be appreciated." In some quarters Dr. Pichard, president of the Foundation, has been severely censured for allowing the publication, under its name, of a paper so sweeping in its criticisms.

Dr. Goldwin Smith, the eminent educator and author, died at his home in Toronto, Canada, on the 7th inst. Early in February last he slipped and fell in one of the halls of his residence, fracturing his thigh bone. It was then thought because of his advanced age he could survive for only a few days, but he lingered and seemed to grow stronger with the opening spring. At times he suffered acutely from the broken bone, which did not knit together. Within the last month he was taken to the library of the Grange (his home), which had been transformed into a bedroom, and there among his books the distinguished scholar spent the closing hours of his life. He was born August 12, 1823. He was the eldest son of the late Richard Smith, M. D., of Reading, England. He was educated at Eton and University College, Oxford, being elected a Fellow of the latter at twenty years of age. He was admitted to the bar at Lincoln's Inn, but never engaged in the practice of law. He was a tutor of King Edward when he was the Prince of Wales, and was a great admirer of the late British sovereign. From 1858 to 1866, he was Regius Professor of Modern History at Oxford. The year following the Civil War he became professor of English and Constitutional History at Cornell University, which position he held until he surrendered it in 1871 for a non-resident professorship and moved to Toronto, where he has since resided. Professor Smith's reputation as a scholar was as wide as the English-speaking world. The impress of Newman, Whately and Pusey was upon him, and wherever he went he made his influence felt. In the struggle between the States he was an intense partisan of the North, and seemed never to be able to do the people of the South justice. He was an earnest advocate of the annexation of Canada to the United States, and was vigorously opposed to the Boer war. He was fecund as a writer, and published a large number of volumes, some of which elicited high praise and attained to a large circulation.

BISHOP KEY.

Asking to be relieved from active work, Bishop Key wrote to the General Conference:

Dear Fathers and Brethren—

"Twenty-four years ago, at Richmond, Va., the General Conference laid on me the responsibility and work of one of its Bishops. In all fidelity of purpose and singleness of eye, I have sought to serve the Church and meet my obligations. My busy life has passed so swiftly and silently that, without realizing it, I find myself to-day near the eighty-first year of age. My health is perfect, thank God. My head is clear, my heart is warm, and my love and interest for our beloved Church grows with the years.

"But I realize that a Methodist Bishop at eighty years is an unreliable asset. The calendar is inexorable. The son of a Methodist preacher, born in a parsonage, the grandson of a preacher and the father of two preacher-sons, and educated in a Church college, and with a record of sixty-two years of unbroken service, I ask in the fear of God, and with perfect respect and love to all, that you grant me the release from the official and routine duties of the Episcopacy, and pass my commission to a younger and stronger man."

In presenting a loving cup to Bishop Key, at Asheville, Bishop Candler said: "Mr. Chairman and Brethren: You have heard that the greatest State of this nation is Texas. It contains a great many charges in the first place, and in the next place it contains more Methodists, and that helps Texas very much. But Texas without the Georgians in Methodism would not be the Texas we know to-day. There is a Georgian that Georgia parted with some time ago with very great regret. He had been with us from childhood. Back of him was his Methodist father, a Methodist preacher. He went away from us and went into the hearts of the Texans. He is now past four score years, or is three score years. My mathematics are always askew. Mr. Wesley said that mathematics tended to make a man skeptical, and you know I never was skeptical. I think I am immune from skepticism. He is now past his four-score years. They have been years of labor and sorrow, and yet, laboring, he still brings forth fruit in old age. The Texas delegation of this General Conference have asked me in their name to present to dear Bishop Key, loved and honored, this very beautiful loving cup. I will not undertake—yes, I will—to open it. I am not sure this is altogether unselfish on the part of our Texan brethren, for remember the assertion, 'he that giveth a cup of cold water to a disciple shall not lose his reward.' This cup is overflowing not with cold water, but with warm love."

BISHOP JOHN C. KILGO.

North Carolina yields this eminent citizen to the highest sphere in Methodism with reluctance. As president of Trinity College it has seemed that his going away would be an irreparable loss. But the time for his promotion was ripe, and what has happened is only the fulfillment of what had become an almost universal conviction, viz.: that he possessed in a pre-eminent degree the qualities essential for filling the great and responsible office of a Bishop in the Church.

As a preacher and platform speaker Bishop Kilgo has few equals, and no superiors, in this country, and it would have been robbing the Church of her right to utilize to the utmost such gifts if he had been held longer in any subordinate place. So while North Carolina regrets the loss to herself, she rejoices that the whole Church is to be permitted to share the blessing of the ministry of this man.

We rejoice the more in the election of Dr. Kilgo to the Episcopacy because we know that in him the Church is to have a real defender of the faith. In his message there will be no uncertain sound. He will stand square upon the Bible as the inspired Word of God, and the tendency to destructive criticism will find no comfort in him. May the God of our fathers gird him with strength and give him long life in which to do a work that shall abide during the centuries.—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure.

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McClosky, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec.-Treas.
Geo. A. Hero

SPEARING & CO.,

(Established 1817.)

SAIL MAKERS

AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPAULINS and TENTS.

CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOU LAS STREETS

Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

REV. HIRAM RIVERS SINGLETON.

By Rev. H. M. DuBose, D.D.

In the death of Rev. Hiram Rivers Singleton, of the Mississippi Conference, a strong and beautiful life was rounded with sleep, and an effective testimony laid hold upon the things within the veil, an eloquent voice has grown silent, and an obedient and ever loyal son of the Church has been crowned.

The progenitors of Brother Singleton were of Scotch-English stock. The records of the family in America go back to the second decade of the seventeenth century, in Virginia. Later, the ancestors of his direct line removed to Sumpter District, S. C. There, for several generations, they were neighbors and friends of the Hamptons, a race who helped to make South Carolina famous in the nation's history of statecraft and chivalry.

The great grandparents of Brother Singleton removed from South Carolina to the region of the Mississippi in the early part of the nineteenth century, settling first in Wilkinson County, Miss., but more latterly removing to West Feliciana Parish, La. His Virginia and South Carolina forbears had been soldiers of the revolutionary war, and his early Mississippi kin saw service in the campaigns of 1812. His father graduated from the famous old-time academy at Bardstown, Ky., while his mother received her training at the Roman Catholic convent school at Nazareth, in the same State. They were married in West Feliciana Parish, and fixed their home at Jeanerette, in St. Mary Parish, where their son, Hiram Rivers, was born, in 1848.

The father of Brother Singleton was educated for the law, and, like his sire and grand-sires, was interested in sugar planting. However, soon after the birth of his son, he sold his sugar plantation in Louisiana and invested in cotton lands in the Brazos Valley in the new State of Texas. He lived upon this estate during the remainder of his life, dividing his time between the care of it and attention to a law practice which he established in Brazoria, the county seat, in which he lived. In 1853 both the elder Singleton and his wife were happily converted, and became members of the Methodist Church. In the autumn of the same year they were stricken, side by side, in one of those terrible visitations of yellow fever, once too common a recurrence in the malarial belts of the South. Beside their son, Hiram Rivers, they left a daughter to inherit their estate, which for that time was an opulent patrimony. By the end of the war between the States this fortune had been greatly diminished, but was still sufficient to afford the means of a hopeful beginning in life for the son, who had been with kindred and at school until his seventeenth year, when he joined the Home Guards of the Confederate Army. At or near the close of the war he took up cotton planting on his own estate, but after two years he sold his lands and entered upon the business of a druggist, for which he had a natural turn and liking. In 1869, he married Miss Lucy Burrass Forsythe, daughter of an early and distinguished member of the Mississippi Conference. In 1870 he had the sorrow to bury both his young wife and his first-born son. Already deeply spiritual in life, and having previously felt powerful drawings toward the ministry, he immediately after the death of his wife sold his business and entered the itinerancy as a member on trial in the Mississippi Annual Conference. This was in December, 1870. The appointments of that year put him in charge of the Covington Circuit, that section of Louisiana being then in the Mississippi Conference. It was an extended work, sixty miles around, and consisting of eight or nine appointments. With new experiences, new faces and associations, and especially with new and lofty ideals of service to be rendered to God and men he was drawn out of himself and out of his sorrow, which had settled upon him like a cloud. It was a year of activity for the young evangelist, a year of spiritual triumphs. The quiet youth brought up in plenty and seclusion found a tongue of eloquence that charmed all men and made the gospel message entertaining beyond the common call. More than one hundred members were received into the church, and many were reclaimed. It was a year of happiness and true enlargement. A strong and unanimous call for his return was sent to the Conference, but the commission of the itinerant carries no guarantee that the commissioned shall remain in one place. The next year he was appointed to the Rocky Springs work within the limits of the State of Mississippi. To this work he carried as a bride the loving and faithful wife who for nearly forty years was a true help-meet to his itinerant call and a guardian angel in his life and home.

Now began in earnest a remarkable ministry, extending through thirty-five years of active roll calls. From Rocky Springs Circuit he went to Brookhaven Station. Upon this follows a long list of station assignments, the very names of which suggest the adventures and changes of the itinerancy. They are: Waynesboro, Enterprise, Port Gibson, Canton, Yazoo City, Natchez, Crystal Springs, San Jose, Cal., Alameda, Sacramento, Jackson, La.; Baton Rouge, Rayne Memorial, New Orleans; Helena, Ark.; Searcy, Vicksburg, Port Gibson (a second pastorate) and Ocean Springs, at which last place his health finally failed and he went upon the veteran's list, a list honored by the names of some of the most heroic men of Methodism.

For a time, after his superannuation, Brother Singleton resided in Nashville, but more latterly he moved his home to El Paso, Texas, where, on an April day of the now fruiting year, death found, but did not surprise, him.

Brother Singleton was one of the three or four men who have been nearest to my life and heart. It is now thirty-five years ago since our paths first crossed. O, the warmth and truth of his heart—the loyalty, the love of his soul! Galloway, Singleton! these were the names—the souls—that shed the earliest luster of a perfect friendship into my life. They have gone before me. It is one of the solacing thoughts of these days of toil that I shall find them in fellowship when I too am called to enter into the Master's presence. Farewell and hail!

Hiram Rivers Singleton was, when in the prime of his years, one of the most truly eloquent and persuasive preachers I have ever known. After having heard the princes of the American pulpit of the last and first decades of the two greatest centuries of time, I would willingly turn from the profoundest and most renowned of them all to hear again the friend and confidant of my youth in one of those rapturous appeals which made his early ministry "as the apple tree among the trees of the wood."

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

Chapter XVI.

While at Lauderdale I had occasion to study men and means in a way I never had before. Everywhere I go I find people wedded to their creed more than to their God. I found a few such in and around Lauderdale. Some people worship their church, some worship their favorite preacher, some their particular mode of baptism, while a few are devoted to their God and their Bible, losing sight of denominational preferences.

The more religion, pure and undefiled, one enjoys, the less bigoted, sectarian selfishness and the like there is in him. The man or woman who can't afford to go to any church save that of his own faith and order betrays a vast amount of profound ignorance or sectarian bigotry. Religion is love—love to God and mankind.

Among the good men I met at Lauderdale was one Shade Jamerson. He was a railroad man, conductor of a work train, with headquarters at Lauderdale. He was a strict member of the Baptist Church. He became deeply interested in the "second blessing" theory of sanctification. He sought and, as he said, obtained the blessing of perfect love. He talked it, he preached it, he sang and he lived it. He was at our first Quarterly Conference in Lauderdale, in March, 1886. On Sunday, after the 11 o'clock sermon, all Christians were invited to come forward and join in the communion service. Brother Jamerson belonged to a Church that would not allow its members to commune with other denominations, hence he sat back and looked on while Methodists, Presbyterians and others gathered around the communion altar and there commemorated the death and resurrection of the Savior. His conscience smote him. For the first time in life, he felt he was doing wrong by not communing with the Christians of other churches. He said to me afterwards, "I knew they were God's children; yet my Church would not let me commune with them." No wonder his conscience smote him. His eyes were being opened. He promised the Lord, if he would forgive him, he would do so no more. The next opportunity he had, he went forward, kneeled and partook of the Holy Sacrament. His Church separated him from its fellowship, and with a sad heart, he told me all about it. I said to him: "Brother Jamerson, don't remain out, but join some Church." He did so, and in a short while applied to my Church for membership. I handed him a Methodist Discipline, told him to read it carefully, and report to me at my next appointment there. He did so, and I administered the vows of our Church to him. In a short while we gave him license to exhort, which he used in a way that was a credit to himself and a blessing to others, and very helpful to me as his pastor. God bless all such men.

Early in the year 1886, I visited a home about a half mile from town. As I drew near the front door, an old gentleman came to meet me. Said I, "Brother Jamerson." "No, this is Brother Jamerson's father," was his reply. After spending a little while with Sister J. and her daughter, I called for a Bible. She said: "Brother Lewis, I am sorry to have to tell you, we have no Bible. We had one once, but in moving, it got wet and came to pieces. However, I may be able to find a part of it." "Do so," said I. "It may be we can find something worth reading in it." I read; we kneeled in prayer together. I afterwards wrote to Nashville for a large type book of the Psalms and gave it to the good sister. She paid for it in butter. The next time I visited her, she said to me: "Brother Lewis, I have read my book through." "It will bear reading again," I said. "Yes, and I am going to read it again," was her reply. Her daughter then said: "Brother Lewis, that is the only Scripture I ever knew my father to read. I often see him reading that Book."

Before I left Lauderdale, both these old people professed faith in Christ; died in peace and went home to rest. Their son, Shade Jamerson, said to me, "No doubt that Book you gave mother was the means in God's hands in bringing them to Christ."

It pays to distribute good books; and there is no book better than the Bible. I have given away many Bibles and Testaments, and I find it pays to do so. If our preachers would supply themselves with good books and tracts, scatter them among people who need information on various matters of religious interest (such as Christian Perfection, Infant Baptism, Final Perseverance of the Saints, etc.), it would be of vast interest to our Church. After I became acquainted with the situation of things in and around Lauderdale, I went to work, raised a tract fund, procured a good lot of tracts bearing on the subject of Christian living and put them in the hands of people I thought would do the most good. I was afterwards gratified with the results. It pays to scatter good literature broadcast over the land; not your own alone, but some one else's productions.

I have often thought, if some preachers and others who are so bitter against the residue or "second blessing" theory of sanctification only had another baptism or two of the Spirit, they would not be so bitter. Let your people enjoy all there is for them in the religion of Christ, and exhort them to "go on to perfection."

I like a man who has religion enough to prompt him to say "Amen!" at the proper time when some one else is preaching. Some one asked Brother Ira B. Robertson why he did so much better in preaching to the negroes than when preaching to the white people. A colored brother who was standing near said: "We hopes him." Yes, it helps a preacher to hear a hearty "Amen!" coming from a good man while he is preaching.

While at Lauderdale, my oldest preacher boy, Barney, was licensed to preach. In 1888, Conference met in Vicksburg and Bishop Hargrove presided. My appointment for the next year was to Benton, about which I will write in my next.

CONCERNING MANSFIELD COLLEGE.

To the Methodists of Louisiana:

Two months ago I had no thought that my work would ever be in Louisiana again. When the trustees of our College for women expressed the belief that I could help in putting our institution on a foundation of assured success, I could not but remember how kind the people of Louisiana have been to me. The only response to such kindness seemed to be to undertake any work our people thought I would best do. I find myself therefore president-elect of Mansfield College.

In order that I may fully regain my strength for the session's work, I shall have to deprive myself of the pleasure of visiting our people this summer. In a few weeks I shall be at my desk at Mansfield and shall be glad to hear from all who are interested in training girls into womanhood under the safeguard of Christian instruction. Brother J. L. P. Sheppard will see you face to face and present the claims of our school.

I am assured by my doctor that I may go to my work in better condition than has been my lot for a decade. All now needed is to go slow with work until I am completely recovered from the shock of severe surgical operations.

May I not ask our pastors to give special attention to Mansfield's claims this summer? A card to Brother Sheppard will get prompt attention. After July 15, address me at Mansfield.

Faithfully and fraternally yours,

WILLIAM LANDER WEBER.

ROOMS and BOARD

634 and 638 SOUTH STREET

(Lafayette Square)

Corner St. Charles St.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Unlimited Meals.

Alvin Porter, Mgr.

REMOVAL SALE.

We will move into our new, big building on Baronne Street, next to Hotel Denechaud,

JULY 1st.

We are offering now BIG BARGAINS in CHINA-WARE, GLASSWARE, KITCHEN-WARE, and the Famous LEONARD REFRIGERATORS

—Agents for Famous Glenwood Ranges—

GAUCHE-CONNOR CO.,

Successors to John Ganche Sons.

614 CANAL ST., Near Camp.

The Home Circle

DREAMS.

If a good little child be ever so good,
As good as a child can be;
Wee Willie Winkie comes over the hill
With his sack of dreams—comes he.
One little dream of a truly train,
One little dream of a candy cane,
One little dream of a woolly sheep,
One little dream of a doll to keep,
One little dream rub-a-dub drums,
One little dream of a top that hums,
One little dream of a trumpet red,
One little dream of a brand new sled,
One little dream of a chocolate drop—
Dream upon dream, and they never stop.
If a good little child be ever so good,
As good as a child can be;
Wee Willie Winkie—Why, here he is.
'Shut your eyes, quick,' says he.

—Selected.

HOW THE TWINS WERE PINNED TOGETHER.

Many years ago, before Uncle Sam had as many soldiers on the frontier as he has now, and before so many of the Indians had been civilized and taught to serve God and leave their terrible love of torturing and killing white men, a young man named Grover and his wife left their comfortable eastern home and took up a government claim in the far West. There they built a nice, tight log-house, and in a very few years had so improved their little home that it was an oasis in the immense prairie surrounding it. Vines almost covered the house, and plants which they had taken great pains to cultivate from the beautiful wild prairie flowers filled the pretty garden.

Ten years passed, and two merry boys, twins (whom their mother had named Romulus and Remus; no doubt expecting them to become founders of some great city of the future), and a dear little girl, four years younger, made the family a happy one indeed. In all these years they had been very fortunate in their intercourse with the Indians, who sometimes stopped at their door for food or drink, which was always kindly given. But Mr. Grover had never been willing to run the risk of leaving his little family alone. When he left home, he took them all with him in the big carry-all drawn by old General, a most important member of the family, who had served them ever since they had lived on the prairie.

But when the twins were nine years old, little Lucy was taken very ill, so alarmingly ill that it was necessary to have the doctor at once, and he lived in the nearest town, seven miles away. Mr. Grover could not leave his wife alone with the sick child, so it was decided that the little boys must go for the doctor on old General's back. They were quite used to scampering about on him just in sight of the house, so there was no fear that he would not carry them safely, and for a long time no Indians had been seen, nor had any rumors of trouble with them been heard.

So about seven o'clock in the morning, the twins were mounted on old General's back, intrusted with a note for the doctor, who was sure to come back with them if he could be found. If he could not, they were to leave the note for him and return at once. They started off in great glee, very proud of their trust. Rommy driving and Remy sitting behind him with his arms around his waist. This position was to be reversed on the homeward way, so that they should have equal share in the glory of the trip.

The anxious parents watched the little boys as long as they could see them, and when they were out of sight, with a prayer for their safe-keeping, they returned to little Lucy, who was growing so feverish and seemed so ill that they were very much worried about her.

Mr. Grover had thought it would take the boys about five hours to go and return, as old General would probably go at his own gait with so little authority behind! But soon after eleven, he found himself looking for the little speck that would first appear on the horizon. He had looked many times before he discovered the speck and made sure it was the old horse and his burden. As he was about to lay down the glass, another speck appeared, which he thought must, of course, be the doctor; but in an instant two more came in sight, and the distracted father saw that old General was running for dear life with three Indians pursuing him! On came the faithful horse with tail straight out and nostrils distended, straining every muscle to keep ahead.

What could be done? The father could not leave his wife and sick child alone in the house and run out to help the boys, at the risk of being killed and leaving his family helpless indeed. He could only barricade the cabin and cry to God for help. The door and windows were quickly barred, and a rifle thrust out of each loophole, made for the purpose, but never used before. Perhaps one Indian could be shot and the pursuit hindered. This was not to be, however, for hardly was all secure before old General with the terrified boys on his back, flew through the yard and straight to the barn, the Indians rushing after him. After the clatter of hoofs on the barn floor there was absolute silence for several minutes—minutes that seemed hours to the waiting parents. Then, with an awful yell, the three mounted Indians tore out again, a frightened look on their faces, and rode off across the prairie, never once looking behind them.

It was but the work of an instant for Mr. Grover to unbar the door and run for the barnyard, fearing he knew not what. All was silent, and nothing to be seen but old General panting for breath and utterly exhausted. But when the father called softly, "Rommy! Remy," a faint moan came from a pile of soft straw and chaff near the barn door, and there, quite buried out of sight, he found the dear little fellows, pinned together with an arrow, and half dead with fright. It did not take long to cut the arrow in two and draw it out, and Rommy and Remy hardly felt any pain, so glad were they to see their father's face and to feel their mother's arms clasped about them. As the arrow had just passed through the flesh of their sides, no lasting harm was done, and the wounds soon healed.

This is the way the wonderful escape came about. When old General sprang through the back door of the barn, he swept the twins from his back right into the soft pile of straw and chaff, and so they were hidden from the Indians just at the very moment when they would have reached them. The savages had evidently searched for the little boys, and when they could not find them, in their superstitious fear they thought the Great Spirit had come to their rescue, so in their fright they galloped away with that one awful yell. And surely the Great Spirit, the loving God, had hidden the little fellows, and their grateful parents never forgot to give him the praise.

The doctor came in a few hours, and his medicines soon broke little Lucy's fever. He had three patients instead of one, and the arrow wounds were pretty sore for several days, but at the end of the week the children were all quite well and happy again.

The twins are old men now, and their children and grandchildren know this story by heart, and are never tired of hearing it. The arrow, mended by a silver plate, will be handed down as an heirloom for generations to come.

As for old General, he was treated as his heroism deserved, and was greatly beloved, you may well believe. When he grew too old to draw the carry-all, he spent the rest of his days in a delightful green-pasture, where he grazed and rolled and cantered about to his heart's content.—Augusta M. Reilly, in Christian Intelligencer.

OUR REAL WORK.

"The work which Christ gives to us really is to build character. We are not in the world to have a good time, to make money, to do great things, to write books, to cultivate farms, to sell goods, or to study; we are here to make men and women of ourselves. The test of success at the end is not our wealth, the extent of our fame, the number of things we have done, but our character—that which will live on the other side of death, the person who will appear before God when our spirit presents itself there. It is of the greatest importance, therefore, that we give first heed to the work that is being done on our inner life along the years."—To-day's Magazine.

SEASHORE CAMP-MEETING.

39th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING JULY 13-20.

The Seashore Camp Meeting is known over a large part of Methodism to-day. Men have attended it from all parts of the Union. The religious services are under the direction of the Presiding Elders of New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences of the M. E. Church, South, and these brethren will be assisted by the best preaching talent that can be obtained.

Preaching under the Tabernacle, Grove, and Cottage Prayer Meetings, and other religious services, will be held during each day and evening, to which all persons on the ground are not only cordially invited, but are expected to attend.

Plan to come this year, and bring your unconverted friends with you. All Methodist preachers will be provided with board and lodging free of charge during Camp Meeting.

A DELIGHTFUL SUMMER HOME.

There is not in all the Southland a more delightful place to spend the summer than on the Seashore Camp Ground. There are ample accommodations and good board.

Many men and women date the beginning of their aggressive service for the Master to a few days spent on the camp grounds. There is a distinctively Christian atmosphere, and the many assemblies as well as the Camp Meeting bring together some of the brightest men and some of the most saintly characters we have. There is no compulsion about attending any of the lectures or sermons, but they are in easy reach and there is a sane and healthy tone, that tends to vigorous thinking and wholesome living.

ATTRACTIONS FOR THE SUMMER OF 1910.

The Seashore Divinity School, June 28, to July 7. The Seashore Divinity School is under the control of curators for the Louisiana, Mississippi, North Mississippi and Alabama Conferences. Some of the brightest minds in these four Conferences will be among the instructors, and several brilliant men will be brought from a distance.

Annual Camp Meeting July 13-20. The Camp Meeting really gives the right to exist to the grounds, and it was for this purpose that Christian men invested their money in this property, in order that men might come away for a season from their other cares and commune with God. We hope for a revival this year.

Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, July 21 to 31. This is the successor to the former Seashore Epworth League Assembly. It has simply broadened the scope of its work. While not undertaking to do especially evangelical work, but rather to train the young people how to work, this assembly usually numbers many conversions as an immediate result of its work. Some of the gracious revivals that have blessed some of the churches have had their inception in the new motives for service given the young people in this assembly.

For full particulars, address as follows:

In regard to accommodations: R. G. Price, Biloxi, Miss.; or S. G. Meyer, 116 St. Charles St., New Orleans, La.

Christian Workers' Assembly: Rev. F. S. Parker, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.

Seashore Divinity School: Rev. H. M. Ellis, Brookhaven, Miss.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY.

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER.

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co
INCORPORATED.

DOCTOR Tichenor's Antiseptic

The Go-Between

whether it be a Burn, Bruise or Scald—

DR. TICHENOR'S ANTISEPTIC

affords instant relief. Its cooling effect prevents congestion and the antiseptic qualities prevent swelling, blistering and supuration afterwards.

"It draws the fever"—you cannot afford to be without it at home.

All druggists 25 and 50 cts.

ASK ANY ONE WHO HAS EVER USED IT!

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulner, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

THE VANDERBILT SITUATION.

The situation resulting from the action of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust in their annual session in Nashville last week is acute and most deplorable. By a vote of nineteen to eight, the three trustees elected by the recent session of the General Conference were denied the right of membership in the body. High-handed as this was, it was quickly followed by the adoption of measures even more startling and revolutionary. The right to confirm the trustees elected by the Board of Trust, which has been exercised in some way by the Church ever since Vanderbilt University has been in existence, was summarily repealed. But not even with this did the gentlemen stop. Knowing that what had been done would create a storm throughout the connection, and desiring as much as possible to protect both the Church and the institution, Dr. W. D. Bradfield, of Texas, introduced the following resolution: "The right of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to appoint the trustees of this University being denied by this Board of Trust, great unrest is likely to follow to the damage of the University and the Church. To allay as much as possible this unrest, and to guard as far as possible the interests of the University, this Board hereby declares the trust it holds is a trust for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and that Vanderbilt University belongs to said Church." This resolution was promptly tabled.

What is the significance of the foregoing action of the majority of the Vanderbilt Board? In the light of what had transpired before and of the attending circumstances, the position of these gentlemen, before so difficult to determine, is now perfectly plain. They regard themselves as a self-perpetuating body. The right of the Church to confirm the trustees they hold was purely a gratuitous concession, which they might have repealed at any time, and which they will allow no longer. The Church in no sense owns the institution, or has any charter right in its government. They do not even hold it in trust for the Church. The only right which belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is that of patronage. She may furnish the students, and should count it a privilege to do so. She is not competent to participate in the management of the University; that should be left wholly in their capable hands. Such, in substance, are the extraordinary views of the dominant element of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust, as they have been driven at last to disclose them. They have, in effect, declared their absolute independence and their right to do, unchecked, anything they please.

This position contravenes what the Church conceives to be its manifest rights at every essential point. It violates claims long recognized and never before openly challenged. It conflicts with declarations made from time to time by the Board itself, in which the ownership of the Church has been conceded and the trustees have been spoken of as its representatives. Thus when they were asking the General Conference of 1898 to take the institution over from the eight original patronizing Annual Conferences, they expressly declared that they "held it in trust for these Conferences;" and in the paper adopted when they received the report of the Vanderbilt Commission, they said they "recognized and rejoiced in the ownership of the Church." Yet their late action repudiates both of these former declarations, carefully made on occasions of great importance.

The attempt to fasten upon the Church the responsibility for the present unhappy situation is only in keeping with the disingenuous course which the Vanderbilt Board has been pursuing for several years. There is not a particle of justification for the charge. The bearing of the Church at all times has been dignified, respectful, and courteous. Whatever individual members may have done, it cannot be shown that the Church acting in an official capacity has ever failed to have proper regard for the Board of Trust. When differences of view began to be apparent, the General Conference of 1906, desiring to allay agitation and obviate the possibility of trouble, appointed a commission composed of five able lawyers who were Methodists and Christian gentlemen, to whom was referred the task of determining the precise relation of the University to the Church. That commission showed Chancellor Kirkland and his associates every possible consideration. The Chancellor appeared before it both in person and by the representation of counsel. When this tribunal announced its findings, the Church accepted them without reservation and in good faith; but this the Board of Trust refused to do. Rumors as to the attitude of the latter were rife throughout the connection, and a feeling of widespread uncertainty and unrest continued. This, together with certain attempted actions of the Board, led to considerable agitation in the secular and church press.

Such were the conditions existing when the recent General Conference assembled in Asheville, where all matters relating to Vanderbilt University were referred to the Committee on Education, which had on it some of the strongest men in the body. So far from being prejudiced or dominated by one or two men, this Committee had an open mind and was entirely pacific in its attitude. It heard the representatives of both sides of the controversy and sought light from every possible source. It left nothing undone to secure a peaceful adjustment of the matters at issue. It voted to levy an assessment of $20,000 for the Vanderbilt Theological Department, and, in order to relieve the Board of Trust from an embarrassing position in which they had placed themselves, recommended that one-fourth of the trustees of our educational institutions be allowed to be taken from outside of the Church. It offered to yield every point involved except the ownership of the Church and the right to elect the trustees, if the Church should choose to exercise it. It proposed not to disturb the arrangement then existing in the slightest particular, if the Board of Trust would meet and spread upon their minutes an acceptance of the findings of the Vanderbilt Commission. The effort to have that body come together in Asheville was wholly in the interest of peace, and was not, as is stated in the last copy of the Vanderbilt University Quarterly, to coerce them into the election of "trustees to represent the faction in opposition."

Instead of responding to the efforts of the Committee on Education to effect a harmonious settlement of the points in controversy, the representatives of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust were evasive, non-committal, and unwilling to come to any definite terms. Though nearly half the members of that body were on the ground, they would not consent to have a meeting to confer with the Committee on Education. Tennessee lawyers, quite as able as those said to advise to the contrary, declared that there was no legal obstruction to such a meeting in Asheville, though for that matter the Committee on Education did not care whether the meeting asked for was a legal one or not. An agreement with the Board in an informal session would have been quite satisfactory, as they could later have carried out the conclusions reached in their regular annual session. The utmost concession that could be secured from the officials of the University on the ground was that, if let alone, they would recommend the election of three additional Bishops as trustees and the acceptance of the report of the Vanderbilt Commission. "In so far as it is a correct exposition of the laws of Tennessee," this recommendation they said the Board would "doubtless accept." Representing the Church, the Committee on Education could not afford to agree to a compromise so vague as this. There would have been no certainty as to what would result; if turned down by the Board, the General Conference would have been adjourned for four years and the Church left helpless. Moreover, the expression, "in so far as it is a correct interpretation of the laws of Tennessee," was most indefinite and would have continued things in a wholly unsettled state. Having exhausted every other recourse, the Committee on Education then decided to elect three trustees to fill the existing vacancies on the Board of Trust, which, it was felt, would serve to join the issue and force that body to take such action as would disclose its true position. But not desiring to do anything radical, the Committee recommended that, with the exception of these three, the trustees should continue as heretofore to be elected by the Board of Trust and confirmed by the General Board of Education. The seating of the trustees elected at Asheville would have settled one question, and one only, the right of the Church to select the trustees, if it should choose to assert it. To be exercised only in a single instance, there was no reason that that action should have caused a particle of disturbance unless the principle involved were denied. And that the Committee could not afford to surrender.

We have recited this history because we desire that the responsibility for the present unfortunate condition of things should rest where it properly belongs—upon the Vanderbilt Board of Trust. They, and they alone, have created the wide breach now existing between the University and the Church.

For several years their movements have been secretive, strange, and unusual. Exactly what they meant, it was difficult to discover. But at last they have ceased to be evasive and hesitant, and have plainly shown where they are headed. Determined to have absolute independence, they have "crossed the Rubicon," and drawn up their forces in battle array. And battle they shall have. And it will be a fight to the finish. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is not so weak that she cannot maintain her rights, as they who are seeking to run rough-shod over her will soon have occasion to learn. She founded and owns Vanderbilt University, and we believe that the courts will give it to her. But if in violation of the principles of justice and equity, the cunning of men should cause her to lose it on some legal technicality, as Bishop Wilson said in his great address in tendering his resignation a few days since, she will rise in her might and build a better and greater institution than Vanderbilt.

HOW THEY VOTED.

The following were the members of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust as it was constituted on June 13 and 14, when it went on record as repudiating the authority of the Church (the figures indicating date of expiration of term):

1910—R. W. Browder, Bowling Green, Ky.; Allen R. Carter, Louisville, Ky.; R. W. Millsaps, Jackson, Miss.; W. C. Ratcliffe, Little Rock, Ark.

1912—Samuel Cupples, St. Louis; John H. Dye, Little Rock; W. L. Moose, Morrilton, Ark.; W. P. Sanders, Athens, Ala.; W. D. Bradfield, Dallas; William Hughes, Spring Hill, Tenn.

1913—Bishop A. W. Wilson, Baltimore; J. H. Kirkland, W. R. Cole and G. B. Winton, Nashville; Bishop J. S. Key, Sherman, Texas; Robert S. Mad-dox, Atlanta.

1915—C. W. Byrd, Nashville; Chas. N. Burch, Memphis; James C. McReynolds, New York; Eugene J. Buffington, Chicago.

1916—Nathaniel Baxter, Jr., Nashville; Newman Cayce, Columbus, Miss.; G. W. Martin, Martin, Tenn.; J. R. Pepper, Memphis; Bishop E. R. Hendrix, Kansas City; H. H. White, Alexandria, La.; W. J. Young, Danville, Va.; E. J. Jones, Kansas City; E. B. Chappell, Nashville.

When the vote, which is destined to become historic, was taken, Bishop Key, Judge Newman Cayce and Hon. H. H. White were absent. Those voting to recognize the authority of the Church were as follows: Bishop A. W. Wilson, R. W. Millsaps, John R. Pepper, W. D. Bradfield, R. W. Browder, E. B. Chappell, John H. Dye, and W. J. Young.

In a matter of such vital importance, it is only just and fair that the attitude of every man on the Board should be made known to the public.

MAJOR R. W. MILLSAPS.

Major R. W. Millsaps is being accorded much praise for his brave and manly fight for the rights of the Church at the recent meeting of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University. He was on the sub-committee appointed to consider the credentials and eligibility to membership of the three trustees sent up by the General Conference, and when his associates on that committee (which was made up chiefly of lawyers, two of whom were not Methodists) brought in an adverse recommendation, though there were six to one against him, he made a minority report and ably championed it. Not once after the issue was joined and the real purpose of the majority of the Board was disclosed, did he waver in his advocacy of the ownership and authority of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The course of this noble Mississippian has not in the least surprised us. Though he had been supposed to favor the view of Chancellor Kirkland and Bishop Hendrix, and did, in fact, agree with them as to the desirability of a broad and progressive policy for the University, we had never doubted where he would stand if he ever saw the charter rights of the Church in the institution imperiled. We knew the make-up of the man and his devotion to the Church in which he was reared, and of which he has been so long an honored and trusted member. To it, he has given a lifetime of service and hundreds of thousands of dollars—more money, probably, than any man in the South, with the possible exception of the Dukes of North Carolina. He is the founder of one of the leading colleges of Southern Methodism, which he committed to the care of the patronizing Annual Conferences, leaving the selection of trustees absolutely to them. Facing such an issue as that which arose at Nashville, there was but one course for such a man to pursue, and that he adopted resolutely, fearlessly, nobly.

And Major Millsaps' judgment as to the principles involved ought to carry great weight. He is a man of collegiate education, of profound insight, and of almost unerring judgment. A graduate of the Harvard Law School—the greatest in the United States—(though since early manhood he has not practiced in the courts), his opinion as to any legal question is of unusual value. We know no man whose leadership we would so readily and so unquestioningly follow. He met the crisis which confronted him a few days since most magnificently. And in so doing, he attained to still more majestic proportions, and wrote his name even more luminously upon the imperishable pages of Methodist history.

Nor do we doubt that, if he had been living, side by side with him would have stood the princely figure of Charles B. Galloway, his close and intimate friend. For though he stood with the administration when mere matters of policy were involved, and deplored outside agitation when it seemed to him to be unnecessary, if the time had ever come (which it might not under his wise leadership) when the ownership of the Church was really and unmistakably challenged, there is no question in our mind as to what Bishop Galloway would have said and done. No heart more loyal to Methodism ever beat in human breast, and no man ever walked the soil of earth who was more inflexible in his adherence to the principles of justice and equity, or who was less susceptible to the lure of wealth and the blandishment of power. Freely he spent himself to build up the Church, and he was incapable of doing aught to tear it down.

A HIGH COMPLIMENT.

The New York Independent, one of the most scholarly and ably edited weeklies in America, in its issue of June the 16th, makes the following reference to Bishop J. C. Kilgo and Trinity College:

"We were glad for the Southern Methodist Church, but sorry for Trinity College, Durham, N. C., that President Kilgo was elected Bishop. Trinity College and the South Atlantic Quarterly, edited there, are among the most progressive influences in the South. Prof. William P. Few, dean of the college and one of the editors of the Quarterly, has been elected president to succeed President Kilgo. He is a native of South Carolina, a doctor of philosophy of Harvard, and a frequent and forceful speaker and writer on educational topics. His administration begins under most favorable auspices, with new buildings being erected, and an additional gift of $100,000 from Mr. B. N. Duke."

A VISIT TO PONCHATOULA.

It was our pleasure to run up to Ponchatoula, which is on the Illinois Central Railroad, a little less than fifty miles north of New Orleans, last Saturday afternoon and occupy the pulpit of the Methodist Church there Sunday at 11 o'clock. We were greeted by a fair audience, who seemed to give good attention to the exposition of the Word. This town is situated in the midst of a truck-farming section, and has a population of perhaps 800 or 1000. Our pastor is the Rev. J. P. Haney, whose health for some weeks has been impaired, but who is now beginning to regain his strength. Of the three Protestant churches in the village, ours is far in the lead. The membership numbers about 115, and the house of worship is a modern brick structure, commodious and well appointed, which is valued at $10,000. It was erected four or five years ago under the aggressive leadership of Rev. F. N. Sweeney. Brother Haney, who came to the charge last winter, found it encumbered with a debt of $1,600 or $1,700, but by wise management he has about succeeded in wiping this out, and Bishop Murrah is expected to preach the dedicatory sermon in the near future. All departments of the work—the Epworth League, the Sunday school, and the missionary societies—are well organized and rendering effective service. We were particularly pleased to hear the pastor speak encouragingly of his prayer-meeting. A flourishing mid-week prayer service is a certain indication of a healthful spiritual condition. Mr. J. R. Abels, Mr. William Jackson, Mr. Blass Spiller, and Mr. E. D. Vineyard, a solid body of men devoted to the interests of the Church, constitute the official board. While in the town we were the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Abels and of Brother and Sister Haney, who left nothing undone to make our stay comfortable and pleasant. We shall not soon forget their abounding kindness.

DECEASE OF MRS. W. H. HUNTLEY.

Mrs. Josie Huntley, the wife of the Rev. W. H. Huntley, of Gloster, Miss., who was reported critically ill in our issue of last week, passed peacefully away at noon on Monday, June the 13th. She was stricken with apoplexy while attending church on the day preceding, and grew steadily worse, until life became extinct. She was buried at Brookhaven on Tuesday, the 14th, at 5 p.m. Dr. Featherston and Brothers Leggett, Watkins, Sharbrough and Ellis conducted the funeral service. Sister Huntley was educated at Whitworth College, and was a woman of culture and noble Christian character. She was interested in all the work of the Church, and her influence was widely felt for good. Besides her sorrowing husband, she leaves several children and a large circle of friends to mourn her departure. May God graciously sustain all of the bereaved, and bind up every stricken, bleeding heart! We trust that some one will furnish the Advocate with a suitable memoir in the near future.

PERSONAL.

Have you sent in your renewal to the Advocate? If not, now is the accepted time to do so.

The Tremont Circuit is making good progress and doing nicely under the efficient pastorate of Rev. A. L. Davenport.

Rev. C. C. Miller, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, brightened the sanctum by his presence one day last week.

A meeting is now under way in Court Street Church, of Hattiesburg, Miss., under the leadership of Rev. H. R. Singleton, of Alexandria, La.

The Seashore Divinity School will open on Tuesday, June 28th. Let every preacher who can, arrange to attend. It will be a great occasion.

Rev. J. E. Denson, presiding elder of the Lafayette District, reported a profitable session of the District Conference, held in Eunice some weeks since.

Rev. O. S. Lewis has had a great revival in the Broad Street Church, of Hattiesburg, Miss. The preaching was principally done by Rev. D. E. Kelly, the Conference Evangelist.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, the versatile pastor of the Second Methodist Church of this city, will lecture on "Sam Jones, the People's Philosopher," at Kentwood, La., on Monday night, June 27.

Rev. W. A. Betts writes from Montrose: "Please announce that I can assist the brethren in their meetings for awhile, and suggest that prompt engagements be made herein for several reasons."

The Sunday school of the Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, held its Children's Day on the twelfth inst., the collection amounting to $31.56 and six children were received into the church.

Last week we gave a report of the Woman's Home Mission Society under the heading, "An Enjoyable Meeting." This was credited to Olive Branch, Miss., and should have been credited to Magee, Miss. We gladly make correction.

Mrs. John A. Randolph is spending the summer at Iuka, Miss. Her husband, who is a member of the North Mississippi Conference, is chaplain at Keithly in the Philippine Islands. In recent letters he has reported his work there as doing well.

The Monroe District Conference is in session at Lake Providence this week, with Dr. S. S. Keener presiding. Bishop Murrah is expected to be in attendance Saturday and Sunday. The work is reported to be making commendable progress in that section.

We are pleased to note that Rev. W. Fred Long, the faithful State Secretary of the Mississippi Sunday School Association, who has recently been quite ill, is now convalescent. Even a temporary retirement of this tireless toiler from the field of service is appreciably felt.

The program and notice of the Durant Conference is unique and complete. It gives the complete roll of the Conference and the program planned for each day. We trust that when it shall assemble in Pickens, Miss., July 5, that the realization shall be better than the excellent promise.

A few days since, Mr. R. B. Linfield, a brother to Rev. W. L. Linfield, our pastor at Hazlehurst, Miss., called at this office. Mr. Linfield had just returned from a trip to Central America. He was very much delighted with all that he saw, and hopeful for better commercial relations with Spanish America.

The press dispatches report that the North Mississippi Conference Epworth League meeting at Kosciusko was a brilliant success. Among the speakers of note were Dr. E. H. Rawlings, the new Educational Secretary of the Mission Board; Rev. J. Bruce Alry, President of the Seashore Assembly of Christian Workers, and Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College.

After an extensive preaching and lecturing tour, Dr. John A. Rice is back in the city. While away he preached Commencement sermons at Wofford College and the University of Texas, and delivered addresses at Emory and Henry College, the Methodist Training School in Nashville, and the Southwestern Students' Conference. He is in great demand for such occasions.

The Poplar Springs Church, of Meridian, has just experienced a revival under the able leadership of Rev. J. W. Ramsey. There were a number of conversions and additions to the membership and a quickening of the spiritual life of the church. The pastor, Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, is in high favor with his people. The recently completed building in which the meeting was held is a beauty.

In the parsonage at Ruston, La., on the 16th inst., Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor of Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans, was married to Miss Claudie Ficklen. The marriage was solemnized by Rev. A. G. Shankle, the brother-in-law of Miss Ficklen. The bride is a consecrated and trained Church worker, and will make an ideal preacher's wife. We wish for this worthy couple a long, useful, prosperous and happy life.

Rev. T. V. Peters seasoned a call in this office a few days since by turning in a few subscriptions. His face is always welcome, for we know him as a young man who is accomplishing results for the Master's kingdom. But it always attracts the attention of the editor, when worthy men remember that a church paper cannot live without subscribers, and prove their friendship by substantial deeds.

Rev. R. M. Evans calls our attention to the fact that Rev. C. W. Baley's report of his work contained in the Advocate of June the 9th was misleading in that it bore the date of Courtland and appeared to be a write-up of that charge, whereas Brother Baley's work is at Eureka, six miles out from Courtland. This mistake, was the editor's, who, in justice to all concerned, is glad to make the correction.

The death of Mrs. Anne Hargrave Saunders, which occurred at Starkville, Miss., on May 25th, in the eighty-ninth year of her age, filled our heart with sadness. Bright, cheerful, and full of hope, she carried sunshine wherever she went, and made better every life she touched. Having served her day and generation long and well, she has fallen asleep, leaving behind the fragrance of kindly deeds and a good name. A beautiful tribute to her character appears in this issue from the pen of her grandson, Mr. W. R. S. Wilburn, of Winona.

A dispatch from Franklin, La., to the Times-Democrat bearing date of the 15th inst. says: "The wedding ceremony uniting Dr. Paul W. Trowbridge and Miss Mary Lucy Foster took place this evening at the Methodist Church. The Rev. C. C. Wier pronounced the ceremony. Dr. Trowbridge is a business man of Franklin, and his bride is the third eldest daughter of Senator Murphy J. Foster. They were the recipients of many handsome presents and the good wishes of their numerous friends. An elaborate reception was tendered the guests at Dixie, the home of the bride."

Mr. Vanderbilt's letter to Chancellor Kirkland should deceive no one. He is not the Vanderbilt whose liberality made possible the establishment of the institution. This gentleman is not a Methodist, and knows little of the workings of the Methodist Church. There is no reason why his views should in any sense have a determining influence upon the points at issue between the Church and the Board of Trust of the University. Moreover, Mr. Vanderbilt's letter has every indication of having been called forth in response to a communication addressed to him. There is not the slightest evidence that he had anything to say upon the subject until he was asked to do so. We have heard it stated that a Nashville lawyer, in sympathy with the position of the Board of Trust, furnished him his information as to the legal aspects of the case.

The following are officers-elect of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League, which convened in Natchez a few days since: President, Dr. F. L. Walton, Meridian; first vice president, Clifford R. Field, Natchez; third vice president, Miss E. Maud Ellis, Sharon; fourth vice president, the Rev. J. Lamar Neill, Lorman; treasurer, B. Stewart, Centerville; secretary, W. H. Grant, Laurel; superintendent of junior department, Mrs. M. M. Goodwin, Mayersville; Era agent, Miss Joe Ellis, Brookhaven. District secretaries: Meridian District, Miss Ida Curtiss, Meridian; Seashore District, H. C. Lucas, Gulfport; Brookhaven District, Miss Olive Lipscomb, Brookhaven; Natchez District, Miss Ethel Shaw, Natchez; Jackson District, A. P. Holt, Jackson; Newton District, Miss Bertha Mitchell, Laurel; Hattiesburg District, O. J. Franklin, Magee; Vicksburg District, Miss Fannie Naason, Port Gibson. Delegate to Seashore Assembly, A. H. Poythress, Meridian.

From the Carrollton Conservative (Mississippi) of June 15th we clip the following: "A brilliant audience that filled the Court room on Friday evening of last week enjoyed the splendid recital given by Miss Lois Harvey's music class. The program was made up of choice piano numbers, a vocal solo, a violin solo, and a chorus by the sight-singing classes. So charmed were the people that the room constantly resounded with applause from the delighted audience. At the conclusion of the charming musical and before the audience could disperse the patrons and pupils completely surprised Miss Harvey by presenting to her a beautiful gold watch, which was engraved thus, 'Miss Lois Harvey, from appreciative patrons and loving pupils, 1910.' Miss Harvey has accepted the position of voice teacher in Grenada College for next session, a position for which she is peculiarly prepared. The college is to be congratulated on securing one so well qualified to succeed Mrs. Clifton, who has for eight years made so conspicuous a success of that department at Grenada. The trustees were greatly gratified when Miss Harvey accepted her acceptance of the position."

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that
—Lasts a LIFETIME—

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.
427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

SECOND QUARTER. LESSON XIII.—JUNE 23, 1910.

THE PARABLE OF THE TARES; OR THE PROBLEM OF CHURCH DISCIPLINE.

Matt. xiii. 24-30, 36-43.

24. Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field:

25. But while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way.

26. But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also.

27. So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares?

28. He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?

29. But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them.

30. Let both grow together until the harvest, and in the time of harvest, I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn.

36. Then Jesus sent the multitude

Golden Text: Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Matt. xiii. 43.

1. The Lesson's Meaning.

Men have always longed and rightly, that the Church would be a pure and holy Church, fulfilling the ideal of a kingdom of God on the earth. And men have sought to realize this ideal in various ways. First, by preaching a pure and holy gospel, calling men to live in harmony with the noblest Christian principles of conduct. But it has ever been sadly true that this does not result in a perfect Church, for tares always appear among the wheat. The first impulse then of all ardent souls is to try a second means of purifying; to root up the tares and cast them out. This spirit is not wholly bad, it is a suggestion that comes to every young Christian, and as Archbishop Trench says, "It would argue but little love or holy earnestness in him, if he had not this longing to see the Church of his Savior a glorious Church, without spot or wrinkle." Yet Christ restrained it in the parable which we study this morning, and gave answer to the question, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up? "Nay, lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them."

The reply was discouraging; yet history has revealed its wisdom. No Church has ever been or can be kept pure by a close exercise of discipline, and the multiplied attempts at doing this from the time of the Donatists down have sadly failed. None have ever even been able to claim for long that theirs was a Church, however small, made up exclusively of regenerate and holy members. Our holiness brethren to-day, for all their censure of the Church for its lack of discipline, do not present to the world the longed-for spectacle of a communion holy and undefiled. The effect generally of men, in the Church as officials, or outside as schismatics, attempting to judge and excommunicate others is of self-righteousness and presumptuous uncharitableness, rather than the spirit of Christ. We believe it true as was said to me years ago by my aged father, "My son, I never saw any good yet come out of a church trial."

The reason is that men are not qualified for this delicate task; and even though qualified, and they could pick out each piece of darnel unerringly, still, as Christ said it might not do to pull it up, "lest ye also root up the wheat with it." As Marcus Dods shows clearly, "You cannot touch one man and one only. With him are his children, his friends, his followers if he be a man of influence. You cannot thrust him from you without repelling all who are attached to him. And of those who are attached to him, are you sure there are none who belong to the kingdom? No little blade springing up by the root, which did you let it grow, would abound in fruit? For that a man is evil himself is no proof that all his connections are evil. On the contrary an ungodly man will often cling to those who belong to the kingdom, as if somehow they must find an entrance for him along with themselves. And though, in the realm of nature it is impossible, in the realm of grace the Augustinian maxim is sometimes true: "Ut qui hodie sunt zizania, cras sint frumentum;" "That which to-day is darnel, to-morrow may be wheat."

37. He answered and said unto them, He that soweth the good seed is the Son of Man;

38. The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one;

39. The enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels.

40. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world.

41. The Son of Man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity;

42. And shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

43. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

So, the subject of our lesson to-day might well be given as The Problem of Church Discipline, Bishop Candler and Dr. Parker, in our Sunday School Magazine, to the contrary notwithstanding. For the consensus of opinion of the ablest commentators from Augustine to the present is well stated thus by Trench: "It must be evident to every one who is not warped by a dogmatic interest that the parable is, as the Lord announces at its first utterance, concerning the kingdom of heaven, or the Church. It required no special teaching to acquaint the disciples that in the world there would ever be a mixture of good and bad; though they must have been so little prepared to expect the same in the Church, that it was very needful to warn them beforehand, both that they might not be offended and think that the promises of God had failed when evil should appear; and also that they might know how to behave themselves when that mystery of iniquity, now foretold, should begin manifestly to work. Nor need the term 'world' here used perplex us in the least. No narrower word would have sufficed for him, in whose prophetic eye the word of the gospel was contemplated as going forth into all lands, and sown in every part of the great outfield of the nations."

The teaching then of the parable is that the ideal of the Church can never be fully realized in a world of sin. According to Meyer, Jesus himself here affirms, "The visible Church; up to the day of the judgment is to comprise within its pale those who are not members of the invisible Church, and who shall have no part in the kingdom that is to be established. The separation is not a thing with which man is competent to deal, but must be left in the hands of the Judge." Wesley, even, the author of the most minute system of Church discipline ever proposed, admits this interpretation, but with a qualification, well stated; which both Trench and Meyer also recognize. "Darnel in the Church," he says in his Notes, "is properly outside Christians such as have the form of godliness without the power. Open sinners such as have neither the form nor the power are not so properly darnel as thistles and brambles: these ought to be rooted up without delay, and not suffered in the Christian community. Whereas, should fallible men attempt to gather up the darnel they would often root up the wheat with them."

The conclusion of the whole matter is that at best Church discipline is to be administered with the greatest caution. There is no intimation here (though there is in Pauline Epistles) that it is to be exercised at all; for the same argument, that the roots are so intertwined as to make plucking of one without the other impossible, applies as well in the case of thistles and brambles as in the case of tares. Personally, we believe that the purity of the Church can best be promoted and preserved by the preaching of a pure gospel, with the solemn sanctions set forth at the end of this parable. The day of harvest is not yet. But surely, at last "The Son of Man" shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine as the sun in the kingdom of their Father.

II. The Lesson's Message. Points to Impress.

1. Our present method of administering Church discipline finds more justification in the teaching of Christ than the elaborate plan laid down in the Discipline.

2. Failure to take what seems a bold stand, expelling and such like, is sometimes not due to cowardice but to a deeper wisdom arising through deeper insight into God's Word.

3. The Church never was and never will be on earth made up exclusively of true Christians. To demand that it should be so before one enters it or that one should remain in it is to exhibit a spirit of Pharasaic pride, which classes the critic as among the faulty ones. The thing that should ever be demanded is pure doctrine and Christian standards proclaimed.

4. Church membership is not a ticket of admission to heaven. Any exercise of discipline which would allow those left in to think it so would be pernicious, or doctrine of baptism leaving such impression.

A Wholesome Tonic
Morsford's Acid Phosphate
Quickly relieves that feeling of exhaustion due to summer heat, overwork or insomnia.

We should always live victoriously. We should never allow ourselves to be defeated or overcome. Whatever the sorrow, or the failure, or the sin, we should ever rise again victorious.—Selected.

In building up a Christian character there is as much need of earnestness, concentration, alertness, persistence, all-dominating enthusiasm as there is in building up a business or a profession. We must take hold with both hands and with our strongest might.—Selected.

AGENTS WANTED.
WANTED—Good men and women agents at once for "Roosevelt's Famous Hunt for Big Game," also for "Tram in Girls," Immense sellers. Price, $1.50, 50 per cent commission. Outfit free. Send 15c for mailing. Both outfits 25c. Also district managers for easy payment installment plan. Permanent work. $2,000 to $5,000 per year profits. Particulars free. Address, A. B. Kuhlman Company, Chicago, Ill. 7615.

CONVENIENT WAY,

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA, SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL, General Passenger Agent.

Summer Tours

VIA

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

California, Colorado, Utah, Mexico, AND ALL THE WEST.

NEW YORK

And ALL EASTERN and NORTHERN RESORTS

See Your Local Agent for full Particulars, or Write

J. H. R. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt. C. W. MURPHEY, City Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La. New Orleans, La.

USE THE L. & A. RAILWAY

"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service
Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden
and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. E. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

GRANDMA.

Ann Hartgraves Mills Saunders was born April 28, 1822, near Hartsville, Tenn., and died May 24, 1910, at Starkville, Miss., where she had spent the last thirty years of her life. She was the youngest child of John F. Mills and Nancy Hartgraves.

Hers was one of the most remarkable lives I have ever known. She came of sturdy colonial stock; back of her were ancestors who had battled for liberty in the American Revolution; and her father and her mother's father crossed over from Virginia into Tennessee in the pioneer period; the days when Tennessee was a wilderness.

At the age of twenty she married William Russell Saunders, a young lawyer, eleven years her senior, and a son of Rev. Hubbard Saunders and Chloe Russell, youngest daughter of General William Russell. Soon after her marriage she left her childhood's home, "Rose Hill," near Hartsville, Tenn., and came with her husband to Mississippi. Often have I heard her tell the story of that voyage up the Cumberland river, into the Ohio, down the Mississippi, and up the Yazoo to Yazoo City. From there they went to Lexington, and after a year or two moved to their plantation near Valden in what is now Carroll county, but which was then a part of Holmes county.

Here were spent the early years of her married life, in a log house built by her own slaves, and here it was that she showed most strongly that strength of character, that brightness of spirit, which continued with her even unto the end. Accustomed to every luxury, she willingly put the old life behind her for the sake of him into whose hands she had given her future. She loved to recall those early days in Mississippi, for the memory of them was linked with the memory of her early married life.

During the years that followed, eight children came to bless their union, one of whom died in early life, the rest surviving her. Besides her own children, she reared an orphan nephew and niece, the children of her sister.

Those were happy years for her. She lived the old plantation life of the Old South, entertaining her friends and neighbors, spending many of her summers at the old home-place in Tennessee, making the journey by carriage, over the old Natchez Trace, blazed out by Andrew Jackson. Then the war came, and she gladly gave her eldest son, Hubbard, then a mere boy, to his country's service. During that time her home was open to the soldiers of the Confederacy, and many a wounded lad was nursed back to health beneath that hospitable roof-tree.

In 1864 her husband went to St. Stephens, Ala., where he owned some salt works, and there fell ill and died on the 20th day of August of that year. News traveled slowly in those times, and it was many days before a messenger reached her, bearing the sad tidings of her loss; then she journeyed to Alabama to see the spot where he slept.

I think hers was the most beautiful love-story I have ever known. While she lived for nearly half a century after her husband's death, his memory was always green in her heart, and in the latter days of her life, as she came nearer the light of eternal morning and eternal youth, her heart was always slipping back into the days of her girlhood, and to the early years of her married life. And after her death we found folded away the letters which her husband had written her nearly seventy years ago.

She was a woman without deception, and she was true in all things. She had the Scotch idea of the clan, and she was the veritable head of her family. She never got out of touch with humanity. She never grew away from life, "but drew about her, as closely as she could, its ties, its sympathies, its duties." She loved young people, and loved to have them about her; and it was, perhaps, this quality that lengthened her life far beyond four-score years.

Everyone knew her as "Grandma," and as one who loved her said, "We shall all miss her, for she was every body's grandma."

She was devoted to her Church, which she attended the very Sunday on which she was struck down by apoplexy; and it was fitting that she was buried from its doors, whose threshold she will never cross again. Life for her was simple, not complex. She did not

"Stretch lame hands of faith and grope,

And gather dust and chaff and call To Him she thought the Lord of all, And faintly trust the larger hope;"

But hers was rather the faith that cried, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another."

As the casket lay by the chancel during the simple funeral service, a shaft of sunlight sifted through the stained glass windows and fell like a benediction upon it, lighting up a sheaf of lilies and the Confederate flag, sent by the Regina Harrison Lee Chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy, of which chapter she was the mother. It was symbolic of her life.

And so we laid her away, out in the sunlight which she loved so well, beneath a canopy of flowers, the gift of loving friends, there to rest until the sunrise of the eternal morning, when God shall call his faithful home.

W. R. S. W.

TEACHING MEDICINE BY EXPERIMENTS AND PRACTICE.

The Medical Student of even ten years ago could hardly have dreamed of the remarkable advance in the methods and facilities for teaching medicine and surgery as now presented by the combined Medical College of the University of Nashville, and the University of Tennessee, Nashville, Tenn. These two leading institutions have united their faculties, laboratories and hospital facilities, thus giving the medical student opportunities far in advance of the times.

For example, the new catalogue of the combined school shows twelve laboratory courses in which by actual experiment the student proves for himself the truths of medical science. In addition to the lectures and laboratory courses, the advanced students (third and fourth years) spend about three hours each day in the hospital wards and dispensary, examining patients, making diagnoses, assisting in treatment and watching the progress of cases. During the student's fourth year of study he must also serve a term in the hospital as interne, living in the hospital and working under the direction of the House Surgeon. Thus acquiring a familiarity with hospital methods which could not otherwise be obtained.

Students and parents desiring a catalogue giving full information as to expenses and the educational requirements for entrance to a medical college can obtain same by addressing E. F. Turner, Registrar, 632 Second Avenue South, Nashville, Tenn.

Our little day is flitting fast, the shadows of night are falling. What if the eleventh hour should strike and find us idle!—Selected.

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS FOR STICK.

Mr. William Gallagher, 1047 Magazine St., New Orleans, says: "I have been using ROYALINE OIL on my mules for two years, and can recommend it as being superior to anything I have ever tried for Cuts, Sprains, Nails in Feet and Hairs of all kinds. It cures promptly every time." Royaline Oil is the great antiseptic; cures wounds, pains, aches and inflammations of all kinds. Price, 35c. bottle. Sold by druggists or the Royaline Medicine Co., New Orleans, La.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US. WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY! NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

I. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Riehl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd., JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. . . . NEW ORLEANS
D. C. Godfrey.....Optician.

"It Turns Your Waste Material Into Dollars."

THREE MACHINES IN ONE.

SHORT Log Saw Mill, Lath and Shingle Machine. Does all kinds of sawing. Just the machine for small Saw Mills and Farmers use.

It's a Big Money Maker.

Write for circulars and particulars.

Manufactured only by COLUMBIAN IRON WORKS, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Two full quarts of Crystal Gelatine will cost you about half what an ordinary pie will, and it's better for every member of the family. You can't begin to realize how tender and delicious Crystal jellies are until you have tried a package of

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

Simple to prepare—jells quickly—does not curdle with milk or cream. Invaluable for invalids and children.

Ask your grocer to-day. Sample package free.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.
121 A Beverly St.
BOSTON, MASS.

ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN.

One by one the Conference organs are being forced to increase the price of subscription. On July 1, the Western Methodist will begin to charge $2. We are fighting against making a similar advance, because we want the Advocate to have a large circulation and a far-reaching influence. But the tide is against us, and we urgently need the help of our friends. Will you not present the claims of the Advocate to your people? And we also ask for aid in the collection of delinquent subscriptions. Our campaign has been languishing lately. Let every pastor and interested Methodist assist us in forging forward. Please do this at once. It will enable us to do more for the Church, which is our ambition.

We give below the names of friends who have placed us under obligations by sending in subscriptions since our last report: Rev. W. G. Harbin, of Haynesville, La.; Rev. M. R. Jones, DeSoto, Miss.; Rev. J. F. Waltman, Coushatta, La.; Rev. Thos. L. Porter, Taylor, Miss.; Rev. J. W. Harper, Blairstown, La.; Rev. J. H. Grice, Fannin, Miss.; Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, Trout, La.; Rev. M. L. Burton, Seminary, Miss.; Rev. E. A. Moody, Woodville, Miss.; Rev. W. L. Graves, Itta Bena, Miss.; Rev. J. E. Craig, Oakdale, La.; Rev. D. Scarborough, McComb City, Miss.; Rev. R. S. Walton, Hammond, La.; Rev. T. L. Oakes, West, Miss.; Rev. A. G. Hall, Lamar, Miss.; Rev. Jas. L. Red, Meadville, Miss.; Rev. J. W. Ward, Madison, Miss.; Rev. C. F. Staples, Gibbsland, Miss.; Rev. W. E. Dickens, Pelahatchie, Miss.; Rev. A. J. Harris, Hattiesburg, Miss.; Rev. W. A. Hays, Bay Springs, Miss.; Rev. L. M. Broyles, Corinth, Miss.; Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.; Rev. W. E. Dickens, Pelahatchie, Miss.; Rev. E. Blizzard, Myrtle, Miss.; Rev. W. W. Perry, Terry, Miss.; Rev. E. E. Langford, Brooksville, Miss.; Rev. D. M. Floyd, Dumas, Miss.; Rev. G. A. Guice, Saucier, Miss.; Rev. W. L. Stormont, Black Hawk, Miss.; Rev. R. H. Barr, DeKalb, Miss.; Rev. A. L. Davenport, Rara Avis, Miss.; Rev. W. V. Sbeare, Booneville, Miss.; Rev. R. A. Davis, Blenville, La.; Rev. A. W. Langley, New Albany, Miss.; Rev. J. A. Goad, Sidon, Miss.; Rev. E. Nash Broyles, Coffeeville, Miss.; Rev. T. V. Peters, Slidell, La.; Rev. H. E. Carter, Decatur, Miss.; Rev. T. B. Holoman, Moss Point, Miss.; Rev. A. J. Davis, Porterville, Miss.; Rev. T. W. Lewis, Columbus, Miss.; Rev. J. A. Goad, Sidon, Miss.

CALENDAR.

Seashore Divinity School, Seashore Campground, Biloxi, Miss., June 28-July 7.

Young People's Missionary Movement Conf., Asheville, N. C., July 1-10.

Seashore Camp Meeting, Seashore Camp Ground, July 13-20.

Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, Seashore Campground, July 21-31.

District Conferences.

Monroe District, Lake Providence, La., June 22.

Ruston District, Arcadia, La., July 1-3.

Aberdeen District, Pontotoc, Miss., June 20-24.

Sardis District, Senatobia, Miss., June 23-26.

Durant District, Pickens, Miss., July 6-8.

Hattiesburg District, Lucedale, Miss., July 14-17.

PLAN OF EPISCOPAL VISITATION.

First District, Bishop A. W. Wilson.
Virginia Conference, Centenary Church, Richmond, Va., Nov. 9th.
North Georgia Conference, Athens, Ga., Nov. 16th.

Second District, Bishop E. E. Hendrix.
Denver, Denver, Colo., Sept. 8th.
Western North Carolina, Winston-Salem, N. C., Nov. 16th.
North Carolina, Elizabeth City, N. C., Nov. 30th.
South Carolina, Charleston, S. C., Dec. 7th.

Third Dist., Bishop Warren A. Candler.
Holston, Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 5th.
Tennessee, Clarksville, Tenn., Oct. 12th.
Memphis, Paducah, Ky., Nov. 9th.
Cuban Mission, Havana, Cuba, Jan. 19th, 1911.

Fourth Dist., Bishop H. C. Morrison.
Western Virginia, New Martinsville, W. Va., Sept. 7th.
Illinois, Patoka, Ill., Sept. 22d.
South Georgia, Columbus, Ga., Nov. 30th.

Fifth Dist., Bishop E. E. Hoss.
Japan Mission, Arima, Japan, Sept. 1st.
Korean Mission, Songdo, Korea, Sept. 15th.
China Mission, Huchow, China, Oct. 12th.
Baltimore, Clifton Forge, Va., March 29th, 1911.

Sixth Dist., Bishop James Atkins.
New Mexico, Artesia, New Mex., Oct. 6th.
West Texas, Austin, Tex., Oct. 26th.
Central Texas, Waxahatchie, Tex., Nov. 2d.

Seventh Dist., Bishop Collins Denny.
Missouri, Plattsburg, Mo., Aug. 31st.
Southwest Missouri, Webb City, Mo., Sept. 14.
St. Louis, Cape Girardeau, Mo., Sept. 28th.

Eighth Dist., Bishop John C. Kilgo.
Kentucky, Harrodsburg, Ky., Sept. 21st.
Louisville, Russellville, Ky., Sept. 28th.
North Alabama, Huntsville, Ala., Nov. 30th.

Ninth Dist., Bishop W. B. Murrah.
German Mission, East Bernard, Tex., Oct. 27th.
North Texas, Wichita Falls, Tex., Nov. 23d.

Tenth Dist., Bishop W. B. Lambuth.
Brazil Mission, Sao Paulo, Brazil, July 28th.
South Brazil Mission, Santa Maria, Brazil, July 7th.
Bishop Lambuth will go to Africa also in the interest of the Mission which the Board of Missions proposes to open in that field.

Eleventh Dist., Bishop E. G. Waterhouse.
Montana, Butte, Mont., Sept. 8.
East Columbia, Walla Walla, Wash., Sept. 15th.
Columbia, Medford, Oregon, Sept. 22d.

Twelfth Dist., Bishop E. D. Monson.
Mississippi, Hattiesburg, Miss., Dec. 7th.
Mexican Border Mission, Monterey, Mex., Feb. 2d, 1911.
Central Mexico Mission, Mexico City, Feb. 9th, 1911.

Thirteenth Dist., Bishop J. H. McCoy.
Arkansas, Fayetteville, Ark., Nov. 2d.
Little Rock, Prescott, Ark., Nov. 16th.
White River, Forest City, Ark., Nov. 23rd.
North Mississippi, Sardis, Miss., Nov. 30th.

The semi-annual meeting of the Bishops will be held in New Orleans, La., Oct. 20th.

There are those on whose very faces may be traced the peace of God, whose features are radiant with unearthly beauty, whose very presence diffuses spiritual fragrance wherever they are. It is not difficult to discover their secret. The power of the Holy Ghost and the gift of his wisdom have given them a glimpse of the glories of the eternal world, and that vision has preserved them untouched amid the temptations of the world, the flesh and the devil.—Southern Churchman.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.
Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND THE SUMMER?

Why not Try Winona Lake Assembly, Situated on Beautiful Winona Lake in Northern Indiana?

In Chautauqua features equal to Chautauqua, N. Y., in Bible Conference and Sunday School features equal to Northfield, Mass. Largest attended Assembly in America. A series of rich literary and religious entertainments. Bathing, boating, fishing, golf, tennis, and all innocent amusements. Fine Mineral water. Six large hotels, numerous boarding and lodging houses. Write postal and secure free the beautiful Year Book, giving all necessary information. Address

PUBLICITY BUREAU,

WINONA LAKE, INDIANA.

THE BEST MADE Angell's Cough and Whooping Cough Syrup

For Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and Throat Trouble. Contains no Opium or Morphine. All Druggists, Price 25 and 50 cents.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection; beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders—Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER, Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

FEED YOUR STOCK ON NUTRILINE

THE ONLY STEAM-COOKED FEED ON THE MARKET

Manufactured from the by-products of rice, pure corn chops, alfalfa a small percentage of cotton-seed meal, thoroughly mixed with black-strap molasses. Keeps your stock in strong, healthy condition. Makes your cows give more milk; enables your horses to do more work; puts firm healthy flesh on your hogs. Elton Merc. Co., Elton, La., writes:

"Two years ago we entered the feed business at this point and your product (Nutriline) was known in this section. My first orders to you were in five-ton lots. Before the harvest was over was selling an average of one car per week. All our farmers are using Nutriline and some use it exclusively during the entire season. You will find no better kept teams anywhere than the ones that know no other feed than Nutriline. The records in your office of shipments of us are a recommendation sufficient without my farmer patrons' signatures."

Write for our booklet: "Can You Afford to Feed Anything but Nutriline," which tells you all about stocks, when and how to feed—ITS FREE.

NUTRILINE MILLING COMPANY,

CROWLEY, LA.

METAL POLISH A pure liquid free from acid or grit. Apply it—POLISH then rub off. A brilliant and lasting polish in a "jiffy." For brass, copper, zinc, tin, enamel, nickel plate, glass, silver, etc. Fine for automobiles, yachts, carriages.

IN 25c TINS EVERYWHERE.

SILVER PASTE Qckwork Silver Paste keeps silver looking brand new. No acid—nothing to injure. Good for gold, cut glass, etc. Insist on Qckwork—the time saver.

IN 25c. JARS EVERYWHERE

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

Again death has visited our "camp" at Muddy Springs Church and released another confederate veteran from the struggle of life. On Sunday, April 3, 1910, just as the sun had finished its course and sunken in the West, to rise with the dawn of the morning, GEO. W. ROBERTS, lay upon his bed facing the last moments of his evening-tide of life. With weeping loved ones and sorrowing friends drawn closely about him, he finished his course and sank to rise with the dawn of eternal morning. He was born near Magnolia, Miss., Nov. 15, 1842, and while just blooming forth into young manhood he entered the ranks of the Confederate Army, making a faithful, brave and true soldier. After the war was over, at twenty-eight years of age, he was married to Miss Janie Guy, on April 1, 1870, who preceded him by a few years, on the long journey from whence no traveler returns. He testified during the last days of his illness to the fact that "the way" was clear, no fear in his "setting out to sea." "Blessed are they who die in the Lord." May he who doeth all things well, bless and comfort his surviving children and enable them to live such useful lives as to give them an inheritance with their father among the saints in glory.

J. LOYD DECELL, P. C.

VENA BAGGETT, the wife of W. F. Baggett, was called to dwell in the beautiful city of God on May 23, 1910. I will not say that she is dead. She has just fallen asleep in Jesus. We miss her—oh, how we miss her! We miss the sweet voice which sang the sweet songs of Zion so perfectly. She was 36 years old. She leaves three little children, a husband, and a host of loved ones to mourn their loss. The merry talk and laughter which cheered our hearts and filled the home with sunshine we hear no more. The vacancy can never be filled, but her mission, though brief, was not in vain. The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord. Weep not, dear friends, for the Father has just taken her home where we shall soon follow. Vena was loved by all who knew her. Bright and promising she was, but God had need of her. May divine grace be sufficient for the bereaved ones.

By a brother, A. H. BAGGETT.

Mrs. LAURA WHITTINGTON PRICE was born Dec. 3, 1847, and closed her eyes in the last long sleep March 7, 1910. She was the widow of the late Rev. Thomas Price, of the Mississippi Conference. She was converted when quite young, and she let her light so shine that others seeing her good works were constrained to glorify God. She was sick for some time before her death, and she spoke often of her bright prospect for heaven. Her death was calm and serene, beautiful as the going down of the sun; her name is embalmed in loving hearts, and her memory is like ointment poured forth. She was the mother of several children. Two grown daughters ministered to her every want during her illness, and as one beheld the devotion, he could not refrain from saying, "behold how they loved her." The Sunday school and Church has lost a friend. She was prompt to attend all the services in the house of God, and how she was missed when we assembled and knew that she was not, for God took her. To the children we will say, Turn your eyes from the desolation your mother has left, and think of her enjoying the realities of her heavenly home. To all who have shed a tear at her going away we will say, Prepare to meet her in the bright beyond, and when the mists have cleared away you will see and know why the Father saw best to take her.

C. M. MARTIN, P. C.

JANE PINKNEY CRUMP, daughter of James Pinkney Crump and Louisa Crump (nee Harper), was born in Shelby County, Ala., June 19, 1843. Her father died during her childhood. Her mother then married Seaborn Ozley, and they moved to Union Parish, La., in 1849. Here she married A. C. Harper, Dec. 20, 1866, which happy union was dissolved by her death Feb. 27, 1910. Radiant in her young womanhood and a joyous bride, she stood at her marriage within a few feet of the place where, worn with suffering, the messenger found her when he came to bear her to the "bridal of the soul." She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in her twelfth year, at the old Alabama Camp-ground, and was a member of the church which stood near her home for more than fifty years, and all those years was a consistent, devout Christian. Her religion was of the "shouting kind," and the memory of those bursts of joy will long linger with those who heard them. Truly, she adorned her profession by an upright walk and a godly conversation. For forty years she suffered much pain, but bore it with Christian fortitude. In all the relationships of life she bore her part uncomplainingly and well. She was the loving, devoted wife of my brother, and a true sister to me. For forty years their home was a place of rest to the pastors. Often did they here find the hearty welcome, the hospitality and cheer of a true Christian home. She leaves an only son, James Henry Seaborn, who, with his wife and little children remain to mourn their loss and honor her memory. She was truly a good woman, one of singular beauty and purity of character. She has gone, not empty-handed, into the presence and joy of her Lord. She is not dead, for her influence lives on, the memory of her good works abides.

J. D. HARPER.

Alabama Christian Advocate please copy.

LUDIE E. DRAKE was born June 16, 1897, and departed this life May 15, 1910. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Bethel Church, in Kemper County, Miss., under the pastorate of the writer. She was a consistent member until death. She was an intelligent child, a model character in school, where she was loved by all her schoolmates. Her life encompassed energy, honor, truth and good-will. Her faith was simplicity itself. Her home life was so calm, happy and beautiful. She loved her Bible and always knew her Sunday-school lessons well. In the death of Ludie the family, church and community have lost one of its best and choicest characters. She was too pure for this world, and God took her to himself. Do not mourn as those who have no hope. Nay, for she is not lost to you who are found in Christ. Sent before like unto a star which, going before as a guide to another hemisphere of glory. Her remains were laid to rest in the Bethel Cemetery, to await the call of the Master in the last day. Then, bereaved ones, think of Ludie not as dead, but as one living in celestial realms—not as a flower that has withered, but as one that has been transplanted and touched by a divine hand, is blooming in richer colors and sweeter shades than those of earth. Her pastor,

C. C. GRIFFIN, P. C.

CHURCH DIRECTORY.

New Orleans District, Rev. F. N. Parker, D.D., presiding elder; residence, 241 Olivier Street.

First Methodist Church, St. Charles Ave., near Callopie St.; Dr. S. H. Werlein, pastor; residence, 5830 Prytanla St.; phone, Uptown 329.

Rayne Memorial Church, St. Charles Ave. and General Taylor St.; Dr. John A. Rice, pastor; residence, 1421 Constantinople St.

Second Methodist Church, 2531 Burgundy, near Lafayette Ave.; Rev. A. I. Townsley, pastor; residence, 2728 N. Rampart St.; office hours, 9 to 11 a. m.; phone, Hemlock 975.

Parker Memorial, corner Nashville Ave. and Perrier St.; Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor; residence, 734 Nashville Ave.

Louisiana Avenue, cor. Louisiana Ave. and Magazine St.; Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor; residence, 2903 Camp St.; phone, Uptown 1391.

Felicity Street Church, cor. Felicity and Chestnut Sts.; Rev. Albert S. Lutz, pastor; residence, 1619 St. Mary St.; phone, Jackson 144.

Carrollton Avenue Church, cor. Carrollton Ave. and Elm St.; Rev. Henry T. Carley, pastor; residence, 1125 Fern St.; phone, Uptown 1238.

Algiers, Laverne Street, cor. Delaronde; Rev. J. E. Foster, pastor; residence, 214 Seguin.

McDonoghville and Mary Werlein, Rev. H. Whitehead, pastor, residence, 1619 St. Mary St.; phone, Jackson 144.

Epworth Church, cor. Banks and Scott Sts.; Rev. L. A. Sims, pastor; residence, 232 South Pierce St.

Rev. John L. Sutton, Superintendent Orphan Boy's Asylum; residence, 5220 St. Charles Ave.; phone, Uptown 123.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, Superintendent St. Mark's Hall, 619-21 Esplanade. Residence, 721 Henry Clay Avenue; phone: Residence, Uptown 2739; St. Mark's Hall, Hemlock 1453.

Rev. John T. Sawyer, D.D., residence, 2330 Valencia St.; phone, Uptown 879.

R. F. Harrell, Secretary Y. M. C. A., 915 St. Charles St.

Rev. R. A. Meek, Editor New Orleans Christian Advocate; residence, 724 Nashville Ave.; phone, uptown 679.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors of the Corinth District.

I have been requested to write a history of the District, and in order to do so will need the District Conference Records. Will you be kind enough to inquire of your congregations if they know where any of them can be found and request them to send them to me? I have the two last ones running back twelve years, but back of that I have not been able to find any of them. Please attend to this, and any information about them will be appreciated.

HARDY W. REES.

Booneville, Miss.

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.

Secure our catalogue before deciding where to place your daughter. Superior Home Comforts; Only Two Girls in a Room; Marvelous Health Record; Excellent Fine Arts Department; Strong Lyceum Course; Well-Adapted Library; Personal Attention to Individual Pupils; Superior Student Body as Associates; Carefully Selected Faculty; Strong Course of Study; Rates Reasonable; Constant Christian Influence Permeating and Dominating College Life. Apply for rooms at once and thus secure choice of location.

Memphis Conference Female Institute, Jackson, Tenn.

Next School Year begins Wednesday, September 14. Every facility offered for a thorough education for girls and young women. All departments taught, including besides regular Classical and Literary Course, Music, Art, Expression, Stenography, Typewriting, Business course, Etc. Charges reasonable. For catalogues, etc., apply to.

REV. A. B. JONES, Jackson, Tenn.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute is one of the oldest Female Colleges in the South, having been chartered in 1843. The college has 250 attendants and 125 of them are boarding pupils.

Parents desiring to send their daughters to school should write for a catalog of

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Which has a record of high grade work for half a century, maintaining a faculty of Specialists in the schools of Literature, Mathematics, Science, Languages, Music, Art, and Expression. Beautiful location in most healthful town in State of Virginia. For full information write

REV. S. D. LONG, President, Ashington, Va.

Your Boy May Become a Great Merchant

But not unless he has the necessary training. The business of this institution is to fit young men and women for successful business careers. We have the best systems for teaching Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Typewriting, Penmanship, Salesmanship, Telegraphy, Proofreading, Railroadings, Public Accounting, Banking and Civil Service. Correspondence courses for those who cannot attend. Write for particulars and free booklet, entitled "OUR PRESIDENTS," giving a complete history of each, from Washington down to and including Taft.

FALL'S BUSINESS COLLEGE, Broadway & 8th Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

FOR GIRLS AND YOUNG WOMEN

Ward Seminary Nashville, Tennessee

46th year. Seminary and Special Courses. Conservatory of Music—Emil Winkler, Director; Signor Campobello, Voice; Fritz Schmitz, Violin. 175 Boarding Pupils. Complete appointments. City advantages. Beautiful campus for outdoor sports. For catalogue address J. D. BLANTON, President.

Methodist Benevolent Association

Ministers and Laymen of Southern Methodist Church. Benefits at Death, or Old Age, or Disability. Over $8,000 paid to Widows, Orphans, Disabled. Insurance at cost. If in good health, write for rates and other information.

602 N. METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE

NASHVILLE, TENN.

RYDER HALL HOTEL

SALUDA, N. C.

The Ideal Place to Spend Your Vacation—Summer or Winter

Located right on the top of the mountains. Buildings brand new and modern, fully equipped throughout with hot and cold water, heat and every other comfort and convenience. Private spring water, no mosquitoes and beautiful shade. Bus meets all trains. 15 minutes walk from station. Special Rates to Tourists and Vacationists. Write for Them.

RYDER HALL HOTEL

SALUDA, N. C.

HOTEL BALSAM

Highest R. R. Station
East of the Rockies

ALTITUDE
3,551

On Asheville and Murphy Branch of Southern Railway; in the ideal section of the Appalachian region—Western North Carolina. New, modern, One-hundred-room hotel. Cold water running in each room from Mountain Spring, 165 feet higher than hotel. Hot running water also in each room. Gorgeous scenery, invigorating climate. Passenger station 200 yards from hotel; with telegraph, express and telephone service.

For rates address Balsam Hotel Co., Balsam, N. C.
In Care Box MRS. W. H. WIGGS.

VACATION DAYS!

CERULEAN SPRINGS, - CERULEAN, KY.

The ideal place to spend your vacation any time in the year. The one fascinating place that turns "Vacation Dreams" into "Delightful Realities."

Skating, fishing, trap and target shooting, bowling, riding and driving. Modern, up-to-date hotel, surrounded by a beautiful forty-acre park. High, healthy and cool. Malaria and mosquitoes unknown. Seasonable vegetables fresh from our own gardens. Water strongly impregnated with sulphur, chloride of lime, soda, bi-carbonate of lime and free sulphuretted hydrogen, rendering its curative powers most effective, creating a hearty appetite and benefiting the entire system.

SEND FOR CATALOG AND RATES.

CERULEAN SPRINGS HOTEL COMPANY, Cerulean, Ky.

3 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McCord, Verbena, Ala., used 3 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 20 years."

C. G. Butler, Argenta, Ark., wrote: "Used 4 bottles and gained 12 pounds and feel 100 per-cent better."

Money back when it fails.
The Johnson's Chill & Fever Tonic Co.
Savannah, Georgia.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing by hand—no breakage

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE

LE PAGE
INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO
TORONTO CANADA

WE SHIP ON APPROVAL

without a cent deposit, prepay the freight and allow 10 DAYS FREE TRIAL. IT ONLY COSTS 1 cent to learn our method of pricing and marvelous offers on highest grade 1910 model bicycles. Do not buy a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you write for our large Catalog and learn our wonderful method of first sample bicycle going to your door. SALES AGENTS everywhere are making big money exhibiting and selling our bicycles. We sell cheaper than any other factory. TIRE'S, Coaster-Brake rear wheels, lamps, repairs and all sundries at half usual prices. No Post-Waiter's day for our special offer. Mead Cycle Co., Dept. M-274, Chicago.

There is no sort of wrong deed of which a man can hear the punishment alone; you can't isolate yourself and say that the evil which is in you shall not spread. Men's lives are as thoroughly blended with each other as the air they breathe; evil spreads as necessarily as disease.—Selected.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00

St. Louis, $26.00

Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares

To ALL Principal Points in the United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.
141 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
Phone Main 3618.

Epworth League

By Rev. H. B. Watkins.

TOPIC FOR JUNE 26, 1910.

THE CHRISTIAN'S VICTORIES.

(References: II. Cor. 2:14-17; Romans 8:35-37.)

It should be a matter of great gladness to the young Christian that his life need not be one of constant defeat and failure, but that it can be one of constant victory and of every day triumph. It is true that the Bible is full of characters that fell and failed in varying degrees. But their very failures are recorded in order that God's children, catching the secret of their failure, might prevail at their very weakest point. On the other hand, the key-note in the gospel writers is one of triumph, and to sooth one's conscience for falls and failures, one must look elsewhere than the Bible. Possible victory is written everywhere. In addition to the references given above, just here have the Leaguers read the following passages from the New Testament: I John v. 4-5; Romans vii. 24-25; I Cor. xv. 55-58; Philipians iv. 13; I Cor. x. 13. If one would gather from these New Testament quotations that this writer was at a loss to find his note of triumph in the Old Bible, I need point you to such as Psalms xxxli. 1-2; Job xli. 25-27, while the 23d Psalm forms a complete song of triumphant faith.

Let us now briefly examine at what point in his life the Christian may look for victory.

I would say, first of all, he can have victory over himself. One cannot have seriously considered this Christian warfare before he discovers that he is his own enemy and that the fiercest battle he fights is one fought out upon the battle ground of his own heart. The sea of Galilee hovering there amid its hills is the scene of no tempest half so furious as some that beat upon the human soul. What winds, what contrary winds! What billows! What contrary winds! But, dear friends, no storm is so severe that he whom we have taken into our ship cannot still it with his wonderful "Peace be still!" To me one of the most solemn passages of God's Word is James 1:15. It shows that the beginning of death takes place not in some outward act, but that it begins in some unholy, selfish or dishonest meditation in the secret places of the human soul. Psalm vii. 14 is to the same effect. Doubtless our hearts echo the prayer given in Romans vii. "O who will deliver me from the body of this death!" Do our hearts also echo that triumphant exclamation: "I thank God through Jesus Christ my Lord!"

In practical religious life I would the more and more commend that good hymn

"Yield not to temptation, for yielding is sin;
Each victory will help you some other to win."

laying especial emphasis on the chorus:

"Ask the Savior to help you,
Comfort, strengthen and keep you;
He is willing to aid you—
He will carry you through."

I would say again that he can have victory over the world: the world, with all of its enchanting voices, with all of its charming scenery, with its beckoning hands, with its calling companions, still victory! No wonder that Jesus, loving and yet fearful of the world, should have prayed for his followers, "I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from evil!" There is the Christian's true attitude toward this merry, needy, busy, greedy world in which we live, to be part and parcel of it and yet free from its evils. Let us pray to be triumphant over its sins, but ministering to its needs, to visit its widows and fatherless, to comfort its heart-broken, to feed its hungry, to rescue its perishing, to lift up its fallen, but to keep ourselves unspotted from its ills. "I have written unto you, young man, because ye are strong and the Word of God abideth in you and ye have overcome!"

I would say again that the Christian can have victory in the service of his Lord. "The pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hands." "Then will I teach transgressors thy way and sinners shall be converted unto God!"

We must be patient and prayerful and earnest and gentle and sincere; at last shall we prevail with men and we shall see at least some measure of fruitfulness characterize our lives! Let us not be discouraged at evil, much more let us not be overcome by it. By all means, let us overcome it with positive good.

Lastly, we shall be victorious in our prayer life and shall know the meaning of "prevailing prayer." I have placed this last. Should I not have placed it first? For through and underneath all the victories of our lives runs the victorious prayer. O, like Jacob, let us wrestle with God that we may prevail with God and man. The triumphant life is the life lived close to God, the consecrated life, the spirit-filled life. How joyous a thing to find God answering our prayers and to know that by the mysterious power of prevailing prayer we are in communion with heaven.

Tidings from the Field

South Washington Street, Vicksburg:

Sunday, June 12, was a good day for this church. Bishop W. B. Murrah preached a great sermon and dedicated the church at 11 a. m., and raised $100 on the parsonage debt and baptized five children. The house was full and everyone was delighted. The sermon by the Bishop was a masterpiece, dealing with the great essential truths of the gospel in its relation to the soul. He portrayed the desolation of a godless soul and the riches of a godly soul. The whole congregation was lifted into a higher sense of appreciation of our religion. We had the pleasure of having with us at this service, Rev. Ira B. Robertson, W. A. Terry and G. H. Hawkins. At 8 p. m., the same day, we held our Children's Day service, as recommended by the General Board. At this service the house was full to overflowing and standing room was in demand. Our little folks acquitted themselves well and reflected great credit on those who trained them for the service. Surely this church has a promising future.—W. H. Saunders.

Sardis, Miss.:

Believing that a large number of the readers of the Advocate would be pleased to hear from Sardis, I take pleasure in saying that the church in Sardis is coming along. Recently we have had a change of pastors, Dr. Boswell taking the place of Brother Murrah, who was sent to Aberdeen by Bishop Hoss.

Much as we disliked to give up the man that we had, we find that we shall like Dr. Boswell, and do now like him, and that the work of the church will go forward just the same. One workman displaces another. Dr. Boswell has occupied our pulpit two Sundays now, and both days we have had very large congregations at both the morning and evening services, attentive and appreciative, and he is being most cordially received. He is a very clear preacher, a fine theologian, is unaffected and sincere, and of very evident piety. These qualities in a preacher always count.

We shall extend a cordial welcome to the Conference which is to meet here in November, hoping above all things that the session may be a blessing to us.—J. S. Carlton.

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also.

COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.

1300-1302
DRADES STREET.

PHONES—Jackson 1080—1081.

VISIT MINERAL WELLS

—FOR—
HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND

WEST TEXAS

—For—
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS.
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE
DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,
General Passenger Agent.

DALLAS - - - - - TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a. m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS,
WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves 7:30 p. m.

FOR

NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW
ON SALE.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

New Orleans Dist.—Third Round.

Parker Memorial	June 19
Louisiana Avenue	July 3
Donaldsonville, at D.	July 10
Seashore Camp Ground	July 17
Plaquemine	July 24
McDonoughville, a. m.	July 31
Epworth, p. m.	July 31
St. Tammany Ct.	Aug. 6, 7
Covington	Aug. 7, 8
Shidell, at Sildell	Aug. 14
Felicity, a. m.	Aug. 21
Algiers, p. m.	Aug. 21
Carrollton	Aug. 28
Second Church	Sept. 4
First Church	Sept. 11
Rayne Memorial	Sept. 18

F. N. PARKER, P. E.

Lafayette Dist.—Third Round.

Gueydan, at Gueydan	June 25, 26
Indian Bayou, at Hebron	July 2, 3
Jeanerette	July 9, 10
New Iberia	July 10, 11
French Mission, at St. Mar-
tinsville	July 16, 17
Houma, at Bourg	Aug. 6, 7
Patterson	Aug. 13, 14
Prudhomme, at C. P.	Aug. 20, 21
Rayne	Aug. 27, 28
Jennings	Sept. 3, 4
Lake Charles	Sept. 10, 11
Sulphur, at Sulphur	Sept. 11, 12
Ennice, at L. P.	Sept. 17, 18
Bell City, at B. C.	Sept. 24, 25
Lake Arthur	Sept. 25, 26

J. E. DENSON, P. E.

Monroe Dist.—Third Round.

Monroe	July 3
Bonita, at Jones	July 5, 6
Bastrop	July 9, 10
Gilbert, at Holly Grove	July 13, 14
Florence, at Tensas Chp.	July 16, 17
Marion	July 20
W. Monroe, at Logtown	July 23, 24
Winnsboro, at B. Prairie	July 30, 31
Tallulah	Aug. 6, 7
Rayville	Aug. 7, 8
Mangham, at Union	Aug. 13, 14
Downsville, at Wilhite	Aug. 20, 21
Waterproof, at Wesley	Aug. 25
Floyd	Aug. 27, 28
Eros, at Indian Village	Aug. 31
Lake Providence	Sept. 3, 4
Merrouge	Sept. 7
Brookland	Sept. 10, 11

S. S. KEENER, P. E.

Ruston Dist.—Third Round.

Arcadia	July 2, 3
Simsboro, at Antioch	July 9, 10
Homer	July 16, 17
Benton, at Benton 8 p. m.	July 22
Plaindealing, at Walker	July 23, 24
Haynesville, at Colquitt	July 30
Haynesville Mis., at W. C.	July 31
Ruston	Aug. 7
Vernon, at New Prospect	Aug. 13, 14
Blenville, at Burk Place
11 a. m.	Aug. 18
Bernice, at Summerfield	Aug. 20, 21
Ringgold, at G. B.	Aug. 27, 28
Gibland, at O. G. 11 a. m.	Sept. 1
Jonesboro, at Wyatt	Sept. 3, 4
Winnfield	Sept. 4, 5
Houghton	Sept. 8
Lisbon, at —	Sept. 10, 11
Minden	Sept. 17, 18
Cotton Valley, at — 11 a. m.	Sept. 19
Lanesville, at P. G.	Sept. 24, 25

R. W. TUCKER, P. E.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Meridian Dist.—Third Round.

Daleville, at Andrew's Chpl.	June 21
Binnsville & Wabalak, at
Binnsville	June 22
Lauderdale, at Lockhart	June 29
Matherville, at Salem	July 2, 3
Wayne Mis'n, at Big Rock	July 9, 10
Shubuta and Quitman, at S. J.	July 24, 25
East Clark, at Hopewell	July 27
Waynesboro	Aug. 7, 8
Scooba, at Spring Hill	Aug. 10
Meridian, Central, 11 a. m.	Aug. 21
Meridian, East End, 8 p. m.	Aug. 21
Meridian, South Side and
Poplar Springs, at S. Side	Aug. 24
De Kalb	Aug. 26
N. Kemper, at Mt. Zion	Aug. 27, 28
Buckatunna, at Chicora	Sept. 1
Enterprise and Stonewall,
at Concord	Sept. 3, 4
Porterville, at P.	Sept. 10, 11
Vimville, at —	Sept. 14

Meridian, 5th St., 11 a. m. Sept. 18.
Meridian, 7th Ave., 8 p. m. Sept. 18.
W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

Newton Dist.—Third Round.

Raleigh, at Pleasant Hill	July 16, 17
Trenton, at Trenton	July 23, 24
Shiloh, at Clear Creek	July 29
Morton and Pella, at Lindsey
Chapel	July 30, 31
Walnut Grove, at Good
Hope	Aug. 5
Carthage, at Conway	Aug. 6, 7
Rose Hill, at Hopewell	Aug. 13, 14
Laurel, 1st Church	Aug. 20, 21
Laurel, Kingston	Aug. 20, 21
Laurel, 6th Street	Aug. 22
Newton	Aug. 23
Homewood, at Gasque	Aug. 24
Lake, at Lake	Aug. 27, 28
Hillsboro, at Lane's Chapel	Sept. 3
Forest, at Coutrel	Sept. 3, 4
Montrose	Sept. 6
Chunkey, at Lost Gap	Sept. 10, 11
Decatur, at Union	Sept. 15
Neshoba	Sept. 16
Stallo, at Cook's Chapel	Sept. 17, 18
Philadelphia	Sept. 19
Hickory, at Spring Hill	Sept. 24, 25
Indian Mission, at Talla
Chulah	Sept. 30
Edinburg, at Scotland	Oct. 1, 2

T. J. O'NEIL, P. E.

Brookhaven District—Third Round.

No. Wesson, at Providence	July 9, 10
Osyka, at Muddy Springs	July 12
Magnolia, at M.	July 13
Snmmilt, at E. McComb	July 16, 17
La Branch and Fernwood, at
La Branch	July 17
Monticello, at Bahala	July 23, 24
Brookhaven, at B.	July 31
Gallman, at Old Crystal
Springs	Aug. 6, 7
Crystal Springs	Aug. 9
Topisaw, at Topisaw	Aug. 13, 14
Silver Creek, at S. C.	Aug. 20, 21
Wesson, at W.	Aug. 28, 29
Bogue Chitto and Norfield,
at Bogue Chitto	Sept. 3, 4
Prentiss, at Santee	Sept. 10, 11
Buford, at B.	Sept. 17
Tylertown, at Tylertown	Sept. 18, 19
Pearlhaven, at P.	Sept. 24
Hazlehurst, at H.	Sept. 25, 26

J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

Hattiesburg Dist.—Third Round.

Taylorville, at Mize	June 26, 27
McLain, at Crossroads	July 3, 4
Mt. Olive, at Oakvale	July 9, 10
Hattiesburg, at Court St.	July 12
Purvis, at Pinegrove	July 20
Lux, at Good Hope	July 23, 24
Eucutta, at Good Water	July 29
Vosburg, at Sandersville	July 30, 31
Pachuta, at McGowan's	Aug. 2, 3
Hattiesburg, at Main St.	Aug. 4
Hattiesburg, at Broad St.	Aug. 5
Ellisville, at Overt	Aug. 7, 8
Maxie, at Batson's	Aug. 9, 10
Oloah, at East Columbia	Aug. 13, 14
Sumrall	Aug. 21, 22
Leakesville, at Adam's M.	Aug. 24, 25
New Augusta, at N. A.	Sept. 4, 5
Eastabuchie, at E.	Sept. 10, 11
Magee, at Rials	Sept. 15, 16
Bethel, at Summerland	Sept. 17, 18
Seminary, at S.	Sept. 19
Lucedale	Sept. 21
Collins, at Ora	Sept. 24, 25
District Conference meets at Luce-dale, July 14, at 9 o'clock a. m., and continues through the 17th. Bishop
E. D. Mouzon will preside. All members of the Conference are especially requested to be present at the beginning. M. B. SHARBROUGH, P. E.

Seashore Dist.—Third Round.

McHenry and Wiggins, at
McHenry	June 25
Howison and Saucier, at St.
John's	June 27
Handsboro and Mississippi
City, at H.	July 9, 10
Brooklyn and Bond, at B.	July 11
Ocean Springs	July 12
Gulftport, 29th Street	July 23, 24
Logtown	July 26
Bay St. Louis	July 27
Mentorum, at Mt. Zion	July 30, 31
Hub, at Wesley Chapel	Aug. 13, 14
Poplarville	Aug. 15
Carriere and McNeill, at
Picayune	Aug. 16
Columbia	Aug. 17

Oakville, at Baxterville	Aug. 18
Coalville, at White Plains	Aug. 20, 21
Long Beach	Aug. 26
Lumberton	Aug. 27, 28
Vancleave, at Red Hill	Aug. 31
Wolf River Mission, at Beau-
lah	Sept. 1
Moss Point	Sept. 2
Americus, at Big Point	Sept. 3, 4
Pascagoula	Sept. 5
Escatawpa, at Orange Gr.	Sept. 6
Gulftport, 25th Avenue	Sept. 10, 11
Biloxi	Sept. 14

W. B. JONES, P. E.

Natchez Dist.—Third Round.

Woodville Ct., at Bethel	July 9
Woodville Station	July 10
Liberty, at Salem	July 16, 17
Natchez, Pearl St.	July 22, 24
Natchez, Jefferson St.	July 24, 25
Fayette	July 25
Washington	July 23
Meadville, at Eddiceton	July 30, 31
Hamburg, at Knoxville	Aug. 6, 7
Homochitto, at Mt. Vernon	Aug. 13, 14
Adams, at Ebenezer	Aug. 20, 21
Centerville	Aug. 24
Gloster, at Woodland	Aug. 27, 28
Nebo, at —	Sept. 3, 4
Bayou Pierre, at —	Sept. 10, 11
Barlow, at —	Sept. 12
Wilkinson, at Friendship	Sept. 17, 18
Scotland, at —	Sept. 24, 25

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN,
Gloster, Miss. P. E.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Columbus District—Third Round.

Macon	June 26, 27
Columbus, First Church	July 2, 3
Columbus, Second Church	July 3, 4
Shuqualak, at Salem	July 10, 11
Brooksville, at Prairie	July 17, 18
Sturgis	July 22
Starkville ct., at Lebanon	July 23, 24
Winstonville	July 30, 31
Mathiston	Aug. 4
Cedar Bluff, at Bills	Aug. 5
Mayhew, at Klgore	Aug. 13, 14
Hebron, at Prairie Chapel	Aug. 20, 21
Columbus ct.	Aug. 27, 28

J. E. THOMAS, P. E.

Durant Dist.—Third Round.

Dist. Conf. at Pickens	July 6, 8
Viaden, at Columbiana	July 2, 3
Pickens, at Richland	July 9, 10
Durant	July 10, 11
Ebenezer, at Bethany	July 16
Lexington	July 17, 18
Sidon, at Sidon	July 17, 18
Rural Hill, at Macedonia	July 23, 24
Chester, at So. Union	July 25
Louisville, at Nexapater	July 26
West, at Hebron	July 30, 31
Kosciusko Sta., at E. Union	Aug. 1
Sallis	Aug. 6
Ackerman	Aug. 7, 8
Kosciusko Ct.	Aug. 13
McCool	Aug. 14, 15
Poplar Creek	Aug. 20, 21
Black Hawk	Aug. 27, 28

N. G. AUGUSTUS, P. E.

Corinth Dist.—Third Round.

Wheeler Ct., at Asbury	June 24
E. Booneville Ct., at Shady
Grove	June 25, 26
Rienzi Ct., at Bethel	July 2
Guntown Ct., at Pleasant
Valley	July 3, 4
Myrtle Ct., at Friendship	July 9, 10
Hatchie Miss., at El Bethel	July 16
Rainey Miss., at Marvin	July 23
Ripley and B. M., at Falk-
ner	July 24, 25
Belden Ct., at Bethel	July 29
New Albany Ct., at Ecu	July 30
New Albany Sta., at N. A.	July 30, 31
Jonesboro Ct., at Ebenezer	Aug. 6, 7
Dumas Ct., at Dumas	Aug. 13
Dry Run Miss., at Mt. Zion	Aug. 13, 14
Tishomingo Ct.	Aug. 20, 21
Mooreville Ct.	Aug. 25
Mantachie Ct.	Aug. 26
Marietta Ct.	Aug. 27, 28

Pastors will please see that answers
are furnished to questions 17, 20 and 22.
BEN P. JACO, P. E.

Aberdeen Dist.—Third Round.

Pontotoc, at Pontotoc	June 22
Palestine, at Troy	June 25, 26
Shannon, at Pleasant Gr.	July 2, 3
Aberdeen	July 3, 4
Okolona Ct., at Grady's C.	July 9, 10

Montpelier	July 16, 17
Houston	July 17, 18
Verona, at Plantersville	July 23, 24
Okolona	July 24, 25
Okolona Ct., No. 2	July 30, 31
Tupelo	July 31, Aug. 1
Pittsborough, at Big Cr.	Aug. 6, 7
V. and C. C., at Vardaman	Aug. 7, 8
Nettleton Ct., at N. Chapel	Aug. 13, 14
Amory and Nettleton, at N. Aug.	14, 15
Smithville, at Paine Memo'l	Aug. 20, 21
Greenwood Springs, at Soule's
Chapel	Aug. 21, 22
Fulton Ct., at Van Buren	Aug. 27, 28
Tremont Ct., at Mt. Pleasant	Aug. 28, 29
Buena Vista	Sept. 3, 4
Prairie	Sept. 4, 5
Houlka, at Asbury	Sept. 10, 11
Derma, at Hurricane	Sept. 11, 12

JAMES H. FELTS, P. E.

Sardis Dist.—Third Round.

Sardis	July 2, 3
Como	July 9, 10
Wall Hill, at Marvin	July 16, 17
Byhalla, at Fountain Head	July 23, 24
Pleasant Hill, at Baker's
Chapel	July 30, 31
Tyro, at Emory	Aug. 3
Mt. Pleasant, at New Salem	Aug. 6, 7
Eureka, at Mt. Olivet	Aug. 13, 14
Olive Branch, at Oak G.	Aug. 20, 21
Hernando and H., at Hinds
Chapel	Aug. 27
Coldwater, at Coldwater	Aug. 27, 28
Tony Town, at Sees Chp.	Aug. 31
Crenshaw, at Mastodon	Sept. 3, 4
Senatobia, at Mal' Malson	Sept. 7
Cockrum, at Cockrum	Sept. 8
Batesville	Sept. 10, 11
Courtland	Sept. 15
Enid	Sept. 17, 18
Arkabutla, at Harmony	Sept. 24, 25

W. M. YOUNG, P. E.

Winona Dist.—Third Round.

Kilmichael, at Stewart	June 25
Winona Station	June 26
Greenwood	July 10
Itta Bena 8 p. m.	July 10
Tom Nolen, at Walthall	July 15
Belzoni, at Belzoni	July 17, 18
Winona Ct., at Salem	July 23, 24
Webb, at Dublin	July 28
Schlatter	July 31
Mars Hill, at Chapel
Hill	Aug. 4
Carrollton, at Colla	Aug. 6
Indianola	Aug. 7, 8
Miner City	Aug. 13, 14
Inverness, at Colla	Aug. 18
Ruleville, at Ruleville	Aug. 19
North Carrollton, at Longview	Aug. 20, 21
Moorhead, at Sunflower	Aug. 27, 28
Lambert, at Sandy Bayou	Sept. 2
Tutwiler, at Marks	Sept. 3, 4
Slate Springs, at Bentley	Sept. 9
Eupora, at Eupora	Sept. 11, 12

E. S. LEWIS, P. E.

Greenville Dist.—Third Round.

Arcola and Hollandale, at
Arcola	June 19, 20
Greenville	June 26, 27
Cleveland	July 3, 4
Lula and Lyon, at Lula	July 10, 11
Shelby, at Duncan	July 12
Boyle, at New Salem	July 16, 17
Coahoma, at Dundee	July 23, 24
Jonestown	July 24, 25
District Mission	July 27
Clarksdale	July 30, 31
Gunnison, at Malvina	Aug. 6, 7
Rosedale, at Beulah	Aug. 9
Glen Allen, at Winterville	Aug. 11
Tunica, at Robinsonville	Aug. 13, 14
Cleveland Circuit, at Ship-
man Church	Aug. 16
Hillhouse, at Deeson	Aug. 18
Lake Cormorant, at Eudo-
ra	Aug. 20, 21
Leland, at Tribbett	Aug. 23
Shaw	Aug. 27, 28
Friars Point	Sept. 4, 5

A COLLEGE FIGHT.

Prof. R. E. Smith taught in the city schools. One day he walked out and said: "I will build a great school without football or city evils. School men will hate me, but parents will send their children across the continent to my school." He then opened a college in a beautiful health resort in Tenn. His words came true; it was a long, hot fight, but now students come from 20 States and Cuba. Smith tells his story in a charming little book fresh from the press. Our readers may get it free by sending a card to Ruskin-Cave College, Ruskin, Tenn.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JUNE 30, 1910.

C. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

VOL. 57—No. 26.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2838.

Editorial

Too many people have a mild case of religion. The symptoms of it are discoverable only occasionally, and then they are very faint.

I am not bound to win, but I am bound to be true. I am not bound to succeed, but I am bound to live up to what light I have. I must stand with anybody that stands right—stand with him while he is right, and part with him when he goes wrong.—Abraham Lincoln.

"They profess that they know God, but in their works they deny him." Such was Paul's characterization of some of the people of his time. And they have followers not a few in this day—men who call themselves Christians, but whose lives utterly disprove the claim. What one does is a better indication of what he is than anything that he may say. Not witnessing lips, but witnessing lives, are what the Church needs.

Teach the people what Methodism stands for. Let them know that it holds to the doctrine of a universal atonement; that every man may be saved if he will. We have everything to gain and nothing to lose by giving our doctrines wide publicity. So in the pulpit, by the fireside, in the Sunday school, and by the circulation of tracts, we should instruct and indoctrinate our membership. Informed Methodists are the best variety.

Man is no freak of evolution. The Darwinian theory of the origin of man is the pedigree of a bastard race. At the Scientific Congress in Moscow, Virchow declared that the theory of man's origin from an inferior species "had been beaten along the whole line of battle." Fogazzaro, the distinguished Italian writer, says: "We must admit that science does not possess a single reliable direct proof of the origin of man from an inferior species," and Moleschott declares that "men were more generous to Darwin than the facts." Man is not a gorilla, with his savage propensities tamed by the gang spirit of social instinct. Back of Adam is God.—J. I. Vance.

Environment is powerful, but not all-powerful. One's surroundings are apt to affect him, but they need not overcome him. High purpose may rise superior to adverse conditions. The beautiful water lily, white and stainless, springs from the foul bog. So beautiful characters may be discovered where one would least expect them. The early saints walked unsolled along the streets of the vilest cities that history has known. They had spiritual health within, and naught could corrupt them from without. Purity of heart produces purity of life. One should not needlessly expose himself to temptation, but if it can not be escaped, he should not despair. If he will live in conscious touch with God, he can remain strong and true. Of our Lord himself it was prophesied that he should be "as a root out of a dry ground."

"FISHERS OF MEN."

"Come after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men." Such was the Master's message to Simon and Andrew who were casting a net into the sea of Galilee. "And straightway they forsook their nets and followed him." The words of our Lord upon this occasion, like so many of the utterances that fell from his lips, are pregnant with meaning. To him who ponders them they are an unfailing mine of rich instruction.

First, we have disclosed the true function of the Christian ministry. It is to be "fishers of men." The greatest thing upon the planet is man. The world was made that he might be. All things material have value only in their relation to him. But he is fallen—gone astray—submerged beneath the waves of wickedness and worldliness that surge about us. Being a free moral agent, his rescue can not be effected by constraint; it must be voluntary. He must be influenced—won—caught—by an appeal to motive that touches the heart and sways the will.

The nobility of this work is plainly apparent. It has to do with sentient, immortal beings whose potentialities and possibilities God alone can measure. It is the loftiest service in which human energies can be enlisted. As one has said, "If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon immortal souls, we engrave upon those tablets something that no time can efface, but which will brighten through all eternity." Earth celebrates material achievements, but heaven celebrates the reclamation of the lost. "There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."

But the Master's words also imply the difficulty of the work to which he calls his ministers. To be a successful "fisher of men" is no easy task. It requires the utmost skill, and is enough to perplex an angel's brain and heart. Sin blinds, fascinates, enslaves and holds the race fast in its destroying fetters. Its fictions allure and charm, and men love and cling to them. In society, in business, in politics, everywhere, they are living for self, and ignoring God and the spiritual. To arrest their attention, to arouse their consciences, to make them see the meaning and responsibility of life, to awaken within them a sense of guilt and need, to show them Christ and lead them to accept him, is the most stupendous and appalling undertaking ever committed to finite hands. No wonder that with the vision of what was to be done unfolding before him, Paul exclaimed, "Who is sufficient for these things?"

It should be observed, however, that the divine call is "to become fishers of men." This should be the aspiration, the supreme aim, the consuming passion of every preacher. He should leave nothing undone to equip himself to lead men to his Lord. Studious of books, of human nature, and of methods of works he should be, that he may command the respect and attention of those whom he would reach. Graces of manner and speech he should toil after, that he may grip those who come within the sphere of his influence. Whatever might give him readier access to the minds and hearts of the people, he should diligently seek. Nowhere is the dullard and intellectual drone so much out of place as in the Christian ministry. With achievements to perform, beside which all others pale into insignificance, the representatives of Christ in the world should develop and use to the utmost all of the powers—physical, mental, and spiritual—with which God has endowed them. Not to do this is to betray in a measure their sacred trust, and fall short of their high and holy calling. The empty library shelves of many a pastor is the explanation of his lack of force and efficiency. He has dawdled and degenerated into a weakling, when he should have been storing up strength for the vast and intricate work before him.

But though important and indispensable, human equipment is not all that is needed. Far, far, from it. Jesus said, "I will make you to become fishers of men." It was his teaching, training, and transforming power that qualified the apostles to thrill the hearts and impress with the truth the multitudes of their day. Nor are his touch and instruction less requisite now. "With Christ in the school of prayer," one may yet learn what is taught in no earthly university. Without the tutelage of the Holy Spirit, none may hope to acquire the art of so letting down the gospel net that he may capture prizes for the Master. To have proficiency in the responsible service whereunto we are called, both human and divine furnishing are needed. The absence of either makes a defective workman, who blunders where he ought to exhibit skill, and whose success is meager compared to what he ought to accomplish. Let the Church pray for pastors who in the highest and best sense are "fishers of men," whose dominant purpose every day is to win souls, whose pulpit utterances vibrate with the evangelistic note, and in response to whose appeals our altars shall be crowded with penitents, burdened with a sense of sin and seeking the forgiveness of God. Such ministers are after the original pattern and in the true apostolical succession.

Man is a bi-world creature. He lives on earth, yet holds citizenship in the sky. He has commanding duties to perform in his present sphere of existence, but he should not forget that his abiding home is beyond the sunset's radiant glow. Happy the man who when cares annoy and burdens press, like Abraham of old, can see the "city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God!" As the years pass, and the wrinkles deepen, and the locks whiten, and feebler becomes the form, such an one can sing:

"But the truer life draws nigher,
Every year;
And its morning star climbs higher,
Every year;
Earth's hold on me grows slighter,
And the heavy burden lighter,
And the dawn immortal brighter,
Every year."

"Some men strive to maintain two ratings: one for the commercial agency, and the other for the Lord's treasury."

BISHOP HOSS ON THE VANDERBILT SITUATION.

The following is the interview which Bishop Hoss gave expressly to the Memphis Commercial Appeal, and which was published in its issue of Tuesday, June 21.

A Citizen of Tennessee.

"Where are you from just now, Bishop?"
 "From Muskogee, Okla."
 "Is that your present residence?"
 "Oh, no. Nashville is my legal residence. I have simply been on a visit to my son, with whom my wife is spending some months."
 "Do you expect to remain permanently in Nashville?"
 "Certainly I do. I shall stay there till I am buried, unless my church should move me out."
 "Does your church fix the residence of its bishops?"
 "It has never done so yet, but it has the power and may exercise it at pleasure."
 "Have you noticed the action of the Vanderbilt board of trustees?"
 "Yes, as far as it has been made public."
 "What do you think about it, Bishop?"
 "Well, the trustees seem to have been going some."

"Just what did they do?"
 "To begin with, they refused to recognize the three trustees elected by the General Conference. In addition to that they abolished the by-law that required all trustees nominated by the Board during the interval between General Conferences to be confirmed by the Board of Education. When they had gone that far, they peremptorily laid on the table the following resolution offered by Drs. Bradfield and Dye and Bishop Key:

"The right of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to appoint the trustees of this university being denied by this Board of Trustees, great unrest is likely to follow to the damage of the university and the Church. To allay as much as possible this unrest, and to guard as far as possible the interests of the university, this Board hereby declares the trust it holds is a trust for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and that Vanderbilt University belongs to said Church."

One Thing Left Undone.

"Could they have gone any further?"
 "Yes, there is one other thing they might have done to emphasize their repudiation of the Church's ownership and control."
 "And what is that, Bishop?"
 "They might have ordered the removal of the dust of Bishops McKendree, Soule and McTyeire from the campus. The graves of these great men there, carry an unpleasant suggestion of ecclesiastical narrowness, and ought by all means to be leveled so as to avoid giving offense to the very broad-minded gentlemen who think that churches are an unnecessary survival of the dark ages."

"I suppose, Bishop Hoss, that you are not inclined to conceal the fact that you are a Methodist?"
 "If I have ever made any apology for it in public or in private I 'disremember' when."
 "What do you think about the growing opposition to the churches?"
 "I do not think it is growing, except in patches. As far as it exists, it is usually based on ignorance and prejudice. Anti-ecclesiastical cant is as little and as contemptible as ecclesiastical pretense can be. It is a grave mistake to suppose that all the fools and all the Pharisees are cooped up in the churches. A good many of them are running loose on the outside."

"Coming back to the subject, Bishop, were you surprised at the action of the Vanderbilt Board?"

His Position Vindicated.

"Yes and no. I was surprised, greatly surprised, at the attitude taken by several gentlemen who had given me to understand that they sympathized with the claims of the Church on the subject and then voted the other way; but I was not surprised by the course of the majority. It was precisely what I expected and predicted. Nothing could have vindicated my utterances more completely."

"After all Bishop, were not the trustees obliged as conscientious men, to abide by the laws of Tennessee?"

"Why, that is the very point. The only reasonable and elaborate interpretation of the Tennessee laws on the subject that has ever been put forth, is that of the very able commission of lawyers appointed by the General Conference at Birmingham for the purpose of considering and determining this exact matter. The Board of Trust, after all their sybilline pronouncements, have at last appealed from this interpretation, not to the law of the land, nor to any civil court, but to the individual opinions of two or three lawyers who furnished them with ex parte judgments. Inrenched behind these opinions, and without even the shadow of authority from any civil tribunal, they have flouted the Church's authority as of no account whatever."

"But, Bishop Hoss, have they ever at any time admitted that the commission had any jurisdiction?"

"Certainly they have. When they appeared before it, both in person and by counsel, and made their pleas, they conceded the fact. Otherwise, why did they waste time by appearing at all? As the matter stands, they seem to have argued this way: 'If we win our case, it is a good court. Otherwise, it is not worthy of the slightest respect.' But they furthermore admitted the jurisdiction of the commission by receiving its report, spreading it on their minutes, and passing elaborate resolutions about it."

The Tennessee Law.

"May I ask, once more, Bishop Hoss, whether it is not the opinion of all reputable lawyers in Tennessee that the commission did, as a matter of fact, err on all material points?"

"Well, now, a good friend of mine, who is not himself a lawyer, is reported to me to have said as much as that, but evidently he was speaking without knowledge. Mr. Albert W. Biggs thinks that the commission hit the Tennessee law in the center. Mr. Percy D. Maddin and Judge W. Judd, both of whom are professors in the law faculty of Vanderbilt University, fully agree with him. The latter gentleman has kindly furnished me a very learned and elaborate paper sustaining the commission at every point. If it were necessary I could name at least a score of others."

"Is it true, Bishop, that the last General Conference of your Church was virtually dominated by one or two men, who carried their own wishes at all points?"

"I saw something like that in the report of an address made by my old friend, Dr. W. L. Dudley, before the alumni meeting at Columbia. If he really said it, he was not as circumspect as he usually is. The Doctor is a great authority in chemistry and football, but all that he doesn't know about a Methodist General Conference would make a very big book. There is no more independent and self-respecting body under the sun, and none that attends to its business with more orderly dignity. The intimation that it is a sort of mob or ill-regulated popular assembly, is an affront to the Methodist Church, and will do no good to those that indulge it. Chancellor Kirkland and his very diligent friends lost their case there, as they did before the commission, simply because they could not make their contentions good. They had every chance to do so, and failed. Naturally their estimate of the Conference is not high."

Petition of Alumni.

"But, Bishop, did the General Conference give due regard to the great petition of the alumni?"

"Yes, it weighed that petition for what it was worth. But concluded, first, that with one-half of the present Board of Trust already chosen from the alumni, they had not any just ground of complaint, and, secondly, that it was at least a trifle inconsiderate for a body of gentlemen who claim the right to nominate one of their own members for every vacant trusteeship, then to follow that action by coming to the Conference with the solemn assurance that it ought not have anything to say about such matters."

"While I am on this subject I may as well say that this petition was not really as great as it seemed to be. Twenty-five or thirty gentlemen at Nashville got together and assumed to represent 531 alumni of that city. By what authority they did this thing I have not yet been able to find out."

"At another place one man met and made himself president and secretary of the meeting and chairman of the committee on resolutions. He is set down in the petition as representing nine."

"As far as I can discover those who assembled in any community took it upon themselves to represent all the alumni and ex-students living there or thereabouts."

"Moreover, the whole movement instead of being spontaneous, was systematically worked up from Nashville. One need go no further than to the pages of the printed petition itself to become aware of this fact. I venture to affirm that out of the 700 old students, for example, of the theological department, not fifty can be found, who, on full information, will endorse the course of the Board of Trust."

Bishop Hendrix's Position.

"How do you explain, Bishop Hoss, the position of Bishop Hendrix on these matters?"

"I don't know exactly what his present position is; and, in any event, it would be indecorous for me to express a public judgment concerning it."

"What do you think about Mr. Vanderbilt's letter to the board?"

"Why, anybody that reads it can see that it was based on a prejudiced and one-sided statement of the case. Mr. Vanderbilt was led to believe that the church is seeking to change the established order of administering the affairs of the university, when, as a matter of fact, every change that has been attempted or suggested has come from the trustees."

"Were you well acquainted, Bishop Hoss, with Bishop McTyeire?"

"Yes, I was, considering the difference in our ages, very intimate with him."

"What do you think about the effort on the part of the Board to justify their course by an appeal to his words?"

"Nothing could be more preposterous. The Bishop's dying charge to his colleagues was: 'Lay your hands on this university for government and guidance, as by charter you have the right to do.'"

Yet, the gentlemen who seek absolutely to deny that the Bishops have any legal relations to the university, and to cast them out of it, have the cool assurance to claim that they are trying to carry out his desires. I very much wish that he could get up and face them for one day."

Denominational Control.

"Has it not occurred to you, Bishop, that it would be wiser after all to have a great denominational university than one under the control of the Church?"

"That is a question that I do not care to discuss. But, if anyone wants such a university, let him build it. What I do object to is the forcible sequestration of the property of the Methodist Church to accomplish that end."

"Has not the city of Nashville some right to be heard in the premises?"

"I don't see why. The Methodist Church brought all these millions into Nashville. But for it not a dollar of the vast amount would ever have come there. In many other ways the Church has contributed, and is contributing immensely, to the material and moral welfare of the city. If ever any community was under obligations to feel kindly towards a religious denomination, this is surely the case. Only last week the city of Dallas, Tex., made a bona fide offer of $400,000 in cash and fifty acres of land to our Southwestern University to pull up and move thither from Georgetown, and it did this on purely business principles, knowing how much the institution would mean to the city. Why should Nashville be unkindly toward the Methodist Church? Why, above all things, should any Nashville Methodist join this senseless clamor against the Church's control of its own affairs?"

Self-Perpetuating Boards.

"Are the other Boards of the Church self-perpetuating?"

"Oh, no! Not one of them. The Publishing House, the Board of Missions, the Board of Education are all Tennessee corporations, and yet the directors of them are chosen quadrennially by the General Conference. Does anybody think that Nashville ought to have a say about the management of these corporations simply because they have their legal home there? There are twenty cities in the South that would each give a large bonus to get them and not think of claiming control over them. If the Church is to be fought in Nashville, it may have to consider the question of moving its official headquarters to some community that is not hostile. But I have never believed that this cackle against the Church represented any considerable or effective sentiment. When the issue is fairly made, Nashville will be broad enough to recognize the facts that I have just mentioned."

Action of the Bishops.

"What do you suppose the Bishops will do in the present emergency?"

"Why, of course, they will do just what the General Conference has instructed them to do."

"What, if they should decline to obey the instructions of the General Conference?"

"That is something that never has happened yet and is not likely to happen. The General Conference is for the purpose of making laws and regulations for the Church itself. Self-respecting men, whose chief duty it is to see that these laws are executed, will hardly set an example of insubordination. The Bishops will either obey or quit. That they should presume to eat the bread of the Church and tamper its authority under foot is not a thing that can be seriously thought of."

"But, Bishop, you must admit that if a suit is brought there is at least the possibility of the Church's losing?"

"Yes, the bare possibility. But I am so thoroughly convinced of the justice of the Church's contentions that I do not see how the final decision could go against it. In a court there will be a chance to sweep away that great array of misrepresentations that has gathered about the case. The facts beyond a question are that the Church founded the university and has had from the beginning the right to control it."

Judge O'Rear's Conduct.

"Before you conclude, Bishop, tell me whether there is any truth in the criticisms that have been made of the conduct of Judge O'Rear at Asheville."

"I do not know just what these criticisms are; but I do know that no man could have deported himself with more dignity and propriety than the judge displayed. He was courteous, conciliatory and straightforward. All that he did could be published to-morrow without the slightest discredit to him. I do not hesitate to say that any effort to belittle him or to make things at him is most unbecoming. The men who do so would be discreetly slow to do it in his presence. Perhaps they are resentful of the fact that they could not answer his arguments. I have known such things to happen."

HOUSE ON CAMPGROUNDS FOR SALE.

Desirable two-story cottage, with four rooms and bath, bathroom with latest sanitary improvements; completely furnished, facing open square in front of Keller Lodge, with a small, shady park in the rear. Address, Christian Advocate, 512 Camp, New Orleans.

DEFENDS BISHOP MORRISON.

It seems that the Committee on Episcopacy at Asheville made its criticisms on the ground of complaints made by individuals and possibly by the officials of one or two churches. If the complaints from other sources were no more reasonable and no better founded than those that went up from South Carolina, and I suspect they were not, then the committee did the Bishop an injustice, and the Church an injury. It was the business and duty of that committee to exhaust every resource to find out beyond any doubt as to whether there was any reasonable ground for these complaints. For instance, the Bishop did absolutely no harm, but much good, in his administration of the affairs of our Conference, as two years of unprecedented peace, progress, and prosperity in Church matters clearly indicate. His administration had at its close, and has yet, the hearty endorsement of three-fourths of the preachers and nine-tenths of the laymen in South Carolina. He did everything strictly according to law and with a good Christian spirit. He made a good many moves it is true, but no more than are usually made. About eighty or a hundred of the rank and file have been moved every year, from time immemorial, with only an occasional kick. But Morrison moved the wrong people. He did what no other Bishop ever does; so far as I know, opened himself to the approach of every preacher and layman, promising to consider their needs and advice, and any information they might give him. He soon found out that the sentiment of the Church was, that no presiding elder should serve in that appointment more than eight years consecutively, and some of them not more than four. The conference had so expressed itself by an overwhelming vote at Florence. Most of the Bishops have ignored the sentiment of the conference. There had been for several years a good deal of unrest and dissatisfaction. It may have expressed itself in an unwise and unspiritual way at times, but it was here and much more wide-spread than some are wont to suspect. Bishop Morrison entertained the same views, and, therefore, moved eight of the twelve presiding elders, some for inefficiency and unacceptability and some because they had been there too long, much too long, already.

It was generally conceded that one or two of them might have been retained with great propriety. Some of those he put in might have been improved upon, but as a set they were as good as those put out, as they have proven by their records. This part of Bishop Morrison's administration was applauded by the preachers and people all over the State. Bishop Morrison recognized the rank and file of the ministry. He also recognized the laity. He respected their sentiments and asked their advice. He is democratic rather than autocratic, as some are wont to think. South Carolina likes him. They are encoring him yet, and will until he returns. They hope it will be next year. To them he is a very interesting bishop. He is no figurehead in an Annual Conference. When he is present there is something doing in the conference room and in the cabinet. Something worth while, too. This is a true statement of the case—the side the committee on episcopacy did not hear. I am no special pleader for Bishop Morrison. I have scarcely a passing acquaintance with him. I am in no sense indebted to him. I have never received an appointment at his hands and never expect to. Nor am I in any way indebted to the Church. I served it thirty-seven years on circuits, stations, and districts on half pay. I have never gotten anything through favoritism, for I never was a favorite with anybody. I never was politician enough to work myself into any place even if I had wanted to do such an unworthy act. I have always taken my appointments, stood in my place, and done my work without fear or favor. I have nothing to complain of. I am a supernumerary now, living better than ever before, doing all the work my hands find to do. I am as cheerful, happy, and hopeful as any man on the American continent. I am, therefore, in a position to judge this matter without favoritism or prejudice. There was absolutely no ground for complaints against Bishop Morrison from South Carolina. And from what I can learn by contact with other parts of the connection, the same would be found to be true of other Conferences. If the rank and file of the preachers and the laity could be heard. If the committee had information from all sources they would not have made the criticisms they did. Bishop Morrison is stronger with the body of the Church to-day than ever. We are glad he has only one less appointment than the youngest and strongest of the bishops.—G. T. Harmon, in The Southern Christian Advocate.

THE BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Meek: From the standpoint of the host, I desire to say a word about our recent District Conference, which was held at this place. It might be more fitting for some one else to write it up, but as yet nothing has been said.

The Conference was indeed a success. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. J. W. Lee of Kentwood, Friday night, May 27, on the subject, "Behold the Man." The business of the Conference opened Saturday morning, with Rev. C. C. Miller, presiding elder, in the chair. Rev. R. S. Walton, of Hammond, was elected secretary. Devotional services and appropriate introductory remarks were made by the presiding elder. An address of welcome was delivered by W. H. Sullivan, General Manager of the Great Southern Lumber Company, which was instructive and enjoyed by all who heard it.

All the pastors were present but five, viz., of Mt. Hermon, Ponchatoula, East Feliciana, Zachary and Live Oak. The reports showed the churches in good condition, and the optimistic spirit seemed manifest. We had the largest representation of lay delegates known for many years. The attendance was unusually good, notwithstanding the long and expensive trip and circuitous route to the extreme eastern town.

The Conference was a benediction to the town and to our church. All the brethren expressed themselves as having had a delightful stay in Bogalusa.

On Saturday we had with us Rev. R. W. Vaughan, manager of our Methodist Orphanage, who was accorded the 11 o'clock hour to represent the cause of the "little folks." A resolution was passed, asking the pastors of the District to endeavor to raise, as a minimum amount, an average of fifty cents per member for the Orphanage.

A sermon was preached in the afternoon by Rev. C. F. Sheppard, of Second Church, Baton Rouge. At night Rev. S. L. Riggs preached to a full house on "The Holy Spirit." The day, Sunday, was entirely given to religious work. At 9 o'clock a love-feast was conducted by Rev. L. C. Wilson, of Franklinton, and the 10 o'clock hour was given to Judge R. R. Reid who delivered a masterful address on the Laymen's Movement. Rev. J. M. Brown, of Clinton, occupied the pulpit at 11 o'clock, after which the communion of the Lord's Supper was administered by the presiding elder. This was an inspiring scene. All the ministers, forming a semi-circle about the chancel, knelt together and commemorated the death of the Lord. Afterwards a large per cent of the congregation, consisting of all denominations, came forward and participated in the service.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon, Rev. J. A. McCormick, of Greensburg, preached a soul-stirring sermon on missions. This was said by some to be the "Pentecost" of the Conference.

At night, Rev. J. M. Henry, D.D., of First Church, Baton Rouge, preached an able sermon to an Annual Conference congregation. Great crowds were turned away at the door who could not get in. All the preaching was of a high order and had the Methodist ring.

The next day, Monday, being the last day of the Conference, was devoted to hearing reports of pastors, committees, and election of delegates, etc. Prominence was given to the Laymen's Missionary Movement and, in open Conference, was ably represented by J. R. Abels and Wm. Jackson, of Ponchatoula. The latter was chosen as field worker in the district and an assessment was ordered to cover his expenses.

Delegates to the Annual Conference were elected as follows: G. O. Denham, of Baton Rouge, and J. R. Abels, of Ponchatoula, on the first ballot; and Hon. B. D. Talley, of Bogalusa, and Rev. H. C. Murphy (local preacher) of Pine Grove, on second ballot. Wm. Jackson and Wm. Rounds were chosen as alternates.

On Monday, the last day of the Conference, we were honored with the presence of the following brethren from New Orleans: Revs. W. W. Holmes, A. S. Lutz, H. T. Carley, C. D. Atkinson, L. A. Sims, A. I. Townsley, J. F. Foster, and J. L. Sutton, who were formally introduced to the Conference.

Brother Miller presided over the Conference with marked ability and there was perfect harmony throughout the session. The next District Conference will be held at Franklinton.

We were sorry not to have the editor of the Advocate with us.

After resolutions of thanks were read and adopted, one of the most harmonious and pleasant Conferences ever known in the Baton Rouge District came to a close, and we said "good-bye" to a body of ministers and laymen, than whom there are none more faithful and true. Each left feeling better prepared and more determined to do the great work committed to his care. JOSEPH MARTIN ALFORD.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Greenville District Conference convened at Tunica, Miss., June 16, 1910, with the presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Woollard, in the chair. There were present at the Conference, 17 preachers and 44 laymen. The following visiting brethren gladdened our souls with their presence: G. W. Bachman, the efficient Conference Colporteur; Rev. W. M. Williams, the skilled manager of our Orphans' Home at Jackson; Rev. J. H. Barrington, of the White River Conference; Rev. J. M. Wyatt, the genial manager of the Oxford Training School, and T. B. King, the enthusiastic and able lay leader of the Memphis Conference.

After devotional exercises conducted by Rev. L. A. McKeown, this scribe was chosen secretary, and the business of the Conference was at once taken up.

The report of the pastors showed that our preachers and members are at work and are making progress. There was a happy note sounded in the report

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?
GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH
LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.
736 Union Street. Phone, Main 535.

of each pastor. Everyone seemed happy and hopeful. The reports showed that forty-four per cent of the assessment for pastor's salary, fifty-one per cent of the assessment for the presiding elder and thirty-seven per cent of the assessment ordered by the Annual Conference have been paid. This is by far the best showing ever made by the Greenville District for the first six months of the year. For this good showing and these prosperous conditions under which we labor, we each are profoundly thankful to God.

On account of the decease of his wife, Brother Wasson, our pastor at Friar's Point, could not be present at the Conference. His brethren deeply sympathized with him in his bereavement and passed resolutions expressing the secretary to express to him the sympathy, love, and prayers of the Conference for him.

One of the first things done by the Conference was the passage of the following resolution relative to Vanderbilt University:

"Whereas the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, in its session at Asheville, N. C., and after a full hearing, participated in by the president of the Board of Trust and the Chancellor of Vanderbilt University and their sympathizers, affirmed by an almost unanimous vote, in unequivocal terms, the full and complete ownership and control of the University by the Church and elected members to fill the vacancies on the Board of Trust of said institution; and

Whereas the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University has declined to recognize said election and refused to seat the members elected by said General Conference, therefore be it resolved by the Greenville District Conference of the North Mississippi Conference, of the M. E. Church, South, in session at Tunica, Miss.,

First—That we unqualifiedly condemn this act of contumacy and disloyalty upon the part of said Board of Trust, and that we demand the resignation of those officers and members of said Board who voted for or favored said action.

Second—That we demand the expulsion from the faculty of Vanderbilt University of all officers, professors and instructors who have engaged in fomenting the spirit and acts of disloyalty to the Church which have characterized that institution during the recent past.

Third—That we cordially approve and commend those members of the Board who, as true and loyal sons and representatives of the Church, have opposed this program of disloyalty and alienation. In particular do we applaud the conduct of our beloved and honored senior Bishop, A. W. Wilson, who emphasized his protest by withdrawing from the Board.

Fourth—That we hereby pledge to our College of Bishops our loyal co-operation and support in whatever steps they may take to expel this alien and disloyal element from the University and restore the institution to the hands of the Church."

At a meeting of the laymen held on Thursday afternoon, Brother J. H. Sherard was re-elected as lay leader of the district.

The following were elected as delegates to the Annual Conference at Sardis, Miss., which will convene in November: J. H. Sherard, J. D. Barbee, W. B. Nichols, and J. D. Parmer. As alternates: T. W. Dye and J. H. Johnson.

On Thursday evening, Brother T. B. King, lay leader of the Memphis Conference, delivered a most helpful address to the Conference on the fourth chapter and fourth verse of the Gospel by St. John: "And he must needs go through Samaria."

The preaching of the Conference was very ably done by Brothers R. L. Allen, of Shelby; W. S. Lagrone, of Greenville, and W. W. Woollard.

Though we had with us no representatives of the educational institutions owned by the Conference, nor from the Conference organ, still the interest of each was voluminously, if not wisely, considered by those of our number who are inclined to "prolixity." This scribe had prepared him a great speech for utterance at the Conference, but his experience was like that of the woman who had a wonderful goose about which she wished to speak to a company of ladies with whom she was spending the afternoon. When there was a moment's lull in the conversation she would begin: "My goose," but owing to the fact that the other party had only paused for breath, she never got beyond "My goose." However, the speeches made were so good, and to the point, that I am sure nothing was lost by the failure of my speech to materialize and by the absence of the "connectional" brethren, save the pleasure of seeing them face to face.

The people of Tunica were very kind indeed to the Conference. They added to our already great joy and delight by taking the members "autoing" on Friday afternoon.

The Conference closed at 12 o'clock Friday to meet at Jonestown, Miss., in 1911.

Brother Honnoll followed the Conference with a few days' services, being assisted by Rev. J. H. Barrington, of the White River Conference.

J. TILLERY LEWIS, Secretary.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference for the Vicksburg District was called to order by the presiding elder, Rev. G. H. Galloway, at Mayersville, Miss., at 9:30 on the morning of the seventh day of June. The presiding elder led in the devotional exercises, and from the very beginning, there was felt a wonderful influence of the Spirit. All of the preachers of the District, but two were there; one of this number was kept away because of sickness in his family. There were twelve or fifteen laymen from the various charges present as delegates.

The reports from the District show quite an improvement over the work of last year along all lines, especially the spiritual state of the Church. The ringing note was that we are having, or are expecting a great revival during the year. Not only that, but finances are in a much better shape than heretofore.

But the spiritual side of the conference was by far the important part. I heard several of the preachers state that they had been to many District Conferences before, but that they had never been to one so permeated with the fire of the Holy Ghost. Bro. Galloway opened each session with devotional exercises of heart experience that went home to each of the hearers. These talks or expositions of the Scripture were simple, but full of force. The preaching was done by J. L. Neill, M. M. Black, W. A. Terry, and J. E. Samplly. Brother Samplly's sermon on the "Human Soul," was a fitting climax and close to the entire session. Many during the conference asked for prayer and others testified of the spiritual good that had come to them through these meetings.

The missionary interests of the Annual Conference and of the foreign field were ably represented by Bro. M. M. Black. Bro. Hawkins gave a good account of the work being done in the school under his care. His report showed a better attendance and a higher grade of work being done at Port Gibson Female College than for years before. Our parents could not do better by sending their daughters elsewhere.

Two young men were given license to preach. Brother R. E. Selby, a cousin of our Brother Selby, of Natchez, was one. He is now a student at Millsaps College and comes highly recommended for the work done there during the past session. He intends to take his degree at Millsaps and then go to Vanderbilt.

Bro. C. A. Massey, the seventeen year old son of our Bro. J. M. Massey, was the other. He has been in school the past year at Montrose, in the Conference Training School, and expects to go to Millsaps until he graduates there.

The next session of the conference goes to Hermitage, and if we are as cordially entertained as at Mayersville, the people will have to begin the preparations days beforehand. The older men in attendance at Mayersville say that they had never met with such openhearted, free, and spontaneous hospitality as was accorded us there. The ladies of the town tendered us a reception on the Court House lawn where all the delicacies that would tend to cool and gratify the preacher's desire, were served. During this reception an informal meeting was held in the Pythian Hall, presided over very gracefully by the pastor, Bro. Gunn. The preachers were welcomed to the town by the young county attorney, Jefferson Davis Pharis. The master of ceremonies called on J. L. Neill, W. A. Terry, F. R. Hill, and G. H. Galloway for impromptu speeches, and the minutes passed rapidly and pleasantly. We all owe a debt of thanks to Brother Gunn and his loyal members and the citizens of Mayersville for the friendly hospitality that was ours during the stay there.

The Licensing Committee, as appointed by the Presiding Elder is composed of Rev. W. H. Saunders, J. L. Neill, M. M. Black, G. P. McKeown, W. A. Terry and H. G. Hawkins. The delegates to the Annual Conference are G. P. Hackett, M. M. Satterfield, J. W. Hollinger and R. L. Greer; alternates, M. M. Goodwin and R. E. Selby. M. M. Satterfield, was elected lay leader for the District.

J. L. NEILL, Secretary.

MISSISSIPPI METHODIST HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION.

To the Pastors of the Mississippi Conference:

At the annual meeting of this Association, held in Jackson during the commencement exercises of Millsaps College, I was elected Historical Secretary, and it is my purpose, in addressing this communication to the preachers of the conference, to call their attention to the duties that devolve upon me, and ask that they help me to do efficiently what I was elected to do.

It is my duty to secure from every pastor a historical sketch of every church in the Conference. This sketch needs to be brief, and yet it is necessary for it to be full enough to be of value to the Association as a record to be preserved in the archives of the Conference.

There is only one way for me to get these sketches, and that is for the pastors to get them up as soon as they can and forward them to me.

I sincerely trust that the brethren will respond to this appeal so that it will not be necessary for me to address a personal letter to each one. If it becomes necessary for me to do so, I shall address each one; but that will require a great deal of postage, and time that I should be allowed to give to my charge.

I am the second man who has been elected to this position, Dr. T. B. Holloman being the first, and I am anxious to finish the work by the session of the Conference at Hattiesburg in December.

Now, brethren, "lend me your ears," and send me the sketch or sketches of your church or churches, and you shall have my profound and hearty thanks. Yours for "Historical Sketches,"

ROBT. SELBY.

Natchez, Miss., June 21, 1910.

MEETING OF THE GENERAL BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The General Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South, met in the Methodist Publishing House at Nashville, Tenn., Thursday, June 23rd, 1910. The following members were present: Bishop E. E. Hoss, Bishop W. B. Murrah, Dr. J. W. Blackard, Dr. I. W. Cooper, Rev. T. F. Brewer, Dr. W. F. Tillett, Prof. H. N. Snyder, Prof. R. F. Flowers, Rev. J. W. Vaughn, and Rev. J. S. French. Bishop Hoss was elected president, and Dr. W. F. Tillett secretary, pro tem. Routine work and the appointment of committees occupied the greater part of the forenoon. The Committee on the Classification of Colleges is as follows: H. N. Snyder, of Wofford College; W. F. Tillett, Vanderbilt University; R. F. Flowers, Trinity College; I. W. Cooper, Whitworth College, and the Secretary of the Board of Education. The Board adjourned at noon to meet at 2:30 p.m. At the afternoon session Dr. Stonewall Anderson, formerly president of Hendrix College, was elected Secretary of the Board in place of Dr. J. E. Dickey, who resigned.

The Board is reported to have gone fully into the Vanderbilt question, but was reticent as to what was done. The Nashville Tennessean thus speaks of their action:

"In a long session lasting all day Thursday and a short while at night, the Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, rallied to the side of the Church in the Vanderbilt University controversy.

"Not only did they instruct the treasurer of the Board to honor any draft that may be drawn on the Board by the Bishops for the purpose of defraying any expenses incident to the defense of rights of the Church in the controversy, but they also unanimously instructed the Secretary to render the Bishops any other assistance that they might need. Such action on the part of the Board leaves no doubt as to the position of its members on this all important question.

"Further, the Board adopted resolutions to the effect that in their judgment the attempt of the Board of Trustees of Vanderbilt University to elect trustees without the confirmation of the Board of Education of the Church was an unlawful proceeding and, therefore, could not be regarded as giving the gentlemen named a valid right to the position of trustees. The Board was unanimous in this action."

Inquiry of the Bishops on the Board failed to disclose the time at which the Episcopal College will meet to take up the Vanderbilt matter, but it is understood that it will be called upon to assemble at an early day.

LAFAYETTE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Lafayette District Conference met at Eunice, La., on June 8, with Rev. J. E. Denson, P. E., in the chair. The sessions were well attended by the preachers, only one of the active pastors being absent. The laymen were few in number, but made up in quality what they lacked in numbers.

The reports of the preachers were encouraging. They are hopeful and optimistic for the future. The reports showed a decided improvement in finance. A number of the charges have adopted the weekly envelope system and the result is, wherever tried, that the finances are up, and in some instances overpaid to date. Where this system is not used the reports were very good, but only in one or two instances were they in full. The spiritual condition is improving. There has been a number of accessions, some coming through revivals and some through the use of "Decision day" in the Sunday schools. The life of the Church is finding new ex-

Tis often said to make a sale

"It's just as good as LUZIANNE"

Let no such argument prevail, to wean
you from your time-tried friend, LUZIANNE
COFFEE

THE REILLY TAYLOR CO.
NEW ORLEANS, U.S.A.

pression for itself these days, no less vital, but in different directions. There is a decreased attendance at prayer meetings and fewer family altars, but there are more students of the Word of God, and more engaged in active social and religious service. Few laymen go to prayer meeting, but thousands gather and plan how to raise money to evangelize the world.

There were fine reports on the Sunday schools. An effort is being made to equip the church buildings for more effective work. The numbers are increasing, and in almost every instance outnumbered the church members. A number of the pastors are working this most fruitful field. They believe in enlisting the child early in the cause of Christ, and by the method of "Christian nurture," training the child for Christ and the Church. Why should not these children be saved while they are young and innocent, and can be easily influenced? Why wait until they are sin-burdened and then face the much more difficult task of saving them?

The Conference manifested a decided missionary spirit. Within the bounds of the district there are thousands of people who are accessible to the gospel, who are receptive and need its message. Some of these are English speaking people, others speak the French language. Remarkable success has crowned the efforts of the few men we have in this field, and a great opportunity lies at our door.

The Conference organized "The French Missions Committee," consisting of the preachers of the district, and one layman from each charge. This committee will plan aggressive work among these people. About $300 was raised to pay the salary of a native French missionary. A resolution was passed to ask the Sunday schools for about $100 more to finish paying for a gasoline boat used in the work.

The following lay delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: A. M. Mayo, R. P. Howell, W. L. Doss and F. E. Brown; alternates, C. J. Sanders and V. A. Mitchellree.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan made a stirring appeal on behalf of the Orphanage. A resolution was adopted directing the preachers to make an earnest effort to raise 50 cents per member this year. Lake Charles was selected as the place where the next District Conference would be held. M. C. HOLT, Sec'y.

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

ROOMS and BOARD

634 and 636 SOUTH STREET

(Lafayette Square)

Corner St. Charles St. NEW ORLEANS, LA.
Unlimited Meals. Alvin Porter, Mgr.

Modes of the Heavenly Life.

A series of five sermons on the work of the Holy Spirit.

By REV. WALTER G. HARBIN.

Price, 75 cents.

Send to CHAS. O. CHALMERS, 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

Church News

There are 854 Protestant Churches in the city of Chicago. Of these, 213 belong to the Methodists.

By his lectures, Mark Guy Pearce has turned into the treasury of the West London Mission of the Wesleyan Church $55,000.

At the recent commencement at Trinity College the students presented Bishop Kilgo with a beautiful silver loving cup. The Bishop has the happy faculty of winning and inspiring young men.

The number of missionaries of all denominations now at work in foreign fields is said to be 21,334, against 19,875 in 1908. The total number of Protestant adherents in pagan lands is estimated at 4,366,661.

William J. Bryan delivered one of the best addresses heard at the World's Missionary Conference in Edinburgh. A characteristic letter was received from Mr. Roosevelt, the reading of which provoked marked enthusiasm. Both of these eminent Americans are much interested in mission work.

The article on "Methodism" contained in the new Schaff-Herzog Encyclopedia was contributed by Dr. J. M. Buckley. It comprises forty-eight closely printed columns, and is being highly complimented on both sides of the ocean. Dr. Buckley has long been a recognized authority on all matters pertaining to Methodist history.

Dr. W. F. McMurtry, before sailing for Brazil, visited Washington where he purchased a lot for the Mount Pleasant Church at a cost of $19,500. This structure will be erected in a residence section of the city, which is said to be growing rapidly. The Southern Methodists are wideawake and active at the national capital.

A Tercentenary Commemorative edition of the English Bible will be brought out by the Oxford Press next year, the text of the King James Version being used. The committee having the work in charge in the United States met at Princeton, N. J., on Monday, June 20th. The representatives of the M. E. Church, South, are Bishop W. A. Candler, Bishop Collins Denny, and Dr. Gross Alexander.

Mr. Evan Roberts, the Welsh revivalist, who has been living for the last six years in comparative seclusion at Lelcester, has recovered his physical strength, and is now planning new work in Wales. He intends to begin quietly and to avoid overstrain. Mr. Roberts has devoted a great part of his enforced leisure to study, and especially to the study of the natural sciences. — Western Christian Advocate.

The effort to remove from the coronation oath of Great Britain the references to the doctrines of the Roman Catholic Church is meeting with vigorous opposition. A gathering of 3,000 people recently assembled in Albert Hall, where speeches were made and a telegram was sent to King George affirming that any attempt to change the obligations assumed by the sovereign "would grievously hurt the feelings of his subjects."

Rev. O. E. Goddard, who was elected President of Hendrix College, Conway, Ark., to succeed Dr. Stonewall Anderson was finally forced to decline on account of feeble health; so Dr. A. C. Millar was chosen to fill the place on the 14th inst. The Western Methodist says that he was one of the strong factors in the making of the institution and that its high rank as a college was achieved under his former administration, which ended eight years ago.

FROM BROTHER BROGAN.

Dear Brother Meek: After a brief illness of only a few days, Brother L. D. Worsham, pastor of our church at Mathiston, died June 21st, and will be laid to rest at Pontotoc to-day. In the death of Brother Worsham the Church has lost a good man and true. He was faithful to every trust the Church imposed upon him, and discharged to the full the delicate duties and responsibilities bound up in his office as an itinerant minister. His last hour was one of great peace. The prayers of the whole Church go out to the stricken ones in this great bereavement.

Professor Hull's election to the presidency of Millsaps College has gratified his many Starkville friends. No better man could have been found.

Fraternally, W. E. M. BROGAN.
Starkville, June 22, 1910.

REV. L. D. WORSHAM LAID TO REST.

Dear Brother Meek: Last Tuesday we held the funeral obsequies of Rev. L. D. Worsham in the Methodist Church at Mathiston, Rev. J. E. Thomas, his presiding elder having charge of the service. It was an impressive occasion. The house was crowded and manifest sorrow and sadness were shown by the people over the loss of their pastor.

Brother Worsham had been sick for several days, but was up and out in town Saturday, the 18th. But on Sunday afternoon he was taken violently ill, and died of congestion about 3 o'clock Tuesday morning. He suffered greatly, but met death bravely. The casket was placed on the north-bound train and taken to Pontotoc, where he had purposed to go to the District Conference. In the town where he was born and reared, he was buried by Bishop J. H. McCoy at 9 o'clock, Wednesday morning. Memorial services were held in the church, before the service at the grave.

Sister Worsham and their adopted daughter, Hattie Bell, will make their home with her nephew, Brother Hogan, of Starkville.

Brother Worsham joined the North Mississippi Conference in 1870, and had given forty years of active service to the work. Only one of his classmates is now in the Conference, Rev. A. W. Langley, of New Albany.

R. P. NEBLETT.
Columbus, Miss., June 24.

A LETTER FROM REV. I. D. BORDERS.

(The following letter has been kindly sent to us with a request that we publish it, which we take pleasure in doing.)

My Blessed Grandma Allen:

We are all well, I am glad to report. I think our change is proving beneficial to wife's health. She appears to be improving, and enjoys this lovely climate thoroughly. The children are in the best of health, as rosy and sturdy as could be wished. My own health is excellent; better by a good deal than when I was back home.

We are delightfully situated; have never been among cleverer people; have never been so comfortably provided for; have certainly never lived in so beautiful a country or in so delightful a climate. Nevertheless, our hearts turn fondly back to the dear homeland, and to the precious friends we have back there. Could we transport them out here, we should be indeed happy. And among them, none has a warmer place in my heart than "Grandma Allen."

We often think and speak most affectionately of you and of dear Sister Rogers. My mind often goes back to the good old days ago when I used to drop in and have a chat and go on my way better and stronger for having come in contact with you both. How much better pastor I should be now could I live those days over!

Our church here is growing, and slowly, I feel, that we are gaining ground. Our congregations seem to be increasing constantly and the work shows many signs of progress. I have never had a more loyal people; indeed, without meaning to insinuate an offensive comparison, I may declare them to be distinctly superior to any other I have ever had in point of effective and active percentage.

I do not know when I will come back to dear old Mississippi. I shall always be a loyal son, and my feet shall turn thither whenever it seems best, not before. When I do come back I shall expect to find you the same, a benediction to all whom you meet. If in the meantime you have slipped away, I shall know that you may be found again in that glorious land which knows no parting! God richly bless you, my dear, dear friend. Wife joins in heartiest love. Love to all.

ISAAC D. BORDERS.

Hollywood, Los Angeles, Cal.

MID-YEAR MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The mid-year meeting of the Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference will be held at Hazlehurst, Miss., July 31 to Aug. 2. Bishop E. D. Mouzon has kindly consented to be present, and deliver two or three addresses. All the presiding elders are earnestly requested to meet with the Board at said date, and every pastor and lay leader in our Conference is cordially invited to attend this important missionary meeting, which we feel sure will prove to be an edifying and inspiring occasion. The pastors and laymen who expect to attend are requested to please notify Brother W. L. Linfield in advance, of their intention to come. W. G. FORSYTHE, President.

M. M. BLACK, Sec'y Board of Missions, Mississippi Conference.

BROTHER PARK'S PLAN.

The preachers and laymen of the North Mississippi Conference are most earnestly exhorted to fall into line with Brother Park's plan to increase the membership of the Ministerial Relief Association. It is a Conference Brotherhood and already three preacher's families have received aid from the organization this year. Write to Brother Park, to-day.

T. W. LEWIS, President.

June 20, 1910.

NEW ORLEANS PREACHERS' MEETING.

The New Orleans Preachers' Meeting met in the study of First Church on Monday, June 27, 1910, at 10:20 a.m., with the following present: F. N. Parker, L. A. Sims, R. E. Harrell, S. H. Werlein, J. A. Rice, W. W. Holmes, H. T. Carley, C. D. Atkinson, J. F. Foster, A. I. Townsley, J. L. Sutton and A. S. Lutz.

The reports of the pastors follow:

Rayne Memorial—Quiet and pleasant time; have been away for ten days. Good month: 22 accessions, 18 of which on profession of faith.

Louisiana Avenue—Things are moving on as usual; 3 accessions, 2 of which on profession of faith.

Carrollton Avenue—Paid another $500 note on the parsonage. Ten accessions, 9 of which on profession of faith.

Second Church—Marvelous development among the laymen. They conduct the prayer-meetings. We have paid the organ debt. Seven accessions.

Algiers—Two accessions. Children's Day observed with marked success: $54 collected. Large attendance upon the Odd Fellows' memorial service.

Parker Memorial—Remarkable addition to the church and pastor (he being recently married). Financial condition of the church better than same time last year. Attendance at Sunday-school, 160. League is doing good work. Board of Trustees will soon decide on completing the interior of the church.

Epworth—Congregations better than ever. Building is too small. Hope to have the new church under headway soon. Prayer-meetings full of interest.

First Church—Have opened Industrial School, with classes in domestic science, dressmaking, millinery, stenography and music. Free Clinic is open, and promises to be a success. Ten accessions.

Felicity—Some progress made. Interest in the Laymen's Movement good. Three accessions.

R. E. Harrell reported that he is kept busy filling the pulpits for the brethren during their absence. His work as secretary of the Y. M. C. A. demands all his time on week days, and great interest has been shown in Bible study.

J. L. Sutton reported that he is kept busy preaching for the Presbyterians on Sundays.

The presiding elder reported for the charges out of the city, in which great improvements are to be noted. On one of his recent rounds he is reported as having encountered "not the heasts at Ephesus, but rather the beasts of insects."

By motion, the Preachers' Meeting will stand adjourned until September.

A committee on united revival effort is at work trying to secure the assistance of George Stuart and one of our prominent pastors to hold a union revival in October. The pastors are agreed that some united move should be made this fall and have the year close with a gracious revival.

ALBERT S. LUTZ, Secretary.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure.

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McClosky, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec.-Treas.
Geo. A. Hero

SPEARING & CO.,

(Established 1817.)

SAIL MAKERS

AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPAULINS and TENTS.

CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOULAS STREETS

"Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER.

Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co

INCORPORATED.

Secular News and Comment

Houston, Texas, received two bales of cotton grown this year, on June 23. The one first arriving sold for $375, and the other for $50.

It is estimated that 60 per cent of the excavating necessary to construct the Panama Canal has been done. The work is reported to be making satisfactory progress.

Nineteen young ladies graduated in the law department of the University of New York this year, and the prize scholarship was won by one of them, Miss Edith Chapman.

It is reported at Washington that Korea will soon be formally annexed to the Japanese Empire. The scheme is said to have the approval of both Russia and Great Britain.

Yale University has had its banner year in the receipt of contributions. The alumni have given $150,000; and the general donations foot up the sum of $2,232,000. This does not include the Sloane laboratory and other gifts to the science school.

Albert Edward, the eldest son of King George V, assumed the title of Prince of Wales on his birthday, June 23. He is now sixteen years of age. Since 1907 he has been attending Osborne College, where he is said to be a conscientious, hardworking, but not particularly brilliant student. His manner is reported to be sincere and unaffected, and he is much liked by the other pupils.

It is provided by Parliament that in the case of the death of King George V, his wife, Queen Mary, is to be Regent, and the guardian of any child who may succeed him until the age of eighteen. She would as Regent have full power to sign bills and perform all other royal offices. The bill follows the precedent of the Act of 1840, passed on the birth of Queen Victoria's first child—The Independent.

Arizona and New Mexico will be admitted into the Union as separate States. The bill providing for this passed the Senate on the 16th instant; and was accepted by the House two days later. The Constitutions adopted by the new commonwealths will have to be ratified by Congress and approved by the President. But these preliminary steps will soon be taken and two new stars will be added to our historic flag.

The Board of Regents of New York now recognize the medical degree of Tulane University, and the possessor of it is treated as being on terms of equality with the graduates of their own medical colleges. This is quite a distinction, as those sent out by most medical institutions are required to take a two years course in the State before they are allowed license. The academic degrees of Tulane are also given full recognition by the Education Department of the Empire State.

There continues to be much talk of an International Court of Arbitration. Rumor has it that, if it is established, the presidency of the tribunal will be tendered to Mr. Roosevelt, who is said to be the choice of Germany, France, Italy, and Japan. Experts estimate that the cost of maintaining the Court would be about $200,000, which amount would be apportioned among the nations interested. It is expected that the salary of the chairman would be $15,000; and that of the seven other judges $10,000 each.

The dream of centuries has been realized in Germany. An airship passenger service has been established between Friedrichshafen and Dusseldorf, a distance of 300 miles. Count Zeppelin's great craft made the first trip on June 22, carrying twenty passengers and covering the distance in nine hours. It has been announced that a regular schedule will be maintained, and that tickets may be had at present at from $25 to $50. The airship is equipped with a restaurant, which is said to give good service.

For some years it has been customary for an occasional trainload of babies to be brought from New York City for distribution in and around New Orleans, persons desiring to do so being allowed to adopt and rear them. The health authorities of Louisiana in session at Baton Rouge last week declared strongly against this practice and the Legislature has been asked to pass a bill prohibiting it. It is claimed that the importation of these little ones of unknown, and possibly degenerate parentage, tends to increase hereditary diseases and multiply all the ills springing from a corrupt ancestry.

Great commercial activity is now going on in the Chinese Empire. The authorities are bestirring themselves to develop the resources of the country, and the whole world is becoming interested. Some think that China will borrow a billion dollars for this purpose in the near future. In order to take care of the interests of the United States, it is said that an American bank will be organized in that country, with a branch in both New York and San Francisco. It is estimated that the exchange of funds between the two nations now aggregates $500,000,000, and that with proper effort, this can be doubled within two years.

Of the 32,073,965 bushels of corn exported from the United States during the eleven months ending with May, 18,531,049 bushels were shipped from Southern ports. Baltimore led, with New Orleans second, and New York third. The Crescent City made a gain of nearly 2,000,000 bushels, though the decrease in shipment from the entire country was 19,000,000 bushels. The sentiment is widespread that the construction of the Panama Canal will make New Orleans one of the greatest cities of the Western Hemisphere. The directors of the Illinois Central Railroad recently announced in their report that they expect her to "become the natural gateway of the Atlantic-Pacific trade of the vast central territory of the United States."

The Mississippi Immigration Convention which met in Jackson last week was largely attended, and much interest was manifested. Among the best speeches made were those of Mr. C. P. J. Mooney, the brilliant editor of the Commercial Appeal, and Mr. H. H. Ahrens, the well known correspondent of The Picayune. A permanent organization was effected with Mr. Paul H. Sanders, of Laurel, as president. We note on the executive committee the names of Mr. D. A. Saunders, Starkville, one of the most progressive business men of the State; and Hon. John C. Kyle, of Sardis, formerly a member of Congress. Mr. I. G. Enochs, one of Jackson's leading financiers, hid $2,000 for the first certificate of membership in the new organization.

The French Republic is greatly troubled by the low birth rate in that country, and is seeking to increase it by legislation. Among the measures introduced in Parliament looking to this end are proposals to impose additional military burdens upon bachelors over 29 years of age; to make marriage obligatory upon all State employees 25 years old; and to allow supplementary salaries to those who have more than three children. The repeal of the law requiring the equal distribution of estates among the children of deceased parents is also being advocated. Frenchmen are said to be strongly averse to dividing their property. This agitation has arisen out of the recent publication of the vital statistics of the nation, which show that the number of births in the republic during 1909 were 770,000 against 782,000 the preceding year, and that the population has increased only 3,000,000 since 1851.

BOARD OF MISSIONS, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The treasurer of the Board of Missions of the North Mississippi Conference reports the following payments on Missions for the first six months of the present conference year, ending June 16, 1910:

Aberdeen District—	Foreign.	Domestic.
Aberdeen	$100.00	$ 60.00
Amory	32.25	36.50
Derma	10.00	7.15
Greenwood Springs	51.00	21.00
Houston		63.00
Nettleton Circuit		20.00
Okolona		46.00
Palestine		12.50
Verona	74.00
First Quarter	283.75	136.00
	$551.00	$402.15
Columbus District—
Caledonia	$ 30.00	$ 46.00
Cedar Bluff	22.00	28.00
Macon		115.00
Mayhew and Artesia	50.00	30.00
Shuqualak	27.00	5.57
West Point		115.00
First Quarter	5.00	88.35
	$134.00	$427.92
Corinth District—
Belmont		$ 16.00
Dry Run	12.00	9.00
Dumas		25.00
Guntown		35.00
Iuka		55.00
New Albany Circuit	37.00	28.00
Rainey	15.00	10.00
First Quarter
	$ 64.00	$181.00
Durant District—
Ackerman	$	$ 45.00
Black Hawk	7.00	53.00
Vaiden	74.00	48.00
First Quarter		6.00
	$ 81.00	$152.00

Greenville District—
Arrola and Hollandale	$ 31.00	$ 49.00
Boyle	41.75	38.00
Coaloma	42.00	32.00
Cleveland	84.00	64.00
Friar's Point	33.00	55.00
Greenville	100.00	80.00
Jonestown and Belen	51.00	40.00
Leland	48.00	40.00
Lula and Lyon	66.00	50.00
Shaw	53.00
Shelby	84.00	64.00
Tunica	50.00	38.00
First Quarter	93.00	110.00
	$776.75	$660.00

Oxford District—
Grenada	$ 95.48	$ 58.12
Holly Springs		50.00
Lamar		35.00
First Church, Water Valley	155.00	98.00
Randolph	20.00	30.00
First Quarter	7.50
	$277.98	$271.12

Sardis District—
Batesville	$	$ 69.00
Coldwater	52.25
Como	97.00
Courtland		49.00
Crenshaw	15.00	30.00
Eureka		21.30
Hernando	50.00	50.00
Olive Branch	41.00	39.00
Pleasant Hill		11.00
Sardis		83.75
First Quarter		214.00
	$255.25	$567.05

Winona District—
Belzona	$	$ 40.00
Carrollton	90.00	60.00
Eupora		16.40
Greenwood	200.00	110.00
Haveress	28.35	28.35
Kilmichael		10.00
Lambert		15.00
Minter City		15.00
Slate Springs	10.72	7.45
Tom Nolen		22.60
Laymen's Movement	15.00
Greenwood Special	215.00
First Quarter	52.20	95.00
	$611.27	$415.80

Recapitulation by Districts, also comparison:	Foreign	Domestic
	1910	1909
Aberdeen	$ 551.00	$ 808.35
Columbus	134.00	454.05
Corinth	64.00	307.85
Durant	81.00	133.50
Greenville	476.75	399.00
Oxford	277.98	420.25
Sardis	255.25	265.75
Winona	611.27	66.69
	$2,751.25	$3,455.44

S. J. HIGH, Treasurer.

FOR SALE.
The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location; price, including furniture, only $400. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

REMOVAL SALE.
We will move into our new, big building on Baronne Street, next to Hotel Denechaud.
JULY 1st.
We are offering now BIG BARGAINS in CHINA-WARE, GLASSWARE, KITCHEN-WARE, and the Famous LEONARD REFRIGERATORS.
—Agents for Famous Glenwood Ranges—
GAUCHE-CONNOR CO.,
Successors to John Ganche Sons.
614 CANAL ST., Near Camp.

The Home Circle

QUEEN ALEXANDRA AND MR. AND MRS. ROOSEVELT.

The most costly feathers which some ladies like to wear on their hats are called "egrets," and are taken from a beautiful bird called the white heron, which is found in South America, Florida, and other warm countries. These egrets are taken from the mother birds while they are caring for their young ones, and when they are killed the young birds starve to death.

At one feather sale in London in 1906, it is said, there were seventy-two thousand of these egrets offered for sale, which means that seventy-two thousand mother birds were killed, and seventy-two thousand nests destroyed, which would probably average at least three birds each, thus causing the death of two hundred and sixteen thousand young birds to furnish feathers for that single sale.

Queen Alexandra of England will not wear these egrets herself, and says that she will do all in her power to discourage the cruelty practiced on these beautiful birds.

Mr. Roosevelt wrote as follows to the president of the Audubon Society: "Mrs. Roosevelt and myself sympathize particularly in your efforts to stop the sale and use of the so-called 'egrets,' the plumes of the white herons."

Should we not do all we can to follow the example of these illustrious people to stop such terrible cruelty to the poor birds?—Hermes and Greathearts.

THE MORNING GLORY MOTHER.

(A True Story.)

"I don't want to bring in the wood, mother," whined Robert. "I'm tired. My arms ache and my back is tired, and I—"

"Robert," Uncle Jim broke in so suddenly that Robert jumped. "Do you want me to tell you a true story this minute?"

"Ye—yes," Robert stammered. This was a surprise. Uncle Jim's stories usually came at bedtime or when Robert had been particularly good.

"It's about Kobi Asha," Uncle Jim began. Uncle Jim had just started to go to the postoffice, and he did not even sit down. He stood there with his gloves half on and his hat in his hand.

"This doesn't sound like a true story," he went on, "but it really happened out at the ranch last spring."

Robert knew that meant a California story, about the wonderful ranch Uncle Jim owned, where there were acres and acres of strawberries. Robert knew that Kobi Asha must be one of the Japanese laborers who helped pick the strawberries. He had seen many pictures of the queer little brown men working among the plants.

"Kobi Asha," continued Uncle Jim, "lived in one of the small buildings I had put up for the Japs. His mother lived with him. She was a tiny brown woman with a name too long to remember. It meant Morning Glory. Kobi Asha worshiped his mother. He planted wistaria by the door and had all sorts of Japanese plants growing in the little garden, so that she shouldn't feel homesick. One day I saw that Kobi Asha looked very sad. When I asked him what the matter was, he said:

"Mudda seek."

"It's too bad your mother is sick," I answered. "Shan't I send the doctor to see her?"

"I go ask," he said. In about five minutes he was back. "Mudda no like 'Merican docta," he said.

"The next day she was worse, and I told Kobi Asha he need not work. I went to the house about noon. Kobi Asha saw me and came out.

"She yer seek," he said. "She want Chinese docta in Los Angeles."

"Los Angeles is six miles from the ranch. It takes about fifteen minutes to go by electric car. I told Kobi Asha to take his mother. He shook his head. 'She no like him car,' he answered.

"Hitch up and take her in the buggy, then," I said.

"I go see," he answered, but he came right back. "She no like him buggy," he answered.

"She was just sick enough to be unreasonable. She was afraid of street-cars and carriages when she was well, and when she was ill, they seemed more dreadful than ever to her.

"I fix him—I know," Kobi Asha said, after a moment. He went into the house, and I waited to see what would happen.

"You never could guess. Out of the house he came, with his little mother Morning Glory on his back.

"You're not going to carry her," I exclaimed. He gave me a laugh and a nod and started gaily off toward Los Angeles.

"I didn't believe he could do it, but he did. Carried her there and carried her back. The next time I saw her she was well and happy."

Robert stood looking rather uncomfortable while Uncle Jim finished putting on his gloves; then he started for the back door. When his mother came into the kitchen a little later, she found the wood-box full.—Anna Louise Berray, in Sunday-School Times.

HOW THE FIRST SUNDAY SCHOOL WAS STARTED.

One Sunday morning, a hundred years ago, a working man, carefully dressed in his best suit, came out of his house on the main street of the old English town Gloucester, and strolled leisurely down the hill.

The "New Inn" was fronted then, as it is to-day, by a square garden overhung by the carved galleries of the tavern. There was a moss-clad well in the center, and about it were beds of sweet-smelling pinks and columbines.

But the calm of that Sunday morning was destroyed by a crowd of street boys who fought over the flower-beds, making the day hideous with their noise and coarse talk.

The printer—for printing was his work on week days—stopped in the midst of the crowd and looked steadily at the boys. Presently he said to himself: "At this rate those boys will soon go utterly to the bad. That must not be! There are good possibilities in them. Here, boys," he called aloud, "come with me!"

He led them yelling and pushing, down the street into his own quiet house, planning as he went how to keep them there.

"I am going," he said presently, "to start a school for you; now and here. It shall be a free school; I will be the teacher."

The boys received the news with shouts. They were too ragged and grimy to go to church on Sundays. No other decent place was open to them.

The next Sunday his house was crowded with the same class of children.

The idea of a free school on Sunday appealed to every Christian as a most hopeful plan for the rescue of children from wickedness. It spread through the town, through the shire, through England. It was adopted in France and Germany; it made its way to Australia and to the United States. Now, in every country in the world and in every sect there are these schools, in which every Sunday morning the Bible story is told, without money and without price.

In the staid old city of Gloucester they still show you the New Inn and the garden where the boys played, and the old brown house with its peaked roof in which Robert Raikes, that long-ago morning, taught the first Sunday school.—Rebecca Harding Davis, in St. Nicholas.

DR. JOSEPH B. WALKER.

The following is a letter, unsolicited by me, from Dr. Walker, which I received at Conference when I was presiding elder of the New Orleans district and he was confined to his bed in Algiers. It will be read with great interest by those who remember that, shoulder to shoulder with Dr. B. M. Palmer, he stood for many years, the one in the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church, and the other in that of dear old Carondelet, the two being the foremost men of Protestantism in all the South of their day. Through all those years they preached to full congregations and many hundreds of souls were saved and won for God through their ministries of compelling eloquence and divine power.

JOHN T. SAWYER.

Algiers, Dec. 11, 1895.

Rev. J. T. Sawyer, D.D.—Dear Brother: My health is so poor and precarious that I feel it would be unjust to any appointment, as well as to myself, to accept an appointment from the Bishop. I therefore, respectfully ask to be placed on the Superannuated list. Please say to the Conference that I am now in the third month of my sixtieth year as an itinerant Methodist preacher. In October, 1836, I received my first appointment to my first circuit. I was ten years a member of the Tennessee Conference, five years a member of the Mississippi Conference, four years a member of the Texas Conference and thirty-nine years of the Louisiana Conference. I preached forty-seven and a half years without ever being out of the pulpit a month at one time. I am in love and charity with all men. I am more impressed with the scriptural truths of Methodist doctrine and the wisdom and excellence of Methodist polity than ever before. I have received appointments from all our beloved and venerable Bishops from Joshua Soule down to the present. I have served under many presiding elders, and have never received an intentional wrong or oppression. The young men of the Conference will permit me as 'Joseph the aged' to say to them, be men of prayer, men of study, and faithful preachers of the Word, and diligent and sympathizing pastors; then you will have your people's hearts, and having them you will have all that is worth having. I hope to have health enough to meet you at your next Conference; if not, you will know where to meet me. The Lord God of your fathers make you a thousand times so many as ye are, and bless you, as he hath promised you. And now, 'Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things. And blessed be his glorious name forever, and let the whole earth be filled with his glory—Amen and Amen.'

In the best of bonds,

J. B. WALKER."

SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

39th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING JULY 13-20.

The Seashore Camp Meeting is known over a large part of Methodism to-day. Men have attended it from all parts of the Union. The religious services are under the direction of the Presiding Elders of New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences of the M. E. Church, South; and these brethren will be assisted by the best preaching talent that can be obtained.

Preaching under the Tabernacle, Grove, and Cottage Prayer Meetings, and other religious services, will be held during each day and evening, to which all persons on the ground are not only cordially invited, but are expected to attend.

Plan to come this year, and bring your unconverted friends with you. All Methodist preachers will be provided with board and lodging free of charge during Camp Meeting.

A DELIGHTFUL SUMMER HOME.

There is not in all the Southland a more delightful place to spend the summer than on the Seashore Camp Ground. There are ample accommodations and good board.

Many men and women date the beginning of their aggressive service for the Master to a few days spent on the camp grounds. There is a distinctively Christian atmosphere, and the many assemblies as well as the Camp Meeting bring together some of the brightest men and some of the most saintly characters we have. There is no compulsion about attending any of the lectures or sermons, but they are in easy reach and there is a sane and healthy tone, that tends to vigorous thinking and wholesome living.

ATTRACTIONS FOR THE SUMMER OF 1910.

Annual Camp Meeting July 13-20. The Camp Meeting really gives the right to exist to the grounds, and it was for this purpose that Christian men invested their money in this property, in order that men might come away for a season from their other cares and commune with God. We hope for a revival this year.

Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, July 21 to 31. This is the successor to the former Seashore Epworth League Assembly. It has simply broadened the scope of its work. While not undertaking to do especially evangelical work, but rather to train the young people how to work, this assembly usually numbers many conversions as an immediate result of its work. Some of the gracious revivals that have blessed some of the churches have had their inception in the new motives for service given the young people in this assembly.

For full particulars, address as follows:

In regard to accommodations: R. G. Price, Biloxi, Miss.; or S. G. Meyer, 116 St. Charles St., New Orleans, La.

Christian Workers Assembly: Rev. F. S. Parker, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.

DOCTOR TICHENOR'S
Antiseptic

Accidents Will Happen

You cannot prevent that they come when least expected.
A bottle of.

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

kept near at hand is your best safeguard—the cheapest "Accident Insurance" in the world! It affords immediate and permanent relief from Cuts, Bruises, Burns or Sprains. Keep a bottle in the house—always.

All Druggists 25 and 50 cents.

ANY ONE WHO HAS USED IT!
ASK EVERY

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulner, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

A RIDICULOUS CONTENTION.

The Baptist Chronicle, published at Alexandria, La., in its issue of June the 16th, undertakes to show that Methodists and Baptists are in accord upon the subject of close communion. Its deliverance, (we will not call it argument) attempting to prove this is as follows:

"Methodists and Baptists are not agreed on baptism, its act or its subject; not agreed on the cardinal doctrines of grace; not agreed on church government and some other points. But they are agreed on the observance of the Lord's Supper, as to who should be permitted to partake. To see this agreement we have only to take their Discipline and compare its teachings with the practice of Baptists. In their Discipline of 1894, edited by Dr. Tigert, and published by the M. E. Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., at the bottom of page 199, it says: 'No person shall be admitted to the Lord's Supper among us who is guilty of any practice for which we would exclude a member of our church.' That is good, sound doctrine and Baptists most heartily indorse it. There could be no clearer or more positive agreement. On this point we are certainly agreed. It is cause of congratulation that we are so close together.

"But the agreement is made still closer and clearer by further expressions of the Discipline. On page 128, Question 3, 'What shall be done when a member disseminates doctrines contrary to our articles of religion?' Answer, 'This offender shall be dealt with as in case of immorality.' On pages 124 and 126 it says, 'If the accused be found guilty by a majority of the committee, the preacher in charge shall declare him suspended or expelled, according to the verdict of the committee.' This is another good, sound doctrine to which Baptists most heartily agree.

"According to the above utterances from their laws our Methodist brethren are just as restricted in their idea of the communion as are Baptists. If one disseminates doctrines contrary to our Articles of Faith, he is regarded as immoral, is 'excluded,' if a member, and not allowed to commune. Every Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian and Catholic would come under that class, and therefore should not be allowed to commune at a Methodist table, for they all disseminate doctrines contrary to the Methodist Articles of Faith and preach and practice things contrary to their Discipline. Baptists do not regard others as immoral because they do not believe and practice as we do, but they do not believe any one should commune with us who disseminates doctrines contrary to our Articles of Faith."

A more farcical effort to misrepresent a sister denomination than this we do not remember ever to have seen. To take disconnected paragraphs of the Discipline, put them together, and try to place upon them a strained construction, and affirm that that is Methodist doctrine is a performance most puerile and pitiful. Is it not just and fair where any possible ambiguity in their teachings exists, to let Methodists define their own position? What authority among them has ever advanced the view to which the editor of the Chronicle seeks to commit them? In all the history and literature of Methodism, we challenge him to produce the name of a single person who ever stood for what he, by his patched-up process seeks to make the followers of Wesley stand. Where is the congregation that ever practiced the close communion in which he declares the Methodists believe? Is it not a queer sort of Methodist doctrine that has never found either advocacy or observance by a single member of that Church?

If Brother Boone had desired to be fraternal and fair when he discovered a seeming inconsistency in the Discipline, would he not have made honest enquiry concerning it? And would he not in reaching a conclusion, have let general Methodist teaching and practice weigh more than a single isolated footnote? In the very ritual from which he quotes, the terms of communion are fully and explicitly stated in the invitation to the Lord's table: "Ye that do truly and earnestly repent of your sins, and are in love and charity with your neighbors, and intend to lead a new life, following the commandments of God and walking from henceforth in his holy ways, draw near with faith and take this holy sacrament to your comfort, meekly kneeling upon your knees." There is no doctrinal test here. Nor is there any in the footnote direction, which says, "No person shall be admitted to the Lord's table who is guilty of any practice for which we would exclude a member of our Church." Our brother wholly misses the meaning here. We call his attention to the fact that the language is "exclude a member of our Church," not from our Church. Exclude from what? Why, manifestly from the Sacrament of the Lord's supper—not from the membership of the Church. Directions of a general character concerning the administration of the Sacrament are here being given: if persons should come who prefer to receive the elements standing or sitting, let them have their way; if others should come, who are known to be guilty of practices for which we exclude our own members from the table, exclude them also. Such is the fair and logical construction of the footnote about which the editor of the Chronicle has made so much ado. And when it is properly interpreted, his far-fetched theory is left without a thing to support it and topples utterly shattered to the ground.

But, if possible, even more preposterous is the charge of our brother that Methodists regard all who hold different religious views from them "as immoral." We do not even regard those of our fold who inveigh against our doctrines, and whom for the sake of self-preservation we are bound to shut out from among us, as "guilty of immorality." Such is not the meaning of the expression that, if after being remonstrated with, they persist in sowing error or dissension, they shall be treated as "guilty of immorality." That only means that the course of judicial procedure shall be the same in the two cases; that the sower of dissension shall have the complaint against him presented in writing and be accorded the privilege of trial by committee, just as is done when one is accused of immoral conduct. It does not most remotely insinuate that the man who antagonizes our teachings is to the slightest extent guilty of any moral obliquity. If after withdrawal or expulsion he should present himself at our communion table, he would be admitted. No church in existence is more tolerant of those who hold theological views different from hers, than is Methodism. Wesley's great challenge to every believer was, "If thy heart be right with my heart, give me thy hand." And his followers recognize as brethren and sisters beloved, Christians of every name and denomination.

We do not know how well informed Brother Boone is as to Baptist history and doctrine, but what he does not know about the Methodists would make not a few volumes. We do not blame him for trying to hatch up something to palliate the unscriptural practice of close communion; with his brethren in the North repudiating it, and not a few of them in the South beginning to find fault with it, it certainly needs it. But he can as easily prove that vinegar is sweet, that white is black, or that water runs uphill, as he can show that Methodism has ever regarded with the slightest favor a doctrine so narrow, so exclusive, and so utterly out of harmony with the genius of Christianity.

THE DRIFT AGAINST IT.

So far as we are able to judge, the proposal to change the name of the Church seems to have commanded little approval among the rank and file of our membership. On the contrary, the tide of sentiment appears to be setting in strongly against it. In the Texas Christian Advocate of June the 9th, Dr. Rankin, whose espousal of any cause carries with it great weight, says: "The probability is the new name will fail, because it is well-nigh impossible to secure three-fourths of the votes of all the members of the Annual Conferences. One-fourth of the members of the Annual Conferences will easily be mustered against it, and a much larger number in our judgment. At Asheville we personally voted to submit it to the Annual Conferences, as we stand committed to submission on general principles, but in the Annual Conference when the question comes up on its merits we will certainly vote against the change. We opine that a great many did the same way at Asheville, but will vote against it in their Conferences."

Dr. Blair, the accomplished editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, has also recently expressed himself against the movement. Discussing the subject editorially in his issue of June the 16th, he says:

"After all that has been said and written we are convinced that there is not sufficient weight in the arguments for the change to justify the undertaking, and we have no idea that the proposition will run the gauntlet of the Conferences successfully. We think it will be well to hold all this in abeyance till we get ready for some sort of union, when, by common consent, the united Church will take the name, 'The Methodist Church.' This is what we are, but until we find some basis of union, this name is too comprehensive for any one branch of Methodism. We are pleased to see such expressions emanating from sources so influential.

THE NEW PRESIDENT OF MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

At the meeting of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College on the 21st inst., Professor David Carlisle Hull was by a large majority chosen to the presidency of that institution, to succeed Bishop W. B. Murrah. Professor Hull was born in Attala County, Miss., Nov. 4, 1869. His father was a native Mississippian, a local preacher, and a farmer. His mother was a daughter of the Rev. James Glenn Carlisle, who came to Mississippi from South Carolina in the pioneer days, and was an esteemed member of the North Mississippi Conference until his death in 1884. Mr. Hull was brought up on a farm in the county of his nativity, and attended the common schools maintained about the neighborhood where his parents resided. He joined the M. E. Church, South, at fourteen years of age under the pastorate of the Rev. W. S. Lagrone. In 1890 and 1891, he was a teacher in Choctaw County. He entered the Agricultural and Mechanical College in September, 1891, and was graduated with the first honors in June, 1895. While taking his collegiate course, he was especially active in religious work, and made his influence strongly felt in the Young Men's Christian Association. Upon leaving college he taught for several years in leading public schools, making a fine record as an instructor; since 1902 he has been one of the faculty of the A. and M. College, where his faithfulness and efficiency have won him high distinction. He has done considerable post-graduate work, having taken the Master of Science degree at his alma mater, and pursued courses of study two summers at the University of Chicago. Mr. Hull is closely identified with the educational interests of Mississippi, being vice-president of the State Teachers' Association, and has a wide acquaintance among the educators of the State, by whom he is held in highest esteem. He has been a licensed local preacher since 1890, and is a speaker of great force and impressiveness in the pulpit and upon the platform.

Feeling the deepest interest in Millsaps College, of which we have been a trustee for a number of years, we do not hesitate to say that we believe it has fallen into safe hands. So far as we are able to judge, the new President has every requisite qualification for the responsible place to which he has been called. He possesses large native capacity, high character, a well-balanced judgment, and physical strength to stand the strain of hard work. A self-made man, he has been thoroughly tried and found wanting in no particular. Having carefully studied the complex problem of education, he has a comprehensive knowledge of the task which lies out before him. His administrative abilities are beyond question, and his friends are confident that he has the elements of leadership. He loves young men, and has the faculty of winning and inspiring them. Gifted in public speech, he can represent his cause creditably before any assemblage. And best of all, he is sound in Christian experience and faith, and thoroughly loyal to the teachings and traditions of Methodism. When our people learn to know him, they will love him, trust him, and account him a worthy successor of the distinguished gentleman whom he is to follow. Meanwhile, let every Methodist in Mississippi rally to the support of the college, and make the next session far the best in its history. No educational institution in the South should have a brighter future.

PASSED TO HIS REWARD.

As is announced elsewhere, Rev. L. D. Worsham, our pastor at Mathiston, Miss., passed away on Tuesday morning, June the 21st. Though he had been indisposed for about two weeks, he was on the streets the Saturday preceding his decease, and no one dreamed that the end of his pilgrimage was so near. On Sunday afternoon he was stricken with a violent attack of congestion, and though he struggled bravely for life, the tide of battle went against him, and in a few hours his eyes were closed in the dreamless sleep. Brother Worsham was in the 63rd year of his age, and had long been a familiar figure in the itinerant ranks of the North Mississippi Conference. For forty-three years he had carried the credentials of a Methodist preacher, and had served charges in Alabama and Arkansas, as well as in the State from which he passed to his reward. No stain was upon his record; in every field in which he wrought, he left the marks of a faithful ministry and the fragrance of a good name. He had a handsome face, an erect form, and manners most affable and agreeable. The gifts and graces of public speech were his, and, at his best, he was a preacher of unusual persuasiveness and stirring power. He was a successful revivalist, and knew how to touch the hearts of the people and lead them to his Lord. Like the old-time Methodists, he often became manifestly happy, and gave vocal expression to the rapturous joy that filled his soul. But that voice is now hushed; low laid is the well-known form of our comrade and friend, and "the places that knew him on earth, will know him no more." Worthily he wrought; fearlessly he died, and doubtless he has claimed the promised crown of the faithful. To the sorrowing ones whose hearts are crushed, we extend profoundest sympathy, and commend them to the care of him who knoweth our sufferings and is "touched with the feeling of our infirmities."

PERSONAL.

Bishop Hoss was slated to be the guest of Dr. Theo. Copeland, in St. Louis, last Sunday.

How about your renewal to the Advocate? The paper needs the money. Are you not willing to help your Conference organ?

Bishop W. B. Murrah will continue to reside at Jackson, Miss., where he should be addressed by those desiring to correspond with him.

Bishop McCoy attended two district conferences in North Mississippi last week. The brethren are enthusiastic in their commendation of his work.

We have received an interesting account of the World's Missionary Conference from the facile pen of the Rev. N. E. Joyner. It will appear in our next issue.

The parsonage home of the Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Saunders, of Vicksburg, has lately been brightened by the arrival of a sweet little girl. The Advocate extends hearty congratulations.

The North Mississippi Epworth Leaguers have pledged themselves to raise funds to educate a young man at Millsaps College and a young lady at Grenada College. There is no nobler work than this.

Dr. and Mrs. T. B. Holloman passed through the city Tuesday of this week en route to Brown's Wells, in Copiah County, where they will tarry for a season. Sister Holloman has been seriously indisposed lately.

Revs. H. B. Watkins and C. N. Gulce have been conducting an interesting meeting at East McComb. A dispatch to the Commercial Appeal on the 25th inst. stated that the services were attracting much attention.

Rev. H. E. Carter, of Decatur, Miss., has a new church under process of construction at Union, which he hopes to get into by the second Sunday in July. He is in fine spirits, and is much pleased with the general progress of his work.

Rev. J. B. Lawrence, pastor of the First Baptist Church, of this city, is striking some vigorous blows for the enforcement of the Sunday laws in New Orleans. He deserves hearty commendation for his fearless advocacy of civic righteousness.

Rev. H. N. Brown, of Morgan City; Rev. J. D. Nesom, of Sulphur City, and Rev. Wm. Schuhle, of West Monroe, passed through the city Tuesday, en route to the seat of the Seashore Divinity School. Brother Brown kindly handed in a number of subscribers, for which we heartily thank him.

Rev. G. H. Galloway, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, reports that his District Conference recently held at Mayersville, was highly satisfactory. He lately assisted Rev. J. H. Ingram in a series of revival services at Glenn Allan, where his preaching made a profound impression.

We are indebted to the Church Extension Board for a Church Extension Map and a Loan Fund Thermometer. Dr. McMurry requests us to say that these charts will be furnished free to such Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues as will give them a place on the walls of the room in which they meet.

Writing from Crawford, Miss., Rev. R. M. Evans says: "We are raising money to build a new house of worship here. We have been carefully planning for Children's Day, which promises to be an occasion of much interest. We are busy and hopeful in our work." Brother Evans serves a choice and faithful people.

Bishop Murrah and Dr. L. W. Cooper attended the meeting of the General Board of Education in Nashville last week, of which they are members. The latter was made one of a committee of five to classify the colleges of the Church, and was instrumental in having Homer College, La., placed on the list of beneficiary negro institutions.

Dr. Theo. Copeland, who had arranged to spend the summer in Europe, has been detained at his home in St. Louis by the precarious physical condition of his babe. He yet hopes, however, to be able to make the trip later in the season. We sympathize with our friend in his anxiety, and pray that his little one may speedily recover.

Rev. R. W. Tucker, of the Ruston District, is gratified at the progress of the work in the territory under his supervision. All is moving on nicely. His District Conference will be held at Arcadia, July 1-3, and Bishop W. B. Murrah is expected to preside. The editor appreciates the cordial invitation extended him to be present.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, which recently met in Tupelo, was well attended, and the exercises throughout were interesting and helpful. The addresses of Mrs. Cobb and Miss Watkins especially elicited much praise. The presidency of Mrs. S. M. Thames gave the utmost satisfaction. The next meeting will be held at Cleveland.

Mrs. C. L. Graham, formerly of Robinsonville, but now of Hernando, Miss., writes under date of the 17th inst.: Rev. E. B. Ramsey, of Memphis, is assisting Brother Wendel in a meeting here. Much interest is being manifested; the stores are closing for the services. Few men are more effective than Brother Ramsey in revival work.

We appeal to our pastors to help us secure renewals in their respective charges. We do not desire to lose a single reader, but under the law many names will have to be dropped unless remittances are soon made. No preacher can do a better work than to circulate the church papers among his people. They re-enforce his efforts to establish Methodism and the cause of Christ.

On last Sunday Rev. J. E. Carpenter preached his farewell sermon at First Church, Jackson, Miss. An exchange of charges between him and Dr. E. H. Smith, of Tulsa, Okla., has been effected, and Mr. Carpenter is expected to leave for his new field this week. When Dr. Smith will arrive at Jackson we have not been informed, but he is expected to begin his work there at an early date.

Bishop J. H. McCoy opened his services in Arkansas last Sunday by preaching the Commencement sermon for Hendrix College. A more inspiring and uplifting discourse we have not heard in many a month. We have been attending the Hendrix Commencements for about a quarter of a century, but have heard no deliverance more appropriate or more exalted.—The Western Methodist of June 16th.

We thank Rev. L. M. Broyles, of Corinth, Miss., for a nice list of subscribers and encouraging words. He is in his fourth year in his present interesting pastorate, and was never more popular. He is one of the strongest and most useful men in the North Mississippi Conference, and has a habit of winning and holding his people. He preaches to large congregations, and has perhaps the best Sunday school in the State.

Mr. W. B. Inabnet, of Lapine, La., writes us of the death of Brother M. V. Vaughan, which occurred at Eros on May the 7th. Referring to the deceased, our correspondent says: "He had been a reader of the Advocate for more than fifty years. A good man is gone; he was eighty years old." We regret to hear of the passing of the Advocate's long-time friend, and pray that sustaining grace may be vouchsafed to the loved ones left behind.

The many friends of the Rev. J. E. Wray, at one time pastor of the First Methodist Church of this city, but now in charge of the Mulberry Street Congregation, of Macon, Ga., will be pleased to learn that at the recent session of Emory College he was honored with the degree of Doctor of Divinity. Dr. Wray is one of the most brilliant young ministers in the South, and well deserves this new distinction which has been accorded him.

Mr. S. J. High, treasurer of the Mission Board of the North Mississippi Conference, in sending in his report for the second quarter comments on the general situation as follows: "I regret that we are running behind last year, and I hope the brethren will make up the shortage on the third quarter. I will have to make an exception of the Greenville District, which is running ahead of last year." This speaks well for Brother Woollard, and his noble band of co-laborers.

Through the kindness of Mrs. A. E. Wyatt, the recording secretary, we have received a copy of the Minutes of the Thirty-first Annual Session of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference, which convened at Hattiesburg, Miss., on March 24th. The pamphlet is neatly printed, admirably arranged, and contains much useful information. We are gratified to note the prosperous condition of the important work which our sisters have under their direction.

In a recent issue of the Greenville Democrat, Mr. J. D. Barbee publishes a striking communication in which he proves that prohibition has helped that progressive city. He emphasizes the fact that the bank deposits show a half million dollars increase since the saloons went out. Mr. Barbee is secretary of the Washington County Citizens' Committee, which was organized a little over a year ago to suppress the illicit sale of intoxicants, and which has won high praise throughout the State for the efficiency of its work.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer returned from Valden, Miss., on Thursday, the 23d inst., where he had been for a week assisting the pastor, Rev. J. H. Smith, in a meeting. He reports that there were large congregations at every service, and that deep spiritual results were had. He says further that he was royally treated by the people, and that Valden on the hills is first-class. According to his statement, Bishop Murrah and the editor of the Advocate are yet remembered in that community, where they were both formerly pastors.

The appointment of Rev. J. A. Bowen to Ensley, a suburb of Greater Birmingham, came as a complete surprise to him. He was having large success as a missionary evangelist and was much in love with the work. Notwithstanding, he is much pleased with his new pastorate, which is one of the best in the North Alabama Conference. The church is a $40,000 structure, with 20 Sunday school rooms, and the pastor's salary is $2,100. The membership numbers 600, and the Sunday school is as large, or larger. The people of Ensley regretted to give up Dr. Simpson, but are delighted to have Brother Bowen as his successor.

Rev. J. H. Williams, who has for some time been our pastor at Headland, Ala., but is now doing some evangelistic work, called at our office a few days since. Brother Williams will go as a missionary to Cuba about the middle of July. He will preach to the American congregation at Bartle, Cuba. It is also planned that he shall teach school in the present chapel and ultimately erect a school building and a church. Brother Williams was sent as a missionary to Durango, Mex., in 1907, but in 1908 had to return to the States on account of his wife's health. She has fully recovered and will be ready to go with him to the work.

We regret to learn that Mrs. Julia Clifton Blair, widow of the late Colonel John A. Blair, and one of the most useful and highly esteemed members of the Tupelo (Miss.) Methodist Church, passed away after a brief illness on the 19th inst. She was a woman of many noble qualities, and had a wide circle of friends who loved her devotedly. She lived to high purpose, wrought faithfully and well, and has left behind a fragrant and precious memory. Having been her pastor and the recipient of her kindnesses in the days gone, we claim the privilege of mingling our grief with those who lament her departure. May God speak to the bleeding hearts which remain, and comfort them with his gracious presence!

MILLSAPS COLLEGE—A STATEMENT.

The board of trustees elected Rev. D. C. Hull, of the A. & M. College, to the presidency of Millsaps College on Tuesday, June 21, 1910. He expects to go into the field for students, and now we Mississippi Methodists must rise to the occasion and make this new era historic by paying in full our subscriptions to the Endowment Fund. Four years ago we started out to raise $100,000 to add to our Endowment Fund. We have already raised and invested $60,000 of the entire amount. In order to secure the last $10,000 offered by the Rockefeller Board of Education, which is conditional, we must raise $30,000 by Dec. 1, 1910. We have $21,000 of this amount on hand, so that the proposition is this: We must raise $9,000 by Dec. 1 of this year to secure $10,000, which will complete our ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND.

We have on hand about $26,000 in subscriptions, and I ask each reader of these lines, if he or she is in arrears to this fund, to please send the amount to me at once.

A few of the subscribers do not expect to pay the last installment of their subscription until 1911, but I hereby most earnestly urge these friends, in view of our present opportunity to secure the additional TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS, to pay the balance this year, if possible. Surely, we Mississippi Methodists will not falter now when victory is so near and success so easy. Please, friends, put this statement in your calendar, and send me the full amount as soon as you can. Cordially, T. W. LEWIS.

Columbus, Miss.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND

of FURNITURE that

—Lasts a LIFETIME—

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

THIRD QUARTER. LESSON I.—JULY 3, 1910.

PICTURES OF THE KINGDOM.

Matthew 13:31-33; 44-52; Parallel Passage, Mk 4:30-32.

31. Another parable set he before them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is like unto a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field: 32 which indeed is less than all seeds; but when it is grown it is greater than the herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the heavens come and lodge in the branches thereof.

33. Another parable spake he unto them: The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till it was all leavened.

44. The kingdom of heaven is like unto a treasure hidden in the field; which a man found, and hid; and in his joy he goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field.

45. Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is a merchant seeking goodly pearls; 46 and having found one pearl of great price, he went and sold all that he had, and bought it.

47. Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind: 48 which, when it was filled, they drew up on the beach; and they sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but the bad they cast away. 49. So shall it be in the end of the world: the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the righteous, 50 and shall cast them into the furnace of fire; there shall be the weeping and the gnashing of teeth.

51. Have ye understood all these things? They say unto him, Yea. 52 And he said unto them, Therefore every scribe who hath been made a disciple to the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is a householder, who bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old.

Golden Text: The kingdom of God is not eating and drinking, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit.—Rom. 14:17.

1. The Lesson's Meaning.

We conclude to-day a study of the seven parables of our Lord found in the thirteenth chapter of Matthew, including all the five briefer parables in our lesson.

From the days of Bengel to the present the attempt has been often made to find in the interpretation of these parables—seven in number, the symbol of completeness—a prophetic outline of the history of the Christian Church throughout the centuries. Such interpretation is at least suggestive, and strikingly apt as given by Dr. M. B. Riddle in the Sunday school Times. "As the parable of the Sower is especially applicable to the beginning of Christianity, and the seventh parable clearly refers to the close of the Christian dispensation (the end of the world, v. 40) there is some ground for this view. Accordingly the parable of the tares is held to point to the early appearance of error; the parable of the mustard seed, to the early expansion of Christianity; that of the leaven, to the slow pervasive influence of Christian truth in the Middle Ages; the discovery of hid treasure, to the Reformation period; that of the pearl of great price to the present age of investigation and search for what is the highest ideal; and the last (the Drag Net) to the 'end'."

But a more exact study of the points of connection and of difference between these parables, all of which present similitudes to the kingdom of heaven, brings out the following, as a mosaic from various interpreters, chiefly Trench, in his notes on the Parables.

The Mustard Seed.—The parable of the mustard seed is a sort of supplement to the parable of the Sower and the Tares. "In the parable of the sower the disciples had heard that three parts of the seed sown perished, and only a fourth part prospered; again, they had heard in that of the Tares, the further hindrances which beset even this part that remained; lest they should be tempted quite to lose heart and to despair, the Lord spake these two parables for their encouragement. My kingdom, he would say, will survive these losses, and surmount these hindrances, until small as its first beginning may appear, it will like a mighty tree, fill the earth with its branches—like potent leaven, diffuse its influence through all the world."

The Leaven.—This parable would seem at first sight merely a repetition of the same truth; but here, as in every other case, upon nearer inspection essential differences reveal themselves. The parable of the Mustard Seed concerns the growth of the kingdom as it displays itself openly, spreading through the earth. This of the Leaven is concerning the kingdom of God which cometh not with observation, working unseen in the hearts of men. "The gospel hath such a secret invisible influence on the hearts of men, to change and affect them, and all the actions that flow from them, that it is fitly resembled to leaven, so mixed thoroughly with the whole that although it appeareth not in any part of it visibly, yet every part hath a tincture from it."

The Hid Treasure.—We come now to the first parable which brings out the necessity for a distinct choice and act of a man's own will. "A man may come under the shadow of this great tree and partake of many blessings of its shelter. He may dwell in a Christendom which has been leavened, and so in a manner himself share in the universal leavening. But more than this is needed, and more than this in every elect soul will find place. "There will be personal appropriation of the benefits;" and we have the history of this in the two parables which follow—the Hid Treasure and the Pearl. The two are each the complement of the other; so that under one or the other, as finders either of the pearl or hid treasure, may be ranged all who become partakers of the rich treasures of the Gospel of Christ. This first parable refers to those who do not discover that there is an aim and a purpose for man's life until it is revealed to them clearly and unexpectedly in the Gospel. They recognize its value, as unlooked-for treasure found; and, with tremulous fear lest it should be lost again, hide it in the heart until the conditions can be fulfilled necessary to its full possession. Such a character was the Samaritan woman at the well and many another upon whom in their indifference, the Gospel has suddenly come and been recognized in all its infinite value.

The Pearl.—This parable differs from the preceding only in that the merchantman was seeking goodly pearls and at last found the best, and sold all to obtain it. The other was not seeking the treasure, but both have the merit of appreciating it when found. The seekers for goodly pearls, those hungering and thirsting for God and for his truth, constitute the nobler and the smaller class. Such a man was Augustine, as revealed in his confessions, and Justin Martyr, who tells how he had gone through the whole circle of Greek philosophy, seeking in vain for something which would satisfy the longings of his soul, and never finding what he wanted, till he found it in the Gospel of Christ.

The Draw Net.—This parable is very similar in meaning to that of the Tares in the Field, discussed at length last week, and confirms the position then taken that the visible Church is pictured as containing both good and bad until the final separation. There is this difference, however, between them. The central truth in the parable of the tares is the present intermixture, which man cannot prevent, of good and bad. The point of emphasis in this parable of the draw net is the future separation when the net is brought to shore for not all who come within the meshes of the net are on examination found to be worthy.

II. The Lesson's Message. Points to Impress.

1. "Despise not the day of small things," in teaching lesson after lesson, preaching sermon after sermon, making visit after visit, praying prayer after prayer, for this is the sowing of the mustard seed, the placing of the leaven in the dough, the outcome of which we yet may wonder over and rejoice in.

2. The truth of God works hidden and unseen in the hearts of men, as leaven in the dough. We must then beware of the temptation to say nothing is being accomplished by all my labors, so I had as well give up.

"Thou knowest not which shall thrive. The late or early sown."

Grace keeps the precious germs alive. When and wherever strewn.

3. The leaven must be different from it if it is to act upon the lump. So the Christian must be different from the world in purity, in love, in devotion, if his presence in it is to exert upon it an uplifting influence. Some of us have not enough of the yeast quality.

4. It should be our aim as ministers and Christian workers so to present the Gospel that it may appeal to men as before unappreciated, new-found treasure, for which they may well renounce all.

5. Have you found the Pearl of great price, and is He to you above all? "To them that believe Christ is precious."

For Impaired Nerve Force Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate. It quicks and strengthens the nerves, relieves exhaustion, headache and impaired digestion.

DON'T BE WITHOUT WATER.

There is no need of the property holders of this city being any longer without water and sewer connections. This has been the one great distress of our city, not being able to have modern improvements in our homes, but now there is no need of any more complaints along this line, as the city is perfectly willing to connect free any property with the water main, carrying the pipes to the property holders line, without any cost whatever to them.

The popular firm of C. C. Hartwell & Co., on Baronne Street, are making a liberal proposition to connect the sewer pipes free of charge. They also go farther, and agree to do all plumbing and laying of pipes necessary to connect the house with the sewer and water on monthly payments. This enables the property holder to not only put the property occupied by him but any property he has for rent in modern shape, with practically no outlay of ready cash. People interested in this proposition should consult C. C. Hartwell & Co., for a detailed explanation.

Bowlden Bells
CHURCH & SCHOOL Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

Hot Sun—Dusty Roads

By the time you reach town and light you'll be hot and tired and your throat dry with dust and thirst. Hunt up a soda fountain and treat yourself to

A Glass or a Bottle of

Coca-Cola

Just as cooling as the bottom step in the spring house. You'll find it relieves fatigue too, and washes away all the dust and thirst as nothing else will. It touches the spot.

Delicious—Refreshing—Wholesome

5c Everywhere

Our Free Booklet

"The Truth About Coca-Cola" tells all about Coca-Cola—what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial. It gives analyses made by scientists and chemists from coast to coast, proving its purity and wholesomeness. Your name and address on a postal will bring you this interesting booklet.

THE COCA-COLA CO.,
Atlanta, Ga.
3-R

Whenever you see an Arrow think of Coca-Cola

Tidings from the Field

Winona, Miss.:

We have recently had a fine meeting in Winona. Rev. V. C. Curtis did most of the preaching, and he did it well. His sermons were strong, spiritual, and very effective. The people of all denominations were not only delighted, but edified and moved up on higher ground. The services grew in interest from the first to the close. Eighteen were added to the church. I know of no better help than Brother Curtis, of Coldwater.—J. A. Hall.

Artesia, Miss.:

"Children's Day" was duly observed at the Artesia Sunday school, North Mississippi Conference, June 12, at night. The work was directed by the enterprising Supt. Mr. A. T. Mellwain and his prompt and competent teachers.

All the people took interest and "standing room" was at a premium. The program was elegantly rendered and "well done" was the verdict. The collection was $8.12. The Artesia Church is O. K., anyway; and the only one in the Columbus District at which 100 per cent of the membership support the church, so said the layman's committee report at the District Conference. The other churches even up to the least of them, should now "sit up and take notice."—A. H. Williams.

Olive Branch, Miss.:

"Children's Day" was observed at the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Olive Branch, Miss., Sunday evening, June 19. The program was excellent and well rendered, showing talent not only in the children, but in the three girls who had the entire responsibility of drilling them. These girls who had the service in charge are Carrie Evans, Nellie Murry and Susie Daniels. They are Sunday school pupils and Epworth Leaguers, and the oldest is only sixteen. The pastor, Rev. R. W. Evans, showed the sentiment of everyone present when he thanked the girls who had wrought so well, and the children who had performed their parts so perfectly, and told them how we had enjoyed the performance and how much better we felt for having seen it. To these girls belong all the honor and praise. May they ever put forth their noblest efforts for the good of mankind and the glory of God!—A. Methodist.

Carthage, Miss.:

Early in the year I received an invitation from our pastor at Carthage, Miss., Rev. A. B. Barry, to come up in May and hold a meeting for him. I accepted, so the 12th of May, I left home and made my way to the capital of Leake County, reaching there at 10 a. m. on the 13th that night opened the battle against sin and for eleven days, by the help of our Lord, we administered the Word of the Lord. The congregations were good at the day services and splendid at night, until the rains interfered. The meeting did not result in as much visible good as we had hoped, however, a number were definitely blessed. To God be the praise. From what I could find out, the charge seems to be taking on new life under the leadership of Brother Barry. Re-modeling churches and building a new, modern parsonage, seems to be the work of the pastor just now, all of which was greatly needed. The parsonage that is being built is a credit to the town, work and church, and a monument to the zeal, faith, and industry of the pastor. It is a five-room house, with a wide hall, and fine porch. It is well arranged and has nice windows. It will be nicely papered throughout, making, I believe, one of the nicest, most comfortable parsonages in the Conference. Brother Barry is in favor with his people, and the best I could judge, doing a fine work. I predict for him a great year.

It was a real pleasure to be associated with my old friend again, and to enjoy the friendship and fellowship of the home. God's blessings rest on them. A word about the people of Carthage. I found a fine, devout, intelligent people, deeply interested in the salvation of the lost, and zealous for the church work. I find the tracks of G. H. Galloway, J. M. Morse, W. M. Sullivan, and J. W. Thompson, and others, where in former years they wrought for the Master and the church. They still live in the hearts and love of the people, and many were the kind words I heard spoken of them. How blessed such ministries!

J. E. SAMPLEY.

Rocky Springs, Miss.

WANT TO KEEP IT.

Editor of the Advocate: I notice in the proceedings of the Corinth District Conference, held at Blue Mountain, May 3-5, the statement that the district parsonage trustees were authorized to sell the district parsonage, which is located at Booneville, and buy property at Corinth. Now I was a member of that District Conference and was present when the question was brought up and made a short talk, and I want the Methodists of the district to know just what that action was, as I understood it and stated on the floor. It was as follows: That this District Conference authorizes the trustees to make a canvass of the district, and, if after a thorough investigation of the matter, they think it to the best interest of Methodism in the Corinth District, they sell the parsonage at Booneville and buy at Corinth. Now, I have this to say for Booneville. We are out and out against the move. We need the presiding elder and his family; they are worth much to our church and community, and we want to keep them. We nearly paid for the present parsonage, and think we should be allowed to retain it.—Hardy W. Rees.

Booneville, Miss.

MEDICAL STUDENTS GET HOSPITAL EXPERIENCE.

An incident of unusual interest to physicians and medical students is the consolidation of two of the South's leading medical colleges—the University of Nashville, established in 1850, and the University of Tennessee (1876) at Nashville, Tenn. The object of the union is to give to the medical fraternity an institution at which they may obtain practical hospital experience in medicine and surgery. The catalogue of the combined school is now ready for distribution. It shows that twelve laboratory courses are afforded to each student, in addition to the regular lecture and class room work. The advanced students (third and fourth years) spend about three hours each day for two sessions in the hospital wards and dispensary under the direction of the professors, examining the patients, making diagnoses, assisting in treatment and operations, and watching the progress of cases. In addition, each senior student (fourth year) must serve a term as interne in the hospital occupying a room provided for him by the institution and working under the direction of the House Surgeon. In this way the student gains a familiarity with the hospital methods, which is of incalculable value to him in after years.

Students and parents desiring catalogue and full information as to expenses and the educational requirements necessary for entrance to a medical college, may obtain same by addressing E. F. Turner, Registrar, 622 Second Avenue South, Nashville, Tenn.

AGENTS WANTED.

WANTED—Good men and women agents at once for "Roosevelt's Famous Hunt for Big Game," also for "Traffic in Girls." Immense sellers. Price, $1.50, 50 per cent commission. Outfit free. Send 15c for mailing. Both outfits 25c. Also district managers for easy payment installment plan. Permanent work. $2,000 to $5,000 per year profits. Particulars free. Address, A. B. Kuhlman Company, Chicago, Ill. 7616.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by U.S.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!

NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

J. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Riehl, Sec. & Treas. T. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd.,
JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. . . . NEW ORLEANS

D. C. Godfrey Optician.

THE VOTAN LINE

VOTAN TEA,

positively, cannot be matched at its price. In perfecting its blend our experts, cupped against teas selling 25% higher and succeeded in producing something still better.

Some tea-drinkers prefer a straight Oolong, others a Ceylon, still others a green tea. Votán is composed of several most delicate and pleasing teas, blending their flavors into an exquisite bouquet most grateful and satisfying. You will not willingly return to the one-tea idea after once trying the Votán blend. Votán Tea comes in quarter-pound, half-pound and one-pound canisters. Order some to-day.

VOTAN COFFEE like VOTAN TEA represents perfection. Make a test of all the so-called "best"; you'll find VOTAN still better. Votán Coffee stands out from the multitude with an individuality all its own. Let your curiosity once prompt you to try it, and your judgment will compel you thenceforth to use no other.

In 1, 2 and 3-lb. cans.

There is an exclusive agent in your town. If not, write us.

The Votán Tea & Coffee Co.
New Orleans, U. S. A.

A Durable PORTABLE Engine

It is easily moved, and being built to resist hard usage, may be conveniently handled in rough, hilly country. The wheels cannot burn from hot ashes or fall to pieces from shrinkage in the weather, because they are built entirely of steel. This feature is complete in every detail. The engine and boiler are put up completely, there being no need of putting into the stack.

We have another portable, mounted on skids, and still another with only the boiler on wheels, and these are resting on a foundation at the side of the boiler. Would you like to have us mail you our free catalog with full specifications? Write for it TODAY.

WHELAND MACHINE WORKS, 2700 Sydney St., Chattanooga, Tenn.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Shreveport Dist.—Third Round.

Keatchie, at Logansport.	July 9, 10
Grand Cane, at Stone Wall.	July 16, 17
Mansfield	July 24
Oakdale, at Hope Well.	July 30, 31
Fullerton, at Murryville.	Aug. 3, 4
Shreveport, First Church.	Aug. 7
Texas Avenue	Aug. 10
Coushatta, at Holly	Aug. 13, 14
Campti, at St. Maurice.	Aug. 20, 21
Ida, at Munlin's Chp.	Aug. 24, 25
Greenwood	Aug. 27, 28
La Chute, at Taylortown.	Sept. 3, 4
Pelican, at Bethel	Sept. 6, 7
Pleasant Hill, at Robeline.	Spt. 10, 11
Mooringsport	Sept. 13, 14
Bossier City	Sept. 16
Zwolle, at Bayou Scie.	Sept. 17, 18
Many, at New Hope.	Sept. 20
Hornbeck, at Holly.	Sept. 22
Leesville	Sept. 23
Bon Ami	Sept. 24, 25
DeRidder	Sept. 25, 26
Langville	Sept. 27, 28
Noel Memorial	Sept. 30

T. J. WARLICK, P. E.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Natchez Dist.—Third Round.

Woodville Ct., at Bethel.	July 9, 10
Liberty, at Salem.	July 16, 17
Natchez, Pearl St.	July 24, 26
Natchez, Jefferson St.	July 24, 25
Fayette	July 25
Washington	July 23
Meadville, at Eddiceton	July 30, 31
Hamburg, at Knoxville	Aug. 6, 7
Homochitto, at Mt. Vernon.	Aug. 13, 14
Adams, at Ebenezer	Aug. 20, 21
Centreville	Aug. 24
Gloster, at Woodland.	Aug. 27, 28
Nebo, at Ebenezer.	Sept. 3, 4
Bayou Pierre, at Sweet	Sept. 10, 11
Water	Sept. 12
Barlow, at Rehoboth	Sept. 17, 18
Wilkinson, at Friendship.	Sept. 24, 25
Scotland, at Galatia.	Sept. 24, 25

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, P. E.

Jackson Dist.—Third Round.

Jackson, Capitol St.	July 3
Thomasville, at T.	July 8
Terry, at Forest Hill.	July 9, 10
Brandon	July 13
Jackson Ct., at Duskio Chp.	July 15
Madison, at Ridgeland	July 16
Jackson, Rankin St.	July 17
Camden, at Thomastown.	July 20
Jackson, First Church.	July 24
Sharon, at Millville	July 29
Yazoo City	July 31
Florence, at Wesleyana.	Aug. 2
Canton	Aug. 3
Mendenhall, at Pinola.	Aug. 13, 14
Lintonia, at Bethany.	Aug. 20, 21
Yazoo City	Aug. 22
Eden, at Phillips	Aug. 27, 28
Benton, at Tranquill.	Aug. 29
Flora, at Livingston	Aug. 31
Harrisville, at Poplar Sps.	Sept. 3, 4
Jackson, Cap'l St. 7:30 p.m.	Sept. 5
Jackson, Galloway Church.	Sept. 7
Deasonville, at Dover.	Sept. 10, 11
Jackson, First Church.	Sept. 12
Fannin, at Holly Bush.	Sept. 14
Canton	Sept. 18

J. R. JONES, P. E.

Vicksburg Dist.—Third Round.

Port Gibson	June 26
Vicksburg, Crawford Street	July 1
Vicksburg, Washington St.	July 1
Silver City, at Midnight.	July 7
Rocky Springs, at Hick-	July 9, 11
ory Ridge	July 16, 17
Rolling Fork, at Cary.	July 19
Mayersville, at Lockwood.	July 21
Oak Ridge, at Redbone.	July 28, 31
Utica	Aug. 4
Bottom, at Raymond.	Aug. 14, 15
Edwards, at Edwards.	Aug. 21, 22
Harriston, at Mispah.	Aug. 27, 28
Satartia, at Satartia.	Aug. 31
Anguilla, at Sunflower	Sept. 3, 4
Chapel	Sept. 4
Hermanville, at Carpenter.	Sept. 4

G. H. GALLOWAY, P. E.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Durant Dist.—Third Round.

Vaiden, at Columbia	July 2, 3
Pickens, at Richland.	July 9, 10
Durant	July 10, 11
Ebenezer, at Bethany.	July 16
Lexington	July 17, 18
Sidon, at Sidon	July 17, 18
Rural Hill, at Macedonia.	July 23, 24
Chester, at South Union.	July 25
Louisville, at Flower R.	July 27
West, at Hebron	July 30, 31
Kosciusko Station, at East	Aug. 1
Union	Aug. 5
Ackerman, at Mt. Airy.	Aug. 6, 7
McCool, at Liberty Chp.	Aug. 13
Kosciusko Ct., at Pierce.	Aug. 14, 15
Sallis, at Shrock	Aug. 20, 21
Black Hawk, at B. H.	Aug. 27, 28
Poplar Creek, at Shiloh.	Aug. 27, 28

N. G. AUGUSTUS, P. E.

Oxford Dist.—Third Round.

Oxford	July 10, 11
Holly Springs	July 13
Potts Camp, at Macedonia.	July 16, 17
Red Banks, at Mahon.	July 17, 18
Watervalley Ct., at Wyatts.	July 23, 24
Watervalley, at First Ch.	July 24, 25
Watervalley, at Main St.	July 24, 26
Paris, at Bruners.	July 30, 31
Abbeville, at Mt. Zion.	Aug. 6, 7
Holly Springs Ct., at Har-	Aug. 13, 14
ris Chapel.	Aug. 20, 21
Waterford, at Laws Hill.	Aug. 27, 28
Coffeeville, at Goshen.	Sept. 3, 4
Ashland, at Wesley.	Sept. 10, 11
Grenada Ct., at Sparta.	Sept. 11, 12
Charleston, at Oakland	Sept. 11, 13
Grenada	Sept. 17, 18
Randolph, at Washington.	Sept. 24, 25
Toccopola, at Tula.	Sept. 26
Lafayette, at Cambridge.	Sept. 24, 25

J. E. CUNNINGHAM, P. E.

MR. M. G. SIGREST.

At his home, March 4, 1910, the spirit of Brother M. G. SIGREST took its flight, and returned to God who gave it. He was born, 1841. He was united in marriage to Miss Isabelle Simmons, the sister of our beloved Brother W. W. Simmons, of the Mississippi Conference. There were seven children born of this union; one boy and six girls. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the year 1888, and lived a faithful member of the same until the end came. He was in feeble health for very nearly twelve months; but during all this time he was patient and submissive to the will of his Lord. And March 5th, we laid him away in the old Shiloh cemetery to await the resurrection morning, when all people shall stand before God. So we would commend the bereaved ones to God, who is able to heal all their wounds. But let us say with one of old, "The Lord gave; that Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

W. E. DICKENS, Pastor.

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND THE SUMMER?

Why not Try Winona Lake Assembly, Situated
on Beautiful Winona Lake in Northern Indiana?

In Chautauqua features equal to Chautauqua, N. Y., in Bible Conference and Sunday School features equal to Northfield, Mass. Largest attended Assembly in America. A series of rich literary and religious entertainments. Bathing, boating, fishing, golf, tennis, and all innocent amusements. Fine Mineral water. Six large hotels, numerous boarding and lodging houses. Write postal and secure free the beautiful Year Book, giving all necessary information. Address:

PUBLICITY BUREAU,

WINONA LAKE, INDIANA.

THE BEST MADE Angell's Cough and Whooping Cough Syrup

For Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs
Colds and Throat Trouble.
Contains no Opium or Morphine.
All Druggists, Price 25 and 50 cents.

VACATION DAYS!

CERULEAN SPRINGS, - CERULEAN, KY.

The ideal place to spend your vacation any time in the year. The one fascinating place that turns "Vacation Dreams" into "Delightful Realities."

Skating, fishing, trap and target shooting, bowling, riding and driving. Modern, up-to-date hotel, surrounded by a beautiful forty-acre park. High, healthy and cool. Malaria and mosquitoes unknown. Seasonable vegetables fresh from our own gardens. Water strongly impregnated with sulphur, chloride of lime, soda, bi-carbonate of lime and free sulphuretted hydrogen, rendering its curative powers most effective, creating a hearty appetite and benefiting the entire system.

SEND FOR CATALOG AND RATES.

CERULEAN SPRINGS HOTEL COMPANY,

Cerulean, Ky.

DON'T BUY PAINT TILL YOU GET OUR BOOK

Here's the difference between Chase's fresh, made-to-order paint and the paint at dealers' and paint that is made after each order is received and shipped the day it is made. Chase paint means fresh paint—made by painters. Dealers' paint is stale—with the longer service, better service. Be sure to write, now, for Big, Free Book and Color Card. Also direct from factory prices, free trial and freight-prepaid offer. The heavy machinery to mix and grind paint. Our paint.

O. L. CHASE, THE PAINT MAN.

DEPARTMENT 17.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

CONVENIENT WAY,

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA,
SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS
ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL,

General Passenger Agent.

Best for socials, collations and children's parties.
Best for every day use. Pure wholesome and economical. Simple to prepare, does not curdle.
EACH PACKAGE MAKES TWO FULL QUARTS.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

is delicious with fruit. With it as a foundation, you can make more dainty dishes at a small expense than you ever dreamed possible. Try at once.
Ask your dealer. Samples free for dealer's name.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.,
121 A Beverly St., BOSTON, MASS.

EDUCATIONAL.

Port Gibson Female College,
PORT GIBSON, MISS.

71st session opens Sept. 14th. Literature, music, art, elocution, stenography, bookkeeping, sewing. Physical culture and chorus work free. Special attention given health and morals. Confers degree of A.B. Preparatory department. Students can reduce expenses by taking duties. For catalogue, address
REV. H. G. HAWKINS, A. B., Pres.

Whitworth College.

Twenty carefully selected teachers and officers. More than two hundred students last session. A most excellent literary course leading to the degrees of L.B. and A.B. Departments of Music, (including piano, violin and voice, culture) expression, art, commerce.

Next Session begins Sept. 8, 1910.
For Catalogue address,
WHITWORTH COLLEGE
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

Campbell-Hagerman College

Resident school for girls and young women. Board and tuition, $300. New buildings. Every convenience. English College. Preparatory, Junior College Courses. Music, Art, Expression, Physical Culture. Students the past year from 16 states. For year book apply to
G. P. SIMMONS, Associate President.
LEXINGTON, KY., 437 West Second St.

Belmont College

For Young Women, Nashville, Tenn.
IRA LANDRITH, D.D., LL.D., President
MISS HOOD and MISS HERON, Principals
College and Preparatory Courses. Music, Art, Expression, Modern Languages, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Matchless location. Athletics. Horseback Riding. Register now. For catalogue, address
BELMONT COLLEGE, Box T.

SOUTHERN SEATING

and
CABINET COMPANY
Manufacturers

HIGH GRADE CHURCH
FURNITURE

Largest and Oldest Makers of Church Furniture in the South
Jackson, Tennessee.

CALENDAR.

Seashore Divinity School, Seashore Campground, Biloxi, Miss., June 28-July 7.

Young People's Missionary Movement Conf., Asheville, N. C., July 1-10.

Seashore Camp Meeting, Seashore Camp Ground, July 13-20.

Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, Seashore Campground, July 21-31.

District Conferences.

Ruston District, Arcadia, La., July 1-3.

Durant District, Pickens, Miss., July 6-8.

Hattiesburg District, Lucedale, Miss., July 14-17.

Book on Opium and Whiskey Habit.

Dr. B. M. Woolley, of Atlanta, Ga., has published a little booklet entitled "Opium and Whiskey Habits and Their Cure." Such a work will not appeal to the public in general, but if you happen to know of any one who should have it, you can do him an act of kindness by sending the "Doctor" his name and address and the book will be sent with the author's compliments. Address Dr. Woolley No. 21 H. Victor Sanitarium, Atlanta, Ga.

Happiness comes from within. It is the atmosphere of an inner calm and peace.—Selected.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN.

A church paper is a partnership affair. As a rule it is started by the preachers and if it lives, it must be maintained by them. They do not establish a paper to make money out of it, but to advance the interests of the kingdom of God. As a rule, a church paper does well that pays for itself. There are vague rumors afloat about some publisher getting rich from a church paper, but it is not well authenticated; and this office never has seen him. The great problem here, is to make ends meet. But a church paper is established in order that the membership of the church shall be kept in touch with the movements of the kingdom, and that the followers of Christ shall be developed to the highest degree of efficiency.

Now, the ends of this partnership cannot be attained unless the partners are active, and all work for this common end. Every pastor who has a true conception of the field of religious literature, will do his utmost to circulate his church paper, not that he may enable it to meet certain financial problems, but because this is one of the most efficient forces in extending the kingdom, and because the Advocate will pay its visits more regularly than any other pastor's assistant.

No matter what success your church paper attains, it fails for you in just so far as it fails to reach your people, and no matter how many good things you may do for your people, you still fall short of what you might do, in so far as you fail to have the aid of the weekly visits of your Advocate in every home on your charge.

We give below the names of some of the brethren who are trying to circulate the Conference organ, and who have this week sent in subscriptions: Rev. S. S. Holladay, Pelican, La.; Rev. W. D. Donlnick, Estabuchie, Miss.; Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Baker, La.; Rev. J. A. Coleman, Lafayette Springs, Miss.; Rev. B. H. Rawls, Seminary, Miss.; Rev. Thos. J. Martin, Ringgold, La.; Rev. W. A. Hays, Bay Springs, Miss.; Rev. L. F. Alford, Newton, Miss.; Rev. J. W. Price, Wilkinson, Miss.; Rev. E. Blizard, Myrtle, Miss.; Rev. D. W. Babb, Verona, Miss.; Rev. W. J. Dawson, Morton, Miss.; Rev. A. A. Martin, Kossuth, Miss.; Rev. W. A. Betts, Montrose, Miss.; Rev. C. H. Herring, Leeds, Miss.; Rev. S. E. Flurry, Mentor, Miss.; Rev. J. B. Fulton, Lanesville, La.; Rev. B. E. Meigs, Oak Ridge, Miss.; Rev. W. J. Newson, Port Vincent, La.; Rev. A. H. Williams, Mayhew, Miss.; Rev. T. M. Burgess, Provençal, La.; Rev. W. W. Perry, Terry, Miss.; and Rev. H. N. Brown, Morgan City, La.

We give below our roll of honor, consisting of those who have sent in twenty or more subscribers during this Conference year:

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, Greenville, Miss.
Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.
Rev. J. M. Carpenter, Booneville, Miss.
Rev. W. E. Dickens, Pelahatchie, Miss.
Rev. T. H. Dorsey, West Point, Miss.
Rev. W. L. Duren, Tupelo, Miss.
Rev. R. A. Ellis, Yazoo City, Miss.
Rev. J. A. Goad, Sidon, Miss.
Rev. E. E. Langford, Brooksville, Miss.
Rev. T. W. Lewis, Columbus, Miss.
Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, Indianola, Miss.
Rev. S. B. Meyers, Louisville, Miss.
Rev. L. A. McKeown, Shaw, Miss.
Rev. J. E. Sampley, Rocky Springs.
Rev. O. L. Savage, Guntown, Miss.
Rev. R. A. Tucker, Kosciusko, Miss.
Rev. T. E. Yancey, Nettleton, Miss.
Rev. W. G. Harbin, Haynesville, La.
Rev. C. F. Staples, Gibbsland, La.
Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Baker, La.
Rev. W. T. Woodward, Haynesville, La.

A SAFE SCHOOL IN TENNESSEE.

You have heard of Ruskin-Cave with its mineral springs? Do you know about its great school? From Florida to Maine visitors come and say, "It's the best place I ever saw for a school." No evils of town or city; entire village controlled by college. It will pay any parent to learn why students come from 20 States and Cuba to this school. Ask for "Character Talks," fine, free book. Address Ruskin-Cave College, Ruskin, Tenn.

Life is not a summer holiday nor a dream, it is a struggle, a battle. The worst wounded are the deserters.—Selected.

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.Fifty-Ninth Session Opens September 14, 1910.

A School for Girls and Young Women. Full Academic Courses. Superior Advantages in Music, Art, Expression, and Domestic Economy. Careful Attention Given to the Development of Christian Character.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS, President, Grenada, Miss.

Memphis Conference Female Institute, Jackson, Tenn.

Next School Year begins Wednesday, September 14. Every facility offered for a thorough education for girls and young women. All departments taught, including besides regular Classical and Category Courses: Music, Art, Expression, Stenography, Typewriting, Business Course, Etc. Charges reasonable. For catalogues, etc., apply to

REV. A. B. JONES, Jackson, Tenn.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute is one of the oldest Female Colleges in the South, having been chartered in 1843. The college has 250 attendants and 125 of them are boarding pupils.

SOUTHERN PHYSIOLOGICAL SCHOOL For Feeble-Minded AND BACKWARD AND NERVOUS CHILDREN

Feeble-minded children are developed into useful and often self-supporting men and women. Send for catalog giving full information. Articulation and Physical Culture Specialties.
Mrs. CORA BRISTOL-NELSON, Murfreesboro, Tenn.

Parents desiring to send their daughters to school should write for a catalog of

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Which has a record of high grade work for half a century, maintaining a faculty of Specialists in the schools of Literature, Mathematics, Science, Languages, Music, Art, and Expression. Beautiful location in most healthful town in State of Virginia. For full information write

REV. S. D. LONG, President, Abingdon, Va.

THE TEXAS DENTAL COLLEGE

HOUSTON, TEXAS

THE SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION BEGINS OCTOBER 4th, 1910.

Offers to the prospective dental students unsurpassed clinical advantages and teaching facilities for the study of the most modern and up-to-date dentistry. Ideal winter climate; Reasonable living expenses, and the most wholesome moral influences.

For full information and catalogue, address the secretary, CHAS. H. EDGE.

SILLIMAN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

A home school for girls, 59th year. Endowed. Modern. Beautiful. Healthful hill country. Thorough courses leading to degrees. Very moderate charges. Illustrated catalogue.

Address, Pres. H. E. BROWFLEE,

CLINTON, LA.

Furniture for School Rooms, made

in the South, of Southern wood, by Southern people, with Southern capital. New factory—one of the best equipped in America, employing skilled labor only.

Lowest Prices—Advantageous Freight Rates

We make Desks, Seats, Teachers' Desks, Book Cases, Library Tables, Magazine Racks, etc. Write for illustrated catalog and price list. Address

W. A. PRICE & SON, West Jackson, Miss.

Ward Seminary Nashville, Tennessee

46th year. Seminary and Special Courses. Conservatory of Music—Emil Winkler, Director; Signor Campobello, Voice; Fritz Schmitz, Violin. 175 Boarding Pupils. Complete appointments. City advantages. Beautiful campus for outdoor sports. For catalogue address J. D. BLANTON, President.

RYDER HALL HOTEL

SALUDA, N. C.

The Ideal Place to Spend Your Vacation—Summer or Winter

Located right on the top of the mountains. Buildings brand new and modernly equipped throughout with hot and cold water, heat and every other comfort and convenience. Private spring water, no mosquitoes and beautiful shade. Bus meets all trains. 15 minutes walk from station. Special Rates to Tourists and Vacationists. Write for Them.

RYDER HALL HOTEL,

SALUDA, N. C.

HOTEL BALSAM

Highest R. R. Station
East of the Rockies

ALTITUDE
3,551

On Asheville and Murphy Branch of Southern Railway, in the ideal section of the Appalachian region—Western North Carolina. New, modern, One-hundred-room hotel. Cold water running in each room from Mountain Spring, 165 feet higher than hotel. Hot running water also in each room. Gorgeous scenery, invigorating climate. Passenger station 200 yards from hotel, with telegraph, express and telephone service.

For rates address Balsam Hotel Co., Balsam, N. C.
In Care Box MRS. W. H. WIGGS.

"For God's Sake Do Something"

We have answered this cry in our new book "Fighting the Traffic in Young Girls" by Ernest A. Bell. S. District Attorney Sims and others. The most sensational indictment of the White Slave Trade ever published. It tells how thousands of young girls are lured from their homes, annually and sold into a life of sin and shame. The Cincinnati Inquirer says: "Of all the books of the season the War on the White Slave Trade is the most helpful; it should be read by every man, woman and child." Agents are making from $8.00 to $17.00 a day selling this book. Over 500 pages. Many pictures. Price $1.50. Best terms to agents. Outfit free. Send for for-warding charges. Book sent to any address post paid upon receipt of price. American Home Supply Company, Pope Building, Chicago.

RHEUMATISM

A CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as those who have it know, for over three years, and tried almost everything. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has not returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and it effected a cure in every case. Anyone desiring to give this precious remedy a trial, I will send it free. Address, Mark H. Jackson, No. 525 James Street, Syracuse, N. Y. Mr. Jackson is responsible. Above statement true.—Pub.

DAISY FLY KILLER

placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Can't spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c. HAROLD SOMERS 150 De Kalb Ave. Brooklyn, N. Y.

Progress Self-Tramping COTTON PRESS

3 Horse Power M.H. Operate. Capacity 25 bales. Write for prices. Manufactured by C. J. HYDE, MERIDIAN, MISS.

HOME REMEDY

Mrs. Tempie Clark suffered for years, before she found relief in that popular, successful woman's medicine, Wine of Cardui.

Mrs. Clark, who lives in Timberville, Miss., writes: "Cardui has been worth more to me than a carload of silver. If it had not been for Cardui, I would have been dead. I love a dollar, but I have never seen one that I do not think as much of, as I do of a bottle of Cardui. I now keep it in my house, as regularly as I do coal oil or coffee, and have done so for years.

"Some years ago I jumped off a horse and had a mishap, and for about four years after that I suffered intense agony. At last I was induced to try Cardui, which cured me, and now I am well and happy.

"I am sure Cardui will cure other sick ladies as it has me."

Cardui is for women. It acts specifically and in a natural manner on the womanly system and has been found to relieve pain and to restore woman's health.

If you are nervous, miserable, or suffering from any form of female trouble, try Cardui. What it has done for other sick ladies it surely can do for you. Sold by all first class druggists, with full directions for use.

WILLIAM W. BLYMYER'S CHURCH BILLS
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Marriages

June 10, 1910, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Sullivan, by Rev. J. L. Red, Mr. ARCHIE D. GATES and Miss ANNA SULLIVAN.

March 15, 1910, at the Cottage Hotel, Iuka, Miss., by Rev. J. B. Randolph, Mr. SAMUEL O. ORSER to Miss BONNIE MITCHELL.

May 12, 1910, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Jackson, Iuka, Miss., by Rev. J. B. Randolph, Mr. BERRY LEE MARTIN, JR., to Miss MATTIE ALLEN JACKSON.

May 30, 1910, in the parlor of the Mineral Springs Hotel, Iuka, Miss., by Rev. J. B. Randolph, Mr. J. A. DAVENPORT, manager of the hotel, to Miss SOPHIA LEE HOLLIDAY, of Corinth, Miss.

June 2, 1910, at "Rose Villa," near Iuka, Miss., the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hill, by Rev. J. B. Randolph, Mr. M. GILLIS PITTS to Miss MATTIE EVELYN HILL.

GOOD BOOKS FOR SALE.

Dear Brother Meek: As my health is so poor, that I can do nothing, and need money more than books, with your kind permission, I will announce these for sale. Viz:

People's Cyclopaedia, 4 vols. bound in Morocco in 1893. Price, $25. My price, $6.25. These are as sound as they ever were.

Shaw on Prophecy. Dan. and Rev. 676 pages. Cloth. Good as new. Price, $3.50. My price, $1.50.

Wesleyan Standards, revised by W. P. Harrison, vol. 1, 565 pages. Nice black cloth, $1.

Divinity by Geo. Smith, F. S. A. Black cloth, new, 592 pages. My price, 75 cents.

Paine's Life of McKendree, 2 vols. Brown cloth. Sound. Price, $3. My price, $1.50. Purchaser to pay conveyance.

Have been a great sufferer this spring, and the end is not yet.
H. ARMSTRONG.

Olla, La., June 21.

CHURCH DIRECTORY.

New Orleans District, Rev. F. N. Parker, D.D., presiding elder; residence, 241 Olivier Street.

First Methodist Church, St. Charles Ave., near Callopo St.; Dr. S. H. Werlein, pastor; residence, 5530 Prytanla St.; phone, Uptown 329.

Rayne Memorial Church, St. Charles Ave. and General Taylor St.; Dr. John A. Rife, pastor; residence, 1421 Constantinople St.

Second Methodist Church, 2531 Burgundy, near Lafayette Ave.; Rev. A. I. Townsley, pastor; residence, 2728 N. Rampart St.; office hours, 9 to 11 a. m.; phone, Hemlock 978.

Parker Memorial, corner Nashville Ave. and Perrier St.; Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor; residence, 734 Nashville Ave.

Louisiana Avenue, cor. Louisiana Ave. and Magazine St.; Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor; residence, 1514 Fern St.; phone, Walnut 402.

Felicity Street Church, cor. Felicity and Chestnut Sts.; Rev. Albert S. Lutz, pastor; residence, 1323 St. Andrew St.; phone, Jackson 965-L.

Carrollton Avenue Church, cor. Carrollton Ave. and Elm St.; Rev. Henry T. Carley, pastor; residence, 1125 Fern St.; phone, Uptown 1238.

Algiers, Lavergne Street, cor. Delaronde; Rev. J. F. Foster, pastor; residence, 214 Seguin.

McDonoghville and Mary Werlein, Rev. H. Whitehead, pastor, residence, 1619 St. Mary St.; phone, Jackson 144.

Epworth Church, cor. Banks and Scott Sts.; Rev. L. A. Sims, pastor; residence, 232 South Pierce St.

Rev. John L. Sutton, Superintendent Orphan Boy's Asylum; residence, 5220 St. Charles Ave.; phone, Uptown 123.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, Superintendent St. Mark's Hall; 619-21 Esplanade. Residence, 721 Henry Clay Avenue; phones: Residence, Uptown 2739; St. Mark's Hall, Hemlock 1468.

Rev. John T. Sawyer, D.D., residence, 2330 Valence St.; phone, Uptown 879.
R. F. Harrell, Secretary Y. M. C. A., 815 St. Charles St.

Rev. R. A. Meek, Editor New Orleans Christian Advocate; residence, 724 Nashville Ave.; phone, uptown 679.

POLISHES
"QUICK AS A WINK!"
QCKWORK
METAL POLISH SILVER PASTE

At Last! A Quick Polish

Rub on Qckwork—rub off. Presto! A bright polish quick—no drudgery. Nothing injurious in Qckwork—no acid. For metals of all kinds, golf sticks, door trimmings, yachts, automobiles, glass, — everything.

In 25c Tins Everywhere.

Try Qckwork Silver Paste. Keeps silverware always new. Saves hours of valuable time. Can not injure. Fine for gold, cut glass, marble, etc.

In 25c Jars Everywhere.

Rheumatic Pains

and stiffness in joints or muscles; neuralgia; backache; tired, painful, aching feet; sore hands; sprains and bruises; sore throat and chest, due to colds or grippe; in fact, all the common aches and pains that occur in any family from day to day, yield almost instantly to a good rubbing with

Minard's Liniment.

It does not stain, it is neither sticky nor oily—it is just a delightfully smooth, aromatic cream that feels good on the skin and rubs right in and stops inflammation like magic. Minard's Liniment ought to be on every family medicine shelf, because it is so useful in emergencies and so prompt in giving relief.

We guarantee it to be just as we represent—should you find it otherwise, we will refund your money on request. Sold by all druggists in three sizes, price 25c., 50c. and $1.00.

FREE. If you have never tried it, and wish to test its merit, write us today for a free trial bottle.
MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO.,
South Framingham, Mass.

3 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McLeod, Verbena, Ala., used 3 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 20 years."

C. G. Butler, Argenta, Ark., wrote: "I used 1 bottle and gained 12 pounds and feel 100 per cent better."

Money back when it fails.
The Johnson's Chill & Fever Tonic Co.
Savannah, Georgia.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing by hand—no breakage.
WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
LE PAGE
INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO
TORONTO - CANADA

GALL STONES or LIVER or Stomach Ailment Cured. AVOID AN OPERATION

Have you Pain or Distress in Part of Stomach, Pains 2 hours after meals, Right side pains or backache, Spasms of Indigestion, Sick Headache, Bilelessness, Colic, Jaundice, Blues, Constipation, Bile, Sourness, Flatulence, or Oppression over Liver or Stomach? If you have any of these symptoms you need the "SECRET" of the "NEW" Treatment. Write for FREE Booklet, CALLSTONE REMEDY CO., Sole U. S. Agents, Dept. 44, 223 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

"GRAND CIRCLE TOUR"

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED

100 HOURS AT SEA

THE MOST DELIGHTFUL AND RATIONAL TRIP EVER CONCEIVED. STOPS EN ROUTE AT:

NEW ORLEANS, JACKSON, MEMPHIS, PADUCAH, LOUISVILLE, CINCINNATI, WASHINGTON, PHILADELPHIA, ATLANTIC CITY, NEW YORK, thence by SEA (100 hours) to NEW ORLEANS, making complete circle. SIGHT-SEEING TRIPS at interesting places. Strictly first-class, all expenses paid, the trip of a lifetime. For illustration booklet and all information call on or address:

A. J. McDOUGALL, D. P. A.

141 St. Charles Street.

Phone Main 3618.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL
We ship on approval without a cent deposit, freight prepaid. DON'T PAY A CENT if you are not satisfied after using the bicycle 10 days.
DONOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires until you receive our latest catalog illustrating every kind of bicycle, and have learned our method of prices and marvelous new offers.
ONE CENT Is all it will cost you to write a postal and everything will be sent you free post paid by return mail. You will get much valuable information. Don't wait, write now. TIRES, Coaster, Brake rear wheels, lamps, sundries at half usual prices. MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. M295, CHICAGO

Epworth League

By Rev. W. H. Coleman.

TOPIC FOR JULY 3, 1910.

THE CHRISTIAN'S CITIZENSHIP. (Acts 21:39.)

1. Being a Christian makes a man no less a citizen.

(A) The Christian citizen is the highest type of citizen. Wm. Ewart Gladstone was one of the greatest and best statesmen that the world has ever had. This was not due so much to his superior ability as to the fact that he was a true man of God, and all of his official acts, like those of his private life, were actuated by the unselfish desire to glorify God and bless his fellow man. The greatest and most useful business men of the world, today, are men who are as religious in their business as they are in their pews; who are more interested in saving the souls of the men in their employ than they are in hearing the clink of money in their tills.

The same is true in every walk of life. I could point out to you, if space admitted, hundreds of such Christian citizens who are blessing the world with their citizenship.

(B) No man is the best possible citizen of his country until he becomes a citizen of the Kingdom of God; he may be a fairly good citizen, but if he is disloyal to God, who created him, who is giving him infinite blessings, who even died for him, what assurance have we that he will be loyal in his human relationships? Too often it is the case that the man who is disloyal to his God, is also unfaithful in his human relationships. Here is the bank cashier, the city treasurer, the insurance president, the legislator who becomes a thief or a bribe taker. What is the trouble? The man was thought to be a good citizen and was not; his people were deceived in him, because he was not a real Christian citizen. If he had been he would have been trustworthy, and all the powers of evil would have as utterly failed to shake this integrity as the restless sea fails to move Gibraltar.

(C) The world needs more Christian citizens in every business and profession, and in every sphere of life.

If all our American citizens were Christian citizens there would be no more of the awful misery and curse of the liquor traffic; there would be no selfish, mercenary man to advocate a return to race-track gambling; there would be no more such brutal amusements as the prize fight; there would be no more graft and political corruption and dishonesty; there would be no more of the nameless degradations that are disgracing our fair country, wrecking characters and sinking souls down to eternal despair.

(D) This world belongs to God (Is. 24:1), and was created for the legitimate use and enjoyment of his children, Christian citizens. This is truthfully taught in the Parable of the Tares. While the owner of the field allowed the tares to continue to grow along with the wheat until the harvest, he in no sense prepared the field for the tares, but for the wheat alone. God never prepared this world for a lot of people who reject Him with their hearts, dishonor Him with their lives, and ruthlessly trample under their unhallowed feet his precious blood, that was shed for their redemption. Neither is it his will that the world be run by those, but by his children for whom it was prepared, and for whom it is preserved.

Every Christian ought to claim his citizenship. St. Paul always claimed both his Roman and Hebrew citizenship, and the right to exercise the privileges thereof, and often it enabled him to accomplish more for God and humanity.

We are taught that all things should be done to the glory of God (1 Cor. 10:31). That means that this world in all its affairs ought to be run for God, and in order for us who are His to do this it is necessary that we claim the rights and privileges of our citizenship as Christians.

(A) Claim it in living for Him. No difference where, in what vocation, how employed, let us live for God.

The young man entering a profession in business or politics ought to enter it with as great a sense of responsibility before God, with as deep a consecration to God, and with as great a zeal for the uplifting of humanity, the salvation of souls, and the coming of the Kingdom of our Lord as the young man who is entering the ministry.

The young lady entering society ought to feel that she has as great and as sacred a work to do for her Lord as the one who is sailing from home and loved ones to enter the Foreign Mission work.

(B) Claim it at the ballot.

Every Christian man should exercise the right of his citizenship at the ballot box every time he has an opportunity, and not to blindly follow the dictation of some party machine, but to vote for the man, and only the man, who is clean in character and true to God and his fellows. If he has not been this in all of his private relationships he cannot be trusted to be in his official relationship.

Let the Christian citizen see to it that every man from president of the United States to constable, is a true man of God. No difference what his denomination and his form of worship, just so he is true to the principles of our Christian religion. Let him worship God as he will, but serve God; he must or else we cannot trust him to serve his fellow men.

(C) Claim it in society.

Society as well as all else, belongs to God and should be run for His glory. Therefore, it should be kept free from all impurity and Godlessness. Neither should there be a strata of society set apart for the morally destitute. The Christian, in exercising the rights of Christian citizenship, should say there shall be no such, for it is unnecessary, it is unreasonable, it is a menace to all society, to every home, to every young character, and an abandonment to an appalling degradation of human lives and souls whom Christ died to redeem and whom it is our business to lead to Him.

Therefore, let each Christian join in claiming all society for Christ, that every wrecked life may be redeemed, every lost soul saved, and every innocent one kept from falling into evil.

(E) The earth can never be taken for Christ until the Christians thus claim and exercise their citizenship. Then shall his Kingdom come, the powers of darkness shall all be broken, and the earth shall become as full of the knowledge and glory of God as the waters cover the sea.

One can chase a thousand, and two can put ten thousand to flight.

God and one man is a majority. Let each young Christian claim his citizenship in the faith of these thoughts, and of the promise of our Savior that he will never leave us nor forsake us, and victory shall be ours for the glory of God and the good of every life that we shall touch.

THE POWER OF A SINGLE LITTLE GERM

The most dreaded, and hardest fought feature in the whole world is the germ. One tiny little germ can in a remarkably short time destroy the human body and cause death in the most agonized form. For instance, you have a cut, bruise, boil, carbuncle, burn, felon, ulcer, insect bite, or a sore of any kind; it festers, the blood poison germ enters, the suffering is intense, and often times death. "Germ's Ointment" is a germ destroyer, it prevents complications from all kind of skin eruptions. It promptly cures all skin and permanent cures all skin troubles, which if left alone are so distressing. Get a 25¢ box of "Germ's Ointment" from your druggist, and keep it always on hand. You will find when you will need it. If you have never used it and want to test its merits, write Dr. W. E. Gray & Co., 509 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., and they will send you a free sample box.

Mr. W. E. Gray, of Detroit, Mich., writes: "It is without doubt the best ointment for healing wounds I ever saw."

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also.

COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.

1300-1302

DRYADES STREET.

PHONES—Jackson 1080—1081.

VISIT MINERAL WELLS

FOR HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND
WEST TEXAS

For
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS,
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SUNDAY DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,
General Passenger Agent,

DALLAS - - - - - TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a.m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p.m.

FOR

NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW ON SALE.

EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCES.

Mississippi Conference.

One of the best conferences that the Leaguers have had, is the one which convened in the Jefferson Street M. E. Church, South, Natchez, last Thursday June 16, at 8:15 p. m., when the addresses of welcome were delivered by Mr. R. F. Reed, on the part of the city, and Mr. Clifford Field, president of the local League, for the Leagues of the city. Rev. John W. Chambers delivered the response in a very happy style. The delegates had the opportunity at this time to become acquainted with one another.

Friday morning at 9 o'clock, the conference was called to order by the president, Dr. F. L. Walton, of Meridian, and quite a goodly number responded to their names. There were several papers of considerable merit read, and the discussions were interesting.

The reception tendered the Leaguers in the Sunday School room, by the local Leagues, at 8:30, Friday evening, was a great success from every point of view, there being a delightful musical program provided for the occasion, and the refreshments were altogether refreshing.

The program for Saturday was replete with good things for the mind and heart—being educational and inspirational. Dr. Walton proved himself to be a master of the situation, and there was every indication that he had the esteem and love of the young people.

The visitors from a distance were: Rev. J. Bruce Airey, president of the Seashore Assembly of Christian Workers, and a member of the Alabama Conference, and Miss Mamie Reams, of the Training School, at Nashville, Tenn. Miss Reams spoke to the Conference with reference to the opportunities of the Training School, and sought to impress the young people of the Church that their lives should stand for everything of good that pertains to the kingdom of God.

Sunday was the best day of all, when the League sermon was preached at 11 o'clock by Rev. H. W. VanHook, president of Edward McGehee College, Woodville, Miss., and Rev. H. G. Hawkins, president of Port Gibson Female College, occupied the pulpit at night. These brethren preached out of their hearts to the young people before them, and both had splendid congregations. Following Brother Hawkins' sermon in the evening, the officers elected for the ensuing year were installed, the following ministers taking part: H. G. Hawkins, H. W. VanHook, H. P. Lewis, Jr., and Robt. Selby. This service was both beautiful and impressive.

The officers installed were as follows: Dr. F. L. Walton, Meridian, President; Clifford R. Field, Natchez, first vice president; Miss Laura Rankin, Gulfport, second vice-president; Miss E. Maud Ellis, Sharon, third vice-president; Rev. J. L. Niell, Lorman, fourth vice-president; W. H. Grant, Laurel, secretary; B. Stewart, Centerville, treasurer; Miss Joe Ellis, Brookhaven, Era agent; Mrs. W. M. Goodwin, Mayersville, superintendent of Junior Department.

The following District Secretaries were elected:

Newton District, Miss Bertha Mitchell, Laurel; Meridian District, Miss Ida Curtis, Meridian; Seashore District, H. C. Lucas, Gulfport; Brookhaven District, Miss Olive Lipscomb, Brookhaven; Natchez District, Miss Ethel Shaw, Natchez; Jackson District, A. P. Holt, Jackson; Hattiesburg District, O. J. Franklin, Magee; Vicksburg District, Miss Fannie Nasson, Port Gibson; delegates to Seashore Assembly: C. H. Poythress, Meridian.

It is confidently expected that these officers will be more diligent than at any time in the past, and that the coming year will be one of large growth in the work of the Leagues of the Mississippi Conference.

ROBERT SELBY.

North Mississippi Conference.

The North Mississippi Epworth League Conference convened in Kosciusko, June 14-16. More than one hundred delegates were in attendance.

Certainly, an onlooker would not have concluded that the League is dead in North Mississippi—in point of well-directed enthusiasm and genuine interest. The Conference was up to the high-water mark. Under the capable leadership of Rev. R. A. Clark, president of the Conference League Board, there was not a dull hour during the entire session. He is the right man to lead in this young people's movement.

To the regret of all, the president of the Conference, Mr. J. B. Small, of Winona, was detained at home until the last day. He is at home among young people and directed the proceedings of the Conference with a skilled hand. He retires from the presidency after two years of faithful and fruitful service, having the confidence and esteem of all North Mississippi Leaguers.

The keynote of the Conference was "Volunteers for Special Service." This note was struck by Dr. E. H. Rawlins, educational secretary of the Board of Missions, who was with us on Wednesday, and was sounded in every devotional service and was the undertone accompaniment in every discussion. The result was that on Thursday afternoon in response to a proposition made by Rev. J. H. Felts, who had kept the matter upon the hearts of the people in all devotional services, six intelligent young people volunteered to any service to which God might call them even if the call meant the foreign field, acknowledging the impression that God has some special work for them.

Dr. Rawlins' visit was indeed an inspiration to the Conference. He has the freshness and enthusiasm of youth; is magnetic and commanding in speech, and has withal an inexhaustible fund of missionary information. His address on the ideal layman, or "The Coming Layman," captured the large audience and made impressions that will never be forgotten. The hope was everywhere expressed that he will come often to Mississippi.

The papers prepared and read by Miss Mary Stokes on "Shall the Church Seek to Direct the Social Life of Its Young People," and by Miss Bessie Herron on "Difficulties of the Devotional Department and How to Overcome Them," and the address by Rev. E. S. Lewis on "Training for Service," were of a high order and greatly appreciated.

Reports from the several vice-presidents indicated that the League is growing in our territory and that each department is receiving attention. Last year the Leagues raised $500 special for the Hiroshima Girls' School, and for this year they pledged $500 to be used as a loan fund for the education of one young man in Millsaps College who is studying for the ministry, and one young lady in Grenada College who is preparing for missionary service—the same amount to be raised each year until the course is completed.

In addition to the pastors present, who added materially to the pleasure and profit of the occasion, we had with us, Rev. J. R. Countiss, president of Grenada College, who delivered an address on education; Mrs. T. B. Clifford, of Yazoo City, who discussed the work among the Juniors; Rev. J. B. Airey, who represented the Seashore Assembly of Christian Workers, and Miss Reams, of the Nashville Training School.

The Conference came to a close on Thursday night with a sermon by Rev. T. H. Dorsey, after which the new officers were publicly installed. The new president is Mr. Walter T. Boswell, a wideawake, capable young layman, of Kosciusko. The other officers are: First vice-president, Miss Nora Evans, Olive Branch; second vice-president, Miss Esther Hall, New Albany; third vice-president, Miss May D. Williams, Columbus; fourth vice-president, Mr. Victor Stephenson, Booneville; superintendent of Junior Think what it means to you and your family to have in your home the

Edison Amberola

Compare the external beauty of the Amberola with that of the highest grade piano, and you will find it even more charmingly designed and just as beautifully finished. Consider the lifetime of study required to become a proficient piano player. You need no musical training whatever to enjoy the Amberola.

Now compare the Amberola with a player-piano. Anyone can operate a player-piano, but when all is said and done, it gives you nothing but piano music. The Amberola gives you all the best music of all kinds—Grand Opera, Orchestra, Band, Sacred Music, Songs and Ballads, Rag Time and Dances.

The Amberola, $200

It is the limitless entertainer

Compare the Amberola with any other sound-reproducing instrument of the cabinet type. Consider the sapphire reproducing coil that does not scratch or wear out the Records, and lasts forever.

Other types of Edison Phonographs. $12.50 to $125.00
Edison Grand Opera Records. 75c to $2.00
Edison Standard Records. 35c
Edison Amberol Records (play twice as long). 50c

Does your Phonograph play Amberol Records? If not, ask your dealer about our money-saving combination offer on Amberol Records and the attachment to play them. Get complete catalogs of Edison Phonographs from your dealer or from us.

NATIONAL PHONOGRAPH COMPANY
149 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.

We are Headquarters for

Edison's Phonographs, Records and Supplies

—CASH OR INSTALLMENT—

We pay transportation charges on purchase of one dozen records or more.

NATIONAL AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM CO., OF LA.
614 GRAVIER STREET - - - NEW ORLEANS.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM

"In the Land of the Sky."

Devoted to the cure of chronic diseases by natural methods. No drugs. No surgery. If you are afflicted with Paralysis, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Neurasthenia or some other disease that medicines have failed to cure, write for our free illustrated book which tells all about this new and better way.

Ideal climate, beautiful mountain scenery, pure water, home-like conditions, hygienic food, personal care and attention to each case, complete new sanitarium equipment, low charges and liberal guarantee of satisfaction are features here.

Patients unable to come to the sanitarium may be successfully treated in their own homes at slight cost.

Write to-day for the book and diagnosis blank—Both free.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM,

ASHEVILLE, N. C.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents; twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection; beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Leagues, Mrs. Theresa Cavin, Okolona; press reporter, Rev. R. P. Neblett, Columbus; secretary and treasurer, Mr. W. E. Kennedy, Columbus. The next Conference will be held at West Point. R. A. TUCKER, Kosciusko, Miss., June 21, 1910.

Let us not be content with the effort to imitate Christ; let us appropriate Him, as the flowers of Spring and the fruits of Autumn appropriate the properties of the sap and dew and balmy air, and all the glorious forces that lie hid in the sunbeams.—Meyer.